chased the furniture in it on behalf of K., and with moneys furnished by K., and gave evidence that the hotel was leased to K., and the business carried on by K. H. corroborated this, and stated in cross-examination certain facts which were inconsistent with his statements in the examination in chief as to who had managed the hotel, and was contradicted in some parts of his evidence by witnesses called for the execution creditor. In an interpleader issue, the jury found for the execution creditor. Held, on rule nisi for new trial, that the proof adduced by the execution creditor did not disturb the fact that goods in question were purchased for claimant by money given expressly for the purpose. Rule absolute. Kroschel v. Colonial Bank, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 174; 1 A.L.T., 11.

Act 21 Vic., No. 22, Sec. 6—"Real Property Statute 1864," No. 213, Sec. 98.]—Molesworth, J., appeared to act on Sec. 6 of No. 22, by reading "newspapers" in Sec. 98 of Act No. 213 as "newspaper." In re Mahood's Estate, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 56.

Act No 22, Sec. 6—"Common Law Procedure Statute," No. 274, Sec. 307.]—It was urged in argument that in Sec. 307 of Act No. 274, making provision for a "party" filing a memorial of a judgment the word "party," by the force of Sec. 6 of Act No. 22, included a corporation, and the Court held that the word "party" did include a corporation. Ruby Extended Tin Mining Company v. Woolcott, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 301.

Act No. 22, Sec. 6—"Licensing Act," No. 566, Sec. 38.]—The word "owner" in Sec. 38 of Act No. 566, by virtue of Sec. 6 of Act No. 22, includes "owners." Ex parte Slack in re Panton, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 28.

Act No. 22, Sec. 6—"Insolvency Statute 1871," No 379, Sec. 90.]—It would appear that Sec. 6 of Act No. 22 does not apply to Sec. 90 of Act No. 379, for it was held that all the "persons" entitled in possession must concur in the petition mentioned in Sec. 90 of Act No. 379. In re Healey, 7 V.L.R. Act No. 22, Sec. 8—"Weights and Measures Statute 1864," No. 215, Sec. 49.]—A forfeiture of weighing machinery under Act No. 215, Sec. 49, is not within Sec. 8 of Act No. 22, the forfeiture in Sec. 8 of No. 22 only referring to forfeiture of money. Regina v. Caddy, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 38, 39.

JUDGE.

Interested in his Own Case—Rating.]—No judge should interfere in the hearing of a case involving his own interest; and the decision of a judge interested need not be accepted, even by the party in whose favour he would be likely to decide. Where, therefore, in an appeal against a valuation, two justices sat who had on a previous occasion adjudicated, each on the other's appeal—the one sitting on the case of the other, who for the time left the bench; and then the other in turn deciding on the case of the first, who in his turn left the bench, and the municipal council protested against their decision on general grounds, without assigning any motive, and in the appeal of a ratepaper objected that the justices, having reduced the assessment in their own cases, were interested in reducing it in that of other parties, but there was nothing to show that the reductions were not right, Held, nevertheless, that as a decision from a magistrate who was interested should not be accepted at all, a writ of certiorari should be granted to remove the order into the Supreme Court to be quashed. Municipal Council of Prahran v. Clough, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 238.

Interested in Case.]—If the objection of interest in the judge is once taken, the judge ought not to entertain the case. Molloy v. Gunn, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 76.

Altering Decision before it is Recorded.]—There is nothing contrary to law in a judge giving a decision apparently inconsistent with some remarks made by him in delivering judgment. He is not precluded from altering his decision until it is recorded. Allen v. Ower, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 213; 2 A.L.T., 22.

Discretion—When Court will Overrule.]—Per Higinbotham, J. Where a Statute gives a discretion to a judge to do, or not to do, a particular act, it is always competent for the Court to overrule his discretion, which the Court will only do however (a) where there is no evidence to support his decision; (b) where he has been misled by false evidence; (c) where the judge, by a mistaken exercise of his discretion, has done an injustice to any party. *De Saxe v. JUDGMENTS.

Where there is any substantial defect in the proceedings of a foreign court, not a mere technical irregularity which would be cured by the next step, but such as would put the opposite party to a disadvantage, the Court will permit the judgment or decree to be impeached by pleadings in this Court, and the defect to be shown by extrinsic evidence. Larnach v. Alleyne, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 342, 358. For facts see S.C., post under TRUST AND TRUSTEE.

Memorial Filed under Sec. 307 of "Common Law Procedure Statute"—Sec. 308.]—Filing the memorial of a foreign judgment under Sec. 307 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute," does not give such judgment the effect of a judgment of the Supreme Court of Victoria, so as to enable the creditor to attach debts in the hands of garnishees under Sec. 200 of the Act, until the requirements of Sec. 308 of the Act have been complied with by him. And quaere, whether after compliance with such requirements the foreign creditor can enforce his judgment by any other means than execution. Johnson v. Dickson, 1 V.R. (L.,) 159; 1 A.J.R., 135.

Enforcing Foreign Judgments — Corporation Plaintiff—"Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Secs. 307, 308.]—A corporation plaintiff is included in the provisions of Sec. 307 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," which allows a "person" in whose favour a judgment has been obtained in another colony to file a memorial of it in the Court here; and such corporation may obtain leave under Sec. 308 to issue execution upon such judgment. Ruby Extended Tin Mining Company v. Woolcott, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 301. Semble, that a defendant could show as cause against an application for leave to issue execution under Sec. 308 that the judgment had been obtained in the other colony. Ibid.

Enforcing Foreign Judgments — Practice — "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 307.]—The memorial of a decree of the Supreme Court of another colony, which is filed for the purpose of enforcing an order for payment of a sum of money, need not contain the whole decree pronounced; but it is sufficient if it contain such particulars as relate to the order for payment, that being all that is presented by Sec. 307 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865." Fattorini v. Fattorini, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 454; 2 A.L.T., 87.

Enforcing Foreign Judgments — What are Foreign Judgments—Decree in Divorce Jurisdiction.]—A decree of the Supreme Court of another colony in the Divorce and Matrimonial Causes Jurisdiction in a suit for the restitution of conjugal rights, is within sec. 307 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," and may be enforced by execution under Sec. 308 of that Act. Ibid.

County Court judges have no jurisdiction in case of judgments recovered out of the colony. Greville v. Smith, N.C., 67.

Enforcing Judgment Against one Partner on Behalf of All—"Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 308.]—On 17th May, 1880, H. obtained a judgment in the Supreme Court of New South Wales in an action on contract against M., a member of a co-partnership. In accordance with the law of New South Wales, M. was sued on behalf of all the members. The memorial of the judgment was filed in the office of the Supreme Court of Victoria on 6th May, 1884. Application under Sec. 308 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865" for an order to issue execution against M. and nine others, members of the co-partnership, as being the persons against whom the judgment was obtained. Held, per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers), that a foreign judgment in personam when it is sought to be enforced in another country is conclusive between all the original parties to the cause, to the same extent as in the country where the judgment was obtained, and that it is not examinable in the courts of the country where it is enforced, except for defects apparent on the face of it, or upon extrinsic evidence adduced to show that the foreign court had no jurisdiction, or that the judgment was obtained by fraud or manifest injustice, and that none of these having been shown execution should issue under Sec. 308 as applied for. Order with costs. Hogan v. Moore, 6 A.L.T., 156.

No Notice of Proceedings—Contributory to a Company Agreeing to ex parte Proceedings for Winding up.]—A banking company in Scotland was wound-up, and the liquidators obtained in Scotland a judgment against R., a contributory, who was domiciled in Victoria, without any notice to the contributory of the proceedings. It appeared that R., while domiciled in Scotland, had signed the memorandum of association of the company, which was a company registered under the English "Companies Act 1862," which in Sec. 121 provided that judgment might be obtained ex parte, and without notice to the contributories. Held that R. must be taken to be aware of the law when he signed the memorandum, and by so agreeing that proceedings might be taken ex parte had contracted himself out of the general protection afforded to persons not knowing the law of a country, in which a judgment is obtained behind their backs. Jamieson v. Robb, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 170; 3 A.L.T., 7.

When Allowed.]—See Main v. Kirk, 1 A.J.R. 155, ante column 60.

Estoppel.]—B. recovered in the Court of Mines a judgment for goods sold and delivered to the A. Company, and on the basis of that judgment an order was made by the Court of Mines ordering the company to be wound up, and appointing B. a liquidator. B. then sued W. for the balance of the amount of his shares and recovered a verdict. On appeal it was held that the Court of Mines had no jurisdiction, and the verdict based on B.'s appointment was set aside. B. then recovered judgment in the County Court for the same goods, and the Court of Mines upon that order appointed B. a liquidator. Held that the judgment in the first action in the Court of Mines was no bar to the second action in the County Court for the same debt. Wilson v. Broadfoot, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 96.

Verdict followed by Judgment when an Estoppel—Must be on the Same Point.]—Per Privy Council. A verdict followed by judgment, to be an estoppel, must be on the precise point, and a distinct finding thereon. Nor is the effect of the verdict as an estoppel to be enlarged by parol evidence showing what the discussion was or what the evidence was. Mulcahy v. Walhalla G. M. Coy., 2 A.J.R., 93, 95.

County Court Judgment—When a Bar.]—A jury gave a verdict for defendant in an action in the County Court to recover commission on the ground that the action was premature, the money not yet being due. A judgment entered in accordance with the verdict is not a bar to a subsequent action by the plaintiff after the money becomes due, the cause of action not being identical. Bishop v. Woinarski, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 106.

Issue sent from Probate Jurisdiction to Nisi Prius—Rule for New Trial—In what Jurisdiction.]—When an issue has been sent by the Full Court on an appeal from a suit in the Probate jurisdiction for trial at Nisi Prius, the rule for a new trial of each issue is properly obtainable from the Court sitting in Banco in Term, in its Common Law Jurisdiction. The Court so sitting in Banco, however, will not hear a motion for an order to issue probate, which should be made before the Primary Judge, whose decision may be considered by the Full Court on appeal. If the Court in Banco were to hear an application for the issue of a probate the litigants would be deprived of their right to have the subject reviewed by the Full Court. *Wilson v. JURY.

Special Jury—Trial of Issues by—21 Vict No. 19, Sec. 17.]—In granting an application under sec. 17 of 21 Vict. No. 19 (Juries Act), for trial of issues by a special jury of twelve, the only proof required by the Court is that a person has been committed for trial. Regina v. Costello, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 8.

Jury de Medietate Linguæ—"Juries Statute 1865," Secs. 37, 38.]—Regina v. Levinger, L.R., 2 P.C. 282; 1 A.J.R., 137, ante column 308.

De Medietate Linguæ—Challenge of Foreign Panel.]—A foreigner on trial by a jury de medietate linguæ has no right of peremptory challenge as regards the foreign panel then returned by the sheriff; but is restricted to challenging "for cause" under the 38th section of the "Juries Statute 1865," No. 272. Regina v. Ah Toon, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 31.

Challenged Juror Sitting During Trial.]—In applications for new trial on the ground of a challenged juror sitting during the trial, there should be a distinct statement that the applicant had not exhausted his challenge. Bryens v. M'Lennan, 1 A.J.R., 89.

Disqualified Juror not Challenged.]—If a juror who is disqualified is not challenged at the trial, the Court will not grant a new trial upon affidavits of the subsequent discovery of such disqualification. Sinclair v. Harding, 2 V.R. (L.,) 185; 2 A.J.R., 114.

Act 272, Sec. 41—Agreement for Remuneration.]—An agreement by the parties to a cause to pay the jurors engaged a remuneration in addition to the fees allowed them is in contravention of Act No. 272. Glass v. Martin, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 117.

Finding—How far Binding.]—The finding of a jury upon a specific question put to them is not binding, unless supported by the evidence. Nichol v. London Chartered Bank of Australia, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 324, 329.

As to cases of setting aside verdict, see post under PRACTICE—At Law—Trial.

Misconduct—Evidence of Jurors as to.]—Any misconduct of a jury, even though the verdict is right, and the judge concurs with it, renders the verdict void, and a new trial is ordered. But to support an application on such a ground some other evidence than that of the jurors must be given. The jurors, being participators in the misconduct, are not permitted to say that they have been guilty of misconduct, and this principle is not altered by the evidence being tendered by one of the dissenting jurors where a three-fourths verdict has been taken. O'Malley v. Elder, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 117.

Misconduct.]—The adjournment by a jury after retiring to consider their verdict, openly, and without permission of the Court, to a hotel for refreshment, in ignorance of the impropriety of the course, is not such misconduct as will necessitate the granting of a new trial. Per Barry, J., even if the jury had so acted wilfully, and knowing that they were doing wrong, it would be a ground for punishing them, but not for impeaching their verdict. Crowther v. May, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 425.

View—Cost of.]—Costs of a view by the whole jury are always allowed. Young v. Ballarat Water Commissioners, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 14; 1 A.L.T., 133.

Challenges in Excess — Panel Exhausted — Remedy.]—The proper mode of remedying the error where, by mistake, the prisoner has been permitted to challenge three jurors in excess of the number allowed, and the panel is exhausted, is to return the three names in excess to the box and empanel the first drawn out, not to allow the prisoner to exercise his right of challenge de novo, or to empanel a juror whose name has, by inadvertence, not been called. Regina v. Lee, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 225.

Statutes 14 Vic. No. 45, 25 Vic. No. 29, repealed by Act No. 267. "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865" (No. 267), secs. 41, 65 and 106 repealed and re-enacted by Act No. 319; secs. 5, 8, 49, 135, 136, 137 and 143 repealed by Act No. 565. "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865, Amendment Act 1867" (No. 319). "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865, Amendment Act 1876" (No. 565). "Justices of the Peace Statute (Prohibition) 1877" (No. 571).

I. JURISDICTION AND DUTY.

Justice—A Ratepayer not Disqualified from Adjudicating on a Complaint for Breach of Bye-laws—Act No. 267, Sec. 13.]—J. was informed against under a bye-law for encroaching on a street and fined. It was objected that the chairman and justices, being ratepayers, and interested in the application of the funds, were unfit to adjudicate. Held that they were not so "interested" in the result of the adjudication as to be disqualified from adjudicating. Jewell v. Young, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 243.

Adjudicating on a Rate When a Ratepayer—"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," No. 267, Sec. 13—Disqualification Removed.]—A justice of the peace adjudicated in a rate case after his interest in such rates had accrued due. The "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," No. 267, Sec. 13 of which removes the disqualification for such interest, was passed after the rate was due and after the justice's interest arose. Held that, on the point of interest, the justice was interested; but that the disqualification for such interest under the old law was removed by Sec. 13 of the Act No. 267, and that his adjudication was valid. Regina v. Ford, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 130. And see Municipal Council of Prahran v. Clough, ante column 737.

Being Interested—Proceedings under Public Health Act—Act No. 267, Sec. 13.]—Four out of seven justices who adjudicated in making an order under Sec. 47 of the "Public Health Amendment Act" were members of the Local Board of Health. Held that the four were disqualified from so adjudicating, and their interestedness vitiated the proceedings of the whole number. Rule absolute for prohibition. Regina v. Lloyd, ex parte Godfrey, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 120.

Justices Managers of a Common.]—When justices are managers of a common they are disqualified from adjudicating upon a complaint for trespasses upon the common, although the penalties for trespass go into the consolidated revenue, and they have no pecuniary interest in the case. Regina v. Horsfall, ex parte Husband, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 53.

Questions of Title under "Land Act 1862," No. 145.]—R. applied for land, assumed to have been declared as open for selection under the Act, got his certificate under Sec. 20, and entered into possession. It was then discovered that the land was not within the area declared open, and a commissioner sued R. for unauthorised occupation. The justices declared he was in unauthorised possession. Held, on appeal, that the case before the magistrates might involve title, and their jurisdiction was ousted. Appeal allowed, but without costs. Robinson v. Carey, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 114.

Question of Title.]—J.H. sued P.H. for trespass. J.H. produced a Crown grant for sixty acres, and P.H. a grant for ten acres adjoining. P.H. was in possession of twenty-eight acres of the sixty claimed by J.H., and refused to leave when ordered. J.H. and one D. at one time held the whole of the land under store licenses; and it was afterwards put up to auction, and sold to D. and P.H., who agreed upon an equal division. J.H. bought D.'s share, and declined to carry out the agreement. Held that there being a bonâ fide question of title, the justices had no jurisdiction. Hoban v. Hoban, 2 A.J.R., 118.

Question of Title—Act No. 265, Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 1.]—On a complaint for disturbing a water-race, the defendant relied on a Crown grant of the land, and the plaintiffs on their miners' rights. Held, a bonâ fide question of title was involved, and that the question was not one to be disposed of by justices. Regina v. Webster, 1 V.R. (L.,) 82; 1 A.J.R., 78.

Question of Title—Act No. 265, Sec. 17, Subsec. ii.]—C. was summoned before justices for destroying a fence connected with a toll-gate. The toll-gate had been temporarily removed on to Crown land, and had obstructed C. in his usual access to a watering place. The fence C. broke was not on his own land, nor on land in which he claimed any interest. Held that C. had no colour of right to break the fence, and that there was no evidence to raise any claim of right to oust the jurisdiction. Cahill v. Keilor Road Board, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 262.

Wilful Trespass — "Police Offences Statute 1865," Sec. 17 (VI.)—Jurisdiction when Ousted.]—Merely raising a question of title does not oust the jurisdiction of the justices upon an information under Sec. 17. Sub-sec. VI. of the "Police Offences Statute 1865," for wilful trespass, but the justices must also be satisfied that the trespass was committed under a fair and reasonable supposition that the defendant had a right to do the act complained of. Regina v. Reid, ex parte Brennan, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 133.

Duty of Justices—"Police Offences Statute 1865," Sec. 17.]—Where a defendant on an information under Sec. 17 of "The Police Offences Statute 1865" sets up a claim of right to do the injury complained of, the justices have, in effect, to consider not merely whether there was a defence at law, but whether the defendant had a bonâ fide and reasonable belief that he was justified in committing the act complained of. Williams v. Clausen, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 29: 1 A.L.T., 149; followed in Daniell v. Rowbotham, 9 V.L.R. (L.,), 215; 5 A.L.T., 75.

Police Offences Statute, Sec. 32—Question of Title.]—Complaint for illegal detention of property. L. agreed with P. and W. to erect wire fencing, and as P. and W. had need of working bullocks to carry out the agreement, L. further agreed to purchase a team, on the condition that the purchase-money should be deducted from the payments accruing under the agreement to erect the fencing. P. and W. took possession of the bullocks, used them, but did not carry out the agreement. L., besides buying the bullocks, had paid P. and W. money for the fencing, and had in so doing overpaid them for the little they did erect. P. and W. sold the bullocks by auction, one J. purchased them, and L. sued him for illegal detention. The justices, being of opinion that a question of title was involved by the purchase at auction, thought that their jurisdiction was ousted by Sec. 32 of the "Police Offences Statute." On appeal, Held that they had jurisdiction. Lyon v. Jones, 1 A.J.R., 30.

Under Pounds Statute, No. 249, Sec. 26—Question of Title.]—On a summons before justices for illegally impounding from unenclosed land, it appeared that the land in question was purchased from the Crown in 1862, and it was contended that there was no power under the Land Acts of 1865 and 1869 to impound from unenclosed land. Held that there was no jurisdiction in the justices to enter into the question, since it raised a question of title, but that they were confined to inquiring whether the requirements of the "Pounds Statute" had been complied with. O'Keefe v. Behan, 2 V.R. (L.,) 16; 2 A.J.R., 19.

Maliciously Throwing Down a Fence—Claim of Title—"Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864," Sec. 178—"Amending Act 1871," Sec. 23.]—On a complaint before justices of unlawfully and maliciously throwing down a fence, under Sec. 178 of the "Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864," No. 233, though Sec. 23 of the "Criminal Law, &c., Amendment Act 1871," No. 399, provides that no claim of right or title shall oust the jurisdiction of the justices over complaints under Sec. 178 of No. 233, it may be shown that the defendant was removing a fence which obstructed him individually in the use of a way to which he had a right, since this is not a claim within the meaning of Sec 23, No. 399. Regina v. Guthridge & Brennan ex parte Campbell, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 77.

Question for Justices—Remedy—Appeal.]—Where a question of title or a bonâ fide belief by the defendant of his right to do an act complained of, is set up as a defence, it is for the justices to find as a matter of fact whether the defence is bonâ fide raised, and even if the finding be contrary to evidence, the Court will not grant a prohibition. The proper remedy is by appeal. Regina v. Walker, exparte Kennedy, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 452.

Question of Title]—S. was summoned for wilfully damaging a fence belonging to W., and put in as a defence that the land belonged to one H., and that the fence was broken down merely to try the right. W. had been in undisturbed possession for thirteen years. Held, that there was a question of title involved, and that the justices had no jurisdiction. Hodgson v. Whitmore, 2 A.J.R., 122.

Unlawfully and Maliciously Destroying a Fence—Joint Ownership—"Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864," Sec. 178, No. 399, Sec. 23.]—The jurisdiction of the justices is ousted on an information for unlawfully and maliciously cutting or breaking down a fence if the defendant makes a bonâ fide claim of right or title to the fence, unless such right or title is jointly with the person in whom the property in the fence is laid in the information; and Sec. 23 of the "Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864 Amendment Act," No. 399, applies only to such cases of joint ownership. Williams v. Clauscen, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 29; 1 A.L.T., 149; followed in Daniell v. Robotham, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 215; 5 A.L.T., 75.

Question of Title.]—A borough summoned R. for displacing soil of certain land under the control of the borough. R. was working for a mining company, which claimed to occupy the land as being registered for it under the bye-laws. R. was fined. On appeal, held, that a question of title was involved, and the justices had, therefore, no jurisdiction. Rowe v. Mayor of Ballarat, 2 A.J.R., 122.

Disturbing Soil of a Street.]—A mining company, holding a mining lease from the Crown, were convicted and fined by justices for displacing and disturbing the soil of a street. Held that the company had no power to disturb the street, and it was for the justices to decide, as a matter of fact, whether it was a street or not. Appeal dismissed. Koh-i-noor Mining Coy. v. Drought, 3 V.R. (L.,) 75; 3 A.J.R., 48.

Claim of Right—Dispute as to Existence of a Highway.]—On a summary proceeding before justices, under Sec. 511 of the "Local Government Act 1874," for obstructing a person employed by a municipal council to remove obstructions which had been placed on a road to prevent access to a public bridge, a bonâ fide dispute as to the locus in quo being a highway will not prevent the justices from acting, and their decision on that point is conclusive for the purpose of enforcing the conviction, though the conviction will not preclude the person convicted from trying the right in an action of trespass. Ex parte Scott, in re Strutt, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 70.

Interference with a Creek—Management of Municipality—Mining Claim—"Local Government Act 1876," Sec. 400.]—O. was convicted before justices, "for that he did," on a certain date, "interfere with a creek within the borough of W., after the said creek had been taken under the charge of the council of the municipality, without the authority of such council." At the trial the justices found as a matter of fact that the creek had been so taken, and the defendant showed that the municipality had managed the creek, not as a watercourse, but as a road, and had allowed others to mine on it, and raised a claim of title under a miner's right and registered claim. Held that raising such claim of title did not oust the jurisdiction of the justices. Regina v. Mayor of Walhalla, ex parte O'Grady, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 470.

Act No. 506, Sec. 399—Obstruction of Public Road.]—An information was laid by a shire council for obstructing a public road. The defendant objected that he claimed part of the road as his private property and that this question of title ousted the justices' jurisdiction. The justices thought they had no jurisdiction, and dismissed the information. Held that they had, and rule absolute for them to hear the information. Regina v. Foster, ex parte Molyneux, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 294; 3 A.L.T., 23.

(c) Limitation in the Jurisdiction.

11 & 12 Vict., Cap. 43, Sec. 11—Defence—Act No. 29.]—Sec. 11 of "Jervis's Act" (11 & 12 Vict., cap. 43) is not merely in restriction of the plaintiff's right of procedure, but is also in limitation and definition of the jurisdiction of the magistrates; and such jurisdiction has been conferred on magistrates under that section to make orders for payment of debts and costs only where the complaint is made within the time named in the section; and if facts displacing the jurisdiction under that section appear on the plaintiff's pleadings, it is not necessary to plead them under Sec. 38 of 21 Vict. No. 29. In re Prince, ex parte Binge, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 12.

N.B.—The sections in the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865" corresponding to those above mentioned are Secs. 47, 51.

Period of Limitation for Unpaid Calls on the Winding-up of a Mining Company.]—See Melville v. Higgins, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 306; post under MINING — MINING COMPANIES — Winding-up—Calls—Enforcement of.

Period of Limitation for Capital Subscribed but not Paid (not including Calls).]—See Broadfoot v. O'Farrell, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 102. Post under MINING — MINING COMPANIES—Winding-up—Official Agents and Liquidators.

"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," No. 267, Sec. 51—Part Payment of an Old Debt.]—Where K. owed W. £25, and paid off £12 within twelve months before proceedings before the justices, Held that the part payment of the debt made the remainder a new debt which arose within the twelve months, and that the justices had jurisdiction under sec. 51. Rule nisi for prohibition discharged. Regina v. Wells, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 31. See also S.P. Mountford v. Paton, 5 A.J.R., 164.

Limitation in Case of Complaint for Non-Payment of Rates—Time Runs from Expiration of 14 days after Demand in Writing.]—See Mayor of Sandhurst v. Broderick, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 108. Post under RATES AND RATING.

Act No. 267, Sec. 51—Cross-demand.—A complaint dated July, 1875, was for goods supplied. The particulars of demand gave credit to the defendant for salary due as on 10th July, 1875, but the affidavit of the relator showed that such salary was due on 10th July, 1874, and that he had not consented to such appropriation of his salary. Held that the complainant could not treat the cross-debt to the defendant as part payment without his consent. Order absolute for prohibition. Regina v. Webster, ex parte Prentice, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 199.

Act No. 267, Sec. 51—Limit of Time.]—S. had been summoned before the justices, and had been fined for disobedience of an order to maintain an illegitimate child, under Sec. 39 of the Act No. 268 (Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Act); the fine was imposed for disobedience in respect of payments due more than twelve months previously. Held that the case did not come within Sec. 51 of Act No. 267, and that the justices had jurisdiction. Regina v. Panton, ex parte Sutterby, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 264.

Limitation of Actions—Part Payment—Justice of the Peace Statute 1860, Sec. 51.]—Under Sec. 51 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1860," a complaint must (in the absence of special enactment) be brought before justices within twelve months from the time when the matter of complaint arose; but although the complaint be not brought within the twelve months, a part payment after such period, and within twelve months of the bringing of the complaint, will give the justices jurisdiction, since it affords proof of a new promise to pay, and does not merely constitute an account stated. Ex parte Forsman, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 55.

Work and Labour Done—"Justices of the Peace Statute," Sec. 41.]—Where a complaint before justices was for £7 for work and labour done, and the complainant had entered into a contract in writing to do the work, which contract he had not complied with; but the defendant had accepted the work and taken the benefit of it, Held that since the defendant had accepted the work, he could be sued for work and labour done, and that the justices had jurisdiction under Sec. 41 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865." Regina v. Lloyd, 1 A.J.R. 78.

Note.—Sec. 41 of Act No. 267 is repealed, and a new provision is substituted for it by Sec. 1 of Act No. 319.

Special Contract—Work and Labour—"Amending Act" (No. 319), Sec. 1.]—T. on 20th January, 1871, gave a written order for the insertion of an advertisement in a paper for six months for £30, payable monthly. On the 20th February T. wrote—"My advertisement month up to-day; discontinue insertion of same, and I shall draw you one up in another form to-night, and see you to-morrow." The advertisement was discontinued, no other one was inserted, and the newspaper proprietors sued T. for the month's insertion as work and labour done. The justices made an order against T. for £7 10s. On order nisi for a prohibition, Held that it was a question of fact rather than of law for the justices to determine, they being at liberty to decide on the evidence that the special contract was rescinded by the parties, and if that were so the complainant could sue for work done. Order discharged. Regina v. Call, ex parte Thomson, 2 A.J.R. 106.

Money Lent—Interest—Act No. 319, Sec. 1.]—Justices sitting in Petty Sessions have no jurisdiction to allow anything beyond the principal of money lent either as interest or bonus. Wilson v. Crawley, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 78.

Claim for Money not Exceeding £20—"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," Sec. 41.]—When the cause of action exceeds £20, the plaintiff cannot bring the matter within the jurisdiction of the justices under the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1868," Sec. 41, by giving credit for more than the excess. Regina v. Clarkson, ex parte Haylock, 4 A.J.R. 116.

Claim for Money Paid—Amendment.]—A claim for "money paid" is not within the jurisdiction of justices; and where justices had made an order comprising a sum due for "money paid," their order was amended by deducting the sum so comprised. Regina v. Williams, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 5.

Expenses of Witnesses.]—On an order nisi for prohibition to justices to restrain them from enforcing an order for the payment of expenses to witnesses, it appeared that the justices had considered the witnesses entitled to a certain sum, but had stultified themselves by allowing them more. The Court refused the prohibition, but on the terms of the order being amended so as to allow the witnesses only the sum the justices had considered them entitled to. Regina v. Adams, ex parte Ewart, 1 A.J.R., 160.

Act No. 267, Sec. 41—Use and Occupation of Land.]—Where plaintiff leased land to defendant for two years at a yearly rental of £28, payable half-yearly, and summoned defendant for use and occupation for six months, claiming £14, Held that it was within the justices' jurisdiction, as the yearly rent was not the subject of inquiry, the only inquiry being as to use and occupation for half-a-year. Laven v. Flower, 5 A.J.R., 71.

Note.—This same test of jurisdiction in the case of the County Court was affirmed in Cavanagh v. Sach, see ante column 250.

Act No. 267, Sec. 41—Assault—Person Suing for must be the Person Assaulted.]—Under this section the person suing in respect of an assault must be the person who has been assaulted; therefore a father cannot sue for an assault committed on his infant son, such a grievance not being one cognisable by the justices. Regina v. Charles, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 52.

Under £20—Act No. 267, Sec. 44—Allowance of Discount.]—On a complaint before justices for the price of seven hogsheads of beer at £4 per hogshead; £1 4s. was allowed for returns, and £1 per hogshead was allowed as discount, according to the course of dealing between the parties, leaving a balance of £19 16s. The justices made an order for the amount, and an order nisi for prohibition was obtained on the ground that the allowance of discount was really a set-off, which the defendant had not agreed to, and that the matter was therefore beyond the jurisdiction of the justices. Held that the discount, not being for cash, but being a trade allowance by arrangement was not a set-off, but a reduction in the price, and order nisi discharged. Regina v. Morgan, ex parte Dehnert, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 102.

Under £20—Cross Claim Disputed—Set-off.]—On a complaint for goods sold and delivered, the particulars of demand showed the amount due to be £29 10s. 1d., and credit was allowed for £2 cash, and £8 for a horse sold by defendant to the plaintiff, leaving a balance sued for of £19 10s. 1d. The defendant proved that he had sold a horse to plaintiff for £11, and another for £9 (the one for which credit was given), in respect of which sums a defence of set-off was entered, that no balance had ever been agreed upon, and that the credit of £8 had never been admitted. Held that the complainant's allowing one of the items of the defendant's set-off could not give jurisdiction, though, semble, that if he had admitted the whole of the defendant's set-off it would have given jurisdiction. Regina v. Panton, ex parte Wilson, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 33; 1 A.L.T., 149.

Act No. 267, Secs. 41. 44—Claim Reduced by Payments.]—In a complaint before justices for work and labour done, the claim was for £61, less cash payments, £43; balance, £18. Held that justices had jurisdiction. Regina v. Mollison, ex parte Warne, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 17.

Under £20—Abandonment of Excess—"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," Sec. 44.]—Where a claim is over £20, giving credit as on a contra account for the excess is not equivalent to an abandonment of the excess so as to give the justices jurisdiction. Regina v. Cahill, ex parte Patton, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 194.

"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," Sec. 44—Severing Causes.]—In an action to recover the amount of a running account, where the sum sought to be recovered is outside of the justices' jurisdiction, the plaintiff may not separate his claim so as to bring each of the parts thus severed within the jurisdiction; but if he wish to sue before justices must abandon the excess under Sec. 44 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865." Regina v. Daly, 1 A.J.R., 26.

Dividing Cause of Action—Running Account—"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," Sec. 44.]—By Sec. 44 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," where there is a running account between a tradesman and a customer the former cannot split up the amount due into separate causes of complaint. Ex parte Victor, 2 A.L.T., 6.

Set-off—Under "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," Secs. 41, 47, 48—Of What Nature it Must be.]—A set-off under the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," No. 267, Secs. 47, 48, must be one of the causes of action mentioned in Sec. 41 of the Act; in other words, of such a nature that, if made the subject of an original complaint, the justices would have jurisdiction to entertain it Wynne v. Barnard, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 35.

Set-off.]—Where items claimed in a set-off are in excess of jurisdiction, such set-off cannot be allowed, although the balance on an adjustment of the amount claimed and the set-off is a sum within the jurisdiction. Regina v. Bond, ex parte Woodhead, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 130; 1 A.L.T., 1.

Set-off.]—To a complaint before justices, a set-off was pleaded to an amount exceeding their jurisdiction. They disregarded the set-off, and made an order for the amount sought in the plaint. Rule absolute to prohibit, subject to the filing of the copy of the minute. Regina v. Heron, ex parte Burnip, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 186; 5 A.L.T., 66.

Stranger about to Leave the Colony—Act No. 565, Sec. 12.]—Justices have no jurisdiction to make an order for payment of a debt upon an ex parte application under Sec 12. Ex parte Rice, 3 A.L.T., 67.

Jurisdiction as to Forfeiture of Goods Exposed for Sale in Street—Act No. 265 ("Police Offences Statute"), Sec. 8—"Interpretation Act," (No. 52), Sec. 8.]—Regina v. O'Flaherty, ex parte Winter. Post under OFFENCES (STATUTORY)—Punishment of offences, &c.

Summons Heard by other Justice than the one who Granted It—"Police Offences Statute 1865," Sec. 32—"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," Sec. 11.]—By virtue of Sec. 11 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865" a summons for illegal detention of property under Sec. 32 of the "Police Offences Statute 1865" may be heard, and an order made thereon by a justice other than the justice who granted such summons. Regina v. Lloyd, ex parte Allen, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 1.

To Enforce Payment of Calls in a Mining Company.]—See Regina v. M'Gregor, ex parte Wilkinson, and other cases. Post under MINING—MINING COMPANIES—CALLS and WINDING-UP—Petition and Practice on—Calls.

Rates—"Municipal Institutions Act 1852," (No. 18), Sec. 31.]—Under Sec. 31 of the Act, justices have jurisdiction only as to amount of assessment, and cannot go into the question of rateability. Where they adjudicate simply that an appellant was not aggrieved by the amount of assessment they keep within their jurisdiction. Blair v. Municipal Council of Ballarat, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 245.

And see also cases under RATES AND RATING.

Information for Being in Unauthorised Occupation of Crown Land—Expired License—"Land Act 1869," Sec. 23.]—Justices have no jurisdiction to hear an information under Sec. 23 of the "Land Act 1869" for being in unauthorised occupation of Crown Land under an expired license, unless the license be produced, or its existence and contents proved. Broadbent v. Hornbrook, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 415.

Injury to a Boat on Hobson's Bay—"Town and Country Police Act" (18 Vict. No. 14), Sec. 15.]—Hobson's Bay may for the purpose of the Act be considered an inland lake, and magistrates have jurisdiction in cases of injury done to a boat thereon. Webb v. Andrews, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 128.

Enforcing Bye-Laws—Entertaining Objections to Validity of Bye-Law—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 225.]—Justices of the Peace who are called upon to enforce any bye-law under the "Local Government Act 1874," are deprived by Sec. 225 of that Act of any jurisdiction to entertain objections to the validity of the bye-law. Rider v. Phillips, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 147; 6 A.L.T. 37.

"Dog Act 1864" (No. 229), Sec. 15.]—The justices have no jurisdiction under Sec. 15 of No. 229, to assess damages in respect of sheep being worried by a dog. Hazelhurst v. Kerr, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 244.

Damage for Injuries Caused by Dogs—"Dog Act 1864," Sec. 16.]—Under Sec. 16 of the "Dog Act 1864," justices in Petty Sessions have jurisdiction toward damages not exceeding £20 for injuries to sheep done by dogs. Ex parte Hilliard, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 2.

Summons to Find Surety to Keep the Peace—Fine.]—Justices have no jurisdiction, upon a summons to find sureties to keep the peace, to impose a fine, even though an assault had been committed. Regina v. Turner, ex parte James, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 61.

To Inflict a Whipping—"Criminal Law Amendment" (No. 399), Sec. 33—Act No. 265, Sec. 36, Subsec. v.]—A single justice, not being a police magistrate, has no power when adjudicating under Sec. 36, subsec. v. of No. 265, to inflict a whipping under No. 399, Sec. 33. Purcell v. Nimmo, 3 V.R. (L.,) 233; 3 A.J.R., 112.

Sentence for Unlawful Assault.]—Justices under Act No. 233, Sec. 38, have power to sentence a person convicted of an unlawful assault to an imprisonment of three months, in default of payment of a fine of £10, notwithstanding Sec. 15 of Act No. 265. Morrison v. Clarke, 2 V.R. (L.,) 9; 2 A.J.R., 17.

Mandatory Order—"Justices of the Peace Statute," Sec. 138.]—A mandatory order nisi issued under Sec. 138 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute" (No. 267) need not refer to that Section. Regina v. Pohlman, ex parte Nickless, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 31.

Licensing Justices—Not Included in Sec. 138.]—Sec. 138 does not apply to licensing justices. The proper remedy in their case is by mandamus. Regina v. Sturt, ex parte Lalor, 4 A.J.R., 20.

Act No. 267, Sec. 138—Refusal of Publican's Licence—Mandamus Proper Remedy not Mandatory Order under Sec. 128.]—See ex parte Mendellsohn, 2 A.L.T., 45. Post under MANDAMUS.

Justices Dismissing Case on Preliminary Objection, having Refused Leave to Amend—Proper Remedy under Sec. 138, since no Appeal will Lie.]—See Regina v. Cogdon, ex parte Wilkinson, 2 V.R. (L.,) 134; 2 A.J.R., 84. Post under APPEAL column 764.

Hearing and Determining—What is.]—Hearing and determining a case can only be after evidence is taken, not by allowing an objection in the nature of a special demurrer. Regina v. Cogdon, ex parte Wilkinson, 2 V.R. (L.,) 134; 2 A.J.R., 84.

Forcible Entry and Detainer.]—Where a person was charged with a forcible entry and detainer under 5 Vict. II., Stat. I., cap. 7, and there was no force used at the time of the entry, but it did not appear that there might not have been an offence within the Statute, the Court granted a mandamus to compel the justices to hear the case, and give their decision on that part of the case. Regina v. Templeton, ex parte Moore, 4 A.J.R., 20.

Mandamus to Compel a Justice to Endorse a Warrant Issued in Another Colony—Act No. 267, Sec. 63—Extra Territorial Jurisdiction.]—A warrant had been issued by a justice in New South Wales for the apprehension of a person charged with sheep-stealing. The warrant was produced to a Victorian justice for him to endorse it. On an application for a mandamus, Held that the power given by Sec. 63 of Act No. 267 to a justice to endorse a warrant, "whether issued in Victoria or elsewhere," was not ultra vires, but that the schedule No. 13 referred to in the margin of Sec. 63, and the words "execute the same" in Sec. 63, do not authorise the constable to take the offender into New South Wales to the justices issuing the warrant, but only authorise the arrest and conveyance to the Victorian boundary; per Higinbotham, J., that the constable was authorised to take the offender into New South Wales

Mandamus issued. Regina v. Call, ex parte Murphy, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 113; 2 A.L.T., 124.

Act No. 267, Sec. 138—Criminal Prosecution — Larceny — Previous Proceedings in Civil Court.]—C. was arrested on a warrant for larceny, and on his being brought before the justices his attorney objected to their hearing the charge, on the ground that the informant had obtained a debtor's summons for the amount mentioned in the charge, and had obtained an order to sequestrate C.'s estate. Rule absolute for justices to hear and determine the criminal charge. Regina v. Call, ex parte Miller, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 120.

Mandamus to compel justice to grant a Pawnbroker's License.]—Ex parte Nybery, re Nicholson, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 292; 4 A.L.T., 78. Post under PAWNBROKER.

Duty to Hear Complaint for Nuisance.]—Justices have no discretion to refuse to hear a complaint for a nuisance at common law; but must hear the case. Regina v. Balcombe, 1 A.J.R., 152.

Mandamus—Appearance of Counsel—Costs.]—If there is no opposite party to be served with a rule, and if questions of law are involved, justices may appear by counsel, and are entitled to costs. Regina v. Alley, ex parte Guess, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 19; 4 A.L.T., 150; See also S.P., Ex parte Minogue, 4 A.L.T., 149.

Order to Hear Case—Costs—Defendant not Appearing to Defend.]—The Court on making absolute an order to justices to hear a complaint, which they had erroneously declined to hear, on the ground of want of jurisdiction, refused to award costs against the defendant, who had not appeared before the justices, or resisted the complainant's claim. Regina v. Daley, ex parte Hansford, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 28; 1 A.L.T., 151.

Costs—Act No. 267, Sec. 138—Person Obtaining an Order Nisi to Compel Justices to Hear and Determine a Case.]—Where a person obtained an order nisi, calling upon justices to hear and determine a complaint, and the order absolute was simply to hear the case, and was therefore different from the order nisi, no costs were allowed the complainant. Regina v. Balcombe, 1 A.J.R., 152.

II. MATTERS PRELIMINARY TO EXAMINATION OR HEARING.

Issuing Warrant—Act No. 267, Sec. 57.]—A justice has power under Sec. 57 to issue a warrant on a Sunday, only for an indictable offence. Graham v. Haig, 6 A.L.T., 158.

Act No. 267, Sec. 67—Non-appearance of Defendant.]—Defendant was summoned for a breach of by-laws of the Board of L. and W., and, not appearing, was convicted in his absence, and ordered to pay a certain fine, "in default distress, in default seven days." Defendant received no notice of the minute of conviction, and was served with a warrant of distress, and afterwards with a warrant of commitment. Held that it was not necessary to serve defendant with a copy of the minute of conviction before issuing the warrants. Prohibition refused. Regina v. Koch, ex parte Wilks, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 121; 5 A.L.T., 20.

Defendant Brought Irregularly before Justices—No Objection Taken at the Time.]—M. was brought before justices, charged with an offence without a warrant or a summons, and, making no objection to the mode of procedure, was convicted. Held that the conviction would not be quashed on an affidavit showing the irregularity of the proceedings, that objection then being taken for the first time. Regina v. Gascoigne, ex parte Millidge, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 108; 5 A.L.T., 8.

Rehearing by Justices—Necessity of Fresh Summons.]—Where O. was summoned for calls by the official agent of a wound-up company, and notice was served on him by a solicitor that the case was to be reheard, being remitted for that purpose on appeal, but no fresh summons was served on O., Held that the notice was insufficient, that a fresh summons or some intimation from the Court was necessary. Osborne v. Gaunt, 3 A.J.R., 47.

Variance Between Name of Plaintiff and that Given in the Summons—Act No. 267, secs. 69, 70.]—In the certificate of registration of a company the company was called the "Union Quartz Mining Company" (Registered,) and in the summons it appeared as "The Union Quartz Mining Company" (Registered.) Held that the variance was immaterial, and that the justices ought not to dismiss a case on the ground of variance. Reeves v. Forbes, 1 A.J.R., 154.

Amending Summons—"Justices of Peace Statute" (No. 267) Sec. 69—Insufficiency of Summons.]—C. was summoned under Sec. 26 of No. 265 ("Police Offences Statute") for using abusive language which "might have" provoked a breach of the peace, and an objection taken at the trial before the justices that the summons as so worded did not disclose an offence was overruled, and she was fined. The justices refused to state a special case. Rule nisi for a mandamus. Held that there was no power of amendment under Sec. 69 of Act No. 267 in cases where the summons disclosed no offence on the face of it. Rule absolute for a mandamus to state special case. Regina v. Call, ex parte Clarson, 3 A.J.R., 45.

Power to Adjourn—Act No. 267, Sec. 69.]—Sec. 69 comprises all informations, whether for indictable offences or summary convictions, and the power of adjournment therein given in case of insufficient information applies to all such informations. Pyrke v. Nettleton, 3 V.R. (L.,) 6; 3 A.J.R., 27.

Act No. 267, Secs. 69, 70—Error in Summons—Amendment—Costs.]—Where a summons contained a date as the 2nd of February, instead of the 12th, and the justices dismissed it, regarding this as a fatal error, a rule absolute for a mandamus was granted, as the justices had power to amend the summons, but without costs, as a fresh summons would have been a simpler remedy. Regina v. Cogdon, re Sistron, 5 A.J.R., 20.

Error in Summons—Amendment.]—Where a complaint was improperly taken out in the name of the Queen, and it was sought on the return of a rule nisi for a prohibition to amend by adding the names of others as complainants, the Court thought the amendment too large, and made the rule absolute without costs. Regina v. Rowe, 1 V.R. (L.,) 83.

Two Inconsistent Offences Included in one Summons—Matter for Amendment under Sec. 69 of Act No. 267.]—Where a person was summoned under the "Waterworks Statute," for "causing" and "permitting" injury to be done to a reservoir, and it was objected that the two offences were inconsistent, and the magistrate refused to allow an amendment, and dismissed the case. Held, per Barry, A.C.J., that the amendment should have been permitted under Sec. 69, and if the defendant had been in any way deceived or misled by the amendment, the case could have been adjourned. Regina v. Cogdon, ex parte Wilkinson, 2 V.R. (L.,) 134.

Adjournment to Amend Defective Summons—Particulars of Demand—"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," Sec. 69.]—Justices may, under Sec. 69 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," adjourn the hearing of a complaint, in which particulars of demand have not been endorsed on the summons in compliance with Sec. 16 of the "Amending Act" (No. 565), in order to allow the complainant to remedy the defect. Ex parte Forsman, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 55.

Summons for one Offence and Conviction for Another—Act No. 267, Sec. 69.]—Although a charge in which justices have primary jurisdiction, may be entertained against a person, when he is actually before justices, without any previous summons, yet, if such person has been summoned for an offence, the justices, after hearing the evidence, have no power to proceed to convict him of a different offence, unless they inform him that they have acquitted him of the former charge, and that they intend to entertain the other. Regina v. Wharton, ex parte Brilly, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 160.

Summons Containing More than One Matter of Complaint.]—A summons containing more than one matter of complaint is, by virtue of Sec. 73 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," bad as to all or any of them. Regina v. Mollison, ex parte Borough of Sandridge, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 51.

Complaint for Rates.]—A complaint before justices for rates due, comprised several rates, some due under Acts prior to the Act under which the complaint was laid. Held that the justices were right in declining to hear it, on the ground that it contained more than one matter of complaint. Ibid.

A criminal information should not include several distinct offences. Where, therefore, L. was summoned for infringing the regulations of a common on three different days. Held that it was bad. Lloyd v. Gibb, 1 A.J.R., 134.

Act No. 267, Sec. 73—Several Acts Charged in one Summons—Disobedience to a Master.]—A summons was taken out under Act No. 198, Sec. 11, for the one offence of disobedience, setting out three instances of such disobedience. Held that the summons was not bad under Sec. 73 of Act No. 267, and rule to quash conviction discharged. Regina v. Turnley, ex parte Gleeson, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 114.

Act No. 267, Sec. 73—Complaint for Calls.]—The Court held that there must be a separate complaint for each call. Ogier v. Ballarat Pyrites Company, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 245.

But see contra Guthrie v. Gippsland G.M. Company, 5 A.J.R., 161; Regina v. M'Gregor, ex parte Wilkinson, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 167; 2 A.L.T., 4, where the Court held that a company might sue for several calls under one complaint.

Preliminary Examination on Charge of Indictable Offence—Adjournment for More than Eight Days—Act No. 267, Sec. 88.]—G. was committed for trial by justices on a charge of larceny, and he swore an information against the prosecutor, H., for perjury in that very matter. As such information would have to be tried at the Court of Assize, which did not sit till after the sitting of the Court at which the charge of larceny was to be tried, the justices, thinking that it would needlessly prejudice the trial for larceny if H., the principal witness, were under committal for trial for perjury at the time when he would have to give his evidence, adjourned the hearing of the information for perjury till after the trial for larceny. Held on an application by G. that the justices had a discretion in the matter, and that the Court would not compel them to proceed with the examination on the charge of perjury. Regina v. Smythe, ex parte Godfrey, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 141.

No Personal Service of Summons—Affidavit of Service.]—Under Sec. 2 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute Amendment Act" (No. 319), where there has not been a personal service of the summons the justices have no jurisdiction to hear the case upon an affidavit of service. Regina v. Gaunt, ex parte Vallins, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 283.

Amendment of Conviction—Service on Right Party under Wrong Name—Act No. 267, Secs. 64, 65.]—On an information for an offence against a certain Statute, A.Y., the right defendant, was summoned under the name of S.C.Y. The summons was served, and A.Y. appeared and was convicted. The Court refused to prohibit the conviction, but ordered the conviction to be amended. Regina v. Carr, ex parte Ah Ying, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 391; 1 A.L.T., 97.

Sufficiency—Determination of Justices—"Justices of the Peace Amending Act," No. 319, Sec. 2.]—It is a matter entirely for the determination of the justices whether a summons has been sufficiently served under Sec. 2 of the "Justices of the Peace Amending Act" (No. 319.) Service at the place of abode of the defendant, and in his absence, is sufficient, if the justices be satisfied, though he have had no knowledge of the summons until after an order has been made upon it. Ex parte M'Evoy, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 424; 2 A.L.T., 125; sub nom. Regina v. M'Evoy.

Service of Summons.]—Where a summons was served only half-an-hour before the hearing, but the affidavits showed that the defendant was in attendance at the hearing, having a cross summons against the complainant, Held that the justices had jurisdiction to hear it at once. Regina v. Cantwell, ex parte Costelloe, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 475.

Service on Manager of Company—No Appearance—Adjournment—Application to Quash.]—A summons to appear before justices was served on the manager of a mining company two days after the day fixed for appearance, but he took no steps to ascertain what had been done at the hearing of the summons, which had been in fact adjourned, but no notice was given to the company of the adjournment. Held that there was no sufficient reason for quashing the order made at the adjourned hearing. Regina v. Lawlor, ex parte Lone Hand Q.M. Coy., 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 207.

Affidavit in Support of Service—Act No. 319, Sec. 2—Affidavit "Made and Signed."]—The jurat of an affidavit in proof of the service of the summons required by the Act No. 319, Sec. 2, was in the form "sworn before me," &c. Held that this was insufficient, since the words did not show that the affidavit was, or purported to be, "signed" as well as "made" before the justices as required by the terms of the section. Regina v. Howitt, ex parte Walker, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 320; 6 A.L.T., 150.

Quashing Order—Summons Improperly Filled Up—Duty of Clerk of Petty Sessions—Costs.]—The Court quashed an order on a summons, where the summons had been altered so clumsily that it was uncertain on what day the defendant ought to appear; but did not allow costs against the complainant, since the responsibility for the correctness of the proceedings rested, not on the parties, but on the clerk of Petty Sessions, whose duty it was to fill in the summons properly, but, the clerk not being before the Court, costs were not given against him, but were left to abide the event. Regina v. Harrigan, ex parte Allen, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 22; 3 A.L.T., 101.

Interpleader Summons—Admission of Evidence as to Bill of Sale being Fraudulent.]—See Dunlop v. Tutty, ante column 109.

III. Procedure in Summary Jurisdiction.

Remand Warrant—What Sufficient Materials on which to Grant—"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," Sce. 101.]—The police received a telegram from England directing them to arrest a passenger by steamer who was alleged to be guilty of forgery; and, on the arrival of the steamer, the passenger was arrested, and brought before the City Bench, but no warrant or sworn information was produced. Upon the application of the police, the prisoner was remanded until a date, by which it was anticipated a police officer would arrive from England with all the necessary documents. Held, that these were sufficient materials for granting the remand warrant. In re Davis, 1 A.J.R., 1.

Act No. 263, Sec. 12—Justice Adjudicating on Part of the Case—Waiver.]—A complaint was heard before three justices; of these, one came on the bench after part of the evidence had been taken, but he took part in the adjudication. Held, that all the justices adjudicating upon a case ought to have been present during the entire hearing. A justice, by merely sitting upon the bench, takes part in the adjudication, and if he does so after the hearing has begun the previous witnesses ought to be re-sworn and re-examined, but that such an objection not being taken at once will be deemed to be waived, and cannot be subsequently taken. Regina v. Browne, ex parte Sandilands, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 138.

Practice—Court most Easy of Access—"Justices of the Peace Act 1876" (No. 565), Sec. 13.]—For the purposes of determining, under Sec. 13 of the "Justices of the Peace Act 1876" (No. 565), which is the Court nearest, or most easy of access, both the execution creditor and the claimant, on an interpleader summons by a constable who has executed a distress warrant issued by justices, must be considered as defendants, one as much as the other. Distance is not always to be the ruling element considered in determining which Court is the most easy of access. Regina v. Kavanagh, ex parte Comrie, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 179; 2 A.L.T., 7; sub nom. ex parte Comrie.

Nearest Court—Act No. 565, Sec. 13.]—On a rule nisi for prohibition on the ground of proceedings being had at the Court nearest of access, under Act No. 565, Sec. 13, the Supreme Court will not interfere upon insufficient evidence, and the burden of proof lies upon the person wishing to disturb the order. Regina v. Panton, ex parte Winstone, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 303; 3 A.L.T., 22.

Warrant for Commitment—Service of Summons—No. 267, Sec. 117.]—W. was convicted before T., a police magistrate, and other justices, on a summons under Sec. 38 of the "Scab Act 1870" for being the owner of scabby sheep, and fined. In default of payment of fine, the amount was to be recovered by distress, and, in default of distress, to be imprisoned. The amount was not paid, a distress warrant was issued, and a return of nulla bona was made, after which a summons was signed by T. calling upon W. to show cause why a warrant of commitment should not be issued. This was not served, as W. had left the colony. T. subsequently signed a warrant for W.'s arrest. W. sued T. for false imprisonment. The jury gave a verdict for T. On rule nisi for new trial, Held that the words of Sec. 117 of No. 267 were mandatory, and the act of the justices ministerial, and that before signing the warrant of commitment it was not necessary for a summons to show cause to be served. Warr v. Templeton, 3 V.R. (L.,) 56; 3 A.J.R., 37.

See S.P., Bradley v. Creeth, 4 A.J.R., 92.

Warrant of Distress—Issue before Service of Copy of Minute of Order—"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," Sec. 117.]—Justices may, under Sec. 117 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," issue a warrant of distress on default of payment of money without any prior service of a copy of the minute of the order, and before the order itself is drawn up, if the defendant has been present when the order for payment of the money was made. Regina v. Bradshaw, ex parte Berry, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 197; 2 A.L.T., 20; sub nom. in re Bradshaw.

When Commitment Bad—Act No. 267, Sec. 122.]—Justices had made an order for payment of a certain sum of money, in default of payment distress, in default of distress imprisonment. The defendant was committed to gaol. Upon return of a writ of habeas corpus, it appeared in the warrant of commitment that there was no sufficient distress. Held that there was no order recited of an adjudicating magistrate to the effect that there was no sufficient distress, but only a recital to that effect by the committing magistrate; that a definite adjudication was necessary, and that commitment was bad. Prisoner discharged. In re Maver, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 213.

Adjudication of Commitment in Default of Distress—Sufficiency of Warrant.]—On an adjudication of commitment, in default of satisfying a distress, the justices have no jurisdiction to entertain an objection to the sufficiency of the distress warrant. M'Eachren v. Shaw, 4 A.J.R. 72.

"Licensing Act 1876," Sec. 54—'Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," Secs. 111, 125—Conviction Ordering Payment, Distress, or Imprisonment.]—Justices have no power, under a conviction imposing a penalty under Sec. 54 of the "Licensing Act 1876," which statute provides no means of enforcing payment, to order, under Secs. 111-125 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," in default of payment distress, and in default of sufficient distress imprisonment. Regina v. M'Cormick, ex parte M'Monigle, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 268; 6 A.L.T., 105.

Per Higinbotham, J. Section 123 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865" is only applicable to cases where the Act on which the conviction is based authorises a warrant of distress to issue; and does not, therefore, apply to a a conviction under Sec. 84 of the "Licensing Act 1876." If it did apply, the justices would have power under such a conviction to order imprisonment in default of distress in their original adjudication. Sed per Williams and Holroyd, JJ. Sec. 123 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865" applies to all cases where the statute which authorises the conviction provides no means of enforcing payment; and applies, therefore, to a conviction under Sec. 54 of the "Licensing Act 1876." But Sec. 123 does not empower the convicting justices to order, in their original adjudication, imprisonment in default of distress. Ibid.

Where, therefore, convictions under Sec. 84 of the "Licensing Act 1876," for selling liquor without licenses, ordered payment of a fine of £25, in default distress, and in default of sufficient distress imprisonment for one month, Held by the whole Court, though on different grounds, that the convictions were bad. Ibid.

And see under LICENSING ACTS.

Jurisdiction under the "Masters and Servants Statute 1864," Sec. 11.]—See Regina v. Bayne, ex parte Rea, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 89; post under MASTER AND SERVANT—Rights and duties, &c.

Punishment on Convictions of Offences under "Police Offences Statutes."]—See post under OFFENCES (STATUTORY.)

Conviction—Venue.—The venue in the margin of a conviction was "colony of Victoria to wit," and in the body of the conviction it was stated that the appellant "is convicted before the undersigned Police Magistrate in and for the said colony," and that the offence was committed "at Ballarat in the said colony." Held that the description of Victoria as the place in which the offence was committed, with the other evidence on the face of the document, would suffice to show jurisdiction, and that the conviction was valid. Batchelder v. Corden, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 45.

Amending Information—Act No. 319, Sec. 3.]—It is open to justices at any time before final determination on a conviction, either by appeal, certiorari, or otherwise, and before it has been made a record, at the General Sessions, to amend that originally drawn up, or to substitute for that first drawn up another in a different or amended form, provided the amendment be in accordance with the facts proved. Regina v. Puckle, ex parte M'Intosh, 4 A.J.R., 21.

Amending Conviction.]—Justices may amend a conviction imposing a penalty where the penalty is a matter of computation, and a mistake has been made in the amount as stated on the minute of conviction. Regina v. Akehurst, ex parte Gavel, 3 A.J.R., 119.

Conviction—Sentence to Commence at the Expiration of Another Sentence—"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," Sec. 127.]—Justices sentenced a prisoner under Sec. 127 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," on four charges of indecent exposure. On three charges he received sentences. On the fourth the sentence was for six months, with hard labour, the sentence to commence "at the expiration of three other sentences passed upon the prisoner this day" for indecent exposure. On special case, Held that the conviction was sufficient, and was not bad for uncertainty. Regina v. Hodges, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 319; 6 A.L.T., 144.

Verbal Order Followed by a Warrant for Conviction—Effect of Acts, Nos. 284, 292 upon Justices' Power to Convict.]—In re Devaney, ante column 348.

Awarding Costs—Act No. 267, Sec. 115.]—Magistrates can only award costs in cases where they have a summary jurisdiction. Therefore, in a case of perjury which justices had dismissed with costs, a rule nisi for a prohibition against the order for costs was made absolute. Regina v. Daly, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 76.

Fraud Summons—Dismissal—Magistrates Cannot give Costs.]—See O'Donoghue v. Hamilton, ante column 348.

"Under Companies Statute 1864," Secs. 25, 63—"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," Sec. 114—Power to Award Costs to Informer.]—justices of the peace may award the costs of a conviction, under Sec. 25 of the "Companies Statute 1864," to the informer independently of Sec. 63 of the Act, since Sec. 114 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865" extends to a conviction under Sec. 25 of the former Act. In re Bishop, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 287.

Distress Warrant—Tender of Part of Amount Ordered—"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," Sec. 117.]—B. recovered a judgment against D. in Petty Sessions. D. went to B.'s house and tendered a part of the amount recovered, which tender B. refused to accept, and obtained a distress warrant. D. brought an action before the justices for illegal distress, and recovered a verdict. On appeal, Held that the verdict should be set aside, D. not having accepted the tender. Barry v. Dolan, 2 A.J.R., 114.

IV. Appeal and Reviewing Decision.

Power of Appeal Conferred by Act No. 159, Sec. 14—Stating a Case.]—The power conferred by the Act No. 159 on both parties to a proceeding before justices to appeal is limited to cases in which the determination of the justices is erroneous in point of law; and in those instances in which it is sought to compel the justices to state a case, it lies on the intending appellant to show that the justices have arrived at an erroneous conclusion in point of law. Ex parte Matt, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 234.

Appeal upon a Point not Determined On—Stating Case—Act No. 159, Sec. 11.]—Sec. 11 of the Act only gives justices power to state a case where, "after a determination by a justice of any matter which he has power to determine," either party aggrieved appeals against "such determination" as erroneous in point of law. Justices therefore cannot state a case upon rateability, a matter in which they have no jurisdiction. Blair v. Municipal Council of Ballarat, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 245.

Act No. 267, Sec. 150—Decisions in Rate Cases.]—Appeal cases under Sec. 150 of the Act No. 267 are allowed from decisions of Petty Sessions in rate cases. Mayor of Fitzroy v. Collingwood Gas Coy., 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 72; 1 A.J.R., 82.

Where Appeal Lies—Act No. 159, Sec. 11—Determination.]—A decision of justices in rejecting evidence, which if admitted, might have left the ultimate decision of the case the same, is not such a determination of the matter before the justices as is contemplated by the Act No. 159, Sec. 11, which gives the right of appeal to a person aggrieved by such determination as being erroneous in point of law; and no appeal will lie where evidence is rejected which would not affect the principle of the case, but might possibly go to lessen damages. Peachment v. Conlon, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 74.

Where Appeal Lies—Hearing and Determining—Act No. 267, Sec. 138.]—Upon a case at Petty Sessions coming on for hearing a preliminary objection was taken that the summons being for "causing and permitting" injury to be done to a reservoir was informal, since the two offences were inconsistent. The magistrate refused leave to amend, and dismissed the case without hearing it. On a rule calling on the magistrate to show cause why he should not hear and determine the case, Held that the case had not been "heard and determined," so that an appeal would lie; and rule to compel the magistrate to hear and determine the case made absolute. Regina v. Cogdon, ex parte Wilkinson, 2 V.R. (L.,) 134; 2 A.J.R., 84.

Where Appeal Lies—Prisoner Sentenced to a Whipping for an Offence under Sec. 36 of Act No. 265—Under the Age of Sixteen—Appeal, not Rule to Quash, the Remedy.]—See Regina v. Benson, ex parte Tubby, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 2. Post under Sessions—Appeal to, &c.

Appeal—Where it Lies.]—No appeal will lie from a decision of justices refusing to entertain an objection as to the sufficiency of a distress warrant on an adjudication for commitment in default of satisfying a distress, since the justices had nothing to determine. If the warrant on which the defendant was committed is bad, his remedy is by habeas corpus. M'Eachern v. Shaw, 4 A.J.R., 72.

Decision on Facts.]—Although the Court is unwilling to interfere with a decision of justices upon facts, nevertheless the Court will interfere with such a decision, where the conclusion or inference of the justices is not warranted by the facts. Regina v. Mollison, ex parte Crichton, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 144.

Practice—Act No. 565, Sec. 11—Question of Fact.]—Where there is evidence upon which justices were at liberty to act, the Court will not review their decision in matters of fact; though the Court might arrive at a different conclusion upon the evidence. Regina v. Taylor, ex parte Lewis, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 108.

Decision on Facts.]—Where justices had decided on facts before them, a summons for a breach of regulations prohibiting "processions," that there had been a procession, the Court refused to review this decision, not being satisfied that the justices were clearly wrong. Bannon v. Barker, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 200.

Application to State a Case need not be in Writing—"Justices of the Peace Statute," Sec. 150.]—The application by the appellant, under Sec. 150 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," to the justices to state a case need not be in writing. If the justices choose to state a case on a verbal application it is entirely in their discretion to do so. Lloyd v. Gibb, 1 A.J.R., 134.

Conditions Precedent.]—The transmission of an appeal case from justices, under the Act 25 Vict., No. 159, within the time—seven days—allowed by the Act, and giving the notice of appeal required by the Act, are conditions precedent to the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court; and where they have been omitted, the Court will order the case to be struck out of the list. Williams v. Row, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 376.

Time for Transmitting Case—Act No. 159, Sec. 11.]—Under Sec. 11 of the Act No. 159, which enacts that the appellant shall "within one week after receiving such case, transmit the same" to the Supreme Court, the case must be in the hands of the officer of the Supreme Court within the seven days, or there will be no jurisdiction in the Supreme Court to hear the case. Stirling v. Hamilton, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 14.

Transmission of Case—"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865" (No. 267), Sec. 150.]—A preliminary objection was raised that the case had not been transmitted in time under Sec. 150 of Act 267. The case bore an endorsement by the Clerk of Petty Sessions to the effect that he "posted the statement, at the request of the attorney's solicitor, on 24th May, 1867, and that, in the ordinary course of postal arrangements, with one day added, the document would arrive at its destination on or before 26th May, 1867." The date of its arrival at Court was such that, if 24th May were to be deemed the day on which it was "received" by the appellant's solicitor, it was not "transmitted" within the "fourteen days," sed aliter, if 26th May were the day of its receipt. Held, by Barry and Williams, JJ. (dissentiente Stawell, C.J.,) that as the case was received by the Clerk of Petty Sessions for and on account of the appellant, the time should run from the day on which it was so received by him. Objection upheld. Ross v. Pyke, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 145.

On an appeal from justices, the special case was returned to the appellant's attorney more than fourteen days before it was filed with the Prothonotary. On the special case, however, appeared the initials of the magistrate, and a date, within the fourteen days before filing, as if the case had been delivered to the appellant's attorney and then taken back by the magistrate and redelivered at the late date. Held that the Court was bound to assume that the magistrate acted correctly in taking back the case, and that the explanation of the retention of it by the magistrate lay upon the party seeking to strike the case out. Middleton v. Rowe, 2 A.J.R., 54.

Practice—Transmission of Special Case—Time—Act No. 267, Sec. 150.]—An appellant, on receiving the case, was dissatisfied with it; took it back to the justices, who declined to amend it on a material statement, but amended it on technical grounds. The fourteen days had elapsed if they were to be reckoned from the time it first left the justices; but not so if time was to be reckoned from the date when it was last received. Held that the days in Sec. 150 were to be counted from the time it was last received since the justices amended it. M'Callum v. M'Vean, 3 V.R. (L.,) 98; 3 A.J.R., 52.

Notice of Appeal—Act No. 267, Sec. 150.]—Where it did not appear on the notice of appeal given under Sec. 150 of the Act that the person appealing was a "person feeling himself aggrieved" by the magistrates' determination, Held that the respondent was, by the notice, put in full possession of what he should know. Rule nisi to strike out appeal refused. Henley v. Hart, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 162.

Notice—Notice in Writing—No. 159, Sec. 11.]—Where it did not appear on the face of a case that "notice in writing," as required by Sec. 11 of the Act No. 159 (see now Sec. 150 of Act No. 267), had been given to the defendant, but it only appeared that "notice" had been given, Held that the point could not be raised by way of preliminary objection. M'Cormack v. Murray, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 122.

Appeal by Special Case—Notice of Appeal—"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," Sec. 150.]—On appeal by special case, under Sec. 150 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," the special case must be served on the respondent before it is filed with the Prothonotary. Kett v. The Queen, 2 V.R. (L.,) 1; 2 A.J.R., 15. Moroney v. Purkis, 5 A.J.R., 127.

Act No. 267, Sec 50.]—Notice of appeal must be given in writing. Mallett v. Tuff, N.C. 63. See S.P. Moroney v. Purkis, 5 A.J.R., 127.

Beechworth Waterworks Act No. 105, Sec. 84—Notice of Appeal.]—Under Sec. 84 of the Act No. 105, a notice of appeal from a conviction under the Act need not show the time or place of the conviction, and need not state that the appeal was made within four months. Shire of Beechworth v. Spencer, 5 A.J.R., 160.

Recognisances—Act No. 267, Sec. 151.]—On an appeal from justices, the recognisance should not include the costs, and where the amount awarded is under £20, the recognisance should not be for more than £20. Anderson v. Luth, 1 A.J.R., 78. See S.P. Powell v. Taylor, 1 A.J.R., 78.

Recognisance in Excess of Amount Recovered—Act No. 267, Sec. 151.]—Where justices made an award against a defendant for a sum under £20, and on appeal the appellant entered into a recognisance for over £20, Held a fatal objection to the appeal. Perkins v. O'Toole, 1 V.R. (L.,) 81; 1 A.J.R., 78. Followed in Reynolds v. Reynolds, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 82.

Recognisances.]—C. was fined £212 15s. and 5s. costs for possessing a larger quantity of gunpowder than was allowed by law. The recognisance entered into was for £426, double the amount of the penalty, and costs. A preliminary objection that the recognisance was bad as including costs, was held fatal, and the appeal dismissed with costs. Cook v. M'Cullagh, 1 A.J.R., 153.

Time for Entering into.]—It is sufficient if a recognisance for an appeal is entered into at any time before the special case is delivered. Regina v. Wyatt, ex parte Rutherford, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 126.

Recognisances—Act No. 267, Sec. 151.]—Justices made an order for payment of 15s. a week for maintenance of a wife for twelve months, and a recognisance of £20 was entered into. Held that the amount actually "adjudged to be paid" was 15s. a week, and not a certain sum by weekly instalments, and that the recognisance was sufficient. Mackenzie v. Mackenzie, 3 V.R. (L.,) 248; 3 A.J.R., 121.

Recognisance for too Large an Amount.]—Where the amount of an order of justices appealed from is under £20, and the recognisance is entered into for more than £20, the recognisance is bad, and the practice is to strike out the appeal without costs. Heenan v. Layley, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 301; 2 A.L.T., 46.

Entering into by Incorporated Company—Manager.]—An incorporated mining company has no power to enter into recognisances by its manager; but the recognisance must be under seal. Pride and Stringer's Company v. Conisbee, 2 A.J.R., 57.

Entered into by Corporation—Secretary.]—In an appeal under Act No. 267, Sec. 151, by L. and others, the president, councillors, and ratepayers of a shire entered into a recognisance to prosecute the appeal, a copy was attached to the case, and it purported to be entered into by the secretary of the shire. Held that the recognisance was entered into by the wrong person, and was insufficient. Logan v. Stevens, 3 V.R.(L.,) 144; 3 A.J.R., 65.

Deposit—Act No. 159, Sec. 12.]—Under Sec. 12 a deposit is a condition precedent to the jurisdiction of stating a case, and where deposit was too small. Case struck out. O'Dea v. Clayton, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 252.

Appeal on Case Stated—Act No. 237, Sec. 151.]—It need not appear on the face of a case stated by justices under the Act No. 267, that the appellant has either entered into the recognisance, or paid the deposit required by Sec. 151 of No. 267; and such a defect, even if existing, although it might be sufficient to sustain an application supported by affidavits to strike the case out of the list, yet affords no ground for the Court declining to hear the matter. Woolley v. Carver, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 1.

"Justices of the Peace Statute" (No. 267)—Form of Case.]—An objection that the special case did not state that security was given, or that appellant was aggrieved, is not an objection appearing on the face of the case, and cannot be taken by way of preliminary objection; the respondent should in such a case apply to strike case off the list. Woolcott v. Kelly, 3 A.J.R., 39, 40; 3 V.R. (L.,) 62.

Amendment of Special Case.]—The proper practice to obtain an amendment of the special case by the insertion of evidence not referred to in the case, is to make application for amendment when the case is called on. Rule nisi for the purpose refused. McCallum v. McVean, 3 V.R. (L.,) 157; 3 A.J.R., 68.

The justice who stated the case has power to amend it. S.C. 3 V.R. (L.,) 98.

Signature.]—An appeal case is sufficiently signed when signed by one only of the justices who adjudicated upon it. Skene v. Allen, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 179; 1 A.L.T., 12.

It is the duty of magistrates in Petty Sessions stating a case for appeal under the Act to state the case carefully, and the Court will not, except on distinct evidence of an omission, send back the case to be restated. Wilson v. Crawley, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 78.

See also S.P. Webb v. Andrews, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 128.

Appeal Case not Distinctly Setting Out Grounds on which Case was Decided.]—Where the precise grounds on which the magistrates decided the case were not easily discovered from the appeal case, the Court did not send the case back for restatement, but directed the prothonotary to communicate with the magistrates and obtain their answers to certain questions, and intimated that the appeal would be allowed or dismissed according to the answers given. King v. Robinson, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 5.

Remitting Case for Amendment—Proof.]—Justices determined that the evidence, viz., a single sale of spirits, did not constitute sufficient proof of a breach of Act No. 147, Sec. 136, and dismissed information. Held that it being uncertain whether the difficulty was one of fact, i.e., whether the evidence "did not" constitute such proof, or one of law, i.e., whether it "could not," the case must be remitted. On amendment it appeared that the evidence "could not" constitute such proof. Held that there was evidence to go to a jury, and that the evidence "could" constitute such proof, and case remitted for justices to readjudicate having regard to such evidence. Moody v. Penny, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 247.

(c) Compelling Justices to State a Special Case.

Where Justices Refuse to State a Case as Frivolous—Act No. 267, Sec. 152.]—C., in 1863, entered into an agreement to lease land for five years, and entered into possession and paid rent, but as the agreement was not under seal he was merely a tenant from year to year. He paid rent after the expiration of the five years, and remained in possession till September, 1870, when he became insolvent. M., his landlord, thereupon served him with notice of ejectment, on the ground that the tenancy had been determined by the insolvency, and as C. refused to quit a warrant was applied for to eject him. The magistrates granted the warrant, and refused to state a case on C.'s application, as they considered it frivolous and only meant for delay. M.'s affidavit could not be used, as it was sworn before his attorney, and the case stood over from Friday to allow it to be resworn. This was not done, but an affidavit was produced from one of the justices detailing the grounds upon which they had acted. Held that the application was not frivolous, and order to compel justices to state case made absolute, with costs. Regina v. Panton, ex parte Connor, 1 A.J.R., 155.

A justice is not bound to state a special case where only questions of fact are involved, and no question of law. Regina v. Wyatt, ex parte Rutherford, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 127.

Refusal to State a Case—Two Convictions and One Appeal.]—H. was convicted and fined by the justices for breach of a bye-law before the case was stated. A decision of the Supreme Court in another special case, upon a conviction for the same offence by H., was made known, in which the bye-law was declared to be invalid, and the justices, holding that one case ruled the other, and was a mere matter of costs, declined to state a case. Held that the justices must state a case upon the second conviction also. Ex parte Higgins, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 286.

Refusal to State a Case—Certificate of Refusal—Postponement—Mandatory Order—Costs.]—It is the duty of justices to state a case when so asked, or to give a certificate of refusal without hesitation. Where an application to state a case was made in Court to one of three justices who had heard the case, and he refused it, Held, on order nisi to give a certificate of refusal, that the justice had no right to postpone giving such certificate till he had consulted the other justices, but that the order should be made absolute, without costs, since the order nisi was obtained precipitately. Regina v. Dixon, ex parte Richardson, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 303; 4 A.L.T., 78.

Affidavits by Justices on Stating a Case—Act No. 565, Sec. 10.]—A justice is not to make an affidavit on one side or the other on disputed facts. The Act No. 565, Sec. 10, authorises him, where his decision is called in question, to make an affidavit setting forth the grounds of the decision, and any facts which he may consider to have a material bearing on the question at issue. Regina v. Mairs, ex parte Vansuylen, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 43.

Refusal to State Case—Frivolous Application—Act No. 267, Sec. 152—Act No. 565, Sec. 11—Affidavits.]—Justices are allowed to refuse to state a case only where the grounds of the objection to their decision are "frivolous"—i.e., the objections taken do not raise a fairly debatable point. Where justices make affidavits they should do so as neutral parties. Regina v. Dixon, ex parte Richardson, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 2; 4 A.L.T., 146.

Affidavits by Justices.]—Justices are required in their affidavits to send a statement of the facts to the Court, and should not make an affidavit on one side or the other. Ex parte Minogue, 4 A.L.T., 149.

Practice on Appeal—Right to Begin.]—The party supporting the first proceeding below—information or complaint—has the right to begin in the Supreme Court. Gurner v. Municipal Council of St. Kilda, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 124.

Practice on Appeal—Who Begins.]—On an appeal case to the Supreme Court, stated by justices under the Act No. 267, Sec. 150, the party supporting the first proceeding below—information or complaint—should begin. Shaw v. Phillips, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 155.

Appearance on Appeal.]—Justices of the peace are not entitled to appear at the hearing of an appeal to the Supreme Court from their decision. Woodward v. Davey, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 4.

Appearance by Justices, Act No. 565, Sec. 11.]—Where the question involved is merely one of fact the justices may file an affidavit explaining the grounds of their decision, and bringing material facts before the Court without appearing by counsel; but where questions of law are involved they may appear by counsel, and will be entitled to costs. Regina v. Taylor, ex parte Lewis, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 108.

Per Stawell, C.J. After giving their decision the magistrates ought not to interfere by making affidavits or otherwise. Regina v. Panton, ex parte Connor, 1 A.J.R., 155.

Practice—Respondent not Delivering Copies of Special Case—Appeal Case not Distinctly Setting out Grounds on which Case was Decided.]—Where a respondent in an appeal from Petty Sessions had failed to deliver his copies of special case to the judges and appellant had delivered them for him, there is no rule of Court requiring the respondent to pay to the appellant the costs of such copies before he can be heard. King v. Robinson, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 5.

Appeal Case—Fee Stamps—Copies—Costs.]—Where fee stamps had not been affixed to the papers in connection with a special case by way of appeal from a magistrate, and copies of the case had not been supplied to the judges by either party, Held that both parties were in the wrong, it being the duty of the respondent to furnish copies if the appellant neglected to do so, and the appellant was ordered to pay the costs of the day, and the case was adjourned to allow the stamps to be affixed, and an intimation was given that no further costs would be allowed to either party, no matter which succeeded. Cameron v. Thomson, 3 A.L.T., 104.

Special Case—Fees—"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," Sec. 150.]—The fee imposed in respect of a case stated by way of appeal from justices, under Sec. 150 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," must be paid, though the solicitors for the appellant have prepared the case and copy at their own expense. Bruce v. Garnett, in re Riedle, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 126.

Practice on Appeal—Drawing up Rule.]—It is not necessary in drawing up the rule allowing an appeal from Petty Sessions, to insert a clause stating that it was allowed on reading an affidavit of service upon the respondent. Cadden v. Osborne, 4 A.J.R. 165.

Costs.]—Where nothing is said about costs, on an appeal from Petty Sessions being dismissed, the successful party may draw up his rule with costs, and there will be no necessity to apply to Court for an express order. M'Kenzie v. Jones, Riley v. M'Cawley, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 20.

Costs.]—Where an appeal case from Petty Sessions had been abandoned by the appellant on notice, and the respondent appeared and claimed full costs, Held, he was so entitled. Cranbourne Road Board v. Wedge, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 87.

Costs.]—Where the respondent gives notice that he abandons an order appealed from, the appellant is entitled to set down the appeal to appear upon it, but is only entitled to costs before notice, and those after notice which are simply attendant on verifying the consent, and to those of his appearance. Henley v. Hart, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 162.

Costs.]—Where an objection, not taken in the trial before the justices, was held fatal to an appeal, the appeal was dismissed without costs. Ogier v. Ballarat Pyrites Company, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 245.

Costs.]—On an appeal from justices the party who shows cause in the first instance against striking the case out of the list ought not, if successful, to receive costs; but the party who applies for the rule to strike out, if successful, ought to receive them. Kett v. The Queen, 2 V.R. (L.,) 1; 2 A.J.R., 15.

V. Prohibitions to and Quashing Convictions and Orders.

Undsr Act No. 159.]—A determination by justices to enforce a rate by warrant is not an order or conviction within the meaning of Act No. 159, and therefore a prohibition against such a determination does not lie. Regina v. Fraser, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 3.

Compare Act No. 267, Sec. 136.

Act No. 571, Sec. 1—Order made under Licensing Act, No. 566, Sec. 103.]—C. being in occupation of certain premises as a licensed publican was bound over to keep the peace towards his wife, and being unable to find sureties was committed. The owner then obtained an order from justices, under Sec. 103 of No. 566, authorising his agent to carry on the business. Held that such order was not an "order" within Sec. 1 of Act 571, so as to entitle C. to a writ of prohibition, since the proceeding sought to be prohibited must be a conviction in invitum. Regina v. Webster, ex parte Collins, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 101.

Conviction for Selling Liquor without License.]—See post under Licensing Acts—Offences against.

Certificate of License — Power of Court to Quash.]—The Court has only power to quash judicial proceedings, and though a license itself is not a judicial proceeding, yet the certificate of license is under the "Licensing Act" (No. 566,) since there must have been evidence of some kind taken before it can be granted. Rule absolute to quash the certificate of license. Regina v. Hamilton, ex parte Attorney-General, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 194; 3 A.L.T., 11.

Prisoner Sentenced to be Whipped for Offence under Sec. 36 of "Police Offences Statute 1865"—Defence that he was under Sixteen—Appeal not Rule to Quash the Remedy.]—Regina v. Benson, ex parte Tubby, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 2. Post under Sessions—Appeal to, &c.

Effect of Prohibition—What may be Prohibited—Act No. 267, Sec. 136.]—The issue of an order to prohibit stays all proceedings not only from time of its service, but from the time of issue. A warrant of ejectment is not "a conviction or order" within the meaning of Act No. 267, Sec. 136, and rule nisi for a prohibition against such warrant discharged. Regina v. Carr, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 245; 1 A.J.R., 1.

See also ex parte Shaw, 4 A.L.T., 5.

Act No. 571—Warrant of Ejectmsnt.]—A warrant of ejectment under Act No. 192, "Landlord and Tenant Statute," is not an order within the meaning of the particular sections of Act No. 571, which enable the Court to grant rules to prohibit. Regina v. Taylor, ex parte Blackburn, 3 A.L.T., 67. See also ex parte Carey, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 408.

Where Certiorari the Remedy not Rule to Prohibit.]—Ex parte Scott, ante columns 127, 128.

Quashing Order—Irregularity of Notices to Justices to Eject under Act No. 192, Sec. 90.]—There was an irregularity in a notice of intention to apply under Act 192 for a warrant of possession, but the justices made an order for the issue of the warrant. Held that the Court would not, under Sec. 4 of Act No. 571, quash such order, as the tenant had his redress under the Act No. 192. Regina v. Snowball, ex parte Gawne, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 409; 1 A.L.T., 100.

Warrant of Commitment on Fraud Summons—Act No. 571, Sec. 4.]—A warrant of commitment on a fraud summons issued under Sec. 5 of Act No. 284 by the Prothonotary or a Clerk of Petty Sessions, is not a warrant which may be quashed under Sec. 4 of Act No. 571. Regina v. Tope, ex parte Smith, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 187; 5 A.L.T., 70.

What may be Quashed—Adjudication under "Fences Statute 1874," Sec. 8—No. 571, Sec. 4.]—An adjudication under Sec. 8 of the "Fences Statute 1874," directing the description of fence to be erected between adjoining owners and the portion to be erected by each, is not an "order" within the technical meaning of Sec. 4 of the Act No. 571, and cannot therefore be quashed under that section. Regina v. Kerr, ex parte Palmer, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 235; 4 A.L.T., 41.

Warrant of Distress.]—Semble, that a warrant of distress is included in the word "warrant" in Sec. 4 of the Act No. 571, and may be quashed under that section. Regina v. Bradshaw, ex parte Berry, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 197.

What may be Quashed—Determination under "Masters and Apprentices Statute 1864," Sec. 17—Act No. 571, Sec. 4.]—A determination of justices, under Sec. 17 of the "Masters and Apprentices Statute 1864," as to the satisfaction which an apprentice is to render to his master for absenting himself from his service, is not a "conviction," "order," or "warrant" within Sec. 4 of the Act No. 571, and cannot therefore be quashed under that Act. Regina v. Pickles, ex parte Fickel, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 126; 4 A.L.T., 3.

What may be Quashed—Order on Interpleader Summons.]—Semble, that an order of adjudication upon an interpleader summons is a proceeding subject to be brought up to be quashed under Sec. 4 of the "Justices of the Peace Amendment Act" (No. 571). Regina v. Kavanagh, ex parte Comrie, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 179; 2 A.L.T. 7; sub nom. ex parte Comrie.

When Granted—Costs.]—An applicant for a prohibition to an order of justices is not disentitled to the writ because he has appealed to the General Sessions in the first instance; but having made such an appeal is a ground for refusing him his costs of the rule of prohibition. Regina v. Skinner, 1 A.J.R., 151.

And for cases of certiorari to quash orders, see cases ante columns 127, 128.

(b) On Account of Defect in the Conviction, want of Jurisdiction, or Error and Mistake on part of the Justices.

Prohibition—Mistake or Error—14 Vict. No. 43, Secs. 12, 13.]—Under 14 Vict. No. 43, Secs. 12, 13, prohibition should not be granted against the execution of an order of justices on the ground of "mistake or error on the part of the justice or justices," unless the mistake or error has been brought before the adjudicating justices. In re Mackenzie, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 135.

Act No. 571, Sec. 1—Error or Mistake.]—Semble, that "mistake" in Sec. 1 includes a total want of jurisdiction. Regina v. Panton, ex parte Winstone, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 303.

For cases of prohibition and quashing convictions and orders made under "Police Offences Statute"—See OFFENCES (STATUTORY).

Act No. 571, Sec. 2—Prohibitions—Wrong Conclusion of Law from the Facts.]—The Court will by prohibition interfere with an order made by justices where they have arrived at a wrong conclusion of law from the facts. Regina v. Panton, ex parte Shea, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 301.

Act No. 571, Sec. 2—Act No. 565, Sec. 13—Jurisdiction—Court Nearest of Access.]—A complaint was heard before justices in Melbourne as to goods bought and delivered at Fitzroy, and an objection was taken under Sec. 13 of Act No. 565 that there was a Court nearer of access. Held that the Court would not interfere by statutory prohibition where the evidence of there being a Court nearer of access was very insufficient, and the burden of proof in such a case rests upon the person wishing to disturb the decision. Regina v. Panton, ex parte Winstone; ibid, p. 303; 3 A.L.T., 22.

Act No. 571, Sec. 2—Decision on Facts.]—The Court is not at liberty to prohibit the enforcement of an order made by justices merely on the ground of the insufficiency of the evidence given to sustain it; if there is any evidence to support the decision the decision will not be reviewed by the Court. Regina v. Grover, ex parte Parsons, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 334; 3 A.L.T., 31.

Per Curiam.]—The words, "conviction or order cannot be supported," in Sec. 2 of the Act No. 571 mean supported "at law," and the Court is not at liberty to prohibit the enforcement of an order made by justices within the limits of their jurisdiction merely on the ground of the insufficiency of the evidence given to sustain it.—Ibid.

Insufficient Evidence—Objection not Taken.]—Execution of an order made by justices for payment of calls to the "official agent" of a mining company in process of winding up, registered under the Act No. 109, should not be prohibited on the ground that there was no proper evidence before the justices of publication of the company's registration in the newspapers if such objection has not been taken before the justices. In re Mackenzie, W. & W. (L.,) 135.

Practice—Question of Title—Production of Depositions.]—On a rule nisi for a prohibition where affidavits showed that a question of title was involved which ousted the jurisdiction of the justices, a preliminary objection was taken that applicant ought to have brought up depositions taken before justices, or affidavits stating that no depositions were taken. Held that where depositions are in fact taken they should be produced, but that the fair inference to be made in the case was that no such depositions were taken. Rule absolute for prohibition on ground disclosed in the affidavit. Regina v. Napier, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 105.

For cases generally as to claims of right or questions of title see ante columns 744, 745, 746.

Under Dog Act, No. 229.]—On a rule nisi for prohibition to restrain justices from enforcing a fine under the "Dog Act," No. 229, where no depositions were brought up from the Court below and when there was no statement in the affidavit that there were no depositions, the Court refused to make absolute the rule for prohibition. Regina v. Taylor, 1 V.R. (L.,) 5; 1 A.J.R., 24.

Where the evidence which was taken before the justices is not sufficiently before the Court it is impossible to grant a prohibition. Regina v. Langford, ex parte Luth, 1 A.J.R., 159.

Prohibition of Conviction—Costs.]—Where justices had granted a conviction "hastily" and "arbitrarily" the Court refused to grant a prohibition, but marked their sense of the justices' conduct by refusing them costs. In re Balcombe, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 49.

Costs of Justices Opposing.]—Where a case was nearly heard and there were four justices present, an application for adjournment was made which was refused. Upon an order nisi for a prohibition, Held that as the application was made when the case was partly heard, and it might have been hard to get the four justices together again, there was no hardship in the refusal, and that the justices should be allowed their costs of opposing the prohibition. Ex parte Beilbey, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 281.

"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," Sec. 12—Complaint Adjudicated upon by two Justices, neither of whom had been present throughout the Proceedings.]—A prohibition was granted to restrain further proceedings on a conviction, under Sec. 32 of the "Public Health Act," (No. 310,) made at an adjourned hearing by justices, neither of whom had been present throughout the whole of the proceedings, there having been adjourned hearings of the complaint at which neither of the justices committing were present. Regina v. Marsden, ex parte Corbett, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 30.

Affidavits.]—On an application for prohibition to justices, the affidavits were objected to as entitled in a cause, where there was no cause before the Court. Held that the words objected to might be rejected as surplusage. Regina v. Webster, ex parte Farquhar, 1 V.R. (L.,) 189; 1 A.J.R.,153.

Conviction.]—M.P. was convicted of aiding and abetting a prisoner in escaping from gaol, and it was adjudged that he should be imprisoned for two years and six months. The conviction did not mention any statute. Held that the conviction was valid under Act No. 265, Sec. 37, Subsec. 1, and No. 267, Sec. 50. Rule nisi to quash conviction discharged. Regina v. Richards, ex parte M'Donald, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 9.

Act No. 265, Sec. 30—Sunday Trading—Conviction Negativing Exemptions.]—Where an Act makes certain Acts illegal and imposes a penalty therefor, any exemption must in the conviction be distinctly negatived; but if the exemptions are made by words of reference to other Statutes, they may be sufficiently negatived in the words of the Statute under which the conviction is made. A. was convicted under Sec. 30 of Act No. 265 of Sunday trading, the conviction specifically negativing certain exemptions, and following the words of the Act in negativing by a general reference to other Statutes certain other exemptions within them, but not setting out and specifically negativing the latter class of exemptions. Held that the conviction was good. Regina v. Montford, ex parte Schuh, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 12; 2 A.L.T., 120.

Quashing Conviction—Act No. 506, Sec. 398—Superfluous Words in a Conviction.]—A person was convicted for that he "did displace, take up, and remove soil from a street," &c., and an order nisi was obtained to quash the conviction on the ground that it was for more than one offence. Held that the conviction was sufficient, and that the justices purporting to convict of what is not an offence, may be regarded as surplusage so long as a valid offence aptly laid still remains. Order discharged. Regina v. Walker, ex parte Trudgeon, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 137; 3 A.L.T. 2.

Conviction under "Licensing Act" (No. 566,) Sec. 54—No Venue—Costs in Blank.]—See ex parte Tribble, under LICENSING ACTS.

And generally as to convictions under the LICENSING ACTS.—See under LICENSING ACTS.

What may be Quashed under No. 571, Sec. 4.]—To be such as may be quashed under the Act No. 571, Sec. 4, an order should be a command addressed to another person founded on a complaint, and requiring him to pay a sum of money, or do a specified act. Regina v. Justices at Richmond, ex parte Edlin, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 87.

A decision of justices recorded in their cause book as follows:—"Order for payment to be obeyed, default distress, one month's imprisonment," is not an order or conviction which can be quashed under Sec. 4 of the Act No. 571. Ibid.

Conviction Quashed on Ground of Justices being Interested.]—See Regina v. Horsfall, ex parte Husband, ante column 744.

The Court ought to be satisfied that there has been an error in law before it exercises the jurisdiction to quash under Sec. 4. Regina v. Rothery, ex parte Mogg, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 33.

Copy of Order Served on Defendant Bad—Costs.]—An order made by justices upon a judgment summons was good, but the defendant was served with a copy which was bad. Rule nisi to quash order discharged without costs. Ex parte Vail, 3 A.L.T., 60.

Act No. 571, Sec. 4—Verifying Copy of Order Served.]—A defective copy of an order on a fraud summons was served on a defendant, who obtained an order nisi to quash it. Held that the defendant was not at liberty to act on the presumption that the copy served was a correct copy, and before applying to quash it he must verify it with the actual order. Regina v. Carroll, ex parte Coe, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 134.

Warrant—Quashing—Technical Objection—Act No. 571, Sec. 4.]—A justices' warrant may, under Sec. 4 of the "Justices of the Peace Amendment Act" (No. 571,) be quashed for mere technical objections, e.g., for misreciting the conviction on which the warrant issued. Regina v. Browne, ex parte Sandilands, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 138.

Act No. 571, Secs. 2, 4.]—Where the objection to an order is that there is no evidence to support the justices the proper remedy is not to apply to quash the order. Regina v. Gleeson, ex parte Reggiani, 5 A.L.T., 29.

Refusing to hear Evidence.]—Where justices have rejected the evidence of a witness who remained in Court after all witnesses were ordered to withdraw, the Court will prohibit all proceedings on, or quash a conviction made by the justices, even though the justices make an affidavit that the evidence, which such witness swears he was ready to give, could not have affected their decision. Regina v. Guthridge & Brennan, ex parte Campbell, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 77.

Act No. 571, Secs. 1 & 2.]—Per Higinbotham, J. "If a primâ facie case of error or mistake in law or on facts is shown by affidavit, it is the duty of the Court to consider the evidence adduced before the justice, and to make the Rule or Order for prohibition absolute only in case the Court shall think that the error or mistake, if any, cannot be amended, and that, if it be not amended, the conviction or order cannot be supported." Regina v. Shuter, ex parte Walker, 9 V.L.R (L.,) 204.

Act No. 571, Sec. 4—When Order may be Quashed Under.]—Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers.) An order of justices cannot be quashed under Sec. 4 of the Act No. 571, unless it be shown that the justices had no jurisdiction, or exceeded their jurisdiction, or unless the order is bad on its face, or ought not in law to have been made. The erroneous admission of evidence by the justices, or an alleged deficiency of proof, is not a ground for quashing an order. Regina v. Littleton, ex parte Kirk, 6 A.L.T., 21.

Prosecution for Assisting in and Managing a Lottery—Name of Prosecutor not Disclosed.]—On a prosecution for assisting in and managing a lottery the name of the prosecutor was not disclosed in the summons, and the Crown Solicitor refused to disclose it, when asked, at the hearing. Held, on order nisi for a prohibition agains enforcing the conviction, that the objection that the name of the prosecutor was not disclosed was fatal; and order for prohibition made absolute. Regina v. Sturt, ex parte Ah Tack, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 103.

The Court will not grant an application to quash because of an addition made to the order at the party's own instance and made ex parte. Regina v. Miller, ex parte Hassall, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 177.

"Justices of Peace Statute" (No. 267,) Secs. 136, 106—Conviction for an Offence under No. 227, Sec. 45—Production of Order.]—Rule nisi under Sec. 136, of No. 267, to prohibit further proceedings in respect of a conviction against L. for a breach of Sec. 45 of Act No. 227. The affidavits set forth no "minute or memorandum" as required by Sec. 106 of Act No. 267, and there was no conviction drawn up by the justices. Held, that there being no conviction drawn up in proper form, and no "minute or memorandum" of such conviction, there was nothing to prohibit. Rule discharged. In re Lewis, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 1.

Prohibition—Act No. 267, Sec. 106—Amending Act (319,) Sec. 3—Conviction.]—Prohibition will not be granted where the conviction is not brought up, or a minute or a memo. thereof; a copy of the entry in justices' book of conviction verified by relator's affidavit is not such a minute or memo. Regina v. Templeton, ex parte Peck, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 21.

Prohibition—Production of Conviction.]—It is sufficient if a copy of the conviction be produced upon the hearing of an argument upon a rule nisi for prohibition, although no conviction had been produced when the rule nisi was obtained. Regina v. Woods, ex parte Emmott, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 101.

No Copy of Conviction.]—Where a conviction is of a nature capable of amendment, if the conviction, or a copy of it, be not produced at the argument of a rule for a prohibition, the rule nisi will be discharged. But where the case turns upon the construction of a Statute, and not upon the form of the proceedings, and the conviction appears to be altogether wrong and incapable of amendment, and the party supporting the order does not require production of the conviction, its absence will not prevent the case being proceeded with until it becomes apparent that the conviction, or a copy of it, should have been produced. Regina v. Smart, ex parte Kellett, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 106.

Order not Drawn up—"Justices of the Peace Amendment Act" (No. 571,) Secs. 1, 4.]—An order of justices which has not yet been drawn up cannot be quashed under Sec. 4 of the Act No. 571, nor will a prohibition to it be granted under Sec. 1 unless a memorandum of the decision, or a copy of the entry made in the justices' book, be brought before the Court. Regina v. O'Regan, ex parte Kane, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 451.

Conviction—Production of Copy of Minute.]—On a rule for prohibition to a conviction it is sufficient to produce a copy of the minute of the conviction before the Court, if the minute will enable the Court to ascertain whether the conviction is capable of amendment. Regina v. Pearson, ex parte Smith, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 329; 2 A.L.T., 63.

Quashing—Production of Order Drawn Up.]—In proceedings to quash an order of justices already drawn up, it is necessary that the order or a true copy thereof be produced; a copy of the minute is insufficient. Regina v. Druce, ex parte Frost, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 156; 1 A.L.T., 9.

Quashing—Process or Copy thereof must be Produced—Act No. 571, Sec. 4.]—On an application to quash an order of justices, under Sec. 4 of the Act No. 571, the process sought to be quashed, or a copy thereof, must be produced to the Court. Ex parte Freeman, 2 A.L.T., 6.

Order to Prohibit—No Order Drawn Up—Act No. 571, Secs. 1, 2.]—If no order has been drawn up it is sufficient to bring a verified copy of the entry in the justices' book before the Court upon a rule or order to prohibit, under Secs. 1 and 2 of the Act No. 571. Regina v. Taylor, ex parte Hailes, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 149; 4 A.L.T., 11. Overruling In re Lewis, Regina v. Templeton, ex parte Peck; Regina v. O'Regan, ex parte Kane, supra.

Quashing—Where no Order Drawn Up—Affidavit.]—Where it is sought to quash an order of justices, and no order has been drawn up, but a minute only, an affidavit that no order has been drawn up must be filed by the applicant. Regina v. Nicholson, ex parte Pufflett, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 44.

Quashing Convictions.]—It is not necessary, when it is sought to quash a proceeding under Sec. 4, to bring such proceeding before the Court by certiorari or otherwise before quashing. Regina v. Browne, ex parte Sandilands, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 138.

Quashing under Sec. 4 of Act No. 571.]—The procedure under Sec. 4 of Act No. 571 is not in the nature of a prohibition, but is a summary mode of quashing in lieu of the old procedure by certiorari. Regina v. Benson, ex parte Tubby, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 2.

The procedure under Sec. 4 affords a distinct and not a cumulative remedy, and ought only to be applied to the cases for which it is intended. Regina v. Grover, ex parte Parsons, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 334, 336.

Order Nisi to Prohibit—Application to Quash—Act No. 571, Sec. 4.]—Where an order nisi has been obtained, under Sec. 4 of the Act No. 571, to prohibit an order of justices, the Court will not, on the return of the order, allow the procedure to be changed, and make the order absolute to quash. Regina v. May, ex parte M'Gee, 3 A.L.T., 98.

Court will not Entertain two Applications, one to Prohibit, and another to Quash.]—Where two orders nisi, one under Sec. 1 for prohibition, and the other under Sec. 4 to quash, had been obtained in respect of the same conviction, the Court declined to entertain both, and allowed the relator to elect which should be made absolute, he paying the costs of the other. Regina v. Guthridge and Brennan, ex parte Campbell, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 77.

Nothing to Prohibit—Altering Order to Prohibit into Rule to Quash.]—Where the act sought to be prohibited has been actually done there is nothing to prohibit, and the Court will not change an order to prohibit into a rule to quash. Regina v. Call, ex parte Braun, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 359.

Act No. 571, Sec. 4—Discretion of Judge.]—Per Higinbotham, J. (In Chambers.)—Under the Act No. 571, a judge has power in his discretion to grant one form of relief or the other, i.e., either to quash or prohibit an order of justice; and he ought in the exercise of his discretion to grant that relief which will not disturb the adjudication of the justices, while it corrects their mistake. Regina v. Littleton, ex parte Kirk, 6 A.L.T., 21.

Writ of Prohibition Made by Vacation Judge—15 Vict. No. 10, Sec. 19.]—An order for writ of prohibition made by a vacation judge must purport to be made under Sec. 19, and the judge should show that he intends to exercise the statutable jurisdiction. In re Brewer, ex parte Baker, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 136.

Such an order should be made absolute during vacation, and not returnable next term. Ibid, S.P. Reg. v. Strutt, ex parte Chatty, 4 A.J.R., 73.

But the judge has no power in vacation to make an order absolute in the first instance for the issue of a writ of prohibition. Scott v. Riddock, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 138.

Application for Writ — When Sustainable — Vacation—15 Vict. No. 10, Sec. 19.]—A rule for prohibition may be obtained in vacation from a Judge in Chambers, under the statutory jurisdiction at law, given by 15 Vict., No. 10, Sec. 19, when a Court of Equity is sitting. Dennis v. Vivian, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 201.

Practice—Prohibition—Emergency Clause.]—Where a judge sees that an application made under the emergency clause for a prohibition has no ground, he may direct the application to be moulded into one under the Act No. 571, and then cause is shown before the Court as required by the Statute. Regina v. Mairs, ex parte Vansuylen, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 43; 2 A.L.T., 126.

Prohibition—Time for Application—Act No. 571, Sec. 1.]—The month within which, under Sec. 1 of the "Justices of the Peace Amendment Act" (No. 571,) an application for a prohibition to an order or conviction of justices must be made, runs from the day on which the order or conviction was made, and not from the day on which it was drawn up. Regina v. Edney, ex parte Skinner, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 1.

Conviction — Application to Quash—Time — "Justice of the Peace Amendment Act," Sec. 4.]—An application under Sec. 4 of the "Justices of the Peace Amendment Act" (No. 571,) for an order nisi to quash an order or conviction must be made within one month from the making of the order or conviction; not from the time when it was drawn up. Regina v. Bayne, ex parte Mau, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 190.

Order Nisi to Quash Conviction—"Justice of the Peace Amendment Act," Sec. 4.]—It is not sufficient that an application for an order nisi to quash a conviction under Sec. 4 of the "Justices of the Peace Amendment Act" (No. 571,) should be made within the month, but the order must be drawn up and signed by the judge who quashes it within the month, otherwise it will be too late, unless where the judge has postponed the application for consideration. Regina v. Broderick, ex parte M'Millan, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 158.

Quashing Warrant of Commitment after Time for Application has Expired.]—Under Sec. 4 of the Act No. 572 ("Justices of the Peace Amendment Act,") a warrant of commitment may be quashed on the ground of the invalidity of the order upon which it is based, although the time for applying to grant or prohibit the order itself (one month) has expired. Regina v. Deely, ex parte Wilson, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 27; 1 A.L.T., 149.

Quashing—Act No. 571, Sec. 4 — Practice.]—Where an application made to a Judge in Chambers to quash a conviction is refused, and an application for the same purpose is made to the Full Court, this is to be regarded as an appeal from Chambers, and does not require to be made under Sec. 4 of the Act No. 571 within a month. Regina v. Armstrong, ex parte M'Pherson, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 234; 3 A.L.T., 9.

Act No. 571, Sec. 4—Adjournment beyond the Month in Consequence of a Defect in the Materials.]—Upon an order nisi to quash a conviction the application was made to a Judge in Vacation within a month, but was adjourned to supply a defect in the necessary materials. Held that it was under those circumstances too late, that the application must be made with all necessary materials ready within the month. Regina v. Mackenzie, ex parte Balloch, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 328; 3 A.L.T., 33.

Court has no Power to Remit the Order—No. 571, Sec. 2.]—On an order nisi for a prohibition to justices under the "Justices of the Peace Amendment Act" (No. 571), the Court cannot under Sec. 2 of the Act remit the justices' order for amendment, but must either discharge the order nisi for prohibition, or make it absolute. Regina v. Burroughs, ex parte Blackwell, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 136.

Amendment.]—The Court cannot amend on an application to quash under Act No. 571. Regina v. Synnot, ex parte Main, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 35.

Where justices had not been made parties to an order nisi to prohibit an order made by them, the Court allowed an adjournment and granted leave to amend by serving the justices. Regina v. May, ex parte M'Gee, 3 A.L.T., 98.

Act No. 267, Sec. 136—Practice.]—On an order nisi under the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," Sec. 136, for prohibition to justices, the practice as to what objection may be raised to the validity of the proceeding before the justices, is the same as on a case stated where the Court confines itself to the points raised, to the intent that objections not raised before the justices cannot be raised in support of the prohibition. Regina v. O'Brien, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 54.

Act No. 571—Applications in Term Time.]—The intervention of the Court under Act No. 571 in Term time, should be sought by means of an application to the Court for a rule nisi, and not by an application to a Judge in Chambers for an order nisi. Regina v. Cantwell, ex parte Costelloe, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 475.

Order Nisi not Set Down for Hearing—Order for Dismissal, how made.]—An application for the discharge of an order nisi for prohibition to justices made in Chambers, but not set down for argument, should be made to the judge who granted the order, with an affidavit that it had not been set down, and not by motion to the Court. Regina v. Hackett, ex parte Wardrop, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 5.

Act No. 571, Sec. 1—Rule Nisi not Stating Grounds.]—The Court overruled an objection that a rule nisi for prohibition under Act No. 571 did not state any grounds. Regina v. Taylor, ex parte Blain, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 271; 1 A.L.T., 39.

Order Nisi to Quash—No Appearance to Move Absolute—Act No. 571, Sec. 4.]—The Court will not discharge an order nisi to quash under No. 571, Sec. 4, when there is no appearance to move it absolute, but will hear the party showing cause, and decide the question on its merits. Regina v. Pritchard, ex parte Smart, 2 A.L.T., 58.

Rule to Quash—What may be Considered on.]—On a rule to quash an order made by justices for payment of arrears alleged to be due in respect of a previous order made by them, the question whether the previous order was properly made and served, and whether the arrears were really due, cannot be considered. Regina v. Justices at Richmond, ex parte Edlin, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 87.

Order Without Jurisdiction—Offer to Abandon Order—Rule to Quash—Costs.—Where justices made an order without jurisdiction, and the defendant obtained a rule nisi to quash it, and after such rule had been obtained the complainant offered to abandon the order, but made no offer to pay the costs incurred, Held, on rule nisi to quash, that the defendant was entitled to go on with his proceedings to quash, and to obtain his costs of so doing, and rule absolute, with costs. Regina v. M'Phail, ex parte Ludlow, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 19.

Quashing Warrant for Commitment—Costs.]—The costs will be given of a rule absolute to quash a warrant, if an intimation that the warrant would not be executed was not accompanied with an offer to pay the costs up to that time. Regina v. Bannerman, ex parte Shiels, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 25.

Costs Where Bad Copy of a Good Order has been Served.]—See ex parte Vail, ante column 777.

Summons Improperly Filled Up—Duty of Clerk of Petty Sessions—Costs.]—See Regina v. Harrigan, ex parte Allen, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 22; 3 A.L.T., 101, ante column 759.

Applicant for Writ of Prohibition having Appealed to the General Sessions in the First Instance—Costs.]—See Regina v. Skinner, ante column 773.

Costs of Order Nisi to Quash—Matter Debatable.]—As a rule, the costs of orders to quash follow the event, but where the matter is fairly debatable the Court, in dismissing such an order, will not allow costs. Regina v. Pickles, ex parte Fickel, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 126; 4 A.L.T., 3.

Amendment of Order—Costs.]—Where the order which is sought to be prohibited is amended as a concession to the respondent, he will be ordered to pay the costs of the prohibition. Ex parte Dreher, 4 A.L.T., 12.

Conviction Quashed—Prosecutor a Police Officer—Costs.]—Where a conviction was quashed, and the person who had obtained the conviction was a police-officer acting in the discharge of his duty, the Court, nevertheless, did not depart from the usual rule that costs follow the decision, and gave costs against the prosecutor. Ex parte Norbo, 5 A.L.T., 167.

VI. Where Decision a Bar to Subsequent Proceedings.

Order for Payment—Second Complaint and Order for Part Payment of Same Amount.]—Where justices made one order for the payment of an amount, but no part of it had been paid, and no steps had been taken for its enforcement, such order is no bar to a second complaint and order for payment of part of the same amount. Ex parte Shire of Alexandra, in re M'Nee, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 134; 1 A.L.T., 2.

Certificate of Dismissal of Complaint Under Act No. 267, Sec. 107—Where a Bar.]—Under Sec. 107 of Act 267 the certificate of dismissal is only a bar to Courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction, and not to Courts of superior jurisdiction. Regina v. Skinner, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 39.

For facts see S.C. ante column 407.

S.P. See Regina v. Trench, ex parte Chalmers, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 55; 4 A.L.T., 163, ante column 407.

VII. Actions By and Against Justices.

Action of Replevin—"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," Secs. 164, 170.]—A justice of the peace, who is in the position of defendant in an action of replevin, is in a different position from a justice who is sued for an act of his own as justice. A justice in the position of such defendant is not entitled to the protection given him by the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," and is not entitled to a month's notice under Sec. 170; and where the action is not based on the order of the justice at all, he is not entitled under Sec. 164 to have the order quashed before proceedings can be taken against him. Smith v. Cogdon, 4 A.J.R., 76.

C., a justice, issued a distress warrant, under the "Mining Companies Act" (No. 228,) Sec. 38, for part of a call, without previously issuing a summons to show cause. The person distrained upon replevied the goods and sued C. Held that C. was not entitled to the protection of Secs. 164 and 170 of the Act. Ibid.

Action for False Imprisonment.]—See Smith v. O'Brien, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 386; Hunter v. Sherwin, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 26; post under Trespass—To the person.

LACHES.

Laches—What is.]—Where two parties are bargaining, and one makes to the other a statement on a material point, and on the faith of that representation the other contracts with him, that other party is not bound to make inquiry, although inquiry would have shown him that it was false. Time will not run against him through his neglect to inquire until he learns something which ought to arouse his suspicions. Clark v. Clark, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 303, 327, 328.

Where there is nothing to put a man upon inquiry he is not responsible for not inquiring. Ibid.

Delay of Twelve Years in Instituting a Suit against a Trustee to Set Aside a Release Obtained by Trustee—No Bar to Relief only Material to Costs.]—Bennett v. Tucker, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 20; 3 A.L.T., 108; post under Trust and Trustee—Rights, &c., of Trustee.

Where Laches of Cestui que Trust disentitles to Relief.]—Shaw v. Gorman, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 18; post under Trust and Trustee—Rights, &c., of.

When Long Delay of a Creditor under a Creditor's Deed Bars his Right.]—Arthur v. Moore, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 207; 1 A.L.T., 29, post. Trust and Trustee.

Where Right to Redeem Barred by Laches.]—Port v. Bain, 2 V.R. (E.,) 177; 2 A.J.R., 129;

Shareholder Lying Idle for Six Years Barred by Laches from Bringing Suit to Set Aside Forfeiture of Shares.]—Cushing v. Lady Barkly G.M. Coy., 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 108, 116, 122; 5 A.L.T., 10, 98. See post under WAIVER.

And for examples of acquiescence see post under WAIVER AND ACQUIESCENCE.

1. Selectors and Selections.

"The Land Act 1862," Sec. 23—"The Land Act 1865," Sec. 47—Selections under—Certificate Holders under.]—Holders of certificates issued under Sec. 23 of the "Land Act 1862" were not entitled to preferential selection, but had to select at the same time and place as other selectors, and in case of two applications on the same day, priority of selection was decided by lot, but in other cases priority of selection was decided by priority of application. The "Land Act 1865" collects all the applicants for land in any area at one place at one hour, and directs lots to be drawn as to priority of choice, and includes applicants under new and old rights in one system of selection prescribed by that Act. The words "exercise the right of selection," in Sec. 47 of the Act of 1865, do not mean more than to obtain recognition of the right of selection, and that after the recognition of that right the holders of certificates should select before a Land Officer, and at the same place and time as other selectors under the Act of 1865. Simson v. The Queen, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 113, 121, 123, 124.

"Land Acts 1862 and 1865"—Penalty for Non-Compliance with Provisions.]—Per Full Court: The penalty imposed by Sec. 126 of Act No. 145 for non-compliance with conditions imposed by Sec. 36 of that Act is confined to selectors under that Act, and cannot be enforced against a selector under Acts No. 145 and No. 237 conjointly. Kettle v. The Queen, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 141.

Per Privy Council. Persons entitled to exercise rights of selection under the Act No. 237 are liable to the penalty imposed by Sec. 126 of the Act No. 145. Attorney-General v. Ettershank, L.R. 6, P.C. 354.

"Land Acts 1862 and 1865"—Regulations of Board of Land and Works—Ultra vires.]—Per Molesworth, J. The regulations issued by the Board of Land and Works under the "Lands Acts 1862 and 1865," requiring declaration that applicants are not selecting as agents or trustees for other persons, as regards certificate-holders, exceed the powers which the Board possess under the conjoint operation of the two Acts; and their requiring certificate-holders to make such a declaration is illegal; and a person making it untruly is not deprived of the rights which he possesses as a selector. Kettle v. The Queen, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 50, 56.

Selection—"Land Act 1862"—Where Selector a Trustee.]—R., by his agent M., employed G. to select land under the "Land Act 1862," and furnished him with the necessary money and a certificate issued under Sec. 23, which R. procured to be assigned to G., but for which assignment G. gave no consideration. G. selected under this certificate, and paid the first year's rent of the land with the money given him by M. A lease of the land selected having been issued to G., he repudiated his agreement with R., and refused to execute a transfer to him of the lease, but offered to repay with interest the money given him by M. Held that inasmuch as R. procured the certificate and advanced the money by which G. obtained the lease, G. was a trustee of the lease for R.; and transfer by G. to R. decreed with costs. Raleigh v. Glover, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 163.

Agreement to Select—"Land Act 1862," Secs. 23 & 24—"Land Act 1865"—Illegal Contract.]—The plaintiff purchased a certificate under "Land Act 1862," Secs. 23 and 24, enabling the holder to select land, and had it transferred to defendant, no consideration passing between plaintiff and defendant. Defendant agreed to select land for plaintiff's benefit, and to transfer it as plaintiff should direct. Plaintiff selected land under the "Amending Land Act 1865," with plaintiff's money; plaintiff paid the rent, and defendant obtained the lease and became registered proprietor under the "Transfer of Land Statute." Bill for specific performance of contract and for transfer. Held that there was nothing illegal in the transaction, and transfer ordered. Glass v. Fowler, 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 122.

"Land Act 1862" (No. 145,) Secs. 23, 24—"Amending Act 1865" (No. 237,) Sec. 7—"Statute of Trusts" (No. 224,) Sec. 97—Selection—Trustee.]—A. was entitled under Secs. 23, 24 of Act No. 145 and Sec. 7 of Act No. 237 to select land. A. employed, through his agent B., C. to select on his behalf under a verbal agreement, A. furnishing all necessary documents and moneys. C. selected and paid the first year's rent out of A.'s moneys, A. receiving the receipt therefor. C. paid subsequent rents, taking receipts in A.'s name. A lease was issued to C., who then denied agreement and refused to transfer lease. Held, following Raleigh v. Glover, ubi supra, that a declaration of trust in writing was not necessary under No. 224, Sec. 97, and that C. was trustee for A., and transfer of lease decreed. Raleigh v. McGrath, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 250.

"Land Act 1869" (No. 360,) Secs. 19, 21, 22—Licensee Selecting as Agent for Another—Fraud.]—The Board of Land and Works issued to a licensee under the "Land Act 1869," (No. 360,) Sec. 19, a certificate of compliance with the Act, and he applied for a lease, and paid rent as under it for eighteen months. Subsequently the Crown agent refused to receive any more rent, and some time afterwards the lease was refused, the certificate of compliance was cancelled by the Board, and a forfeiture of the lease gazetted, upon the ground that he had selected as an agent for another. Upon petition by the licensee to compel issue of the lease, the Court was of opinion that he had selected as agent for another, and Held that there being therefore fraud under Secs. 21 and 22 of the Act No. 360, the petitioner could not maintain proceedings in Equity to compel the grant of the lease. Evans v. The Queen, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 150; 2 A.L.T., 38.

Power of Governor-in-Council to Withdraw Land from Selection—"Land Act 1862," Sec. 46—On Account of Improvements.]—The Governor-in-Council is warranted in withdrawing from selection "on account of improvements," land declared open for selection, and a proclamation giving effect to such withdrawal dates from the time of its being made, and not from the date of its publication. Kennedy v. The Queen, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 145.

"Land Act 1865" (No. 237,) Secs. 10, 14, 21.]—Under Secs. 10 and 21 of Act No. 237, land may be proclaimed by a notice in the Gazette by the Governor-in-Council open for selection after a certain date, not more than three months after the publication in the Gazette, and after such date the land may be selected. Where land was gazetted as open for selection on 29th September, and P. selected on 30th September, Held that P.'s title was good. Russell v. Parkinson, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.), 264; N.C. 73.

"Land Act 1869" (No. 360), Secs. 4, 17, 19, 100, 110—Refusal by Local Land Board of Application to Select—Allowance of Selection, Receipt of Rent and Promise of Issue of License by Minister of Lands and Board of Lands and Works by an ex parte Application and not by an Appeal in accordance with Regulations prescribed.]—R. attempted to select land under the Act No. 360, paid the half-year's rent and costs of license fee and received a conditional receipt. The local land board recommended the refusal of his application for a selection. R. did not appeal to the Board of Land and Works under the regulations of 26th September, 1870, but saw the Minister of Lands and informed the Board ex parte that his application was a bona fide one. The Board then gave him permission in writing to occupy pending the issue to him of a license which was promised. R. occupied and improved; but no license was issued. In June, 1872, there was a change of Ministry, and R. received a notice from the Land's Office acquainting him that the Board would hear his case at a public hearing, in accordance with the regulations, and ultimately R. was, after the hearing, dispossessed on payment of compensation for his improvements. R. brought a petition to be confirmed in the possession of the land. Held by Molesworth, J., and affirmed on appeal, that the Crown was not bound and the petition refused; that the words in Sec. 19, "may if he think fit" gave an arbitrary discretion of refusal to the Governor: that by Sec. 4 the Governor, subject to the Act, has power to grant or convey land; and that Sec. 100 or the regulations of the Governor under Sec. 110 did not authorise the delegation of his (the Governor's) power under Sec. 4 to the Board of Land and Works, so that any step taken by the Board would be paramount to the Governor's power of rejection and disallowance; that it was doubtful whether the Governor had power by regulations to legalize any occupation prior to the issue of a license, and that if such regulations gave to any permission to occupy, the effect of binding the land in case the Governor refused the license, they were inconsistent with the Act. Ryan v. The Queen, 3 A.J.R., 61, 86.

"Land Act 1869"—Selector in Occupation of More Land than Allowed by Act—Notice to Quit under Sec. 93—Penalty.]—A selector who is in possession of more land than is allowed by the "Land Act 1869" under an occupation, is not, even after he has received notice to quit under Sec. 93 of the Act, liable to a penalty for being in unauthorised occupation of Crown lands, he having obtained possession of the land properly, though he might be treated as a trespasser in a civil suit. M'Can v. Quinlan, 4 A.J.R., 117.

24 Vict. No. 117, Sec. 68.]—The words "such other purposes as may appear to the said board to be for the public advantage or convenience," contained in Sec. 68 of No. 117, mean purposes ejusdem generis with those set forth in the same section; and a license for "residence and cultivation" is not ejusdem generis, and is, therefore, not valid. Fenton v. Skinner, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 65.

License for Pastoral Occupation—Proclamation of Common over Part—Rights of Commoners and Licensees—Right of Crown to Sell—Act No. 117,

Authority to Assistant-Surveyor-General to Grant—"Land Act 1869," Sec. 47.]—A regulation that all licenses, &c., "may be signed by the Assistant-Surveyor-General, who alone shall be the licensing agent," is sufficient authority to the Assistant Surveyor-General to grant licenses under Sec. 47 of the "Land Act 1869." Coutts v. Jay, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 10, 15.

Lease under "Land Acts 1862 and 1865"—Covenant by Lessee.]—Held, overruling Molesworth, J., that a covenant by the lessee that he will within one year from the date of the lease cultivate at least one out of ten, or erect a habitable dwelling on the land, or enclose it with a substantial fence, may properly be inserted in a lease of land selected under the conjoint operation of the "Land Acts 1862 and 1865." Kettle v. The Queen, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 141.

(Compare Act No. 360, Sec. 20, Subsec. iii.)

Board of Land and Works—Disallowance is Non-revocable—Act No. 237.]—Under the provisions of the "Amending Land Act 1865," (No. 237,) when the Board of Land and Works has once disallowed an application for a lease by an applicant, who has duly complied with the requirements of the Act, it has no power to revoke such disallowance; but the publication of the disallowance deprives the Board of all power in the matter until a fresh application has been made. Webster v. Johnson, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 67.

"Land Act 1869," Sec. 22—Effect of Fraud on Right to Lease.]—Where a fraud, under the "Land Act 1869" (No. 360,) Sec. 22, is shown, the right of the licensee to a lease may, after the expiry of the license, be revoked. Evans v. The Queen, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 150; 2 A.L.T., 38.

"Land Act 1869," Sec. 20 (v)—Granting Certificate of Compliance—Effect of.]—Per Molesworth, J.—"The Land Act 1869" (No. 360,) makes the granting of the certificate of compliance with the terms of the Act, and not the truth of its contents, the test of the right to the lease; though a licensee had, in fact, performed his duties, he could not get a lease unless he got a certificate, and on the other hand should get his lease if he gets an untrue favourable certificate. A certificate of compliance under the "Land Act 1869" (No. 360,) Sec. 20 (v), though untrue, gives the licensee a right to a lease; and the cancellation by the Board of Land and Works of such certificate, on the ground of its falsity, cannot destroy its effect. Ibid, pp. 150, 157.

"Land Act 1869," Sec. 20 (v)—Meaning of Covenant to Improve under Analogous Section (Sec. 14) of "Land Act 1865."]—Russell v. Parkinson, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 264; N.C. 73; post column 795.

Covenant to Improve is a Personal One, and does not Run with the Land.]—Ettershank v. The Queen; Glass v. The Queen; post column 794.

"Land Act 1869," Sec. 45—What Leases of Crown Lands may be Granted—Easement over Adjoining Lands—Right to Take Water.]—The Governor has no power under Sec. 45 of the "Land Act 1869," which section empowers him to grant leases of Crown lands "for sites for tanneries, or factories, or paper-mills," to grant a lease of Crown lands with an easement over adjoining Crown lands, whether covered or not with water, in the course of a river, or with a right to take water from such river. Brooks v. The Queen, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 100, 109; 5 A.L.T., 199.

By Operation or Law—"Land Act 1865," Sec. 22—"Insolvency Statute 1865," Sec. 25.]—Where the requirements of the "Land Act 1865" have been complied with, the Board must recognise the claim of an official assignee of an insolvent lessee to be registered, who applies more than three years after the granting of a lease under Secs. 13 and 14; such official assignee has a right to be registered as assignee by operation of law. Regina v. Board of Land and Works, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 38.

(Compare Sec. 28 of Act No. 360, in which however assignments are made absolutely void, and not merely void, for want of registration.)

By Operation of Law—"Land Act 1865," Sec. 22.]—M., an uncertificated insolvent, became lessee of an allotment under Part II. of the "Land Act 1865," and S., his official assignee, was registered as proprietor under a judge's order made under Sec. 110 of the "Transfer of Land Statute." S. sold and transferred to plaintiff, who obtained a certificate of title under the "Transfer of Land Statute." The transfer from S. to plaintiff was registered, under Sec. 22 of the "Land Act 1865." The transfer to S., by operation of law, was not registered. Action for ejectment by plaintiff against M. At the trial plaintiff put in his certificate of title, and also the judge's order and lease, with endorsement of registration of transfer under the "Land Act." Defendant moved for a nonsuit on the ground of non-registration of the transfer by operation of law to S. A verdict was entered for plaintiff with leave to defendant to move to enter a nonsuit. Rule nisi for a nonsuit on the ground that there was no evidence of registration of any transfer from defendant to S., and the order under which S. was registered as proprietor was ultra vires. Held that if plaintiff had rested his case merely on the certificate of title he must have succeeded; but that, having chosen to go further, and produced evidence which showed that he had not the legal estate, he must be nonsuited. Rule absolute. Miller v. Moresey, 2 V.R. (L.,) 39.

[Note: The case came before the Court again, and the plaintiff then relied merely on his certificate of title and the defendant went into the evidence prior thereto. Held, per Barry, J., that plaintiff must succeed. S.C., 2 A.J.R., 115.]

Where a lessee permits another person to run stock on the land, that is not an agreement for a lease or a breach of the covenant not to assign, but only a license to agist stock. Russell v. Parkinson, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 264; N.C., 73.

"Land Act 1865," Sec. 22—Assignment of Lease.]—A bargain and sale by the Sheriff of the lease of an execution debtor under the "Land Act 1865" is an assignment by operation of law, which the Board of Land and Works is bound to register under Sec. 22 of the Act. Regina v. Board of Land and Works, 2 V.R. (L.,) 151; 2 A.J.R., 87.

Act No. 360, Sec. 20, Subsec. 5—Lease containing Condition not to Assign—Whether it Applies to Involuntary Assignments.]—S. was a lessee of Crown lands under Sec. 20, subsec. 5, the lease containing a condition not to assign without the sanction of the Governor-in-Council. The sheriff sold S.'s interest under a fi. fa. and the Registrar refused to register the transfer under Sec. 106 of Act No. 301 on the ground of the said condition. Held that the condition only referred to voluntary assignments and not to involuntary assignments as the sale under a fi. fa. Ordered that Registrar register the fi. fa. and sale. In re "Transfer of Land Statute," ex parte Ellison, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 59.

Condition against Assignment—"Land Act 1869," Secs. 20, 110.]—No power is given under Sec. 110 of the "Land Act 1869," to insert in leases under Sec. 20 of the Act a condition against assignment or transfer of such leases. Such a condition, if inserted, is inoperative. In re "Transfer of Land Statute," ex parte Bond, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 458; 2 A.L.T., 94.

Government "Gazette"—Forfeitures under "Land Act" (No. 237,) Sec. 15—"Evidence Statute 1864" (No. 197,) Sec. 26.]—Sec. 26 of Act No. 197 only makes a notification of forfeiture in the Gazette prima facie evidence that all requisites of forms have been complied with; but does not render the notification of an act having been done, any evidence whatever that all the facts and circumstances necessary to authorize the doing that act really existed and have been complied with; and is not therefore evidence of forfeiture under Sec. 15 of No. 237 so as to enable justices without other evidence to make an order to dispossess. McDowall v. Myles, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 16. See also Tomkins v. Fleming, N.C., 13.

Notice of—"Land Act 1869," Sec. 101.]—A notice of forfeiture, under Sec. 101 of the "Land Act 1869" (No. 360,) instead of being, as was the notice under the "Land Act 1865," prima facie evidence of the intention of the Government to enforce forfeiture, is as between the landlord and tenant, conclusive evidence, not only that the formal acts of the Board of Land and Works have been regular and legal, but that the forfeiture has been committed, and that the Board has elected to revoke the lease; and, as regards the public, that the land is again open for selection. And having once given the notice, the Board cannot waive the forfeiture by receipt of rent from the former lessee or otherwise. Thorburn v. Buchanan, 2 V.R. (L.,) 169; 2 A.J.R., 109.

Per Molesworth, J. Sec. 101 of the "Land Act 1869" as to evidence of forfeiture does not apply to a lease which was not issued till after the coming into operation of the Act, but was ante-dated to a period prior to the Act. (Quære, whether it applied to a forfeiture gazetted between the passing and coming into operation of the Act). Per the Full Court, that Sec. 101 does not apply to leases under the "Land Act 1862." Ettershank v. The Queen, 4 A.J.R., 11, 55, 132.

Held, per the Privy Council, that Sec. 101 of the "Land Act 1869" must not be construed so as to make a notice in the Government Gazette evidence not only of forfeiture, but also of the right to make such forfeiture, in cases where the Governor had been previously given no substantive power to declare a forfeiture, nor any corresponding provision made to enable lessees to show cause against the exercise of such power. Quære, whether the section applies to leases issued after the Act came into operation. Attorney-General v. Ettershank, L.R. 6 P.C., 354.

Held also that a Government Gazette notice of forfeiture of land of which a lease has been granted under Act No. 145 to a person who had selected under Sec. 7 of Act 237 is not sufficient to determine the lease in cases where Sec. 101 of Act No. 360 does not apply; nor, as regards a lessee in possession, will it prevent a Court of Equity from relieving against the forfeiture, if the lessee be entitled to relief on other grounds. Ibid.

"Land Act 1869" (No. 360,) Sec. 23—Notice of—Forfeiture in "Gazette"—How Far Evidence.]—An information was laid against B. for being in unauthorised possession of Crown lands held under a license which had been forfeited. The justices ordered that a warrant to dispossess should issue. No license was produced, and it was urged for the appeal that no license having been produced, evidence of its forfeiture in the Gazette was inadmissible. Appeal allowed. Bloomfield v. Macan, 5 A.J.R., 73.

So, too, where the license has expired it must be produced, or its existence and contents proved. Broadbent v. Hornbrook, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 415.

"Land Acts 1862" (No. 145,) Secs. 21, 22, 36, 126; "1865" (No. 237,) Secs. 7, 13, 14; "1869" (No. 360,) Sec. 101—Leases—Forfeiture—Relief—Waiver—"Transfer of Land Statute"—Specific Performance of Obligation to issue Grant-in-Fee.]—Under the joint operation of the "Land Acts" (No. 145 and No. 237,) selectors obtained leases from the Crown, registered under the "Transfer of Land Statute," containing covenants for payment of rent and for effecting the prescribed improvements, with right of re-entry in default. They did not effect the improvements, and let the rent fall in arrear, but rent had been received on behalf of the Crown after the report of an inspector that the improvements had not been effected within the prescribed time. E. and G., the petitioners in two suits for specific performance of the obligation to issue a grant-in-fee, obtained assignments of the leases. In E.'s case the assignment was from an attorney under power of the selector; a declaration of forfeiture had been gazetted before the issue of the lease, before the "Land Act 1869," and before the assignment; but E. had taken the assignment after taking a promise of the Minister of Lands that the lease should issue on payment of arrears of rent, and the lease issued accordingly in the name of the selector, and was antedated. E. registered the assignment, and obtained a certificate of title under the "Transfer of Land Statute." In G.'s case the lease issued to the selector, and was assigned by him to G., who also obtained a certificate of title. The declaration of forfeiture in his case was gazetted between the passing and the date assigned for the coming into operation of "Land Act 1869" (No. 360.) Held, per Molesworth, J., that the Court might relieve from forfeiture for non-payment of rent, but could not do so for the breach of the covenant to improve; that the Crown could forfeit such leases without actual re-entry, and that the election to forfeit could be shown sufficiently by bringing ejectment or by a declaration in the Government Gazette; that leaving the land unimproved after the time prescribed for improving had elapsed did not constitute a continuing breach of covenant; that subsequent receipt of rent by the Crown waived the forfeiture, and that it was not necessary to show that the officer who received the rent was personally aware of the previous forfeiture, provided the forfeiture was known to the Crown's agents in the matter; that the declaration which appeared, subsequently to the forfeiture, in the Government Gazette did not revive that forfeiture, but might be referred to the non-payment of rent, from which, therefore, the Court could relieve; that Sec. 101 of the "Land Act 1869" (No. 360,) as to evidence of forfeiture, did not apply to a lease which was not issued till after the coming into operation of that Act, but was ante-dated to a period prior to the Act (quære, whether it applied to a forfeiture gazetted between the passing and coming into operation of the Act); that the actual issue of the lease completely waived all previous breaches of its conditions; that promises of a Minister do not bind the Crown, and the issue of a grant-in-fee directed to be made to G., on payment of arrears of rent, with interest at 8 per cent. E.'s title from his assignor being doubtful on the ground that he had proved no conveyance from, or dealing with him, and had not proved that he was alive at the time of the conveyance from his attorney under power, his petition was dismissed. Upon appeal, Held that E. was entitled to a grant, as under Sec. 37 of the "Transfer of Land Statute" (No. 301) the memorial of transfer upon the duplicate lease was conclusive evidence that he was entitled thereto; and that the decree in both cases should be for the issue of a grant in fee-simple upon payment of the arrears of rent, with interest at 8 per cent., and the amount of the penalty for not improving. Held also, that the obligation to make improvements within the time prescribed by the Act was a personal one, and did not run with the land; that the forfeiture was incurred by the terms of the lease, and not by the Act No. 145 ("Land Act 1862"), otherwise relief could not have been granted; that Sec. 101 of the "Land Act 1869" (No. 360,) does not apply to leases in the name of the Crown under "Land Act 1862," and that the obligation to issue a grant in fee simple sufficiently arose out of a contract within Sec. 27 of the "Crown Remedies and Liabilities Statute 1865" to warrant a decree for specific performance. On appeal to the Privy Council, Held, affirming the decision of the Supreme Court, that having regard to Sec. 22 of the "Land Act 1862," the forfeiture was capable of being waived, and was waived by the subsequent acceptance of rent and issuing of the lease to E.'s assignor; that although such lease was, under Sec. 11 of the above Act, dated before the forfeiture occurred, it operated to affirm the tenancy, of which it waived the forfeiture, and also affirmed all interests springing therefrom, including the right to a grant in fee. In any case, even had there been no waiver, the lessee in possession was entitled, both under the Act and the terms of the lease, to relief in equity against the forfeiture for non-payment of rent, and to a decree for specific performance, upon proper terms, of the statutory contract. Ettershank v. The Queen, 4 A.J.R., 11, 55, 132; Glass v. The Queen, 4 A.J.R., 17, 57, 133. On appeal to the Privy Council, L.R. 6, P.C. 354, 375.

Held also that the claims arose out of contracts with the Crown within the meaning of Sec. 27 of the "Crown Remedies and Liabilities Statute 1865," since the right to the grant in fee, though a creation of the Land Acts, is conferred upon the holder of a lease, as a statutory right annexed to the lease, and an implied term of the contract. Ibid.

Held also that the non-fulfilment of the obligation to improve so far as it depends on the Land Acts does not avoid the lease, but merely renders the lessee liable to pay a penalty. And so far as the obligations to improve and pay rent and the liability to forfeiture depend on the lease, any breach of these obligations would render the lease voidable only, and not void. Attorney-General v. Ettershank, L.R. 6, P.C. 354, 368.

Acceptance of Rent does not Waive a Forfeiture.] —The acceptance of rent, as under a lease under "The Land Act 1869" (No. 360,) from a licensee applying for his lease will not operate as a waiver of the forfeiture, or bar the Crown from refusing to issue the lease, there being no evidence that the officer receiving the rent had notice of the illegality; and quære, even if notice was proved, whether there was power to condone the forfeiture. Evans v. The Queen, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 150, 158; 2 A.L.T., 38.

What will Prevent—Tender of Rent.]—If an assignee, by purchase at a sheriff's sale, tender the rent of land held under the "Land Acts" before a re-entry is made for default in payment of rent, that is sufficient to prevent forfeiture if such tender by the original lessee would have prevented forfeiture. Kickham v. The Queen, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 1, 250; 3 A.L.T., 86.

Who may Protect Land from—Purchase at Sheriff's Sale.]—An assignee, by purchase at a sheriff's sale of a leasehold estate from the Crown, whose transfer has not been registered, has a sufficient interest to come into a Court of Equity to protect the land from forfeiture, provided that an actual re-entry has not taken place. Ibid.

Improvements—Waiver of Breach of Covenants—Act No. 237, Sec. 14.]—The meaning of the Act is that, if improvements are not made in two years, the lease will be forfeited unless the board waives the forfeiture, which it may do; if the lessee does not make the improvements he cannot assign until he does; and if he never makes them he does not get the Crown grant. The covenant in Sec. 14, paragraph 4, is, do a certain act—i.e., make improvements—within a certain time, and it is impossible to do so after that time. Russell v. Parkinson, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 264; N.C., 73.

Note.—The section of the "Land Act 1869" (No. 360) corresponding to Sec. 14 of the "Land Act 1865" is Sec. 20 (v).

Forfeiture—Validity—Ten Days' Notice—Condition Precedent—"Land Act 1869," Sec. 100.]—The ten days' notice of proceedings before the Minister of Lands to forfeit a license, provided for by Sec. 100 of the "Land Act 1869," is not a condition precedent to the validity of such forfeiture when gazetted, since the Act makes the Gazette notice conclusive evidence of forfeiture. Regina v. Rothery, ex parte Mogg, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 33.

3. Right to Grant in Fee and Conditions Precedent to be Observed.

Penalties—Acts No. 117 and 145—Recovery of Penalties Prevented by Repeal of Former.]—Act No. 117 having been repealed by Act No. 145 ("Land Act 1862,") before the penalties under Secs. 44 and 45 of the former Act could accrue, and the latter Act only saving penalties actually accrued; no penalties can now be recovered under the above sections of the repealed Act. Adair v. Simson, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 13.

"Land Acts 1862" Sec. 126, and "1869" Secs. 2, 98—Petition for Issue of Crown Grant—Penalty.]—Sec. 98 of the "Land Act 1869" provides that whenever a penalty has been incurred under Sec. 126 of the "Land Act 1862," no Crown grant of the allotment in respect of which it has been incurred shall be issued without payment of a penalty of five shillings an acre. Sec. 2 of the "Land Act 1869," repealing the "Land Acts 1862 and 1865," provides that no suit pending before the passing of the Act shall be prejudiced or affected, but shall be proceeded with, heard, and determined as if the said Acts of 1862 and 1865 were still in force. On a suit commenced before, but heard after the passing of the Act of 1869, seeking the issue of Crown grants of allotments as to which penalties had been incurred under Sec. 126 of the Act of 1862, without payment of the penalty imposed by Sec. 98 of the Act of 1869, Held that the petitioners were entitled to such grants without payment of the penalties under Sec. 98; Sec. 2 creating an exception to the retrospective operation of that section in the case of a suit instituted before the passing of the Act. In construing Acts of Parliament the intention to be retrospective can only be effectuated by clear and distinct words, and exceptions from the retrospective operation should be construed liberally for the exception. Nash v. The Queen, 1 V.R. (E.,) 118; 1 A.J.R., 103.

For circumstances in which lessees were held entitled to the issue of a grant in fee, see Ettershank v. The Queen; Glass v. The Queen, ante columns 792, 793, 794.

"Land Acts 1862" (No. 145,) Secs. 23, 36, 126, "1869" (No. 360,) Sec. 98—Assignee of Selector must Pay Forfeiture.]—Sections 126 and 36 of No. 145 apply not merely to selectors under Sec. 23, but to all selectors under that Act, and where a penalty for forfeiture has been incurred it must, under No. 360, Sec. 98, be paid by the assignee of the selector's lease, before issue of a grant in fee simple. Glass v. The Queen, 4 A.J.R., 133.

"Land Acts 1862 (No. 145,) Secs. 36, 126, "1865" (No. 237,) Sec. 7, "1869" (No. 360,) Sec. 98—Habitable Dwelling—Certificate of Board of Land and Works under Sec. 98 of No. 360—Burden of Proof that Penalty has been Incurred.]—Certain certificate-holders took up land under the "Land Acts 1862 and 1865" before Act No. 360 was passed. They improved within a year and relied upon such improvements to satisfy the requirements of Sec. 36 of Act No. 237. The improvements were ordinary slab-huts erected by a squatter, and about three-quarters-of-a-mile of fencing. In one case the hut was a two-roomed hut with a room on each of two allotments, but each room was inhabited separately. The Crown opposed the issue of a grant upon the ground that these were not "habitable dwellings" within the meaning of Sec. 36 of the Act No. 145, and that under Sec. 98 of No. 360, a certificate of the Board of Land and Works expressing satisfaction with the improvements was a necessary condition to the right of the certificate-holders to the issue of a grant. Held, per Molesworth, J., that the huts were "habitable dwellings," and having been erected within the year satisfied Sec. 36; that the two-roomed hut should be considered as two "habitable dwellings;" that the certificate of the Board required by Sec. 98 of No. 360 is only required when the improvements have not been made within the year, but afterwards. Upon appeal by the Crown, Held that the term "habitable dwelling" should be interpreted relatively to the means and social position of the selector, and should not be required to approximate in cost to the cost of fencing or cultivation (alternative requirements of the Act No. 145, Sec. 36); that the burden of proof to show that a penalty has been incurred by the selector is upon the Crown; that the Board of Land and Works is the tribunal to decide whether or not a "habitable dwelling" has been erected; and that its certificate that the requirements of the Land Acts have been satisfied, is necessary under Sec. 98 of the Act No. 360 before a grant can be issued without payment of the penalty of five shillings an acre imposed by the Acts. Decree reversed. Winter v. The Queen, 4 A.J.R., 178—On appeal, 5 A.J.R., 44.

On appeal to the Privy Council the decision of the Supreme Court was reversed and that of Molesworth, J., upheld. L.R. 6 P.C., 378, sub nom. Winter v. Attorney-General of Victoria.

Held, per Privy Council, that Sec. 98 of the "Land Act 1869," applies only to cases where a penalty has been incurred, and that its proper construction is that whenever a penalty has been incurred the Governor may demand it before issuing a grant of the fee, but that he is not obliged to demand such penalty; provided that no grant is to be issued when a penalty has once been incurred, unless the applicant obtain a certificate of the Board that the provisions referred to in the section have at some time previous been fulfilled, or failing that the applicant has paid the penalty. Ibid.

"Land Act 1862" (No. 145,) Sec. 22—Selector Dying—Rights of Representatives—"Intestacy Act" (No. 230)—"Administration Act 1872" (No. 427,) Secs. 6, 7, 9.]—D. obtained a Crown grant of one selection, and got a lease of another selection under No. 145, paid one year's rent, and died intestate in 1863. In 1878, A. obtained administration, and brought a petition of right, seeking a grant of the selection leased. Held that D.'s personal representatives were entitled to the lease, but not to the right of grant in fee, which would be in the heir under Sec. 22; that D. having died before Act No. 230, this right remained in heir until A. obtained administration, and that under Act 427, Sec. 6, this right was vested in A., which under Sec. 9 he would hold in trust for heir, and that duties and fees in Sec. 7 were payable by petitioner. Declared that A. was entitled. Samuel v. The Queen, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 299; 1 A.L.T., 89.

"Land Act 1862," Secs. 22, 23, 24—Right to Grant in Fee of Land Selected and held under Lease—Real Representative.]—The right to a grant in fee of land selected under Secs. 23 and 24 of the "Land Act 1862," and held under lease under Sec. 22 of that Act, passes not to the personal, but to the real representative of the lessee. Robertson v. The Queen, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 111; 5 A.L.T., 211.

4. Illegal Agreements under Land Acts.

Act No. 237, Secs. 14, 15, 22—Sale of Interest by Selector within Three Years.]—B. selected land under Act No. 237, and got a lease and improved the land within three years. B. agreed with M. to sell his interest for a certain sum, and at any time afterwards to transfer his interest. M. entered, paid rent, and effected improvements. The Crown grant was issued to B., who refused to transfer to M., and mortgaged to other people. On bill by B. to enforce the agreement, Held that Sec. 14 made the agreement not absolutely void, but voidable at the option of the Crown; that by Sec. 15 it was absolutely void, as being a contract which but for the prohibition would in equity be a transfer within the three years; that Sec. 22 does not by implication legalise assignments executed within three years, or warrant their registration afterwards, it merely directs there shall be no registry. Bill dismissed. Mars v. Bohan, 3 A.J.R., 60.

"Land Act 1865" (No. 237), Secs. 15, 22—Lease from Board of Land and Works—Deposit as Security for Loan—Re-delivered to Lessee to obtain New Lease under "Land Act 1869" on Condition of Deposit of New Lease—Lessee Frandulently Omitting to Deposit New Lease, and Getting a Crown Grant in Lieu thereof to Himself—Bill to Enforce Equitable Mortgage.]—Defendant obtained under the Act No. 237 a lease from the Board of Land and Works, and deposited this as security for a loan from plaintiff. Plaintiff delivered it up to defendant to enable him to get a new lease in substitution for it under the Act No. 360, defendant promising to deposit the new lease when obtained. The defendant fraudulently omitted to do this, and obtained a Crown grant for himself. The bill sought an account of the debt, payment, in default foreclosure and conveyance, or for an order directing the defendant to execute a legal mortgage. Held, on demurrer, that as the bill did not state the date of the lease, the fact should be taken against the pleader, and that the equitable mortgage was an assignment within the meaning of the Act No. 237, and was illegal as being made within three years of the date of the lease under Sec. 15; that even if not made within three years, it was void under Sec. 22, as there was no allegation of registration or payment of registration fees under that section. Demurrer allowed with costs. M'Nicholl v. Fergusson, 5 A.J.R., 67, 68.

"Land Act 1865," Sec. 15—Selection—Partnership—Illegal Agreement.]—Suit by plaintiff against defendant for adjustment of partnership disputes. In 1864 the partnership began. In March, 1866, defendant selected land under "Land Act," which was afterwards treated as to payments and receipts as partnership property for grazing. In December, 1866, plaintiff similarly selected land, which was similarly treated. A partnership deed was executed 1st June, 1868, by which a partnership between plaintiff and defendant as sheep farmers, was arranged for five years from date. Schedule to deed contained land held in 1864, also land selected by defendant, but not land selected by plaintiff. Plaintiff selected land in May, 1869, which was treated similarly to former selections. The principal dispute was whether land selected by plaintiff was partnership property. There was no agreement in writing as to selected land being partnership property, but partnership funds were applied to rent, improvements, &c., as to selection, and possession was taken as part performance. Held, that though merits of case went to show there was an agreement as to selected lands being partnership property, yet that such an agreement was illegal under Sec. 15 of Act No. 237, and therefore invalid. Porteous v. Oddie, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 148.

The "Land Act 1865," Secs. 13, 14, 15—Lease—Illegal Contract—Specific Performance—Demurrer—Fraud.]—An agreement by a selector and lessee, under Act No. 237, Sec. 12, to transfer a portion of his selection on consideration of the transferee paying part of the rent and making advances for improvements, even if the agreement is to be executed three years after the granting of the lease, is illegal and void, as contrary to the policy of Act No. 237, Secs. 13, 14, and 15. S., in February, 1867, obtained a lease from the Crown, under Act No. 237, of certain land, T. paying certain arrears of rent and making advances for improvements, S. agreeing with T. verbally to transfer part of land to T. when required. T. went into possession of the portion of the land in January, 1869, and fenced it off. In August, 1870, T. sold his portion to M., S. knowing of the sale, and M. entered into possession undisturbed till an ejectment brought by Mrs. S., who claimed by mesne conveyances from her husband, S., who had obtained the Crown grant in November, 1870. M. had spent money on improvements. M. and T. instituted a suit for specific performance of S.'s contract to transfer, and to restrain ejectment. Held, on demurrer, that S.'s agreement was illegal and void under Act No. 237, and specific performance refused. Also, it not being alleged that S. had notice of M.'s improvements, his mere knowledge of sale to S., and allowing him to enter and improve, would not amount to such fraud or acquiescence as would subject him to be compelled to confirm M.'s title, as M.'s improvements were in no way connected with a contract with S. Demurrer allowed. Tozer v. Somerville, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 262.

"Land Act 1869," Sec. 20—Partnership.]—An agreement between a licensee under the "Land Act 1869," Sec. 20, and his brother that the latter should pay half the rent and farm the land in partnership with the licensee, and that, when the licensee should acquire an interest which he could lawfully dispose of under the Act, he would allow his brother to acquire one-half of it on payment of half the rent and fees, is illegal, and there is no ground of distinction between the Acts Nos. 237 and 360 as to the illegality of such bargains. Porteous v. Oddie, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 148, decided under the Act No. 237, followed. Chambers v. Chambers, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 179.

Under "Land Act 1869," Sec. 21—What are.]—Sec. 21 of No. 360, avoiding all agreements for transfer in any way of land under license, is confined in its operation to agreements made during the period of three years from the commencement of the license. But if an agreement of the kind prohibited, made after such period, and as such unobjectionable, can in any way be connected with a similar previous agreement made during the three years, such later agreement is void, and part performance will not validate it. Ibid.

"Land Act 1869"—Sale of Crops.]—The "Land Act" forbids the alienation of any part of the estate in the land itself, but does not prevent a selector from selling a growing crop or from selling the timber. Lorenz v. Heffernan, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 129.

"Land Act 1862," Sec. 11—"Land Act 1865," Secs. 12, 14, 15, 22—Transfer of Land Selected.]—B. supplied A., his servant, with money to pay rent and make improvements upon land selected by A. upon B.'s run. B. denied any agreement to select by A. as agent, but alleged that he had an "expectation" of obtaining a transfer of the land when A.'s title was complete. Held an illegal transaction, as contrary to the provisions of the "Land Act 1865," and to the public policy thereby declared. M'Cahill v. Henty, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 68.

And see cases ante columns 786, 787, as to agreements to select.

"Land Act 1869," Secs. 20, 21.]—In 1874, C., D. and W. selected and took up, under "Land Act 1869" Sec. 20, adjoining allotments of land, obtained licenses for them, and fenced and improved them. W. took up lot 115, C. lots 116 and 117, and D. lot 114. All the license fees were paid by D., who also supplied all moneys for materials, &c. On 1st August, 1877, leases were issued to the three selectors, and it was agreed that accounts between D. and the other two should be adjusted by W. transferring to D. the lease of his allotment, and in consideration therefor C. and W. agreed that W. should have an equal share in C.'s selection, and that they should carry on a farming business thereon in partnership. Held that the agreement between C. and W. was illegal under Sec. 21 of the "Land Act 1869." Wisbey v. Churchman, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 214; 6 A.L.T., 82.

"Amending Land Act 1865" (No. 237,) Sec. 42—Condition against Assignment.]—A condition in a license under the "Amending Land Act 1865" (No. 237), Sec. 42, that the licensee will not assign his interest without the consent of the Board of Land and Works does not make an assignment without such consent illegal, it merely subjects the licensee assigning to a forfeiture of his license. Darcy v. Ryan, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 36; 3 A.L.T., 108.

Licensee under "Land Act 1869," Secs. 19, 20—Dealing with Land before Issue of Lease.]—A person in occupation of Crown lands as a licensee under Secs. 19 and 20 of the "Land Act 1869," who has fulfilled all the conditions of his license, may deal with his allotment at any time after the expiration of the three years of the license, although a lease may not have issued to him. Pyle v. Taylor, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 51; 3 A.L.T., 101.

Agreement made Within Thirty Days of Issue of Lease—"Land Act 1869," Secs. 20, 21.]—Since Sec. 20 of the "Land Act 1869" allows a licensee thirty days after the expiration of the three years of his license to demand and obtain a lease, the fact that an agreement respecting the land bears date within thirty days before the date of the lease, affords no presumption that such agreement was made before the end of the three years, so as to be within the mischief of the last proviso of Sec. 21 of the Act.—Ibid.

"Land Act 1869," Sec. 21—Illegal Gnaranty.]—A guaranty as follows—"In consideration of your refraining from taking immediate action against H., for the amount of his indebtedness to your bank, now about £700, I hereby undertake that, within twelve months of this date, he shall deposit with you as security for his indebtedness to your bank, a Crown lease to himself of 320 acres of land at Warragul, and make arrangements to your satisfaction for the gradual liquidation of the balance of the debt that may then be standing in your books against him. In the event of his failing to hand you the lease as such security, before the 1st September, 1879, I hereby undertake and agree to pay you the amount that may then be due by him to your bank, on demand, with interest"—was held to be within the prohibition of Sec. 21 of the "Land Act 1869" as to contracts relating to an allotment made before or after the issue of a license, and to take effect before, at, or after three years from the commencement of the license, and to be therefore illegal and void. Commercial Bank of Australia v. Carson, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 310; 2 A.L.T., 62.

Act No. 360, Sec. 21—Security—Promissory Note—Transfer of Lease.]—A. and B. were selectors of adjoining allotments under the "Land Act" No. 360, and during the currency of the license A. agreed to transfer or deposit his lease when issued as a security for advances made to B. to enable him to effect improvements, &c., and as security for the deposit of the lease A. gave B. his promissory note. Held, in an action on the note, that the note having been given to secure the performance of a contract which was void under Sec. 21, was void itself as a security under Sec. 21, even although the agreement to deposit the lease was void as not being in writing under the "Statute of Frauds." Howat v. Herrick, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 79; 2 A.L.T., 123. See also Plant v. Johnson, ibid, p. 457; 3 A.L.T., 74.

Act No. 117, Secs. 71, 80, 107, 121—Proclamation of Goldfields Common on Lands held by Pastoral Tenant.]—Under Sec. 71 of the Act No. 117, on the proclamation of a goldfield common over lands held by a pastoral tenant of the Crown, the rights of the tenant could co-exist with those of the commoners, and under Secs. 80, 107, and 121 of the Act, yearly licenses could be issued as theretofore. Regina v. Dallimore, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 153.

Goldfields Common—Town Common—"Land Acts 1862 and 1869."]—A tract of land was proclaimed as a "goldfield common" under the "Land Act 1862," and was subsequently proclaimed as a "town common" under the "Land Act 1869." Held that it had then to all intents and purposes the same character as if originally proclaimed under the later Act. Sanderson v. Fotheringham, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 289, 294.

7. Offences against Land Acts.

"Land Act 1862," Sec. 123—Trespasser.]—The Court reversed a decision of the justices who had convicted T. of trespassing on Crown lands. It appeared that T. had trespassed on lands held by S. under a license from the Crown. Semble, in a case of trespass on Crown lands the informant must be "a person authorised by the Governor-in-Council in that behalf." Taylor v. The Queen, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 301. Followed in Proctor v. The Queen, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 115.

"Land Act 1862," Secs. 26, 31, 125, Schedule 2—Purchase of Land by Trustees—Conspiracy—False Statement.]—Sec. 26 enacts that certain persons—infants and married women—may not select land, either by trustees or directly. Such persons as are not expressly forbidden to select by trustees may select by trustees to the extent of land permitted. Sec. 31 does not give the Sheriff's jury any power of ascertaining whether the applicant is a trustee or not. Schedule 2, by imposing a prohibition not contained in the Act is inconsistent with and repugnant to the enactment, and as it is of inferior force must yield. T. and C. were charged with conspiracy to defeat the Act by selecting land by means of other persons as "trustees" for them, with conspiracy to procure other persons to make false statements and declarations. Held that as the conspiracy was based upon an act supposed to be unlawful, but which was not, in fact, unlawful, the charge could not be sustained, that a false statement in a declaration under Schedule 2 is not a misdemeanour under Sec. 125. Conviction quashed. Regina v. Taylor, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 23.

"Land Act 1869," Sec. 93—Person Summoned for being in Unauthorised Possession of Crown Lands—Miner's Right.]—M. was summoned under Sec. 93 of the "Land Act 1869" for being in unauthorised occupation of Crown lands. M. produced a miner's right allowing him to use the land for a site for a dam for domestic use. Held that the miner's right afforded a defence, and that if M. dammed the water in an unauthorised way he might be subject to an application by others to get the water. M'Lean v. Wearn, 1 A.J.R., 152.

Selector in Occupation of More Land than Allowed by Act—Notice to Quit—Penalty—"Land Act 1869," Sec. 93.]—A selector who is in possession of more than the legitimate quantity of land under the "Land Act 1869" is not, after he has received notice to quit, liable to a penalty under Sec. 93 for being in unauthorised occupation of Crown lands, he having obtained possession properly, though he might be treated as a trespasser in a civil suit. M'Can v. Quinlan, 4 A.J.R., 117.

Unauthorised Occupation—Presumption that Land is Crown Land.]—In a complaint on behalf of the Crown for being in unauthorised occupation of Crown lands, the presumption is, until the defendant proves the contrary, that the land is Crown land, and that the defendant has no title to occupy. M'Grath v. Smith, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 231.

Unauthorised Occupation—Question of Title Ousting Jurisdiction of Justices.]—See Robinson v. Carey, ante column 744.

"Land Act 1869" (No. 360), Sec. 94—Trespass on Crown Lands.]—It is not necessary under Sec. 94 for a bailiff prosecuting for taking timber from Crown lands without a license to show his appointment. Regina v. Mollison, ex parte Reed, 5 A.J.R., 119.

"Land Act 1869," Sec. 94—Removing Substances from Crown Lands.]—Quartz-tailings deposited upon Crown lands from a mine are not substances the removal of which from Crown lands without a license is forbidden by Sec. 94 of the Act. Potter v. Wilkins, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 47.

Act No. 360, Sec. 94—Timber—Fern Tree.]—B. had been convicted under Sec. 94 of cutting timber from Crown lands without a license. The evidence showed that he had cut fern trees. Semble, that fern trees are not timber within the meaning of Sec. 94. Regina v. Rodd, ex parte Bucknall, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 447; 3 A.L.T., 62.

Act No. 360, Sec. 94—Removing Loam from Crown Land.]—K. was employed by contractors who were making a railway for the Crown, and, with their authority, he removed loam from Crown land within half-a-mile of the railway line for the purpose of the construction of the line. Held that he was not liable under Sec. 94 of Act No. 360, although he had not a formal license. Turnbull v. Kelly, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 284.

Act No. 360, Sec. 94—Removing Loam from Crown Lands—Sanction from Shire Council.]—It is not an offence for a person, under a contract with a shire council, to enter into Crown lands and take loam therefrom when he is authorised by the council to procure materials for the road he is making. *Bell v. 8. Other Points.

"Land Act 1862," Secs. 29-32 — Cases which Sheriff may Try by Virtue of.]—The only question which can be tried before a sheriff, under the "Land Act 1862," between two persons, when notice has been given to a land officer objecting to a declaration by him that a person is the lawful selector of an allotment, is the question whether such selector is "the first selector in point of time." Where, therefore, A. and B. had applied for land, under the "Land Act 1862," on the first day open for selection, and the land officer had decided between them by lot, and a third applicant, on a subsequent day, objected to the issue of a grant to him on the grounds that he was not the first selector in point of time; that he did not make a written application for, nor pay the purchase-money for the whole of the allotment; and upon other grounds, the question as to priority being conceded,—Held that the only question which could be tried before the sheriff being conceded he had no jurisdiction. Ex parte Briggs, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 377; S.P., ex parte Taylor, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 19.

Licenses for Pastoral Occupation—"Land Act 1862" (No. 145,) Secs. 83, 86, 91.]—Sec. 91 must be read together with and subject to Sec. 86, and the words "higher and lower" used in Sec. 91 must be restricted by Sec. 86; Sec. 86 being read in connection with Sec. 83 refers to arbitrators. Where therefore awards stated by arbitrators in the form of a case for the opinion of the Court recited the number of sheep depasturing in 1861, and the assessment of the Board, and stated that arbitrators awarded a certain sum as rent, based upon the assessment of 1861, and a lower sum if they had power to award less,—Held that the amount of rent must be the higher one. In re "Land Act 1862," Kelsall & Forlonge, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 140.

In the argument of such a case counsel for the occupants appealing against the Board's assessment have the right to begin. Ibid.

"Land Act 1862" (No. 145,) Sec. 78—"Traveller."]—D., a bullock driver, lived eight miles from Malmsbury borough common. He drove his bullocks and dray from Malmsbury to Spring Hill, distant eight more miles, and in the evening of that day returned to M., i.e., eight miles on his homewards journey. He put his bullocks on the common for the night. Held, that he was a "traveller" within the meaning of Sec. 78. Toe v. Day, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.) 21.

"Land Act 1862 (No. 145,) Sec. 78—"Proclamation of Road."]—A notice signed by a Minister of the Crown, but not by the Governor or any one by the Governor's command and not under seal, purporting to proclaim a road over lands under the "Land Act 1869," Sec. 38, is not a valid proclamation of such road. Mayor of Melbourne v. The Queen, 2 V.R. (E.,) 183, 204, 205; 2 A.J.R., 76, 125.

Forest Reserve—Excision from Pastoral Run—"Land Act 1865," Sec. 41.]—The proclamation under Sec. 418 of the "Land Act 1865," of a part of a pastoral run as a forest reserve unavailable for pastoral purposes, does not per se and without any subsequent notice given or act done by the Board of Land and Works or by the pastoral occupier excise the reserve from the run so as to deprive the occupier of the right of occupation, or the Crown of the right to the full assessed rent. O'Shanassy v. Littlewood, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 304, 312; 6 A.L.T., 145.

LANDLORD AND TENANT.

I. Parties.

By Trustees.]—Trustees who were in possession of land for church purposes, leased it to W., but were not gazetted as trustees till after the date of the lease. In an action for ejectment by W. against a third person in possession, Held that this afforded no defence to such third person. Wood v. Hutchings, 2 A.J.R., 58.

By Trustees Leasing in Excess of their Powers.]—In the above case it was doubtful whether the parties could make a valid lease to W. Held that this was beside the question, and did not affect the rights of W. as to third parties. Ibid.

Married Woman — Husband.] — A married woman cannot demise premises to her husband, otherwise the husband and wife would have to sue the husband for rent. Regina v. Templeton, ex parte Allen, 4 A.J.R., 70.

A woman, who had been previously married, was appointed by her first husband trustee of a house, and on her second marriage she and her husband lived in the house, and upon his not paying the rent, she distrained. Held that the distress was invalid, since she could not demise to her husband. Ibid.

II. Subject Matter of Leases.

Lease of Theatre—Ornaments Attached to Outer Wall of Corridor do not pass under.]—See Aarons v. Lewis, under Trover and Conversion.

III. Agreements for Leases, Specific Performance, Proceedings for Breach of Agreement.

Ejectment—Subsequent Agreement for Tenancy—Evidence.]—A purchaser of premises commenced an action of ejectment against a tenant of the vendor who was overholding, and thus determined the tenancy. Subsequently to the action of ejectment, in which no further steps were taken after service of the writ, the purchaser distrained for rent, and sold the tenant's chattels. Afterwards he again distrained and the tenant brought an action of replevin. Held, that the tenant's submitting to the previous distress without taking proceedings to obtain redress was evidence from which a subsequent agreement between the parties for a new tenancy might be inferred; and the tenant was nonsuited. Bond v. Vaughan, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 172; 2 A.L.T., 6.

Agreements between Landlord and Tenant.]—In agreements between landlord and tenant in Victoria, words should be held to have the same meaning that the same words have in England; and the great difference between the mother-country and Victoria in this respect—that there landlords generally dislike, whereas here they generally like, the removal of timber from land—makes it only the more necessary that the intention of the parties should be plainly stated and carried out by express stipulation, and not left to mere legal intendment from loose and vague provisions. Bruce v. Atkins, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 141, 144.

Tenancy with Option of Renewal for Two Years and of Purchase on Written Notice—Indefinite Notice.]—M., the defendant, entered into an agreement, August, 1871, under seal with L., the plaintiff, to grant to L. a lease of certain land held by her on business license, and of buildings thereon, for a year, with an option on L.'s part to take a renewed lease for two years on same terms, after giving one month's notice of such intention, and with an option on L.'s part to purchase the business license, and the buildings thereon, for a certain sum during the one year or the two years, if lease were renewed, on giving a like notice. L. entered into possession, and served a notice, July, 1872, in the following terms:—"I hereby give yon notice of my intention of remaining in your shop for a further term." In October, 1872, the defendant purchased the fee, and in that month plaintiff tendered a draft lease as for two years for her to execnte, which she refused. In Jannary, 1874, he again tendered a lease, and gave notice of his intention to purchase the inheritance of the premises (the premises comprising other property than freehold). Held, in a suit for specific performance of the agreement, that the vagueness in the first notice, and the partial omission in the second, did not deprive plaintiff of his rights. Specific performance decreed. Lonergan v. M'Arthur, 5 A.J.R., 172.

Lease with Option to Lessee to Purchase at any Time during Term and Agreement to Purchase at End of It.]—Plaintiff leased land in April, 1869, to defendant for three years, with a clause that defendant should and would purchase at the end of or during the continuance of that term. At the expiration of the lease, plaintiff asked defendant to purchase at the price previonsly agreed upon. Defendant refused. Bill to compel specific performance. Held that the contract meant that defendant must purchase at the expiration of the term, and had the option during the currency of the term. Specific performance decreed. Morgan v. Savage, 3 A.J.R., 53.

Option of Purchase.]—Where a lease contained an option of purchase to the lessee during the term, and the lessee gave notice of his intention to exercise the option, but neither tendered the purchase-money nor a transfer of the land to the lessors, bill by the lessee for specific performance of the covenant giving the option, dismissed, with costs. Richardson v. Kearton, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 201.

Where a lessee commits waste, and neglects to pay rent, the Court will not enforce specific performance of a covenant giving him a right of purchase during the term. Ibid.

Option of Purchase.]—A bank took a lease of part of premises with power "to signify to the lessor or leave at his usual or last known place of abode a notice in writing stating its desire to purchase" the whole of the premises. Held that the option of purchase could be exercised by personal verbal notice. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Buckland, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 29; 4 A.L.T., 143.

Of Agreement to Grant a Further Lease—Part Performance.]—P. was tenant of G. of an hotel for three years. Four months before the expiration of the term, P. verbally agreed with G. for a further tenancy; G. being permitted to enter to paint and repair for the preservation of the property. G. entered, and by his workmen continued for one month to repair. G.'s men entered and painted, causing P. inconvenience. G. refused to grant a further lease, and P. brought a suit for specific performance, alleging that he suffered great inconvenience and damage by G. working, to which, as G. knew, he would not have submitted but for the agreement to renew. Held that the inconvenience suffered by P. amounted to a part performance, as this was not compensated by the improvement of the premises during the two or three months of the remaining old tenure, and demurrer by G. overruled. Polleykett v. Georgeson, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 207.

Action for Breach of Agreement to Grant a Lease—Tender of Lease.]—In an action for breach of an agreement to execute a lease, the plaintiff, the intending lessee, is not called upon to prove that he tendered a lease for execution, if the defence, by not traversing such tender, does not put the point in issue. Brown v. Hardy, 5 W.W. & A'B (L.,) 245.

A plea to a declaration for not granting a lease, that the applicant for the lease did not tender a lease for execution, is a complete answer to the declaration. Pinn v. Barbour, 1 V.R. (L.,) 136; 1 A.J.R., 127.

IV. Lease.

A written agreement was drawn up between C. & D. by which it appeared that "D. agreed to rent to C. the rooms, concert hall, 113½ Bourke-street East, of the A. hotel (to be called the Alhambra Assembly Rooms). This rent in consideration of 1s. a week and the payment by C. of the amount of gas to be consumed, &c. (this to be payable weekly); the use of the above rooms will belong to C. from noon till midnight every day for six months from 24th April, 1862, except two nights a week when they can be appropriated to the use of the Oddfellows' Association." D. evicted C. and C. brought trespass and got a verdict. On rule nisi for nonsuit, Held that there was no demise for six months and rule made absolute. De la Chapelle v. Downie, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 99.

In a deed which was a conveyance of land to M. during the life of T., M. covenanted to pay a certain weekly sum into J. the grantor so long as M. should continue to hold the land. The weekly sum being in arrear J. distrained upon the goods of M.'s assignees and was sued for wrongful seizure of the goods by M.'s assignees. Held, that the deed did not amount to a lease and that the covenant was merely to pay a certain amount weekly, and that J. was not entitled to distrain. Verdict for defendant set aside. Drysdale v. Johnston, 3 V.R. (L.,) 153.

M. a lessee gives H. a sub-lease expiring before the end of his own term, and the sub-tenancy continued after the expiration of the sub-lease. The superior landlord sold the fee subject to the lease to one P., and P. required H. to attorn to him after the termination of M.'s lease. Held, that no sub-tenancy could exist between M. and H. after the expiration of M.'s lease, and that the acceptance by P. of rent paid to M. by H. for a period overlapping by nine days M.'s term did not constitute a tenancy in M. so as to enable him to sue for rent. Hefter v. Martin, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 96.

Second Lease Inconsistent with First Lease—Injunction.]—There is no equity for a lessee or a tenant from year to year to restrain his lessor from executing a lease to another tenant inconsistent with the rights of the first lessee or tenant. But semble that the first tenant, if he had an equitable title only, which a second lease would endanger, mght file a bill to have the equitable turned into a legal title, and have an interim injunction to prevent the objectionable act. City of Melbourne Gold Mining Coy. v. The Queen, 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 148, 155, 156.

Void—A lease executed under a power, and containing a covenant in excess of that power, is altogether void, and not the covenant only. Blake v. Lane, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 54.

V. Yearly Tenancies.

Two Years Certain and so on from Year to Year—Notice to Determine.]—By an agreement under seal B. let and L. took a tenement for two years certain and so on from year to year until either party should give the other six months' notice to determine the said agreement. Held that insertion of the word "certain" in the agreement rendered the tenancy one for two years certain, and that no tenancy from year to year could commence if either party gave the notice required, determining at the end of the two years certain. Beaumont v. Love, 1 V.R. (L.,) 227; 1 A.J.R., 167.

Tenancy to Continue until Six Months, Notice in Writing given—But to Continue at least Three Years—Option to Renew.]—G. by lease under seal leased premises to N. until six months' notice in writing should be given, and for at least three years with option of renewal. Held that it was a yearly tenancy to last at least three years; and as notice was not given within the three years it remained a tenancy from year to year except that the six months' notice in writing did not terminate the contract at the end of that period, but only at the end of the year in which it was given. Garbutt v. Naughton, 5 A.J.R., 70.

Per Barry, J. The notice to renew created no legal estate; the tenant would merely have a right of action for breach of the agreement, or a suit for specific performance; until consent by the landlord, no estate was created, and the tenant might be ejected at the end of some year. Ibid.

Original Tenancy for a Year at Weekly Rent—Subsequent Increased Rent.]—A tenancy for the year was created at a weekly rent of thirty shillings. After the expiration of the first year it was allowed to continue, but in the course of a month the rent was raised to forty shillings per week. Held that the landlord receiving rent under the new arrangement, it must be presumed that the yearly tenancy continued notwithstanding the increase of rent and that a proper notice to quit must be given. Bank of Victoria v. McHutchison, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 452.

Lease for "7, 14 or 21 Years at the Option of the Lessee, such Election to be made in Writing before the Expiration of the First Six Years."]—Under such a lease A. occupied for sixteen years but without exercising his election within the first six years and then gave six months notice to quit at the end of the current year. T., the lessor, disregarded this and sued A. for rent after he had given up possession of the land. Held that after the first seven years it was only a tenancy from year to year and that the notice so given was good. Tucker v. Allen, 5 A.J.R., 139.

Effect of Receiving Rent—Tenancy under Void Lease.]—Q. mortgaged land to M. M. granted a lease to Q. for ten years containing a proviso for re-entry on non-payment of rent, which was void as not being under seal. In 1874, Q. conveyed the equity of redemption to M. and shortly afterwards died. The rent being in arrears M. sued Q.'s wife who was in possession in ejectment. Held that the condition for re-entry was not inconsistent with a tenancy from year to year, which tenancy was created by Q. paying rent to M; and that M. was entitled to eject Q.'s wife. Mourant v. Quenault, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 35.

Breach of Covenant and Ejectment — Stay of Action—Second Breach—Position of Parties— Parker v. Eve, post columns 813, 814.

Tenancy from Year to Year.]—A person was let into occupation of land, under a parol agreement, for an indefinite time, and was directed to pay to the Crown a yearly rent due by his immediate landlord the Crown lessee. Held that the payment of such rent for more than a year afforded evidence from which a tenancy from year to year between the parties might be inferred. Pyle v. Taylor, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 51; 3 A.L.T., 101.

Lessor Holding Over after Expiration of Term—Interest how Determined.]—A grant by the head landlord of a lease to a sub-tenant without notice to the mesne landlord, after the expiration of the mesne landlord's term, is a determination of the interest of the mesne landlord as a tenant at will or tenant at sufferance. Martin v. Elsasser, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 481.

VI. Termination of Contracts.

Notice to Quit—Weekly Tenancy.]—A mortgagor had become a weekly tenant of the mortgagee, and a notice to quit was proved, which fixed a day to quit more than a week distant, but not being the day of termination of any week of the tenancy. Held that notice to quit was not necessary in the case of a weekly tenancy. Rule absolute to set aside verdict for defendant (mortgagor), and enter verdict for plaintiff (mortgagee). Calvert v. Turner, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 174.

By Whom Given—"Parties Entitled"—What Length Notice should be.]—See Bowman v. Carnaby, ante column 398.

"On or Before" the Last Day of the Term Granted.]—A tenancy from year to year was granted and the notice to quit required the tenant to quit "on or before 1st February, 1883." The tenancy commenced on 1st February, 1881. Held that the notice was sufficient, the proper construction being that the tenant was to leave at the earliest moment the landlord would be entitled to possession. Story v. Madders, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 150; 5 A.L.T., 31.

See also cases ante under heading YEARLY TENANCIES.

(2) Warrant of Possession under "Landlord and Tenant Statute 1864."

"Landlord and Tenant Statute 1864" (No. 192,) Sec. 90—Two Notices.]—M., a landlord, gave K., his tenant, on the 5th of August, notice to quit the premises, and to deliver possession to his "lawfully authorised agent" on the 22nd of August. B., the authorised agent, duly applied for possession and was refused. On 31st August M. gave K. notice of his intention to apply under Sec. 90 of No. 192 for an order for possession, unless peaceable possession of the premises and "also goods, chattels, &c., contained" was given "to me, M." This was not proceeded with, and was struck out. On 25th September M. gave a similar notice of intention to apply, except that it required possession to be given to M. or B., and it was not preceded by a fresh notice to quit. Held, on appeal from magistrates who had made an order for possession, that there was no need of a second order to quit to support the notice of 25th September, for a second notice to quit would have been an admission of a second tenancy; that the notice of 25th September was not defective by reason of its requiring possession of chattels, &c., or by reason of its requiring possession to be given to M. or B. Appeal dismissed. Kennedy v. Miller, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 255.

Act No. 192, Sec. 90—Notice of Intention to Recover Possession.]—McC. had obtained a lease of a hotel, one of the covenants of which was that if she failed to obtain a license, the lease was to be forfeited. The landlord, in consequence of her failure to obtain a license, obtained under Sec. 91 of the Act a warrant for possession. On rule nisi for a prohibition, Held that the words "or otherwise" in Sec. 90 are not limited so as to be ejusdem generis with "notice to quit," but that they include a determination by forfeiture. Rule discharged. Regina v. Puckle, ex parte McCallum, 3 V.R. (L.,) 23; 3 A.J.R. 30.

Act No. 192, Sec. 90—Notice of Intention to Recover Possession—Breach of Covenant.]—A tenant committed a breach of a covenant in his lease and the landlord served him with a notice under Sec. 90 of the Act, and obtained a warrant under Sec. 91 for ejectment from the justices, without having done anything to determine the tenancy. Held that the mere breach of covenant was not a determination of the tenancy, and that the serving of notice under Sec. 90 was not evidence of an intention to determine the tenancy, and that the tenancy must be determined before the notice could be served. M'Callum v. M'Vean, 3 V.R. (L.,) 157; 3 A.J.R., 68.

Form of Notice—Act No. 192, Secs. 90, 97—Technical Objections.]—Sec. 90 does not require the form given in the Schedule as to notice of intention to apply for a warrant of possession to be strictly followed. The Court is not disposed to look favourably upon technical objections to these proceedings, as Sec. 97 provides a remedy for any irregularity. Regina v. Cleveland, ex parte Edwards, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 147; 1 A.L.T., 9.

Act No. 192, Secs. 90, 93—Notice—Service.]—After the expiration of a term of years the lessee continued to occupy the premises at the same rent as before without any fresh agreement, and paid rent; he did not reside upon the premises but used them as his shop. The landlord served a notice to quit, and then served a notice of intention to apply to justices for a warrant of possession under Sec. 90 upon a young man sworn to be "in the appellant's employment and apparently in charge of the premises." Held that the service of notice was insufficient under Sec. 93, the person served not "apparently residing on the premises" necessarily; and such defect of service was not waived by the lessee's appearance and defence before the justices. Andrews v. Daish, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 188.

When Procedure under Secs. 90 and 91 Applicable—Expiration of Term of Seven Years under Void Lease.]—See Holmes v. North, ante column 401.

Warrant of Possession—Notice to Quit—Weekly Tenancy—"Landlord and Tenant Statute 1864," Sec. 90.]—In the case of a weekly tenancy, though no formal notice to quit is necessary, there must be some demand of possession before service of a notice of intention to apply to justices, under Sec. 90 of the "Landlord and Tenant Statute 1864" for a warrant of possession. Regina v. Sutcliffe, ex parte Brooks, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 150.

"Landlord and Tenant Statute" (No. 192,) Secs. 90, 91, 97—Warrant of Ejectment.]—A notice to quit had been given eighteen months ago and a warrant issued thereon, and a bond entered into under Sec. 97 by the tenant to try the owner's right. Pending the trial the warrant was suspended; but the action having been decided against the tenant the landlord applied on the same original notice to quit for a second warrant. Held that there was no impropriety or illegality in the issue of the second warrant. The warrant need not be issued at a specified time, but must be executed within a specific time after its issue, which time had not expired. In re Smith, ex parte Hunter, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 276.

Mandamus to Compel Issue of Warrant—"Landlord and Tenant Statute," Sec. 91.]—H. summoned N. to show cause why a warrant of ejectment should not be issued against him under Sec. 91 of the "Landlord and Tenant Statute." The justices decided that the warrant should be issued, and N. intimated that he would give sureties, and bring trespass in accordance with the Statute, which required the warrant to be issued within thirty days of its date. No attempt was made to take out the warrant till long after the expiration of the thirty days, and the magistrate then refused to sign it, and a mandamus was sought to compel him. The rule was made absolute, and the Court decided that N. should be allowed his costs of it, if he were successful in the action H. v. N. about to be brought. Regina v. Panton, ex parte Hendy, 4 A.J.R., 150.

Warrant of Possession Issued by Justices without Jurisdiction — Remedy — Prohibition — "Landlord and Tenant Statute 1864," Secs. 96, 97.]—The proper remedy of a tenant where justices have issued a warrant of possession when they had no jurisdiction to do so, is not by prohibition, but by the remedy provided by Secs. 96 and 97 of the "Landlord and Tenant Statute 1864," i.e., to procure a stay of execution of the warrant by giving security to prosecute an action of trespass against the person who obtained the warrant. Ex parte Carey, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 408. See also S.P. Regina v. Carr, 6 W. & W. A'B. (L.,) 245. Regina v. Taylor, ex parte Blackburn, 3 A.L.T., 67. Ex parte Shaw, 4 A.L.T., 5.

Quashing Order for Warrant of Possession—Irregularity in Notice of Intention to Apply.]—Where there is an irregularity in the notice of intention to apply for recovery of possession, and the justices, disregarding the irregularity, make a warrant under Sec. 91, the Court will not under Sec. 4 of Act No. 501 quash such an order, as the tenant has his remedy under the Act No. 192. Regina v. Snowball, ex parte Gawne. 5 V.L.R. (2) 409; 1 A.L.T. 100.

What Amounts to.]—W. leased land from church trustees, and, during the currency of the lease, entered into partnership, and by the partnership deed the land was declared to be partnership property. The firm was dissolved, and the assets devolved on one of the partners, who subsequently sold the land for the rest of the lease to defendant. The trustees received rent from the firm, and from defendant. Held that the mere receipt of rent did not amount to evidence that the trustees no longer recognised W. as lessee, or had forfeited his lease. Wood v. Hutchings, 2 A.J.R. 58.

Forfeiture.]—The true construction to be put upon a condition or proviso regulating forfeiture is, that it is void at the option of the lessor; and accordingly if he exercise the option that it shall continue, the lease, up to that period voidable, is rendered valid. If he elect that it shall be put an end to, the lease must be determined. Thorburn v. Buchanan, 2 V.R. (L.,) 169; 2 A.J.R., 109.

Breach of Covenant—Waiver.]—P., on 2nd November 1857, demised from the date of the day preceding, premises to K. for twenty-one years at a certain rent. The lease contained a covenant that K. would within the first seven years, erect thereon certain buildings. K. failed to perform the covenant, and P. shortly after the expiration of the seven years, brought an action of ejectment against K. and signed judgment. Shortly after judgment was signed, K. entered into a bond to P. which recited the lease, the covenant, the breach, and that the action had been brought and judgment recovered, and that P. at K.'s request had consented to stay proceedings in the action on K.'s undertaking to perform the covenant within a period of seven years, or to pay to P. the sum of £4000 by way of liquidated damages. K. paid rent under this agreement, and so did his assigns. The second covenant was broken, and P. brought another action of ejectment. Held that the first action of ejectment was an absolute election by P. to determine the lease; that the fresh agreement and bond did not revive it, nor did the acceptance of rent, since that was under the new agreement; and that, under the new agreement, K. and his assignees, at law, only held as tenants from year to year subject to the express agreement, though in equity he could have successfully resisted an attempt to evict him during the second period of seven years. Parker v. Eve, 4 A.J.R., 97.

Waiver.]—Receipt by the landlord after a forfeiture of rent due previously to the forfeiture, but payable in advance for a period which terminates after the forfeiture, will not operate as a waiver of the forfeiture. Balls-Headley v. Ambler, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 360.

Per Higinbotham, J. It has been held that receipt of an amount including rent due both before and after the accrual of a forfeiture, would not amount to a waiver. Ibid.

Covenant for Re-entry on Insolvency of Lessee —Transfer.]—Under a covenant or condition for re-entry should the estate of a lessee or his transferees become sequestrated, the insolvency of the lessee, after a transfer by him of the lease, will operate as a forfeiture even as against the transferee.—Ibid.

Waiver—By Receipt of Rent.]—Per Higinbotham, J.—The receipt of rent by a landlord who is acquainted with an existing cause of forfeiture is an unequivocal act on his part, indicating his intention that the lease shall continue in force; and, like an unequivocal act, indicating an intention to avail himself of a forfeiture, is irrevocable; but the receipt of rent is not a waiver of continuing forfeiture. It does not operate beyond the time up to which the rent was accepted. Barwick v. Duchess of Edinburgh Coy., 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 70, 79; 3 A.L.T., 68.

By Operation of Law — Acceptance of New Lease.]—The acceptance by a lessee of a lease which is void, as having been executed in excess of the powers of the lessor's attorney under power, cannot be a surrender by operation of law of a prior lease then subsisting to the same lessee. Blake v. Lane, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 54.

Lease under Seal—Written Agreement to Accept New Tenants and Acceptance of Rent from them—Estoppel in Pais.]—S. granted a lease, under seal, to Sabelberg. S. signed a document by which she acknowledged a third person as tenant, and the receipt of rent from such third person. S. then sued Sabelberg on the covenants in the lease. Held that the document operated as a surrender, and that S. was estopped from holding Sabelberg to his obligations in the lease. Sabelberg v. Scott, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 414; 1 A.L.T., 101.

VII. Renewal of Lease.

Notice of Right to Renewal.]– Per Molesworth, J.—Where tenants who, under a lease with a covenant for renewal on their request, have requested a renewal, their possession as tenants is constructive notice of their equitable rights to renewal to all purchasers, as putting them upon inquiry; and is also constructive notice of the request to renew having been made. Blackwell v. Smyly, 3 W.W. & a'B. (E.,) 1, 7.

Right to Renewal—When Saved—Notice.]—By indenture of lease, F., mortgagee of the demised premises, by W., his attorney, and H., the mortgagor, demised certain premises to tenants for one year; the lease contained a covenant by F. and H. that they would, if so requested by the tenants, one month before the expiration of the demise, renew the lease for a further term. Within the prescribed time, the tenants served a written notice on W., who was still F.'s attorney, requiring a renewal. No renewal was granted, but the tenants continued in possession, expended money upon them, and paid rent as before to H. On bill by the tenants against purchasers from the lessors for specific performance of the covenant for renewal, Held that the request made to W. saved the right of renewal in equity as against both H. and F., and that H. must have been aware that the tenants regarded the right of renewal as recognised, since he continued without fresh bargain to receive the rent after the year had expired; that, as against the purchasers, the tenants' possession was constructive notice both of the right to renewal, and of the request to renew; and specific performance of the covenant decreed. Ibid.

VIII. Obligations with Respect to Preservation of Property and Rights, Powers, and Liability of Tenant with Respect Thereto.

Covenant to Repair—Ordinary Wear and Tear.]—A tenant is not required, under a covenant in a lease requiring him to keep the premises in substantial repair, to repair ordinary wear and tear. Jeffray v. Buckland, 4 A.J.R., 163.

Covenant by Landlord to Repair—Construction.]—A covenant by a landlord to repair implies a condition that he shall have notice that repairs are needed before he becomes liable on the covenant. Kreitmayer v. Kennedy, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 215.

Covenant to Repair—Breach of, What is Not.]—See Polleykett v. Georgeson, ante column 282.

Covenant to Repair—Whether it Runs with Land.]—See Rankin v. Danby, ante column 282.

Badly-Constructed Drain—Liability for Injury Caused by.]—When defendant, the tenant and occupier of premises, allowed water to flow from a badly-constructed drain and accumulate on plaintiff's adjoining property, and plaintiff was nonsuited in the County Court on the ground that the defendant was only a tenant, and it was not proved that he made the drain or used it negligently. Upon appeal, Held that the tenant in occupation was the person primarily responsible for the nuisance caused by the use of the premises, and nonsuit set aside. Braine v. Summers, 3 A.L.T., 57.

Power to Give Permission to Third Person to do Certain Acts upon the Demised Premises.]—A tenant of land may give permission, effectual as against the landlord, during the tenancy, to a third person to construct a wooden drain or flume in a channel already existing and little disturbing the soil; such permission upon an express bargain would not afford evidence of a right in such third person as against the reversioner after the termination of the tenancy. Bonshaw Freehold G.M. Coy. v. Prince of Wales Coy., 5 W.W. & a'B. (E.,) 140, 154.

IX. Covenants Relating to Other Matters.

Assignment or Sub-Letting without Consent.]—The defendant agreed to let to the plaintiff an hotel for five years, "at the present rental of £700 a year—lease to contain all the usual clauses." At the time of the agreement the plaintiff was in possession under an existing lease to another person, containing a covenant for payment of the rent weekly. The plaintiff continued in possession, and subsequently the lessor tendered him a lease whereby the rent was made payable monthly, and which contained a covenant by the lessee not to transfer the license, or to assign, or to underlet, without the consent in writing of the lessor, and with a proviso for re-entry in the event of the lessee becoming insolvent, or assigning for the benefit of his creditors. The plaintiff objected to this, and the lessor insisting upon granting no other lease brought an action of ejectment against the plaintiff. On bill by the plaintiff against the lessor to restrain the action, Held that the agreement referring to the "present rental," plaintiff was only entitled to a lease reserving the rent payable weekly; and that the covenant prohibiting assignment or sub-letting without consent could not be inserted as a usual covenant. Coleman v. Dean, 1 V.R. (E.,) 142; 1 A.J.R., 147.

What are—Question for the Jury.]—It is generally a question for the jury whether a covenant is usual and reasonable. Blake v. Lane, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 54.

Action for Breach of—When Maintainable.]—Where an agreement to grant a lease did not contain any words which amounted to a present demise, and the person entering under the agreement was ejected, and brought an action for a breach of implied covenant for quiet enjoyment, Held that, there being no words of present demise from which the implied covenant could arise, no action would lie. Pinn v. Barbour, 1 V.R. (L.,) 136; 1 A.J.R., 127.

Breach of—Sublease—Damages—Duty of Judge in Directing Jury upon.]—C. was tenant of certain premises and sublet them to L. covenanting for quiet enjoyment and to indemnify him against claims of superior landlord. The breaches laid were distress by superior landlord, L. not at the time owing rent to C. at the first distress. The jury at the County Court returned a verdict for £30 being directed by the Judge that it was a question of damages only. Held that the matter should not have been left to the jury to assess damages indiscriminately; that the Judge should have directed the jury (1) that there was a breach by the first distress; (2) that the second distress (when plaintiff owed C. a few shillings which he paid) and its duration were an independent ground of damages; (3) that the loss to the plaintiff's credit and reputation (plaintiff being a school master) was a subject for damages. Case remitted. Liddle v. Cunningham, 5 A.J.R., 120.

Not to Fell Growing or Living Timber or Timber-like Trees.]—A lease, under the "Transfer of Land Statute," contained a covenant by the lessee not to fell growing or living timber, or timber-like trees, and a condition for re-entry upon breach. Upon a motion by lessor for an injunction to restrain the lessee from felling, &c., any growing or living red-gum trees or other timber or timber-like trees, an interim injunction granted but confined to the cutting down or destroying any growing or living red-gum trees. Munday v. Prowse, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 101.

Against Assigning and Subletting without Consent.]—Restrictions against assigning or subletting without consent are generally inconsistent with ownership, and should not be inferred; and their introduction should not be implied as to the execution of contracts to grant leases. Coleman v. Dean, 1 V.R. (E.,) 142; A.J.R., 147.

Breach—What Amounts to.]—W. in possession of land, under a lease from church-trustees, entered into partnership, and by the deed of partnership the land was obliged to be partnership property. The partnership was dissolved during the currency of the lease, and the assets devolved on another partner, who continued the business with a third person on the land, and subsequently such third person bought all the assets, and afterwards sold to the defendant the land for the remainder of the lease. W. paid no more rent himself after executing the deed of partnership, and when he retired from the partnership he wrote to the incoming partner that he had no more interest in the partnership property, and the trustees accepted rent from the firm and from defendant and his vendee. Held that the partnership agreement was not an assignment of W.'s interest, but merely an agreement between the parties, and that the letter written by W. to the incoming party did not amount to an estoppel. Wood v. Hutchings, 2 A.J.R., 58.

Agreement to Sublease without Authority—Action for Breach of Agreement.]—H., a lessee under a lease which forbade assignment or subletting without landlord's authority, agreed to sublease to J. and tendered a sublease to which J. objected, not on the ground of want of authority but because of onerous covenants. H. sued J. for breach of agreement, without procuring authority to sublease. Held that to maintain the action H. should have before bringing it have been in a position to execute a valid sublease, and should have tendered the sublease accompanied by the requisite assent of his landlord. Haimes v. Johnston, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 398; 1 A.L.T., 99.

Allowing Sub-tenant to hold over without Consent.]—A covenant in a lease forbade the assignment of the lease and also subletting for a period more than three years (less one day) without the landlord's consent. A tenant with the landlord's consent sublet for the period allowed and allowed the sub-tenant to hold over without obtaining a further consent. Held that there was a breach of the covenant. Hume v. Dodgshun, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 83.

Waiver of Breach.]—If the lessor execute a lease, commencing from a date prior to its actual execution, such execution acts as a waiver by the lessor of all breaches of a covenant to sublet of which the lessor has knowledge when he executes such lease, although he so executes it in pursuance of a previous written agreement for such lease specially mentioning the covenant broken. Carson v. Wood, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 223; 6 A.L.T., 92.

To constitute a waiver by a lessor of breaches of a covenant against subletting it is unnecessary that the lessor should have, at the time of the alleged waiver, knowledge of the details or terms of the subleases. It is enough if he be aware of the fact that there are such subleases. Ibid.

To Erect Boundary Fence.]—A. leased land to M. for ten years, the lease containing a covenant by lessor to erect a boundary fence within first five years, or in default that lessee might erect, and deduct costs from half-yearly rent, next accruing. Just before the expiration of the five years, A. verbally agreed with M. that M. should erect fence, and deduct the expenses in the same way as he might have done had he erected the fence after the five years. A. became insolvent, and his trustees in insolvency sued M. for rent so deducted. The County Court Judge held that trustees were bound by verbal agreement, and nonsuited them. Held, on appeal, that lessee was not released from covenants by the verbal arrangement. Nonsuit set aside, and new trial ordered. Wright v. Motherwell, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 111.

Semble, that had there been evidence that A., after he was aware of the mode in which the fence had been erected, accepted it in satisfaction of the rent, the trustees would have been bound by such acceptance. Ibid.

Covenant to Insure—Act No. 192, Sec. 15—Name of Insurer—Relief against Breach—Act No. 213, Sec. 218.]—Gutheil v. Delaney, ante column 722.

X. RENT.

Liability of Landlord in Possession to Account for.]—A lessor in possession of the demised premises under a forfeiture for non-payment of rent is liable to account for the rents and profits with wilful default. M'Ewan v. Clarke, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 85.

Suspension of—Eviction.]—Per Molesworth, J. Eviction by a landlord, in order to operate as a suspension of the rent, must amount to the expulsion or amotion of the tenant. A trespass by the lessor will be no suspension of the rent, and eviction must be an amotion of a permanent character, done by the landlord in order to deprive, and which has the effect of depriving the tenant of the use of the thing demised, or of part of it. Jell v. Bradshaw, 6 A.L.T., 110.

Distraining for.]—See Cases under DISTRESS.

XI. ASSIGNMENT OF LEASES AND LIABILITIES OF ASSIGNEES.

Assignment for Benefit of Creditor's Rent.]—B., the holder of an unexpired term of land under lease from D., assigned his estate for the benefit of his creditors by an instrument under 5 Vict. No. 9, and in the schedule to the deed entered the residue of the term as part of his property, and the rent due was entered as due to D.'s firm, R. D. & Co. Neither D. nor R. D. & Co. executed the deed of assignment, nor did they in any way assent to the assignment. Held, upon appeal from the County Court, that B. was still liable for the rent, there being in fact no assent to the assignment by D. Jackson v. Bignell, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 84.

XII. ACTIONS BETWEEN UNDER "LANDLORD AND TENANT STATUTE."

Secs. 91, 100—Special Damage.]—Mau sued Mack in trespass and in a count, alleging that plaintiff was a tenant of the defendant, and was served by defendant with notice of a warrant of possession, and that the complaint was heard before two justices, but that the warrant of possession was signed by another justice, and that the plaintiff was compelled to enter into a bond under Sec. 97 in order to stay execution. Held that the above-mentioned facts did not allege any special damage sufficient to maintain an action under Sec. 100. Judgment for defendant. Mau v. Mack, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 76.

"Landlord and Tenant Statute" (No. 192,) Secs. 90, 91, 96—Constructive Trespass under Sec. 96.]—The landlord alone, and not the agent, can be guilty of the constructive trespass created by Sec. 96. Where H. sued S. in trespass, alleging in the declaration that S. caused a notice under Sec. 90 to be served on H., and obtained a warrant from the justices directed to a constable, it not appearing in the declaration in what character the notice under Sec. 90, or the warrant under Sec. 91, were respectively given or obtained, Held, on demurrer, that the declaration was bad. Judgment for defendant. Hunter v. Smith, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 32.

Fraudulently Removing Chattels to Prevent Distress — Summons — Service — "Landlord and Tenant Statute 1864," Sec. 66.]—A summons under Sec. 66 of the "Landlord and Tenant Statute 1864," for fraudulently removing chattels to prevent distraint, is not properly served by leaving it at a house to which the chattels have been fraudulently removed if such house is not the place of abode of the tenant at the time of service, though he and his family have been seen there whilst the chattels remained there. Regina v. Ellis, ex parte O'Brien, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 149.

LANDS COMPENSATION AND LANDS CLAUSES CONSOLIDATION STATUTES.

Statutes.]—
"Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845."
"Lands Compensation Statute 1869" (No. 344.)

"Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845"—What Land Applicable to—Owner—Clause 69—Payment into Court.]—Land, the subject of an Equity suit, having been taken by a railway company under the "Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845," and the sum of £914 having been awarded by arbitrators for the purchase of the land and compensation for severance, the plaintiffs gave notice of a motion that this money be paid into Court to the credit of "the suit," and after service of the notice, but before the action could be heard, the company, without the privity of the Master, paid the money into the Savings Bank in the Master's name.

Held that the clauses of the "Lands Clauses Act" are not applicable to lands the subject of a suit in Equity; that neither "the Court" nor "the suit" nor "the parties to the suit" can be deemed "the owner;" and that clause 69 contemplates some assignable person or persons who happen to be under disability, and even then the money can only be paid into Court with the privity of the Master.

Ordered that the money be transferred from the bank into Court at the cost of the company, and that the company pay the costs of the application, and of the arbitration; and also some of the costs of prior litigation. Williamson v. Courtney, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 161.

"Adjoining Land"—"Lands Compensation Statute 1869" (No. 344,) Sec. 35.]—Per Stawell, C.J. and Williams, J., (dissentiente Higinbotham, J.):—Land separated from other land of the same owner by a public road, the property of the Crown, is not "adjoining land" within "Lands Compensation Statute 1869," Sec. 35. Harding v. Board of Land and Works, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 402; 4 A.L.T., 97.

(2) Compensation — When Awarded and how Determined.

"Lands Compensation Statute 1869," Sec. 35—Severance—What is—Compensation.]—A railway was constructed through land situate on the north side of and abutting upon a public highway. This land was held in fee simple, and it was conceded that it was severed. On the north side of and abutting upon the same highway, and exactly opposite to the land on the north side, was a parcel of land held by the plaintiff for a term of years. The homestead from which both parcels of land were worked was on the north side of the line. Held that the leasehold land was severed, that its being leasehold did not affect the question except as to the amount of compensation to be awarded; and that the existence of the highway made no difference since the land comprised in a highway belonged to the owners of land abutting upon it, usque ad medium filum. Smith v. Board of Land and Works, 4 A.J.R., 139.

But as to the doctrine ad medium filum viæ, See Garibaldi Company v. Craven's New Chum Company, ante column 487.

"Lands Compensation Statute 1869," Sec. 35—Compensation—How Determined.]—In estimating the value of land taken under powers conferred by an Act a reasonable percentage may be added to the actual market value of the land, on the ground of the sale being compulsory on the part of the owner. Leslie v. Board of Land and Works, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 21.

Compensation—How Determined—"Lands Compensation Statute 1869," Sec. 35.]—In assessing compensation to be awarded for the taking of land for railway purposes, under Sec. 35 of the "Lands Compensation Statute 1869," though the damage must arise from the construction and not the user of the line. yet, when part of land has been taken, probable injury to adjoining parts, lessening their value, although to arise subsequent to the formation of the line, may form a subject for compensation, and evidence of such risk must, if tendered, be received. The measure of such damages is not, however, the cost of ploughing a strip of land to prevent fire, since that would include risk arising from a negligent use of the railway, which is not to be presumed, or in this mode insured against, since it would be a ground of action whenever it occurred. Harding v. Board of Land and Works, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 389; 2 A.L.T., 80.

Act No. 344, Sec. 35—Cost of Fencing.]—In an action for land taken by the defendants, the jury divided their damages under different heads, and gave one sum for damage occasioned by severance, and another for cost of fencing a tramway line. Held that, although the company might be compelled by the Board of Land and Works to fence the land, even if the company paid plaintiff a fair amount for the cost of fencing, yet the damages were correctly assessed. Anderson v. Western Port Coal Coy., 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 276.

Compensation — How Ascertained — Enhancement of Value.]—In assessing the compensation to be awarded in respect of land affected by the taking of part of it for a railway, the jury must estimate the enhancement of value, as well as the injury to such land. Harding v. Board of Land and Works, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 402; 4 A.L.T., 97.

Compensation—Injury from Subsequent Use of Railway.]—Injury from the subsequent use of a railway is not a ground for compensation in respect of land, part of which has been taken for a railway. Ibid.

Compensation—Direction to Jury—"Adjoining."]—It is incumbent upon the Judge, on an issue for assessing the compensation to be awarded for lands taken for a railway, to assist the jury as to the assessment of the enhancement in value of "adjoining land belonging to the person to whom compensation is to made," by giving them a definition of "adjoining land" sufficient to enable them rightly to determine the matter before them, though there is no special legal meaning of the word "adjoining." Ibid.

Act No. 344, Sec. 35—Enhancement in Value of Adjoining Land—"Compensation."]—In estimating the value of lands compulsorily taken for the purposes of a railway, Sec. 35 provides that all advantages accruing to the owner, either by increase in the value of his adjacent or neighbouring land from the user as well as the construction of the line, shall be taken into consideration, and set off against the "compensation" recovered by the owner. Such "compensation" includes both the value of the land and the amount to be allowed as damages for the compulsory taking and severance. Harding v. Board of Land and Works, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 448, 450; 5 A.L.T., 135, 136.

Notice Claiming—What it Must State.]—A notice under the "Lands Clauses Consolidation Act," claiming compensation for injury to land, should state the nature of the claimant's interest in the land, as well as the amount of compensation; and the description, "his land and premises," is insufficient. Lee v. Melbourne and Suburban Railway Coy., 1 W. & W. (L.,) 34.

Plaintiff's Right—Defendant may Question after Verdict and Judgment.]—The defendant is not precluded by the verdict and judgment, on an inquisition, from questioning, in an action by plaintiff to enforce such judgment, the plaintiff's right to any damages awarded by the judgment, though he may not question the validity of the judgment. Ibid.

General Damages — No Distribution can be Made.]—Where a jury, upon an inquisition, returned a general verdict awarding one sum as compensation for several distinct injuries, occasioned by the formation of a railway, and to an action to enforce payment of the sum awarded the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff had no interest in the subject of one of the injuries, and the plaintiff failed to prove his title, Held that the plaintiff's failure to establish his claim to the subject matter of any one of the injuries necessarily deprived him of his right to recover the general damages, as those damages might have been awarded as compensation for the identical injury to the subject matter of which the plaintiff had failed to prove his title, and no distribution could then be made. Ibid.

Defendant Succeeding on One Issue Succeeding Substantially on All.]—To a declaration for the amount awarded, on an inquisition, for injury to plaintiff's land, by stopping his way and watercourse by the formation of a railway, the defendant pleaded a denial of plaintiff's seisin, and his right to a way or watercourse. A verdict for plaintiff was given on all issues, and an amount awarded as compensation for the several injuries. Defendant, on leave reserved, moved to enter verdict for himself, on the ground that no right of watercourse was proved. Held that, no watercourse being proved, a verdict must be entered for the defendant on that issue; and, since the Court could not apportion the damages, the defendant must substantially succeed. Ibid.

Decree for Sale of Lands—Motion by Railway Company for Liberty to Lay Proposals for Purchase before the Master—Contempt—"Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845," Sec. 85.]—Under a decree in a suit for sale of lands with the approbation of the Master, a motion by a railway company, on notice to all parties in the suit, that the company might be at liberty to lay proposals for purchase before the Master, and that in case the parties should not agree as to the compensation the Master should elect for the parties to the suit whether such compensation should be determined by arbitration or by a jury, and that the company might be at liberty to pay into court the amount of such compensation when ascertained, dismissed with costs as unsustained by authority or principle. A receiver of the Court having been appointed of land, the subject-matter of a suit, a railway company having obtained liberty from the Court, notwithstanding the appointment of the receiver, "to proceed in pursuance of the 'Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845,' incorporated in the company's Act, to take and occupy the land required," and such company having proceeded to enter on the land not "in pursuance" of the requirements of the "Lands Clauses Consolidation Act," Held that a proceeding of this kind is a contempt of Court, and the Court is entitled to enjoin the company from continuing the contempt. A bond given under the "Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845," Sec. 85, by a company to an owner of land entered upon by the company, is insufficient if it do not define the land. Such a bond is also insufficient if made jointly to parties having different rights. Williamson v. Courtney, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 21.

Payment Out of Court—Change of Solicitors—Solicitor's Lien.]—Under an arbitration under the "Lands Clauses Consolidation Statute" certain money was awarded as the value of the land in question, and as compensation for the severance. The railway company then paid the money so awarded into the Savings Bank in the name of the Master-in-Equity, with interest up to date of payment. The company and the owner then joined in a petition for the payment out of this sum and the original deposit by the company. In this petition the company employed different solicitors from those engaged in the valuation and arbitration, and the old solicitors claimed a lien for their costs upon the original deposit. Held that the first proceeding before the Court was the present petition, and the present solicitors were the solicitors before the Court, that there was therefore no need of an order for change of solicitors; that the old solicitors had no lien. Order as prayed. Ex parte Wilmot, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 310.

"Lands Clauses Consolidation Act," Secs. 76, 77, and 78—Disappearance of Owner—Petition for Payment out of Money.]—R., seised of land at Prahran, on 13th July, 1854, borrowed £50 of M., and to secure repayment with interest, deposited his title-deeds with M., and gave him a memorandum acknowledging the debt. He then went to the goldfields, and was never again heard of. The M. and S. Railway Company took the land under their Act, and on the 9th February, 1860, paid the value of the land (£55) into the Savings Bank to the credit of R., or other person or persons interested in the land. M. presented a petition, praying that the £55, with all interest accrued, might be paid to him; and moved accordingly, under the 76th, 77th, and 78th clauses of the "Lands Clauses Consolidation Act," incorporated in the Company's Act, on affidavits of the loan and its terms, and of such inquiries after R., without success, as raised the inference that he was dead or out of the jurisdiction. Held that the Court had no jurisdiction to make the order prayed; and motion refused, with costs. Ex parte Edward Murdoch, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 269.

Taking Land—Compensation—Act No. 344, Sec. 31—Practice.]—A.'s land was taken by a company under their Act, and the plaintiff, being dissatisfied with the compensation, took steps to have an issue tried as to its efficiency. Before the issue came to trial, A. withdrew the record. The Court granted, as under Sec. 31 of the Act, a rule absolute in the first instance for the trial, as in the nature of a trial by proviso. Anderson v. Western Port Coal Company, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 232.

Inquiry under "Lands Compensation Statute 1869"—Power of Court to Direct New Trial.]—The Court has power to direct a new trial on an inquiry to determine the amount of compensation under the "Lands Compensation Statute 1869." Austin v. Shire of Dunmunkle, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 224.

Land taken for Purposes of Railway—Inquiry as to Value—Evidence of Offer by a Third Person.]—Upon an issue under Act No. 344, sec. 31, to determine value of the land, the jury found that the claimant was entitled to a sum less than the amount of the award. One of the witnesses gave evidence that he had offered a certain price for the land to the claimant shortly before and this evidence was rejected. On rule nisi for a new trial, Held that the evidence had been properly rejected being res inter alios acta. Kilpatrick v. Board of Land and Works, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 122.

Inquiry to Determine Compensation—Evidence Admissible—"Lands Compensation Statute 1869," Sec. 36.]—On an inquiry to determine the amount of compensation to be awarded for the taking by a shire council of the bed of a creek and the adjoining strip of land on each side of it through the whole of a squatter's land, an objection to the admission of evidence that the defendant shire's works would reduce the amount of water in the creek was held good, notwithstanding that the shire afterwards gave, without objection, evidence of an offer in the notice to treat of a right of access and use of the water, for the purpose of lessening the compensation to be paid. Austin v. Shire of Dunmunkle, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 224.

Abatement.]—A testator whose lands were not liable to dower gave his residuary personalty to trustees on trust to pay his wife M. £700 after his decease on her executing a deed of renunciation of dower in all his freehold estates whatsoever; to each of his daughters M. and E. on their attaining twenty-one years respectively, or being married; and towards the building of a Roman Catholic Church on four acres previously devised for that purpose, £100. It was Held that as the widow, not being entitled to any dower capable of being released, was not a purchaser as to her legacy, all four legacies were on an equality, and must be abated equally. Coady v. Buckley, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 241.

Condition — Inoperative.]—A testator whose lands were not liable to dower gave his residuary personalty to trustees on trust, among other things, to pay his wife M., twelve months after his decease, £700 on her executing a deed of renunciation of dower in all his freehold estates wheresoever. Held, as to the condition of renunciation of dower on the widow's legacy, that, as she had nothing to renounce, and the condition was rendered inoperative, she should have her legacy without executing a barren release. Ibid.

Executors Paying a Legacy to a Married Woman who has Obtained a Protection Order.]—Executors may effectually discharge themselves by paying a legacy to a married woman who has obtained a protection order, and taking her receipt therefor without her husband's consent, provided the woman has not returned to cohabitation, and his desertion is continuing, and the order has not been varied or discharged. In re Dickason's Trusts, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 238; 4 A.L.T., 22.

Payment into Court—Legacy.]—A bill was filed within a year of the testator's death by an infant legatee, against the executors, for the payment into Court of a legacy bequeathed to him, payable three months after the testator's death. No application was made for payment of the legacy at the end of the twelve months. Held, premature. The executors, however, not having taken any steps after a year from the testator's death to secure the legacy, and by their answer admitting assets, a decree was made for payment into Court of the legacy and interest thereon, and for payment by the executors of plaintiff's costs. Baylee v. Morley, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 33.

In a suit to carry out the trusts of a will a decree had been made ordering the executors to pay the several legacies therein mentioned with interest thereon at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, computed from the expiration of one year from the date of the testator's death. Among the legacies was one to M.M. when she attained the age of twenty-one years. One executor was then ordered to convey the balance of the property to the other who was to be colonial trustee, who was ordered after payment of all debts and after making provision for certain purposes mentioned in the will to maintain the plaintiffs for six months pending their departure for Ireland, and to pay for their passage. The trustee was then to transmit the residue of the estate to the trustees in Ireland. The decree had been carried out by the colonial trustee transmitting £12,000 to Ireland, and retaining £800 himself. On application to vary the decree by obtaining an order that the colonial trustee should transmit the residue in his hands to Ireland, and that the Irish trustee should pay the legacy to M.M., the application was granted as to the transmission of the estate. Kearny v. Lowry, 1 A.J.R., 95, 96.

Annuity payable quarterly means a series of legacies payable at quarterly intervals during life of annuitant, and duty is to be deducted from such quarterly payment. In the Will of Moffat, ante column 390.

Abatement.]—Where in a will the testator directed as follows: "I will my executor to pay to M.G.N. as soon as possible after my decease the sum of £2500 to my brother J.H. after retaining themselves the sum of £50 each whatever balance of cash may remain undisposed of," and the estate was insufficient, Held that the legatees ranked co-equally, and must abate in proportion. Noone v. Lyons, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 235.

Revocation—When Permitted.]—Where one person erects works on his own land with the consent of another, who had the power to interfere, the latter cannot withdraw that consent; but, secus, where one person erects works on the land of another with his knowledge and consent. Where, therefore, A. sued B. for injuries arising from a flow of foul water across his premises, and B. pleaded on equitable grounds that the flow was caused in consequence of a permission impliedly granted by A. to B.'s predecessor, and afterwards to B. to carry drainage across A.'s premises; that A. was aware of and saw the drain constructed by B.'s predecessor, and afterwards repaired and improved by B., had thereby impliedly acquiesced in the construction, and thus given a consent which could not be withdrawn without breach of faith, unless B. was placed in the same position as he occupied before he expended his money; and A. implied that he revoked and countermanded the acquiescence and consent, and forbade the trespass; Held, on demurrer, that where money is expended or work done on the land of another, the person so expending the money, or performing the work, must be satisfied that he possesses authority for his acts; that if the authority prove insufficient there is nothing to prevent the owner of the land taking advantage of it; that B. had insufficient authority; and judgment for plaintiff. *Aitken v. (1) Licenses.

Act No. 566, Sec. 38—House Belonging to Several Owners.]—A license was granted to a house, either erected on land belonging to two separate owners, or formed by connecting two adjoining tenements. One of the owners moved for a rule nisi to set aside an order discharging a writ of certiorari to quash the license so granted. Held that the word "owner" in the Act No. 566 included the plural, and that the justices had power to grant a certificate for a license in respect of premises belonging to several owners. Ex parte Slack, in re Panton, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 28; 2 A.L.T., 119.

Disability of Married Woman to hold Separate Property—"Licensing Act 1876," Sec. 50.]—Held, per Williams and Holroyd, JJ.; dissentiente Higinbotham, J., that Sec. 50 of the "Licensing Act 1876" prohibits a married woman living with her husband from holding a publican's license under that Act, whether she have property to her separate use or not. Regina v. Nicholson, ex parte Minogue, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 255; 6 A.L.T., 102.

Semble, that the holding or obtaining of a publican's license is not one of the purposes mentioned in Sec. 18 of the "Married Woman's Property Act" for which a married woman is to be considered a feme sole, nor is the application for such a license ejusdem generis with the civil proceedings contemplated by the section, so that a married woman with separate estate is not under the section to be viewed as a feme sole on her application for such a license. Ibid.

Operation and Intent of License—Land Appurtenant to Licensed Premises.]—A license for the sale of liquor at a public-house, covers the land appurtenant to such public-house. Cairns v. Peterson, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 143.

Act No. 390, Secs. 13, 20—Transfer of License—No Adjudication by Justices.]—Where no transfer of a license has been effected by an adjudication of the justices, i.e., where the justices refused the application for a transfer, the rights of the licensee remain in him. Regina v. Mollison, ex parte Fitzgerald, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 78.

"Licensing Act (No. 566), Sec. 48.]—A covenant in a lease by which the lessee is bound to buy all his beer and spirits from the landlord, is no reason under the Act for refusing a transfer to such lessee. Regina v. Templeton, ex parte Jones, 3 V.L.R., (L.,) 24.

The Court will not go into a magistrate's reasons for refusing a transfer of a license. Regina v. Akehurst, ex parte Knowles, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 111.

Act No. 566, Secs. 18, 48.]—Semble, per Fellows, J.—A surrender by a licensed publican of his lease to his landlord is not an eviction within Sec. 48 of Act No. 566. Sec. 18 refers to a new license to a new house, and not a renewed license to an old house previously licensed. Ibid.

"Licensing Act 1876," Sec. 48—Splitting License.]—D. held a publican's license in respect of premises, part of which she held as tenant of S., and part as tenant of T. D. was evicted from the part of the premises owned by S., who applied, under Sec. 48 of the "Licensing Act 1876," for a transfer of the license to him. S.'s part of the premises did not contain all requirements for carrying on the business of a publican. Held that S. was not entitled to a transfer of the license to himself, by Stawell, C.J., and Higinbotham, J., on the ground that the section contemplated an eviction from the whole of the licensed premises, or at least from so much of such premises as afforded the accommodation required for a licensed house; by Williams, J., on the ground that the section did not contemplate the case of a transfer of part of a license—that a license cannot be split for the purpose of transfer. In re the "Licensing Act 1876," ex parte Downton, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 198; 4 A.L.T., 35.

Application to Transfer—"Licensing Act 1876," Sec. 48—Evidence.]—As to discretion of magistrate in hearing evidence on applications to transfer. See ex parte Spangenberg, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 123; 4 A.L.T., 3. Post under Jurisdiction and Duty of Licensing Magistrates.

Dilapidation.]—Where justices have forfeited licenses, on the ground that the premises have been suffered to become dilapidated, the Court will not interfere merely as to the degree of evidence on which the justices acted. Regina v. Call, ex parte Hood, 1 A.J.R., 154.

Permitting a Room to be Used as a Concert Saloon—Admission Free—No. 390, Sec. 28.]—Forfeiture of a license is incurred, under Sec. 28 of the "Wines, Beer, and Spirit Sale Statute 1864 Amendment Act" (No. 390), if a room in the public-house is allowed to be used as a concert room, even though admission thereto be free. The words of the section "to which persons shall be admitted by ticket or otherwise" refer only to a place of common resort, and not to "a dancing, concert, or theatrical saloon." Smith v. M'Cormick, 2 V.R. (L.,) 93; 2 A.J.R., 62.

"Wine, Beer, and Spirits Sales Statute 1864 Amendment Act" (No. 390), Sec. 28.]—A license was taken out under the old Act (No. 227.) Sec. 28 of Act No. 390 provided for a forfeiture in case of the licensee using the house as a concert room, and under this section the license was forfeited. Held that Act No. 390 has not a retrospective effect. Rule absolute to quash the order of forfeiture. Regina v. Sturt, ex parte Wright, 3 V.R.(L.,) 1; 3 A.J.R., 22.

Act No. 390, Secs. 9, 10.]—Where an order had been made forfeiting a license by justices, who were not appointed "Licensing Magistrates" under the Act, the Court made absolute a rule to quash the order. Regina v. Webster, ex parte Armstrong, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 187.

What is—Act No. 566, Sec. 111.]—A renewal of a license to a person previously licensed, and in respect of property previously licensed, is not a "new license" within Sec. 111, nor is an annual license issued to a transferee of a license in respect of the same premises; but where a licensed person procures a transfer of his license from one house to another, an annual license afterwards issued to him in respect of the latter house is a new license. The Queen v. Mayor of Melbourne, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 446.

Fees — "Licensing Act 1876," Sec. 111.]—A license granted in respect of a house which had been licensed for some years, but was unlicensed during the immediately preceding year, is a new license within the meaning of Sec. 111 of the "Licensing Act 1876," and the fee in respect of it goes into the consolidated revenue. Shire of Eltham v. The Queen, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 451; 2 A.L.T., 88.

"Licensing Act 1876," Sec. 18.]—Sec. 18 refers to a new license to a new house, and not to a renewed license to an old house previously licensed. Regina v. Akehurst, ex parte Knowles, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 111.

Act No. 566, Sec. 18.]—G. applied for a license of a publichouse which had been licensed prior to the Act No. 566, but the license had in 1878 been transferred to another publichouse. Held, per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers), that this was a new license within Sec. 18, and as it did not contain thirty rooms the justices were right in refusing a license. Ex parte Gotz, 2 A.L.T., 104.

Act No. 566, Secs. 3, 18.]—An hotel was licensed in 1871, the license lapsed, and it was not renewed till 1880. In 1880 the justices granted a certificate of license in respect of it, the grant being opposed on the grounds that under Sec. 18 of the Act no "new publican's license" could be granted until the ratepayers had determined to increase the number of licensed houses within the district; the justices overruled the objection on the ground that there was a licensed house, the "R. Hotel," within the district which was used as a private residence, and that the effect of granting a license to the said hotel would not increase the number of licensed houses. It was afterwards discovered that the "R. Hotel" was not in the district. Held that under Secs. 3 and 18 of the Act this was a new publican's license, and the justices had no power to grant the certificate even if the "R. Hotel" had been within the district. Regina v. Hamilton, ex parte Attorney-General, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 194; 3 A.L.T., 11.

Act No. 566, Sec. 18—Lapse.]—A license for a hotel was in force prior to and after the passing of Act No. 566, and so continued until 1881, when it was allowed to lapse. In 1882 a poll of ratepayers decided there should be no increase of licenses in the district. Held, overruling the justices, that, notwithstanding the lapse, the application for a license in 1882 was not for a "new license" within Sec. 18, and should have been allowed. Osbaldiston v. Licensing Justices of Wangaratta, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 9; 4 A.L.T., 145.

Additional Building Included in Renewed License.]— A publican, by his license, was authorised to sell liquor in his licensed house, and in the appurtenances thereto belonging. He erected a wooden building adjoining the house, and obtained a renewed license. Held that, though erected after the first license, the wooden building used as a bar, if bonâ fide part of the premises, might be considered as included in the subsequent renewed license. Lagogiannis v. Cruikshank, 1 V.R. (L.,) 97; 1 A.J.R., 84.

Act No. 227—License Extending beyond Expiry of Licensee's Lease—Refusal to Grant License to Subsequent Lessee.]—M. leased a hotel to E. for three years, and during the currency of the lease E. assigned, with M.'s consent, to McG. Two months before the lease was up, McG. obtained a license for twelve months. McG. was ejected at the expiration of the lease, and objected to the grant of a license to the new lessee, which the justices upheld, refusing to grant a license on the new lessee's application. The Court granted a rule nisi for a mandamus to hear the application of the new lessee, which was afterwards made absolute by consent, without costs. Regina v. Sturt, ex parte Watson, 5 A.J.R., 24, 36.

Act No. 566, Secs. 38, 47.]—An application was made for the renewal of a license, and the question before the justices was whether the licensed house was really the house of the applicant and in respect of which she sought the renewal. Held that such was a question of fact for the justices to decide, and the Court refused to interfere. If a judge of an inferior Court has erroneously found a fact, which was indeed essential to the validity of his order but which he was competent to try, that circumstance does not constitute a defect of jurisdiction. Regina v. Alley, ex parte Slack, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 302; 5 A.L.T. 93.

Selling Liquor without a License.]—W. was fined for selling liquor on 15th February, 1871, without having a license in the manner and form provided by the "Wines, Beer and Spirits Sale Statute 1864." W. produced a license under the Statute authorising him to sell liquor to the end of 1871, but this license was informal. The Statute of 1864 was, however, repealed by the "Licensing Act 1870," and the Court held the summons bad inasmuch as the summons should have been, not for selling liquor without being licensed under the Act of 1864, but for having no license under the Act of 1870, it being impossible for any one to obtain a license under the Act of 1864 after the 1st of January, 1871. McCulloch v. Wren, 2 A.J.R., 32.

Selling Liquor without a License—No Proof of Authority—"Wines, Beer, and Spirits Sale Statute 1864," (Act No. 227,) Sec. 45.]—Under Sec. 45 of the "Wines, Beer, and Spirits Sale Statute 1864," a person is liable for "suffering" liquor to be sold without a license, though he was absent from his premises at the time the liquor was sold, and there was no proof that he authorised the sale, other than that a bar was fitted up in his house and furnished with liquors. Cornish v. Elliott, 4 A.J.R., 152.

"Wine, Beer, and Spirits Sale Statute" (No. 227), Sec. 45—Without a License—Onus of Proof.]

—It lies upon a person summoned for an offence under Act No. 227 to show that he had a license, or was the agent of a licensed person. H. was convicted in respect of a sale of spirits by his wife (H. holding no license) not in his presence. Held he was not liable, and prohibition granted. Regina v. M'Queen, ex parte Hall, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 18.

Default in Payment of Penalties—Imprisonment—Distress—"Licensing Act 1876," Sec. 54.]—On a conviction, under Sec. 54 of the "Licensing Act 1876," for selling liquor without a license, by which conviction a fine is imposed, imprisonment must not be adjudged to follow forthwith upon default of payment, but only on default of sufficient distress. Regina v. Lintott, ex parte Callinan, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 76.

Selling Liquor Without a License—"Licensing Act 1876," Sec. 54.]—A conviction, under Sec. 54 of the "Licensing Act 1876," for selling liquor without a license, must contain a forfeiture of the liquor, otherwise it is bad. Ex parte Lennon, 4 A.L.T., 88.

"Licensing Act" (No. 566), Secs. 54, 88, 93—Selling Liquor Without a License—Husband and Wife—Agency.]—A wife supplied a person with liquor in a private house, neither her husband nor herself having a license. Held that in the case of an unlicensed house the wife of the occupier was not his agent, especially not so for the purpose of committing an offence and making him liable for it; that Sec. 93 only was enacted to meet the case of secret payment, and did not affect the question of agency. Hettenbach v. Isley, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 104; 2 A.L.T., 123.

Selling Liquor Without a License—Conviction under Act No. 566, Sec. 54—No Venue—Costs in Blank.]—A conviction for selling liquors without a license under Act No. 560, Sec. 54, in which no venue is stated in the margin, the amount of costs are left in blank and no person is named as payee, will not be quashed for those reasons. Ex parte Tribble, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 162; 1 A.L.T., 10.

Where justices had convicted B. of selling liquor without a license, but had not gone on to order a forfeiture of the liquor, &c., as required by Sec. 54 of Act No. 566, and this adjudication was so entered in the book, the Court granted a writ of certiorari to bring it up to be quashed, even where afterwards a regular conviction had been drawn up including the order for forfeiture. Ex parte Black, ibid, p. 183; 1 A.L.T., 13.

Selling Liquor Without a License—Penalty—"Licensing Act 1876," Sec. 54—Power of Justices.]—Regina v. M'Cormick, ex parte M'Monigle, ante column 761.

Selling in Manner not Authorised by License—"Licensing Act 1876," Sec. 54.]—Sec. 54 of the "Licensing Act 1876" does not apply to the case of a licensed person selling at a place, or in a quantity or manner, not authorised by his license; but it does apply to a servant of such person so selling. Ex parte Wylie, ex parte Butler, 4 A.L.T., 41.

W. & B. were convicted under Sec. 54 of the "Licensing Act 1876" for selling liquor not in accordance with the terms of a license. B. was servant of W., and also had the license, and B. had sold the liquor in the manner complained of. Held that B. was rightly convicted, but that the conviction against W. should be quashed. Ibid.

"Licensing Act 1876," Sec. 61—"Customs and Excise Act 1862," Sec. 143.]—A person holding a license under Sec. 143 of the "Customs and Excise Act 1862," and selling liquor contrary to the provisions of his license, may be convicted, under Sec. 61 of the "Licensing Act 1876," for selling liquor otherwise than he was entitled to do under his license. Regina v. Walsh, ex parte Pendreigh, 6 A.L.T., 11.

Selling Liquor without a License—Forfeiture—"Licensing Act 1876," Sec. 90.]—To justify a forfeiture of liquor under Sec. 90 of the "Licensing Act 1876," the order for forfeiture must either follow the precise words of the Act, or state in express terms, or it should appear by necessary intendment that the liquor was on premises for the purpose of being "illegally" sold; it is not enough to state that the defendant, being an unlicensed person, had the liquor in his house for the purpose of sale. Regina v. Drummond, ex parte Grigg, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 146.

"Wines, Beer, and Spirit Sale Statute 1864," Sec. 67—Seizure of Liquor Sold without a License—Adjudication of Forfeiture not a "Conviction" against which an Appeal to General Sessions will Lie under Sec. 14 of Act No. 267.]—See Regina v. Pohlman and Regina v. Sturt, in re White, 5 A.J.R., 22. Post under SESSIONS—Appeal to General Sessions.

Supplying Liquor on a Sunday—"Wines, Beer, and Spirit Sale Statute 1864," Sec. 47—Act No. 390, Sec. 29.]—C. held a license, authorising him to sell wines and spirituous liquors between 6 a.m. and 12 at night, for a certain period. During that period ten travellers were served with liquor by C. at 6.15 p.m. on a Sunday, and C. was fined for serving them. On appeal, Held that the "Wines, Beer, and Spirit Sale Statute 1864," did not except travellers from its provisions in restraint of Sunday trading, and that C. was rightly fined. Cohn v. Sherwood, 1 A.J.R., 132.

Act No. 227, Sec. 47—"Wines, Beer, and Spirit Sale Statute (No. 390,) Sec. 29—"Justices of the Peace Statute" (No. 267,) Sec. 50—Selling Beer on Sunday—Accessory.]—F. was convicted of selling beer on Sunday, and a complaint was laid against C. under Sec. 50 of Act No. 267 for aiding and abetting, and he was convicted, the only evidence against him being that F. had sold to him. Held that C. was only a buyer, and that the doctrine of accessories applies only to an indictable offence, in which there is a principal offender. Prohibition granted as to C.'s conviction, Regina v. Barry, ex parte Connor, 5 A.J.R., 124.

"Wines, Beer, and Spirit Sale Statute 1864," Sec. 46—Act No. 390, Sec. 24—Evidence of License

—Evidsnce of Conviction of "Thieves."]—A. was, under Sec. 46, summoned and fined for "permitting thieves to be on his premises." On rule nisi for prohibition, Held that presumptive evidence of the defendant holding a license is sufficient, and it is for him to prove that he has not a license; that persons (constables) who were present at the trial and conviction could depose to the persons so permitted being "thieves," and that such evidence was sufficient, it not being necessary to produce the convictions or the depositions. Rule refused. Regina v. Call, ex parte Fisher, N.C., 57.

Inspection of Premises (No. 227,) Sec. 60.]—Under Sec. 60 of the "Wines, Beer and Spirit Sale Statute 1864" (No. 227), a constable requiring admittance to inspect a public-house need not produce his authority unless asked for, but must state by whom he was authorised. Raleigh v. M'Culloch, 4 A.J.R., 22.

Delaying Admittance to Inspector of Police—Conviction when Bad—"Licensing Act 1876," Secs. 77, 104.]—A conviction, under sec. 77 of the "Licensing Act 1876" is bad which orders payment of a fine, distress in default of payment, and imprisonment in default of distress, since Sec. 104 of the Act enacts that orders of justices are to be enforced in the manner provided as to procedure in summary jurisdiction by the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," and such conviction is inconsistent with the provisions of that Statute, since it contains in one order, what should, under Secs. 117 and 123, be contained in separate warrants. Regina v. Perry, ex parte Brown, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 114; 6 A.L.T. 11.

Note.—In the A.L.T. this case is reported to have been decided on the ground that the justices had no power to award a definite term of imprisonment.

Act No. 566, Sec. 55—Allowing Drunken Persons on Licensed Premises.]— Where a person not a bonâ fide lodger was found drunk on licensed premises, and it appeared that the landlord knew that he was drunk, Held that the landlord was liable under Sec. 55. Quære, whether Sec. 55 applies to bonâ fide lodgers. Doyle v. Sparling, 3 A.L.T., 63.

Holding Two Licenses—Section of Act Incapable of Meaning—"Wines, Beer, and Spirit Sale Statute 1870," No. 390, Sec. 22.]—W. was convicted under Sec. 22 of the "Wines, Beer, and Spirit Sale Statute 1864 Amendment Act" (No. 390), which enacts that "no person shall hold more than one license, except a temporary or special temporary license, or grocers' license, or license for railway refreshment-rooms, within the precincts of any city, &c., either by himself, servant, or agent, or have any beneficial interest in any such license, under a penalty of £5 per day for every day during which he shall hold such license, or have any beneficial interest therein." Held that the section was unmeaning, and that, in future cases, the conviction should negative the exceptions contained in the Act. Wright v. Kabat, 2 A.J.R., 97.

3. Jurisdiction and Duty of Licensing Magistrates.

Application for Temporary Transfer — Magistrates must Hear—Mandamus.]—An application to a stipendiary licensing magistrate under Sec. 20 of the "Wines, Beer, and Spirit Sale Amendment Act" (No. 390), for a temporary transfer of a publican's license, must be heard and determined by him; and should he refuse to do so, the remedy is a mandatory order under Sec. 138 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865." Regina v. Templeton, ex parte Taylor, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 236.

Proclamation of Licensing District—Act No. 566, Sec. 44.]—A special licensing district was proclaimed and C. obtained a license. The proclamation was revoked, and C. then applied at the annual licensing of the original district out of which the special district had been carved for a renewal of his license. The magistrates refused the license on the ground that they had no jurisdiction under Sec. 44. Held that they had jurisdiction, and mandamus granted. Regina v. Carr, ex parte Cave, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 72.

Special Licensing District—Discretion of Magistrate—"Licensing Act 1876," Sec. 44.]—When part of a district has been proclaimed as a place where the necessity exists for the immediate grant of licenses, under Sec. 44 of the "Licensing Act 1876," a licensing magistrate has no discretion to refuse a license because he considers that no necessity exists for further accommodation in that district. The proclamation excludes such a question being raised. Regina v. Wyatt, ex parte Shelswell, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 137; 4 A.L.T., 5.

Mandamus.]—Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers). Mandamus will issue to magistrates compelling them to sit and hear an application though they have adjourned sine die. Ex parte Gotz, 2 A.L.T., 104.

Act No. 566, Secs. 35, 36, 38—Meetings of Justices—Adjourned Meeting.]—T. applied for a license to a bench of justices, but the police objected that the house was not in proper repair. He then applied for an adjournment under Sec. 38, which was refused, and the license itself was finally refused. Mandamus to justices to hold a meeting and hear the application granted. Regina v. Taylor, ex parte Tognini, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 139; 2 A.L.T., 124; 3 A.L.T., 3.

Jurisdiction of Justices in Inquiring into Fitness of Applicant.]—Justices have jurisdiction to inquire into the fitness of the applicant for a license, and to refuse an application; and if the objection to the fitness is raised in an informal way that does not deprive them of jurisdiction. Regina v. Alley, ex parte Guess, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 19; 4 A.L.T., 150.

Act No. 566, Sec. 48.]—A licensing magistrate cannot sit and act outside the district in which the hotel, in respect of which he is acting, is situated. Where he has jurisdiction over two districts, he must hold his Court in the district in which he is exercising jurisdiction. Regina v. Alley, ex parte Ingram, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 238; 3 A.L.T., 10.

Application for Transfer—Magistrate not Bound to Hear Evidence.]—On an application for the transfer of a publican's license, the magistrate may exercise the discretion entrusted to him upon the knowledge which he possesses of the circumstances, if that knowledge be sufficient, and that without necessarily having heard evidence upon the application. Ex parte Spangenberg, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 123; 4 A.L.T., 3.

Power of Licensing Magistrate to Revoke Transfer—Order to Issue—Magistrate Removed from District.]—The grant by a licensing magistrate, under Sec. 48 of the "Licensing Act 1876," of a certificate for a transfer of license, after the licensee has been legally evicted, is a judicial act, which cannot be revoked by such magistrate without another judicial act of equal validity; e.g., a proper hearing, merely on the request of such transferee; and notwithstanding such request, the transferee is entitled to a rule to compel the issue of the certificate of transfer, though if the magistrate who gave the certificate has been removed from the district in the meantime the rule cannot be made absolute against him. Ex parte Slack, in re Panton, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 144; 4 A.L.T., 6.

Mandatory Order to Licensing Magistrates.]—Where magistrates have ceased to be licensing magistrates the Court will not grant a mandatory order compelling them to do their duty as such licensing magistrates. Ex parte Slack, 5 A.L.T., 26.

4. Practice on Applications for Licenses.

Second Application for License within Six Months—No. 390, Sec. 18.]—A refusal of a license for a public-house is no bar to a second application for a license within six months under Sec. 18 of the "Wines, Beer, and Spirit Sale Amendment Act" (No. 390,) unless both the house and the applicant are the same as upon the previous application. Regina v. Sturt, ex parte Lalor, 4 A.J.R., 20, 72.

Refusal to hear Application for License—Mandamus.]—A refusal by justices to hear an application for a license is not a matter for a rule under the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865" (No. 267,) Sec. 138, but for a mandamus. Ibid.

"Licensing Act 1876," Sec. 38—Objections to Licenses.]—It is no objection to the grant of a license that one of the owners of the house objects to the premises being used as a licensed house. Ex parte Slack, in re Panton, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 28.

Act No. 566, Sec. 38.]—Magistrates refused a license, on the ground that the granting of a license would endanger the peace of the neighbourhood. Held per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers) that the words "any other objection, &c.," in Sec. 38 referred to objections urged against an application for a license as well as for a renewal, and decision upheld. Ex parte Kinane, 2 A.L.T., 107.

"Wines, Beer, and Spirit Sale Statute" (No. 390,) Sec. 12—Petition in Favour of Grant of License.]—Sec. 12 only provides for reception of petition against a grant of license, and makes no provision for a petition in favour of a grant. Justices are not compelled to receive such last-mentioned petition as evidence, the persons who favour the grant must give evidence personally. Regina v. Mollison, ex parte Horsey, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 28.

Note.—Sec. 39 of the "Licensing Act 1876," corresponds to Sec. 12 of Act No. 390.

"Licensing Act 1876," Sec. 39—Objections.]—Semble, that licensing magistrates have no right to take objections themselves under Sec. 39 of the "Licensing Act 1876," to the issue of a license, and an objection that the applicant's wife has been fined for selling spirits without a license, is not an objection under this section. Ex parte Guess, 4 A.L.T. 85.

Refusal of License—Statement of Objections and Grounds of Refusal—"Licensing Act 1876," Sec. 30.]—Magistrates, in refusing an application for a license, need not set forth the objections taken, and grounds of refusal in precise terms. It is enough if they state their grounds, so that it appears that valid objections were taken. They have, moreover, power to take a large view of the objections raised, and to consider objections of their own, upon personal inspection, or arising out of the evidence. If they find that the premises have insufficient accommodation, such ground need not be set forth in the terms of any of the requirements of Sec. 30 of the "Licensing Act 1876," provided the defect is indicated with reasonable certainty. Regina v. Alley, ex parte Slack, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 42; 5 A.L.T., 178.

LIENS AND STATUTABLE MORTGAGES.

I. Liens—Generally.

For Antecedent Advances—Upon Deeds Deposited as Security.]—J., a squatter, being indebted to his agents B. and W., for a previous advance, applied to them to accept his draft for a further account; and wrote to them stating that certain deeds of his would be handed to them as security, and added—"On procuring the deeds of" [other lands] "I will also transfer them to you as a further security for the amount I obtained of you in December last, and the draft above-mentioned." The draft was accepted by B. and W. and paid, and the first-mentioned deeds deposited with them. On bill by B. and W. against the infant heir-at-law of J., to enforce a lien upon these deeds, both for the antecedent advances and the amount of the bill accepted, Held that they were not entitled to a lien for the earlier advances. Brent v. Jones, 1 V.R. (E.,) 76; 1 A.J.R., 2, 51.

Consideration for Lien—Pre-existing Debt.]—A pre-existing debt without further forbearance or advance is not a good consideration for a banker's lien. E. S. & A. C. Bank v. Levinger, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 208; ante column 86.

Mortgage of Sheep—Subsequent Lien on Wool—17 Vict., No. 16, Sec. 5.]—A. mortgaged sheep to C. as sheep, and subsequently, without the consent in writing, as required by 17 Vict., No. 16, Sec. 5, of C., gave D. a lien on their wool. A. became insolvent, and his official assignee claimed the wool. Upon special case, Held that A. could not make his acts inoperative by the omission of a mere formal act, and that the official assignee stood in the same position as A. would if he were not insolvent and had paid off the first mortgage; that the first mortgagee not objecting, the first mortgage not being paid off did not affect the question, and that, though the lien would be invalid as against the first mortgagee, it was valid as against the insolvent, and therefore as against his official assignee. Clough v. Laing, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 20.

Lienee's Powers of Redemption — Subsequent Lien on Wool not in Accordance with Act No. 204.]—G., H., and A., were partners in a squatting investment, the station and sheep being mortgaged to secure the purchase-money. G., as the managing partner, without the consent of the mortgagees, gave to W. a lien over the ensuing clip to secure the advances made by W., but the instrument fixed no rate of interest. Afterwards G. mortgaged his interest in the partnership to the defendant bank to secure his private debt, which mortgage was registered before W.'s lien. The bank then got transfers of the mortgage from the vendors (mortgagees) and entered into possession, sold the wool and claimed to hold the proceeds. W. sued the bank seeking for a transfer of securities on payment of the amount due on the first mortgage and a charge to the amount of his debt, so far as covered by the net proceeds of sale in priority to the bank's second mortgage. Held that G. had power to give a lien and that the lien though bad under Act No. 204 was good in equity, that the sale of wool did not destroy W.'s right to marshal the securities, that W. was entitled to redeem but not to interest except in so far as the proceeds had reduced interest payable on the mortgage. White v. Colonial Bank, 2 V.R. (E.,) 96; 2 A.J.R., 49.

Priority of Lien Over Mortgage.]—W., a sheep farmer, mortgaged his station and stock to K. in February, 1864; and K., acting as W.'s agent, sold the station and stock to the defendant in March, 1866, the defendant agreeing to execute a mortgage to secure the purchase-money. In April the defendant borrowed money from the plaintiffs, and gave them a lien over the ensuing clip of wool. In May the defendant executed the mortgage to K., containing a clause empowering defendant to give a lien over the ensuing clip. On a suit by plaintiffs against defendant to enforce their lien on certain wool (part of the clip), Held that the lien given to plaintiffs, although not a good statutory lien according to the requirements of Act No. 204, took priority over the mortgage deed of May, even without the enabling clause in the deed. London and Australian Agency Coy. v. Duff, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 19.

Lien on Wool—Consent by Owner—Unsatisfied Mortgages.]—A carrier has no right of lien for the conveyance of goods, given to him to be carried, when they are so given without the consent of the true owner. G., in an action of detinue for the recovery of wool from M'C., a carrier, who claimed a lien for carriage, proved two statutable liens under the laws of New South Wales, given by D. & Co., the owners of the wool. It was proved that there were two other unsatisfied mortgages on the sheep from which the wool was shorn, and that no consent to the liens (G.'s lien) was given by the mortgagees. Held that the defendant was entitled to set up the objection that the mortgagees had not so consented; that the case was distinguishable in that respect from Clough v. Laing, 1 W. and W. (L.,) 20; and that G. had not proved his title. Goldsborough v. M'Culloch, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 113.

And see CARRIER, ante column 123.

Lien on Wool—Form of Instrument.]—The same particularity as to witnesses, and the residence of the parties, need not be observed in liens on wool, as in bills of sale. Goldsbrough v. M'Culloch, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 154.

A lien over an "ensuing" clip will, in the absence of evidence as to which clip was intended, cover wool partly clipped at the time of the execution of the lien; and the fact that, after the lien, a number of lambs were dropped, and their wool was commixed with that of the sheep, does not invalidate it. Ibid.

Lien on Wool—Registration.]—Registration is not essential to the validity of a lien on wool. Except where insolvency arises, unregistered liens are perfectly valid between the parties. Stevenson v. Landale, 1 V.R. (L.,) 31; 1 A.J.R., 45.

Under "Instruments and Securities Statute 1864"—What they should Contain.]—A stock mortgage under the Act must, by virtue of Sec. 64, Schedule 5, contain a description of the station whereon the stock, over which the security is given, are. London and Australian Agency Company v. Duff, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 19, 25.

Not Filled in as to Date of Execution, and not Registered within a Month of Execution.]—A lien on wool, which is not filled in as to date of execution, and not registered within a month of execution, is bad, under Act No. 204, but yet it is good in Equity. White v. Colonial Bank, 2 V.R. (E.,) 96; 2 A.J.R., 49. See S.C. ante column 846.

"Instruments and Securities Statute" (No. 204,) Part VIII.]—A bill of sale over certain property consisting of horses, cows, &c., and farming implements is good if registered, as a bill of sale under Sec. 56 of the Statute, and need not as against an execution creditor, be registered as a stock mortgage under Part VIII. of the Statute. Woolcott v. Kelly, 3 A.J.R., 39, 40; 3 V.R. (L.,) 62.

Validity of Stock Mortgage—Stock Mortgage Executed in New South Wales—Registration.]—A stock mortgage was executed in New South Wales between parties resident there, and over sheep at that time in that colony. The sheep were afterwards brought into Victoria. No proof was adduced in an action, in which the validity of the mortgage was disputed, of the law of New South Wales applicable to such document, or that the common law had been altered by legislation in that colony. Held that the Court would presume that the mortgage was valid in New South Wales, and that it was, therefore, as a mortgage at common law valid in Victoria, without registration under the Victorian Act, and without proof of compliance with the New South Wales Act. Donnelly v. Graves, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 247.

Mortgage of Sheep and Cattle and their Increase—Substituted Animals.]—A mortgage was given upon a certain number of branded sheep and cattle on a run, with the issue, increase, and produce thereof. Subsequently certain of the sheep were, with the consent of the mortgagee, sold, and other sheep purchased and substituted for those sold. Held, per the Privy Council, affirming the Supreme Court, that the mortgage was limited to the issue and increase of the specific sheep, and did not include the sheep brought upon the run in substitution for those sold. Webster v. Power, L.R. 2, P.C., 69.

Mortgage of Stock then and thereafter to be on the Run—What it Comprises.]—S. was mortgagee of stock belonging to M., the mortgage containing a clause that stock subsequently placed on run should be subject to the mortgage. H. sold sheep to M. conditionally on payment being made, and possession was given on similar terms. Held that S. was not entitled to seize the sheep placed on the run, he being in no better position than M., who could not claim the sheep until they were paid for. Hyland v. Smith, 3 A.J.R., 109.

Mortgage of Sheep—Right of Mortgagee to Wool.]—Where wool shorn from sheep, mortgaged to a bank, was seized for a debt of the mortgagor, Held that the wool taken from the sheep belonged to the owners of the sheep, and the mortgagees being owners at the time of seizure, the wool belonged to them. Dunn v. Lynch, 1 V.R. (L.,) 4; 1 A.J.R., 24.

"Instruments and Securities Amending Act" (No. 313,) Secs. 8, 10—Failure of Consideration—Reassignment.]—C. bought sheep to be paid for by a promissory note to be endorsed by B. C. gave B. a mortgage over the sheep, which was registered under the Act, to secure the note. B. refused to endorse the note. C. mortgaged the sheep to S. Held that the consideration for the first mortgage having failed, the property revested in C., and the second mortgage to S. came into force, the property revesting in the mortgagor without any reassignment, there not being the same necessity for a reassignment of chattels as there is for a reconveyance in the case of a mortgage of land. Synnot v. Ettershank, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 136.

"Instruments and Securities Amendment Act" (No. 313,) Sec. 5.]—Per Fellows, J.—The words in Sec. 5, "the possession of such mortgaged stock . . . . by the mortgagor . . . shall be, to all intents and purposes in law, the possession of the mortgagee," are restricted by the words, "notwithstanding the subsequent insolvency of the mortgagor" to such subsequent insolvency, and are not to be used in their most general sense. Cave v. Beveridge, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 302, 304.

Lien on Crops—Act No. 618, Sec. 4.]—Of the total amount of a lien, a part consisted of an old debt incurred without any promise of giving a lien, and the residue consisted of a debt incurred on the promise of giving a lien for the whole amount. Held that the lien was good under Sec. 4 of No. 618; but quære whether for the whole amount or only for the further advance. Powell v. Dawson, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 143; 3 A.L.T., 3.

I. Relating to Land.

Plaintiff Relying on Certificate of Title under Act No. 140—Adverse Possession—"Real Property Statute" (No. 213,) Secs. 18, 19.]—In an action for ejectment 1867, the plaintiff put in a certificate of title, dated April 1866, which was subject to "such encumbrances, &c.," underwritten, and the memo. referred to ran thus:—"Any rights subsisting under adverse possession of the land." The defendant put in evidence of adverse possession since 1849, and the plaintiff called as a rebutting case a witness, who proved that she had herself in 1852 occupied the land with others, and that there was no one exclusively in possession. A verdict was entered for plaintiff. On rule nisi for a nonsuit or for leave to enter a verdict for defendant, Held—(1.) That the certificate of title under Act No. 140 was a valid one, and that an owner out of possession who receives a certificate subject to rights subsisting under any adverse possession, receives evidence of a good title until those rights are proved. (2.) That the words "adverse possession" in the certificate refer to Act 27 Vict. No. 213, that adverse possession need not necessarily be under the same person, or under several persons claiming from one another; that the right to bring an action first accrued to some person through whom plaintiff claimed, viz., the grantee from the Crown in May, 1839, and the case fell within Sec. 18 of Act No. 213, and not Sec. 19, and that plaintiff's right was barred. Rule absolute to enter verdict for defendant. Murphy v. Michel, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 13.

"Real Property Statute" (No. 213,) Secs. 17, 18—Adverse Possession—Ejectment by Curator—Onus of Proof.]—The curator in March, 1874, obtained a rule to administer land belonging to an intestate, who died January, 1858. And in March, 1874, he brought ejectment against B., who was in possession. Held that the defendant had to prove that the intestate was "the last person entitled who had been in possession," according to Sec. 17, and that he had to prove the heir's want of possession from the death until the passing of the Act No. 427, and that it was not necessary for the plaintiff to prove possession within the fifteen years. Weigall v. Blyth, 5 A.J.R., 106.

Ejectment—Absence of Plaintiff beyond Seas—"Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 404—"Real Property Statute 1864," Sec. 31.]—Sec. 31 of the "Real Property Statute 1864" is not repealed by implication by Sec. 404 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," and therefore the absence beyond seas of a plaintiff in ejectment at the time his right to bring the action accrued, is a disability which extends the period of limitation. Henley v. Dumphy, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 291.

Evidence of Adverse Possession—Interruption of such Possession—Question for Jury.]—Where in an action of ejectment plaintiff relied upon a certificate of title and defendant upon adverse possession for more than fifteen years, and it was proved that S., a tenant of the plaintiff's, had used the land for fourteen years before action brought, the Court held that S.'s use must be proved to be in assertion of a right and not as a trespass, and the jury having found for the defendant the Court refused to interfere in what was properly a question for the jury. Bicknell v. Heymanson, 3 A.J.R., 22.

Adverse Possession—Onus of Proof.]—It is for the jury to determine the fact and the extent of the possession. Per Fellows, J. It is for the jury to determine whether certain acts were done in the assertion of a right or were mere acts of trespass. The onus of proof lies on the party relying on the "Statute of Limitations," so that in an action for ejectment by a registered proprietor under Act No. 301, the plaintiff need not prove when his title accrued until the necessity of such proof is established on the part of the defendant that the plaintiff has been out of, and the defendant or others in possession for more than fifteen years; acts of ownership on part of the land may be evidence of the possession of the whole. Per Stephen, J. Such acts of ownership are not necessarily evidence of the possession of the whole. Staughton v. Brown, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 150.

Act No. 213, Secs. 18, 19—Evidence of Adverse Possession.]—To bring a case within the operation of Act No. 213 it is sufficient to show that the person claiming a right to the property has not been in possession for the statutory period. Plaintiff in ejectment claimed under the following title:—Crown grant to W., 1854; conveyance W. to M., 1860; conveyance M. to plaintiff, 1862. Plaintiff brought his action in 1879, and defendant claimed that M. was in possession from 1863 until 1867 when he conveyed to defendant, who had been in possession ever since. Held that M. and defendant's possession was continuous from 1863, and that such possession was hostile or adverse to plaintiff's rights. Rule absolute to enter verdict for defendant. Delap v. Mawley, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 170.

Adverse Possession—Admissions after Lapse of Period.]—In an action of ejectment brought in 1882, the right of action accrued in February, 1858. The adverse possession had been continuous for seventeen years, and from the answers in an equity suit and the evidence taken in the action it appeared that A., the person through whom the defendant claimed (defendant's landlord), had admitted that he was receiver of rents, that he was prepared to give it up to the rightful owners, and that he was ready to account for the rents and profits. Held (per Stawell, C.J., and Holroyd, J. (dissentiente Higinbotham, J.) that there was no evidence that A. entered as caretaker for the then heir, and that the admissions made after the fifteen years had expired (dating from February, 1858) were too late, the acknowledgment of title after the adverse title has become paramount not being sufficient to restore the extinguished title, and that all that could be extracted from the admissions was that A. would, until the statutory period had elapsed, have yielded possession to a person who proved himself the rightful owner. Per Higinbotham, J.:—That the onus of proving that plaintiff's title had been barred by A.'s possession as owner lay on the defendant, and that the facts showed that A. asserted no right to the property as owner. McVea v. Pasquan, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 347.

Adverse Possession — Evidence of.] — Plaintiff brought in 1869 an action of ejectment on a certificate of title. The defendant relied upon adverse possession and proved that, in 1841, a person assuming to act as owner gave it to him in satisfaction of a debt, and that defendant had then fenced it in; that defendant exercised no rights of ownership except looking to the fencing till his insolvency (1847); that after the insolvency he occasionally visited it. In 1851 nearly all the fencing had been removed except two or three posts, which were still standing. In 1864 defendant had been rated for the land, and in 1866 he evicted a person in possession and was in possession when plaintiff obtained his certificate. Held that there was not sufficient evidence to maintain the verdict found of adverse possession, and rule absolute for new trial. Chisholm v. Capper, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 225; N.C., 22.

Evidence of Adverse Possession—Fence.]—To prove adverse possession, it must be shown that there has been a continuation of acts apparently of trespass, but with a desire and intention to complete an inchoate title, affording evidence that the plaintiff, claiming under a documentary title, was not in possession. Plaintiff, in ejectment, launched his case on a certificate of title. Defendant proved occupation by a stranger more than twenty years ago, the erection of a fence by the stranger, the continuation of the fence for some time, and the erection of a new fence in the same position; but then a long interval, during which no occupation was proved. Held that such fence was not, in the absence of occupation, evidence of continuous occupation, and that defendant had not proved adverse possession. Grave v. Wharton, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 97.

Inference to be Drawn from a Fence across a Boundary.]—Where a fence was proved to have been in existence within the fifteen years over a portion of the property which marked the boundary between two allotments, Held that it was not to be inferred that it had been continued right across the boundary, and appeal allowed where County Court judge had directed the jury to that effect. Hall v. Warburton, 6 A.L.T., 12.

Against Whom Statutes Run—Owner of Unenclosed Part of Close.]—Where the fence enclosing one part of a close has been allowed to disappear, and the owner of such part has been in continuous occupation of the adjoining enclosed part, and there has been no continuous adverse occupation of the unenclosed part, the "Statute of Limitations" does not run against the occupier of the enclosed part. Small v. Glen, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 154; 1 A.L.T., 197.

What is a Bar to the Statute.]—The acceptance by a wrongdoer of a lease of property in respect of which the lessor had a previously existing cause of action at the time of the lease is not a release of that cause of action, and is no bar to the "Statute of Limitations" if pleaded. M'Carthy v. Cunningham, ante column 394.

Acknowledgment to Bar Statute — Affidavit— "Real Property Statute 1864" (No. 213,) Secs. 22, 30.]—D., having been in possession of Crown lands since 1838, obtained a Crown grant in 1852, paying the purchase-money. In 1856 he executed a conveyance of it to T. D., reciting that the purchase-money was T. D.'s and that the grant was taken by D. as a trustee for T. D. T. D. died in 1868, and D. sought a rule to administer his estate, stating in an affidavit in support of his application that the land was part of T. D.'s estate. In a suit for the administration of T. D.'s estate, D. claimed the land as held by T. D. in trust for him. Held, per Molesworth, J., upon the evidence, that D. was not entitled to the land, and that the affidavit amounted to an acknowledgment by him of T. D.'s title, sufficient to bar his claim under the Statute of Limitations ("Real Property Statute 1864" (No. 213,) Sec. 30). On appeal, Held that the affidavit did not amount to such an acknowledgment. Dryden v. Dryden, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 148.

How Statute Pleaded—No Statement of Possession since Other Party's Title Accrued.]— Declaration: Trespass q.c.fr. Plea: Liberum tenementum. Replication: That, at the time of the trespass complained of, and for a period of fifteen years prior thereto, the plaintiff had been in continuous, actual, exclusive, and uninterrupted occupation and possession of the said land. Held on demurrer, that the replication was bad for not stating that such fifteen years' possession had been since the defendant's title accrued. Nott v. Gunn, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 114.

Bill Demurrable by Reason of the Statute — How Allegation in Bill Construed.]—See Dalton v. Plevins, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 177. Post under PRACTICE AND PLEADING—IN EQUITY—Bill.

"Real Property Statute" (No. 213,) Secs. 18, 47 —Equitable Mortgage—Deposit of Deeds.]—Suit by equitable mortgagee to enforce a mortgage nineteen years old by deposit of title document, the bill putting forward no fact to prevent operation of fifteen years' "Statute of Limitations." Defendants answered denying many of the allegations and relying mainly upon "Statute of Limitations." On a preliminary objection by defendant's counsel, setting up "Statute of Limitations," Held that Secs. 18 and 47 were applicable to a case of this kind. Kemp v. Douglas, 1 V.L.R. (Eq.,) 92.

Interest—When Recovery of Principal Barred.]— Where the recovery of the principal sum in a mortgage deed is barred by the Statute, no interest can be recovered under the covenant to pay although payment of interest has been made within twenty years, the case not being distinguishable from that of a simple contract debt. Weigall v. Gaston, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 98.

[NOTE ED.—This case was decided according to the view of Fellows, J., on the assumption that Sec. 5 of 3 and 4 Will. IV. c. 42 was not in force in Victoria, but it is enacted by Sec. 425 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute," see note in report of the above case at page 101.]

"Common Law Procedure Statute" (No. 274,) Sec. 407—No Mortgage Pleaded.]—Where a declaration does not state any mortgage but only a covenant to pay money with interest, the period of limitations is that fixed by Sec. 407 of the Act No. 274, viz., twenty years. Weigall v. Gaston, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 294.

II. EQUITABLE MATTERS.

The "Statute of Limitations" does not apply to an express trust. Hunter v. Rutledge, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 331; N.C. 61, 74.

Operation of.]—Until the discovery of fraud, i.e., the time at which fraud ought to have been discovered, the "Statutes of Limitations" do not operate in Equity. Clark v. Clark, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 303, 327.

Fraud—From what Period the Statute Runs.]— Where a plaintiff may proceed in Equity or at Law, the Court of Equity will not adopt a period of limitation different from that at Law. But in Equity, in the case of fraud, the Statute runs, not from the actual discovery of the fraud, but from the time when, with due diligence, it might have been discovered. The plaintiff and M. were partners in squatting property. By indenture, 1860, partnership was dissolved, M. assigning all his interest to plaintiff, and being indemnified against liabilities. M. managed the business, and represented it as having been carried on at a loss. At the time of the dissolution, P. & Co., a firm of brokers, acted as factors for the plaintiff and M., and the bill (1880) sought relief, as against M., with regard to certain sums held by the firm on account of the partnership at the date of dissolution, and which had been received by M. On demurrer by M., Held that as bill contained no general allegation that plaintiff could not have discovered fraud at a time to save the Statute, the Statute must run from the time when plaintiff might have discovered it with due diligence. Demurrer allowed. Urquhart v. M'Pherson, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 17, 22, 23; 1 A.L.T., 126.

III. SIMPLE CONTRACTS—DEBTS.

Acknowledgment of Debt.]—In an action to recover rent, defendant pleaded the Statute. There was put in evidence a letter, undated as to the year, stating that defendant had recovered some of his back salary, and would place £10 to plaintiff's credit, and concluding, "if they pay me as I expect they will, I hope to clear off your account without having to pay 2s. in the £ at all events." Held that the letter contained a sufficient acknowledgment of the debt, even if made after debt was barred; and the "hope" expressed did not amount to a condition not to pay unless defendant received money so as to qualify the acknowledgment; that an acknowledgment of debt before the debt is barred is more liberally construed in plaintiff's favour than one made after the debt is barred. Barrett v. Scott, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 222.

Bill of Exchange—Defendant beyond the Seas—Tasmania—4 and 5 Anne, c. 16, Sec. 19—"Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 405.]—Sec. 405 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865" does not touch the question of the absence of a defendant beyond the seas in actions on bills of exchange, but the enactment 4 and 5 Anne, c. 16, Sec. 19, touching these cases, is in force in Victoria, and Tasmania is "beyond the seas" within the meaning of that section. Therefore, in an action on a bill of exchange, if the defendant be absent in Tasmania when the cause of action arose, the statutory period of limitation does not begin to run till he comes into Victoria. Griffith v. Block, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 294.

Imperial Statutes—Construction—Beyond the Seas.]—The words "beyond the seas" in the various Imperial Statutes of Limitations are to be read as "out of the territory." Ibid.

Declaration on Promissory Note—"Common Law Procedure Statute" (No. 274,) Sec. 404—"Amending Act" (No. 290,) Sec. 2.]—Sec. 404 only applies to the absence of plaintiffs, and not of defendants, and by Sec. 2 of Act No. 290, time only runs against defendant from their return from beyond the seas. Levey v. Myers, 3 A.J.R., 40.

Declaration on Dishonoured Cheque—Plea of Non-receipt of Moneys within Six Years Before Presentment or Action.] O'Ferrall v. Bank of Australasia, ante column 83.

Cannot Recover for Horse and Carriage Hired on Sunday—29 Car. II., c. 7, Sec. 1.]— A livery stable keeper cannot recover for damages done to a horse and carriage let out on hire by him on a Sunday since his trade is within the Act 29 Car. II., c. 7, Sec. 1. Garton v. Coy, 4 A.J.R., 100.

I. ELECTION OF MEMBERS AND APPOINTMENT OF OFFICERS OF ROAD BOARDS AND LOCAL BODIES.

Road Board—Qualifications for Membership of—"Local Government Act" (No. 176,) Sec. 33.]—Sec. 33 of Act No. 176 does not require a person, in order to possess the qualification for membership, to go through all the steps of first getting on the rate book and then on the voters' list and then on the voters' roll. It is sufficient if he have the "property" qualification, and was rated in the rate-book, so being entitled to be put upon the voters' roll, although not actually placed there. In re Cope, ex parte Egan, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 75.

Person Not Having Paid Rates Not Entitled to be on Ratepayers' Roll, and so Unable to Act as Councillor—Rates Tendered but Not Accepted—"Shires Statute 1869," Secs. 57, 68, 220—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 73 —Mandamus to Rate Collector to Receive Rate Refused. —*See Regina v. Road Board—Rule to Oust Member—Burden of Proof of Disqualification—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 71.]—The burden of proof that a person elected is disqualified from being a member of a road board lies on the relator, and he must establish a primâ facie case of want of qualification before the member can be called upon to prove affirmatively that he does possess such qualification, and quære, whether the relator would be allowed to impeach the statement of the member that he possessed the requisite qualification. Regina v. Mussen, ex parte Barrett, 4 A.J.R., 149.

"Shires Statute 1869" (No. 358,) Sec. 45—Ousting Shire Councillor from Office—Contract with Council.]—Order nisi to oust L. from office as councillor of the shire of R., on the ground that L., while acting as councillor, was concerned and participated in, in his own right and interest, the profit arising out of the supply and cartage of a quantity of sawn timber, used for the construction of culverts within the boundaries of the shire, constructed by order and under the directions of the shire council. It appeared that after L. was elected, at the request of the surveyor of the shire, he supplied certain timber, apparently without any profit to himself, and solely for the convenience of the council. The timber was supplied on certain conditions—one being that the amount was to be ascertained afterwards, and the timber was to be deposited on spots where required. Held that the Court would not exercise a discretion in the matter, and ascertain whether there was a profit on the contract or not, and order made absolute, but without costs. Regina v. Lovell, ex parte Gwyther, 2 A.J.R., 55.

And as to removal and disqualification of councillors generally—See cases collected, ante columns 225-228.

Road Board—Appointment of Officers—Act No. 176, Secs. 126, 132, 134, 135, 151.]—E. claimed to be clerk of a road board. He was appointed in 1863, at a meeting of the board to elect a chairman. In April, 1868, he was appointed for the remainder of the year, was dismissed in October, 1868, and in December, 1868, at an ordinary meeting, B. was appointed his successor. Rule nisi for an information in the nature of a quo warranto for B.'s removal. Held that the office of clerk was not that of an inferior officer under Sec. 134, and that therefore an ordinary meeting could not appoint or remove a clerk; that B.'s appointment was irregular as being made at an ordinary meeting; that B.'s appointment in 1863 was proper, and until duly cancelled, remained. Rule absolute. Regina v. Bonfield, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 174, N.C. 4.

II. RIGHTS, POWERS, DUTIES, AND LIABILITIES OF ROAD BOARDS AND LOCAL BODIES.

Road Board—Powers — Permanent Works — Act No. 176, Secs. 268, 269.]—The removal of a wooden bridge and the erection of a stone one is a permanent work within Sec. 268 of No. 176, and before it is entered on a road board should comply with the provisions of Sec. 269, and the following clauses as to preparing plans, giving notice, &c. Attorney-General v. Epping Road Board, N.C., 23.

Power of Municipal Council to Contract so as to Bind their Successors—Agreement for Continuous User—"Local Government Act 1874," Secs. 165, 169—"Transfer of Land Statute" (No. 301,) Sec. 42.]—See Mayor of Brunswick v. Dawson, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 2. Post under VENDOR AND PURCHASER—ENFORCEMENT, DISCHARGE, AND RESCISSION—Specific Performance.

And as to powers, &c., of councils as to contracts see ante columns 229-231 under CORPORATION.

Road Board—Powers of Auditors—27 Vict. No. 176, Secs. 149, 160.]—Although auditors of a road board in disallowing items of expenditure, act as judges in cases where they are interested, yet they have the power of disallowance under Sec. 160 of the Act No. 176. But they may not inquire into the merits of contracts or the mode in which works have been executed, or enter into a consideration of the economy observed, or the necessity for each particular work. They may disallow any item of which they think there is just cause to disapprove; and expending moneys in violation of the Act, or without due authority under the Act, or the non-production of vouchers for moneys expended would afford such just cause for disapproval, e.g., items disallowed in consequence of non-advertising for tenders which is compulsory under Act No. 176, Sec. 149. Heidelberg Road Board v. Young, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 69.

And see cases collected, ante columns 72, 73, under AUDIT.

Adjusting Boundaries of Shires and Road Districts—Powers of Governor—No. 176, Sec. 284.]—The powers given to the Governor by Sec. 284 of the "Local Government Act" (No. 176,) to adjust the boundaries of a shire or road district to those of an electoral district, are merely so to adjust them, and a proclamation which only partially makes such an adjustment is in excess of the Governor's powers, which are to be construed strictly, and will not be effectual to transfer territory from one municipal body to another. Shire of Buninyong v. Berry; Brown v. O'Malley, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 175.

Power to Take Material for Road Making—Trespass—"Local Government Act" (No. 176,) Secs. 233, 235.]—Two boroughs, Ballarat and Ballarat East, jointly constructed on lands outside of their corporate limits, but temporarily reserved for that purpose, large waterworks to supply the boroughs with water. The Bungaree Road Board alleged a right under Act No. 176, Sec. 235, to authorise a contractor for stone for their roads to enter and quarry on this land. On a suit by the boroughs against the road board, the contractor, and the Attorney-General, to restrain the exercise of this alleged right, Held, and affirmed on appeal, that the possession of the plaintiffs entitled them to proceed against the defendants as wrongdoers, and although the plaintiffs did not show compliance with Act No. 184, Sec. 318, authorising them to hold land outside their corporate limits, yet their possession by common agents was established and enabled them to sue jointly. Held, per Molesworth, J., that under Sec. 235 the road board was authorised as against "occupiers" of Crown lands to enter and take materials for road making, and bill dismissed; per Full Court, that the words "any land" in Sec. 235 do not include Crown land, and injunction granted. Mayor of Ballarat and Ballarat East v. Bungaree Road Board, 1 V.R. (E.,) 57, 67, 71, 72, 73; 1 A.J.R., 33.

Temporary Roads—Upon what Ground they may or may not be Made—Procuring Material for Roads—"Nursery"—"Building"—Act No. 176, Secs. 233, 235.]—Per Molesworth, J.:—The word "nursery" in Sec. 233 of Act No. 176 does not include land planted with trees in positions which they are intended permanently to occupy. A dam is not a "building," the damaging of which is forbidden by Sec. 235 of the Act. Mayor of Ballarat v. Bungaree District Road Board, 1 V.R. (E.,) 57, 68, 69; 1 A.J.R., 33.

Street not Levelled—Act No. 184, Sec. 281.]—Where a street is not already paved and levelled it is not obligatory upon a municipal council to fix its level, under Act No. 184, Sec. 281, before altering its existing level. Lavezzolo v. Mayor of Daylesford, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 113.

Act No. 184, Secs. 250, 261, 263—Altering Level of a Street—Notice.]—The power given to borough councils under Secs. 261, 263, to alter and raise the level of streets is not an unrestricted power, and must be exercised in the cases of both old and new streets by a reference and notice to the Board of Land and Works under Sec. 250. Holmes v. Mayor, &c., of Ballarat, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 210; N.C., 14.

[Note.—The provisions of Act No. 506, relating to the fixing the levels of streets, are contained in Sec. 377 and in Secs. 403 to 413.]

Action for Injury from Alteration of Street Levels Previously Fixed—Act No. 359, Secs. 277, 283.]—A. sued a borough for injury to his houses and land by the borough altering the levels of a street. Plea, payment into Court of £15. Held, upon a rule nisi for arrest of judgment, that the declaration need not state that the levels were previously fixed; that the declaration showed an injury at common law; and, if the defendants sought a justification of the injury under Sec. 283, they must set it up. Rule discharged. Andrews v. Mayor of Emerald Hill, 5 A.J.R., 167.

Altering Level of Streets—United Shire—No. 358, Sec. 17—No. 359, Sec. 319.]—A borough fixed the level of a street, and after the levels were so fixed the "Boroughs Statute 1869" (No. 359,) was passed which gave the shire councils power to repair streets and to raise and lower levels as they thought fit, provided that no level already fixed was to be altered. The shire was subsequently to this Act united with several other shires, and the united shires altered the level of the street, thereby injuring plaintiff in his business, and damaging his premises. Held that the joint effect of Sec. 17 of No. 358 ("Shires Statute 1869,") and the proviso of Sec. 319 of No. 359 ("Boroughs Statute 1869") was to preserve the inviolability of the levels fixed by the original borough, and of the rights which an inhabitant thereof had acquired under that fixing, and that the united shires had no power to alter the levels and were liable. Sinclair v. United Shire of Mount Alexander, 4 A.J.R., 28.

Streets—Power of Municipal Council—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 408.]—Under Sec. 408 of the "Local Government Act 1874" it is not necessary for a municipal council before altering the level of a street which has been already levelled or paved, to advertise either notice of their intention so to do, or a time and place for receiving and hearing objections from adjoining owners. Kensington Starch and Maizena Company v. Mayor of Essendon, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 93; 1 A.L.T., 163.

Sec. 377 of the "Local Government Act 1874"—Altering Street—Nuisance.]—The powers conferred upon a municipal council by Sec. 377 of the "Local Government Act 1874," as to raising or altering the ground of any street may not be exercised to interfere with individual rights, e.g., as by obstructing access to a public highway, since the words of the section are not mandatory, but permissive only, and where an Act of Parliament merely authorises a body to do a particular act, such body is not thereby authorised to do that act in a manner which would create a nuisance, or would interfere with or injure private rights. King v. Mayor, &c., of Kew, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 183; 6 A.L.T., 54.

Reducing Width of Street or Road—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 367.]—Under the "Local Government Act 1874," a municipal council has no power to reduce the width of any street or road in its district except under Sec. 367. Kensington Starch and Maizena Company v. Mayor of Essendon and Flemington, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 265; 2 A.L.T., 35.

[N.B.—The provisions in the "Shires Statute" (No. 358) differ from the provisions in the other Statutes, and from the "Local Government Act 1874" (No. 506,) in that the provisions of the former Statute expressly make the duty of repairing streets a statutory duty, whereas the others do not so expressly.]

Liability of Shire for Accidents Caused by Non-Repair of Road—General Principles.]—Where the responsibility of keeping public works in repair is imposed by express words on any public body, no discretion being vested in them as to whether they should or should not execute them, and the terms used are so distinct and unequivocal that, for non-compliance with the Statute, the public body may be indicted as for a misdemeanour, then the public body is answerable for accidents caused by non-repair. But where a discretion is vested in these bodies to such an extent that they would not be subject to an indictment for non-repair, yet, if they choose to undertake the responsibility of performing these works, and attempt to construct them or put them in repair, they are bound to execute the works properly, and if they do not do so, they are answerable for their negligence; so that where a discretion exists, and a corporation or other public body does not commence the works, it is not answerable. President, &c., of the Shire of Barrabool v. Torr, 2 V.R. (L.,) 65; 2 A.J.R., 55.

The general principle seems to be that where trustees of a road, or municipal bodies charged with similar duties, are empowered to do a specific act—such as raise a road, lower a hill, or cut a drain—and in doing so they injure the property of some private person, they are not liable to answer for it if they do no more than the Act of Parliament enjoins. But where the act authorised is done so carelessly and improperly that the careless and improper manner in which the work is executed either creates a damage or aggravates an existing damage, then the public body is liable. Shire of Corio v. Smith, 2 V.R. (L.,) 163; 2 A.J.R., 111.

Liability of Corporation in Respect of Street not Formed—"Melbourne Corporation Act," 6 Vict. No. 7, Secs. 1 and 80—Discretion Given by Statute.]—The "Melbourne Corporation Act," 6 Vict. No. 7, Secs. 1 and 80, gives a full discretion to the corporation as to whether or not, and when, it should "form" any proposed street. Where G. sustained injury by falling into an unfenced hole in a certain place where the corporation had not yet exercised its discretion by "forming" a street in that place, Held that the corporation was not liable. Grieve v. Mayor, &c., of Melbourne, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 95.

No Statutory Obligation to Repair—No Liability for Nonfeasance—No. 184, Sec. 263.]—The words of Sec. 263 of the "Municipal Corporations Act" (No. 184) do not render it obligatory on a municipal corporation to repair a road which is in a dangerous state, such road having been formed at the time the municipality was created, and taken over by it, even though it be aware of the state of the road, and have sufficient funds in hand to repair it. Whether the corporation will repair the road or not is a matter for its own consideration. Ryan v. Mayor of Malmsbury, 1 V.R. (L.,) 23; 1 A.J.R., 29.

No Obligation Cast on Borough—Only Liable for Misfeasance—"Boroughs Statute 1869" (No. 359), Sec. 283.]—Under Sec. 283 of the "Boroughs Statute 1869" (No. 359,) a borough council is not liable for an accident resulting from their neglect to keep a footpath in repair, since there is no obligation cast upon them by that section to repair, but a discretion merely is given them. Per Barry, J. The only duty arising from the exercise of the power to repair given to a municipal corporation by the "Boroughs Statute 1869," Sec. 283, is to use proper care in its execution . . . In the present case there was no obligation to repair, and therefore no cause of action by reason of nonfeasance, and nothing was done in any way conducing to the accident, and therefore, there was no cause of action by reason of misfeasance. Reed v. Mayor of Fitzroy, 4 A.J.R., 109.

Omission to Repair Streets—Municipal Corporation only Liable for Misfeasance when Given a Discretion.]—Under the Act 6 Vict. No. 7, Sec. 82, the Melbourne corporation have a discretion as to expenditure on streets, i.e., as to what streets they shall make or repair, and are only liable for a misfeasance and not for a nonfeasance; they are not liable for injuries received through nonfeasance in omitting to repair streets. Phillips v. Mayor of Melbourne, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 74.

Corporation not Liable for Fire Plug erected by Board of Land and Works Protruding—Act No. 506, Sec. 376.]—T. sued the defendant borough for damages through injuries received through his stumbling against a fire-plug erected by the board and allowed to remain protruding above the level of the street. Held, on demurrer, that the defendants were not liable, but the board. Thompson v. Mayor of Fitzroy, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 105.

Liability of Borough Acting under Statutory Powers—Doing no More than Statute Enjoined—16 Vict. No. 40, Sec. 48.]—In 1853 the Government held land in Boroondara, which in 1858 was purchased by H. Between 1853 and 1858 the Central Road Board formed and metalled two roads—one along the margin of the land, and another following the line of a road reserved in the Crown grant. In so doing they diverted the local drainage on to H.'s land, causing additional waters to flow on to the land, breaking the surface, forming a watercourse, and damaging the land and its fences. Before the diversion the drainage had been diffused, and had done no injury. The roads could not, however, have been constructed in any other way than that adopted. The Central Road Board was succeeded by other bodies, and eventually by the Borough of Hawthorn, which in no way altered the roads except by putting footpaths, substituting an open arched water-table crossing for a culvert, and making a new crossing on an old one. Soon after the roads were originally made, H. suffered damage by the flooding of his land, and he called on the Central Road Board to construct a drain from the culverts sufficient to carry off the water from his land, and to pay him for damage, and he made similar demands from the borough, but in both cases without success. In 1865, H. erected a dam to keep the water off his land, and thereby flooded the roads. The borough pulled down the dam, and H. brought an action for trespass to try the question as to the extent of his rights. Held that the Central Road Board having special powers conferred upon them by Sec. 48 of the Act 16 Vict. No. 40, and being indemnified for acts done by them in the exercise of those powers, were not liable for the damage done to H.'s land; and that the borough, their successor, was not liable either for the acts done by the Road Board or for those done by itself. Hepburn v. The Mayor, &c., of Hawthorn, 3 W.W. & a'B. (L.,) 61.

"Shires Statute" (No. 358,) Secs. 279, 297, 309.]—A shire council, acting under Sec. 279 of the Act, cut a drain along a road and conducted water to a certain spot where it collected and flowed over plaintiff's land, thereby injuring it. The plaintiff sued the council for the damage done. Held (following Hepburn v. The Mayor of Hawthorn, from which case it differed only that in that case there was an averment that the roads could not have been constructed in any other way) that, under the power given by Sec. 297, the Council was not responsible, and that it was not obligatory on the council to avail themselves of the power conferred by Sec. 309, and to carry the water away; and that the council were not liable for the damage. Shire of Ballarat v. Beaton, 3 V.R. (L.,) 163; 3 A.J.R., 75.

Act No. 176, Sec. 237—Cutting Drain under Statutory Powers.]—A road board, acting under No. 176, Sec. 237, cut a drain upon a road and a few feet into adjoining land, but constructed no outlet, so that the water accumulated, and was distributed over the plaintiff's land. Held that if the drain were cut only a few yards into the plaintiff's land that would be sufficient, according to the words, "upon and through," in Sec. 237, and the Act giving compensation, an action for damages was not maintainable. Cameron v. Shire of Mount Rouse, 3 V.R. (L.,) 207; 3 A.J.R., 106.

Liability of Shire for Nonfeasance—"Shires Statute" (No. 358)—Express Duty enjoined by Statute.] —By the Act No. 358 ("Shires Statute,") Sec. 297, shires not only may, but in express terms are required to keep the common toll roads in repair. The shire of A. commenced to repair one of its common toll roads, but did not complete the repairs owing to a report that the line of the road was to be changed by the Government. Pending such delay a hole formed in the road in the unfinished part, and one of R.'s horses in passing over it sustained injuries which caused its death. Held that the express imposition of the duty to repair by the Statute rendered the council liable to an information for a misdemeanour, for non-compliance with the Act; and that R., having suffered damage, could maintain his action against the shire without showing that they had funds sufficient to repair the road. Royle v. Shire of Avon, 1 V.R. (L.,) 225; 1 A.J.R., 166.

Liability for Non-feasance—Injury caused by Damage to Street under which Right to Mine had been Granted by Corporation.] — A municipal corporation, under a power to permit mining under the streets within its boundary subject to conditions and restrictions for the public safety such as the corporation might think fit to impose, granted permission, subject to certain conditions and restrictions. The miners, having abandoned their workings, left their excavations in the street in such a condition that some of the water-pipes burst, and a chasm was made, into which the plaintiff, without neglect, drove, and suffered damage and loss. Plaintiff sued the corporation and recovered damages. On rule nisi for nonsuit, and on demurrer, Held that the fact of having power to permit mining did not relieve the corporation from the responsibility cast upon it as manager of the public streets to see that those streets were kept in good order; and that the corporation was liable for the damage sustained by plaintiff. Badenhop v. The Mayor, &c., of Sandhurst, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 136.

Accident Caused by Non-Repair of Road—Bridge on Main Road—Liability of Shire for Non-feasance—Attempt to Repair.]—A bridge, which was not shown to be on a main road, being out of repair, T., in crossing it, met with an accident, and sued the shire council in whose district it was for damages. The council did not produce any evidence that they had merely taken over the bridge ready constructed and had not attempted to repair it since taking it over, and the inference was that they had constructed the bridge themselves. The secretary of the council, in answer to a letter from T., disclaimed liability, but spoke of the road as belonging to the council, which, after the accident, repaired the bridge. The court inferred that if the council had not built the bridge, at any rate they had attempted to repair it, and were therefore liable to T. for the damage sustained by him. President, &c., of the Shire of Barrabool v. Torr, 2 V.R. (L.,) 65; 2 A.J.R., 55.

Express Duty Enjoined by Statute—Liability Absolute.]—Under the "Shires Statute 1869," Sec. 297, the liability of a shire council for allowing a main road to be in a dangerous condition is absolute, and the fact that the dangerous condition, viz., by allowing a heap of metal to remain on a road, has been caused by a contractor employed by the council, will not relieve the latter from their liability. Bell v. Shire of Portland, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 197. Following Shire of Avon v. Royle.

Culvert Insufficient to Carry off Storm Water—Injury to Plaintiff's Land—Negligence of Shire Council—Injury Occasioned in Consequence of Such Negligence.]—A shire council took possession of a certain road. At a certain place the road had been raised to cross a hollow, and a culvert had been made under the embankment to carry off the rain water. This culvert became choked with mud and silt, and the water being dammed back overflowed, and damaged S.'s property. S. sued the council, and recovered a verdict. Held, on appeal, that the proper questions for the jury were whether the absence of provisions for carrying off the accumulated storm water was caused by the shire's negligence, and whether the injury to S.'s property was the immediate consequence of that negligence, and as the jury had found these questions in the affirmative, the Court refused to interfere, and appeal dismissed. Shire of Corio v. Smith, 2 V.R. (L.,) 163; 2 A.J.R., 111.

Liability of Municipality for Nonfeasance—Leaving Works in an Unfinished State—Act No. 359, Secs. 4, 7, 393.]—The Act complained of, by which plaintiff sustained an injury, was leaving the footpath incomplete, there being a hole in the slope of certain street works left in an unfinished state. Held that the former municipality was liable, through not finishing a work it had undertaken, and that the Act entailed the liabilities of the former municipality upon the defendant borough. Dummelow v. Mayor, &c., of St. Kilda, 5 A.J.R., 74.

Liability for Nonfeasance—Act No. 506, Secs. 380, 439—Unfenced Drain on Highway.]—The defendant corporation had the care and management of a certain portion of a highway, and on this highway there was an unfenced drain not constructed by the defendants, but within the municipal boundaries of the corporation. S., while driving in a buggy, fell into the drain and was injured, and sued the corporation for their negligence in leaving the drain unfenced. Held that the corporation was bound to keep the drain so as not to cause injury by its condition, and that as by Secs. 380 and 439 respectively of Act No. 506, the care and management of the highway and of the drain were vested in the defendants, they were liable for the injury caused. Per Higinbotham, J. The obligation to keep a formed road and every part of it in repair arises the moment the street is formed, and when once it exists, the council as the caretakers can never divest themselves of it. Scott v. Mayor of Collingwood, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 280; 3 A.L.T., 16.

Trench in Street made by Stranger—Opportunity of Knowledge—Act No. 506, Secs. 376, 380, 399.]—Action of negligence against a municipal council on account of injuries sustained by plaintiff's horse falling into a trench permitted by the council to be made in a street under their control. It appeared from the evidence that a builder had without express permission, made this trench. Held that under Secs. 376, 380, the council had cast upon them the duty of keeping the streets in repair, and under Sec. 399, the power of punishing a person who without permission, made a hole in the street; and that several days having elapsed between the digging of the trench and the accident, it was a question of fact for the jury whether a reasonable time had elapsed for the defendants to become aware of, and to repair the defect, and the County Court Judge sitting as a jury having found that reasonable care had not been taken, the council was liable. Mayor of Emerald Hill v. Ford, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 351; 5 A.L.T., 119.

Act No. 506, Secs. 376, 380—Dangerous Condition of Street—Opportunity of Knowledge.]—A plaintiff was injured by tripping in a hole in a street under the control of a municipal council. It appeared that this hole was caused by some heavy vehicle passing along the street and forcing apart two of the pitchers of a cross-water channel, and it was quite consistent with the evidence that this was done very shortly before the accident, and there was no evidence to show that the council had any knowledge or means of knowing of the existence of the hole. Held per Stawell, C.J., and Williams, J., (dissentiente Higinbotham, J.,) that in the absence of evidence that a reasonable time had elapsed between the hole being made and the accident, so as to enable the defendants to become aware of and repair the defect, they were not liable. Per Stawell,

C.J.—That by Sec. 380 of the Statute, a municipality is not bound to keep the streets in repair as a statutory duty in the same way that it was required under Sec. 297 of the "Shires Statute," and that without proof of negligence, the municipality was not liable. O'Connor v. Mayor of Hotham, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 435; 5 A.L.T., 131.

Obstruction to Roads—Shire Council not Liable for Partial Obstruction.]—Shire councils are justified in obstructing part of a road so as to direct the traffic over a newly-metalled portion of it; and no action for damages will lie against a shire council for injury sustained by a traveller through driving against the obstruction in the dark. Webster v. Shire of Maldon, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 140.

Obstruction in Way—Act No. 506, Sec. 399—Liability of Corporation for Nonfeasance.]—The liability of a corporation under Sec. 399 to keep open and free from obstruction surveyed roads applies only to an obstruction to the whole road, and not to obstructions (such as heaps of road metal) lying upon the road. Burgmeier v. Shire of Darebin, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 1.

Liability for Gate Closed Across Way.]—See Harvey v. Shire of St. Arnaud, ante column 337.

Liability for Leaving a Road Closed—Contributory Negligence—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 399.]—Where a person erects a fence across a public road required for traffic, and leaves a slip-panel in the fence wide enough for a person using ordinary care and skill to pass through with a waggon, a shire council, to whom is entrusted the management of the road, is not liable under Sec. 399 of the "Local Government Act 1874," for an accident occurring to a person attempting to pass through owing to the absence of such care and skill. Munro v. Shire of St. Arnaud, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 217.

Removing Obstructions—Brush Fence—Act No. 506, Sec. 399—Recovering Expenses.]—Burning a brush fence, which is an obstruction to a road, is a reasonable mode of removing it within the Act. Sec. 399 means that justices are to award the local board the reasonable expenses incurred, and that those expenses are not to be withheld because the person removing has used unnecessary violence in the mode of removal. Wall v. Shire of Ararat, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 61; 2 A.L.T., 126.

No presumption of a nuisance legitimately arises from the mere fact that posts have been placed by a municipal council upon a road under its control for the protection of the public. Birmingham v. Shire of Berwick, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 344.

Power of Municipal Council—Fencing in a Hole—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 418.]—Under Sec. 418 of the "Local Government Act 1874," a municipal council is not warranted in protecting a hole near a street by putting up a fence in the street, so as to obstruct an adjoining owner in his access to the street, even though the hole be dangerous. Kensington Starch and Maizena Coy. v. Mayor of Essendon, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 93; 1 A.L.T., 163.

Dangerous Hole—Notice—Act No. 506, Sec. 418.]—L. sued the defendant borough for injuries received through falling into a dangerous hole, which was near a street and was left unprotected and unenclosed, and of the existence of which the borough surveyor was aware. Held that the defendants were liable; that though it was doubtful whether the notice mentioned in Sec. 418 was to be given by or to the borough, yet in the first alternative the defendants could not take advantage of their own wrong, and in the second alternative the knowledge by the surveyor was sufficient. Levy v. Mayor of Portland, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 226.

Fencing in Dangerous Hole near a Street—Notice—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 418.]—If by the notice of the existence of a dangerous hole near a street required by Sec. 418 of the "Local Government Act 1874" be meant a notice to be given by the council, the council is justified in fencing without giving such notice. A hole in a street is not a hole near a street within Sec. 418. Kensington Starch and Maizena Coy. v. Mayor of Essendon and Flemington, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 265; 2 A.L.T., 35.

Liability for Nonfeasance in Respect of Side-Road made for Accommodation of Public during the Repair of a Bridge—Employment of Independent Contractor—Action by a Shire Councillor.]—A shire council undertook the repair of a bridge, and during the time of its repairs let out to an independent contractor the contract for making a side road. The road was not fenced or lighted, as was provided by the contract. In an action for negligence by a shire councillor, who was injured while driving along the road, Held that the council was liable, and the fact that the plaintiff was a councillor did not preclude his recovering. Bossence v. Shire of Kilmore, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 35; 4 A.L.T., 151.

Liability for Leaving Holes in a Road—Nuisance—Contributory Negligence.]—A dangerous hole left in a road is a public nuisance, for which a municipal council in whose care the road is, and which has partly formed such road, is indictable, and is therefore liable to a person for injuries sustained by his horse falling into such hole, though the horse were trespassing on the road, and the person were guilty of contributory negligence in permitting it to stray. Smyth v. President, &c., of Shire of Kyneton, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 231.

Act No. 506, Sec. 418—Notice.]—Semble, per Stawell, C.J., and Holroyd, J., the notice to be given as to the existence of a dangerous hole is to be given by the council to the owner of the land on which it is situated. Bisp v. Mayor of Collingwood, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 249; 5 A.L.T., 79.

Negligence—Act No. 506, Sec. 418—Dangerous Hole—Question for Court.]—M. brought an action against a municipal council for negligence, in allowing a dangerous hole near a highway to remain unfenced, into which M. fell and was injured. Held that it was for the Court to determine first whether the hole was near to or substantially adjoining the highway within the meaning of Sec. 418, before it went to the jury as to its being dangerous. Meury v. Mayor of Daylesford, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 123.

IV. Offences Against the Various Acts.

Displacing Soil of Street—"Boroughs Statute" (No. 359,) Sec. 301—Continuation of and Width of Street.]—S. was summoned for displacing the soil of a street by sinking a shaft. It appeared that there was a formed street (V street) up to a certain point of a certain width, and on the plan it was marked as a street up to and further than the locus in quo; and certain Crown allotments had been granted opposite the shaft, having the unformed part as a boundary; but there was nothing otherwise to distinguish it from the surrounding land. Held that, in the absence of anything to the contrary, there was sufficient evidence to justify the justices in arriving at the conclusion that the street was of the same width all through, there being evidence that the street was of a certain width up to a certain point so as to let in that presumption, and case remitted, with an intimation that they might convict. Drought v. Schonfeldt, 5 A.J.R., 82.

"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 398—Removing Drift Sand from a Street.]—A person cannot be convicted of an offence under Sec. 398 of the "Local Government Act 1874" for removing sand which the force of the wind has caused to drift upon a street. Regina v. Cowie, ex parte Clarke, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 203; 4 A.L.T., 36.

LUNATIC.

Statutes.]—
"Lunacy Statute 1867" (No. 309.)
"Lunacy Statute Amendment Act 1869" (No. 342.)
"Lunacy Statute Amendment Act 1878" (No. 628.)

I. Who is.

"Lunacy Statute 1867" (No. 309,) Sec. 3.]—A person suffering from delirium tremens comes within the definition of a lunatic in Sec. 3 of the "Lunacy Statute 1867." Mayor of Daylesford v. Senior Constable of Daylesford, 2 V.R. (L.,) 35; 2 A.J.R. 35.

Act No. 309, Secs. 60, 149.]—A lunatic permitted to reside with his parents under Sec. 60 of the Act is not a "lunatic patient" within Sec. 149 of the Act. In re M'Gregor's Estate, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 1.

II. Powers and Disabilities of Lunatics.

Power to Contract — Contract of Marriage — Lucid Interval.]—If an alleged lunatic is found to have understood, or to have been capable of understanding the nature and consequences of any contract into which he has entered, and the reasons for or against entering into it, and to have been actuated by the same motives in entering into it, having the will as much under control as if he had been sane, the contract will be upheld. Contracts entered into by a person of unsound mind, but apparently of sound mind, and not known by the other contracting party to be insane, if executed and completed and if fair and bonâ fide, will not be held void; but the contract of marriage differs from other contracts in this respect, that the ignorance of the party marrying a lunatic as to his lunacy will not save such party from having the marriage declared void. In order to determine whether a particular contract of marriage or any other kind is void or not, the Court must endeavour to gauge the extent to which the mind is obscured and to ascertain whether the disease operates quoad that contract. In cases of permanent insanity the burden of proving a lucid interval rests with those who seek to establish it, and a lucid interval means a period in the course of a continuing disease during which its influence on the mental faculties is either wholly suspended or so far suspended that the patient must be deemed legally sane with regard to the particular act under the Court's consideration. In the Estate of Doull, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 70.

Per Holroyd, J., (without expressly deciding the point) "I cannot see how, if the marriage were absolutely void, it could be thus confirmed," i.e., by cohabitation on the part of a lunatic temporarily restored. Ibid, p. 85.

Insanity of a Partner—Effect of, on Agreements.]—Gregory v. Welch, 3 V.R. (E.,) 6; 3 A.J.R., 3; Creswick v. Creswick, 4 A.J.R., 23, 93. Post under PARTNERSHIP—Liabilities and Duties of Partners, inter se.

Service of Proceeding on Lunatic—Substituted Service.]—Where a defendant was lunatic and confined in an asylum, and it was admitted that service personally might have a dangerous, and perhaps fatal effect on the lunatic, the Court refused leave to effect substituted service on the superintendent of the asylum, and also refused to express any opinion that might influence the superintendent to allow personal service. Kesterson v. Smith, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 336.

Substituted Service of Proceedings in Equity Suit upon Lunatic Defendant.]—See Allan v. Wilkie, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 6. Post under PRACTICE AND PLEADING—IN EQUITY—Service of Proceedings.

III. EXAMINATION, CONFINEMENT, AND DISCHARGE OF LUNATICS.

Act No. 309, Sec. 10—Expenses of Conveying to Lunatic Asylum.]—Rule nisi to prohibit magistrates from enforcing an order directing a distress warrant to be issued against a shire council for non-payment of an order certifying the amount to be paid for the examination and removal of a lunatic found within the shire. Held that the order must be enforced in the usual way, viz., that the parties against whom it is made must first be heard, and that proceedings on an order must not be ex parte. Rule absolute. Regina v. Panton, 6 W.W. & a'B. (L.,) 6.

Examination of Lunatic—Act No. 309, Sec. 10—Complaint Against Shire Council for Fees and Expenses.]—Order nisi for prohibition to restrain justices from enforcing an order on a complaint, whereby they ordered a shire to pay expenses for examining a lunatic, and for necessaries supplied to him. The grounds on which the prohibition was sought were:—(1) That the order was made ex parte, and (2) That the proceedings taken to enforce the order were improperly taken in the name of the Queen. Rule absolute without costs, and leave to amend refused. Regina v. Rowe, 1 V.R. (L.,) 83; 1 A.J.R., 79.

Expenses Incurred in Examination.]—A police constable may sue for the expenses incurred in the examination of a lunatic. Mayor of Daylesford v. Senior-Constable of Daylesford, 2 V.R. (L.,) 35; 2 A.J.R., 35.

Lunatic where "Found"—Who Liable for Expenses—No. 309, Sec. 10.]—The borough in which a lunatic is taken into custody, or in which an adjudication is made upon a lunatic, under the "Lunacy Statute," Sec. 10, is liable for the costs of the commitment. Mayor of Beechworth v. Baker, 2 A.J.R., 114.

Where a lunatic resided in a shire, and her husband went into a borough and informed a constable that his wife was insane, and it was arranged that she should be arrested before arriving in the borough, so as to throw the costs on the shire, but by mistake she reached the borough before arrest, and the justices committed her, and made an order for costs against the borough, Held, on appeal by the borough, that if Sec. 10 of the "Lunacy Statute" (No. 309) were to be read so that the order should be made against the borough in which the adjudication is made of the lunatic, the appellants were liable; and if the word "found" were to be read as discovered, apprehended, or taken into custody, they were still liable, and appeal dismissed. Ibid.

[Sec. 10 of the "Lunacy Statute 1867" is repealed so far as the power of justices to make orders upon the council of any shire or borough in which any lunatic is found for the expenses of his examination or any other expenses incurred in connection with such lunatic is concerned by Sec. 1 of the Act No. 628.]

Order for Discharge—"Lunacy Statute 1867," Sec. 73.]—Sec. 73 of the "Lunacy Statute (No. 309,) which provides for the bringing before a judge of a person in custody as a lunatic, and for the examination of such person before the judge, and for his discharge if the judge be satisfied that he is not insane, applies only to cases where the lunatic is confined at the instance of private persons, and not to the case of a committal to an asylum by justices for the public safety. In re Roberts, 4 A.J.R., 5.

Lunatic Confined under Informal Warrant — "Lunacy Statute 1867," Secs. 4, 7, 8, 73.]—On an application to discharge a lunatic from custody it appeared that he had been confined under a warrant in the form given by Sec. 4 of the "Lunacy Statute" (No. 309,) which related to dangerous lunatics, and not in the form prescribed by Sec. 8 for the class of lunatics mentioned in Sec. 7 of the Act: Held that the warrant being merely informal, not insufficient, and there being evidence that the alleged lunatic was in fact insane, he should be remanded to allow of the warrant being amended; and that if his discharge were desired a proper application should be made under Sec. 73 of the Act. Ex parte Wilson, 1 A.J.R., 100.

IV. COMMISSIONS DE LUNATICO INQUIRENDO.

Act No. 309, Sec. 74—Infant Petitioner.]—An infant cannot, by his next friend, petition for a commission de lunatico inquirendo. The commission can only be granted on the application of an adult. It was subsequently granted on the petition of the next friend in his own name. In re Murphy, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 147.

"Lunacy Statute" (No. 309,) Sec. 74—Petition de Lunatico Inquirsndo—Married Woman.]—A petition de lunatico inquirendo as to her husband was presented by a married woman. Held that petition must be amended and might be amended at hearing by inserting a next friend, and then petition granted. In re Fulker, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 233.

Petition by Married Woman—Next Friend.]—Where a wife petitions for a commission of inquiry as to the lunacy of her husband, the petition must be presented by a next friend. In re Feehan, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 237.

Application for Commission—Consent of Lunatic.]—Upon an application for a commission de lunatico inquirendo, the Court will not act upon the concurrence of the alleged lunatic in the absence of evidence as to his capacity. In re Bull, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 70; 1 A.L.T., 144.

Commission in the Nature of a Writ de Lunatico Inquirendo—Motion for, by Creditor.]—A judgment creditor of an alleged lunatic moved, on notice to the lunatic's wife, and with the co-operation of the lunatic's other creditors, for a commission de lunatico, with a view of having the estate, which was in fact insolvent, administered by the Court for the benefit of all the creditors. Commission ordered on condition of applicant taking it at his own expense. Per Molesworth, J.—"If any particular creditor thought fit to issue execution, I do not know that a commission, having issued, would authorise the Court to protect the property from that creditor; and, even when the property is given into the hands of the committee, the Court cannot protect it from an execution." In re Grant, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 18.

Commission Refused to Creditor.]—A commission in lunacy is not a method for creditors procuring the administration of estates, their ordinary remedies not being interrupted. An application by a creditor for an inquiry as to the lunacy of his debtor was, therefore refused. In re Burns, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 136.

Order not Prosecuted—Discharge.]—An order for an inquiry de lunatico having been made, but not further prosecuted by the petitioner, the proper course to obtain a discharge is to move upon notice to the petitioner to discharge the order with costs. In re Feehan, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 237.

"Lunacy Statute" (No. 309,) Sec. 149—Inquiry by Master-in-Lunacy — Doctor's Affidavit — Appointment of Guardian.]—Motion under Sec. 149 for inquiry into lunacy of R., and for appointment of R.'s wife as guardian. Per Molesworth, J. The doctor's affidavit should state the probable duration of malady. On the application being renewed under a further affidavit stating that it was likely to be permanent, Held, per Stephen, J., that the affidavit should give reasons for such an opinion. The Master having reported as to lunacy the Court referred it to the Master to appoint a guardian. In re Reid, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 70; 3 A.L.T., 18.

"Lunacy Statute 1867" (No. 309,) Secs. 60, 149—Lunatic Patient—Infant.]—An infant lunatic permitted to reside with his parents under No. 309 Sec. 60, is not a "lunatic patient" within the meaning of Sec. 149; and the provisions of the latter section do not apply to the case of a lunatic who is also an infant. In re M'Gregor's Estates, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 1.

Act No. 309, Sec. 94—Sequestration by Lunatic after his Recovery—Conflict between Committee and Assignee.]—L. was found a lunatic, and X. was appointed his committee, the estate of the lunatic being duly vested in X. L. recovered, and voluntarily sequestrated his estate, G. being appointed official assignee. The assignee attached all the property in X.'s hands, and a creditor, B., brought an action against X. as to some mining shares. On application for advice to the Court, the Court intimated it would grant an order of supersedeas on the application of the quondam lunatic if G. and X. concurred. On motion for a supersedeas of the commission in lunacy, the Court intimated that it would not recognise G.'s position at all, but required a further affidavit as to the nature of the action B. v. X. On renewed motion upon an affidavit showing that the action was in respect of certain mining shares found among L.'s property, the Court granted an order of supersedeas, the scrip to be handed over to L. on X. receiving a proper indemity, L. to be at liberty to carry on the defence in the action B. v. X. as he should be advised. In re Levey, 3 A.J.R., 90, 100, 101.

Supersedeas of Commission — Necessary Affidavits.]—In an application for a supersedeas of commission in a case where lunatic had recovered, Held that an affidavit as to recovery was necessary from one of the medical gentlemen who had pronounced him insane, and that a certificate to that effect was not sufficient. In re M'Closkey, 3 A.J.R., 91, 94.

V. Guardians and Committees.

Appointment of Guardians—Female.]—On an application for the appointment of the wife of a lunatic as his guardian, the Court intimated a disinclination to appoint a female as guardian if a male were procurable, but left it for the Master to decide by a reference to him to appoint a guardian. In re Morgan, 3 A.J.R., 94.

Appointmsnt of Guardian—Costs.]—Where the Court made an order under No. 309 ("Lunacy Statute 1867") Sec. 149, for the appointment of a guardian of the person and estate of a lunatic patient, and considerable costs had been incurred and paid by the guardian under the order for the examination of the lunatic, he was thereby also permitted to retain such costs, and the costs of the application for his appointment. In re Gordon, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 235.

Costs of Guardian.]—Semble, a reference to the Master to tax costs incurred by the guardian in lunacy proceedings is necessary. In re Palmer, 3 A.J.R., 17.

Evidence of Recovery—Discharge of Guardian.]—A letter from the medical officer of the asylum in which a lunatic is confined to the guardian, that the lunatic had recovered, and the fact of his subsequent discharge from the asylum, do not form sufficient evidence of his recovery to discharge the guardian. There should be proper medical testimony of his condition of mind. In re Chambers, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 107; 2 A.L.T., 17.

Discharge of Guardian—Supersedeas.]—Where a guardian has been appointed under Sec. 149 of the "Lunacy Statute" (No. 309,) there should be some proceeding analogous to a supersedeas to discharge him, on the recovery of the lunatic. Ibid.

Powers of Guardian as to Management of Estate.]—See next sub-heading.

Appointment of Committee—Lunatic not so Found by Inquisition.]—The Court will not appoint a committee of a lunatic not so found by inquisition, or make any order affecting such lunatic's property, however small it may be, without a commission. In re Arnott, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 11.

Appointment of New Committee—Executor of Will under which Lunatic is Entitled to Property.]—Where a person had obtained an order appointing him committee of the person and estate of a lunatic, but had failed to find the neccssary sureties, the Court refused to appoint the executor of a will under which the lunatic was entitled to property a committee in place of the person who had obtained the order, without a reference to the Master-in-Equity. In re Marris, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 94; 6 A.L.T., 3.

Appointment of New Committee—Costs of Former Committee.]—The costs incurred by a deceased committee of a lunatic in having him declared a lunatic and appointing himself as committee will not be allowed on an application for the appointment of a new committee, although the Master-in-Equity has reported that they should be paid. Such costs must be moved for by the personal representative of the deceased committee. Ibid.

Committee—Appointment of Substitute during Temporary Absence of.]—A reference to the Master ordered as to a proper person to be appointed committee, and whether such appointment should be temporary or permanent. In re Thomas M'Carthy, 3 A.J.R., 105.

Committee Administrator of Deceased Lunatic—Passing Accounts—Administration Bond.]—On the death of a lunatic his committee obtained administration durante minore ætate of the children. Motion for leave to pass accounts and for leave to deal as administrator with money in his hands as committee, and to have the bond vacated. Order refused as to vacating committee's bond. Granted as to other relief sought. In re James Bull, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 11.

Remuneration of Committee — Act No. 309, Sec. 180.]—The remuneration, provided for in Sec. 180, should depend upon the amount of trouble entailed upon the committee, and not upon the amount of estate received, and may be calculated in the form of percentage. In re Teece, 5 A.J.R., 97.

Powers of Committee in Reference to Lunatic's Estate.]—See next sub-heading.

VI. Administration and Management of Lunatic's Estate.

Investment of Property—Practice.]—A lunatic's committee applied for the investment of his estate in Government debentures or real securities. Held that the committee might pay the money into the Master's hands, and, with his approbation, so invest them; the securities to be in the name of the committee as such, and to be held by the Master. In re Anderson, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 241; 2 A.L.T., 43.

Death of Lunatic — Disposition of Estate.]—Where a lunatic died, the Court ordered the committee to pass his final accounts, and pay the balance in his hands to the executors; and ordered moneys of his estate in Court to be paid out to the executors, after providing for the costs of the committee. In re Anderson, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 241.

Summary Proceedings for Protection of Lunatic's Property—Act No. 309, Sec. 144—Jurisdiction of Court.]—Molesworth, J. (in Chambers.) A complaint by the Master-in-Lunacy, under Sec. 144 of the "Lunacy Statute," against a person for wrongfully holding and detaining and converting to his own use property of a lunatic, should be in writing and signed by the Master. Under this section the jurisdiction of the Court is not restricted to simple cases only. In re Rose, 1 A.L.T., 148.

Powers of Guardian—Continuing Lunatic's Business—"Lunacy Statute" (No. 309,) Sec. 149.]—A guardian appointed under the "Lunacy Statute," Sec. 149, has the same power as a committee under the previous system, and semble, the committee not having had the power to carry on the lunatic's business, a guardian has not that power. In re Bayldon, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 70.

Powers of Committee — Continuing Lunatic's Business.]—The Court will not make a general order for carrying on the business of a lunatic by his committee. In re Bull, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 70. Following In re Bayldon, supra.

Lunatic Partner—Termination or Continuance of Business—"Lunacy Statute" (No. 309,) Secs. 98, 164, 167.]—The Master had made a report recommending that a partnership business, in which lunatic was a partner with two others, should be carried on upon terms. Upon petition for that purpose, Held that it is doubtful whether the Court has a jurisdiction to make such an order independent of the Statute, and the spirit of the Statute seems to point to a winding-up rather than a continuation. Sec. 98 refers only to small properties, and in Secs. 164 and 167 there are provisions for dissolving and disposing of business without any alternative as to Court directing a continuance; that if Court has jurisdiction, there are grave doubts, except in the plainest cases, of the discretion of continuing business. Petition refused. In re Joseph Wilkie, 3 A.J.R., 12.

When Partner is Insane—"Lunacy Statute" (No. 309,) Sec. 164.]—The Court has no power under the "Lunacy Statute," Sec. 164, to dissolve a partnership upon an application on behalf of a lunatic partner, but only upon the application of the other partners. In re Anderson, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 103.

The Court made an order for dissolution under Sec. 164, upon the application of the same partners, with the consent of the committee of the lunatic partner. In re Anderson, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 133.

Sale of Lunatic's Interest in a Contract for Purchase of Land.]—On a reference under Sec. 149 of the "Lunacy Statute" (No. 309,) the Master had reported P., in confinement as a lunatic, to be incapable of managing himself or his affairs, and a guardian was appointed under that section. Before P. was confined he had purchased land at auction, upon which he had paid a cash deposit of one-third of the purchase-money, under conditions of sale providing for forfeiture of the deposit in case of non-completion. There were no funds of the lunatic available for completion, and the vendors threatened to forfeit. Under these circumstances an order was made, upon affidavit of the facts, that the guardian might, with the approbation of the Master, sell for cash P.'s interest in the land. In re Palmer, 2 V.R. (E.,) 91.

Conveyance of Lunatic's Estate.]—Where a lunatic and his partner had entered into a contract for sale of real estate, and the partner upon dissolution became entitled to the balance of the purchase money, an order was made under the "Lunacy Statute" (No. 309,) Sec. 163, directing the committee of the lunatic to concur in the conveyance to the purchasers of the property, on payment to the partner of the balance of the purchase money due under the contract. In re Wilkie, 2 V.R. (E.,) 144.

Conveyance Under Contract Made Before Lunacy—"Lunacy Statute" (No. 309,) Secs. 143, 163—Necessary Affidavits.]—A lunatic before his lunacy contracted to sell some real estate. Before the last bill securing part of the purchase money was paid, the vendor became a lunatic; no inquisition was made, or committee appointed. Petition under Secs. 143, 163, of Act No. 309 for an order for Master-in-Lunacy to convey to the purchaser. The Court intimated that following affidavits were necessary:—That contract had never been disputed by lunatic T., or by any one assuming to represent him, that money due on bills had been paid, and that T. was capable when he endorsed them; and as to service, an affidavit should be made by the doctor of the asylum in which T. was, as to whether he showed notice of petition (which had been served on him) to T., and how far T. was capable of understanding it, and that Master-in-Lunacy should be served with notice. On these materials being furnished, Court made the order. In re Tate, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 109.

Sale of Lunatic's Property—Act. No. 309, Secs. 115, 143, 154—Act No. 342, Sec. 3—Objection by Purchaser as to Validity of Proceedings.]—A guardian of the person and estate of a lunatic was appointed, and the Master-in-Lunacy made a report under Sec. 115 of Act No. 309, recommending the sale of the lunatic's property, and application of the proceeds in payment of the debts. This report was confirmed by the Court, and the lands were sold to B. B. made an application to be discharged from the sale, on the ground of the invalidity of the proceedings under which the order was obtained. Held that the Master was not, in a matter of this nature, entitled to proffer advice under Sec. 115, although he might have done so under Act No. 342, Sec. 3, that under Sec. 3 of Act No. 342, the Master is enabled to sell the real estate, but he cannot convey, and must resort to the Court under Sec. 154 for an order to convey, when the combined effect of Secs. 143 and 154, would enable him to convey; but that the irregularity of the proceedings, viz., the proffer of advice under Sec. 115 of Act No. 309, instead of under Sec. 3 of Act No. 342, was not an objection which a purchaser could take, and application refused. In re Heller, 3 A.J.R., 47.

"Lunacy Statute" (No. 309,) Secs. 143, 145, 154, 155—Act No. 342, Sec. 3—Powers of Master—Sale of Land.]—Under Act No. 342, Sec. 3, the Master has only power to sell for payment of debts, and the Master has no power to sell under that section where property is worth more than double existing liabilities. The decision in Re Heller means that the difficulty of conveyance would induce Master to apply to Court under Sec. 154 of No. 309 rather than sell under Act 342, Sec. 3, and it does not mean that if Master sells himself he can apply to Court to remove the difficulty. A motion under No. 309, Sec. 154, for an order authorising Master to sell lands of lunatic and convey to purchasers, and apply proceeds of sale, being made, Ordered as sought. In re Smyth, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 31.

Sale of Lunatic's Property—Motion for, under Sec. 154 of the "Lunacy Statute" 1867.]—Per Molesworth, J. (in Chambers.) The Court looks with hesitation at the jurisdiction to sell the real estate of a lunatic for payment of his debts, &c., because it goes to establish a number of debts as good which are debatable. Where, however, the lunatic's wife concurred, the Court made an order for sale, the Master to select a competent part of the property. In re Hughes, 1 A.L.T., 200.

Powers of Master-in-Lunacy—Act No. 309, Sec. 115.]—The power in Sec. 115 is limited to cases in which the Master thinks that the Court, if applied to, would direct a reference to him (e.g., the case of an allowance to the lunatic's family), and does not extend to the case of a sale of the lunatic's real estate to pay his debts. In re Heller, 3 A.J.R., 47; for facts see S.C., ante column 872.

The Master may, under the "Lunacy Statute 1867," Sec. 115, without an order of reference, determine as to the sale of shares and personal chattels of a lunatic, and as to the payment of debts and claims against his estate. An order was, however, made, on motion of the lunatic's committee, referring it to the Master to inquire whether it would be for the benefit of the lunatic to complete certain contracts of sale and purchase into which the lunatic had entered, and as to the sale of real estate of the lunatic, and as to the remuneration to be allowed to the committee. In re Anderson, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 103.

"Lunacy Statute" (No. 309,) Secs. 173, 174, 149—Power of Guardian to Exercise Lunatic's Power of Sale as Mortgagee.] — An application by guardian of estate and person of a lunatic for authority to exercise a power of sale which the lunatic possessed as mortgagee. Held that the order for such a power of sale to be exercised by a committee might be made by the Court under Secs. 173, 174, but that Sec. 149 only gives to guardians the powers which committees had previously to the Act No. 309, and that before the Act No. 309 committees had no such powers. Application refused. In re Palmer, 3 A.J.R., 17.

Application by Guardian to Sell Lunatic's Property should be made to the Master—Master's Report.]—An application by the guardian of a lunatic to sell his property should not be made to the Court but to the Master-in-Lunacy, in whose discretion it lies to report whether such sale will be beneficial or not. The Master's report, when he reports that it would be beneficial to sell specific portions of the real estate to pay debts, should state their value and the amount of the debts. In re Chambers, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 107; 1 A.L.T., 180, 190.

Power to Consent to Mortgage, when Committee may Exercise—"Lunacy Statute 1867" (No. 309,) Secs. 143, 173, 174.]—Land was conveyed by deed to such uses as E.C. should, with the consent of husband, R.C., appoint. R.C. became a lunatic—and no committee had been appointed. E.C. was desirous of mortgaging the land. Upon motion for an order authorising the Master-in-Lunacy to give his consent, Held that so far as the beneficial interest of the lunatic was concerned the application should be made by the committee under Sec. 173 or under Sec. 143 by the Master; that by Sec. 174 the committee may exercise a power vested in a lunatic where he has no beneficial interest, but that in cases where lunatic had no beneficial interest the Master could not be substituted for the committee by Sec. 143, for that section does not apply to a case in which the consent of a lunatic is required for the protection of rights of third parties. Motion refused. In re Cleland, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 128.

Mortgage of Lunatic's Property—Power of Court—"Lunacy Statute" (No. 309,) Sec. 154—"Lunacy Amendment Act" (No. 342.)]—The Court has no jurisdiction to make an order for the mortgaging of the lands of a patient in a lunatic asylum, not being a lunatic so found by inquisition, or report of the Master-in-Lunacy. In re M'Mullen, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 198.

Maintenance of Lunatic—Act No. 309, Sec. 148.]—The Master-in-Lunacy sued on a contract "made pursuant to the provisions" of the Act for the maintenance of a lunatic in the Kew Asylum, by which defendant agreed to pay certain amounts as for maintenance. Held that the Court must infer that the contract was made in the only form in which it could be good, i.e., under seal, and that under Sec. 148 such an action was maintainable. Wilkinson v. Watson, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 239.

Allowance to Wife—Act No. 342, Sec. 3—Discretion of Master as to Amount.]—Where the Master made an allowance for maintenance to the wife of a lunatic out of the income of his estate, the Court refused to interfere with his discretion as to the amount. In re Bryce, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 111.

Payment to Wife Refused.]—Where the Master had in his hand a sum of money, part of the estate of a lunatic, so found, the Court refused to direct him to invest such sum on deposit in a bank or upon personal security, but ordered its investment on real or public security. Ibid.

Act No. 309, Secs. 101, 149—Percentage to Crown.]—N. was appointed a guardian of the person and estate of one who had been found a lunatic. Held, upon a special case, that N. was liable under Secs. 101 and 149 to pay a percentage of 5 per cent. to the Crown for all the moneys received by him. Niven v. The Queen, 3 V.R. (L.,) 33; 3 A.J.R., 53.

Commission not Remitted on Insolvency of Estate—"Lunacy Statute" (No. 309,) Sec. 105.]—The Court will refuse to remit the commission upon the estate of a recovered lunatic on the ground that it is hopelessly insolvent, when the estate is not under administration by the Court. In re Levey, 4 A.J.R., 6.

Commission—When the Crown is Entitled to—"Lunacy Statute" (No. 309,) Secs. 101, 180—Funds Lying in Bank which Committee did not get Possession of, but as to which he Served Notice not to Pay.]—T. became lunatic, and E. became his committee. T. had a large sum of money lying at deposit in a bank, as to which E. served notice not to pay to T. T. recovered, and an order of supersedeas was obtained, and a report was made, in accordance with the order, directing the Master to report as to the costs and liabilities incurred by E. on behalf of T. Upon exception to report, Held that this sum in the bank was not "collected by," or "come into the control" of E. within the meaning of Sec. 101, and that neither the Crown nor E. were entitled to commission on that amount. In re Teece, 5 A.J.R., 97, 98.

MAGISTRATE.

Jurisdiction under "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute" (No. 268.)]—A police magistrate has power to do all that two justices may do under the "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute," although there is no express provision in any Act authorising the appointment of magistrates, there being no necessity for such a provision, since it is a power inherent in all Governments to provide for the administration of the country. Ex parte Hargreaves, 1 A.J.R., 23.

Infraction of Mining Bye-Laws—Police Magistrate may Entertain Complaint for—Act No. 291, Sec. 237.]—Regina v. Pohlman, ex parte Nickless, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 31, post under MINING—Mining Boards, Officers, and Bye-Laws.

MALICIOUS ARREST AND PROSECUTION.

I. REASONABLE AND PROBABLE CAUSE.

Where a person went to a magistrate and told him an untrue story, upon which he got a warrant to arrest another for an offence which there was no pretence for charging him with, Held that, as the story was false, it was to be taken as maliciously untrue until it was shown not to be so. Hopkins v. Brophy, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 167.

Evidence of.]—Per Barry, J.—The real question is not what the defendant believed, but whether the facts, of which he was aware, presented reasonable grounds for believing that a felony had been committed. Cornwall v. Martin, N.C., 57.

How Proved—Depositions in Court Below.]—If the plaintiff in an action for malicious prosecution can prove the absence of reasonable and probable cause without putting in evidence the depositions taken in the Court below, he is at liberty to do so. Dines v. Farringdon, 1 V.R. (L.,) 158; 1 A.J.R., 135.

Evidence—Finding of County Court Judge.]—In an action before a County Court Judge there was evidence both ways as to the existence of reasonable and probable cause, and the County Court Judge found that there was not reasonable and probable cause. On appeal, Held that where there was evidence both ways, the Court would not interfere with the finding of the judge, as that would be to interfere, not with the province of the judge, but with that of the jury. Daly v. Hughes, 2 A.J.R., 66.

Statement of Constable as to Thief—Belief of Prosecutor.]—P. was coachman in W.'s employ, and it was his duty to take wood from a certain heap, but he was warned that he was not to take it for his own use. P. missed wood from the heap, and employed a detective to watch, who saw P. take wood, carry it some distance, and throw it over a fence into a paddock, in which his own house was; the constable then charged P. with it in W.'s presence, P. remaining silent, and W. told the constable to take out a summons against P. P. afterwards attempted to explain, but W. replied it was too late. W. gave P. a week's notice, and after the case was tried, which resulted in a dismissal, W. congratulated P. on the termination of it. P. sued W. for a malicious prosecution, and recovered a verdict of £30. On rule nisi for a nonsuit, Held that according to the constable's statement there was evidence of felony to go to a criminal jury against P.; that there was no evidence to support the finding of the jury on the only issue left to them, viz., as to whether W. believed the constable's statement; that there was nothing to show that W. did not believe such statement. Per Barry, J., where there are no facts in dispute, and there are no doubtful or contested inferences of fact "reasonable and probable cause" is a pure question of law for the judge, whose duty it is to decide whether the facts so proved amount to "reasonable and probable cause," or not. In the former case he sends the case to a jury with instruction as to the additional ingredient of malice, in the latter he nonsuits. Rule absolute. Waugh v. Palmer, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 91.

How far Evidence for Defendant to be Considered in Entering a Nonsuit.]—B. sued S. in a declaration containing a count for malicious prosecution and a count for false imprisonment. S. pleaded justification. The jury gave a verdict for plaintiff. On rule nisi for a nonsuit, Held that inasmuch as it appeared that S. had purchased a piece of alpaca from which a certain part had been cut off, and on the same day S. discovered in the drawer of a room occupied by B. two pieces of exactly the same material and size as that she missed, there was from these facts sufficient evidence of the reasonable and probable cause for the prosecution and arrest; that although the facts did not appear wholly from the plaintiff's evideuce yet the evidence for the defendant which fully established them might be used for the purpose of entering a nonsuit. Rule absolute. Burns v. Slater, 5 A.J.R., 168.

Malics — Questions for Court and Jury.]—Malice is as essential as the want of reasonable and probable cause. In an action for malicious prosecution the evidence showed an absence of reasonable and probable cause from which the jury were at liberty to draw an inference of malice. Held that such an inference might be rebutted. Rule absolute for new trial. Longden v. Weigall, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 266.

Where the jury in the new trial found there was malice and returned a verdict for plaintiff, Held that the question of malice was for the jury, and the question of reasonable and probable cause was for the judge; and where two juries have found that there was malice, the Court, though entertaining a different opinion, would not interfere with the verdict. But the Court, being of opinion that the circumstances showed reasonable and probable cause for setting the law in motion, made the rule absolute for a nonsuit. Ibid.

Evidence of Reasonable and Probable Cause—Inquiry into Criminal Charge.]—Where a charge of larceny is laid against a person, and the things stolen are found in his possession, the onus is cast upon him of explaining how he became possessed of them. If he gives a reasonable explanation, inquiry into the truth of that explanation must be made before proceeding further with the criminal charge, and the absence of such inquiry is sufficient evidence of want of reasonable and probable cause. Jenner v. Harbison, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 111.

What is.]—R. was owner of a yacht lying in Hobson's Bay, and found her one morning (28th April) scuttled. Two persons told R. that they had seen the plaintiffs put off in a boat to the yacht, on the night of 27th April, with an augur, and remain on board a quarter of an hour. A constable, in whose presence the story was told, advised that a warrant should be applied for, and signed the charge-sheet as prosecutor. Held, on appeal from County Court, that the information given to the defendant R. was extremely probable and consistent, and afforded him sufficient, reasonable, and probable cause for setting the law in motion. Appeal allowed. Nonsuit to be entered. Robbins v. Davis, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 163; 1 A.L.T., 4.

What is—Laying a Charge before Steam Navigation Board.]—A ship-master charged a second engineer before the board with incompetence and negligence while on his watch in allowing the condensers to get hot through not paying attention to the injection cocks. There was not sufficient evidence to prove incompetency, but the charge of negligence was proved. The jury found for the plaintiff on the count for malicious prosecution. Held that the proof of the charge of negligence was not sufficient evidence of reasonable and probable cause for instituting the charge of incompetency, and verdict left undisturbed. Tait v. Snewin, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 374; 1 A.L.T., 58.

See also S.C. post column 881.

Prosecution for Embezzlement—Secretary of Shire Council.]—D. charged R., the secretary of a shire council, with embezzlement, and his reason for so doing was that a Government auditor had discovered a deficiency in R.'s accounts, and sufficient opportunity had been offered to R. to test the auditor's accounts, and to offer an explanation, of which he had not availed himself. In an action by R. against D. for malicious prosecution, Held that D., who was president of the shire, had reasonable and probable cause for the prosecution. Rippon v. Dennis, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 81; 1 A.L.T., 164.

Information Obtained at Second-hand.]—Plaintiff and defendant were owners of separate parcels of land on which sheep were depastured. At the shearing, which took place in the same building, some of the defendant's fleeces were missing, and H., a person living in the neighbourhood, told defendant that he had been informed by a shearer that certain fleeces claimed by the plaintiff were shorn from sheep with defendant's brand. Defendant saw plaintiff and asked for an explanation, which was not given. Held that defendant had reasonable and probable cause for setting the law in motion against plaintiff, and that H. being a credible person it was not necessary for the defendant to communicate directly with the shearer. Turner v. Wright, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 273.

What is.]—B. sold to P. several horses, and a contract of letting and hiring was then entered into by which B. was to have the use of the horses, but was not to take them off his farm. B. took the horses off his farm, offered them for sale, and took them into New South Wales and there again offered them for sale. Held that these facts afforded reasonable and probable cause for P.'s instituting a prosecution for larceny as a bailee against B. Playford v. Brown, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 467; 2 A.L.T., 101.

Direction of Judge.]—McK. and B., horse dealers, employed M. as foreman. While in their employ a friend asked M. to sell him an old saddle, the property of the firm, which M. did and accepted a watch and chain as security. He informed the firm's bookkeeper of the transaction, and subsequently McK. reproved him for lending the property of the firm; but no mention was made of the receipt of the watch. M. afterwards purchased a horse for one R., at his request, for £4 10s. R. objected to the horse, and M. agreed to keep it himself, and subsequently sold it at a loss of 15s. He informed the book-keeper at the time of the sale that the horse must be put down to him, and tendered the amount of £4 10s. in payment for it after his discharge, but the book-keeper would not accept the money. McK. and B., after M.'s discharge, prosecuted him on two warrants for stealing the saddle and embezzling the £3 15s., the difference between £4 10s. and 15s. The cases were heard at the Police Court, and dismissed. M. then sued for malicious prosecution, and the defence was that M. had no authority to lend saddles of the firm to other than customers without authority; and that he had been strictly forbidden to buy horses at the sale yards on his own account, and that if he did he should at once have entered the transaction in a book given him for the purpose. A verdict was given for M. on both counts. A rule nisi for a new trial was granted on the ground that the jury should have been directed to find for the defendants on the first count; and that the judge who directed the jury to say whether the defendants, in instituting the prosecution, acted on a belief that the facts showed reasonable and probable cause for the prosecution was wrong in his direction, and that if reasonable and probable cause existed, and was known to the defendants, it did not matter whether they acted on that knowledge or from malice alone. Held that the judge was right in his direction, and rule discharged. Mansergh v. McKersie, 1 A.J.R., 114.

Questions for Court and Jury—Onus Probandi.] —Per Higinbotham, J.—The question of reasonable and probable cause in an action for malicious prosecution is a question purely of law, to be determined by the Court only where the facts present to the defendant's mind when he instituted the proceedings are simple and undisputed, and the inference to be drawn from such facts are clear and not doubtful. Whenever the facts, from which reasonable and probable cause is to be deduced, are complicated, or disputed, or it is doubtful whether the defendant believed the facts, it is the duty of the Judge, before he decides the law, to take the opinion of the jury upon the knowledge and belief of the defendant as a question of fact; or he may expressly tell the jury that reasonable and probable cause exists, or does not exist, according as they find that the defendant had, or had not, knowledge or belief in the facts upon which he relies as a justification. The defendant must both have a knowledge of, and a belief of the sufficiency of facts justifying a prosecution, and it lies in the plaintiff to prove the absence of such knowledge or belief. Williamson v. M'Ravey, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 487; 2 A.L.T., 102.

Charge of Assault—Belief—Misdirection.]—A. charged B. with an assault and the charge was dismissed. B. sued A. for malicious prosecution, and the County Court Judge omitted to state to the jury what an assault is as a matter of law, and told the jury that A. must know whether he had been assaulted. Held (dissentiente Higinbotham, J.) that it was a misdirection, that the Judge should have stated what constituted an assault, and so have afforded the jury an opportunity of applying the evidence before them to the offence complained of, and so deciding whether the offence had been committed, or whether A. had reasonable and probable grounds for his belief that it had been committed. Mitchell v. Bamford, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 96; 2 A.L.T., 127.

How Judge Should Direct Jury.]—In an action for malicious prosecution, the Judge must not merely tell the jury what is the law on the subject, but must also explain to them how the law applies to the facts of the particular case before them, and that if they should find one way there would be evidence of reasonable cause, but if the other way, there would not. If he merely tell them the law, the verdict may be set aside for non-direction. Lyon v. Browne, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 247.

Where Malicious Prosecution Begins and False Imprisonment Ends.]—L., a servant in C.'s employ, was sent upstairs into C.'s room to get a handkerchief, and shortly afterwards a brooch was missed from the room. C. sent for a detective, and gave L. into custody. On the way to the watch-house, L. had a conversation with C., in which she said, "If you look in the wardrobe you'll find the brooch." L. sued C. for malicious prosecution as a first count, and false imprisonment as a second. The Judge told the jury that in the second count they need not regard the above-mentioned conversation. The jury returned a verdict for defendant on the first count, and for plaintiff, with damages, on the second. Held, on rule nisi for a new trial, that the conversation was properly withdrawn from the jury on the second count, as the false imprisonment commenced at the house, and this conversation, occurring afterwards, could not affect the question of reasonable and probable cause. Langan v. Clarke, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 252; N.C., 66.

II. Other Points.

Against whom Action may be Brought.]—An incorporated company is capable of such malice as is necessary to sustain an action for malicious prosecution, and accordingly an action will lie against such a company. Youngsdale v. Keogh, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 197.

Criminal Proceedings Instituted by Agent—Liability of Principal.]—L. was manager of a company of which the defendants were directors. At his resignation, a difficulty occurred as to the giving up of his books, and the defendants instructed a solicitor to take steps for the recovery of the books. L. was, on the advice of counsel, charged with stealing the books, S., one of the defendants, expressing his dissent from the proceedings. The charge against L. was dismissed. L. sued the defendants for malicious prosecution, and recovered a verdict of £125, a verdict being returned in favour of S. Held, on rule nisi for a new trial, that, as the defendants (excepting S.) had set the law in motion, they were answerable, even though the subsequent steps had been taken under the advice of counsel; that they might have protested, as S. did, against criminal proceedings being taken; and that it was no defence for them to allege that their resolutions and instructions only contemplated civil proceedings, and not criminal. Rule refused. Lennox v. Langdon, 3 A.J.R., 25.

Conspiracy to Depreciate Value of Company's Shares—Atcion against the Company.]—An information was, at the instance of the directors of a mining company, laid against T. before a J.P. for conspiracy to depreciate the value of the shares of the company. T. was committed for trial, but the Crown refused to file an information against T. T. sued the company for the malicious prosecution. Held that the object of spreading the reports by which value of the shares was depreciated was an object which affected the shareholders merely and not the company as distinct from the shareholders, and that the institution of proceedings by the directors in respect of an injury to the shareholders was outside the scope of their authority, for which they were individually liable and not the company. Rule absolute for a nonsuit. Thurling v. North Cornish Coy., 3 V.R. (L.,) 236; 3 A.J.R., 113.

Evidence of Termination of Prosecution in Plaintiff's Favour—Judgment of General Sessions.]—The evidence necessary to prove a determination of the proceedings in plaintiff's favour in a prosecution before General Sessions for larceny is a judgment drawn up in regular form, or a certificate under the "Statute of Evidence" (No. 197,) Sec. 23, or a duly authenticated copy of the judgment; the minute in the Court book is not sufficient. Haynes v. Ware, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 272.

For what Action will Lie—Maliciously Exhibiting Articles of the Peace.]—An action will lie for maliciously causing a summons to be issued against another to appear before justices to show cause why such person should not be bound over to keep the peace towards the person obtaining the summons, where the person charged has obeyed the summons, and after both parties have been heard, the complaint has been dismissed. Gooley v. Curtain, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 226.

Three Statements Separated, which might have been Joined—Plaintiff supporting One entitled to go to the Jury.]—In an action for malicious prosecution on a charge for perjury, set out in a paragraph of three sentences, which might be taken as three members of one passage, or might be taken separately, and all of which might have been included in one indictment, under three assignments of perjury; or portions of the whole might have been severally comprised in three separate counts, the plaintiff offered evidence which would entitle him to a verdict on one of the sentences. Held that he was entitled to go to the jury without establishing similar proof as to the remainder of the paragraph. Moran v. Lyons, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 379.

Evidence of Previous good Conduct Inadmissible—Count for Charging with Misconduct—New Trial.]—In an action for malicious prosecution, the declaration contained a count for malicious prosecution, and a second count for causing the Steam Navigation Board to charge plaintiff with misconduct. Evidence of plaintiff's previous good conduct was tendered and admitted, and defendant obtained a verdict on that count, but plaintiff obtained a verdict on first count. Held that such evidence was inadmissible, inasmuch as the charge was not of general misconduct, but only of habitual misconduct while on the ship. Rule absolute for a new trial. Tait v. Snewin, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 374; 1 A.L.T., 58. See also S.C., ante column.

Evidence.]—Evidence is inadmissible in an action for malicious prosecution, even in cross-examination, of a statement made by the magistrate, in dismissing the information that he thought a primâ facie case had been made out, but he would not commit in the face of certain letters of the prosecutor. Hickey v. O'Keefe, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 400.

MANDAMUS.

I. Where Writ Lies.

To Judge of County Court — "County Court Statute" (No. 345,) Secs. 83, 90, 120—Attachment for Disobedience of Decree—Refusal of Judge to State Case or set aside Order for Attachment.]—T., a defendant in an Equity suit, had a decree pronounced against him and was imprisoned for disobedience to the decree, against which no appeal was made. The County Court Judge refused to state a case or to set aside order for attachment. The Court granted a mandamus for judge to state a special case. Regina v. Pohlman, ex parte Thomson, 3 A.J.R., 104.

To Judge of County Court—Trespass to Mining Claim — Concurrent Jurisdictions.] — Where a judge is vested with authority to hear a case, he is bound to hear it. B. sued F. in the County Court for trespass to a mining claim, but the judge struck out the case on the ground that the remedy was in the Court of Mines, and that, therefore, the County Court had no jurisdiction. Mandamus granted. Regina v. Dunne, ex parte Baillie, 3 V.R. (L.,) 239; 3 A.J.R., 110, 118.

To County Court Judge—When it Lies.]—A mandamus will not lie to compel the judge of a County Court, who has irregularly altered a judgment for one party to a judgment for the other, to issue execution upon the original judgment, so long as the altered judgment remains on the record. Ex parte M'Ewan, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 9.

And see Regina v. Leech, ex parte Ah Poy, ante column 254.

To Judge of Court of Mines.]—The Court is bound to grant the prerogative writ, when satisfied that there will be a failure of justice unless it is granted. A judge of a district Court of Mines made a decree in favour of a company, and this was affirmed with slight variations on appeal to the Chief Judge. The cause was removed by certiorari into the Supreme Court, and the decree quashed. When the suit came before the District Court Judge he refused to hear it, on the ground that the decision of the Chief Judge, which by Sec. 173 of Act No. 291 is made "final," was not quashed. Held that the order of the Chief Judge fell with the quashing of the decree, and rule absolute for mandamus to compel the Judge of District Court to proceed with the hearing. Regina v. Rogers, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 138.

To Judge of District Court of Mines—Act No. 446, Secs. 17, 20.]—Per Stawell, C.J. (in Chambers.) Where the Judge of the District Court has a statutory discretion to hear an appeal from the warden or not in consequence of an omission in the proceedings, the Judge in Chambers will not interfere by mandamus. Renwick v. Hyde, 1 A.L.T., 77.

To Compel Clerk of Court of Mines to Issue Certificate of Registration.]—The Court granted a mandamus compelling B., a clerk of the Court of Mines, to issue a certificate of registration to a mining company, which had been registered by his predecessor. Regina v. Bartrop, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 84.

Warden—To Compel Execution of Decree of Court of Mines.]—Where a decree was made by a Court of Mines, and the warden refused to put parties in possession of a claim under the decree, on the ground that there was a discrepancy between the decree and a map referred to in it, Held that mandamus was not the proper remedy, the proper remedy being an application to the Court of Mines. In re Cogdon, ex parte M'Dermott, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 139.

To Warden.]—C. summoned a company before a warden to obtain a declaration of forfeiture to their claim, and the warden dismissed it on the ground that there was an application for a lease of the same land pending; the Chief Judge on a special case held that this application was no answer to the plaint, and still the warden refused to adjudicate. Mandamus granted. Regina v. Strutt, ex parte Constable, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 186.

To Warden.]—Where an order had been made by a warden finding that complainant was entitled to possession, but the warden refused to order possession to be given to him because there was pending an application by a third party for a mining lease of the same ground, Held that mandamus was not the proper remedy, as the warden had already adjudicated, but the Court granted a certiorari to quash the order which was held to be wrong. Regina v. Orme, ex parte Droscher, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 343.

To Surveyor to Survey Claim—Act No. 291, Sec. 47.]—Regina v. Stephenson, ex parte Black, N.C. 22, post under MINING—Mining Boards, Officers, and Bye-Laws.

To Justices—Where Applicable.]—Where justices improperly refused to grant a pawnbroker's license, and an application was made in the alternative for a rule nisi for a mandatory order under Sec. 138 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," or for a writ of mandamus to compel them to issue such license, Held that mandamus was the proper remedy, and that Sec. 138 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," was inapplicable, since the justices had heard and refused the application. Ex parte Mendelssohn, 2 A.L.T., 45.

To Justices—Refusing to Make Adjudication.]—Where justices, although satisfied with the character of an applicant for a pawnbroker's license, nevertheless refused the application, Held that, as there had been no adjudication on the matter, the proper remedy was by mandamus, and not by appeal. Ex parte Nybery, 4 A.L.T., 78.

To Justices—Objection Raised Informally.]—If justices have jurisdiction in a matter, the fact that an objection, on which they dismiss an application, is raised informally is not a ground for mandamus. Regina v. Alley, ex parte Guess, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 19; 4 A.L.T., 150.

And see under JUSTICE OF THE PEACE—Compelling Justices to do Duty—and LICENSING ACTS.

To Chairman of General Sessions—Appellant not Prejudiced by Clerk of Petty Sessions Failing to Forward Recognisances.]—Regina v. Pohlman, ex parte Cobb, 3 A.J.R., 38. Post under SESSIONS—Appeal from Justices, &c.

To Chairman of General Sessions to State Special Case—Act No. 267, Sec. 135.]—Regina v. Pohlman, ex parte Bagshaw, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 208. Post under SESSIONS—Appeal and Reviewing Decision, &c.

To Road Board Council to Issue Slaughtering License—"Abattoirs Statute 1869," Sec. 28.]—The "Abattoirs Statute 1869" took the power to grant slaughtering licenses from justices and conferred it upon local councils. E. had held a license from the justices, and applied to the council for one after the passing of the Act, but it was refused. Sec. 28 of the Act allowed licenses to be refused when the character of the applicant was exceptionable, or the site of the slaughter-house objectionable; but the council did not assign their reasons for the refusal. On a rule nisi for a mandamus to compel the council to grant the license, Held that the council must be assumed to have exercised a reasonable judgment in refusing the application, and rule refused. Regina v. The Caulfield Road Board, 1 A.J.R. 170.

To Rate-collector to Compel Receipt of Rate Tendered—"Shires Statute 1869," Secs. 57, 68.]—Regina v. Black, ex parte Twomey, 5 A.J.R., 82. Post under RATES—Other Points.

To Compel Municipal Council to Make a Rate to Satisfy Judgment Obtained against Council.]—Regina v. Oakleigh Shire, ex parte Wilson, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 67; 5 A.L.T., 195. Post under RATES—Validity of Rate.

To Road Board—Compelling Payment of Officer's Salary.]—A mandamus will lie to compel payment of the salary of the clerk of a district road board, who has been illegally dismissed from office, although he has not in fact performed the duties of his office between his illegal dismissal and his legal removal from office. Regina v. Keilor District Road Board, 1 V.R. (L.,) 14; 1 A.J.R., 29.

To Borough Council—Compelling Payment of Officer's Salary.]—On a return made by a borough to a writ of mandamus commanding the mayor and councillors of the borough to pay to one J.I. a sum claimed as salary for services rendered as surveyor and superintendent of public works, Held, (1) that it was not necessary for the claimant to first ascertain the sum due by an action against the corporation; (2) that the denial of his mere appointment, when it was admitted that he was a necessary officer and his work necessary work, was insufficient as a defence; (3) that it was no defence that the corporation had not then the books which would enable it to ascertain the precise truth of the matters alleged in the writ; (4) that the allegation that J. I. had received and retained out of the rates and had not accounted for moneys enough to satisfy his claim was no defence, it not appearing that he was ever called upon to account for such moneys, or that he had then any moneys of the corporation in his hands; (5) that an allegation that a former mayor of the borough had paid J. I. sums equal to his claim was no defence, it not being alleged that such sums were paid on account of the claim; (6) that the fact that an action was then pending by J.I. against the corporation was no answer; but the Court held that it was a good matter of defence that, as a matter of fact, there had been no estimate of the money required for this claim prepared under the Act No. 184, Sec. 180, or other compliance with Secs. 186—190, of that Act, in respect of the money required for the claim; that there were no funds applicable to the claim, and that none could be made applicable, unless by illegally striking and levying a retrospective rate to meet it. On the whole, the Court considered the return insufficient, except as to the part which stated that there were no funds available unless raised by a retrospective rate, and intimated that if it were desired to traverse that statement as a matter of fact, the proper application could be made; and that as matters were at the then stage judgment should be for the defendant borough. Regina v. Mayor of Footscray, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 9.

Mandamus for Payment of Salary of a Dismissed Officer of a Municipality—Granted where Amount Calculable with Certainty.]—Regina v. East Collingwood, ante column 214.

Mandamus to Compel Council to hold an Election —Councillor Declared Elected not Taking Seat.]—In re Cordell, ex parte Walsh, ante column 227.

To Municipal Council—Dismissal of Secretary—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 519.]—The Court will not grant a mandamus to compel a municipal council to pay the salary of its secretary with whom there is a dispute as to the propriety of his dismissal, for such dispute is a "difference" within Sec. 519 of the "Local Government Act 1874," the cognisance of which belongs exclusively to the Minister. Regina v. Shire of Bulla, ex parte Daniel, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 214.

"Common Schools Act" (No. 149,) Sec. 6, Subsec. 4—Application of Funds of Board of Education.]—Sub-sec. 4, Sec. 6, enacts that one of the duties of the board shall be "to see that the moneys apportioned from the Consolidated Revenue for the purpose of public education be applied to the objects for which they are granted." Application was made for a rule nisi for a mandamus to compel the board to "see to the payment" of certain salaries of teachers. Held, it being a mere question of which is to be the ruling authority as to the retention of a teacher, and the Court finding that the board had large powers, and that there was no legal duty which it could specify and direct the board to perform, it had no power to grant the mandamus. Rule nisi refused. In re Board of Education, ex parte Stevenson, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 133.

To Registrar of Titles.]—See under TRANSFER OF LAND.

To Master-in-Equity under "Duties on Estates Act" (No. 388.)]—Armytage v. Wilkinson, ante column 393.

II. PRACTICE IN OBTAINING WRIT.

Materials on which Application is Made.]—A writ of mandamus was issued commanding the defendants to certify under 17 Vict. No. 31, Sec. 22, that H. "had made a good title to the satisfaction of the council unto certain lands specified in the writ, and which had been taken for local improvements." A rule nisi was obtained to quash the writ on one ground among four that the "writ asked for more than was authorised by the rule under which it was issued." On argument a preliminary objection was raised that the rule nisi purported to be drawn up on reading the writ, an affidavit of the town clerk, and "the affidavits, rules, orders, and proceedings of the Court in the cause," and that the general reference was insufficient. The Court reserved its opinion on the preliminary point, and allowed the other affidavits to be used, and the general objections argued, and then discharged the rule on the preliminary objection, leave being reserved to apply again. A fresh rule nisi was obtained on the first three of the four former grounds, a preliminary objection was taken that a second application could not be made on fresh materials. Held that the merits were not considered in the first application, but the preliminary objection only; that the case did not come within the principle that "parties are at once to bring the best evidence;" that the writ was bad, on the ground that it was larger than the rule granting it. Rule absolute to quash mandamus. Hodgson v. Mayor of Fitzroy, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 118.

Address of Writ—Costs.]—A writ of mandamus or certiorari should be addressed generally to the justices of the bailiwick, and not to the chairman of General Sessions. Where the opposition to an application for mandamus was unsuccessful as regarded the issue of the writ, but where, upon a sufficient return to the writ, the Court was of opinion that the evidence supported the conviction, and discharged a rule nisi to quash the return, the prosecutor was ordered to pay the costs. Regina v. Pohlman, ex parte Bagshaw, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 208.

Costs—Appellant Falsely Swearing that Recognisances had been Entered into when they were Unnecessary.]—As a general rule where a mandamus is granted, the costs also are granted, but the Court has a discretion; and, where applicant falsely swore that he entered into recognisances to prosecute an appeal to General Sessions, and afterwards the position that such recognisances were unnecessary was assumed, the Court refused costs of the mandamus. Regina v. Pohlman, re Cobb v. Munro, 3 A.J.R., 109.

Rule nisi for Payment of Costs.]—The Court granted a rule nisi for payment of costs of a mandamus, although of opinion that the rule absolute should be made at once. Regina v. Pohlman, ex parte Cobb, 3 A.J.R., 72.

Costs—Mandamus Obeyed—Act No. 274 ("Common Law Procedure Statute") Secs. 244, 252.]—Where a mandamus had been obeyed, and there had been no return to it, the Court upon a rule nisi for payment of costs, made the rule absolute. Regina v. Pohlman, ex parte Murray, 5 A.J.R., 115.

Costs—Of Opposed Motion for Mandamus—Notice—An order for payment of the costs of an opposed motion for a mandamus will be made absolute in the first instance if notice of intention to apply has been given to the other side. Regina v. Leech, ex parte Ah Poy, 1 A.L.T., 151.

Costs—Where Less Amount Recovered than Amount Sought.]—Where an officer of a shire council obtained a mandamus for payment of fees of special audit, but recovered a less sum than he sought, the Court made the rule absolute with costs, notwithstanding that it was urged that this was a virtual compromise. Regina v. Shire of Pyalong, 4 A.J.R., 124.

Costs—Discretion of Court.]—Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers:)—The Court has a statutory discretion in the matter of the costs of any writ of mandamus, and will for a sufficient reason withhold them, but the Court will, in the exercise of its discretion, in general order costs to be paid by that party to the application who ultimately fails, to that party who ultimately succeeds, and it is no ground for exempting a party unsuccessfully resisting the issue of a mandamus that he relies upon the decision of the Court to which the mandamus is directed. Regina v. Bailes, ex parte Pickup, 6 A.L.T., 29.

The general rule that the costs of a mandamus go to the successful party, is subject to the exception that when a judicial officer is required by mandamus to do an act he shall not be fixed with the costs unless he has been guilty of improper conduct. So, too, a body exercising quasi-judicial functions is not to be fixed with costs unless guilty of improper conduct. Ibid.

Costs were refused against a Court of Revision which was ordered by mandamus to hear objections to a person's name appearing on a ratepayers' roll. Ibid.

Costs—Officer of Police.]—Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers):—The costs of an application for a mandamus are within the discretion of the Court, and there is no principle upon which an officer of police, who had successfully urged objections against the grant of a license, should be deprived of the costs of successfully opposing the issue of a writ of mandamus. Ex parte Slack, 6 A.L.T., 23.

"Markets Statute 1864" (No. 202,) Sec. 28.]—Fish are included in the words "other provisions usually sold in markets," contained in Sec. 28 of the "Markets Statute 1864." M'Pherson v. Freeman, 2 V.R. (L.,) 131; 2 A.J.R., 83.

Unlawfully Selling Vegetables in a Public Place—Queen's Wharf—"Markets Statute 1864," Sec. 28.]—C. was convicted under Sec. 28 of the "Markets Statute 1864" for unlawfully selling vegetables in a public place; to wit, the Queen's Wharf, being a place other than that appointed for the holding of a market. On order nisi for a prohibition, Held that the Queen's Wharf had not ceased to be a public place by reason of its having been severed from the corporation of the City of Melbourne and vested in the Melbourne Harbour Trust Commissioners; and conviction upheld. Ex parte Cooke, 4 V.L.R.(L.,) 1.

Selling a Horse Elsewhere than in Market—"Boroughs Statute 1869" (No. 359,) Sec. 360.]—O had a horse in a licensed sale yard, and, at the request of an intending buyer, the horse was taken from the yards for the purpose of trial, and subsequently driven to the yard of a hotel, where the bargain was completed and the horse sold by O. The yard of the hotel was not licensed as a market, and was not O.'s private property. Held that O. was liable under Sec. 360 of the "Boroughs Statute 1869" for selling a horse elsewhere than in the market, or in licensed yards, or on any private property. Cadden v. Osborne, 4 A.J.R., 153.

I. THE CONTRACT OF HIRING.

Yearly.]—B. engaged W. as salesman, and the agreement provided that W. should serve for a year at so much per week, and if he served for three months his coach fare should be paid him. W. served for a week, and was then informed that he was expected to serve in another capacity in addition to the one in which he was engaged, and not being able so to do was dismissed, receiving only one week's wages. W. sued on the ground that the agreement was for three months, and being allowed by the County Court Judge to amend his claim, so as to sue for the second week's wages, he did so, and B. paid a week's wages into Court, and a verdict was given for him. On appeal, it was contended that the agreement was a yearly one, and that W. was entitled to at least a week's notice. Held that the agreement was not a yearly one, and that W. could not be allowed a week's wages instead of notice, since he had not claimed it. Williams v. Beckett, 2 A.J.R., 114.

Construction of Contract—Wrongful Dismissal—Measure of Damages.]—By agreement in January 1853, G. contracted to serve defendant bank as clerk, or in any other situation the defendants might appoint, and so on from year to year, defendants paying a salary of £100 a year; the contract after the first year's service being determinable upon one month's previous notice. G. rose in the service, and after 20 years' service when occupying the position of teller, and receiving £400 a year, he was dismissed without notice. The defendants paid into Court one month's salary at rate of £400 a year, and another month's salary under the agreement, in lieu of notice. Held that if the increase of salary was evidence of a new agreement, the terms of the old agreement must be adhered to as far as possible, and that the measure of damages was the month's wages at the time of dismissal. Rule absolute for a nonsuit. Gilles v. Bank of Victoria, 3 V.R. (L.,) 46; 3 A.J.R., 35.

Wrongful Dismissal — Presumption of Yearly Hiring.]—F. had been employed by the defendant as a travelling inspector, being first engaged for three months, after which he continued in the employment without further arrangement. He was dismissed, and sued for wrongful dismissal. The company paid three months' salary into court, and the jury found a verdict for defendant. Held that the hiring was for three months and not for a year, and rule to enter verdict for plaintiff or for new trial discharged. Fox v. M'Mahon, 4 A.J.R., 86.

Dismissal—Notice.] — A contract of service which provides that the servant shall for weekly wages act as a drover, and be responsible for losses over and above 2 per cent. up to a term of two months' travelling, after which no responsibility is to be incurred, and travel in a certain direction, is not a contract for a fixed time, and is determinable upon giving reasonable notice; and on dismissal before the expiration of the two months the servant is entitled to damages only in respect of such reasonable notice, i.e., one week's notice. Dalgety v. Husband, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 432.

Wrongful Dismissal — Contract of Hiring—Term.]—Where an original contract of hiring was entered into for a year certain, and at its expiration, nothing being mentioned to the contrary, the engagement ran on, the presumption is that the period of service was to be for another year on the same conditions as those mutually binding on the parties during the previous year. Rule absolute for a new trial, where, under a a direction from the judge, the jury returned a verdict for defendant in an action brought for wrongful dismissal before the second year had expired. Bullock v. Wimmera Fellmongery Coy., 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 362; 1 A.L.T., 59.

Parol Agreement — Variance — Amendment— "Statute of Frauds."]—D. agreed verbally with the defendants to enter into their employ as manager for a year, to commence in December, 1882. He continued to act as manager till February, 1883, when he received a telegram from the defendants stating that "A. appointed manager, you remaining as traveller;" he continued to act as traveller until March, 1883, when he received a letter stating that his services were no longer required. D. declared on a contract for a year from 14th February, 1883 (date of the telegram). Held that the offer in the telegram when accepted, formed a new contract for hiring for so much of the year as remained unexpired on 14th February, and not for a-year from 14th February; that the variance between the contract proved and declared upon might be amended; and that the new contract was one made in February for less than a year, and not, therefore, within the "Statute of Frauds." Dale v. M'Culloch & Coy., 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 136.

II. Rights and Duties of Master and Servant.

"Master and Servant's Act," 9 Vict., No. 27—Engine Driver's Liability for Injuries.]—An engine driver in the course of his duty ran the engine off the line, and certain damage was done to the trucks and line. Held that the locomotive engine was not "goods, wares, work, or materials for work," committed to his charge within the meaning of the Act No. 27, and that the driver was not liable for the injuries committed, Semble that he was not a servant within the meaning of the Act. Sacre v. The Board of Land and Works, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 8.

Dismissal—Action for, Who may Maintain.]—Plaintiff was employed by a company to buy sheep for them during certain months, and was to be paid a certain sum per head on the sheep bought by him. Plaintiff entered upon his duties and bought a large number of sheep, and after incurring expenses was dismissed. Held that the plaintiff was not in the position of a servant so as to be able to maintain an action for wrongful dismissal; but that he was entitled to be reimbursed by the company for the expenses incurred by him before dismissal. Liscombe v. Echuca Meat Preserving Coy, 1 V.R. (L.,) 148; 1 A.J.R., 132.

Dismissal—Justification of.]—V. sued C. for wrongful dismissal, and recovered a verdict. C. justified on the ground of misconduct in refusing to work. It appeared that V. had written to C. requesting that a charwoman should be sent to clean out his room, and refusing to go on with his work unless certain "improprieties" were altered and an apology offered. Held that V. had not refused to work so as to make it a ground for justification, but that C. would have been entitled to dismiss V. for impertinence. Vardy v. Cuthbert, 3 A.J.R., 25.

Dismissal.]—A temporary infirmity incapacitating the servant from discharging his duties is not a ground for dismissing him before the expiration of the term agreed upon by the contract. Leake v. Holdsworth, 4 A.J.R., 86.

Dismissal—Disobedience—Damages.]—Where a discretion has been committed to a servant as to the giving of credit, and the master subsequently wrote letters insisting strictly on the instructions (i.e., as to credit being kept down) being followed, apparently ignoring the discretion, and dismissed the plaintiff (servant), thinking that amount of credit had increased, Held that the discretion not having been withdrawn the dismissal was wrongful, and that the direction that damages should be calculated upon the rate of wages under the agreement from the time of dismissal to the issue of the plaint summons, with reasonable damages for the breach of contract, and for board and lodging, was correct. Watson v. Ross, 5 A.J.R., 69.

Per Fellows, J.:—The County Court Judge was wrong in directing the jury that the damages should not exceed the wages which would have been earned up to the commencement of the action. Ibid.

Wrongful Dismissal—Damages.]—See Gilles v. Bank of Victoria, ante column 890 under The Contract of Hiring.

Wrongful Dismissal.]—See Fox v. M'Mahon, ante column 890.

Dismissal.]—In an action by a servant for wrongful dismissal, defendant pleaded that the servant had made a secret proposal to a third person to enter into a business in partnership, in competition with the master's business, and while in his master's service to divert custom from his master's business to that of the partnership. Held that the master was not bound to wait until the mischief in contemplation had been actually caused, and was justified in dismissing the servant. Langhorn v. Bennett, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 108.

Dismissal—Notice.]—See Williams v. Beckett; Dalgety v. Husband; ante column 890 under The Contract of Hiring.

Absenting from Service—Belief and Assertion of Right to Leave.]—A servant who absents himself from his employment under a bonâ fide, but mistaken belief that he has a right so to absent himself, is not liable to a conviction under Sec. 11 of the "Masters and Servants Statutes 1864," for unlawfully absenting himself. Regina v. Mollison, ex parte Crichton, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 144.

Quitting Service—Notice—"Master and Ssrvants Statute 1864," Sec. 11.]—W. engaged R. at weekly wages as a night miller and engine driver. Under the direction of a day miller in the same employment, R. gave W. about four days' notice and quitted his service. Held that R. was a servant within the meaning of the "Master and Servants Statute 1864," and was bound to give a week's notice, terminating at the end of some week of his engagement before leaving, and conviction under Sec. 11 of the Statute upheld. Regina v. Bayne, ex parte Rea, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 89.

Quitting Service—Bona fide Belief of Right—Question for Justices.]—The question whether a servant entertained a bonâ fide belief that he had a right to leave his master's service at a particular time is a question for justices, and the Court will not interfere with their determination on such a matter. Ibid.

Wages—When Payable.—Under an agreement as follows:—"The said G. agrees to engage, and the said W. agrees to serve, as boots, &c., and obey all lawful commands, for the term of six months, at wages, and at the rate of £1 per week with board. If the said W. should not remain for the said six months, his fare from M. to H. is to be deducted from his wages," each week's service is apportionable, and the servant is entitled to be paid weekly, a sufficient sum being deducted and retained for the coach-fare till the six months expire. Gaffney v. Werner, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 6.

Complaint for Wages not stated to have been on Oath—Act No. 198, Sec. 16.]—In a complaint for the recovery of wages under Act No. 198, Sec. 16, in which an order was made for the amount claimed, it appeared that neither in the summons nor in the order was it stated that complaint was on oath. Held that order was bad, even though an affidavit stated that the complaint was made on oath. Order quashed. Regina v. Pearson, ex parte Hall, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 289; 1 A.L.T., 42.

Where Master not Liable—Servant a Volunteer.]—If a servant volunteers to do work which his master had not required him to do, and which the servant never undertook to do, the relationship of master and servant does not exist between them as to that work; and if in doing such work the servant sustains injury from the imperfect or improper condition of machinery used in the work, or from other causes, the master is not responsible for such injury. Knox v. Stephens, 1 V.R. (L.,) 102; 1 A.J.R., 106.

When Master not Liable—Conveying Servant to place of Work.]—Bateman v. Moffatt, 5 W.W. & a'B. (L.,) 125; 1 A.J.R., 10; L.R. 3 P.C. 115; 1 A.J.R., 12; post under NEGLIGENCE—Actions—Evidence and other Matters.

When Master not Liable.]—A workman is not entitled to recover against a shipowner for damages sustained in his employ under circumstances which would entitle a visitor to the ship to recover damages. M'Lachlan v. Service, 2 V.R. (L.,) 198; 2 A.J.R., 116.

M., a labourer, employed on board a vessel as carpenter, while the vessel was loading, after dark, fell down an open hatchway near which no light was placed, and thereby sustained serious injury. Held that the owners of the vessel were not liable. Ibid.

Dangerous State of Ladder—What Necessary to Render Master Liable.]—In an action by a servant for injuries sustained by him owing to the dangerous state of a ladder belonging to his master (a mining company), it is not sufficient for him to prove that he was in the employ of the defendants, and that he sustained injury from the dangerous state of a ladder which belonged to the defendants, and was used by him in his employ, but he must also prove that the defendants, or their deputy, were aware of the dangerous state of the ladder, and, with such knowledge, neglected to repair it; or that the master knowingly employed incompetent persons to construct or fix the ladder. North Shenandoah Coy. v. Fallover, 4 A.J.R., 109.

And see under MINING.

Obvious Defect in Machine — Contributory Negligence.]—A servant was injured in his master's employ in working a machine which had a defect so far obvious that, by using reasonable means, he might have avoided the danger. Held that the master was not liable. Per Higinbotham, J.—A servant in such circumstances must make reasonable efforts to avoid danger, otherwise he may be held to contribute to any injury arising from the defect. Litton v. Thornton, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 4.

Neglect of Competent Foreman.]—Where a master appoints proper and competent persons to superintend and direct the work, and furnishes them with proper appliances for performing such work, if he do not personally interfere, he is not liable for injuries sustained by any of his servants in consequence of the negligence of any servant so appointed to superintend and direct. Brown v. Board of Land and Works, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 414, 429; 4 A.L.T., 103.

Held, per Stawell, C.J., and Williams, J., that the Board of Land and Works is not liable for injury caused to one of its engine-drivers owing to the neglect of a competent foreman in charge of one of the repairing sheds for locomotives, to make good a defect in a locomotive reported to him by such engine-driver. Held, per Higinbotham, J., that the Board, having a general duty of supervision and control of railway officers cast upon them by law, are liable for a neglect of that duty by their officer, who was appointed to represent them in directing and superintending the repair which the engine required, such neglect having caused the injury to the driver; that the question whether the officer so appointed to direct and superintend is in the position of a representative of the master so as to fix the latter with liability for his negligence is one of mixed law and fact, in determining which the jury may be guided by the definition given in the English "Employers' Liability Act 1880." Also that the Board is liable, in such cases, not only for the supply in the first instance to the drivers, in a sound condition, but also for the continued maintenance of engines in a state in which they would not become dangerous. Ibid.

Injuries to Servants in Mines.]—See under MINING.

Where Master Liable.]—B. was engaged by M. to carry wheat from S. to another place. B. was to take the wheat from M.'s mill at S., and in order to do so backed his cart up to a shoot down which the bags were shot. During the process of loading B. was injured by the negligence of M.'s men. Held that though B. was in M.'s employment, it was under a separate contract from the other men—a distinct agreement to carry goods. Bellis v. Maxfield, 1 A.J.R., 35.

What is Common Employment — Liability for Injuries Caused by Negligence of Employer.] — C., a shipwright, was employed by a railway company to effect repairs on the line, and was conveyed in the company's trains to and fro from his residence to the scene of his labours. On one occasion C. was travelling to his residence after his day's work in one of the company's trains after dark, and there was no tail-light on the train, which was drawn by an engine which owing to the defective state of its wheels did not get under way as soon as it otherwise would. The train was late owing to the necessity of changing engines, the defective engine by which the train was drawn being substituted for a still more defective one, and the original engine started after the train and ran into it at an intermediate station, and thereby caused damage to T. It was proved that if a tail-light had been put on the train the collision might have been avoided, but owing to the defective state of the engine drawing the train, the collision was more serious than it would otherwise have been, because the train by reason of such defective state did not get under way sufficiently to lessen the shock from the engine behind. The absence of a tail-light was attributable to the negligence of the company's servants. Held that T. was a servant of the company in common employment with those who had neglected to attach the tail-light; but, that though the collision could have been avoided if the tail-light had been affixed to the train, and if that had been the sole cause of the injury to T. the company would not have been liable for the default of T.'s fellow servants, yet since the disturbance of the time arrangement for starting was caused by the defective state of the engines, the company was liable, and that the aggravation of the injury to T., caused by the defective state of the engine drawing the train, was evidence to go to the jury of actionable negligence. Chandler v. Melbourne and Hobson's Bay Railway Coy., 2 V.R. (L.,) 71; 2 A.J.R., 1, 53.

What is Common Employment.]—M., a workman in the mine of a company was injured owing to the insecure fastening of a ladder which it was the duty of the manager of the company to see properly secured. Held that the manager was not a fellow servant of M., but was the representative of the company, which was therefore responsible for the negligence which caused injury to M. Band of Hope and Albion Consols v. Mackay, 2 V.R. (L.,) 158; 2 A.J.R., 112.

For acts of an incompetent servant, a master is not responsible to a fellow servant, but he is in the case of a careless servant. C. was employed by W. as a servant, and was injured. The accident was caused by the carelessness and negligence of G., a fellow servant, and there was evidence of the machinery being defective. C. sued W. and obtained a verdict, and the County Court Judge refused a motion for a nonsuit. Held, on appeal, that there was evidence to go to the jury and appeal dismissed. Chambers v. Willey, 3 V.R. (L.,) 17; 3 A.J.R., 30.

III. LIABILITY OF MASTER FOR NEGLIGENCE OR TORTIOUS ACT OF SERVANTS.

Where Master not Liable—Insufficient Evidence that Wrong Doers were in Defendant's Employ.]—Defendants, contractors for the formation of a railway, were sued in trespass for damages to fences outside the line of railway. It was proved that men, as to whom general evidence was received, that they were called defendants' labourers, had committed the trespass complained of, but none of them were called, nor were the foremen or other persons examined to identify the men, or prove that they were in the defendants service. Held, that defendants were not liable for the trespass. Newcomen v. O'Grady, 2 V.R. (L.,) 214; 2 A.J.R., 123.

Shipmaster—Liability for Injuries through the Negligence of the Crew.]—A shipmaster is only a fellow servant with the crew, and is not therefore liable for injuries caused by negligence of the crew when the ship is in port. Clancy v. Harrison, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 437.

Nor for injuries to a passenger when the ship is at sea. Stackpoole v. Betridge, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 302; 1 A.L.T., 43.

Injury Caused by Servant Acting Outside the Scope of his Authority.]—A master is not liable for injuries caused by his servant while acting outside the scope of an authority given to him by his master. Heard v. Flannagan, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 1.

H. purchased from F. a load of hay out of a stack, and employed one R. to cut out and load the hay. R. cut out sufficient to form a load, went away some short distance, smoked his pipe, and then placed it in the pocket of his waistcoat, which contained some loose matches, and laid the waistcoat on the ground near the stack. He then went away to procure some lashing, and, during his absence, the heat of the pipe ignited the matches, and the stack caught fire and was destroyed. Held that smoking, being outside the authority given to R., H. was not liable for the loss of the stack. Ibid.

For Fraud.]—See PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.

MAXIMS.

Ignorantia Legis Neminem Excusat.]—For an instance where the Court was disposed to mitigate the force of this maxim in the case of a person who had prepared a transfer, and pleaded ignorance of the Statute 11 Vict. No. 33, which forbids a person not being a barrister, solicitor, or conveyancer from preparing a conveyance, &c., see In re Strong, ex parte Campbell, 4 A.J.R., 150.

Caveat Emptor.]—Where a purchaser purchased an allotment which vendor purported to sell, but really obtained a transfer and certificate of title to another allotment, entered into possession and built, and was subsequently evicted, Held, in an action for deceit, that, there being no evidence of fraud, the maxim caveat emptor applied. Hunt v. Johnson, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 401; 1 A.L.T., 98.

MEDICINE AND MEDICAL PRACTITIONERS.

Statutes—
Various Acts repealed by Act No. 158.
"Medical Practitioners Act 1862" (No. 158,) repealed by Act No. 262.

I. REGISTRATION OF PRACTITIONERS.

Mandamus to Reinstate a Name on the Register—"Medical Practitioners Act 1865" (No. 262,) Secs. 5, 7.]—M., a duly qualified practitioner, had had his name erased from the register under Sec. 5, because he did not return an answer to a letter posted to his last address making inquiries authorised by the Act under Sec. 7. It appeared that the letter never reached M., but found its way back to the Medical Board through the "dead letter" department of the Post-office. Held, that the board, before it could strike out a name, must be satisfied that such a letter has reached its destination, and that M.'s name was improperly removed. Order for mandamus to restore M.'s name to the register. Regina v. Medical Board, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 139.

Mandamus to Register Diploma.]—T. had obtained in England the diploma of the Royal College of Physicians which was erased on account of his advertising. He then studied at the University of Giessen, where he obtained the degree of M.D. The Medical Board of Victoria refused to insert his name on the register, alleging that the diploma was not in the usual form. Rule nisi for a mandamus refused, the Court intimating that the applicant should obtain other evidence from persons already registered from that university as to the sufficiency of the diploma. Regina v. Medical Board, ex parte Thomas, 3 A.J.R., 81.

Act No. 262, Sec. 9—Schedule III., para. 13—Mandamus to Register.]—The Court will not grant a mandamus to register a medical practitioner in the absence of a specific demand by the applicant to be allowed to attend personally before the medical board. Semble, it is necessary for such applicant to prove that he has passed through a particular medical school or schools. In re the Medical Board, ex parte Yee Quock Ping and Bottrell, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 112.

II. LIABILITIES AND POWERS OF PRACTITIONERS.

Unlawfully Practising—Act No. 262, Secs. 2, 11—Proof of Qualification—Act No. 158, Sec. 14—Criminal Charge—Admissibility of Evidence— N. was summoned and convicted under Sec. 11 of the Act No. 262 for "unlawfully pretending" to be a medical practitioner. N. proved by his own evidence that he had passed through a proper course of instruction, and had practised regularly since 1853; that in 1868 he sent documents and evidence of these facts to the medical board, which refused them with an intimation that they should have been sent while the Act of 1862 (No. 158) was in force. Held by Williams and Barry, JJ., (dissentiente Stawell, C.J.), that the board constituted under the Act No. 158 was the only body authorised to examine N.'s qualifications and grant him a diploma which would exempt him from liability to penalties, and that not having proved before that board the matters specified in Sec. 14 of Act No. 158, his privilege to practise was lost by his delay, and as he had acquired no privilege under No. 158 he was not protected by Sec. 2 of Act No. 262; that this being a criminal charge his own evidence was inadmissible, but the majority of the Court being of opinion that N. could not better his case if it were remitted to the justices, conviction affirmed. Norris v. Smallman, 3 V.R. (L.,) 25 ; 3 A.J.R., 32.

Act No. 262, Sec. 11—Use of Name of Doctor of Medicine—Defective Conviction.]—A conviction under Sec. 11 of the Act No. 262 adjudging a penalty and costs for the use of the name of doctor of medicine by an unqualified practitioner is bad if it does not state to whom the costs are to be paid. Regina v. Hartney, ex parte Fischer, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 52 ; 2 A.L.T., 125.

Negligence—"Lunacy Statute" (No. 309,) Sec. 11—Giving Certificate of Insanity.]—Before signing a certificate under Sec. 11 of Act No. 309, it is the duty of a medical man to examine the lunatic personally as well as to make inquiries. The question whether the examination made is a sufficient one is entirely for the jury, and the Court will not interfere with their finding. It is not the duty of the judge to put the question whether there was reasonable and probable cause for the giving of the certificate. Smith v. Iffla, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 435.

Medical Practitioner—Not Liable for Wrong Opinion as to Person's Sanity.]—A medical practitioner is not liable for the irregular proceedings of justices upon an incorrect certificate given by him as to the sanity of a person. Roberts v. Hadden, 4 A.J.R., 167, 181.

A constable laid an information that a person who was wandering at large was deemed to be a lunatic and was not under proper care and control. The information added another fact not required by the "Lunacy Statute," viz., that the person was unfit to be at large. Upon this information a justice made an order requiring H., a medical practitioner, to visit and examine the alleged lunatic, and report upon the matters of the information. Instead of reporting upon these matters, H. reported (or certified) that the subject of the examination was a "dangerous lunatic." This not being the question to be referred to H., the justice should have ignored the report, but instead he made an order to bring the alleged lunatic before two justices, and he was committed under Sec. 8 of the Statute. Being subsequently discharged as not having been a lunatic, he proceeded against H. for negligence in reporting him to be a dangerous lunatic. Held that, if the justice could have legally acted on the report, H. might have been liable, but that since the justice had no right to do so it was his act alone, and H. was not liable. Ibid.

Fees—Who may Recover.]—A surgeon can recover fees in a medical case, but a surgeon who holds himself out as, or is in fact, and acts as a physician, cannot recover such fees. Southee v. Kirk, I W. & W. (L.,) 200.

Act No. 262, Sec. 12—Recovery of Fees—Prohibition—Objection Taken too Late.]—Justices had made an order for the payment of the amount of a medical practitioner's fee. On an order nisi for a prohibition, Held that under the Act the proof of registration as a legally qualified practitioner was a condition precedent to the recovery of his fees, but such an objection must be taken before the justices at the proper time, and must be made a ground of the order nisi. Regina v. Shaw, ex parte Selim, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 201 ; 5 A.L.T., 70.

Agreement for Remuneration for Giving Evidence as to Plaintiff's Condition in an Action in Respect of Injuries.]—A medical practitioner made an express agreement with his patient, who was plaintiff in an action for damages in respect of injuries, that he should be remunerated for giving medical evidence as to the condition of the plaintiff, whom he had examined for the purposes of such evidence. Held that he was entitled to recover on such agreement a larger sum than the witnesses' fees fixed by the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865." Stoddart v. Pinnock, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 22.

Semble, that an agreement to take less than the amount agreed upon, in case the plaintiff should not succeed in the action, does not render the contract illegal. Ibid.

MERGER.

Of Debt of Three Joint Debtors in Specialty Debt of Two.]—A., B., and C. were, as joint importers of tea, liable for the full duty on it. B. and C. entered into a bond with Her Majesty the Queen to pay the full duty, with a condition that, if, after reciting that the duty had been lowered by a resolution of the Legislative Assembly, and that the duty so lowered had been paid, such resolutions were not confirmed, B. and C. should pay the full duty on the goods. The resolutions were not confirmed. In an action against A., who had not entered into the bond for the difference in duty (i.e., between the full amount and that paid,) Held that the simple contract debt of A., B., and C. was not merged in the special debt under the bond given by B. and C.; that the creditor's liability on the bond was not co-extensive with his remedy in the simple contract debt; and that A. was liable. Judgment on demurrers to the plea for the Crown. Regina v. Bowman and Henty v. The Queen, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 257.

Of Simple Contract Debt—Memorandum under Seal Providing for Mortgage.]—A simple contract debt does not become merged where collateral security is given by a deposit of title deeds together with a memorandum under seal providing that if the debtor be not immediately pressed for payment, he would, upon demand, execute an assurance to the creditor of the lands comprised in the title deeds, there being a proviso in the memorandum that nothing contained in it, or in any further assurance taken in pursuance of it, should prejudice any other security. Bank of Victoria v. M'Coll, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 163.

Of Acceptance in Deed.]—A stock mortgage contained a clause that any "acceptances" given or to be given by the mortgagor or any other person to the mortgagee in respect to the amount secured, should in no way prejudice or affect the stock mortgage, and that the mortgagee should have the same powers under the mortgage as if the acceptance had not been given, and that the acceptances should be deemed a further or collateral security with the mortgage, so far as regards the rights or securities of the mortgagee thereupon. Held that this clause must be taken as amounting to an agreement between the parties, that the remedy upon a promissory note of the mortgagor then overdue should not be merged in the mortgage. Synnot v. Parkinson, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 521.

Of Simple Contract in Deed.]—See Abbott v. Commercial Bank, ante column 82.

METROPOLIS.

Powers of City Council as regards Buildings—"Melbourne Building Act"—Bye-law—Consultation—Ultra Vires.]—It was enacted by a bye-law of the City of Melbourne, made under the "Building Act of the City of Melbourne" (13 Vict. No. 39,) that "every dwelling-house shall be built with a clear frontage to a street, and no such dwelling-house shall be so built as to intercept the clear street frontage of any dwelling-house previously built." S. was summoned for building a house not fronting a street more than 20 feet wide. Held that if the construction of the bye-law were that a house could not be built at all unless it fronted a street, the bye-law was ultra vires; but Semble that the right construction was that every house within a reasonable distance from a street should front that street; also, that the bye-law did not apply to a house fronting a park, but only to a house fronting a street. Regina v. Call, ex parte Seamark, 2 V.R. (L.,) 124; 2 A.J.R., 67.

Buildings—Person Building without Notice to Surveyor—"Melbourne Building Act," Sec. 10—Treble Fees.]—M. commenced to excavate the foundations of a building within the City of Melbourne without having given the notice to the surveyor as prescribed by Sec. 10 of the "Melbourne Building Act." He was convicted and fined, but the treble fees to the surveyor were not imposed. The building was not erected so that the fees could not be ascertained. M. paid the fine and obtained a rule nisi for a prohibition. Held that the conviction was wrong as the penalty could not be inflicted without providing for the payment of fees: and that the rule for a prohibition was not obtained from the Court too late, though made after payment of the fine, and after the refusal by a Judge in Chambers in vacation to grant a prohibition, the application to such Judge having been made before the fine was paid, since the application to the Judge was made in time, and the application to the Court was virtually to obtain the order refused in vacation, and must be considered as having been made in vacation. Regina v. Call, ex parte M'Donald, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 137.

I. Mines, Minerals, and Interests in Mines.

Breach of Rules by Company—Person Liable to Penalty—"Regulation of Mines Statute 1873," Sec. 5 (xi.)]—The word "owner" in Sec. 5 of the "Regulation of Mines Statute 1873" means legal manager, and the legal manager is the person liable to a penalty under that section, Sub-sec. xi., for the contravention, in the case of a mine under the control of such company, of the general rules prescribed by the Act, unless he can show that all necessary preventive measures have been adopted against such contravention. Curthoys v. Kilbride, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 265.

Liability of Manager—Act No. 480, Sec. 5, Sub-sec. 8.]—An accident occurred in a mine causing bodily injury to miners working therein. The complaint was framed under Sub-sec. 8 of Sec. 5, "by not securing or making safe for persons, &c., a drive and excavation"—i.e., under the first branch of the concluding clause, and alleging a personal contravention by the manager. Held that he was not liable, no personal contravention having been proved; and Semble, the words mean in the "mine," and are not restricted to the drive. Gibson v. Chalk, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 15.

[Compare Sec. 8, Sub-sec. 10, of Act No. 783.]

Where it was not urged in defence that the provisions of the Act No. 583 as to having the cages in use fitted with safety appliances were complied with, and the manager had told the directors that the apparatus was required, but had taken no further steps, Held that he was liable, as he had not taken "reasonable means to prevent the non-compliance." Stewart v. Berryman, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 116.

Accidsnt in Mine—Action by Widow of Deceased—"Statute of Wrongs 1865"—"Mines Regulation Act 1873," Secs. 2, 3, 5, 8.]—The action which, before the passing of the "Mines Regulation Act 1873," might have been brought by a miner injured in a mine, or by his executor for the benefit of his relatives, at common law or under the "Statute of Wrongs 1865," is governed by Sec. 8 of the former Act, and may, under that section, be brought for the benefit of the widow and children. The "Mines Regulation Act 1873" moreover, abrogates the doctrine that a master is not responsible to one servant for the act of another in the course of their common employment, as far as mining accidents are concerned. An action under the Act too, is sufficiently sustained by proof of the happening of the accident, unless the defendant can show how it happened, and that it was caused by something for which no one was to blame, or that it was the result solely of the deceased miner's neglect of the provisions of the Act, since the Act shifts the burden of proof. Kaye v. Ironstone Hill Lead G.M. Coy., 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 148.

[Compare Secs. 4 and 17 of Act No. 783.]

Accident in Mine—Contributory Negligence—Negligence of Fellow Servants—"Regulation of Mines Statute 1873."]—Where the accident to a miner has been caused by non-observance of the provisions of the "Mines Regulation Statute 1873," the owner is liable, even though the miner have been negligent, unless the non-observance of the provisions of the Statute were entirely attributable to such miner. But where the accident was not caused by non-observance of the provisions, the principles of the common law apply, except that the owner is expressly made answerable for the acts of a fellow servant of the injured miner, and contributory negligence on the part of the miner will be a good defence. Laurenson v. Count Bismarck G. M. Coy., 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 83.

Drive or Part of Mine—"Regulation of Mines Statute 1873," Sec. 2.]—A drive which has been worked out and is left unused is not a "drive" or part of the "mine" within the meaning of Sec. 2 of the "Regulation of Mines Statute 1873." Laurenson v. Count Bismarck G. M. Coy, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 83.

[Compare Sec. 3 of Act No. 783.]

Negligence of Person in Charge of Machinery—"Regulation of Mines Statute 1877."]—The "Regulation of Mines Statute 1877," Sec. 6, Sub-sec. xx., as to negligence of persons in charge of machinery in connection with the working of a mine, does not apply to the mere erection of machinery at a mine. Dunstan v. Stewart, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 175.

[Compare Sec. 8, Sub-sec. xxxi. of Act No. 783.]

Management of—Signalling—Act No. 583, Sec. 6, Sub-sec. x.]—Where a mining manager had employed as a means of communication from the top to the bottom, a mode of signalling by certain knocks with a hammer upon the centres of the top of the shaft, which was understood by the miners, and proved effective, Held that this was a sufficient compliance with the Act. Stewart v. Berryman, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 116.

[Compare Sec. 8, Sub-secs. xiii, xvi. of Act No. 783.]

Secs. 8 (xxix.) and 18 of the "Regulation of Mines and Mining Machinery Act 1883"—Construction—"Platforms"]—Quære, whether the word "platform" in Secs. 8 (xxix.) and 16 of the "Regulation of Mines and Mining Machinery Act 1883" means something attached to the ladder or to the side of the shaft. Campbell v. Parker's Extended Coy., 10 V.L.R. (M.,) 1.

Summons before Warden under Secs. 8 (xxix.) and 16 of the "Regulation of Mines and Mining Machinery Act 1883"—Vaguensss.]—See S.C. post under Practice in the Warden's Court.

Mining Accidsnt—Act No. 583 ("Regulation of Minss,") Ssc. 12.]—A miner was injured by a piece of timber intended to keep the pump-tube secure in the shaft, which had fallen from its position. The miner admitted that he had known of its being loose for nine months previously, and had not given information of the fact to the manager. Held that the plaintiff had not been guilty of contributory negligence in not reporting as dangerous what had existed so long without occasioning injury. Eureka Extended Coy. v. Allen, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 341.

Lease from Crown—"Quartz Reef Drainage Act" (No. 153.)]—The Act No. 153 only applies to "claims." Where a person had obtained a decree before the warden under the Act, against a company holding a mining lease from Crown, for money due as contribution for draining their "claim," a rule absolute was made prohibiting further proceedings. In re Clow, ex parte Hewitt, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 160.

[Compare Sec. 71, Sub-sec. xiv., of Act No. 291.]

Contribution Towards — How Recovered — "Drainage of Mines Act 1877," Sec. 3.]—Contribution under the "Drainage of Mines Act 1877" (No. 596,) Sec. 3, may be recovered from the owner of a mine on the same reef, although the machinery used for drainage purposes is also used for mining purposes. Wheal Terrill Q.M. Coy. v. Irwin, 6 V.L.R. (M.,) 11; 1 A.L.T., 176.

Order for Contribution — Duty of Warden — "Drainage of Mines Act 1877," Sec. 3.]—It is not imperative on a warden when making an order for contribution, under the "Drainage of Mines Act 1877," Sec. 3, to impose upon the owner of the machinery terms with regard to the efficient working thereof, with regard to the benefit of all parties. Ibid.

Right to Mine How Far it Passes by a Crown Grant.]—Per Molesworth, J.:—By the law of England, which is also the law of this country, all gold mines belong to the Crown; and that though the Crown may have granted the lands containing them to a subject without reservation, the gold under the grantee's land is not his, and neither he nor anybody else has a right against the Crown to take it. Millar v. Wildish, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 37, 43, 44.

A grant of Crown lands under 5 and 6 Vict., cap. 36, made before the passing of the Act 18 and 19 Vict., cap. 55, does not transfer to the grantee the gold and silver that may be found under the land so granted unless the intention that such minerals should so pass is expressed by apt and precise words. Woolley v. Ironstone Hill Lead Coy., 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 237; affirmed on appeal to P.C. sub nom. Woolley v. Attorney-General, L.R. 2 App. Cas., 163.

Rights of Owner to Restrain Mining without making Attorney-General a Party—Injury to Surface.]—The owner not being entitled to the gold can only restrain mining upon his land in so far as it causes real damage to the owner's use of the surface. Millar v. Wildish, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 37; Star Freehold Coy. v. Inkerman and Durham Coy., 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 181; Astley United G. M. Coy. v. Cosmopolitan G. M. Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 96; Attorney-General v. Scholes, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 164.

But if the Attorney-General be joined in the suit, the owners may sue for an injunction to restrain the trespass, and for account of the gold. Lane v. Hannah, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 66; Attorney-General v. Gee, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 122; Attorney-General v. Boyd, 3 A.J.R., 18, 99, 130. Attorney-General v. Lansell, 7 V.L.R., (E.,) 59.

If the owners are carrying on mining operations under their own land, even if their motive be to obtain the gold to which the Crown is entitled, they may restrain other people wrongfully carrying on similar works, and thwarting their own operations. Broadbent v. Marshall, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 115; Astley United G. M. Coy. v. Cosmopolitan G. M. Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 96; Western Freehold Coy. v. G. W. Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 44; Woolley v. Ironstone Hill Lead Co., 1 V.L.R., (E.,) 237.

Persons mining under license from the owners of private property are entitled to restrain mining by the owners or persons claiming through them. Newington Freehold G. M. Coy. v. Harris, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 174; Star Freehold Coy. v. Evans Freehold Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 6.

[NOTE.—The facts of all the above-mentioned cases are set out fully under the next heading.]

Mining with Tacit Consent of Crown—Not Illegal.]—Mining for gold upon private property with tacit assent of the Crown is not illegal so as to avoid contracts. Bonshaw Freehold G. M. Coy. v. The Prince of Wales Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 140.

Agreements as to Mining under Private Land—Not Illegal.]—There is no illegality in agreements as to mining for gold on private property so as to enable the parties to avoid such agreements, the parties dealing remaining however subject to the Crown's right to the gold being at any time asserted. Ah Wye v. Locke, 3 A.J.R., 84, 85.

Mining Lease on Private Property—Plea of Illegality.]—C., the owner of private property, granted a mining lease thereof to P., and sued P. for breach of the covenants. P. pleaded that no consent of H. M. The Queen was given to the granting of the lease, and that the lease was thereby void and illegal. Held that it was quite consistent with the plea that C. might have had a good mining lease from the Crown, or a grant of royal mines, and that a plea of illegality must negative every hypothesis under which the contract could be legal. Clarke v. Pitcher, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 128; 5 A.L.T., 17.

Reservation of Gold and Auriferous Earth and Stone—Power of Grantee as regards Person Removing.]—A grantee of Crown lands, with an exception and reservation in the grant of all gold and auriferous earth and stone, has no power to restrain a third person from removing gold and auriferous earth and stone from the land, notwithstanding that such person may be a trespasser against the Crown. Garibaldi Coy. v. Craven's New Chum Coy., 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 233; 6 A.L.T., 93.

A., a Crown grantee of a freehold abutting on a street, applied for an injunction to restrain B. from mining for gold under the half of the street adjoining his land. A.'s grant expressly excepted and reserved all gold and auriferous stone and earth, and it was not shown that B. had extracted anything else. Held that A. could not obtain an injunction as he had shown no title to the auriferous stone and earth. Ibid.

Semble, a tenant for life even subject to paramount rights of the Crown is not entitled to the proceeds of gold raised from private property against a remainder man in tail. In re Durbridge, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 21.

A Crown grantee died intestate, leaving an infant heiress-at-law. The brother of the grantee, without sanction of the Court, entered on the land on behalf of his infant niece, and granted a lease for gold-mining purposes. On a bill filed by the niece against her uncle and the lessees of the land, the Court granted an injunction to restrain all mining operations, without prejudice to any question as to the prerogative of the Crown over the gold. Fullerton v. Fullerton, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 224.

Injunction against Mining on Private Property—Surface Damage.]—Bill by plaintiff who claimed by several mesne conveyances from a Crown grantee for injunction restraining defendants from encroaching on land and from mining thereupon or removing gold or auriferous material therefrom, and praying an account of gold and profits raised and made by defendant. Held, per Molesworth, J., on a demurrer, that an owner of private property might by injunction restrain a trespasser mining and taking minerals belonging to him the owner, but that the plaintiff as mere owner seeking protection and account of gold fails because the gold is in no way his but the Crown's; and as to the removal of underground earth by a trespasser, that is not a subject of injunction unless real damage to the plaintiff's use of surface result from it, such as a sinking of the surface affecting the proper enjoyment of the land; and that a general averment of irreparable damage unexplained is not sufficient. Millar v. Wildish, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 37.

The plaintiffs claimed as assignees of a lease of land, the surface of which was reserved to the lessor. The defendants were owners of adjoining land, and also assignees of the reversion, and from shafts sunk upon their own land were encroaching upon and driving into the plaintiffs' mines and obtaining gold therefrom. On motion for an injunction, Held that the undermining being in no respect attributable to the claims the defendants had as assignees of the lessor to the surface, it was simply a case of lessees, having legal rights, being encroached upon by adjoining owners from within their own ground; and that the case was not distinguishable from Millar v. Wildish. Motion refused. Star Freehold Coy. v. Inkerman and Durham Coy., 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 181.

Injunction to Restrain Mining on Private Land —Injury to Surface.]—In an information and bill by the Attorney-General and the owners of private land to restrain mining, the pleadings stated that irreparable injury was being done to the surface, setting forth the nature of the injury. Held, upon demurrer on various grounds, that the plaintiffs, as owners, were entitled to restrain the mining, not as underground injury, but as injury to the surface, as stated in the pleadings. Attorney-General v. Scholes, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 164, 170.

Injunction against Mining Operations Interfering with Plaintiffs' Operations.]—The plaintiffs were lessees of certain private property legally carrying on extensive underground works in their own land, and were thwarted and obstructed by the defendants illegally carrying on similar works in the same place. The plaintiffs sought an injunction restraining defendants from carrying on mining operations under leased lands, and from working or continuing drives under such land. Held, per Molesworth, J., that if plaintiffs' real motive was to obtain gold the Crown might stop them, but that their motive did not make their acts illegal, or deprive them of the protection of the law; that the case was distinguishable from Millar v. Wildish on the ground that in that case the plaintiffs were using the surface only, and were not obstructed in the use of it by the defendants' works. Injunction granted. Broadbent v. Marshall, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 115.

Exclusive Licensees from Owner of Private Property—Attorney-General not Joined.]—Plaintiffs and defendants held respectively licenses from one S., the owner of private property, to mine on parts of his property separated by a public road. The defendants mined under the road and encroached upon the plaintiff's land, and removed auriferous earth therefrom, and injured the plaintiffs' mine. The plaintiffs brought a bill against defendants and S.—the Attorney-General not being joined—praying for an injunction restraining the defendants from driving or taking gold or auriferous earth; that S. might be restrained from receiving gold so taken; and for an account of gold so taken and of injury to the mine. Held, per Molesworth, J., that on the principle of Millar v. Wildish, the injunction as to and account of gold raised could not be granted, the Attorney-General not being a party, and that on the principle of Broadbent v. Marshall the injunction to restrain the encroachment would be granted, as the defendants, working under plaintiffs' ground, would obstruct the drives which the plaintiffs were contemplating, the principle of Broadbent v. Marshall being extended to exclusive licensees; that licensees actually mining on part of their land, and intending to mine on the whole, are protected as to the whole; that subsequent mining by one rightfully entitled is protected against a prior wrongdoer; that measuring the damage to the works was properly the province of a court of law, and, as it was reducible to the loss of gold, the plaintiffs had no claim to it; that, as to the injunction against S., no relief could be granted against him, as he contracted to give what belonged to the Crown; and that plaintiffs, as exclusive licensees, need not, as against wrongdoers, prove licensor's title. Astley United G.M. Coy. v. Cosmopolitan G.M. Coy., 4 W W. & A'B. (E.,) 96.

Exclusive Licensees—Mining under a Street—Injunction.]—The plaintiff company obtained a license from S., the owner of private property, to mine under his land. The defendant company were owners of adjoining property, and were encroaching on the plaintiff company's land, and broke into their workings. The point of collision was under a street named M. street, and by some old Gazettes this was treated as a public street; but it was included in the plaintiff company's license as being part of S.'s private property. On a bill for an injunction restraining the defendants from encroaching, Held, per Molesworth, J., that the street might be private property subject to the rights of the public, and that these rights, if they existed, were not sufficient to warrant the Court in withholding redress as between plaintiff and defendant; that, following Astley United v. Cosmopolitan Coy., exclusive licensees from the owner of private property might restrain encroachments by wrongdoers although the municipal or Crown officers might interfere to protect the rights of the public. Injunction granted. Western Freehold v. Great Western G.M. Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 44.

Crown—Prerogative of Crown—Royal Mines—Crown Grant—Reservation.]—The bill stated a grant from Crown 18th June, 1853, to C. & C. of a piece of land (A) with reservations of land for public ways; of all sand, clay, stone, gravel, and indigenous timber; of all materials for ways and bridges; with right of removing and taking, and rights of ingress and egress for those purposes, but with no other reservation. By divers conveyances A and B, which was the subject of a Crown grant with similar reservations, had become vested in the plaintiff Woolley and another plaintiff upon trust for a partnership known as the Coliban Mining Company. The plaintiff company had mined upon the land and erected plant, but were not able to find the gold-bearing gutter running through the land. The bill sought to restrain the defendant company who were mining on land adjoining B from encroaching on B and taking gold from the gutter through B it had discovered, and the Attorney-General was made a defendant. Held on a demurrer by Attorney-General on the ground that plaintiffs were not entitled to gold as against the Crown, that it is the law in England that the Crown is entitled to all gold and silver mines against the world, and that its rights cannot be conveyed away except by express conveyance of these royal mines; that the same law applied to rights of the Crown in Victoria, and that grant of lands did not pass the grant of these royal mines. The demurrer of the Attorney-General allowed with costs. Held on a demurrer by other defendants on ground of want of equity, that though the Crown was entitled to gold, yet that plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction against trespassers, and this part of demurrer was overruled. Woolley v. Ironstone Hill Lead G.M. Coy., 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 237.

Licensees Entitled as against Licensors and Persons Claiming through Them.]— L. granted to the N. Company an exclusive license to mine under freehold land of L. for all mines and minerals which might be found thereunder, with a right to sink shafts on paying compensation. This license was duly registered. Subsequently to such registration, L. sold the land in question to H., who again sold it to the S. N. Company. The latter commenced mining operations on the land. Held that the N. Company, as exclusive licensees, had a title capable of being registered, so as to obtain priority against all subsequent registration by assignees of L.; that the case was one based upon contract—the case of a licensee's contract against the owners of the reversion, and the owners of that reversion proceeding to mine in defiance of the contract—and injunction granted to restrain the S. N. Company from carrying on their works. The Newington Freehold G. M. Coy. Registered v. Harris, 3 W.W. and A'B. (E.,) 174.

Licensees—Title from same Owner—Mortgagor —Injunction.]—The mortgagors and mortgagees of certain land granted the exclusive right to mine on certain property to the W. Company, who transferred the right to the plaintiff company. The defendant company subsequently purchased the equity of redemption to the land from the mortgagors, and sank a shaft to mine. On injunction to restrain defendants, Held that as both derived title from the same owner, and as the encroachment was from without, the case fell within the principle of N. Coy. v. Harris. Injunction granted. Star Freehold Coy. v. Evans Freehold Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 6.

Injunction against Mining on Private Property—Attorney-General a Party — Rights to Gold.]— Bill and information by Attorney-General and H. and others as plaintiffs against G. and others seeking an account of gold taken, and an injunction restraining defendants from trespassing or encroaching or taking gold. Certain land was granted by the Crown to one W. By an indenture this land was conveyed to certain of the plaintiffs as trustees for the B. F. G. M. Coy., which was registered according to provisions of 24 Vict., No. 109. The plaintiff H. was manager of the company; but the company itself was not a party, the other plaintiffs being the shareholders of the company. The defendants were the shareholders of another partnership company, the A. & W. Coy, which had taken possession of certain land adjoining the plaintiffs' under mining rights, and had encroached and taken gold from plaintiff's land. The pleadings alleged that the plaintiffs were mining with the consent of the Crown. Held, per Molesworth, J., on demurrer that some of the plaintiffs, either the Attorney-General or the other plaintiffs, could make some title to relief, and they had an equity as against the defendants; that here the Crown was rightly joined as co-plaintiff; that the company stated an injury to them by improper removal of subsoil; that whether the company or the Crown are entitled to the gold they may make common cause against the defendants for the prevention of the encroachment; that there was no conflict of interest between the Crown and the plaintiffs, the plaintiffs considering themselves as tenants at sufferance of the Crown; that whether the removal of the gold was an irreparable injury to the plaintiffs or not it was to the Crown which was joined as co-plaintiff; that as to uncertainty whether the defendants are required to account to the Attorney-General or the co-plaintiffs, there is a continuing option in the Attorney-General whenever he pleases to put forward a claim on the part of the Crown; that the Attorney-General of Victoria and not the Attorney-General of England or the Commissioner of Crown Lands was the proper officer to file the information. Demurrer overruled. Attorney-General v. Gee, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 122.

But where the pleadings alleged no consent of the Crown to past mining, nor any consent to apply the past or future proceeds of gold mining to the plaintiff's benefit, Held, on demurrers (distinguishing Attorney-General v. Gee), that the information and bill seeking to restrain mining on behalf of the plaintiffs as on the ground of surface injury, and on behalf of the Crown as on the ground of its right to the gold, and seeking account of the gold raised were multifarious, there being no connection of interest between the Crown and the plaintiffs. Attorney-General v. Scholes, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 164.

Suit by Attorney-General, a Corporation and Owners of Private Property—Joinder of Plaintiffs.] — Molesworth, J., granted an injunction against mining on private property at the suit of the Attorney-General, a corporation and the owners of the freehold—all being joined as plaintiffs—but afterwards intimated that there had been a misjoinder of parties, and that the three parties could not join, each complaining of different injuries. Attorney-General v. Rogers, 1 V.R. (E.,) 132, 139; 1 A.J.R., 120, 149.

Bill and Information—Mining under a Road—Account—Valuation High against Trespassers.]—Information by Attorney-General at relation of co-plaintiffs, and bill by owners of property, their lessees, and a company mining for gold under arrangement with lessees to restrain defendants holding adjoining claims from encroaching on the land, and for an account of gold raised, and also to restrain defendants from mining under half a road the boundary of the freehold land. The pleadings alleged that the plaintiffs' mining was with the knowledge and consent of the Attorney-General. Held per Molesworth, J., that landlord and tenant may join in a suit for injury to soil, and that Attorney-General as representing the Crown may join in the suit for an injunction and account; that the evidence of the alleged road being a road at all being insufficient, and it appearing that the defendants and plaintiffs had made an agreement seven years previously not to mine within certain limits and boundaries inconsistent with the relief now sought as to half the road, the co-plaintiffs had no right to such relief even although Attorney-General might have. Injunction granted save as to half the road, and accounts decreed. On exceptions to the Master's report, estimating the value of the gold at £607, Held, per Molesworth, J., and affirmed on appeal, that in such cases the valuation as against trespassers should be high. Attorney-General v. Boyd, 3 A.J.R. 18, 99, 130.

Information by Attorney-General—Owners not being Joined as Plaintiffs—Defendant a No-Liability Company.]—Information by Attorney-General, at the relation of owners of private property to restrain encroachment, and for order for inspection. The defendant company was a no-liability company. Interim injunction granted, on the ground of peculiar nature of defendant company, but Court intimated that as against any other defendant an injunction would not be granted unless the owners of private property were joined as plaintiffs by bill. Attorney-General v. Hustler's Consols Coy., 3 A.J.R., 70.

Parties—Licensees—Licensor Necessary Party.]—Information by Attorney-General at relation of W., and bill by plaintiff company and W. to restrain defendant from trespassing on certain land, and for an account of gold raised by him therefrom. Certain freeholders of the land had granted to the plaintiff company a license to mine under the land, and the plaintiff company had agreed with W. to allow him to mine under such land on tribute. Held that although the Attorney-General was a party, the freeholders and licensors were necessary parties—the injury to the land through the excavations, apart from the gold raised being an injury to the freeholders, and the injury by removal of the gold was partially an injury to the freeholders, the licensees having, under the license, to account to him for one-tenth of the gold, and in order to enable licensees to maintain suit they would have to show that they had an entire right to the gold raised. Liberty to amend. Attorney-General v. Lansell, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 59; affirmed on appeal, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 155, 173.

Parties — Lessees — Gold Mining.]—Where a plaintiff is entitled to land by Crown grant, and leases it for mining purposes to lessees from week to week, intending to resume possession very shortly, and brings a suit to restrain a defendant company from encroaching, such lessees are necessary parties. Woolley v. Ironstone Hill Lead G.M. Coy., 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 237.

"Mining Statute" (No. 291,) Sec. 16—License from Council to Mine—Doctrine of ad medium filum viæ Applied.]—The plaintiff company were lessees from an owner in fee of certain land on the north of a proclaimed street, and had the permission of the Council of Sandhurst to mine under the street. The defendant company were lessees of owners in fee of certain land on the south of the street, and had no such permission from the council. A collision between the companies took place under the street nearer the northern side of the street than the southern, and the defendants, by letting water flow from their reservoir, injured the plaintiffs' workings. On bill for injunction to restrain the defendant company from mining under the street comprised in plaintiffs' permit, Held that, in accordance with the decision in Davis v. The Queen, the defendant company claiming from persons holding land adjoining the street had a paramount right to mine under the southern half of such street as against the permission given to the plaintiff company, but that under Sec. 16 of Act No. 291 the permission of the Council conferred title as to northern half against the defendants having no such permission. Ordered that defendants be restrained from mining under northern half of the street. The Extended Hustler's Freehold Coy. v. Moore's Hustler's Coy., 5 A.J.R., 116.

Mining Lease—Highway ad medium filum—Order for Inspection.]—W. was registered proprietor under Act No. 301 of a certain allotment, deriving his title from a Crown grantee. W. granted a mining lease to the plaintiff company of the land, reserving to himself the use and enjoyment of the surface. This land was bounded on one side by a highway. The defendant company were mining lessees of land on the other side of the highway. The bill alleged that the defendant company had mined under the whole breadth of the street into the allotment; and plaintiff, in driving under the allotment, had broken into defendants' shaft on that allotment. The bill sought an injunction against mining under the allotment and under one-half of the street. Held that, as affidavit in support of bill did not set out lease so as to enable the Court to determine whether the highway ad medium filum passed to plaintiff company, the Court would refuse that part of injunction. Injunction ordered as to mining under allotment, and inspection granted with reference only to ascertain whether defendants were mining under it at the date of the order. Victoria United Mining Coy. v. Prince of Wales Coy., 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 92.

But see Garibaldi Coy. v. Craven's New Chum Coy., 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 233, where the doctrine of Davis v. The Queen was overruled.

Disbursements by Mining Boards under Bye-Laws—Salary of Officers—Act No. 115.]—G. was appointed an officer under a mining board and his salary was fixed but no bye-law was passed prescribing the duties of officers appointed under the Act No. 115, or for payment of such officers. The board after employing G. for some time dismissed him. A rule nisi was obtained for a mandamus to compel the board to pay to G. all salary due to date. Held that all fees necessary for the purposes of Act No. 115 can only be disbursed by a bye-law duly made, and that as no bye-law was passed there was no fund from which salary could be legally paid, and no salary legally due. Rule discharged. Gill v. Nicholas, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 3.

Compare Sec. 71, Sub-secs. xiv., of Act No. 291.

Mandamus to Surveyor to Survey Claim—Act No. 291, Sec. 47.]—A mining surveyor stands neutral between the parties, and his duties are purely ministerial. Where a surveyor, S., who was also registrar, refused to survey a claim on the ground that there was no certificate of registration, and S. had refused to issue the certificate because six persons held ten miner's rights, but it appeared that only six men's ground was claimed, the Court granted a mandamus. Regina v. Stephenson, ex parte Black, N.C., 22.

"Mining Statute 1865," Sec. 73.]—Sec. 73 of the "Mining Statute 1865" (No. 291,) giving the Governor-in-Council a power to cancel bye-laws, has a retrospective operation, and the title to a claim, pursuant to a bye-law, bad under the Act No. 32 was held validated by Sec. 73. Vivian v. Dennis, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 29.

Infraction of Bye-laws—Police Magistrate may Entertain Complaint for—No. 291, Sec. 237.]—A police magistrate is competent to hear a complaint, under Sec. 237 of the "Mining Statute 1865," for infraction of a mining bye-law. Regina v. Pohlman, ex parte Nickless, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 31.

Bye-laws under Sec. 111 of "Goldfields Act" (No. 32.)]—Sec. 111 of the "Goldfields Act," enacting that bye-laws made and published as therein directed, "at the expiration of twenty-one days next after such publication, but not before, shall have the force of law throughout the district," apply to the event after which, and not to the area over which the bye-laws become operative; and a bye-law made for "a division of a district" is without "force of law throughout the district," and invalid. Where, therefore, C., under a bye-law made only for the R. division of the A district, marked off a claim in the R. division under a bye-law made for that division, and sued for encroachment, Held that, the bye-law being invalid, C. could not maintain encroachment. Jenkinson v. Cumming, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 337.

[But see Sec. 71 of Act No. 291, where power is given to Mining Boards to make bye-laws for any division or part thereof.]

Construction.]—Mining bye-laws should be construed according to rules which have been applied to Acts of Parliament by courts of justice. Lawlor v. Stiggants, 2 V.L.R. (M.,) 17.

Construction—Condition Precedent.]—A bye-law which prescribed the conditions by which a valid title to a mining tenement might be obtained, contained in the middle of it a proviso containing exemptions from the foregoing conditions. Held that that which followed the proviso might be just as much a condition precedent as that which preceded it. Beavan v. Rigby, 2 V.L.R. (M.,) 7.

Retrospective Operation.]—Bye-laws have no retrospective operation; a bye-law under which a man takes up his claim is that which governs his rights and liabilities. Bond v. Watson, 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 85; for facts see S.C. post under sub-heading, Claim—Forfeiture. And see S.P., Regina v. Clow, ex parte Oliver, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 89. Post under sub-heading, Claim—Forfeiture.

Ultra Vires.]—A bye-law of a mining district providing that no mining registrar "shall hold directly or indirectly except for the purpose of residence any claim or share" in his own district, is ultra vires of the Mining Board, the board having no power to exclude any individual from a public right; and a registrar is not thereby disabled from bringing a suit for a claim in his own district. O'Mally v. Ward, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 277.

Bye-Laws Preserved by Sec. 2 of "Mining Statute 1865."]—The second section of the "Mining Statute 1865" shows an intention to preserve bye-laws apart from the eightieth. Longbottom v. White, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 35.

Bye-Laws Preserved.]—Secs. 71—80 of the Act No. 291 continue the operation of all previous bye-laws, and continue the rights of the public holding miners' rights to insist on forfeiture, and all obligations connected with and all liability to the forfeiture of such titles. Clerk v. Wrigley, 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 74, 83.

The principle of Critchley v. Graham (adjudication necessary to enforce forfeiture) is paramount to bye-laws, if the bye-laws are inconsistent with it. Barlow v. Hayes, 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 67.

"Mining Statute" (No. 291,) Sec. 80—Retrospective Effect on Bye-Laws.]—Sec. 80 does not make valid and legal bye-laws which were previously illegal and invalid. Where a warden made an order under clause 8 of Sandhurst Mining Bye-Law (No. 6,) that possession should be given to S. upon forfeiture of a claim, provided that a sum of money, being value of the materials and work absolutely beneficial to the defendant J., were paid by S. to J. within forty-eight hours. Held that the bye-law was invalid, and the order made under it also invalid. Sayers v. Jacomb, 3 V.R. (L.,) 132; 3 A.J.R., 66.

Act No. 291, Se. 73.]—The words "interest in a claim" in Sec. 73 do not include the right to compensation for improvements on eviction, and therefore Sec. 73 does not give a bye-law providing for compensation a retrospective validity. Reardon v. Sayers, 3 A.J.R., 126.

Sandhurst Bye-Laws, Government "Gazette," 1870, p. 287; and 1871, p. 1852—Act No. 291, Sec. 72.]—The approval of bye-laws by the law officers under Sec. 72 of Act No. 291 is not retrospective, and a bye-law takes effect from the date of its allowance and approval by the law officers. Reardon v. Norton, 5 V.L.R. (M.,) 12.

What is a Mine.]—See Regina v. Davies. Ante column 296.

Mortgages of Mining Plant and Machinery—Act No. 109, Sec. 28.]—The word "mortgagees" was intentionally omitted from the latter part of Sec. 28 of Act No. 109, respecting registration, and therefore where the mortgagee is in possession, a mortgage deed of mining plant and machinery does not require to be registered. Oriental Bank v. Carter, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 36.

Existing Interests—Act No. 153—Repeal of, by Act No. 291, Secs. 2, 80—Warden's Order under Former Act.]—A summons dated 29th December, 1865, was taken out under the Act No. 153, returnable before a warden. The summons was adjourned to 26th January, 1866, upon which day the warden made an order for payment of £12 forthwith, and £2 weekly till December, 1866. The Act No. 153 was repealed by the Act No. 291 from 31st December, 1865, but such "suits and proceedings" begun and pending at the time of the repeal as were brought for fees, the right to which had then accrued, were kept alive, and by the new Act mining boards were empowered to assess drainage rates, under which power some board would have to assess for a part of the year 1866, the reef covered by the warden's order. Held, on rule nisi for prohibition, that as the summons had been issued, attended, and adjourned before the 1st January, 1866, it was a "matter or thing lawfully had or done," before the commencement of the repealing Act, and was therefore, by virtue of that Act "of the same force and effect to all intents and purposes as if no such repeal had taken place," and valid; and rule nisi discharged. Regina v. Webster, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 17.

Offences against Mining Statute—21 Vict. No. 32, Sec. 122—Act No. 148, Sec. 4—Warden's Order.]—On a complaint of encroachment under 21 Vict. No. 32, a warden made the following order:—"Visited ground in presence of parties. Removed pick and shovel from claim, ordered discontinuance until application for lease disposed of." A summons was taken out against the persons in occupation "for that they did retain possession, &c." after warden's order, and they were convicted. On motion for a rule nisi to restrain execution, Held that summons did not allege that defendants had been removed from land by warden, and disclosed no offence under Sec. 122 of Act No. 32, and that Act 148, Sec. 4, was not retrospective. Order absolute for prohibition. Ex parte Barclay, in re Pasco, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 38.

Offences against Mining Statute (No. 32,) Sec. 116—Carrying on Business without a License—Onus of Proof.]—See M'Cormack v. Murray, ante column 431; and compare Sec. 235 of Act No. 291.

What may not be Taken as a Claim—Land Reserved for a Public Use or Purpose—5 and 6 Vict. cap. xxxvi., Sec. 3—No. 32, Secs. 3 and 4.]—A municipal council, by letter, requested the Government to allow certain land in the municipality to be reserved for recreation and gymnastic purposes, for the inhabitants of the municipal district. An officer of the Crown Lands Department replied stating that the Governor-in-Council had approved of permissive occupancy being allowed of the land in question "to be used for recreation and gymnastic purposes." Held that this was a sufficient reservation of the land within the meaning of 5 and 6 Vict., c. xxxvi., Sec. 3, so as to prevent its being taken up as a mining claim under Sec. 3 of No. 32, being within the exceptions specified in Sec. 4 of the latter Act. United Sir William Don Coy. v. Koh-i-noor Coy., 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 63.

And a suit for encroachment by one company driving for gold under the reserve from a shaft outside the reserve against a company similarly driving dismissed without costs. Ibid.

Land Reserved for Public Purpose—Reservation from Sale.]—A reservation of Crown land from sale under the "Sale of Crown Lands Act 1860" (No. 117,) without a dedication of it to some particular public purpose, does not per se take such land out of the operation of the Mining Acts. Attorney-General v. Southern Freehold Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 66.

How Far Land held under Miners' Rights may be Reserved—Act No. 291, Secs. 13, 14.]—The Governor-in-Council cannot apply Crown lands previously held as a claim to public purposes under Sec. 13, but may under Sec. 14 except such lands from further occupation as a claim, and then use them without regard to the rights of the claimholders. Wakeham v. Cobham, 1 V.R. (M.,) 34; 1 A.J.R., 93.

What Land may be Taken—Act No. 291, Sec. 5.]—Land unoccupied or land occupied under a claim, if liable to forfeiture, may be occupied as Crown land by a holder of miners' rights under Sec. 5 of the Act. Keast v. D'Angri, 4 A.J.R., 61.

Land under a Street.]—Land under a public road cannot be occupied as a mining claim under the Act No. 32 without permission of the proper authorities, i.e., the Board of Land and Works or the District Road Board. House v. Ah Sue, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 41.

What Land may be Taken—Act No. 291, Secs. 3, 13.]—Where the locus in quo is a street, it cannot be taken up as a mining claim. Schonfeldt v. Beel, 1 V.L.R. (M.,) 1.

Jurisdiction of Warden—Estoppel.]—B. took up part of a public street as a mining claim, and S. summoned B. before the warden for a declaration of forfeiture on the ground of non-working, and for possession. B. contended that the warden had no jurisdiction to adjudicate, as the ground was not capable of being so taken up. Held that it was a good defence; and the injury being done to the public and not to individuals, that B. was not estopped from setting up that defence. Ibid.

What Land may be Taken—Subsoil of Residence Area—"Mining Statute 1865," Secs. 3, 13.]—Under the "Mining Statute 1865" the subsoil of Crown lands applied to any public purpose or held under a miner's right or business or other license (as contradistinguished from a lease) may be within the limits of a claim, and, unless excepted by the Governor-in-Council, be mined upon with impunity, so long as the surface-rights are not injured. A claim may therefore include a residence area, and such area may be mined under, subject to liability for disturbing the surface. Parade G. M. Coy. v. Royal Harry Q. M. Coy., 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 214.

A claim may be occupied under bye-law 29 of the Gippsland Bye-laws (1867), which includes in its area other lands than the subject of a warden's declaration of abandonment under bye-law No. 17, although such other lands have not been previously occupied under bye-law 17; but if the claim is of dimensions which can be taken only in unworked and abandoned grounds, it must, to be supported, be all in some way of that description. M'C. and party obtained a warden's order entitling them to possession of a certain claim marked POKL, and marked off and registered a claim, as for unworked and abandoned ground, consisting of an area marked ROMK including the lesser area POKL. The ground in ROMK in excess of POKL was either maiden ground or had not been the subject of the warden's adjudication. Held that M'C. and party were wrong in taking so much land, and that M'C. and party in a suit against them by B. might give up the untried ground if improperly taken and confine themselves to the abandoned ground (POKL) in resisting the suit. Bryson v. M'Carthy, 6 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 35; N.C., 18.

How many Claims may be Taken up.]—Sandhurst Bye-law (No. 7,) Sec. 5, allowing the holder of one miner's right to take several single men's claims under it, is not ultra vires of the "Mining Statute 1865." Crocker v. Wigg, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 20.

How many Claims may be Taken up—Act 291, Secs. 3, 7, 8.]—It is contrary to the spirit of the Act to allow an advantage as to original taking to be purchased by paying a multiplied tax. Sec. 3 of the Act does not enable a person to multiply himself or his powers by multiplying his miner's rights, and Ballarat Bye-laws (No. 3) does not amount to an express enactment to that effect. One man cannot apply for and obtain registration of and retain possession of five men's ground by obtaining five miner's rights, but after claims are taken up and registered, Secs. 7 and 8 allow several miner's rights to be assigned to a purchaser from several partners. Cawley v. Ling, 6 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 12.

Seven men cannot, under Sec. 3 of the Act No. 291, effectually take up and be registered for more than seven men's ground. Milne v. Morell, 3 A.J.R., 21.

How many Claims may be Held under a Transfer—Act No. 291, Secs 7, 8.]—Under Ballarat Bye-Law XI. and Secs. 7 and 8 of Act No. 291, one man holding a miner's right may be a transferee of claims not exceeding fifty men's ground. Baker v. Wong Pang, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 28; 4 A.L.T., 28.

Interest of Holder of Miner's Right in a Claim—Act No. 291, Sec. 3.]—The interest which the holder of a miner's right has in his claim is at the outside an estate at will, and an action of ejectment cannot be maintained for such an estate. Jennings v. Kinsella, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 47.

Claim Taken up by Power of Attorney—Miner's Right.]—A person not having a miner's right may give a power of attorney to a person to take up a claim for him, in anticipation of having it, as well as persons anticipating the acquisition of property. Keast v. D'Angri, 4 A.J.R., 61.

Boundaries of Claims.]—Held under Maldon Regulations, Clauses 2, 3, 4, that claimholders are entitled to hold spaces between the reef and a line running parallel to its actual course straight or curved, and also entitled to follow the dips and angles of the said reef connected with it, though beyond 100 feet. Miller v. Fraser, 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 29.

Width of Claim—Local Court Rule—Act No. 291, Sec. 73.]—A local court rule was as follows:—"The width of claim from east to west shall be 200 feet, 100 feet on each side of the working shaft on the line of reef, and the holders of quartz claims shall be entitled to the dips and angles of all reefs found within the reef, and may follow the same to whatever distance they may dip, east or west." Held that this rule was not ultra vires, and that even if it were it would be cured by the retrospective operation of Sec. 73 of the "Mining Statute 1865" (No. 291.) Vivian v. Dennis, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 29.

Boundaries of Claim.]—In Rule V. of "Ballarat Rules 1856," under 18 Vict. No. 37, there are the words "claims upon all recognised leads or gutters shall be of indefinite width until such gutters or leads are found," &c. Held that the gutter is "found" when it is first struck in the successive claims by the claimholders who search for it there, and when struck it may generally be supposed that it will continue generally in its main course, and the finding is not postponed until it is found in every inch of its course in all its sinuosities. Rule VIII. provided that "In cases where the gutter or lead changes its course from the supposed one, the position of the original claims shall be changed accordingly, taking precedence according to their numbers." Held that the intention of the rule was to give the same persons who marked claims on the original lead in its original course the power to transfer those claims on it so as to accord with the whole of the actual course of the lead; and that, therefore, a claimholder could not in proceedings before the warden, under Sec. 77 of Act No. 32, dispossess adjoining claimholders on the basis that the lead had changed, and that measuring the new direction along its sinuosities would give the occupiers of claims more than their proper length of lead. Thomas v. Kinnear, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 221, 231, 239.

Effect of Registration upon Size of Claim.]—The clauses 10, 11, 15, 16 of Ballarat Bye-Laws 3, show that the depth of lead assumed at the time of registration is conclusive, so that a claim cannot be enlarged or restricted upon the discovery of the mistake. Clauses 10 and 11 do not mean that depth of sinking should be distinguished from depth of lead as a test of quantity allowed. Milne v. Morell, 3 A.J.R., 21.

Discrepancy between Plaint and Plan.]—Complainants subject themselves only to getting the smaller quantity as shown in the plan. Ibid.

Title to Claim—Not Registered.]—Semble, per Molesworth, J.—A defendant cannot set up a title not duly registered at the time of the trial. Moore v. White, 4 A.J.R., 17.

Title.]—A right to a claim based on possession is to be limited to one title. Where, therefore, a claimholder, afraid of an adverse title, took an assignment of such adverse title, and became registered as assignee thereof, Held that he thereby lost the protection of his previous title. Barton v. Band of Hope and Albion Consols, 6 V.L.R. (M.,) 1; 1 A.L.T., 145.

"Goldfields Act," Sec. 111.]—A bye-law of a mining district provided that "any person taking possession of any such claim shall do so by erecting, or causing to be erected, a post at each corner of the claim, such post to be not less than three inches in diameter, to be firmly fixed in the ground, extending at least three feet above it, and to be kept erected during the occupation of the claim." Held that the bye-law was reasonable, and within the powers given by Sec. 111 of No. 32 (Goldfields Act); that a non-compliance with it avoided the effect of taking possession; and that a claim could be lawfully taken possession of only by erecting posts in the places and of the dimensions and height set forth in the bye-law. Thompson v. Land, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 13.

Shape of Claim to be Marked off.]—No. 7, Sec. iii., clause 4, of the Sandhurst Bye-laws provided, "as far as practicable, all claims shall be marked off in a rectangular form, the length of the same in any case not to exceed twice the breadth;" and by clauses 16, 18, it was provided that, as to special claims of a larger extent, any miners taking them up "must mark off the proposed claim in a rectangular form." Held that ground which could not be marked off in a rectangular form could not be the subject of a special holding under clauses 16, 17, and 18, though it could be held as an ordinary claim under clause 4. Roscrow v. Webster, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 64.

Amalgamated Claim—How Marked Out.]—Several persons taking up ground of dimensions to which they are jointly entitled may take possession effectually under the Beechworth Mining Bye-laws of 19th November, 1869 (Nos. 5, 6, and 20,) by pegging and trenching the corners of the entire and not the separate single men's portion. Lightbourne v. Stitt, 1 A.J.R., 71.

Pegs in Street—Illegality.]—If bye-laws require pegs to be fixed for the purpose of marking out a claim and two corners of the claim are on a public street, although the fixing of pegs on such street may be illegal, yet persons fixing pegs as regards a mining claim can effectually take it up by so fixing them. Parade G. M. Coy. v. Victorian United M. Coy., 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 24.

Going on Private Property to Mark Out.]—Under bye-law 3, clause 10, of the Castlemaine district, if the adjoining property to a claim, being private land, make the pegging out by the surveyor impossible, no title to the claim can be acquired under that bye-law. Talent v. Dibdin, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 31.

Act No. 291, Sec. 71, Sub-sec. iii.—Shifting Pegs to reduce Area to Proper Dimensions.]—A mining bye-law provided that "all claims should be marked out at the time of taking possession thereof by substantial pegs erected at each angle of the claim." W. and party took up a claim which was in excess of the area allowed by the bye-laws, and marked it out by four pegs, and subsequently shifted two of the pegs so as to reduce the area to the proper dimensions. Held that such shifting of the two pegs was not a good marking out under the bye-law, and was not a constructive taking possession of the claim under miners' rights. Barrington v. Willox, 4 V.L.R. (M.,) 1.

Marking out Claim pending Application for a Lease—Warden's Decision terminates Pendency of Application—Act No. 32, Sec. 12—Orders-in-Council for Sandhurst, 30th August, 1859.] —

Certain persons applied for a mining lease of certain land. The surveyor marked out the land and posted a notice of the application. Pending the application, M. and party entered on the land by virtue of their miners' rights, marked out a portion of it as a claim and worked it for a time, when they were warned off by the warden on the ground that their claim was on land "protected and exempted by the leasing regulations from occupation by any person during the pendency of the application for the lease." M. and party ceased working the claim, but made formal entries on it, and marked it out with pegs, which were preserved in their places until the surveyor's official pegs were officially moved. Nearly six weeks after M. and party had ceased working, H. and party first marked out a claim identical with that of M. and party, and pulled up the pegs of M. and party's claim. Before or on that day (22nd July) the pending application was refused, and on that day the warden gave directions to the surveyor to remove his official pegs and publish the notice that the protection or exemption of the land was withdrawn. The notice was published in the morning papers on the 23rd July, but the pegs were not removed till the 24th. H. and party marked out the claim afresh on the publication of the notice, but M. and party waited till the surveyor had withdrawn his pegs, when they immediately put down again the pegs of the claim which they had originally marked out. On case stated, Held, by the Supreme Court, that the extraction of the official posts was not necessary to terminate the pendency of the application, but that the act of the warden sufficed; that the publication of the notice merely informed the public generally that the land was open to occupation, and that M. and party were entitled to the claim, having been in possession and entitled at the time of the warden's decision. Hookway v. Muirhead, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 107.

Marking out—Forfeiture of Lease.]—Marking out a claim on the evening of the day on which the Gazette notice of forfeiture of a gold mining lease of the land marked out is published is a good marking out. Weddell v. Howse, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 44; 4 A.L.T., 95.

Notice of Application—Sandhurst Bye-laws.]—A notice of intention to take up a claim under the Sandhurst Bye-laws, signed by one of the intending claimholders for himself and nineteen others, is bad, and makes the title to the claim bad. Cruise v. Crowley, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 27.

Semble, the notice of application should give some description of the locality in which the land sought lies. Ibid.

Semble, that if a party properly marks an area of sixteen acres, and, without fraud, described it in the notice of application as twelve, and it was surveyed under the bye-laws of the district to sixteen acres, and the persons registered were entitled to that quantity, a good title would be acquired to the sixteen acres. Ibid.

(c) Registration.

Irregular Registration of Amalgamated Claim.]—If the amalgamation of two claims is irregular under the bye-laws, the claimants are only thrown back upon their original titles under the separate claims, and their rights prior to amalgamation revive. Parade G.M. Coy. v. Victorian United Mining Coy., 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 24.

How far Registration Essential to Title.]—Per Molesworth, J.—Semble: "I have some difficulty as to whether registration in the manner and within the time prescribed by the bye-laws is a condition precedent to title. I would rather say that a defendant cannot set up a title not duly registered at the time of trial." Moore v. White, 4 A.J.R., 17.

Act No. 291, Sec. 7—Amalgamated Claim—Application to Re-register.]—Mining Bye-laws (Ballarat, 31st October, 1873) provided that the width of a quartz claim should not exceed 750 feet, and also for the amalgamation of claims, and re-registration as an amalgamated claim. Held that the registration of amalgamated claims was good, even although the width of the amalgamated claim was more than 750 feet; and that a verbal application to re-register made by the manager of a company with the consent of the parties interested was good. Donaldson v. Llanberis Coy., 9 V.L.R. (M.,) 21; 5 A.L.T., 54.

Semble, that if the re-registration of the amalgamated claim was bad, the company could not fall back on its former titles. Parade G. M. Coy. v. Victoria United M. Coy., doubted. Ibid.

Partnership—What Certificate of Registration should Contain.]—Semble, that it is not necessary that a certificate of registration of a claim should contain the name of a company, being only a partnership, in addition to the names of the members. Cruise v. Crowley, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 27.

Time for Registration—Beechworth Bye-Laws 1866, No. 4—"Mining Statute 1865," Secs. 5, 6, 7, 71 (xiii.,) 237.]—O. and others worked continuously on a claim for four days and registered at the end of that time. By No. 4 of the Beechworth Bye-laws 1866, a claim ought to have been registered in two days from the time of taking possession. Held that the omission to register did not avoid the taking possession by posts, &c.; that, coupling the "Mining Statute 1865," Secs. 5, 6, 7, 71, Sub-sec. xiii., with the language of the bye-law, the omission would only deprive O. and party of the powers of Sec. 7 until registration, and subject them to a pecuniary liability under Sec. 237. Oxley v. Little, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 14.

Under a similar bye-law it was held that registration within the time prescribed by the bye-law is part and parcel of the title, as that is the time from which the obligation to work begins. Barker's G. M. Coy. v. Keating, 1 A.J.R., 55.

Delay in Registration—Effect of.]—A delay in final registration under the Ballarat Bye-Laws (May, 1868) subjects the applicant to others getting before him, but not to having his title when registered defeated. Band of Hope and Albion Consols v. Young Band Extended Coy., 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 37, 42.

Omission to Comply with Bye-Laws—Acts of Compliance of Previous Holders.]—In 1874 Higgs and party were duly registered for a claim, and complied with the bye-laws. In March, 1875, H. applied to the warden to be put into possession on the ground of forfeiture, and obtained an adjudication of forfeiture. In May, 1875, H. registered himself as owner of the claim by an independent registration, without reference to the previous registration of Higgs and party, but neglected to comply with a provision in the bye-laws with which Higgs and party had complied. In December, 1875, H. transferred to R., who obtained registration as transferee of H., but did not comply with the provision with which H. had not complied. B. applied for a forfeiture on the ground of the non-compliance. Held that R. could not avail himself of the acts of the antecedent registered owners (Higgs and party) as applicable to the claim which H. had registered afresh without any reference to Higgs' registration. Beavan v. Rigby, 2 V.L.R. (M.,) 7.

[NOTE.—The system of frontage as distinguished from block claims has been in great measure abandoned, but it still exists in some mining districts.]

There are only two kinds of claims, viz., "frontage" and "block" claims. Every owner of a "block" claim has, equally with the holder of a "frontage" claim, a right to all gold within the boundaries of that claim. There is no such thing as a "block quartz claim," and holders of such claims have a right to gold found outside the reef in the soil within their claim. Scottish and Cornish G.M. Coy. v. Great Gulf G.M. Coy., 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 103.

Right to Work Lead passing through One Claim and returning to Another.]—If a lead return to the parallels of a frontage claim before passed, the return course of the lead is not public property, but belongs to the claimholder between whose parallels it lies, although he has before worked part of the lead from parallel to parallel. United Working Miners' G.M. Coy. v. Prince of Wales Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 50, 55.

Frontage Claim—Rights of Holder.]—A frontage claim subsists over its entire surface until narrowed under the bye-laws. The claimholder is entitled not only to the gold upon the lead in respect of which the claim is registered, but to all gold within the claim until so narrowed; and when narrowed, to all gold at whatever depths within it as narrowed. St. George and Band of Hope Coy. v. Band of Hope and Albion Consols, 2 V.R. (E.,) 206, 216; 2 A.J.R. 81.

The holder of a frontage claim may exclude from every portion of its area, persons who subsequently take up a block claim thereon. St. George and Band of Hope Coy. v. Band of Hope and Albion Consols, 2 V.R. (E.,) 206, 221; 2 A.J.R., 127.

Frontage Claims—Priority—Ballarat Bye-Laws, December, 1859 (No. 20.)]—The W. company had a frontage claim on the F. lead, the A. company a frontage claim on a lead adjoining, and outside that of plaintiffs, and also a frontage claim on the W. lead. The leads were so near that the different frontage parallels intersected. The two companies worked on their claims and collided. The Judge of the Court of Mines found that the place of collision was on the W. lead, and held that as the F. lead was the senior, the A. company's rights should be subordinate to the W. company's right of following the gold upon the F. lead, and that at the point of collision the W. company might carry it on uninterrupted, accounting to the A. company for all gold taken out of the F. lead. On appeal, Held by the Chief Judge that the local Court regulations and bye-laws contemplated the existence of simultaneous rights to intersecting frontage claims, but omitted to give specific directions as to priorities; that the prohibitions to interference with a frontage claim on a lead undefined, were not intended to apply to frontage claimants on other leads intersecting, but that priority of title depends upon which lead the gold is upon; that there was a preponderance of evidence as to the collision taking place on the W. lead, and that the A. company had the better right. United Working Miners' Coy. v. Albion Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 1.

Registration of a Frontage Claim—Power to Exclude Others from Taking up Block Claims.]—The clause No. 21 of Ballarat Bye-Law 3 has the force of law; and a person registering a frontage claim under No. x. of those bye-laws is entitled to the benefit of clause 21, and to exclude persons from obtaining registration for and occupying block claims within all parts of the surface boundaries or parallels of the frontage claim, without regard to the probability of the gutter or lead passing through. United Extended Band of Hope Coy. v. Tennant, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 41, 54.

Similarly a residence area cannot be taken up on a frontage area against the will of the owner of the latter. Warrior Coy. v. Cotter, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 81.

Person Taking up a Block Claim where he ought to have Taken a Frontage.]—Under the 13th bye-law of a certain district it was provided that "claims on alluvial leads of a greater depth than 200 feet shall be worked as frontage claims." Held that the owners of a block claim before the discovery of an alluvial lead of a greater depth than 200 feet could claim the lead and the gold in it, and it was not necessary for them to take out "a frontage claim." Critchley v. Graham, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 71.

"Goldfields Act," (No. 32)—24 Vict. No. 111, Sec. 11—Frontage Claims—Boundaries.]—The A. company were holders of several "frontage claims" on declared leads. These claims had been registered, but no lead having been discovered within their parallels, no lateral boundaries had been fixed. No blame was attached to the A. company in consequence of having unreasonably delayed the discovering the lead within any of their claims. McG. and party sought to take possession of "block claims" within the parallels of the "frontage claims." The Court of Mines granted an injunction restraining McG. and party from mining on the "frontage claims," and from completely registering block claims of which they had registered one. On appeal, Held that under the "Goldfields Act" (No. 32,) the holders of miners' rights were entitled to all gold in any land occupied as a claim, and though the bye-laws directed that claims were to be worked on the frontage system only, they placed no restriction upon rights of the claim-holder to such gold; that the bye-laws declared that registration was possession or equivalent thereto; that Sec. 11 of 24 Vict. No. 111, expressly met the legal difficulty of being in possession of land the boundaries of which were unknown; that the A. company had thus inchoate rights as against McG. and party which were not displaced by McG. and party. Appeal dismissed. McGill v. Tatham, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 52.

Semble, where lateral and parallel lines of a "frontage claim" have been fixed, no "block claim" could be taken within such boundaries. Ibid.

The S. company were registered for a "frontage" claim on the S. lead, but the course of the lead had not been ascertained throughout the claim. The Court of Mines had restrained Smith and others from mining within the company's claim on the S. lead, and from applying for registration of "frontage claims" on the undefined leads within the boundaries of the company's claim. Held, on appeal, that the S. company were entitled to such an injunction, and appeal dismissed. Smith v. Scottish & Cornish Coy., 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 121.

Forfeiture—Frontage Claimant Taking Block Claim.]—The holder of a frontage claim, taking up a block claim on a part of his frontage area, does not forfeit all his rights to the remaining portion of frontage area although he does forfeit his rights to that portion of the frontage area comprised in his block claim. United Extended Band of Hope Coy. v. Tennant, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 41, 52.

The G. company marked off a frontage claim on certain land which had recently been thrown open; being opposed by others as to this frontage claim, it ceased to press for registration and ultimately took possession of a block claim comprising the land in dispute. The defendants then applied to be registered for a block claim comprising the land, and the G. company applied as under their frontage claim title to restrain registration by the defendants. Held, following United Extended Band of Hope Coy. v. Tennant, that the G.'s company taking possession of a block claim was a renunciation of the frontage to the extent of such claim. Plaint dismissed. Great N. W. Coy. v. Sayers, 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 64.

Held, following United Extended Band of Hope Coy. v. Tennant, and Great N. W. Coy. v. Sayers, that persons entitled to a frontage claim taking up a block claim within its limits are thenceforth entitled to the block claim as such only. Clerk v. Wrigley, 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 74, 79.

Abandonment of Frontage Claim by Taking Block Claim.]—The taking possession of a block claim, within the parallels of his frontage claim, by the holder of a frontage claim affords evidence of abandonment of that part of the frontage included in the block—evidence, moreover, to be taken most strongly against the claimholder so acting. McCafferty v. Cummins, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 73, 79.

Forfeiture of Frontage Claim by Taking up Block Claim.]—The taking up of a block claim within a frontage claim by the holder of the latter does not operate as a forfeiture of the entire frontage claim, but is a determination of the frontage interest in the land comprised in the block claim; but, generally, where a space of ground included in frontage claims of two companies, on two different leads, is taken up as a block claim by one of them, the other is not entitled to say that the taking of the block claim is effectual so as to determine the frontage interest of the company taking it, but ineffectual as against its own frontage claim. United Working Miners' G. M. Coy. v. Prince of Wales Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 50, 55, 57.

Frontage Claim—Merging in Block Claim.]—Semble, that where the holder of a block claim acquires from another person a prior frontage claim over a portion of the block claim, the frontage title merges in the block title in the same manner as if the holder of the block claim had held the frontage claim at the time of taking up the block claim. United Working Miners' G.M. Coy. v. Prince of Wales Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 50, 57.

For Non-working.]—Clause 116 of Maryborough Bye-laws, August, 1864, provided that "in all cases where the owner of any quartz claim or share therein shall not, within twenty-four hours after the expiration of the period of registration, cause work to be renewed on or in such claim, according to the usual course of proper and efficient mining, such claim or share shall be forfeited." Held that a company which had sunk a shaft in a claim taken up and registered in a place where mining could only be carried on at a ruinous loss were nevertheless bound to work it; i.e., by draining the mine. Duffy v. Tait, 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 17.

Under Nos. 12 and 49 of the Beechworth Bye-laws a party may hold a claim for three months without working or forming a company. At the expiration of that time, without forming a company, they may hold and work, employing the number of men required by No. 12, becoming subject to the penalties provided in No. 6, and to forfeiture at the suit of the persons who obtained an order for such penalty, but not liable to be displaced without legal process; and their violation of No. 48 will further subject them to the liability of being displaced by persons who have not previously obtained an order for penalty. Kilgour v. Flinn, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 32.

Beechworth Bye-laws (Nos. 14, 19.)]—Beechworth Bye-law (No. 14) directs that "a frontage claim on a supposed lead shall extend 60 feet by a width not exceeding one mile," and "that the holder may defer working till the lead be discovered without rendering the claim liable to forfeiture, provided he has a miner's right," &c., and "shall, within forty-eight hours after the lead is discovered, and the claim laid off by the surveyor, commence and carry on work," &c. No. 19 provides that the owner of a frontage claim shall make application for a survey within sixteen days after discovery of the lead, but the case of a claimholder residing more than ten miles from the surveyor's office is excepted. Held (1) That defendants, who had spoken to surveyor during the survey, after a lead had been discovered, but had not made any demand at the proper stage, or tendered survey fees, or done any work on the claim, which would have been numbered had it been laid off, had not been so negligent as to be deemed to have abandoned the claim; (2) That provisional claimholders, living more than ten miles off, are not bound to call upon the surveyor to act under No. 19, but that any person interested is entitled to call upon the surveyor to mark off substituted claims, and that he should do so along a straight line to avoid overlapping, and taking measures to inform the shareholders of what he is doing; and, so soon as he lays off the substituted claims, the successive claimholders not working become liable to penalties. Atwell v. Ryan, 6 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 21.

Forfeiture—By Neglect of Employee—Notice.]—The 44th bye-law of the Beechworth district, gazetted 25th June, 1869, provided "that the registered owner of a claim who has employed a person to represent him, or in connection with it, by contract or on tribute, should have notice served upon him before he incurred a forfeiture through the neglect, absence, or omission of such employee." A company entered into a sealed agreement with tributers for a period of six months; but the company consented to the tributers abandoning their agreement, or, at all events, perfectly knew that there was no prospect of their executing it, and never urged them to do so. The company, during the six months for which the claim was let on tribute, registered a three months' suspension order, and did nothing during, or at the end of such order, and thereby incurred a forfeiture. The person enforcing the forfeiture did not serve any notice upon the company. Held that the forfeiture was not incurred through the neglect, absence, or omission of the tributers within the meaning of the bye-law so as to entitle the company to notice. And semble, that obtaining the suspension order by the company would not operate by way of estoppel against the company's right to have notice given them, if the forfeiture had been incurred by the neglect, &c., of an employee, &c. O'Sullivan v. Mysterious Quartz G. M. Coy., 1 V.R. (M.,) 4; 1 A.J.R., 13.

Under No. 7, Sec. 5, Sub-sec. 8 of the Sandhurst Bye-laws a claim is liable to forfeiture if unworked for more than ninety-six hours. Crocker v. Wigg, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 20.

How far Working on Adjoining Land shows an Intention to Work a Claim.]—Persons represented at time of suit by the defendants took up a certain frontage claim, and on 12th June, 1866, the defendants took up certain land, including that frontage claim, as a block claim (No. 345,) and were registered as holders, and in September, 1866, No. 345 and other detached "blocks" were amalgamated. From June, 1866, the defendants had done nothing on the surface of No. 345, but had since September, 1866, worked on the other parts of the amalgamated block claim. The plaintiffs sought a declaration that the defendants had forfeited their right to No. 345, by not having worked and continued to work No. 345 at and after the expiration of eight days from registration in accordance with Ballarat Bye-laws (No. 14,) May, 1862. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to the adjudication of forfeiture subject to the warden coming to the opinion on the evidence that the defendants had not within eight days of 12th June, 1866, worked efficiently on other land with a decided intention to mine No. 345, and with as great rapidity as to result as working on the claim itself might reasonably have; that although forfeiture makes the interest not void but voidable, the work on the amalgamated claim did not cure the previous forfeiture of No. 345, it not being necessary to commence the process for forfeiture, while the neglect, the cause of forfeiture, continues; and that the warden could not impose a pecuniary penalty in lieu of forfeiture. Clerk v. Wrigley, 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 74, 78, 82, 83, 84.

The doctrine in the last-mentioned case as to forfeiture when work was done on adjoining land, with a decided intention to work on the claim, and with as great rapidity as to result as working on the claim itself might reasonably have, is not applicable where the adjoining lands are the property of different owners with a prospective contingent arrangement for their becoming the property of the same owner. Schonfeldt v. Beel, 1 V.L.R. (M.,) 1.

Sandhurst Bye-law (No. 8,) Clause 5, of Sec. 4.—Number of Miners to be Constantly Employed.]—The section of the bye-law required a certain number of miners to be constantly employed. Held that the fact of the inability of the claimholder to keep down the water in the shaft with one horse, which compelled them to knock off some of the miners, was not an actus dei to shield them from their liability to forfeiture for not having the requisite number of miners constantly employed. Davis v. Bull, 3 V.R. (L.,) 138; 3 A.J.R., 66.

No. 10 of the Ballarat Bye-Laws continues the obligation imposed by No. 12, r. 14, of advancing a main drive, and unreasonable delay in so doing, is a breach of a duty imposed by the bye-laws, but is not a ground of forfeiture. United Extended Band of Hope Coy. v. Tennant, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 41, 52.

Sandhurst Bye-law (No. 6,) Sec. 9—Notice of Claim — Possession without Adjudication.] — In 1863 A. and party took possession of a claim and were registered as owners. In January, 1864, B. was by mistake registered as owner of the claim. A. and party worked the claim or protected it by registration till about April, 1865. In June, 1866, H. and party applied to know who was registered owner of the claim, and were informed that B. was. In July, 1866, H. and party summoned B. before the warden and obtained an order of forfeiture against him, and took possession of and worked the claim. On suit by A. and party to recover possession, Held that, under the 9th section of Sandhurst Bye-law No. 6, H. and party were not entitled to take possession of the claim without giving notice to or summoning A. and party, and without obtaining a declaration of abandonment by the warden as against A. and party. Hunter v. Aratraveld, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 59.

Curing Forfeiture by Resuming Work—What is not.]—The holders of a claim registered it for three months, so as to obtain an immunity from working, on the ground that they were unable to overcome the water, and that the adjoining claims were not down to the water. The registration was renewed for three months, and on the date of renewal other persons gave notice to the holders of their intention to claim the ground, alleging that it had been forfeited, whereupon the holders resumed work next day, without re-marking the ground. The holders were not entitled to exemption, but the warden decided that they had secured their title by resuming work. On case reserved, Held, by the Chief Judge, that the holders resuming work without abandoning their old title did not cure the forfeiture, irrespective of the question of the necessity of stirring old pegs on claiming to hold old ground under a new title. Coles v. Sparta, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 21.

What will not Cure Forfeiture—Pumping.]—Pumping water out of a claim will not protect it from forfeiture as abandoned under No. 8 of Part 12 of the Castlemaine Bye-laws of 18th August, 1863; unless the pumping be for the purpose of reaching and working at earth, &c. Longbottom v. White, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 35.

Application for a Lease does not Protect a Claim from Forfeiture.]—See cases post under subheading—LEASE.

Protection from Forfeiture—Expenditure upon Claim.]—S. and others were in possession of a claim, and laid out over £1000 upon it. W. and others subsequently obtained a forfeiture by a collusive proceeding, and went into possession, but did not mark out or register their claim. The 135th clause of the bye-laws provided that if £1000 were spent on a claim, the claim could not be forfeited except upon notice. M. brought a summons against W. and others, and S. and others seeking possession. Held that under the bye-laws the expenditure protected S. and party, but did not protect W. and party. Moore v. White, 4 A.J.R., 17.

Abandonment how Cured—Liability to Pay Drainage Assessment.]—One of the Sandhurst Mining Bye-laws provided that a claim might be declared abandoned if no work had been done on it for six months; and another bye-law provided that claims unworked for ninety-six consecutive hours should be forfeited, but exempted claims from forfeiture "during any period for which drainage is being paid." A claim was unworked for more than six months, but a drainage assessment had been made against the owners, and they remained liable for payment of the same. On special case Held on the construction of the bye-laws that a claim unworked for a period exceeding six months is not protected from being declared abandoned by a warden upon an application to be put in possession of such claim, on the ground that the owners of such claim are liable to pay drainage assessment; whether such payment has or has not been made during the period. Christian v. Kenworthy, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 11.

Certificate of Exemption Obtained by False Pretences—Bye-law.]—By a bye-law it was provided that claims, if unworked for a certain period, might be forfeited. By another a means was prescribed by which persons who had worked for some time might suspend the working of their claims for a time on obtaining a certificate of exemption from work for a time named in the certificate. Where such a certificate was admittedly obtained on false pretences, Held that the certificate was voidable only, and not void ab initio. Butler v. O'Keefe, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 16.

Ballarat Bye-laws 11, 23rd October, 1873—Amalgamation of Claims—No Re-registration.]—Several claims became vested in L., who obtained an amalgamation of them under Sec. 10. S. purchased L.'s interest, and became registered as holder of the amalgamated claim; but this was not re-registered under Sec. 12. B., as holder of a miner's right, proceeded against S. before the warden to obtain a declaration of forfeiture for not working under Sec. 16. Held that the amalgamation was effectual for all purposes of working; and, therefore, without re-registration, effectual to cause all liabilities for not working under the bye-law. Seal v. Bebro, 5 V.L.R. (M.,) 4.

Protected Registration under Sec. 14—False Declaration.]—Where C., on behalf of a company, obtained a protected registration of an amalgamated claim under Sec. 14 of the Ballarat Bye-laws (supra) upon a false declaration, the Court refused to answer as to C.'s agency, but answered that there was evidence upon which the District Judge might decide as to the effect of the false declaration. Ibid.

No Retrospective Effect of Bye-law.]—Under Sandhurst Bye-law, 1864 (No. 6,) a claim was subject to forfeiture for six months' not working, and the holder was entitled to orders exempting from work for periods not exceeding six months. By Bye-law, 1866 (No. 7,) "three months" was substituted for "six months." The claim was registered July, 1864, and an exemption order for three months was obtained February, 1867, but the claim had been unworked for some weeks after the expiration of the order. Held that the title was under No. 6, and the exemption order for three months did not bring it under No. 7, and consequently there was no forfeiture. Bond v. Watson, 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 85.

Application for Exemption Certificate should be in Writing.]—A suspension certificate issued under Sec. 76 of the Maryborough Bye-laws, 1866, is not effectual as an excuse for not working a claim, if applied for verbally and not in writing. Brabender v. Gibbs, 6 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 62; N.C., 71.

Protective Registration.]--Under Ballarat Bye-laws, a protective registration under No. VIII. of such bye-laws must be obtained by, or as on behalf of the registered holder. Thompson v. Begg, 2 V.R. (M.,) 1; 2 A.J.R., 34.

The efficacy of protective registration depends on the truth and sufficiency of the declaration on which it is obtained. Ibid.

Protection Order--Neglect to Post Certificate.]—The period allowed by a protection order from forfeiture for not working is in some degree a judicial act of the registrar who registers, and the neglect of the claimholder to procure or post the certificate does not deprive him of the benefit of the protection from forfeiture, though he may be liable to other penalties. Weddell v. Howse, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 44, 49; 4 A.L.T., 95.

Fine Inflicted Instead.]—A fine may properly be inflicted instead of a forfeiture in cases where early neglect is followed by zealous, continuous work, or claimholders fall into merely technical errors, but not where there has been aggravated neglect. Thompson v. Begg, 2 V.R. (M.,) 1, 10; 2 A.J.R., 34.

Abandonment under Bye-laws—Negativing Exceptions Protecting Against.]—A mining bye-law provided that any claim being unworked for four days should be considered abandoned, but that nevertheless it should be lawful to leave a claim unworked while the owners were engaged in extracting gold from any substance taken therefrom, or in the erection of machinery, or in procuring timber, or in doing anything necessary for the working of the claim. Where persons claimed a claim as abandoned under this bye-law, Held that it was not for them to negative the exceptions, resting, as they did, upon facts lying peculiarly within the knowledge of the owners of the claim. Longbottom v. White, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 35.

Bye-Law Enacting Valid though no Person Appointed to Enforce Forfeiture.]—Provisions for forfeiture in mining bye-laws are operative, although the bye-laws do not point out the person who may enforce the forfeiture, and under Bye-law 7 of the Beechworth mining district passed in May, 1866, any holder of a miner's right was held enabled to enforce the forfeiture. Oxley v. Little, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 14.

And see S.P. Barker's G.M. Coy. v. Keating, 1 A.J.R., 55.

How Forfeiture Determined—Repealed Bye-law.]—The question as to an alleged forfeiture of a claim registered under a bye-law, which has been repealed previously to such alleged forfeiture, must be determined according to such bye-law, notwithstanding its repeal, the bye-law under which the claim was registered, and not the circumstance of the forfeiture, having occurred since the passing of the Act No. 291, which, while introducing a new system, kept alive the old bye-law as fully as if the Act itself had not been passed, determines under which system any forfeiture is to be deemed to have taken place, and according to which system it is to be enforced. Regina v. Clow, ex parte Oliver, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 89.

Abandonment—How Made.]—Express renunciation is not necessary for actual abandonment of a claim, the whole tenor of the Act No. 32, and previous decisions, showing that cesser of actual possession operates as an abandonment. Warrior Coy. v. Cotter, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 81, 90, 91.

Abandonment — Cesser of Possession.] — Per Molesworth, Chief Judge.—The title to mine on the Crown lands of Victoria, from their being first let open to miners, has been based on possession, the person first taking such possession under restrictions imposed being held to have the best right. It seems reasonable, therefore, that possession should terminate with cesser of possession; indeed, with cesser of use of the land possessed. The tenor of the Act No. 32 seems to point to this conclusion. In Critchley v. Graham [2 W. & W. (L.,) 211] the Court had to deal with the case of the defendants claiming by forfeiture against plaintiffs in clear visible possession, and intimated that it would decide otherwise in case of actual abandonment. In Landry v. Burton it was taken for granted that abandonment, without a warden's order, put an end to title. People forgetting a right as valueless would never expressly say they abandoned. Warrior Coy. v. Cotter, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 81, 90.

Abandonment—Presumption of.]—Per the Full Court—When holders of a claim afterwards obtain a lease of the same ground, it may be presumed that they have abandoned any portion of the original claim which is not included in the parcels of the lease; and working a shaft which is partly on the excluded ground, but merely for the purpose of working the ground comprised in the lease, does not negative the presumption of abandonment. But, per the Privy Council, intentional abandonment is only to be proved by cogent evidence of the existence of such intention, and the fact that the lease does not include all the land occupied by the company is not sufficient evidence of abandonment. Mulcahy v. Walhalla G. M. Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 103. On appeal, 40 L.J., P.C. 41, 2 A.J.R., 93, sub nom. Walhalla G. M. Coy. v. Mulcahy.

Forfeiture through Default—Collusive Proceeding does not Confer a new Title.]—Per Molesworth, J.—In the case of claimholders having committed a forfeiture, and subject to eviction by an informer, I do not think that a collusive recovery by a friend undertaking to hold as a trustee should be allowed to form a new title for the defaulter. Reardon v. Sayers, 3 A.J.R., 126.

Abandonment—What Amounts to—Collusive Proceeding.]—A collusive proceeding whereby land is allowed to be recovered as for a forfeiture is an abandonment of the prior title, and does not constitute a new title to the land. Moore v. White, 4 A.J.R., 17.

Abandonment of First Title by Second Pegging Out.]—Where plaintiffs took up a claim in conformity with bye-laws, and afterwards pegged out the same land afresh, Held that the plaintiffs must by the second pegging out be deemed to have abandoned their title under the first pegging out. Barker's G. M. Coy. v. Keating, 1 V.R. (M.,) 18; 1 A.J.R., 55; for facts see S.C. post columns 936, 937.

Abandonment—Upon what Warden's Decision Should be Based.]—On 7th May, 1866, R. took up a claim, which he worked till March, 1867, and then obtained a protection order up to 5th June, 1867. R. left a windlass and gear on the claim. On the 22nd of June, 1867, S. took up the same claim as abandoned; but did not obtain an adjudication against R. of abandonment or forfeiture. A servant of R.'s, claiming to be under his orders, entered on the claim and worked it. S. sued him before the warden for trespass. On a special case submitted by the warden as to the question whether S. could take up the claim as abandoned or forfeited without an adjudication by the warden or a Court of Mines, the Chief Judge Held that test of the warden's decision should have been if R. had actually abandoned the claim prior to the taking up of the same by S.; that it was a point the warden himself should have decided, and not proper ground for a special case; and that the warden should have considered the facts and circumstances to enable him to arrive at a conclusion. Small v. Dyer, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 1.

Publication, Date of—Government Gazette.]—The publication of a notice of forfeiture of a claim dates from the time of the Government Gazette containing it being fully printed, and not from the time when it was accessible to the general public, and a person acting in anticipation of the forfeiture, which is confirmed, although not informed of such confirmation, is entitled to the benefit of it. Clarence United Coy. v. Goldsmith, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 14; 3 A.L.T., 147.

"Goldfields Act" (No. 32,) Sec. 77—Adjudication Necessary for Forfeiture—Res inter alios acta.]—In 1861 shareholders of the A. company were in possession under miners' rights of a claim on certain land, and shareholders of the B. company under miners' rights were in possession of a claim on adjoining land. The B. company encroached on the A. company's claim and were summoned before the warden for encroachment. The B. company set up as a defence that the A. company had legally forfeited the claim or should be legally "deemed to have abandoned it," and that in proceedings before the warden by other complainants against the A. company the claim had been declared abandoned, but this was not followed up, and that the B. company had entered and pegged out and applied for a claim. Held (1) That the B. company could not avail themselves of the supposed forfeitures without first obtaining the adjudication of the warden under the 77th Sec. of the "Goldfields Act;" (2) That the adjudication of the warden in the proceedings by other complainants was as between the A. and B. companies res inter alios acta. Critchley v. Graham, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 211.

Means of Taking Advantage of Forfeiture—"Mining Statute 1865" (No. 291,) Secs. 101, 177—Act No. 32, Sec. 77.]—The principle of Critchley v. Graham applies equally under Act No. 291, Secs. 101, 177, as under Act No. 32, Sec. 77; and if bye-laws are at all inconsistent with that principle, the principle is paramount. Where, therefore, the plaintiffs insisted that the defendants, who were in possession of an extended claim, held more than they were entitled to, and obtained a warden's decision to that effect, Held that a preliminary marking out by the plaintiffs before suing for such adjudication was unnecessary, for such preliminary marking out would be a trespass if the plaintiffs proved wrong; and several persons may sue for such adjudication, as to a quantity not exceeding that allowed them by the bye-laws, even though they amalgamated their rights of action into one. Barlow v. Hayes, 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 67. See S.P., Kilgour v. Flinn, post column 938.

Enforcing Forfeiture—Where Claim not Actually Abandoned.]—C. and others were in possession of a claim, but discontinued working, and omitted for fourteen days to post the notics required by the bye-laws. O. and others took possession without seeking a warden's order. Held that the bye-law left untouched the principle of Critchley v. Graham [2 W. & W. (L.,) 211] as to forfeiture being enforced only by legal proceedings; and that where a claim is forfeited and actually abandoned it is open to the first legal claimant; but, unless it be actually abandoned, the persons alleged to have forfeited should be summoned before a warden to dispossess them. Collins v. O'Dwyer, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 30.

Who may Take up Abandoned Claim.]—Where ground is abandoned de facto, it may be taken up by any holder of a miner's right without any previous adjudication of abandonment. Mulcahy v. The Walhalla G.M. Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 103, 120, 121.

Possession though Irregular under Bye-laws cannot be Disturbed unless by Legal Process.]—Plaintiffs applied for a mining lease, and, pending the application, defendants came on to the ground and pegged out and applied for a claim. The application for a lease was refused, and plaintiffs then pegged out and applied for a claim. Plaintiffs sued defendants for encroachment, and defendants set up as a defence, "priority of legal occupation." It appeared that defendants' pegging out and registration were defective under the bye-laws. Held that though defendants' possession was irregular, and the plaintiffs' regular, yet, according to the principle of Critchley v. Graham, the defendants being in possession, the plaintiffs were not entitled to disturb their possession without resorting to legal process. Barker's G.M. Coy. v. Keating, 1 V.R. (M.,) 18; 1 A.J.R. 55.

Where the plaintiff's claim, in respect of which he sued for trespass, was intersected by a road, and the defendant put this forward as a defence, Held that the objection was not available as a defence to the suit for trespass, notwithstanding that it might affect the title to the claim; and following Critchley v. Graham, that the defendant should have applied to a warden for possession instead of taking it for himself. Vallancourt v. O'Rorke, 1 V.R. (M.,) 43.

No Actual Possession or Legal Occupancy—No Adjudication Necessary.]—Plaintiffs were in occupation of ground under a permit for the erection of machinery. Defendants' occupying an adjoining claim, and legally following the dips and angles of the reef, took gold from under the machine area in plaintiffs' occupation. Plaintiffs sued defendants for encroachment. Held that defendants were entitled to the gold, and that it was not necessary for them to obtain a warden's order before helping themselves, inasmuch as the principle of Critchley v. Graham only applies as against persons having possession or claiming to occupy under the Statute, and that the plaintiffs had no claim to occupy, and no one was in possession of the gold till it was actually reached. Vivian v. Dennis, 3 W.W. A'B. (M.,) 29.

Possession of Intruder Good Except as Against Original Holder.]—A claim was constructively abandoned by A. C. went to the warden and informed him that the land was abandoned, and that he claimed it. The warden, without ascertaining the facts, and giving no decision, made a remark to the effect that if the land were abandoned C. should go and take it. C. proceeded to do so, and found that B. had already taken possession, without an adjudication of the warden. C. again applied to the warden, who gave a decision as against A., but refused to give an opinion as to C.'s right as against other parties interested. Held upon a rule nisi for a mandamus to compel the warden to put C. in possession, that B.'s rights had not been litigated, and B.'s possession could not be disturbed by litigation between the other parties; that the decision in Critchley v. Graham only went to show that the warden's adjudication is necessary to foreclose the rights of the original holder on a proceeding between the holder and a person claiming the same land on the ground of forfeiture, and that it does not apply in a contest between an intruder and a person asserting that he is the actual holder. In re Drummond, ex parte Dunbar, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 280. See S.P. Hunter v. Aratraveld, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 59.

Possession de Facto but without Legal Process Good as against another Person who has obtained an Order, but has Abandoned it.]—M. was in possession of some land in excess, and T. without legal process marked out and registered a claim in respect of this. P. obtained an order for possession of this, but abandoned his order and marked out the land as vacant ground. Held that T. being in de facto possession, though without legal process, was entitled to maintain trespass as against P. under the circumstances, although neither T. nor P. had rights as against M. without a warden's order. Truswell v. Powning, 1 V.R. (M.,) 13; 1 A.J.R., 18.

Possession de Facto—Good as against Others Marking Out under an Order which does not Authorise it.]—W. and party held a claim which became liable for forfeiture, and J. and eleven others brought a suit to enforce forfeiture on 2nd November. On 25th November D. and party, who had not obtained any order, marked off a portion of W.'s ground as a claim. On 26th November J. and the eleven others obtained a declaration of forfeiture from the warden, and on the same day J. and twenty others (including eight of the original eleven) marked off on W.'s ground a claim for twenty-one men. D. and party sued J. and the twenty for encroachment. Held that as there was no warden's order for J. and the twenty, and that as J. and the twenty were not identical with the persons obtaining the order, that D. and party were entitled by their prior possession as against J. and the twenty. Keast v. D'Angri, 4 A.J.R., 61.

The principle laid down in Critchley v. Graham (2 W. & W. (L.,) 211,) i.e. that a person in possession of ground as a claim can only be disturbed by legal proceedings, applies to a claim taken up under a bye-law which is ultra vires. Bottrell v. The Waverley G.M. Coy., 2 V.R. (M.,) 16; 2 A.J.R., 133.

But the principle of Critchley v. Graham does not apply where a lease expires by effluxion of time, any one after such expiration being entitled to peg out the land without legal process. Durant v. Jackson, 1 V.L.R. (M.,) 6; Cooper v. White, 4 V.L.R. (M.,) 10.

Where A. claims that B. is in possession of land under a lease alleged to be void, and pegs out a claim on such land, A. is not entitled to maintain trespass against B., inasmuch as A.'s possession is without legal warrant. Whitely v. Schlemm, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 58; 4 A.L.T., 115.

The principle of Critchley v. Graham applies to the case of a residence area; the occupant must be displaced by legal process before another can acquire possession. Warrior Coy. v. Cotter, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 81; Fancy v. Billing, 7 V.L.R. (M.,) 13; 3 A.L.T., 17.

Taking Possession under Forfeiture—Rights of Claimants.]—K. took up ground, but at the end of three months had not formed a company as required by the bye-laws. At the expiration of the three months L., without going before a warden, took possession of the claim by pegging out, alleging that K.'s title had expired, he having taken possession of the ground for the purpose of forming a company and not having done so. F. complained to the warden that K. had forfeited, and that L. was trespassing on the ground, and took proceedings to oust them both and to be put into possession. Held that L. was not justified in taking possession without going before a warden, but that F.

could not avail himself of the defect in L.'s title; that F. was right in not pegging out the claim before suit; and in proceeding against K. and L. jointly; but that he was subject to be defeated by them respectively according to their respective titles in existence at the time of the suit. Kilgour v. Flinn, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 32.

Effect of Order of Forfeiture.]—The warden's order only declares the land open for selection; it removes existing rights such as they were, and then people take it up under miner's rights. Sayers v. Jacomb, 3 A.J.R., 66.

Effect of Order of Forfeiture.]—An order of forfeiture merely operates as a clearing away of the old title, so as to authorise possession under miners' rights; and those who wish to take possession after a forfeiture must not rely upon the order alone, but must mark out; and, Semble, must register their claim in accordance with the bye-laws as though they were taking up original ground; and persons obtaining a forfeiture may not be entitled to take all the forfeited ground. They establish a right for the public, and may then help themselves to so much as they are entitled to, and not to the entire claim; and, to give them title, marking out is necessary. Moore v. White, 4 A.J.R., 17.

Where W. and others were in possession of a claim, and a collusive proceeding for forfeiture was taken, and an order for forfeiture obtained, and W. and some of the others took possession of the claim, but did not mark it out or register it, on suit by others who wished to take the claim, and proceeded against those who were in possession originally and those in possession under the forfeiture, Held that they were entitled, under their miners' rights, to succeed against the defendants. Ibid.

Effect of Declaration of Forfeiture.]—A complainant obtaining a decree of forfeiture does not thereby acquire a title to the land, but merely removes a prior title obstructing him in doing so; and, if he desires to obtain possession, he must go through the ordinary formalities as to acquiring title. Beavan v. Rigby, 2 V.L.R. (M.,) 7.

Marking Out Necessary to Complete a Transfer—Onus of Proof.]—P. summoned C. before the warden to have it declared that C. was in illegal occupation of land, C. not having marked out, and P. being entitled under miner's right. It appeared that M. had, by a warden's order, been declared to be entitled to possession of the land in dispute, such having been taken up by others, whom M. sued, in excess of what they were entitled to. M. transferred to C., but C. had made no application by marking out under the bye-laws. Held that C. could only have got a good title by marking out; that, as a defence, the onus of proof lay upon C. as to his marking out; and, so far as regarded the defence of M. marking out, it was a question of fact for the warden to decide upon whether M. had marked out or not. Palmer v. Chisholm, 5 A.J.R., 169.

A bye-law provided for marking out and registering claims, such provisions necessitating delays; and a subsequent clause of the same bye-law (Ballarat Bye-law No. 3, Sec. 28) provided that a person obtaining an order for possession from the warden should produce it before the registrar, who should forthwith register him for the claim in lieu of the person who had forfeited the claim. Held that though, as a general rule, a warden's order for possession merely clears away former titles, and the party obtaining such an order must mark out and register his claim as if taking up a new one; yet, under the bye-law in question, the word forthwith precluded the contention that the claim must be marked out and registered under the former sections of the bye-law, since the delays caused by such a course would be inconsistent with the word forthwith. Barton v. Band of Hope and Albion Consols, 6 V.L.R. (M.,) 1; 1 A.L.T., 145.

Occupying Forfeited Ground.]—A person seeking to be put into possession of forfeited ground is only entitled to be put into possession of so much as the bye-laws allow to a single individual, and not of all the ground occupied by those forfeiting it. Oxley v. Little, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 14.

Rights of Complainant Pending Suit.]—The inchoate rights of a complainant in a Court of Mines, under a plaint for forfeiture, are not to be obstructed by the right to a special case given by the Act No. 446 to the defendant. Harwood v. Beavan, 2 V.L.R. (M.,) 13.

A warden, being disposed to decide in favour of the complainant, nevertheless, on the application of the defendant, stated a special case, and, in accordance with the decision thereon, he made an order declaring the claim forfeited, and that the complainant was, on compliance with certain conditions, entitled to possession. A third person meanwhile took possession of the claim as abandoned ground; and, on the complainant entering, sued him for trespass. Held that a third person was not entitled to take up the claim in question pending the decision of the Chief Judge on the special case; and that the condition imposed by the warden between the parties to the previous plaint did not concern him. Ibid.

Holders of Miners' Rights—Forfeiture under repealed Bye-Law.]—A claim was liable to forfeiture for a breach of a bye-law, which was subsequently to such breach repealed. The repealing bye-law expressly saved "the rights of persons obtained previous to, and held at the time of this bye-law coming into force. Held that proceedings to enforce forfeiture for the breach would lie, notwithstanding the repeal of the bye-law, and that the persons seeking to enforce the forfeiture need not have held miners' rights, either when the breach occurred, or before the repeal of the bye-law, provided they held them when they so sought to enforce the forfeiture. United Extended Band of Hope Coy. v. Doyle, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 39.

Parties to Proceeding for Forfeiture.]—S. and party took up a claim, and by a collusive proceeding W. and party obtained a forfeiture, but did not mark out or register their claim. In a proceeding by other parties to have themselves put in possession of the claim, S. and party and W. and party were made defendants. Held that they were all properly made defendants since the complainants did not know whose title would be set up. Moore v. White, 4 A.J.R., 17.

Suit for Forfeiture—Parties.]—In a suit for forfeiture, the complainant proceeded against the transferee of a person who had obtained a declaration of forfeiture against the prior registered owners, and had not removed their names from the register. Held that the prior registered owners were not necessary parties to the suit. Beavan v. Rigby, 2 V.L.R. (M.,) 7.

Want of Equity—Want of Parties.]—M. and H. were entitled to a quartz claim in equal shares. After registration P. and five others were improperly registered for the same claim, and H. was registered as one-third owner of this new claim, this one-third being transferred to him by P. On 12th December, 1874, M. instituted a suit against H., P., and the others, to have himself declared entitled to one-half of the claim, and obtained an order against assigning and a receiver. The judge of the court on 11th May, 1875, made his decree in M.'s favour, having on 12th February announced his intention of so deciding. On 8th March, the defendant, with notice of M.'s suit, summoned H., P., and the others before the warden, and obtained an order of possession of the claim, as a forfeited claim, on 11th May, and was registered as claimholder on 14th May. On 20th May, M. issued his decree. Some of the party, H., P., and others, instituted an appeal against the warden's order, but subsequently abandoned it. M. then summoned the defendant, seeking to have the order for alleged forfeiture set aside. Held that there was nothing to show that the claim was not properly liable for forfeiture when the defendant got his order, and that therefore M. had no equity, but that there was no want of parties, defendant's order and M.'s decree having concluded the rights of H., P., and the others. Morrison v. Hartley, 1 V.L.R. (M.,) 15.

Practice—Evidence.]—Where a warden is hearing a complaint as to forfeiture of a claim he should not decide it upon evidence taken in another proceeding as to propriety of granting a lease, but should take fresh evidence. Constable v. Pigtail Coy., 3 V.L.R. (M.,) 7.

And see cases post under Practice in Warden's Courts.

(g) Proceedings in Respect of Trespass to or Encroachment upon Claims.

Act No. 291, Secs. 5, 101, Sub-sec. iii, 177.]—S. summoned J. for trespass in marking off and applying for a lease of portion of the plaintiff's claim. Held that Sec. 5 says nothing as to exclusive possession, and that the marking off and applying for a lease was not a trespass or unlawful interference within Sec. 177 (referring to Sec. 101, Sub-sec. iii.) Stephens v. Jolly, 5 A.J.R., 162.

Act No. 291, Secs. 195, 197—Complainant out of Possession.]—W. took up a claim under bye-laws, holding a miner's right at the time. P. trespassed on the ground. W. never took possession, being kept out by P. Held that W. was in such a position as to maintain trespass under Sec. 197, and that it was not necessary for him to proceed under Sec. 195 for recovery of possession. White v. Perriam, 5 V.L.R. (M.,) 31; 1 A.L.T., 95.

Encroachment—Complaint for—Who may Bring—Person in Possession—No. 291, Sec. 101 (iii.)]—Sub-sec. iii. of Sec. 101 of the "Mining Statute 1865," does not confine the remedy for encroachment to plaintiffs having good title, or indirectly oblige them to show a good title in addition to showing their possession undisturbed. The clause should be read so as to leave untouched the old principle that possession is primâ facie evidence of title, and is a sufficient title against a mere wrongdoer. And a defect in the plaintiff's title does not subject him to be defeated in a suit by the defendant entering without legal process according to the principle of Critchley v. Graham. Cruise v. Crowley, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 27.

A defect in plaintiff's title owing to his occupying a claim intersected by a public road does not defeat his right to bring trespass as against a defendant who has entered without legal process. Vallancourt v. O'Rorke, 1 V.R. (M.,) 43.

Person Marking Out under Invalid Bye-Law Cannot Sue for Encroachment.]—Jenkinson v. Cumming, ante columns 915, 916.

Land held in Excess—Possession de facto though without Legal Process—Good as against all but Rightful Owner.]—M., holder of a claim, was in possession of more land in the claim than he was entitled to under the bye-laws. A warden's summons was issued by P., returnable on 1st November at 10 a.m., against M. for possession of the land held by M. in excess. On 1st November at 2.30 a.m. T., without M.'s consent, pegged out a claim on the land in excess, and registered the claim at 10 a.m. The warden on the same day at 11 a.m. made an order in favour of P., who, at 11.30 a.m. with M.'s consent, pegged out his claim on the land in excess, and took possession of it as vacant ground, and not as under the warden's order, or as transferee of M. T. summoned P. for trespass, and to remove him. Held on special case, that T. could acquire a title by taking possession of and occupying the land as against all persons entering and marking out after him during the occupation of M. of the land held in excess; that P. had trespassed as regards T. by pegging out the claim after T. had done so, and could not set up the possessory title of M. as against T., and that T. was entitled to succeed. Truswell v. Powning, 1 V.R. (M.,) 13; 1 A.J.R., 18.

Actual Possession Good as a Defence to a Suit for Encroachment.]—Pending the application by plaintiffs for a mining lease, the defendant took up the land, the subject of the application, as a claim, but not in conformity with the bye-laws. Subsequently, while the application was still pending, the plaintiffs also pegged out the land as a claim in conformity with the bye-laws. On the refusal of the lease, the plaintiffs again took up the land as a claim in conformity with the bye-laws, and sued the defendants for encroaching. Held that the application for a lease did not protect the land from being lawfully taken up as a claim by the applicants or any one else, subject to the rights of the applicants in the event of their lease being granted; that the plaintiffs, by their second pegging out, must be deemed to have abandoned their title under their first pegging out; and that the defendants, who were in actual occupation during the second pegging out, had a good title, by such occupation, against the plaintiffs, and could resist a suit for encroachment. Barker's G.M. Coy. v. Keating, 1 V.R. (M.,) 18; 1 A.J.R., 55.

Proof of Compliance with Bye-laws.]—It lies upon the defendants in a trespass suit to show that the plaintiffs in possession have not complied with the mining bye-laws in taking up their claim; e.g., in not pegging out. Mulcahy v. The Walhalla G.M. Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 103, 121.

Trespass—De Facto Possession.]—In a plaint before a judge and assessors for trespass and damages to a claim, if the plaintiff prove prior possession de facto, the legality of such possession in respect to conformity to bye-laws, &c., should not be allowed to be questioned by the defendant. Wearne v. Froggatt, 2 V.L.R. (M.,) 1.

De Facto Possession.]—A plaintiff in actual occupation of ground as a residence area is entitled to recover in an action of encroachment against defendants, who commenced mining pending their application for a lease, which they had no right to do. Fahey v. Koh-i-noor Coy., 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 4.

Title to Claim—Transfer—Possession.]—Where the title of an applicant seeking injunction against encroachment to a claim under Sec. 203 of Act No. 291, is a recent transfer, such transfer should be supported by showing the title of the transferors or something else; if subsequent possession is shown evidenced by a proceeding for forfeiture against the transferees, such possession, if uncontradicted, may, in the warden's discretion, be deemed, in an application for injunction, sufficient evidence of title. Grant v. Lawlor, 3 V.L.R. (M.,) 15.

Suit for Trespass—Who Entitled to Maintain.]—After the expiration of a mining lease D., a holder of miners' rights, put in pegs in the land comprised therein and entered into possession of the land as a claim. J., who had been the previous lessee and who had held over after the expiration of the lease, put in lease pegs. Held that D. was sufficiently entitled to maintain trespass; Critchley v. Graham distinguished, on the ground that in that case the termination was by forfeiture or abandonment and not effluxion of time, while in this case the determination of the lease was by effluxion of time. Durant v. Jackson, 1 V.L.R. (M.,) 6.

Trespass Suit for—Who may Maintain—Void Lease—Possession under Miners' Rights without Legal Warrant.]—W. and company, claiming that S. and company were in possession of land under a gold mining lease which they alleged to be void, marked out the land under miners' rights as a claim, registered the claim and entered upon it. S. and company immediately expelled them, and they brought a plaint for trespass against S. and company. Held that having wrongfully taken possession of the land, without legal warrant, according to the doctrine of Critchley v. Graham, they could not maintain trespass. Whitely v. Schlemm, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 58; 4 A.L.T., 115.

Trespass—Who is Responsible for—Hired Servant.]—The hired servant of a claimholder acting under his orders, will stand in the same position as regards a complaint against him for trespass, as the claimholder would if he were a defendant. Small v. Dyer, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 1.

Encroachment—When Unintentional and Unconcealed — Damages.] — Two adjoining claimholders had their boundary fixed by a consent decree, such decree fixing as the boundary two lines A B, B C, meeting at an obtuse angle in B. In consequence of a misplacement of the vertex B, it was found that the defendant company had unintentionally and without concealment encroached upon the plaintiff company's claim. Held that the defendant company was entitled to a deduction of the expenses of working, at the rate of a third of the value in dispute. St. George's United Coy. v. Albion Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 88, 95.

Trespass to Claim—Damages for.]—It is no ground for damages in a suit for trespass to a claim that the defendant's continuing trespass has caused an obstruction to the plaintiff's obtaining a lease of the land comprised in the claim. Vallancourt v. O'Rorke, 1 V.R. (M.,) 43.

Assessment of Damages where some of the Complainants have not Miner's Rights.]—Critchley v. Graham; Chisholm v. United Extended Band of Hope Coy.; Sea Queen Q.M. Coy. v. Sea Q.M. Coy.; and Bebro v. Bloomfield; post column 963.

Amalgamated Claim not Registered—No Evidence as to Trespass on Original Claims.]—A company was registered for two claims which had been amalgamated, but the amalgamated claim had not been separately registered, and, on a complaint for trespass to the amalgamated claim, the trespass was proved, but there was no evidence to show on which of the separate claims the trespass was committed. Held that the complaint could not proceed. United Claims Tribute Coy. v. Taylor, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 19; 3 A.L.T., 147.

What Entitles to—Act No. 291, Sec. 5.]—A resident on goldfields, and holding a miner's right, who has complied with the bye-laws, and although not actually mining, was a water-race holder, is entitled to a residence area. Campbell v. M'Intyre, N.C., 12.

Suit by Married Woman to obtain Possession of —Husband must be Joined.]—A married woman who held a miner's right, proceeded to sue alone before a warden to obtain possession of a residence area on the ground of abandonment. Held, on a special case, that there being nothing in the "Mining Statute 1865," to relieve a married woman from the common law necessity of being joined by her husband in all actions, and it not being shown that she came within the provisions of the "Married Women's Property Act," she was not entitled to sue without joining her husband. Foley v. Norton, 4 V.L.R. (M.,) 13.

Exception of Crown Land from Occupation as a Residence Area — "Gazette" Notice — "Mining Statute 1865," Sec. 14.]—M., by virtue of a miner's right, took possession as a residence area, and subject to the bye-laws, of a piece of Crown land. The land was subsequently, by a Gazette notice, excepted from occupation for mining, residence, or business purposes. M. was summoned for being in unauthorised occupation of the land in question, he having been previously convicted of being in unauthorised occupation of the same land. It was urged that M., having a miner's right and a residence area ticket, could not be said to be in unauthorised occupation. Held that since the power to except from mining purposes, conferred by Sec. 14 of the "Mining Statute 1865," extended to land already occupied, the notice in the Gazette was determination of the occupation; and, Semble, that, having lawfully entered into occupation, M. was entitled to personal notice of the exception of his residence area from mining, &c., and to a demand for possession before summons issued; but that, if this were so, the previous conviction was sufficient notice. Regina v. Dowling, ex parte M'Lean, 2 V.R. (L.,) 61; 2 A.J.R., 56.

Land Reserved for Public Purposes—Occupation as a Residence Area.]—A town council in 1856 took possession of land for the purpose of getting road material. In February, 1862, a notice appeared in the Gazette temporarily reserving the land from sale, and granting the council permissive occupancy, and the council fenced it in. After this, G., a holder of a miner's right, occupied the land as a residence area, and had paid rates to the council therefor. Subsequently, in 1871, by a proclamation in the Gazette, the land was exempted from mining. The council sued G. for trespass. Held that G.'s rights were terminated by the Gazette notice of 1871; that his possession was subject to the prior reservation for public purposes; and that although the possession of the council was irregular under the "Land Act 1860," yet it was de facto, and sufficient to enable the council to maintain the action. Mayor, &c., of Sandhurst v. Graham, 3 V.R. (L.,) 191; 3 A.J.R., 79.

Holder of, cannot Mine upon—Ballarat Bye-laws (No. 14.)]—The holder of a residence area under Ballarat Bye-laws (No. 14) has no title to mine upon such area; and, Semble, that the holders of residence areas under the above bye-law, by mining, are encroaching upon the rights of the mining public. Warrior Coy. v. Cotter, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 81, 94.

A residence area cannot be taken up upon a "frontage claim" against the will of the owner of the latter. Ibid.

Land Occupied for Mining Purposes.]—The definition of mining purposes both in Acts No. 32 and No. 291 does not include residence; though in both the holder of a miner's right is made entitled to a residence. Rosales v. Rice, 1 V.R. (M.,) 1; 1 A.J.R., 13.

[But now see Sec. 13 of Act No. 446, where mining purposes include residence and business areas.]

The Crown cannot grant a mining lease of land comprising a residence area previously acquired. Jones v. Christenson, 7 V.L.R. (M.,) 6; 2 A.L.T., 149; for facts see S.C. post column 953.

Rights of Holder.]—The holder of a residence area cannot lawfully mine on the area himself, or confer any title on another to mine. St. George and Band of Hope Coy. v. Band of Hope and Albion Consols, 2 V.R. (E.,) 206, 221; 2 A.J.R., 127.

Person Taking up Mining Claim over Residence Area.]—A person taking up a mining claim over a residence area, acquires no title to such claim, either as against the residence area-holder or anyone else. Ibid, 2 V.R., p. 218.

Whether it may be Sublet—Act No. 291, Sec. 5.]—A holder of a residence area under a miner's right cannot sublet it to another not holding a miner's right, and cannot sue for arrears of rent, although such quasi tenant may have paid rent previously. Jones v. Joyce, 3 V.R. (L.,) 209; 3 A.J.R., 105.

Powers of Holders to Sublet and Assign—Act No. 291, Sec. 5—Married Woman as Holder—Re-registration—Abandonment.]—N., a married woman, was registered in respect of residence area No. 4786; she and her husband resided on it till November, 1876, when they removed, and let the area to a tenant. In 1877 N. went to England and realised some property left to her to her separate use. In January, 1878, the house on the area was burnt to the ground, and on the next day the husband obtained a certificate of exemption from residence for six months. In July, 1878, F. claimed as on abandonment and took possession, and N. shortly after instituted a suit for trespass. In August N. re-registered the area as No. 7254. On 12th December, 1877, R. brought a plaint against N., seeking possession on the ground of abandonment. Held that holders of residence areas unless restricted by the bye-laws have power to sublet and assign, and that N.'s removal in 1876 was not an abandonment; that the certificate of exemption obtained by N.'s husband as her agent was valid; that N. was entitled to defend the plaint in R. v. N. as under the old number 4786; and that N. might be sued by R. without making N.'s husband a party. Reardon v. Norton, 5 V.L.R. (M.,) 12.

Transfer—Holder of Miners' Rights.]—H. was registered in respect of a residence area. H. transferred to N., who entered into possession and transferred, by way of mortgage, to S. S. was paid off by and transferred to A. A. never was in possession, but let it to N., who paid rent for it. After N.'s death his widow paid some rent, and then became registered as holder and transferred to C., who took possession. A. sued C. before the warden. Held that the letting to N. was legal if both held miners' rights, otherwise it was illegal; but that A. did not thereby lose all right to the area; and that A. must prove that at the time of the registration by N.'s widow he held a miners' right, otherwise he could not recover possession. Summers v. Cooper, 5 V.L.R. (M.,) 22; 1 A.L.T., 46.

Right to Remove Fixtures—"Mining Statute 1865," Sec. 5.]—The holder of a residence area must exercise the right to remove buildings and fixtures thereon belonging to him, given to him by Sec. 5 of the "Mining Statute 1865," during his tenure, or at farthest within a reasonable time after his right to possession has ceased, and before another person has lawfully entered into possession. Summers v. Cooper, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 274; 4 A.L.T., 57.

Suit for Trespass on — Who may Maintain—Uncertificated Insolvent—Parties.]—An uncertificated insolvent who holds a miner's right may maintain a complaint before a warden for trespass on a residence area, and his assignee is not a necessary party to such a proceeding. Fancy v. North Hurdsfield United Coy., 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 5; 3 A.L.T., 89.

An occupier of a residence area may maintain an action for encroachment against persons mining on land including the residence area, the subject of an application for a lease before such application has been dealt with. Fahey v. Kohinoor Coy., 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 4.

Owners of Machine Area cannot Maintain Trespass against Persons in Constructive Possession of the Gold.]—The occupants of ground, held under a permit from the warden for the erection of machinery, complained of a trespass committed by the owners of an adjoining quartz reef in following the dips of the reef under the machinery area. They were authorised to follow the dips and angles of the reef by a Local Court Rule, which was held not to be ultra vires. The occupants of the machine area had also struck gold by mining on the area, and they claimed this gold as against the owners of the reef; neither of the claimants were in actual possession of the gold till they reached it; and the defendants were, previously to reaching it, in constructive possession of the gold as connected with the reef on which their claim was marked out. Held, reversing the Court of Mines, that the plaintiffs could have no title to the gold in dispute but that of unlawful occupants; and that the defendants had a title to the gold the subject of dispute. Vivian v. Dennis, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 29.

Proceedings Necessary to Dispossess Occupant—Transfer to Trustee of a Company.]—C. obtained registration of a residence area and transferred to S., and by divers transfers the property in it became vested in F. It was proved that S. had purchased as a trustee for a company. B. marked out and was registered for a piece of land as a residence area including the part taken up by C. Held that B. was not entitled to mark out and take possession without taking proceedings against F. who was a bonâ fide purchaser without notice. Quære, whether the title to the residence area determined on the transfer to S. as a trustee for the company. Fancy v. Billing, 7 V.L.R. (M.,) 13; 3 A.L.T., 17.

Practice — Regulations 27th January, 1871 — Service of Notice.]—The warden's office as mentioned in the regulations as the place to which notices must be posted by applicants for leases, is not the place where he sits as judge, but the principal place from which he issues his summonses and orders. A company in possession is sufficiently served with notice when the applicant for a lease is the manager of the company and has kept a copy notice as served upon the company. Constable v. Pigtail Coy., 3 V.L.R. (M.,) 7.

Regulations 1871 in Government "Gazette" p. 131—Service of Notices upon Occupiers.]—S., the manager of a company, applied for a lease and pegged out. The notice stated that a great many persons were occupiers, and service of the notice of application was effected by thrusting the notice under the door of the dwellings of some of the occupiers. Held that in order to make such service good the persons sustaining the notice must show that it reaches the person served; that the list of occupiers published by S. afforded evidence against him that the persons named were occupiers, and that there was not evidence of sufficient service; and that the want of sufficient service was a default in proceeding with the application for the lease within No. 446, Sec. 4. Barton v. Band of Hope and Albion Consols, 5 V.L.R. (M.,) 47; 1 A.L.T. 95.

Default in Application—Act No. 446, Sec. 4.]—The non-payment, under the sub-clause E. of Regulation 4 of the "Leasing Regulations 1871," within seven days prior to the making an application for a lease, of a sum of money to cover the cost of surveying interior lines, and the connection to the nearest fixed point, is a default in proceeding with an application for a lease within Sec. 4 of the Act No. 446. Great Northern Coy. v. Brown, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 1; 3 A.L.T., 89.

Regulations 44—47 of the "Leasing Regulations 1871" are not ultra vires, although they do not require a person pointing out a forfeiture to peg out as he would be required to do in applying for a lease in the first instance under Sec. 37 of Act No. 291. Robertson v. Morris, 7 V.L.R. (M.,) 1; 2 A.L.T., 109.

The fulfilment of the preliminaries does not give such rights as would amount to a "claim" within Sec. 27 of Act No. 241. Hitchins v. The Queen, 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 133.

Marking Out—Priority.]—The priority between one person marking out for a lease, and another marking out for a claim, dates as to the former when he has fully complied with the regulations as to painting, &c., the posts. Clarence United Coy. v. Goldsmith, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 14; 3 A.L.T., 147.

An intending applicant for a mining lease put in posts on the 18th of February, but did not paint them white or put on plates, as required by the leasing regulations, till the 21st. Held that this marking out dated only from the 21st. Ibid.

Act No. 291, Secs. 24, 40—Who may be Applicants.]—The applicant for a lease under Act No. 291 must be a person, persons or a company; a contemplated company cannot be an applicant. The Governor is not warranted in granting a lease to a person alleged to be an assignee of the applicant against the protest of the applicant. Semble, the Governor can only grant a lease to the applicant. Aladdin G. M. Coy. v. Aladdin and Try Again G. M. Coy., 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 266, 276, 277.

Who entitled to a Lease—Trust for one Company in Mistake for Another.]—The J. company held land as part of a claim, and permitted the A. company to put a dam and reservoir upon it. On a compromise of disputes between the J. and T. companies, the land and other claims were assigned to the T. company, and registered in the name of M. as trustee for it in January, 1870, and M. in the same month applied on behalf of the T. company for a lease of several claims, which lease did not include the claim in question (No. 1846); but notwithstanding this, M. amalgamated various claims of the T. company, including 1846. The T. company and the A. company had many officers in common. L. was chairman of both, M. a director of both, and the same person was manager of both. L. by letter, and then verbally, without resolutions of his boards, directed M. to apply for a lease for the A. company, and he, in mistake, applied for a lease for the T. company, and used the moneys of the T. company for the purpose. A meeting of the directors of the T. company subsequently directed the application on its behalf to be abandoned and the deposit got back, and they, acting for the A. company, ordered payment of the deposit as for it. On the execution of the lease by the Governor to M., he induced the Minister of Mines to hand it over to the solicitor of the A. company, for whom it had been applied for. The T. company subsequently became involved, and its plant, claims, &c., were sold under execution to certain persons who formed a company, the K. company, to mine on the property. The A. company discovered that the K. company had encroached underground upon the land included in the lease, and thereupon sued to restrain such encroachment in the Court of Mines, when the suit was dismissed. On appeal to the Chief Judge, Held that the A. company were entitled to relief; that the T. company had no inchoate right in the lease which could pass under the sale, by virtue of the application made by mistake in their name; that there was no necessity to consult those equitably interested as shareholders in the T. company, in order to rectify the mistake by transferring the lease to the A. company; and appeal allowed, and account of gold taken decreed. Australasian G. M. Coy. v. Wilson, 4 A.J.R., 63.

Registered Holder of a Mining Tenement—Power to Deal with it.]—The plaintiff and defendant companies had adjoining claims, and wished to obtain leasehold interests in them. Their applications were for lands overlapping, and there was much conflict between them before T. the warden, but subsequently an agreement between the companies was entered into and reported to T., who issued a lease to S., manager of the plaintiff company, and was prepared to issue a lease to A., the manager of the defendant company, who had carried on negotiations on behalf of the defendant company. T. had fixed a certain street as boundary. The defendant company refused the first lease, and obtained a second lease granting them certain other land, as to which neither S. nor plaintiff company remonstrated—this latter land not being included in plaintiff's lease. Suit by the plaintiff company seeking to set aside second lease to defendant company. Held, on appeal, affirming Molesworth, J., that S., being the registered holder of the mining tenement, was empowered to authorise the agreement entered into without the consent of the plaintiff company, who held only the position of beneficiaries, and to consent to the part of the land (the subject of the dispute) being given up to defendants in return for other land being included in the lease to the plaintiff company; and that if the authority of the plaintiff company were necessary, the facts showed such authority. Band of Hope and Albion Consols v. Young Band Extended Coy., 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 37.

"Mining Statute" (No. 291,) Sec. 24—Execution by Governor.]—F. was granted a mining lease on 6th March, 1872, and a notice appeared in the Gazette of 12th April, 1872, that, unless lessees attended at the proper time to execute, the leases would be liable to forfeiture. F. did not execute, and W., a holder of miners' rights, issued a summons to be put into possession of the lease as forfeited. The warden's clerk sent a telegram to prevent F. from executing, but it miscarried, and F. executed the lease before the summons was heard. Held that, reading the Act with the regulations, the execution by the Governor operates only by way of escrow, dependent for completion upon the lessee executing within the terms of the regulations; that the warden had power to question the power of the Governor to execute after the sixty days mentioned in the regulations, and to declare the lease void, and to put W. in possession. Wissing v. Finnegan, 3 A.J.R., 126.

When Valid—Not Executed within Prescribed Time—No. 291, Sec. 39.]—Sec. 39 of the "Mining Statute 1865," which enacts that a lease may be granted notwithstanding that the person applying for it may not in all respects have complied with the leasing regulations, will not operate to render valid a lease which has not been executed within the time prescribed by the leasing regulations after it has been granted, as against a person who has obtained possession from a warden after the time has elapsed, and before execution of the lease. Sec. 39 only relates to the waiver of objections before the Governor's execution, not before that of the lessee. Finnegan v. Wissing, 4 A.J.R., 65.

Act No. 291, Sec. 24—Means by which Grant of Lease of Lands Occupied under Miners' Rights may be Restrained.]—Although under Sec. 24 the Governor-in-Council is prohibited from granting a lease of lands occupied under miners' rights there is nothing in the Act or regulations to bind the Governor to follow the opinion of the warden as to refusing a lease; Sec. 24 is an enabling section, and though it may be by implication prohibitory, there is no provision made to enforce the prohibition. City of Melbourne G.M. Coy. v. The Queen, 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 148, 155.

And the right if any of a holder of miners' rights to stop the issue of a second lease inconsistent with the holder's previous rights is not a "claim" or "demand" within Sec. 27 of Act No. 241. Ibid.

What Passes by Grant of Lease—Act No. 148.]—A mining lease under the "Leases of Auriferous Land Act" (No. 148) passes everything to the lessees, and therefore a holder of a miner's right has no right to search on the leased ground for auriferous quartz. Harwood v. Coster, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 163.

What Rights a Lease is Subject to—Act No. 291, Sec. 24—"Transfer of Land Statute" (No. 301,) Sec. 49.]—J. E. applied for a mining lease of certain land, and pending the application went into possession. When the lease was ready for issue it was, by a mistake, taken up and executed by another J. E., and the original J. E. not getting his lease went out of possession. On discovery of the mistake the lease was cancelled, and a fresh one issued to the proper J. E., who obtained a certificate of title on it, and transferred the certificate to plaintiff. Between the issue of the two leases defendant took up the land under miners' rights, and contended that plaintiff's lease was, under Sec. 24 of the "Mining Statute 1865," subject to their occupation under the miners' rights. Held that the lease was not subject to such occupation, such occupation not being a reservation or exception within the meaning of Sec. 49 of Act No. 301. Munro v. Sutherland, 4 A.J.R., 166.

What Passes under Grant of "Land."]—Although in the case of a conveyance by a subject entitled to land and gold mine thereunder the mine would pass under a grant of "land," yet in a mining lease from the Crown where the certificate of title is silent as to the mine, the lessees, though entitled to the land and the mesne profits on the surface, are not as against defendants, who claim under miners' rights, entitled to the gold, since their title to the gold is not conclusive, being subject to such miners' rights as to "rights, &c., subsisting at the time of the lease." Munro v. Sutherland, 5 A.J.R., 139.

See S.C. under Transfer of Land—Title under Certificate.

What Passes under a Mining Lease.]—A mining lease, under the "Mining Statute 1865," though it may include a public road, cannot give any right to mine under the half of the road which has previously become private property by virtue of a Crown grant conveying the lands abutting upon it. Shamrock Coy. v. Farnsworth, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 165.

But see Garibaldi Coy. v. Craven's New Chum Coy. 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 233.

Construction of Lease—Reservation of Free Access to Creek.]—In a Crown mining lease the land demised comprised a creek, but there was in a subsequent part of the lease a reservation of the creek, with liberty of access to the creek. J. entered into possession of and mined part of the creek as an alluvial claim. Held that as between the lessees in possession, as under the lease, and J., the creek was protected from occupation for the purpose of alluvial mining under a miner's right, such occupation not being based on any legal proceeding. Walhalla G.M. Coy. v. Jennings, 1 V.L.R. (M.,) 12.

Labour Covenant.]—Per Higinbotham, J.—The labour covenant in a gold mining lease is the real consideration given for the lease, and should be strictly construed. Barwick v. Duchess of Edinburgh Coy., 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 70, 78; 3 A.L.T., 68.

Lease Expired—Acceptance of Rent.]—A Crown lease was granted for a certain term, which, after various assignments, became vested in a bank. After the expiration of the lease, the bank, still holding possession by its agent, paid rent to a district treasury, which was received. Held that the acceptance of rent created no new interest. Durant v. Jackson, 1 V.L.R. (M.,) 6.

Reversionary Lease—Act No. 291, Sec. 24—Act No. 446, Sec. 3.]—During the pendency of a lease, W. applied for a lease of the same ground. Held that the Crown could not grant reversionary leases under Sec. 24 of Act No. 291, and that the provisions of Act No. 446, Sec. 3, did not apply to such a case. Ibid.

Grant of Lease—Holders of Miners' Rights in Occupation at Time of Grant.]—If a lease granted by the Governor comprises land then occupied by the holder of a miners' right, the lease is quoad such land void, and no proceedings to set it aside are necessary. In a trespass suit by a company mining on land the subject of a lease under Act No. 291, against a company mining on the same land, the defendant company relied upon a title derived from persons holding miners' rights and in occupation of the land at the time of the granting of the lease. Held, per Molesworth, J., and affirmed on appeal, that there was no need for the defendants to seek relief against the lease by a cross bill, nor need the defendant move to set aside the lease by a writ of scire facias. Aladdin G.M. Coy. v. Aladdin and Try Again G.M. Coy., 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 266.

Power of Crown to Grant a Lease under a Residence Area.]—C. was in possession under a miner's right of certain ground as a residence area. Subsequently J. applied for and obtained a mining lease from the Crown, embracing the ground so occupied as a residence area, and sued C. for trespass. Held that under Sec. 24 of Act No. 291 the Crown could not grant a lease of land comprising a residence area previously acquired. Jones v. Christenson, 7 V.L.R. (M.,) 6; 2 A.L.T., 149.

Application for Lease does not Protect Claim from Forfeiture—No. 291, Sec. 37.]—An application by a claimholder for a lease of the ground comprised in a claim does not, under No. 291, Sec. 37, protect the claim from a forfeiture incurred either before or after the application, on the ground of abandonment, or breach of a bye-law. Smith v. Golden Gate G.M. Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 5.

An application by a claimholder for a mining lease of the ground comprised in the claim, affords no exemption to the claim from the operation of mining bye-laws, nor will it protect it from forfeiture incurred by subsequent breach of such bye-laws. Perkins v. Hercules G.M. Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 48.

Protection afforded by Application for a Lease—Act No. 291, Sec. 37.]—The concluding words of Sec. 37 show that all that is meant is that no taking up is good as against the lessees. The application for a lease is only a provisional title; if refused it is just as if it had not been made. The protection is merely quoad the applicant for the lease. The applicant or any one else may take up a claim pending the application. Barker's G.M. Coy. v. Keating, 1 V.R. (M.,) 18; 1 A.J.R., 55.

Refusal to Grant Order of Possession—Act No. 446, Sec. 3—Certiorari pending Appeal.]—The pendency of an application for a mining lease is no ground for the warden's refusal to make an order of possession when the warden has decided that complainant is entitled to the order, and such order of refusal was quashed on certiorari under Sec. 3 of Act No. 446, even though an appeal to the Court of Mines was pending. Regina v. Orme, ex parte Droscher, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 343.

Application for Lease Pending—Act No. 446, Sec. 3.]—The pendency of an application for a mining lease would not prevent the warden from putting a complainant seeking to enforce forfeiture of a claim into possession of the land comprised in such application if he declared the claim forfeited, leaving the complainant to meet the liabilities of Act No. 446, Sec. 3. Jolly v. Stephens, 5 A.J.R., 169.

Application for Lease Pending—Act No. 446, Sec. 3—Act No. 291, Secs. 37, 180.]—E. and others were in occupation of a quartz claim, and M. and others brought a complaint against them for being in occupation of more than they were entitled to and seeking an order of possession. At the trial E. set up a defence that he and his party had duly marked out the land as applicants for a gold-mining lease under Sec. 37 of Act No. 291. Held that Act No. 446, Sec. 3, prohibits all means of acquiring a claim whilst defendants are applicants for a lease, and that the warden should not have during that time put M. and others into possession; but that the warden should not have dismissed the complaint, but should have adjourned it from time to time under Sec. 180 of Act No. 291. Hutcheson v. Erk, 3 V.L.R. (M.,) 1.

Where persons proceeded before a warden to obtain a declaration of forfeiture of a claim for not working, Held that defendant's previously marking out the land for a lease was sufficient under Act No. 446, Secs. 3 and 4, to prevent an order for forfeiture unless default in complying with leasing regulations was proved. Constable v. Pigtail Coy., ibid, p. 7.

Marking out a Claim during Lease—Dispossession—Evidence—Jus tertii.]—C. marked out as a claim, land which was under lease to a mining company, and worked it. When the lease expired W. marked out the same land, pulled up C.'s pegs, put in his own, and took possession, while C. was working below. Upon plaint by C. against W. for trespass, Held, on question reserved for the Chief Judge, that the lease to the company was admissible as evidence against C.'s right to take possession, who could not mark out pending the lease; that W. was justified in marking out over C.'s head without first obtaining the decision of a Court; and that W. could set up the title of a third person to show the invalidity of C.'s title. Cooper v. White, 4 V.L.R. (M.,) 10.

Time of Marking out a Claim stated Erroneously—Subsequent Marking out for a Lease.]—B. pegged out land for two claims at 8 a.m., and on the same day, but later, G. pegged out the same land for a gold-mining lease, and next day applied for a lease. The day following his application B. applied for registration of his claim, stating in error that he had marked out at 8 p.m. instead of 8 a.m. G. sued B. for trespass for interfering with his land while the application for the lease was pending, and the warden admitted evidence by B. that his statement as to the time of pegging out was erroneous, overruled an objection on behalf of G. that the application being erroneous was invalid, and that B. therefore had no title, and held that B. was entitled to sue. On special case, Held, by the Chief Judge, that the warden's decision was right, that the statement in the application was an admission against B. which he could rebut by evidence; and that the question of registration was not material, since the contest was not between two claimholders, but between a leaseholder and a claimholder. Greenhill v. Braidley, 4 V.L.R. (M.,) 5.

Marking out Claim pending Application for a Lease.]—Land was marked out for a lease (by a person under whom the complainants did not claim, and whose application for a lease was ultimately refused,) before the land was marked out for a claim by those under whom the defendants claimed, and while the application for a lease was pending. Held that the complainants as holders of miner's rights might insist, under Sec. 3 of Act No. 446, that the title of the defendants was bad as obtained during the application for a lease. Weddell v. Howse, 9 V.L.R. (M.,) 13; 4 A.L.T., 179.

Right of Applicant to Maintain Trespass.]—Trespass can be maintained under the provisions of Sec. 37 of the "Mining Statute 1865," by an applicant for a gold-mining lease, against a person who was not previously in lawful occupation of the land applied for, who, after the date of the application for such lease, obtained as against the applicant a warden's adjudication of forfeiture as a claim of the land, the subject matter of the application for a lease, and purported to enter upon the land under such adjudication, and continued thereon actually working. Rendall v. Hadley, 2 V.R. (M.,) 21; 2 A.J.R., 105.

What Applicant for Lease must Prove to Maintain Trespass.]—An applicant for a mining lease, in order to maintain an action for trespass, pending the application, must prove not only that he has marked out the ground, but that he has inserted advertisements in a newspaper as required by the Orders-in-Council in force, and applicable for the time being; and that the Orders-in-Council respecting publication by advertisement are not void as being ultra vires. Craig v. Adams, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 19.

Trespass to Land the Subject of an Application for a Lease—Act No. 291, Secs. 24, 37, 39.]—M., being in possession of a claim under a miner's right on the 10th August, 1871, applied for a lease of the claim and other land, and the warden recommended that it should be granted. Before the matter was decided by the Mining Department, one B. obtained a declaration from a warden that part of the ground for which a lease was applied for was abandoned, and B. took possession. M. then issued a summons against B. for trespass, and the warden decided against B.; but, on appeal to the Court of Mines, the decision was reversed, as M. had failed to prove that he had complied in all respects with the leasing regulations. Immediately after this decision, on 1st March, 1872, B. marked off the rest of the ground, and registered it under his miner's right. On 28th October, the Governor-in-Council issued a lease to M., who executed it on the 18th November. B. meanwhile had sunk a shaft. On 9th December, M. sent notice to B. that he claimed under the lease, and subsequently two of M.'s servants entered and ejected B., who sued to be put in possession, but lost his suit in the Court of Mines. On appeal to the Chief Judge, Held that although Sec. 37 of the "Mining Statute 1865" explains Sec. 24 of that Act so as to render an intruder upon land, an application for a lease of which is pending, liable if the lease be subsequently granted, yet if the applicant had not complied with all the leasing regulations the intruder would not be so liable; that it was unnecessary for the applicant to sue every intruder before obtaining his lease, but quite sufficient if the intruder were liable to such action before the lease issued to him subject to it being brought after; and that Sec. 39, which authorises the Governor to issue leases to an applicant who has not complied with all the leasing regulations, does not prejudice a person who has obtained a lawful title in the meantime; and appeal allowed. Bain v. M'Coll, 4 A.J.R., 62.

Right of Applicants to Mine—Act No. 291, Sec. 37.]—Persons applying for a lease of land occupied as a residence area are not entitled to mine upon the land pending the application for a lease, and are subject to an action for encroachment at the instance of the person occupying the residence area. Fahey v. Koh-i-noor Coy., 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 4.

Under the "Mining Statute 1865," Sec. 37, applicants for a mining lease are entitled to prevent other people mining, but are not authorised to mine themselves. Should they do so they are unauthorised trespassers upon public property. Attorney-General v. Sanderson, 1 V.R. (E.,) 18, 23; 1 A.J.R., 21.

Expectation of a Lease—Forfeiture of Prior Lease—Act No. 291, Secs. 37, 43—Mining Regulations, 44-47.]—R. held a mining lease under the regulations, and S. applied, alleging a forfeiture for breach of a covenant, for a lease of the whole land to himself under rule 44. The Gazette announced a forfeiture, and an intent to grant a lease to S. S. pegged out the land, but not regularly. Then R. marked out as applying for a lease, regularly marking out. R. then sued S. for trespass. Held that regulations 44-47 were not ultra vires, although they do not require a person pointing out a forfeiture to peg out as he would be required to in applying for a lease in the first instance under Sec. 37; but that S.'s expectation of a lease did not entitle him to mine on the land as against R., and that R. was entitled to damages to be impounded until he got a lease. Robertson v. Morris, 7 V.L.R. (M.,) 1; 2 A.L.T., 109.

Rights of Lessees.]—A bill will lie by a lessee in possession under a gold-mining lease granted by the Crown under Act No. 291, to restrain tortious mining on and removal of gold from the land so leased. Aladdin G.M. Coy. v. Aladdin Try Again United G.M. Coy., 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 266, 279.

Trespass to Land under Lease.]—A person who enters upon land held under a lease is liable for trespass if he enter upon the land and put up a fence thereon, even though he claim to act under the authority of persons who are transferees of the rights of a holder of a residence area, and of the holder of a miner's right of part of the land in question, where the holder of the residence area had abandoned his rights before the issue of the lease, and the holder of the miner's right was in possession unwarrantably as against the lessees under a lease issued to them before their present one. Extended Cross Reef Co. v. Creaver, 4 A.J.R., 10.

Institution of Suit for Trespass to a Lease—Trustees having Let a Mine to Tributors—Possession.]—The plaintiffs held land under a mining lease from the Crown and as trustees for a company. The mine had been let to certain tributors who were in possession at the time of the institution of the suit. The plaintiffs sought an injunction against the defendant company restraining them from encroaching and trespass, and an account of the gold to which the tributors were not parties. Held that the plaintiffs could not maintain the suit under a plaint describing them as still in possession, although they might be entitled to some of the relief sought as reversioners under a plaint truly stating their position. Penistan v. The Great Britain Coy., 5 A.J.R., 18.

Suit for Trespass by Lessee whose Lease declared Forfeited—Company holding Land comprised in Forfeited Lease under Miner's Rights—Act No. 291, Sec. 37.]—A. was lessee from Crown of a gold-mining lease which contained proviso for forfeiture in case of breach of covenants. A. committed breaches of labour covenants, and lease was, by Gazette notice, declared to be forfeited, but Crown did not re-enter or take possession. The defendant company were mining on this land under colour of their taking possession of it under miners' rights subsequently to the declaration of forfeiture. Bill by A. against the company to restrain it from trespassing and for account of gold raised. Held by Full Court (dissentiente Williams, J.,) affirming Higinbotham, J., that as lease was not forfeited by the declaration, A. was entitled to maintain the suit. Injunction granted and account directed. Per Higinbotham, J., the Attorney-General was not a necessary party. Barwick v. Duchess of Edinburgh Coy., 8 V.L.R. (Eq.,) 70; 3 A.L.T., 68, 121.

Rights of Holders of Mining Lease—As against Prior License under "Land Act 1865" (No. 237,) Sec. 42, subsequently obtaining Fee Simple under Land Act 1869 (No. 360,) Sec. 313.]—D. was a licensee under the Act 237, Sec. 42, of certain lands, and applied to purchase them under the Act No. 360, Sec. 31. Pending his application the plaintiff, a mining company, obtained a lease from the Crown for fifteen years, for mining purposes, of land which comprised D.'s; and there was a provision in the lease that portions of ground held by licensees were reserved, and that mining was not to be carried on so as to injure the surface of the same, except as provided by the conditions of the licenses. Afterwards D. obtained a grant from the Crown in fee in pursuance of his application, and transferred to O., who leased the ground to the defendant, a mining company, for mining purposes. Upon motion by the plaintiff to restrain the defendant from mining, Held, per Molesworth, J., that the plaintiffs had a right to mine (not injuring the surface) as long as D. was merely a licensee; but not after he had acquired the fee, although D. had then no right to the gold himself, nor had the defendants, but injunction refused. Upon appeal, Held, that by the mining lease and the grant in fee, the Crown had granted two distinct estates to different persons within the same area, and that the defendant must be restrained from mining for gold, though they would be at liberty to sink for any other purpose than gold mining, and in such a way as not to interfere with the plaintiff's mining, and appeal allowed. Alma Consols G.M. Coy. v. Alma Extended Coy., 4 A.J.R. 144. (On appeal,) Ibid, 190.

Lease Granted under Act No. 148—Regulations under Act No. 291.]—Where a lease was granted under Act No. 148, Held that it was not subject to regulations afterwards published (under Act No. 291), so as to make a notice of forfeiture gazetted under them evidence that the lessee had forfeited his lease. Johnson v. Thomson, 6 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 18.

Voidable on Breach of Covenant—Ultra Vires—Estoppel—Act No. 291, Secs. 42, 43, 45.]—A mining lease, under Sec. 24 of the "Mining Statute 1865," in the form fixed by the regulations of 2nd March, 1866, contained the following provisions:—"If there shall be a breach of covenant (on the part of the lessee) these presents shall be voidable at the will of the Governor-in-Council; and in case the Governor-in-Council shall declare these presents void, the term shall cease and the declaration be conclusive evidence of breach in all Courts." Semble, that this proviso is opposed to the policy of the "Mining Statute 1865," and ultra vires; but Held that a lessee who had executed such a lease was estopped from objecting to the proviso, and that his term was effectually determined by such declaration without notice to him or evidence of any breach of covenant. Matt v. Peel, 2 V.R. (M.,) 27; 2 A.J.R. 133.

"Mining Statute 1865," Secs. 42, 43, 45—Forfeiture of Lease—Whether Re-entry Necessary.]—A gold mining lease contained a proviso that, if there should be breaches of the covenants contained therein, the lease should be voidable at the option of the Governor-in-Council; and in case the Governor-in-Council should, by writing under his hand, declare the lease void, the term should determine both at law and in equity, and it should be lawful for H.M. to re-enter. Breaches of the labour covenants occurred, and the Governor-in-Council, by Gazette notice, declared lease forfeited, but no re-entry was made on behalf of Her Majesty. Held by the Full Court (dissentiente, Williams, J.,) affirming Higinbotham, J., that the declaration of forfeiture did not avoid lease till persons representing Crown took some step to determine it; that lessees were in the position of persons whose leases are provided to be void on breach of covenant, which means voidable at option of lessor; that rights of Crown to rent, and lessee to possession, remained unchanged till some act was done by Crown. Per Williams, J., that the declaration of forfeiture per se determined the lease, and no further act on the part of the Crown was necessary. Barwick v. Duchess of Edinburgh Coy., 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 70, 85, 92; 3 A.L.T., 68, 121.

Forfeiture—Re-entry by Crown.]—On the forfeiture of a gold-mining lease, it is not competent for any one other than the lessees to take the objection that the lease is not actually determined till re-entry by the Crown, and no one can mark out and take possession of the land before re-entry by the Crown without obtaining an adjudication by a competent Court in their favour. Weddell v. Howse, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 44; 4 A.L.T., 95.

Forfeiture of Mining Lease—How Enforced—"Mining Statute 1865," Sec. 101.]—Under the "Mining Statute 1865," Sec. 101 (i.,) a warden has jurisdiction, if the complainant has a right to recover the leased land, to declare a forfeiture of such lease for non-compliance with the labour covenants; but the holder of a miner's right cannot enforce a forfeiture of a lease held by a defendant, such lease being in the form in the Gazette of 1871, p. 935, for non-performance of the labour covenants, until the lease has been legally declared forfeited by the Governor-in-Council under clause 21 of such lease. M'Millan v. Dillon, 6 V.L.R. (M.,) 15; 1 A.L.T., 203.

What is a Sufficient Holding under Act No. 32, Sec. 90.]—Where a plaintiff in equity held a miner's right at the time when his title to relief first arose, and also at the time of filing his bill, but had, during a portion of the interval, been without one, Held, that this was a sufficient compliance with the Act No. 32, Sec. 90. Niemann v. Weller, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 125, 132.

Mortgagor Seeking Redemption.]—A mortgagor of mining shares, seeking redemption, is not liable to the necessity of holding a miner's right under the Act No. 32, Sec. 90. Niemann v. Weller, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 125, 132. See also S.P. Salmon v. Mulcahy, ibid, p. 139.

Vendor and Purchaser—Specific Performance—Act No. 291, Sec. 246.]—As between vendor and purchaser of a mining claim it is not necessary that the purchaser should be the holder of a miner's right in order to enable him to sue in equity for specific performance, it being sufficient if the vendor have one; and in the absence of evidence either way it will not be presumed that vendor had not a miner's right. Learmonth v. Morris, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 74, 85.

Suit in Respect of Partnership—Act No. 32, Sec. 90.]—M. bought in March, 1865, a share in a company as a co-partner with defendants in a claim held by them under miners' rights. M. never obtained a miner's right until December, 1864. In December, 1862, his share was forfeited on account of arrears in calls. In 1865 M. sued the defendants, and prayed for a declaration of partnership in the mining claim, and for an account of profits. Held, by the Court of Mines, and affirmed, that the plaintiff's title to relief "first arose or accrued" in December, 1862, and that as he then had no miner's right he was not entitled to any relief. Mackeprang v. Watson, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 106.

Suit in Court of Mines for Share in a Claim—Act No. 115, Sec. 11.]—J. purchased a share in a claim May, 1857, and took out a miner's right in November and December, 1858. J.'s share was declared to be forfeited. J. did not take out a right again until December, 1859, but took them out in the years 1860, 1861, and 1862. In 1862, J. filed a bill in the Court of Mines to have his right to a share declared, but the suit was dismissed on the ground that J. was not a holder of a miner's right when his right to sue accrued. Held, on appeal, that as appellant held a right when Act No. 115 was passed he was within the remedy of the Act. Appeal allowed. Jones v. Abraham, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 158.

Suit by Company—Act No. 291, Secs. 2, 80—Act No. 32, Secs. 2, 3, 42, 53, 74, 93—Proceedings in Personam.]—Where in a suit by four trustees of a registered mining company (the G. company) and the G. company, as plaintiffs, against another company (the V. company), to set aside a sale of machinery as irregular, it appeared the trustees of the G. company had miners' rights at the time the seizure of machinery took place, but the G. company itself had no such rights. Held that though under Secs. 2 and 80 of Act No. 291, and Secs. 2, 3, 42, 57, and 74 of Act No. 32, a holder of a miner's right might take up a claim as a trustee for, and confer equitable rights upon another not holding one, yet that related to remedies in rem, as in the cases of Jones v. Abraham, Salmon v. Mulcahy, M'Dougall v. Webster, Niemann v. Weller, and not to remedies in a proceeding in personam like the present, where the plaintiff company, under cover of their trustees, sought redress against defendants, who tortiously sold under an execution against the plaintiff company and purchased the claim; and that Sec. 90 of Act No. 90 did include corporation in the word "person"; that the plaintiffs were not entitled to sue in the present frame of the suit without producing a miner's right for the company. Volunteer Extended Coy. v. Grand Junction Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 6.

Company Suing for Benefit of the Company—Consolidated Miner's Right — "Mining Statute 1865" (No. 291,) Sec. 4.]—The B. company and two trustees, A. and B., for it, summoned C. and others for encroachment upon their claim. The claim in respect of which the complaint was laid consisted of forty-four men's ground, taken up under miners' rights, and by divers assignments and transfers became vested in A. and B. as trustees for the B. company. There were produced the following rights—(1.) Consolidated miners' rights to the manager of the company (representing two miners' rights) and a miners' right to A. and B. respectively. Held that the case was governed by the same principle as Volunteer Coy. v. Grand Junction Coy., and that the company were incompetent to sue for the benefit of the company, joined by persons professing to be trustees; and that the consolidated miners' right taken out for two, in respect of a claim originally held by forty-four, and being for a corporation holding no land save by trustees was not within Sec. 4 of Act 291, and did not aid the plaintiffs. Chisholm v. Band of Hope Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 31.

Company Suing—What Miner's Rights insufficient.] — A. company and its trustees as co-plaintiffs, sued in the Court of Mines to restrain registration for a block claim within the claims of the company. The company never had a miner's right, but obtained a consolidated miner's right as for two men's ground only, in the name of its manager. Held not to be a sufficient miner's right to enable the company to sue. Great North-west Coy. v. Menhennet, 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 62.

Suit by Company—Right to Relief — Miners' Rights what Sufficient.—In a suit by a company and persons who were trustees of ground for them, the company sought relief for encroachments on claims held by the trustees for them, and leased ground held by the company. No miner's rights were produced by the company, but the other plaintiffs produced miners' rights. Held that the miners' rights produced were sufficient to entitle the company to sue in the suit as framed, and to entitle them to obtain relief as to the leased ground, if otherwise entitled. Australasian Coy. v. Wilson, 4 A.J.R., 18.

Application for Injunction under Sec. 203 of Act No. 291.]—A miner's right held by a person as trustee for a company where such person and the company are applicants for an injunction under Sec. 203 is not sufficient evidence of title. Grant v. Lawlor, 3 V.L.R. (M.,) 15.

Suit by Shareholders.]—In a suit by one shareholder in a mining company, on behalf of himself and all other shareholders except the defendants against the directors and trustees, it is not necessary that the bill should contain an averment that the plaintiffs held miners' rights when the cause of suit arose, though it will be necessary to give evidence thereof before final relief can be given. Lee v. Robertson, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 374, 390.

Suit by a Company.]—A company registered under the "Companies Act" is "a person" within the meaning of the Acts requiring every "person" to have a miner's right before he appear in an action on a claim; and such company is entitled to a miner's right whether it be, or be not necessary that each individual member of the company should personally hold a miner's right as heretofore. In re Verdon, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 207.

Suit by a Company—Consolidated Miner's Right —"Mining Statuts 1865" (No. 291), Secs. 4, 7, 8—Act No. 228.]—Plaint summons by the A. company against the G. company for encroachment. The A. company being a registered company under Act No. 228, had no separate miner's rights, but a consolidated miner's right, representing 1031 men. Held that Sec. 4 of No. 291 was consistent with companies registered under No. 228 being entitled, as well as others, to consolidated miners' rights, such companies having power to manage their internal affairs like those of common partnerships; and that Secs. 7 and 8 were not inconsistent with registered companies holding such a right; and that the plaintiff company had sufficient miners' rights to enable them to sue. Albion Coy. v. St. George United Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 37, 58, 59.

Suit by Company—Shareholders Holding Individual Rights.]—Where the shareholders of a company hold sufficient individual miners' rights, but no corporate miner's right has been taken out for the company, Held that Sec. 90 of Act No. 32 was sufficiently complied with, and that the corporate right for the company was not essential. Smith v. Scottish and Cornish Coy., 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 121.

Who may Maintain Suit for Trespass—Claimholders suing with a Company not having a Miner's Right.]—Registered owners of a claim under the Sandhurst Bye-laws having formed themselves into a company, sued with the company for a trespass committed after incorporation. The company had not a proper miner's right, so the individual claimholders obtained leave to amend by striking out the company as co-plaintiff. Held that registration being essential to a legal transfer by the Sandhurst Bye-laws, and there having been no registered transfer from the claimholders to the company, the claimholders could sue alone. Vallancourt v. O'Rorke, 1 V.R. (M.,) 43.

Who may Maintain Trespass—Company not having Miner's Right at time Trespass Commenced.]—A mining company which held a miner's right at the time of the trespass in respect of which it was suing, was held entitled to sue under Sec. 246 of the "Mining Statute 1865," although it had no miner's right at the time the trespass actually commenced. Sea Queen Coy., v. Sea Quartz Coy., 4 A.J.R. 130.

Some Complainants not holding Miner's Rights.] —B. and fifty-three others, under a warden's order, took possession of tenement No. 1248 (being fifty-four men's ground) and were registered. Then A. and others came on the ground on 5th April, 1879, and worked it. B., for himself and the fifty-three, applied the next day for the tenement as for thirty-three men, but was not registered up to 5th May, 1879. On 16th April the fifty-four miners' rights expired, and thirty-three only were renewed. On 24th April B. and the fifty-three sued A. for trespass, the plaint being heard on 5th May, when only thirty-three rights were produced. Held, that the warden could not make an order in favour of the complainants generally or in favour of the thirty-three holding rights. Bebro v. Bloomfield, 5 V.L.R. (M.,) 26; 1 A.L.T., 47.

Some Complainants not holding Miners' Rights.] —In a complaint for encroachment brought in respect of damages to claim taken up as for eighty men, the warden or Court should ascertain the damages generally, and out of them award an amount in proportion to number of shares held by shareholders entitled to institute proceedings by virtue of miners' rights. Critchley v. Graham, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 71.

In the case of a continuing trespass, as for an encroachment de die in diem for twelve days, if some of complainants had miners' rights during part of time only, the warden or Court should divide the time, and give damages accordingly. Ibid.

[Compare Sec. 101, Sub-sec. iii., of Act No. 291.]

But where a company holding two rights as for forty-four men's ground, were suing with the trustees of the company holding individual rights, Held that the miners' rights held by the company were not sufficient to entitle them to sue, and recover for any part of their claim or damages, and the trustees could not recover as co-plaintiffs pro rata. Chisholm v. United Extended Band of Hope Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 31.

A company sued with A. and B., its trustees, in respect of trespass to a claim. The company and A. had miners' rights as for twenty-three twenty-fourth parts of the claim, but B. had no miner's right. Held that the warden might assess damages as for twenty-three twenty-fourths of the said claim, and declare that the company and A. entitled to possession thereof. Sea Queen Q.M. Coy. v. Sea Q.M. Coy., 4 A.J.R., 174.

Act No. 291, Secs. 4, 5, 12, 246—Onus of Proof—Termination of the Right before Suit.]—Act No. 291, Secs. 4, 5, in creating miners' rights says affirmatively that they shall last as long as the tax is paid, and therefore by clear implication no longer; and the meaning of the words "save as against Her Majesty" only means that the Crown may even during the continuance of the rights revoke the titles. Sec. 246 only applies to persons neglecting to renew miner's rights as plaintiffs. The onus of proving that a defendant has a miner's right in force at the time of the commencement of the suit lies upon such defendant; the termination before the commencement of the suit of the miner's right under which the defendant previously held the claim, such right not having been renewed, terminates the defendant's interest in the claim as against the complainant. Lennox v. Golden Fleece and Heales Coy., 5 A.J.R., 18.

Who may Enforce Forfeiture—Holders of Miner's Rights.—Claims to mine on Crown lands are dependent for their continuance or means of legal enforcement upon the renewal of miner's rights, but still are in the nature of permanent estates, and are not confirmed by that which is a means of renewal. Where, therefore, the holders of miners' rights sought for a declaration of forfeiture, Held that it was sufficient if they had miners' rights at the time of complaint, and immaterial whether they had taken them at the time of the forfeiture. Clerk v. Wrigley, 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 74, 83, 84. See S.P. United Extended Band of Hope Coy. v. Doyle, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 39.

Who may Enforce Forfeiture—Holder of Miner's Right—Sandhurst Bye-law (No. 7.)]—A holder of a miner's right for a full claim need not produce and prove a miner's right specially taken out for the ground of which he seeks possession as forfeited under Sandhurst Bye-law (No. 7.) Crocker v. Wigg, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 20.

Possession of a Miner's Right — When Presumed.]—In a suit for encroachment the plaintiff's only title stated in the case was possession of the ground before and during the acts of trespass complained of. Per the Chief Judge:—As nothing is said of a miner's right, I presume he had it for the period of the alleged trespass. Fahey v. Koh-i-noor Coy., 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 4.

Entries in Register — Act No. 291, Secs. 49, 246.]—An entry in the registrar's book of miner's rights of persons taking up a claim is under Sec. 49 primâ facie evidence only to show the existence of miner's rights in the person taking up as their qualification for so doing, not for the collateral purpose of showing that the plaintiffs had miners' rights at the time of the injury complained of such as to entitle them to succeed in their suit under Sec. 246. Cruise v. Crowley, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 27.

Insolvent having Miner's Right—Assignee need not have one.]—L., who had a share in a mining company's claim on a quartz reef, and who had a miner's right, sold, in December, 1861, his share to K., who had no miner's right, but was registered as owner of the share. L. became insolvent, and in January, 1862, his assignee was appointed. The assignee had no miner's right, and L.'s expired in February, 1862. In March, 1862, G. purchased the share from K., with notice that K. was only a trustee for L. Suit by L.'s official assignee against K. and G. to have the sale to K. set aside; to have K. declared a trustee for L.; and to set aside the sale by K. to G. Held that it was unnecessary for the assignee to take out a miner's right, and that he could maintain the suit as against G. Goodman v. Kelly, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 332.

Appropriation of Specific Ground—Costs.]—S., as the trustee for a company, held what had been twenty-five men's ground by different transfers at different times, under a consolidated miner's right. This right expired, and was not renewed. S. also had another miner's right, which he had not appropriated before, and which he now appropriated to the ground to protect its forfeiture. Held that under Ballarat Bye-law 11 he might so appropriate it, although he might not have so intended when he took it out, but the Court refused to give S. his costs because he had made such a puzzle of his title. Fattorini v. Band and Albion Consols, 9 V.L.R. (M.,) 1; 4 A.L.T., 121.

"Goldfields Act" (No. 32,) Secs. 3, 76—Water Right.]—S. and party and D. and party occupied adjoining creek claims, S. and party occupying a claim above that of D. and party. S. and party diverted water from the creek, and returned it charged with sludge into the creek by a tail race passing through D.'s claim. D., wishing to work a distant part of the claim, placed a dam in the race to divert the water, and consequently the water charged with sludge did not flow away from S.'s claim unless constantly cleared from sludge at the dam. Held, on case stated, that under Sec. 76, the warden has no jurisdiction to determine such a question, since the right interfered with is not a water right within Sec. 3. Schultz v. Dryburgh, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 224.

[Compare Secs. 5 and 101, Sub-sec. 3, of Act No. 291.]

Dam on Crown Lands—Watershed—No. 32, Sec. 3.]—The holder of a dam constructed on Crown land, under Sec. 3 of the "Goldfields Act" (No. 32,) is not entitled to have, by virtue of the provisions of the Act, a right inconsistent with the common law, and is, therefore, not entitled to have the ownership of a watershed over the area of Crown lands from which the water would naturally flow to his dam, and which right he could only get by the express grant of the Crown. The Act protects him in the ownership of, and against all direct injuries to the dam itself. Stevens v. Webster, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 23.

Dam on Crown Lands.]—The holder of a miner's right is entitled to occupy Crown lands for a dam for domestic purposes, though not actually engaged in mining. M'Lean v. Wearn, 1 A.J.R., 152.

Duty of Miners Using Streams.]—To a declaration for throwing sludge on the plaintiff's land, whereby it was injured, the defendants pleaded that, as holders of miners' rights mining on Crown lands, they used a stream flowing by those lands, and afterwards flowing through plaintiff's lands, for mining purposes and as an outlet for the water so used, and thereby the water so used became impregnated with earthy substances, whereby, &c. Demurrer, that it was incumbent on the defendants to do the acts complained of in such a manner as not to injure plaintiff. Held that the plea disclosed no defence to the action. Campbell v. Ah Chong, 1 V.R. (L.,) 25; 1 A.J.R., 35.

License under No. 148, Sec. 11, to Divert Water—Priority Over Creek-right.]—A license properly granted under Sec. 11 of No. 148, to divert water by race, &c., from a river, has superiority over a pre-existing creek right; and the holder of such a creek-right is not entitled to deprive the holder of such a license of any portion of the quantity of water specified in such license when the natural supply is insufficient for both; sed quære, whether the grant to the licensee, as between him and any other person having legal rights to the water of the river, the subject of the license, in the part of it through which the water is diverted, whether such rights be acquired before or after the grant, can stop the water to the extent prescribed in the grant, the section directing that the diversion by the licensee shall be to no greater extent than might be done by the licensee if owner of the land granted. Nightingale v. Daly, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 7.

Lease of Reservoir Granted under No. 148, Sec. 12, to Road Board with Right to Cut and Use Channels, Races, &c.—License under "Mining Statute 1865" to Another Person to Cut a Race from Creek within the Area—Application for Injunction.]—The Court refused an injunction to restrain the Crown from issuing a license under the "Mining Statute 1865" to cut a race in an area in which a road board had been granted, under Act No. 148, Sec. 12, the exclusive right of cutting races and channels for the purpose of collecting storm-water for a reservoir of which the board had a lease. Shire of Ballan v. The Queen, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 255; 6 A.L.T., 109.

For Facts see S.C., ante column 326.

Act No. 291, Sec. 101, Sub-sec. iii—Summons for Interfering with Water—Trespass.]—Under a summons before a warden for "interfering with and trespassing on the complainant's right to divert and use for mining purposes certain water by abstracting and diverting the same," the warden cannot go into the question of prospective injury to the complainant's right, or of trespass to the land occupied by the complainant's aqueduct. Hyndman v. Micke, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 39; 4 A.L.T., 84.

Regulation by Order of Council, 21st January, 1878, Clause 27—Notice of Transfer.]—Clause 27, providing for a notice of the transfer of a license to cut races to be given to the Minister of Mines, means that the notice should be given after the transfer is completed; and the refusal of transferees to accept a transfer when tendered prevents such notice being given, of which they cannot complain. Baw Baw Sluicing Coy. v. Nicholls, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 208; 5 A.L.T., 73.

II. Practice and Procedure in Mining Matters.

Mining under a Street.]—Plaintiffs claimed the whole land in dispute under a frontage claim, and also part of the land, including half a street under a block claim. On motion for an injunction as to all the land, there was evidence of abandonment by the plaintiffs of all the land except as to the street, as to which the defendants had no colour of title; the plaintiffs too had not obtained the consent of the Borough Council to mine under the street. Molesworth, J., granted an injunction as to the street only on terms of the plaintiffs submitting to a cross-injunction as to it. On appeal the Full Court granted an injunction as to the street only without any such cross injunction. Band of Hope and Albion Consols Coy. v. All Saints Coy., 2 V.R. (E.,) 83; 2 A.J.R., 37, 49.

In a contest between two persons as to title, an assertion that defendants had not obtained from the proper authorities permission to mine underneath a street gives the plaintiff no title. The alleged power of intervention to prevent an unauthorised act, which power has not been exercised, cannot be set up by a trespasser who has not a shadow of title in himself against a person in prior occupation of the locus in quo. St. George and Band of Hope United Coy., v. Band of Hope and Albion Consols, 2 V.R. (E.,) 206, 221; 2 A.J.R., 127.

Act No. 291, Sec. 16—Permission to Mine.]—Under Sec. 16 of Act No. 291, the permission of a municipal council given to plaintiffs confers a title as against defendants having no such permission only as to such half of the street as the plaintiffs may claim in accordance with the doctrine of ad medium filum viae, and no further, when both plaintiffs' and defendants' own land adjoin the street. The Extended Hustler's Freehold Coy. v. Moore's Hustler's Coy., 5 A.J.R., 116.

For facts see S.C., ante column 314.

Holder of Amalgamated Claim—Medium filum viae.]—The plaintiff C. was legal owner of an amalgamated claim, in trust for himself and the K. company, which had been let on tribute to the plaintiff B. company. The defendant W. was owner of three freehold allotments within the claim, and the defendant company was his tributor. These allotments were bounded by a public road on one side. The defendant company had driven under the road 75 feet into plaintiff's claim. On motion for injunction and inspection, injunction granted, but, as other means of information were open, inspection only through the aperture caused by plaintiff's breaking into defendant's drive granted. Band of Hope Coy. v. Williams Freehold Coy., 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 257.

[But now see Garibaldi Coy. v. Craven's New Chum Coy., 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 223; 6 A.L.T. 93, where the principle of ad medium filum viae was overruled.

User—Mining Claim—Reservation.]—If the case for the Crown depends upon public documents and public user, the nature of the case renders minute and specific allegations by the applicant less necessary, and comparatively vague statements are sufficient to launch the bill and throw on the defendants the burden of contradiction by special allegation. By order of the Governor-in-Council, 1861, Crown land was applied to a public use by being temporarily reserved from sale as a public park. The defendants in the first suit were mining upon part of the land under miners' rights which were not proved to have been granted before the date of the order-in-council. In the first suit there was no definite evidence of the alleged user of the land as a public park. On bill and information seeking to restrain the defendants from mining on this land, and on motion for injunction, Held, upon the above principle, that as the defendants had not met the necessity of special contradiction the Crown were entitled, and injunction granted. In the second suit defendants claimed under miners' rights issued before the order-in-council, and the allegations of the hill and information were met hy distinct affidavits sworn by residents in the vicinity that the land had never been used as a public park; that it was not prior to 1861 used as a place for public recreation, and had been since used for grazing purposes. On a bill and information for a similar purpose, Held that the evidence given by defendants was strong enough to disprove public user, and that as the proclamation of reservation had been made under "Sale of Crown Lands Act 1860" (No. 117), that the reservation did not per se dedicate the land to any specific purpose, and was only a reservation from sale and did not take the land out of the operation of the "Mining Acts;" that as the defendants had for years before the order occupied the land for mining purposes, and had expended large capital in their mining operations, the Court would not interfere by injunction. Injunction refused. Attorney-General v. Southern Freehold Coy.; Attorney-General v. United Hand-in-hand and Band of Hope Coy.; 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 66, 78, 80, et seq.

Who are Entitled to.]—Two adjacent mining companies entered into a written agreement defining, by reference to a plan, a common agreed boundary line, and mutually covenanted not to cross it. On the plan, this line extended beyond the then claim of either company. Subsequently one company acquired land not previously in the possession of either, and mined in it across the boundary line as drawn on the plan. The other company filed a bill to restrain such mining as a breach of the agreement, but alleged neither title to, nor possession of the locus in quo. Held by the Full Court on appeal from an order for an interim injunction, that the plaintiffs, showing neither title nor possession, were not entitled to an interim injunction; and appeal allowed with costs, and defendants allowed their costs of opposing the granting of the injunction. Semble, that the acquiring the land by the defendants after the agreement was not a violation of it. The Band of Hope and Albion Consols v. The St. George and Band of Hope United Coy., 1 V.R. (E.,) 183, 188; 1 A.J.R. 174; 2 A.J.R. 127 (on appeal.)

Proving Case different from that made by Bill.] —The plaintiffs by their bill and affidavits made a case of encroachment by means of particular drives, and upon motion for injunction and inspection, the case failed partially, and was ordered to stand over for further affidavits. On further hearing of motion plaintiffs tried to set up a different case of encroachment from that set out in bill. Held they were not entitled to do so, and motion dismissed with costs. Parker's Freehold United Q.M. Coy. v. Parker's United Coy., 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 16.

Interlocutory Injunction—Acquiescence.]—The defendant Y.B. company sunk a shaft on the ground in dispute two years before suit brought, with acquiescence of the B. company, through which plaintiff company claimed, and mined without interference on part of B. company. Held on motion for injunction that there was such acquiescence on the part of the B. company as would disentitle it to relief, and the plaintiff company obtaining rights through the B. company was in the same position. If a person believes his land is encroached upon, he should ascertain what the boundaries are; and if a person come near his boundary to sink a shaft, he should take immediate steps to assert his claim, and prevent encroachment. Motion refused. Band and Barton United Coy. v. Young Band Extended Coy., 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 162.

Acquiescence—When no Bar to Relief.]—If a plaintiff, having reason to believe that defendant is engaged in a fraudulent mining encroachment, underground and difficult to detect, permits him to go so far that the injury is serious, but detection certain, the plaintiff is not by this sort of acquiescence disentitled to relief. Lane v. Hannah, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 66, 72.

Account of Gold—How Taken.] — Held, per Molesworth, J., and affirmed on appeal, that the valuation of gold as against trespassers should be high. Attorney-General v. Boyd, 3 A.J.R., 99, 130.

For facts see S.C., ante column 913.

Dispute as to Title—Duty of Court with Rsgard to Gold.]—Per Full Court.—Where there is in dispute a difficult question of title to auriferous land, the Court should, on an interlocutory application, endeavour to preserve the gold for the party ultimately succeeding. Band of Hope and Albion Consols v. Young Band Extended Q.M. Coy. 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 120, 125; 3 A.L.T., 125.

Disputed Ground—Gold How Dealt with.]—An injunction was obtained ex parte against a "No Liability" mining company to restrain it from working on ground which was claimed by itself and the plaintiff company. The injunction was subsequently dissolved by the Primary Judge in Equity on the ground that it was obtained by misrepresentation; but the defendant company was ordered to keep an account of the gold taken by it from the land, the Primary Judge refusing the request of the plaintiff company for an order that the gold obtained by the defendant company should be paid into a bank. On appeal, Held, by the Full Court, that the plaintiff company was entitled to an order directing the surplus of the gold over and above the working expenses to be paid into a bank in the joint names of the managers of the plaintiff and defendant companies; that accounts of gold raised and working expenses should be kept, the plaintiff company having liberty at all reasonable times, at their own expense, to inspect the workings of the defendant company on the land in dispute. The form of the order was settled by the Court. Band of Hope and Albion Consols v. Young Band Extended Q.M. Coy., 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 120; 3 A.L.T., 125.

Breach of Order—Per Confusionem.]—Where there was an order against a defendant company that they might continue to work auriferous land, the title to which was in dispute in the suit, on the terms of keeping an account of the gold extracted and of the working expenses, and paying into a bank named the surplus proceeds of it, to abide the result of the suit; and the defendant company worked the land in dispute in conjunction with adjoining land of their own in such a way that the quartz from the two had been mixed, and gave in their accounts the approximate quantity of gold raised from the land in dispute, Held, per Molesworth, J., that there had been no substantial breach of the order; and that, if there had, the proper course was to apply to vary the order, or to proceed against the defendant company for contempt. Upon appeal, Held, by Full Court, that the defendant company had practically infringed the order, and defendant company ordered to pay into the bank the whole of the gold obtained from the quartz they had mixed. Band of Hope and Albion Consols v. Young Band Extended Q.M. Coy., 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 277, 283; 4 A.L.T., 60.

A. was working, under tribute from freeholders, mines under certain land, and B. was working mines under adjoining land. It was proved in evidence that B. had sunk a shaft on his own ground, and had thence driven into plaintiff's ground. From one level about 2600 tons of quartz had been raised and crushed at B.'s battery, but B. had, by blasting, prevented the discovery of the exact extent of encroachment and of gold raised. Held that there were sufficient facts to prove the trespass, and that an account of gold raised should be taken; all doubt to be taken most strongly against B. Attorney-General v. Lansell, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 155, 161, 171, 174; 3 A.L.T., 87, 141.

Encroachment—Account of Ore Raised and Gold Extracted.]—The Master in his report found that a certain number of tons of quartz were raised from the defendant's own mine and his encroachment on plaintiff's, so many tons from encroachment and so many from defendant's mine, and found also total number of ounces extracted. Held that the proper inference was that the gold was procured from the tons of quartz proportionately. Attorney-General v. Lansell, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 172, 178; 5 A.L.T., 71.

Encroachment—Confusion of Gold Removed.]—Where a decree found an encroachment by the defendant on the plaintiff's mine, and directed an account of all gold, &c., removed therefrom, Held that the onus of showing confusion of the gold removed from plaintiff's and defendant's mines lay upon the plaintiff at the inquiry. Ibid.

Witnesses Engaged in Encroachment.]—The evidence of witnesses engaged in an encroachment should be received as true so far as consistent and uncontradicted. Ibid.

Action for Value of Gold Taken—Trespass under bona fide Belief of Right.]—There had been a previous action in ejectment in which plaintiff recovered, and now an action was brought in the nature of an action for mesne profits. It appeared that defendants were in under a claim of title; that an injunction had been granted, and defendants were allowed to carry on the mining under certain conditions. The jury had found the gold taken to be of a certain value, and had allowed the expenses at a certain sum, giving plaintiff a verdict for the balance. On rule nisi to increase damages, Held that the cases of a wilful trespasser and a person in under bonâ fide belief of right being different, the damages had been correctly assessed. Rule discharged. Munro v. Sutherland, 5 A.J.R., 75.

Trespasser—Not Allowed Cost of Mining.]—A wilful trespasser upon a gold mine will not be allowed the expense of raising the gold removed by him. Attorney-General v. Lansell, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 172, 178.

What a Breach of Injunction.]—Finishing work necessary to the stability or use of a mine, is not a breach of an injunction not to work it. Mulcahy v. The Walhalla G.M. Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 103, 110.

What is a Breach of Injunction.]—The D. gold-mining company had obtained an injunction against the M. C. company to restrain an encroachment. The D. company mined on private property. Subsequently to the granting of the injunction, B., one of the members of the M.C. company, purchased the interests of three of the persons who had constituted the D. company, and continued the mining. Upon motion by the D. company to commit B. for a breach of the injunction, Held that B. had committed no breach, and that to restrain him from exercising the rights acquired by purchase another suit would be necessary. Attorney-General v. Boyd, 4 A.J.R., 103.

Bill for Injunction—Defendant not Connected with Acts Complained of.]—Where a bill was filed against a mining company and its tributors to restrain undermining streets, and it was alleged that the tributors were mining under the streets with the knowledge and assent of the company, but the company was not distinctly stated to be the doer of the acts complained of, nor was it shown that it shared in the profits arising from them, a demurrer by the company was allowed. Mayor, &c., of Ballarat East v. Victoria United G.M. Coy., 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 10, 17.

When Cross Injunction will be Granted.]—Mulcahy v. Walhalla G.M. Coy., ante column 570.

(iii.) Orders of Inspection—When and How Made.

Order to Inspect and Survey Mine.]—In a suit for an injunction to restrain defendants from trespassing on plaintiff's ground and removing gold therefrom, the Attorney-General, on behalf of the Crown, having been made a co-plaintiff with his consent after injunction obtained, on motion for an order for inspection, the Court ordered that the district surveyor might inspect the mine of the defendants and survey it, the plaintiffs undertaking to pay any damage or loss resulting to plaintiff through stoppage of his works. Attorney-General v. Cant, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 113.

In a suit brought by Attorney-General and the owners of private property, the Court has jurisdiction to make an order for inspection. Attorney-General v. Gee, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 122, 131.

Information by Attorney-General—Owners of Private Property not Joined as Co-plaintiffs by Bill.]—On an information by the Attorney-General where the owners of the private property were not joined as co-plaintiffs by bill, an order for inspection was refused on the ground that no demand for inspection had been made by any one on behalf of the Crown. Attorney-General v. Hustler's Consols Coy., 3 A.J.R., 70.

Order for Inspection—Mining Lease on Private Property—Highway ad medium filum—Inspection Granted as to the Property Only.]—Where a company were mining, under a mining lease from the proprietor, on private property which was bounded on one side by a highway, and alleged that the defendants, who were mining lessees of land on the other side of the highway, had mined under the whole breadth of the highway into their allotment, the Court granted an injunction only as to mining under the allotment, and an order of inspection only to ascertain whether defendants were mining under it at the time of the order. Victoria United Mining Coy. v. Prince of Wales Coy., 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 92.

Mining on Private Property—Licensees—Attorney-General—Encroachment.]—In a suit by the Attorney-General and the licensees for gold-mining purposes of the owners of private property against an adjoining mineowner, for an alleged encroachment, a motion by the plaintiffs other than the Attorney-General, for inspection of the adjoining mine, was granted, to enable them to establish the fact of encroachment. Semble, that if the defendant had admitted the fact of encroachment, an inspection to ascertain the extent of encroachment would not have been granted upon such a motion, on the ground that the plaintiffs other than the Attorney-General had no interest in seeing what was the quantity of the injury done, their right being merely a license to work. Attorney-General v. Lansell, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 134; 1 A.L.T., 177.

Motion for Inspection—Boundaries on a Plan Attached to an Agreement—Error in Plan.]—The plaintiff and defendant company made an agreement by which certain boundaries were fixed, and these boundaries were marked in an attached plan. These boundaries were imaginary lines, and the plan was inconsistent with itself as to the course of those lines with reference to land marks, and showed a shaft in a wrong position. The plan had on it a description and bearing of imaginary lines accurately given. On motion for injunction to restrain encroachment, and for order for inspection, Held that measurements from the accurate description in the plan were dominant over other measurements, no order for injunction, but order made for inspection to procure evidence of the true position of the alleged encroachment, with reference to the real boundaries. Band and Albion Coy. v. St. George United Coy., 3 A.J.R., 20.

Inspection.]—The plaintiff company were mining under land held on lease from the Crown, and the defendant company on adjoining freehold. The manager of the plaintiff company applied by letter for leave to inspect defendants' mine, and this was allowed. He made a second application, and an answer was returned that he might be at liberty to inspect if plaintiff company would give a bond not to flood defendants' mine. This was refused, and the defendant company continued to refuse inspection except on terms of a bond being given. The bill charged encroachment by defeudants upon plaintiffs' land, which encroachment it was alleged the defendants justified by pretending there was a road as boundary between the adjoining lands of the plaintiffs and defendants, and that the defendants had a right to mine half-way under this road. Motion for inspection refused, the defendants having denied that they went as far as the road. United Hand and Band of Hope Coy. v. Winter's Freehold Coy., 3 A.J.R., 59.

Where other means of information were open to a party seeking an order of inspection, inspection only granted through the aperture caused by plaintiff's breaking into defendant's drive. Band of Hope Coy. v. Williams Freehold Coy., 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 257.

For facts see S.C., ante column 967.

Inspection—Working Machinery for Purposes of—Defendant not Bound to.]—An order for inspection of a mine was granted upon the plaintiff giving two days' notice, and with liberty to use defendant's machinery for descending and ascending the mine. After notice to inspect, defendant stopped working, and plaintiff was thereby prevented from descending to inspect at the time appointed. Upon motion for attachment, Held that under the literal terms of the order, the defendant was not bound to provide firewood or engines; that such orders are based on the supposition that the mine will be working when inspection is to be made, and the Court could not make an order that defendants should go on working simply for the purposes of inspection. Motion dismissed. Attorney-General v. Lansell, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 134; 1 A.L.T., 177.

In Cases of Encroachment—Act No. 291, Secs. 37, 101, Sub-sec. i.]—The warden has jurisdiction under Sec. 101, Sub-sec. i., to hear a case of trespass by entering upon land in possession as a claim or under a lease and erecting a fence; and Sec. 37 extends this jurisdiction to cases where a lease is being applied for, but has not, at the time of the trespass, been granted. Extended Cross Reef Coy. v. Creaver, 4 A.J.R., 10.

"Mining Statute," Sec. 101 (i. and iii.)]—R. took up a business site nearer to a public road and to plaintiff's residence area than was permitted by the district bye-laws. R.'s site, though inconveniently near to plaintiff's residence area, did not encroach upon it. Plaintiff summoned R. before a warden for a trespass, and sought to have him removed from his business site. Held that the jurisdiction conferred upon the warden by reference to that of the Courts of Mines under the "Mining Statute 1865" (No. 291,) Sec. 101 (i.,) was confined to cases in which two persons are litigating for the same land, &c., which they both claim; that Sec. 101 (iii.,) applying only to land used for mining purposes, which under neither No. 32 or No. 291 includes residence, did not confer jurisdiction on the warden in this case; and that the warden had no jurisdiction in the matter. Rosales v. Rice, 1 V.R. (M.,) 1; 1 A.J.R., 13.

Forfeiture—Mining Lease.]—A warden has jurisdiction, under Sec. 101 (i.) of the "Mining Statute 1865," to entertain a complaint for forfeiture of a gold-mining lease for non-performance of the labour covenants. M'Millan v. Dillon, 6 V.L.R. (M.,) 15; 1 A.L.T., 203.

Forfeiture—Claim Taken up on Public Street—Warden has no Jurisdiction.]—Schonfeldt v. Beel, ante column 919.

Act No. 291, Sec. 101, Sub-sec. iii., Sec. 177—Non-payment of a Lien.]—H. was owner of land under a residence area license, and he died intestate, having given F. a lien over the land to secure payment of a debt. H.'s widow married E., and E. and his wife went into possession of the ground. F. sued E. and wife as executor and executrix de son tort to obtain a declaration that they had forfeited all right to the land. Held that the proceedings must be brought under Sub-sec. 3 of Sec. 101, and under Sec. 177, and if that were done the warden had jurisdiction to adjudicate upon the forfeiture for non-payment of the lien, and that E. and his wife could be sued jointly as executor and executrix de son tort. Fitzgerald v. Elliott, 5 A.J.R., 3.

Act No. 291, Secs. 101, Sub-sec. iii., 177—Forfeiture of Shares in Company.]—The warden has no jurisdiction under Sec. 101, Sub-sec. 3, and Sec. 177 of Act No. 291, to declare shares in a company registered under Act No. 228, illegally forfeited, or to award damages for such forfeiture. Rule nisi discharged, calling on warden to state a case under Sec. 22 of Act No. 446. Newey v. Garden Gully Coy., 5 A.J.R., 116.

Jurisdiction as to Water Rights—Act No. 32, Sec. 76.]—See Schultz v. Dryburg, ante column 965; and compare Sec. 101, Sub-secs. iii. and vii. of Act No. 291.

Matters of Contract—"Mining Statute 1865," Sec. 101, (vi.)]—The G. company, registered as a no-liability company, held a claim adjoining the M. company, which was not registered. The M. company was divided into five shares, of which the G. company purchased two; but it never obtained possession of the ground, the land was worked by the other partners, and the G. company never received any of the gold raised from the mine. P. sued the G. company and the three other owners of the M. company's mine to recover a sum due to him for work done for that mine before the two shares were sold to the G. company. The warden made an order for the sum. On rule nisi for a prohibition as far as regarded the G. company, Held that there was no contract with P., so far as the G. company was concerned, and that the warden had no jurisdiction under the "Mining Statute 1865," Sec. 101 (vi.,) to enforce payment as against it. Regina v. Philp, ex parte Granya Coy., 6 A.L.T., 13.

Jurisdiction over Crown Lands Temporarily Reserved—Act No. 291, Sec. 177.]—The warden is not deprived of his jurisdiction over Crown lands temporarily reserved by proclamation in the Government Gazette for public purposes where such Crown lands were, at the time of being so reserved, held under miner's rights. Wakeham v. Cobham, 1 V.R. (M.,) 34; 1 A.J.R., 93.

Trespass by Government Officials.]—A warden has jurisdiction in cases arising between the Government and parties claiming under miner's rights, as regards suits for trespass on claims against officials acting unlawfully on behalf of the Crown; but has no jurisdiction in such suits against the Crown itself, unless named. Ibid.

Act No. 291, Sec. 177—Mining on Private Lands—Partnership.]—W. proceeded by plaint before the warden against a company for money due to him on a mining adventure. This adventure was on private lands and the warden decided in favour of W. Held that the entire scope of Act No. 291 confined the general words in Sec. 177 to partnerships on Crown lands, and that, therefore, the warden had no jurisdiction over a partnership on private lands. Pride of the East G.M. Coy. v. Wimmer, 5 V.L.R. (M.,) 9.

Partnership Claim—Act No. 32, Sec. 77.]—Where a suitor alleged that he had originally been a partner, and was entitled to an undivided share in a claim from which he was kept out of possession, Held that the warden had power to hear and determine a complaint by a partner claiming an undivided share in the claim and to put him into possession, and to decide the question of partnership. Kin Sing v. Won Paw, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 303.

Land under Lease from Crown—Act No. 291, Sec. 177.]—Plaintiffs summoned defendant for trespass to land held under lease from Crown, and obtained an injunction. Defendant moved to dismiss injunction, and warden made an order refusing motion, with costs. Rule granted for certiorari to quash the order on the ground that the warden had no jurisdiction over land held under lease from Crown. Regina v. Smith, 3 A.J.R., 22.

As to Abandonment and Forfeiture—No. 291, Secs. 71 (x.,) 177.]—The 177th section of the "Mining Statute 1865" shows an intention that wardens should have jurisdiction in all cases of disputed ownership of claims; and Sec. 71 (x.) does not make it necessary for the efficacy of a bye-law as to abandonment that it should point out a person to adjudicate, but that the Board may leave that duty to the ordinary officer. A warden, therefore, has jurisdiction under a bye-law as to abandonment without being expressly named in such bye-law. Longbottom v. White, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 35.

As to Enforcing Forfeiture.]—It has never been decided that where the warden has no jurisdiction to enforce a forfeiture the Supreme Court will not interfere; but where the warden declared a forfeiture under a bye-law, which, though repealed, the Court held was the bye-law governing the liability to forfeiture, certiorari to quash the order was refused. Regina v. Clow, ex parte Oliver, 5 W.W. & A'B., (L.,) 89.

To Let Some of Several Complainants into Possession.]—A warden has jurisdiction in a suit by several persons seeking damages, and to be let into possession of ground, where some only of the complainants produce miner's rights, to assess damages as to such complainants alone, and to let them into possession. Sea Queen Q.M. Coy. v. Sea Q.M. Coy., 4 A.J.R., 174; Critchley v. Graham, 2 W. and W. (L.) 71.

For facts of these cases see ante column 963.

Power of Warden under Bye-laws.]—A bye-law provided that for non-working a claim should be forfeitable, and went on to provide that "it may be by any competent court declared forfeited." Held that under this bye-law the warden was allowed no discretionary power to refrain from enforcing forfeiture should the circumstances appear to him sufficient to warrant such a decision as being equitable. Lawlor v. Stiggants, 2 V.L.R. (M.,) 17.

Commitment by Warden—"Mining Statute" (No. 291,) Secs. 195, 197.]—Certain persons were brought before a warden by summons, charging them with having from a day named, continuously trespassed upon the claim, and praying amongst other things that the applicants might be ordered to remove therefrom. The warden decided that the "defendants" had trespassed on the claim, ordered them to pay damages and costs, and to remove from the claim. Defendants disobeyed the order and were committed. Held that the summons and order were bad as confounding the jurisdiction under Secs. 195 and 197 of Act No. 291. Semble, per Molesworth, J., that Sec. 195 authorises the warden to order a defendant in possession to deliver possession to the complainant, and to punish disobedience, irespectively of the power of transferring possession by his officer. In re Yung Hing, 4 A.J.R., 57.

Act No. 291, Secs. 5, 195—Buildings and Fixtures—Jurisdiction of Warden.]—A warden dismissed a plaint seeking recovery of the possession of a mining tenement: on the soil were erected certain buildings and fixtures belonging to the complainant. Held that the warden had no jurisdiction to deprive the complainant of the buildings and fixtures. Summers v. Cooper, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 443; 3 A.L.T., 61.

The Court will not restrain a warden from hearing a case on the ground of his having no jurisdiction, but will entertain the question of jurisdiction only after he has adjudicated. Regina v. Warden at Donnelly's Creek, 3 A.J.R., 38.

Plaint Summons Exceeding Jurisdiction but Order made Valid.]—Where G. summoned M. before a warden praying for the cancellation of a certain assignment of an interest in a claim and for accounts, and the warden made an order cancelling the assignment only, Held that the order was valid in itself; and, even if did not strictly follow the summons, the summons might have been amended by striking out the relief sought as to accounts, which was in excess of the jurisdiction. Rule to quash the order discharged. Regina v. Smith, ex parte Mahony, 3 A.J.R., 48.

Warden's Order—Bad as to Part—Necessity for Quashing.]—Where a warden's order gave possession to complainant of a claim declared forfeited, provided that a sum of money, representing value of materials, &c., were paid to the defendant, and the complainant took possession without making the payment, Held that complainant could not and was not entitled to take possession until the bad part of the order (the proviso as to payment) was quashed. Sayers v. Jacomb, 3 V.R. (L.,) 132; 3 A.J.R., 66.

Warden's Order Valid in Part and Invalid in Part—Invalid Part Quashed.]—Where a warden had made an order valid in part and invalid in part, the Full Court, on rule nisi to quash the invalid part, made the rule absolute, with costs. Regina v. Cogdon, ex parte Hartmann, 3 A.J.R., 118.

Compelling Warden to do his Duty—Act No. 291, Sec. 166.]—Upon a special case from warden the Chief Judge made a certain direction which the warden from some misapprehension failed to enter up. Held that the warden's duty in such a case is judicial and not ministerial, and it was not a case for an order under Sec. 166, but for a mandamus to compel the warden to enter the direction. Regina v. Strutt, ex parte Lawlor, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 2.

Mandamus to Compel Warden to Hear and Determine Case.]—A mandamus to compel a warden to hear and determine a case was refused where the warden had heard it as to the individual defendants, but had struck out a company, on the ground that he had no jurisdiction as regarded them, the Court holding that he had heard and determined the complaint. Regina v. Gaunt, ex parte Bahlman, 4 A.J.R., 114.

Mandamus to Compel Warden to Carry Out Decree of Court of Mines—Proper Remedy to Apply to Court of Mines.]—In re Cogdon, ex parte M'Dermott, ante column 883.

And see cases under MANDAMUS, ante column 883.

Upon an application for mandamus to a warden, he has not, under Sec. 10 of Act No. 565 ("Justices' Amendment",) the same privileges as justices as to being able to file an answering affidavit without a fee. Regina v. Strutt, ex parte Constable, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 186.

Liability to Pay Costs—Act No. 291, Sec. 166.]—Where a rule nisi for a warden to state a case is made absolute costs will not be given against the warden unless they are specially asked for in the rule nisi. Grant v. Lawlor, 3 V.L.R. (M.,) 15.

Conclusive Nature of Warden's Decision—Act No. 32, Sec. 80.]—Where a warden has jurisdiction, and gives his decision, such decision is conclusive unless it is appealed from. Kin Sing v. Won Paw, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 303.

Conclusive Nature of Warden's Decision—Act No. 291, Sec. 177.]—A warden's order, if not appealed from, is conclusive, and acts as an estoppel against a suit being brought by the same parties in respect of the same matter. Mulcahy v. Walhalla G.M. Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 103, 115.

See S.P., Constable v. Smith, 6 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 58; N.C., 70.

But a decision purporting to be a decision of the warden, but being in fact only a finding of assessors upon facts, and not accompanied by a judgment of the warden, is a nullity. Mulcahy v. Walhalla G.M. Coy., 2 A.J.R., 94.

For facts see S.C. post column 989.

The decision to be binding must be recorded under Sec. 193 of the Act No. 291. Mulcahy v. Walhalla G.M. Coy., 2 A.J.R., 94; Sim v.

Eddy, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 21; Early v. Barker, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 32.

For facts see post columns 988, 989.

Conclusive Nature of Warden's Decision—Act No. 291, Sec. 193.]—S. proceeded by plaint before the warden, and reserved a special case for the Chief Judge, which was answered to the effect that S. was not entitled to relief unless he proved that he held a miner's right on a certain day. The warden then dismissed the plaint. S. then issued a fresh summons precisely the same as the first, seeking to have a new trial, supplying his former defect of evidence. Held that the decision given in the former case between the parties was a bar to the second proceeding; that the warden's omission to state any fact found, the warden merely giving an order as upon the fact, does not prevent the effect of such order being final. Semble, a complainant producing insufficient evidence is not entitled to a nonsuit. Summers v. Cooper, 5 V.L.R. (M.,) 42; 1 A.L.T., 115.

In Matters of Practice—Act No. 32, Sec. 70.]—The 70th section of the "Goldfields Act" (No. 32,) gives the judge of the Court of Mines power to grant only one re-hearing of a hearing or an appeal. Dennis v. Vivian, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 201.

The Supreme Court will not issue a prohibition to a Court of Mines where it has acted within its jurisdiction, although it may have decided wrongly. Regina v. Cope, In re Moore, 4 A.J.R., 113.

Judge of Court of Mines—Pronouncing Decision Outside of his District.]—A judge of a Court of Mines, having heard a case within his district, afterwards, by consent of the parties, when within another district announced the decision he had arrived at and gave his reason. Held, per Privy Council, that there was no objection to such a proceeding, and that it could not form ground for a prohibition, and that if the judge, at the request or with the consent of the parties, allowed them to attend him out of the jurisdiction to hear his reasons and conclusions, there was nothing to prevent him, being afterwards within his jurisdiction, from giving his formal order formally signed to the proper officer to be duly recorded. Mulcahy v. Walhalla G.M. Coy., 2 A.J.R., 93, 95.

Act No. 32, Sec. 27.]—The judge of a Court of Mines has no jurisdiction to hear and decide, outside the territorial limits of his Court, a motion for an injunction in a matter otherwise within the jurisdiction of his Court. James v. Higgans, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 51.

[But now see Act 446, Sec. 8.]

Act No. 32, Sec. 27—Equitable Matters—Work and Labour Dons.]—The jurisdiction of Courts of Mines is expressly limited to matters cognizable by a Court of Equity; and a judgment for work and labour done given by a Court of Mines is wholly unauthorised. Wilson v. Broadfoot, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 214.

"Mining Statute 1865" (No. 291,) Secs. 101, 124, 129—Cross Relief—Demurrer—Certificate of Title—Cancellation.]—E. obtained in January, 1872, on behalf of himself and seven others, who were mining in partnership under the style of the Herald Company (which was never incorporated,) a gold-mining lease of certain land. On 1st December, 1873, E. assigned his individual interest in lease to plaintiff G., and by the consent of the Governor-in-Council, lease was transferred to G. as trustee for the Herald Company, 17th February, 1874; in May, 1874, G. with consent of his co-partners, sold his individual interest to B. In 1873, one Atkinson sued E. for a small debt in a County Court, which bill alleged was paid, but in December, 1873, one Welsh purporting to act as attorney for Atkinson, obtained from Registrar of County Court a certificate of judgment, and that debt was unpaid, and signed final judgment. In January, 1874, Welsh issued a writ of fi. fa. upon the judgment, and E.'s interest in lease was sold by sheriff, the defendant Harvey becoming purchaser, G. entering a protest against sale. The plaintiffs, the co-partners mining together as the Herald Company, remained in occupation of lease. On 9th February, 1875, the plaintiffs were served with an injunction of the Court of Mines, Sandhurst, in a suit wherein present plaintiffs were defendants, and defendant Harvey and defendant company, the Nell Gwynne Quartz Mining Company, were plaintiffs, and the present plaintiffs were restrained from mining on land. The plaint alleged that defendant Harvey was the registered proprietor of a leasehold estate for an unexpired term in land comprised in lease of January, 1872, and that defendant Harvey was a trustee for defendant company. Bill prayed for sale to defendant Harvey to be set aside, a declaration that certificate of title issued to him was void and should be cancelled, and for an injunction to restrain the defendants from proceeding in Court of Mines. Held on demurrer, that Supreme Court has concurrent jurisdiction with Court of Mines; that Equity Court has no jurisdiction to order certificate of title to be cancelled, the proper relief being to order holders to transfer; that Court of Mines had power to consider all matters put forward in bill, and to give cross-relief (Secs. 124 to 129). When Court will not grant other relief sought, it will refuse to restrain proceedings in Court of Mines. Demurrer allowed. Gunn v. Harvey, 1 V.L.R. (Eq.,) 111.

In Partnership Suits.]—A quartz crushing partnership is a mining partnership within the meaning of Act No. 32, Sec. 27, and a Court of Mines has jurisdiction over a suit concerning such a partnership, if such partnership be limited to a "gold-field" as defined by the Act. Harvey v. Rodda, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 21.

"Goldfields Act" (21 Vict. No. 32,) Sec. 27—Boundaries.]—On a plaint in a Court of Mines for defining boundaries it turned out that the question in dispute was not really one of boundaries, but that one party denied the other's right in toto. Held that the jurisdiction of the Court of Mines being limited by Sec. 27 of the "Goldfields Act," if the Court of Equity had no original jurisdiction in the matter, no more had a Court of Mines, and the equitable jurisdiction of defining boundaries being based on the admission that both parties are entitled to something, the case, in its then form, could not be entertained by a Court of Mines. Banks v. Granville, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 158.

Jurisdiction as to Production of Books.]—The Judge of a Court of Mines has no jurisdiction in a suit between two companies to order the defendant company to produce for inspection books of another company not a party to the suit. Park Coy. v. South Hustler's Reserve Coy., 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 37.

Expunging Proof of Debt.]—Courts of Mines, which had vested in them by the "Mining Statute 1865" the powers possessed by commissioners of insolvent estates, have not by virtue of the "Insolvency Statute 1865," the power of expunging proofs of debt, that power not having been vested in the commissioners at the time of the passing of the "Mining Statute 1865," and the Court being unable to extend the jurisdiction conferred by that Statute. Regina v. Skinner, ex parte Smith, 2 A.J.R., 107.

Act No. 228, Sec. 33].—By the Act No. 228, Sec. 33, Judges of Courts of Mines were given, in relation to mining companies being wound up under that Act, the powers possessed by the Chief Commissioner of Insolvent Estates, and at the time of the passing of the Act the Chief Commissioner did not possess the power of expunging proofs of debt. By the "Insolvency Statute 1869," passed subsequently to the Act No. 228, the power of expunging proofs of debts was given to the Chief Commissioner. Held that the late Act could not incidentally exteud the jurisdiction conferred by the former, and that Courts of Mines, therefore, had no jurisdiction to expunge proofs of debts against a mining company being wound up under No. 228. In re The Barfold Estate G.M. Coy., 2 V.R. (L.,) 186.

To Award Costs on Petition for Winding Up—Act No. 228, Secs. 29,30—Act No. 324, Secs. 3, 10—Act No. 291, Sec. 230.]—The Court of Mines has two jurisdictions, one under Act No. 291, Sec. 230, and the other under Acts No. 228 and No. 324, but those jurisdictions are separate and distinct. The Court of Mines has not, under the power to give costs under No. 291, jurisdiction to award costs on a petition for winding up under Act No. 228 or No. 324. Regina v. Bowman, Ex parte Willan, 3 V.R. (L.,) 213, 3 A.J.R. 109.

III. MINING COMPANIES: Winding Up—Winding-up Orders.

To Award Costs—Interlocutory Application.]—Act No. 291, Sec. 230, gives to a judge of the Court of Mines the power to award costs upon an interlocutory application. Watson v. Commercial Bank, 5 V.L.R. (M.,) 36.

(c) Jurisdiction of Supreme Court and of Chief Judge of Courts of Mines.

Of Supreme Court.]—The Legislature, by creating the Court of the Chief Judge of Courts of Mines, and declaring its decision to be final as between the parties, in certain cases, has not deprived the Supreme Court of its jurisdiction in those cases, and the Supreme Court cannot refuse to hear a suitor who comes to ask its decision. M'Cafferty v. Cummins, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 73.

And the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court is not ousted merely because the Chief Judge of Courts of Mines has already decided the point of law involved in the case. Ibid.

Remedies for Encroachment.]—The remedies afforded by the "Mining Statute 1865," in cases of encroachment, are cumulative, and do not exclude the ordinary jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, that jurisdiction not being ousted by express terms or necessary intendment. Mulcahy v. The Walhalla G.M. Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 103, 120.

Imprisonment—Arrest Pending Rule Nisi for Prohibition.]—An order under Sec. 203 of the "Mining Statute 1865" was made by a warden upon an affidavit entitled, "In the Warden's Court at Ballarat," and the defendant appeared, and made no objection to the affidavit being read. In showing cause against commitment for disobedience of the order, defendant for the first time objected that the affidavit was not evidence upon which the order could be properly made, but the warden overruled the objection, and a warrant was issued. Before arrest, a rule nisi for prohibition was served on the bailiff, and the defendant was arrested before discharge of the rule. Defendant applied, under Sec. 221 of the Act, to the Chief Judge for discharge from arrest, but his application was refused on the ground that the Chief Judge had no jurisdiction to deal with the case of an arrest being made after a rule nisi for prohibition which was afterwards discharged. In re Clerk, 2 V.R. (M.,) 11; 2 A.J.R., 48.

Assistant Registrars—How they should Sign.]—Assistant mining registrars are given the powers of registrars, and should sign by their own names as assistant registrars, and should not, when they have done any business themselves, sign the name of the registrar. Thompson v. Begg, 2 V.R. (M.,) 1; 2 A.J.R., 34.

(2) Practice and Procedure in Warden's Courts and Courts of Mines.

Summons — Vagueness — Objection to, When Taken—Act No. 291, Sec. 185, Schedule 20.]—B., claiming under a miner's right, sued the defendant company before the warden claiming possession of land "of which defendants were in illegal occupation." The counsel for defendants objected that the summons was too vague, and the warden gave leave to amend, which B. refused, and was then about to dismiss it when he stated a special case. Held that such summons showed jurisdiction, but that schedule 20 indicates that the objection to defendant's title should be in some degree pointed out, and that the summons was therefore too vague, and that the warden could hear the objection before the case was opened by B.'s counsel, and should have dismissed it on B.'s refusal to amend. Barton v. Band of Hope and Albion Consols, 5 V.L.R. (M.,) 18; 1 A.L.T., 30.

Description of Locus in Quo.]—As the Act No. 291 or the rules under it do not require particularity of description, the description of the locus in quo in a summons for encroachment—as plaintiff's claim registered in the books of the Creswick division—is sufficient. Stephens v. Jolly, 5 A.J.R., 162.

Summons to Enforce Forfeiture—Vagueness — Amendment — Act No. 291, Secs. 180, 185.]—A summons seeking to be put in possession of part only of an entire claim alleged to be improperly held, should define accurately the part sought; and a summons omitting so to define it should be dismissed for vagueness and want of description, unless the complainant, upon the warden's stating a disposition to dismiss it, had sought to amend, which the warden has power to allow under Sec. 185. Roscrow v. Webster, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 64.

Plaint Summons Exceeding Jurisdiction — Amendment.] — Regina v. Smith, ex parte Mahony, ante column 979.

Plaint for Forfeiture—Not Showing under what Bye-law—Complainants Entitled to Show Forfeiture under Bye-laws Applicable—Act No. 291, Sec. 185.]—A plaint seeking a declaration of forfeiture was apparently framed so as to seek forfeiture for non-compliance with a bye-law made subsequently to the taking up of the claim, and therefore inapplicable. The plaint, however, was very indefinite, and stated that the defendants had "failed to work for the space of seven consecutive days," and did not indicate which of several forfeitures for not working it was intended to enforce, or whether it was for non-continuance of bonâ fide working. Held, by the Chief Judge upon special case, that if no objection had been taken to the form of the plaint before the warden, the complainants were entitled to prove a forfeiture for non-compliance with such bye-laws as might be applicable; and that, if the objection were taken, the plaint might have been amended under Sec. 185. Hooke v. Burke, 4 A.J.R., 122.

Summons under "Regulation of Mines and Mining Machinery Act 1853"—Vagueness.]—A summons before a warden to recover damages for injuries sustained by complainant while working in defendant's mine ran as follows:—"For that the complainant on, &c., was employed in and about the mine of the defendant at, &c., and whilst so employed was descending the shaft of the defendant at the said mine, and the complainant fell down the said shaft to a depth of one hundred feet, and had his legs and ribs broken, and suffered, &c., and was permanently injured, and the complainant says that such injuries were occasioned to him by reason or in consequence of the defendant having contravened and neglected to comply with the provisions of "The Regulation of Mines and Mining Machinery Act 1853." Held that such summons was bad for vagueness, since it did not allege which provision of the Act had been contravened or not complied with. Campbell v. Parker's Extended Coy., 10 V.L.R. (M.,) 1.

The warden directed the plaint to be amended by adding at the foot the following:—"Sec. 8, Sub-sec. 29, by not having substantial platforms at intervals of not more than thirty feet in the ladder in the shaft used for descending the mine of, &c.; and Sec. 16, in not having in connection with the shaft of the mine of, &c., securely fixed platforms at intervals of not more than thirty feet from each other in the ladder of the said shaft." Held that the summons as thus amended was neither contradictory nor vague, since it gave the date of the accident, and referred to the sections relied on; and that it showed jurisdiction in the warden. Ibid.

Act No. 291, Sec. 185—Amendment of Summons—Parties.]—A summons was taken out before the warden for the forfeiture of four claims stating the registration and amalgamation. There was such neglect in working them that the right to each and to them as amalgamated would be subject to forfeiture under certain bye-laws; but no amalgamation in fact was proved. Held that the warden could not on the summons as framed, adjudicate as to the forfeiture of any one claim, but that he might amend the summons under Sec. 185, and then adjudicate as to one of them. Jolly v. Stephens, 5 A.J.R., 169.

Summons including Different Causes of Action.]—If a summons includes different causes of action as to original defect of title, and of forfeiture, if the title were originally good, and at the beginning transposed the words "in illegal occupation and forfeited" that is no objection to the summons. Weddell v. Howse, 9 V.L.R. (M.,) 13; 4 A.L.T., 179.

Summons signed by Warden's Clerk in his Own Name, and not in Name of Warden.]—See Regina v. Strutt, ante column 127.

Amendment of Plaint—Act No. 291, Secs. 180, 185.]—L. sued H. and others before the warden for trespass, and at the trial plaintiff's counsel sought to amend the plaint by changing the count for trespass and encroachment into one for ouster and exclusion. Held that such amendment was inconsistent with the summons, it appearing that L. and H. were mining as partners, and H. brought in the other defendants, and prevented L. from occupying the claim or any part, and that the summons should be dismissed without amendment. Lindgren v. Halpin, 3 A.J.R., 107.

Amendment of Summons—Act No. 291, Secs. 180, 185.]—The warden may amend a summons praying to be put into possession of surplus ground by altering it to one seeking a declaration of right, and may add co-defendants. Oxley v. Little, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 14.

Parties—Act No. 32, Sec. 76.]—Where deceased persons or persons incapacitated from suing are made parties in a complaint before the warden under the Act No. 32, Sec. 76, that does not invalidate the proceedings, and it is not the proper course on appeal to the Court of Mines to reverse the warden's decision without prejudice to fresh proceedings before him confined to the proper parties; but for the Court of Mines to amend the proceedings both before the warden and the Court by striking out such persons. Critchley v. Graham, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 71.

In complaints before warden under Sec. 76, all shareholders being holders of miners' rights and entitled to sue, or such of them as appear to the warden or Court sufficiently to represent such shareholders ought to be before the warden. Ibid.

Parties—Act No. 32, Secs. 76, 77.]—C. and party summoned B. and party before a warden by a plaint showing title to a claim and demanding possession, "for that complainants are entitled as owners of miners' rights to be put into possession of a certain claim, the same having been forfeited by you." It appeared that the land had been long abandoned by the V. company, but that their registration remained uncancelled. B. and party included M., but not the A. company. M., a member of the V. company, waived the warden's appearance on the land. The A. company claimed to appear and to be entitled to the land by two titles, both independent of the V. company. The warden found that land had been forfeited, and ordered possession to C. and party. Held that as between B. and C. the A. company had no right to appear as a party and had no locus standi in the Appellate Court; the "parties interested" in Secs. 76 and 77 being the actual parties concerned. Band of Hope Coy. v. Critchley, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 47.

Necessary Parties—Act No. 291, Sec. 180.]—Where a summons is taken out to enforce a forfeiture the company for whom the defendants hold as trustees are not necessary parties under Sec. 180. Jolly v. Stephens, 5 A.J.R. 169.

Person Made a Party without his Consent and without Notice.]—A person not having been summoned, and being accidentally present at the hearing of a suit, cannot, against his will, be made a party thereto; and a decision pronounced against him in such a case will not be binding on him. Where, on the hearing of a plaint before a warden against a company, the legal manager, who was present in court, was, notwithstanding his protest, made a party to the suit on the request of the complainant, and the warden pronounced a decision against him, Held that the warden had no jurisdiction so to act, and order quashed. Semble that if the warden had adjourned the case, after adding the manager as a party, thereby allowing him an opportunity of preparing a defence, it would have been equivalent to serving a summons upon him, and the warden's decision at such adjourned sitting would have been binding. Regina v. Sherrard, ex parte Fraser, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 80.

Deciding whether One Defendant sufficiently Represents the Rest—Act No. 291, Sec. 180.]—At the hearing of a complaint before a warden for the forfeiture of a mining claim, one of the defendants appeared and stated that he appeared for himself and the other defendants, and he actually had authority so to appear from some of the defendants, who subsequently raised objections to his so appearing, and complained that they had not been served. Held that, under Sec. 180 of the "Mining Statute 1865" (No. 291,) it was for the warden to decide whether the defendant who appeared sufficiently represented all the parties interested. Regina v. Clow, ex parte Oliver, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 89.

Application to be Put into Possession of Surplus Ground—Parties—Amendment.]—Persons cannot join in an application to be put into possession of surplus ground, though their individual rights may be exactly parallel; and the warden is not justified in amending a summons by four into a summons by one by striking out the other three. Oxley v. Little, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 14.

Service of Summons—"Mining Statute" (No. 291,) Sec. 180.]—Every defendant, in a proceeding before a warden to obtain possession of a mining claim, must be served with the summons either personally or by substitution, and there is no power in the warden, under Sec. 180 of the "Mining Statute" (No. 291,) to decide that a defendant not served is sufficiently represented, and an order made by the warden in such a case cannot stand. Regina v. Heron, ex parte Bryer, 2 V.R. (L.,) 155; 2 A.J.R., 110.

Service of Summons—Insufficient in Point of Time.]—Where a summons had been served upon defendants to appear before a warden, and they all appeared and objected that the service was insufficient in point of time, not having been made four days before the day of appearance, Held that the objection was properly overruled. Regina v. Strutt, 4 A.J.R., 147.

Order made against Defendants where One Unserved—Whole Order Bad.]—A warden has no jurisdiction to make an order for damages for trespass against a defendant who has not been served, and where no substituted service has been effected. And if such an order be made against such a defendant, and other defendants who have been served, the whole order is bad, as against the unserved defendant, and so must be quashed as against all the defendants. Regina v. Belcher, ex parte Gilbee, 4 A.J.R., 80, 110.

Substituted Service of Summons.]—Although Sec. 180 of the Act No. 291 gives the warden a wide discretion, yet he has no power to make an order to substitute service before the return of the summons. Taylor v. Stubbs, 6 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 19.

S.P.—See Regina v. Akehurst, 6 W.W. & B. (L.,) 244.

Substituted Service.]—A warden has no jurisdiction to direct substituted service of a summons at the time it is issued, but only at the hearing. Regina v. Akehurst, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 84.

There is no provision made by the "Mining Statute" (No. 291,) for a warden to dismiss a suit where the parties do not proceed with the summons. Regina v. Carr, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 240; N.C. 59.

Order for Injunction—No. 291, Sec. 203.]—A warden is warranted in making an order under Sec. 203 of the "Mining Statute 1865," to restrain encroachment, trespass, &c., upon affidavits. In re Clerk, 2 V.R. (M.,) 11; 2 A.J.R., 48.

Injunction Orders by Warden—Act No. 291, Secs. 203, 204.]—A warden made, as under Sec. 203, an order enjoining the registrar from registering certain people for a claim, such order being without limit as to time. Held that the injunction orders under Secs. 203, 204, are temporary or interlocutory, and should be limited as to time; but if the warden was making a final order or decree, coupled with an injunction to the registrar, such injunction should be perpetual. Semble the warden might amend if he thought the appellants interested under the circumstances. Keast v. D'Angri, 4 A.J.R., 61.

Injunction—Act No. 291, Sec. 203.]—Where notice of an application for an injunction under Sec. 203, of Act No. 291, is given by more than one person, the warden should dismiss it on the non-appearance of any of the persons so giving notice. Grant v. Lawlor, 3 V.L.R. (M.,) 15; and see S.C., ante column 943.

Order for Inspection—Breach "Mining Statute 1865" (No. 291,) Secs. 202, 207—Schedule 26.]—Where a warden made an order for inspection worded, "upon the application of W., of Ballarat, claiming, &c.," and S. the mining manager of the company, whose mine was to be inspected, obstructed and prevented W. from descending the mine, S. was convicted and fined under Sec. 207 of No. 291. S. appealed, urging that the order did not show facts bringing it within warden's jurisdiction, and that it was not made in the form given in Schedule 26. Held that the order was bad, and that the declaration of secrecy under Sec. 202 must be made before disobedience becomes an offence under Sec. 207. Conviction reversed. Spiers v. Whiteside, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 91.

Record of Warden's Decision—Act No. 32, Sec. 80.]—A warden gave decisions on various claims, and in each case signed a minute of the decision. On a separate sheet he made a further order imposing certain conditions on the parties in whose favour he had decided. Held that the warden should have signed the separate sheet as part of his decision, but the appellants were allowed to correct the defect in the minutes of the decision. Early v. Barker, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 32.

For facts, see S.C., post column 998, and compare Sec. 193 of Act No. 291.

Record of Warden's Decision—Act No. 32, Sec. 80.]—On a complaint before a warden, the warden's decision was minuted under Sec. 80 of the "Goldfields Act" (No. 32,) as follows:—"Case dismissed, having been adjudicated on before. See 23rd October, 1865." On appeal to the Court of Mines the jurisdiction of that court was objected to on the ground that the case was dismissed as having been previously heard. Held, on questions reserved, that the words "case dismissed" must be taken to mean that the case was "entertained and dismissed," and not dismissed as not entertained, and that the Court of Mines had jurisdiction to hear the appeal; and that this minute was not conclusive evidence, because it extended to the reason why the decision was pronounced, and was not an entry of the "decision" which alone is made conclusive under Sec. 80 of the Act No. 32. Sim v. Eddy, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 21.

Warden Sitting with Assessors — "Mining Statute 1865" (No. 291,) Secs. 212, 220.]—In both the cases of a hearing and rehearing before the warden, with or without assessors, it is, under Sec. 212 of No. 291, the decision of the warden only which forms the groundwork of an appeal, and Sec. 220 does not militate against this. If therefore a person is aggrieved with and appeals from the finding of the assessors only, that is an appeal on a question of fact, and the appropriate remedy is to apply to the warden for a new trial. Regina v. Brewer and Walhalla Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 124.

Adjudication by Warden and Assessors.]—In a case as to forfeiture of certain claims there was an adjudication by the warden (October, 1865) dismissing the summons, and in another case (April, 1866) as to the same land in which the parties were reversed, there was a finding by a majority of assessors, and order for dismissal. Held, per Molesworth, J., and affirmed, that the first adjudication was inconclusive, as it was not clear what land was really in debate, and that though the second adjudication was informal inasmuch as there should have been a judgment of the warden as to the facts based upon the finding of the assessors, yet it was such cogent evidence of the facts upon which it adjudicated as to be conclusive. Held, per Privy Council, that there was enough in the history of the case to make it clear as to the land in the first adjudication, and that the form of the decision made it conclusive under Sec. 193 of the Act No. 291; that as to the second adjudication it was informal altogether as not complying with Sec. 193 of the Act, and should have been a finding of the assessors followed by an adjudication of the warden on the law and facts, and that in its form it was in effect only a verdict not followed by a judgment, and therefore a nullity. Mulcahy v. Walhalla Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 103, 123; 2 A.J.R., 93, 94.

Affidavit.]—If an affidavit be entitled in a "Warden's Court" it is wrongly entitled, for the "Mining Statute 1865" does not apply the word "Court" to the place or manner of a warden's judicial acts; but the title may be treated as surplusage. In re Clerk, 2 V.R. (M.,) 11; 2 A.J.R., 48.

When Copy of Entry in Register is Evidence—No. 291, Secs. 47, 49.]—The "Mining Statute 1865," Sec. 49, makes the copy of an entry in the registry, made by a registrar in books directed to be kept by the regulations under Sec. 47, primâ facie evidence of the truth of matters in the books stated; but such a copy will not be evidence under Sec. 49 unless it be shown that the book in which it was made was directed to be kept by the regulations under Sec. 47. Cruise v. Crowley, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 27.

Taxation of Costs—No. 291, Secs. 228, 230.]—A warden taxed costs as a lump sum, and not item by item in reference to any scale. Held that such taxation was good, it not being shown that the amount was greater than if costs had been taxed item by item. In re Strutt, ex parte Lawlor, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 1.

Parties.]—R. sued M. to establish a partnership in a claim. The plaint alleged that M. had contracted to sell more than his moiety to several persons, who were, with the exception of two named, unknown to R., and charged that the contracts for sale were void as to the excess beyond M.'s share, and should be restrained. A decree was made affirming the partnership, and declaring M. trustee of the claim for the partnership. An objection was taken that the two purchasers named in the plaint should have been parties, but was overruled. On appeal, Held that they were not necessary parties, since, if the contracts were valid and binding, R. could not break them, but would have to proceed against M.; and, if they were not binding, R. would have an option to proceed against M. alone; and appeal dismissed, with costs. Miller v. Rigby, 2 V.R. (M.,) 32; 2 A.J.R., 134.

Parties.]—Sec. 101, Sub-sec. i. of the "Mining Statute 1865," which gives jurisdiction to Courts of Mines in cases of lands in which some person other than the plaintiffs shall be or shall claim under miners' rights, &c., to be entitled to be in the occupation or possession, does not mean that no person can be made a defendant who claims no right, &c. And in order to maintain a suit for forfeiture of a claim, the plaintiff need not show that the defendant either is, or claims to be, in possession of the claim. Thompson v. Begg, 2 V.R. (M.,) 1; 2 A.J.R., 34.

Misjoinder of Parties—Act 291, Sec. 130.]—A plaint is objectionable, which comprises land held under different titles, and which joins as co-plaintiff parties not interested in all. Australasian Coy. v. Wilson, 4 A.J.R., 18.

Suit to Restrain Encroachment — Parties—Lessees and Tributors—Amendment—Act No. 291, Sec. 130.]—O. and seven others instituted a suit in the District Court of Mines to restrain encroachment, and for value of gold. The co-plaintiffs consisted of four Crown lessees and four tributors. The defendants moved for a nonsuit, on the ground that either the four lessees were entitled to sue to the exclusion of the tributors, or vice versâ. The district judge then went into evidence as to the time at which the encroachment took place, and finding it happened after the letting on tribute, amended the plaint under Sec. 130 of Act No. 291, by striking out the lessees as plaintiffs, and made a decree for the tributors. Held on appeal, that the relation of the two sets of co-plaintiffs was that of landlord and tenant, and that therefore the eight might join as to the remedy by injunction, but not as to the account of value, because the gold would never be their common property; that it was a case for amendment under Sec. 130, and that the District Court Judge acted rightly in postponing his discretion till all the facts were discovered. The Court feeling a doubt as to whether the tributors were now in possession, gave the appellant an opportunity of giving evidence on the subject, but that not being exercised, the decree was affirmed. Osborne v. Elliott, 6 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 49; N.C., 20.

Suit to Enforce Title to Claim—Parties.]—Morrison v. Hartley, ante column 941.

Affidavit of Service—Interlineations not Verified—Not Sealed with Court Seal—No. 291, Sec. 111.]—An affidavit of service of a plaint summons was not sealed with the seal of the Court, and there were in it erasures and interlineations uninitialled. Upon the case being called on in the Court of Mines, the defendant's solicitor took the objection as to the irregularity of the affidavit of service, but the judge refused to recognise him unless he appeared, stating that if he appeared such appearance would waive the irregularity. The solicitor thereupon appeared under protest, and a decree was made against the defendants. Upon appeal, Held that the objection was good, and decree reversed, with costs. Mitten v. Spargo, 1 V.R. (M.,) 22; 1 A.J.R., 69.

Judge's Summons—Seal of Court—Act No. 291, Sec. 100.]—Sec. 100 of Act No. 291 applies only to process—i.e., something by which the suit is advanced—and where a judge's summons under Sec. 35 of Act No. 409, as to the rectification of the register of a mining company, was, by mistake, sealed with the seal of the Court of Insolvency. Held that the judge had jurisdiction to hear the case. Murphy v. Cotter and United Hand and Band Coy., 7 V.L.R. (M.,) 16; 3 A.L.T., 17.

Trial by Assessors—Finding Contrary to Direction—Act No. 32, Sec. 32.]—Where assessors found for a plaintiff in the face of a direction of the judge that there was no evidence to go to them, and that a verdict for the defendant should be entered, Held that the judge could not disregard the assessors' finding. Brinkman v. Holstein, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 368.

Power of Judge to Settle Issues on Appeal from Warden—No. 291, Secs. 218, 137.]—The Judge of a Court of Mines has the like power of settlement of the question of fact to be tried by assessors on appeal under the provisions of Sec. 218 of the "Mining Statute 1865," which he would have in his original jurisdiction under Sec. 137. Brennan v. Watson, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 55.

Trial by Assessors—Issues.]—Semble, that where issues have been settled for trial by assessors, the parties should not be allowed in argument, to go outside those issues. Wearne v. Froggatt, 2 V.L.R. (M.,) 1, 6.

When Injunction may be Granted—No. 32, Sec. 70—Pending Appeal.]—Semble, per Stawell, C.J., that under Sec. 70 of the Act No. 32 "Goldfields Act," a suit existing in the Warden's Court, and transferred to the Appellate Court, would support the issue of an injunction by the Appellate Court (Court of Mines), without the institution of any suit in that court for an injunction. Dennis v. Vivian, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 201.

[Compare Secs. 170, 171 of Act No. 291; and see also Sec. 219.]

Injunction Granted on Insufficient Grounds—Act No. 32, Sec. 27.]—A Deputy-Judge of a Court of Mines granted an injunction outside of his territorial limits. The plaintiffs moved before the Judge of the Court of Mines to vary the injunction, and the defendants to dissolve it. The judge refused the application to dissolve, considering that his deputy had jurisdiction, and did not grant the motion to vary; but of his own motion made a fresh injunction substantially similar to that granted by the deputy. On appeal from both decisions, Held that the injunction of the deputy should have been dissolved; and that the injunction granted by the judge was not warranted by the proceedings or materials before it, it not being regular to regrant the injunction made by the deputy, or to make an order of the kind made when not asked for by the party in whose favour it was made, and both appeals were allowed. James v. Higgans, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 51.

Order for the Payment of Money—Enforcement of Order.]—An order of a Judge of a Court of Mines as follows:—"£35 and interest at 10 per cent. on 24th June, 1862; and £35 and interest at 10 per cent. on 24th December, 1862. Defendant to transfer his share on these conditions, and payment of the above; plaintiff to retransfer; and in default of the first or second payment, plaintiff to be entitled to sell his share by public auction or private contract, and pay the balance (if any) to the defendant," is an "order for the payment of money" within the meaning of the "Goldfields Act" (No. 32,) Sec. 41, and an execution can issue under such an order. Lee v. Conway, 2 V.R. (L.,) 77; 2 A.J.R., 58.

Disobedience to Decree—Act No. 291, Sec. 155—Drawing up of Decree.]—A decree was made by a Deputy-Judge of a Court of Mines, and, on appeal to the Chief Judge, was varied. After the Deputy-Judge ceased to be Deputy-Judge, and after the decree had been varied by the Chief Judge, a decree was drawn up, dated with the date of the original hearing, but signed by the Judge of the Court, who had returned, thereby displacing his deputy. The defendant disobeyed the order, and was summoned under Sec. 155 of the "Mining Statute 1865" to show cause against commitment for disobedience, and raised the objection that the decree was improperly drawn up, and the judge allowed the objection, and dismissed the summons. On appeal from the order of dismissal, Held that the decision was right, since the decree must be signed by the judge who was judge at its date; and appeal dismissed without costs. Vallancourt v. O'Rorke, 2 V.R. (M.,) 14; 2 A.J.R., 84.

Evidence—Warden's Evidence.] — The verbal evidence of a warden as to an admission in an inquiry before him relating to an application for a lease is admissible in evidence, although it is the warden's duty to report the evidence given before him to the office of the Minister. Weddell v. Howse, 9 V.L.R. (M.,) 13; 4 A.L.T., 179.

Costs of a Co-defendant who asserts that he Claims no Interest.]—In a plaint against H., B. was a co-defendant. Before the plaint, B. attempted to transfer to H., but B. appeared as a litigant, and before the warden stated that he claimed an interest and did not disclaim. B. was made a co-defendant in the appeal to the District Judge but was not examined. Held that the plaint could not be dismissed as against B., and that B. had to pay half complainant's costs of the special case to the Chief Judge. Ibid.

Taxation of Costs — Not Taxed by Judge at Hearing under Sec. 230 of Act No. 291, but by Clerk — Appeal not Certiorari the Remedy.]—Regina v. Quinlan, ex parte Sampson, ante column 125.

"Goldfields Act" (No. 32,) Secs. 84, 88—Where Appeal Lies from Warden.]—Where a warden refuses to give possession on a complaint demanding such possession, there is no appeal under Secs. 84 and 88 of the Act against such refusal. Rule for prohibiting judge of Court of Mines from proceeding in a decision in such an appeal from warden made absolute. Power v. M'Dermott, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 241.

Varying Decision—Reversing—Dismissing Appeal—"Goldfields Act," Secs. 84, 88.]—The 84th and 88th sections of the "Goldfields Act" (No. 32,) which give power to the Court of Mines to vary the decision of a warden, do not give power to reverse such decision, and the powers to enforce a varied decision of a warden are not to be impliedly inferred in cases of reversal, and the Court of Mines has not jurisdiction to enforce such a reversed decision. The Court of Mines is not justified in dismissing an appeal on the ground of imperfect jurisdiction arising from the fact that if the appellant succeeded the warden's decision would have to be reversed, and no mode is provided by the Act by which the decision of the Court of Mines could be enforced. An application was made to the warden to put applicant in possession of certain ground which he alleged to have been abandoned, and the warden refused the application. The difficulty as to enforcing the decision of the Court of Mines (in case of a reversal) was that the Court of Mines could not order possession to an applicant who had never been in possession. Bray v. Mullen, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 191.

Where it Lies.]—Where, in a complaint before him, a warden declines to make an order, there is no appeal to the Court of Mines under Act No. 32. The summons before the warden was for interfering with a water-right, and the warden dismissed the summons. Wardle v. Evans, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 188.

"Goldfields Act" (No. 32.) Secs. 84, 88.]—On a complaint before the warden for encroachment, the warden found there had been no encroachment. Special case stated by Judge of Court of Mines as to whether he had jurisdiction to hear the appeal. Held that Sec. 84 grants an appeal from the warden to the Court of Mines, and empowers that Court to reverse or vary such decision, or to dismiss the appeal, and, if necessary, to order restitution; that Sec. 88 contains no express provision for the enforcement of a reversal of a decision appealed from; that if the Court of Mines should be of opinion that the complaint dismissed by the warden ought to have been allowed, and that the respondent had encroached, it would be competent for the Judge of the Court to order that possession of the part so encroached on should be restored, and that such an order might be enforced; Bray v. Mullen distinguished on the ground that in that case there was no previous possession by the appellants to the Court of Mines; Power v. M'Dermott and Wardle and Evans distinguished on other grounds. Tatham v. M'Gill, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 113.

[But now see Sec. 212 of Act No. 291, where provision is made for an appeal from a dismissal.]

Appeal from Warden and Assessors—Act No. 291, Sec. 212.]—Where a warden sits with assessors there is no appeal against the finding of the assessors on the facts. Under Sec. 212 the basis of an appeal is the warden's adjudication; and the remedy in case of a misfinding by assessors is a new trial. Regina v. Brewer and Walhalla Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 124.

Per Privy Council—It may be true that no appeal will lie from a mere decision of the assessors, because that decision requires to be followed by an express finding and order of the warden by Sec. 193 of the Act No. 291 and in the form of Schedule 25. But if the decision is minuted as required the assessors' decision and the order become the decision and order of the warden, against which an appeal lies under Sec. 212. Mulcahy v. Walhalla Coy., 2 A.J.R., 93, 95.

Under Sec. 212 an appeal lies from a decision of the warden and assessors. Moore v. White, 4 A.J.R., 17.

Sum under £100—Joint Mining Adventure.]—An appeal lies to a Court of Mines from the decision of a warden under Sec. 177 of the "Mining Statute 1865," in respect of a sum under £100, claimed as accruing to the complainant from a joint mining adventure between complainants and defendants. Pride of the East G.M. Coy. v. Wimmer, 4 V.L.R. (M.,) 3.

General Principles — Act No. 291, Secs. 212, 216.]—Appeals from wardens under the "Mining Statute 1865" should be practically re-hearings. There being no distinct provision in Sec. 212 for appeals from the wardens being in the form of special cases collecting and stating the facts, appellants are entitled to a re-hearing to the extent of being allowed to prove another and different case to that proved before the warden; but they are confined to the grounds stated in the notice of appeal, subject to the relaxation of Sec. 216. Constable v. Smith, 6 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 58; N.C., 70.

Where it Lies—Question of Jurisdiction of Warden.]—The Judge of a District Court has power to hear an appeal on the question of the warden's jurisdiction and to reverse the warden's order if made without jurisdiction. Pride of the East G.M. Coy. v. Wimmer, 5 V.L.R. (M.,) 9.

For facts see S.C. ante column 975.

Who Entitled to Appeal—Act No. 32, Secs. 76, 84.]—A person who has no right to appear before the warden as one of the "parties interested" within the meaning of Sec. 76, has no locus standi in the Appellate Court under Sec. 84. Band of Hope Coy. v. Critchley, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 47.

Per Molesworth, J.—"I rather think that persons who do not appear before the warden may appeal." Constable v. Smith, 6 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 58; N.C., 70.

Plaint for Trespass—Assignment of Claim pending Appeal.]—Between the hearing of a complaint before a warden for trespass to a claim and damages, and the hearing of an appeal to a Court of Mines against the decision of the warden dismissing the plaint, the complainants assigned their rights in the claim and the assignees had been registered. Held that the complainants had not by such assignment lost their right to proceed with the appeal. Herbert v. Millan, 6 V.L.R. (M.,) 13; 1 A.L.T. 202; sub nom. Herbert v. M'Millan.

Per Molesworth, Chief Judge.—So far as the plaint sought damages and the appeal sought those damages and relief from the costs adjudged, there was no colour for the objection. There may be some as to the seeking a declaration of right and the removal of the defendants on the ground of maintenance or champerty. If the complainants assigned their interest in the claim and their right of action against defendants, I am inclined to say there would be nothing illegal in it. But if there were, it would not destroy the interest of the assignor, but prevent the acquisition of interest by the assignee. Ibid.

Notice of Appeal for Trial by Assessors—What is Sufficient—No. 291, Sec. 217.]—A notice of appeal from the decision of a warden was headed "For Trial by Assessors," and set out the grounds of appeal; but did not set out any question of fact or issue which the appellants required to be tried by assessors. Held, insufficient notice of trial by assessors, under the provisions of the "Mining Statute 1865" (No. 291,) Sec. 217. Brennan v. Watson, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 55.

Notice of Appeal — Signature.] — The word "undersigned" does not require that the appellants should actually sign the notice; it is sufficient if their names appear at the foot of the notice. Frayne v. Carr, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 12.

The notice need not be signed by the appellants or as on their behalf. Kilyour v. Flinn, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 32, 37.

A notice of appeal commencing "I the undersigned," and signed "M. attorney for D.;" was held sufficient. Dillon v. Matthews, 3 V.L.R. (M.,) 5.

And see Cock v. Sayers, post column 1006.

A notice of appeal contained the names of the appellants in the body of the notice, and concluded, "yours, &c., F.C., attorney for and on behalf of the appellants above-named." Held that the names of the appellants should appear at the bottom of the notice, and that the signature of the attorney "for and on behalf, &c." was not sufficient. Ryan v. Callaghan, 6 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 54; N.C., 23.

Form of Notice of Appeal.]—A notice of appeal from a Warden's Court to a Court of Mines should describe the decision appealed from both by date and place, and the heading of the order containing the name of the place is not sufficient. Frayne v. Carr, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 12.

The date of the decision appealed from should be correctly stated; as to stating the time when the appeal should be heard, if sittings of the District Court are not fixed and publicly announced, a party should not by omitting the date of the hearing of the appeal be deprived of his right to appeal, but the date of the decision appealed from should be correctly stated in the notice of appeal. Kilgour v. Flinn, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 32, 37.

Notice of Appeal—Form of.]—A notice of appeal was as follows:—"Take notice that D.R., T.W., M.R., and J.C., being desirous of appealing from a decision of, &c., intend to appeal to the Court of Mines to be holden at J. on the 9th of July next—i.e. to say, to the next Court of Mines in the mining district of B. at the sitting of such court, which next after the expiration of fifteen days from the making of the said decision shall be held at B.—against such decision." Held that the Court of Mines actually having been held on 10th July, the notice of appeal did not properly name the sittings of the court in which the appeal was to be heard. Ryan v. Callaghan, 6 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 54; N.C., 23.

"Mining Statute 1865," Sec. 212—Fifteen Days—Nearest Sitting of Court of Mines to Place where Decision was Pronounced.]—Sec. 212 of the "Mining Statute 1865" (No. 291,) provides that any person desirous of appealing from a warden's decision may do so to the Court of Mines of the same district, at the sitting of such Court which shall, within fifteen days next, be held nearest to the place where the decision was pronounced. Where a complaint was heard in the Warden's Court at F., in the C. district on 5th February, and the next sitting of the Court of Mines at F. was on the 15th February, within the fifteen days, and the next sitting to that in the C. district was at C., on the 6th of April, and notice of appeal to the Court of Mines, to be holden at C., on that date, was given, and on the 15th February, application was made to the Court of Mines at F. to have the case set down for hearing at C. on the 6th of April, and refused, Held, on appeal, that the next sitting at F. being within fifteen days of the warden's decision, the appeal ought to have been to the next sitting but one at F., and the refusal to hear the appeal at C. was right. Vicary v. Row, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 1.

Heading of Notice of Appeal—Power of Amendment—Act No. 291, Sec. 133.]—A notice of appeal from a warden was headed "In the Court of Mines for the district of Heathcote"—there was no district of Heathcote. Held that the notice of appeal was bad, and under Sec. 133 of the Act the judge had no power to amend. Burch v. Brown, 7 V.L.R., (M.,) 10; 2 A.L.T., 149.

Substituted Service of Notice of Appeal—"Goldfields' Act" (No. 32,) Sec. 84.]—In an appeal summons, under Sec. 84 of Act No. 32, twenty-five persons were named, but only six were served, and no order had been made by the Judge of the Court of Mines under Sec. 84 as to substituted service upon those whom he considered sufficient to represent all before the appeal was heard, the judge being doubtful of his jurisdiction to make the order at the hearing. Held that the Judge had power to make such order at the hearing. In re Rogers, ex parte Shean, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 84.

Service of Notice of Appeal.] — Where on an appeal from the warden the appellants served notice on one of five parties (plaintiffs,) and served a copy upon the warden's clerk, which came to the warden's hands after the three days prescribed in Sec. 212, Held that it was in the discretion of the Judge of the District Court to determine whether the party served sufficiently represented the co-plaintiffs; that in case of difficulty in serving the other plaintiffs if necessary, the warden should have been served within the three days; and Semble that the service of the clerk at the warden's office would have been sufficient; and that serving the appellants through an attorney with notice to produce a document at the hearing of the appeal, did not cure a defect in the service. Whiteman v. M'Gallan, 6 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 28.

Service of Notice of Appeal—Act No. 291, Secs. 171, 212.]—The power of an attorney in a warden's court ceases upon the decision, so that he does not represent his client to receive notice of appeal. Sec. 212 does not authorise service upon the authorised agent of a respondent, but the Court, not having heard counsel on both sides, was unwilling to express an opinion as to the necessity of personal service. Respondents have a right to be heard to object to defective service and to cross-examine or give evidence upon controverted facts as to service. Objections to the hearing of an appeal as to service of notice stand on the same footing as preliminary objections to hearing of a suit as to service of summons, and may be the subject of a special case to the Chief Judge under Sec. 171 of the Act. Murphy v. Neil, 6 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 45; N.C., 19.

Service of Notice of Appeal—Act No. 291, Sec. 212—Act No. 446, Sec. 19.]—Service of notice of an appeal upon an attorney by leaving the same with an inmate of his private house is not good service under the Acts. Lawlor v. Grant, 3 V.L.R. (M.,) 12.

Affidavit of Service.] — Where an affidavit, stating that the respondent could not be found and that notice of appeal had been served on the warden, was intituled "A. plaintiff v. B. defendant." and not "A. appellant v. B. respondent," Held that the service was bad. Mole v. Williams, 3 A.J.R., 21, 22.

Notice of Appeal and Deposit—Enlargement of Time by Consent—"Mining Statute 1865," Sec. 212.]—The time for notice of appeal and deposit under the "Mining Statute 1865," Sec. 212, and the Act No. 446, Sec. 18, may be enlarged by verbal consent of the parties. Conway v. Louchard, 10 V.L.R. (M.,) 6; 6 A.L.T., 120.

Notice of Appeal — May be Waived.] — The enforcement of the notice of appeal is a mere right of the parties and may be waived. Crocker v. Wigg, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 20, 22.

Computation of Time—No. 291, Sec. 212.]—The last day for giving notice of appeal from a Warden's Court under No. 291, Sec. 212, fell on a Sunday, and the notice was given on the Monday following. Held that, in the absence of express provision, Sundays and holidays could not be excluded from the computation of the time; and notice held bad. Regina v. Macoboy, 1 V.R. (L.,) 26; 1 A.J.R., 37.

Production of Minutes of Decison—"Goldfields Act," Sec. 80.]—On an application to assess several claims under the "Drainage of Quartz Reefs Act" (No. 153,) the warden made his decision in each case, and signed a minute of each decision. On a separate sheet he made a further order, imposing conditions on the owners of the machinery for pumping. The owners of one of the claims appealed to the Court of Mines, but gave no notice of their appeal to the other claimholders. On the appeal, the copy of minute produced by the appellants was that which was furnished to them under the Act No. 32 ("Goldfields Act,") viz., a copy of the "decision" entered in each case without the separate "conditions" imposed on the owners of the machinery. On questions stated under No. 32, Sec. 80, Held that the objection as to the non-production of a copy of the minute of the warden's decision would be best met by allowing the appellants in such a case as the present to correct the mistake, arising as it did from the warden's inadvertence; permitting the production of a proper copy of the minute of the decision; and, if necessary, adjourning the Court for that purpose on such terms as the judge might think equitable. Early v. Barker, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 32.

And see Sim v. Eddy, ante column 988.

Production of Warden's Decision—Act No. 291, Sec. 213.]—The production of the warden's decision under Sec. 213 is a condition precedent, and is not like the notice of appeal, the enforcement of which, as a mere right between the parties, may be waived. The judge should not decide in an appellant's favour without the production of the certified copy, but he may exercise a reasonable discretion as to the period of the hearing at which he requires its production. Crocker v. Wigg, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 20, 22.

[N.B.—So much of Sec. 213 which provides for the production of the certified copy of the warden's decision has been repealed by Sec. 21 of Act No. 446.]

Production of Certificate of Decision—Act No. 291, Sec. 213.]—Where the appellants produced a copy of warden's decision and of his order, having his signature at the bottom, and then a certificate "That the above is a true copy of the minute of my decision in the above-named case," which was signed by the warden, Held that it was not a certificate of the "minute of the decision and of the order thereon" within the meaning of Sec. 213, and that the warden's register should not have been received at the hearing for the purpose of complying with the section. Whiteman v. M'Gallan, 6 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 28.

(c) Practice on Appeal.

Reversing or Varying Decision of Warden—"Goldfields' Act," Sec. 84.]—The jurisdiction of the Court of Mines under the "Goldfields' Act," Sec. 14, to "reverse or vary" the decision of a warden, cannot be limited by the form in which an appellant seeks, and the clerk issues an appeal summons. Ex parte Clarke, 1 W.&W. (L.,) 209.

An appellant issued a summons to show cause why the decision against him should not be "reversed" only, and not "reversed or varied;" the respondent in the Court of Mines attended, and first asked leave to have the summons altered by inserting the words "or varied," and the appellant protested against the alteration as beyond the judge's jurisdiction, but did not withdraw, but entered into the merits of the case, and the Judge of the Court of Mines gave judgment increasing the amount awarded by the warden against the appellant. Held that the jurisdiction was given to the Judge by the Act and not by the words of the summons; that the appellant's proper course was to have paid the costs of the appeal and withdrawn, and that the judge had jurisdiction throughout, and that there were no grounds for a prohibition. Ibid.

Reversing and Affirming Warden's Decision.]—If in a complaint under Act No. 32, sec. 76, the warden finds a joint trespass against all of certain persons against whom complaint is brought, and awards damages as against all, and the Court of Mines finds that some only participated in the trespass, the Court should not reverse wholly, but should reverse in part or affirm in part. Critchley v. Graham, 2 W.&W. (L.,) 71.

Dealing with Warden's Decision.]—B. complained against K., before a warden, that K. had marked out 100 yards of land, being only entitled to eighty, and B. applied for surplus. The warden ordered that K. had forfeited the twenty yards of land and ordered possession of same to be given to B. K. appealed to the Court of Mines. The judge held that he could not strike out adjudication of forfeiture, and directed assessors to find for K., and reserved a question for the judges of the Supreme Court as to whether his direction was right. Held, that the matter for the Court of Mines to determine was whether the subject matter of the complaint and that of warden's adjudication were the same; not whether the grounds on which the warden had arrived at his decision were formally or technically right; that he ought to have heard the evidence, and determined whether the adjudication should have been varied or otherwise dealt with. Kirk v. Barr, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.) 44.

Copy of Complaint—No. 446, Sec. 20.]—Under the Act No. 446, Sec. 20, the copy of the complaint delivered to the Court of Mines on an appeal from a warden need not be certified, but a copy must be delivered, and it is not sufficient to present to the clerk of the Court of Mines an affidavit of service of a summons containing the complaint, unless the appellants at the same time aver that they present it as a true copy of the complaint, and the Court of Mines cannot, if this be not done, receive preliminary evidence that the copy in the affidavit is a true copy of the complaint. Hok John v. Yung Hing, 4 A.J.R., 173.

Right to Begin.]—The appellant has the right to begin on an appeal by way of special case from a warden to the District Court of Mines. United Claims Tribute Coy. v. Taylor, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 19; 3 A.L.T., 147.

The complainant in the court below has the right to begin in the District Court, the appeal being practically a rehearing. Mole v. Williams, 3 A.J.R., 21, 22.

Right to Begin.]—Semble. The appellant, whether plaintiff or defendant, has the right to begin. Stevens v. Webster, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 23.

Costs in Appeal—Warrant Issued in Excess—Act No. 291, Sec. 220.]—The Judge of the District Court ordered the A. company to pay £47 costs to the B. company in an appeal before him from the warden. The B. company drew out of court the £10 deposited as security for the appeal, and then issued execution for the whole £47. On summons to set aside the execution as excessive the judge made an order to that effect. Held that that was the correct remedy, and appeal against the order dismissed. Sea Q.M. Coy. v. Sea Queen Coy., 5 A.J.R., 112.

Parties—Act No. 291, Sec. 212.]—In an appeal from the decision of a warden, it is sufficient if the parties to the proceedings in the Warden's Court appealed from are before the Court of Mines. Early v. Barker, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 32.

Parties to Appeal—Act No 291, Sec. 212.]—A Judge of a Court of Mines has jurisdiction to order that an appellant's name be struck out from all proceedings in his Court, and that all such proceedings be set aside as against him, or for some part of such order, when, from the circumstances, it appears that the appellant did not authorise litigation in his name, and was not aware that he was a litigant till execution under the decree was levied upon his goods. M'Leod v. Whitfield, 2 V.R. (M.,) 17; 2 A.J.R., 104.

Stating Special Case—Time for—Warden's Order when Made—Act No. 446, Sec. 23.]—A warden at the close of a case before him announced his intention of making an order in favour of the complainants, and was then asked by the defendants to state a special case on certain questions of law, but the warden entered up his order and refused to state the case, on the ground that, having made his order, it was too late to state a case. On appeal, Held that for the purposes of the "Mining Statute 1865," and Sec. 23 of the "Amendment Act" (No. 446,) the warden's order is made when he announces his intention to make it; and that the application to state the case was made too late. Regina v. Thomson, ex parte Costin, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 512.

Order made within Ten Days after Refusal to State a Case.]—Semble, that if a warden make an order within ten days after an application to state a special case for the opinion of the Chief Judge has been made and refused, such application having been made and refused before the warden made any order, the order made within the ten days will be had. Ibid.

Act No. 291, Sec. 194—What may be the Subject of a Special Case.]—Semble, there may be special cases on appeal under Sec. 194 as to the admissibility of evidence. Palmer v. Chisholm, 5 A.J.R., 169.

Questions of the preponderance of evidence are not fit subjects for a special case; i.e., inferences as to the fact of abandonment, these should be determined by the warden himself. Small v. Dyer, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 1.

For facts see S.C., ante column 935.

Right to Begin.]—Upon a special case stated by the warden under Sec. 194 of the "Mining Statute 1865" (No. 291,) the complainant in the court below has the right to begin. Fahey v. Koh-i-noor Coy., 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 4.

No Appearance for Either Party.]—Upon a special case stated by the warden being called there was no appearance for either party. The Chief Judge directed a written opinion to be forwarded to the warden by whom it was stated. Anderson v. Coyle, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 10.

No Appearance of Complainant.]—A warden was about to decide against complainants, but at their request stated a special case to the Chief Judge. At the hearing of the special case the complainants did not appear. The Chief Judge heard the case nevertheless and answered the questions on the undisputed facts. Reardon v. Norton, 5 V.L.R. (M.,) 12.

Setting Down Special Case — No Appearance of Complainant—Rehearing.]—A special case stated by a warden for the opinion of the Chief Judge, arrived on the morning of the first day of the sittings of the Chief Judge. Held that it was rightly set down for hearing at those sittings; and that both parties ought to be prepared to proceed with the case, and the case being argued in the absence of the complainant, who had not instructed counsel, a motion for a rehearing was refused with costs. Fattorini v. Band and Albion Consols, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 41; 4 A.L.T., 94.

Costs.]—No costs will be given on special case stated under Sec. 194 of the "Mining Statute 1865" for the opinion of the Chief Judge. Ibid.

[But see Sec. 25 of No. 446 ("Mining Statute 1865 Amendment Act 1872,") allowing the Chief Judge to exercise his discretion as to costs. Ed.]

Special Case Remitted to Warden — Power of Warden to take Additional Evidence—Act No. 291, Sec. 194.]—Where a question in a special case has been answered, and the case has been remitted to the warden for his opinion on the facts, there is nothing to prevent the warden taking additional evidence on the question as left to him. Clerk v. Wrigley, 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 74, 84.

Effect of Answer of Chief Judge to One Question—Other Points Open.]—Where the Chief Judge has given an answer to a question, viz., that miners' rights should have been produced, the appellant may then apply to the warden for a rehearing to produce further evidence. Per Molesworth, J.—"Virtually my answer was decisive only as far as it went; all other points were left open. The Privy Council has decided that upon questions submitted by special case, the case remains open for adjudication by the original Court notwithstanding my answers thereto—to be inferred from Smith v. Harrison, 3 A.J.R., 44." Summers v. Cooper, 5 V.L.R. (M.,) 42, 44, 45; 1 A.L.T., 115.

Special Case—Answer by Chief Judge—Fresh Evidence—Discretion of Warden—Appeal.]—It is a matter of judicial discretion for the warden, whether, after an answer is given by the Chief Judge to a case stated by him, he should take fresh evidence or allow an amendment, and, Semble, that there is no appeal from the exercise of such discretion. United Claims Tribute Coy. v. Taylor, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 19.

Evidence—Affidavits Filed after Special Case Stated.]—The Chief Judge will not, on the hearing of a special case from a Court of Mines, stated on an appeal from the warden, receive affidavits filed after the special case has been stated, but will answer the special case as it stands. Conway v. Louchard, 10 V.L.R. (M.,) 6; 6 A.L.T., 120.

Special Case—What is a Proper Point for.]—The question whether a Judge of a Court of Mines has power, after the dismissal of an appeal, to grant an application by one of the appellants to have his name struck out of the case, and all the proceedings set aside as against him, is not a proper point for the transmission of a special case to the Chief Judge under the "Mining Statute 1865," Sec. 171, since it does not arise on the hearing of any suit or appeal. McLeod v. Whitfield, 2 V.R. (M.,) 17; 2 A.J.R., 104.

Objections to the hearing of an appeal as to service of notice and preliminary objections to the hearing of a suit as to service of summons may be the subject of a special case under Sec. 171. Murphy v. Neil, ante column 997.

What Special Case should State.]—The proper office of special cases, under Sec. 171, is to state facts, and ask the opinion of the Chief Judge as to the law only; not to substitute the Chief Judge for a judge or warden to decide facts upon a balance of evidence. Keast v. D'Angri, 4 A.J.R., 61.

Special Case Stated by Judge of Court of Mines under Sec. 171 of Act No. 291.]—Where a special case, under Sec. 171, embraced many questions of fact, and the evidence set out was complicated and conflicting, the Chief Judge refused to answer it, not thinking that questions of fact were warranted by the section. Australasian G.M. Coy. v. Wilson, 4 A.J.R., 18.

Where defendants consented to a case being stated by the Chief Judge upon appeal from the warden, and assisted in the drawing up of the case, and expressed no intention of calling evidence, they were not allowed afterwards to call evidence. Regina v. Cope, in re Moore, 4 A.J.R., 113.

Nonsuit—Points not Distinctly Stated—Act No. 291, Sec. 171—No Reason Given by Judge.]—In a case for the opinion of the Court stated by Judge of Court of Mines, the case did not state the nonsuit points distinctly, and where the case set out the whole of the evidence and asked the question, "Whether the respondents had, by the evidence adduced and set out in the case, established a case which would entitle them as against the appellants to" certain relief,—Held that the nonsuit points should have been set out succinctly, and case remitted to be re-stated. Thomas v. Kinnear, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 221.

In a case stated by a Judge of the Court of Mines, upon appeal from the warden, the case set out the evidence given verbatim. Per Molesworth, J.—"This way of asking the propriety of a nonsuit, not showing in some degree what is the supposed defect in the plaintiff's case according to the judge's view, is inconvenient." Longbottom v. White, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 35.

Where a Judge of the Court of Mines stated a special case to the "Judges of the Supreme Court" and not to the "Supreme Court," Held that as it purported to be a "special case" and to be stated under sec. 70 of the "Goldfields' Act" it was well stated. Kirk v. Barr, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 44.

Costs—Power of Supreme Court to Award on Special Cass from Court of Mines.]—Semble, that on a question reserved under the "Goldfields Act," No. 32, Sec. 70, by the Judge of the Court of Mines, on an appeal from the warden in the form of a special case for the opinion of the Supreme Court, the latter Court should not give costs. Jenkinson v. Cumming, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 337.

Act No. 446, Sec. 25—Refusal of Judge of District Court to Make any Order except Recording the Opinion of the Chief Judge as his Decree.]—A special case, on an appeal from the warden, was stated to the Chief Judge, on which he delivered his opinion. The District Court Judge then read the opinion and declared it to be his decree, and refused to make any further order. On rule nisi for a mandamus, Held that the applicants must draw up an order from the decree (i.e., the opinion of the Chief Judge,) and if the Judge refused to sign the order, they might apply for a mandamus. Rule refused. Per Fellows, J., that the hearing of a case must be completed before any question is stated for the Chief Judge. Ex parte Sea Queen Q.M. Coy., 5 A.J.R., 77.

Question not Answered may be Put Again.]—Where, in a special case under the Act No. 446, from a District Court of Mines, upon appeal from a warden, several questions are put to the Chief Judge, one of which questions is not at the time material, and is not answered, such question may be asked again in another special case after a further hearing in the Court below; and where, under such circumstances, the Judge of a District Court of Mines refused to state a case, the Chief Judge made absolute an order to compel him to do so. Talent v. Dibdin, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 31.

Compelling Judge to State Special Case—Act No. 291, Sec. 171.]—A rule compelling a Judge of a Court of Mines to state a special case on an appeal from a warden to his court, was granted where the warden, on a plaint for trespass to a claim, had decided for the plaintiff company and not for an individual co-plaintiff, who had no recent miner's right. Sea Queen Coy. v. Sea Quartz Coy., 4 A.J.R., 130.

Compelling Judge to State a Case—Point of Law not Raised at the Trial—Act No. 446, Sec. 24.]—A rule was granted compelling a Judge of a Court of Mines to state a special case, on an appeal from a warden, as to the questions whether the burden of proof as to the defendants' possession of a miner's right was on the complainant or the defendants, and whether the termination of the defendants' miner's rights terminated their interest in their claim; but not as to a question of law which did not arise at the hearing, the Chief Judge observing that if a judge decided a case on points of law not raised during the trial proceedings might be taken to set his judgment aside. Lennox v. Golden Fleece and Heales United Q.M. Coy., 4 A.J.R., 154.

No appeal lies from the Court of Mines to the Supreme Court in a matter before the Court of Mines on an appeal from the warden, but the Judge of the Court of Mines should state a special case for the opinion of the Supreme Court, as provided for in Sec. 70 of the Act No. 32. Schultz v. Dryburgh, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 127.

[Compare Secs. 170 and 171 of Act No. 291.]

Dismissal of Summons for Commitment—No. 291, Secs. 172, 155.]—An appeal will lie under Sec. 172 to the Chief Judge from an order of a Court of Mines dismissing a summons for commitment under Sec. 155 of the "Mining Statute 1865." Vallancourt v. O'Rorke, 2 V.R. (M.,) 14; 2 A.J.R., 84.

When Appeal "Saved" by "Mining Statute 1865," Ssc. 2.]—In a suit in a Court of Mines in 1861 a decree was made for the transfer to the plaintiff of defendant's share in a claim as security for a debt, with power of sale, but no sale was ever held, and nothing was done in the matter. Plaintiff, in 1871, took out a summons in the Court of Mines for execution against the defendant for the amount due under the decree, with interest from the date of the decree. The summons was dismissed, and plaintiff appealed. Held that this appeal in a case under the "Goldfields Act" was a suit commenced before the passing of the "Mining Statute 1865," and was kept alive by Sec. 2 of that Act so as to permit of the appeal; and that execution should now issue on the decree, but with interest for six years only. Lee v. Conway, 2 V.R. (L.,) 77; 2 A.J.R., 58.

Order Granting New Trial—"Mining Statute (No. 291,) Sec. 172.]—The subsequent words of Sec. 172 make a distinction between orders on application for a new trial and other orders. In cases of new trial being granted the section provides for appeal only after the decision on the rehearing. Appeals only are allowed where the merits are concluded, and an order for a new trial is not such an order as concludes merits. Watson v. Morwood, 3 A.J.R., 21.

From Order Winding-up a Company.]—There is no appeal from the Court of Mines to the Chief Judge from an order made by the Court of Mines winding up a company under Act No. 228. Perseverance Q.M. and A.G.M. Coy. v. Bank of N.S.W., 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 21.

Act No. 297, Sec. 172—Winding-up Order under Act No. 228, Sec. 28, Act No. 324.]—Per Privy Council—The words of Sec. 172 of the Act No. 291 providing for appeals to the Chief Judge from Courts of Mines are wide enough to embrace an appeal by the shareholders of a mining company against an order made by a Judge of a Court of Mines for winding up a company upon such a proceeding as that prescribed by the 28th and following sections of Act No. 228, and the Amending Act No. 324. Colonial Bank v. Willan, 5 A.J.R., 53; L.R., 5 P.C., 417.

What Must Appear in Case—Objection How Taken.]—Before a Judge of the Court of Mines, under the Act No. 32, Sec. 71, can state a case for appeal, it must, under that section, appear on the case that the parties could not agree. The non-appearance of this requisite is fatal to the jurisdiction of the judge to state, and of the Supreme Court to hear such a case. But if notice of appeal and security for costs have not been given, or other requisites have not been complied with, the non-appearance of such requisites does not justify the Court in acting against the maxim:—"Omnia præsumuntur rite esse acta donec probetur in contrarium." At most their absence affords grounds for an application to the Court to strike the case out of the list if, on affidavits, it can be shown that the requisites are absent in fact. Inskip v. Inskip, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 24.

Case Stated Imperfectly—Omission of Evidence given Below—Act No. 291, Sec. 172.]—A case stated by the Judge of a Court of Mines omitted evidence, which one of the parties alleged was given in the Court of Mines. Held that the Chief Judge could not control the Judge of the Court of Mines, and that if he refused to introduce evidence into the case, the Chief Judge had no power to deal with it; and the Chief Judge refused to allow the case to be supplemented by affidavit that such evidence was given, or to remit the case to be re-stated. Mitten v. Spargo, 1 V.R. (M.,) 22; 1 A.J.R., 69.

Stating Case on Appeal under Sec. 172—Evidsnce not Set Out Satisfactorily—Rehearing.]—The Chief Judge will direct a rehearing where facts material to the decree do not appear to have been made the subject of evidence, or where the evidence being set out he cannot arrive at a conclusion. Shaw v. Costerfield G.M. Coy., 1 V.R. (M.,) 7; 1 A.J.R., 17.

Practice in Stating Case—Time for Transmission.]—Where a special case stated by a Judge of the Court of Mines sets out the facts sufficiently clearly so as to leave no doubt as to what the facts really are, so that the Court can infer facts to warrant conclusions of law; but does not set out the facts verbatim, the Court will not direct a rehearing. Semble—Where an appeal case is not transmitted within the time required by the 172nd Section of the "Mining Statute 1865," and the case stated that the time was extended, upon an objection that the time had not been properly extended, the Court is to infer in favour of the appeal, that the order was properly made when the objection is not sufficiently proved by affidavit. Lewis v. Pearson, 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 23.

Result of Removal of Judge of District Court—Act No. 291, Sec. 172.]—The "Judge of the Court" in Sec. 172 means the Judge for the time being. Where a Judge of a District Court made an order against which an appeal was pending, and was removed to another district during the pendency of the appeal, Held that his successor was the proper person to state the case under Sec. 172. Brennan v. Watson, 6 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 1.

Appeal not Set Down in Time.]—Where an appeal case was not forwarded within the proper time, and the only order made for enlargement appearing on the case was one made by the judge after he was removed from the district, no order was made on the appeal. Ibid.

Notice of Appeal—Signature by Attorney's Clerk—Act No. 291, Sec. 172.]—A notice was signed "H.C. by his attorney, J.R.H." H. did not sign, but his clerk, R., did. Held that the notice was sufficiently signed. Cock v. Sayers, 3 A.J.R., 63.

Waiver of Objections to Notice of Appeal.]—The enforcement of the notice of appeal is a mere right of the parties, and may be waived. Crocker v. Wigg, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 20, 22.

And for form of notice of appeal under Sec. 212 see ante column 995.

Transmission of Special Case—No. 291, Sec. 172.] — Under Sec. 172 of the "Mining Statute 1865" (No. 291), the Judge of a District Court of Mines has a discretion as to the extension of the time within which a special case in an appeal to the Chief Judge is to be transmitted, and no appeal will lie from its exercise. He has, moreover, the power of rescinding or varying the order extending the time, and no appeal will lie from the exercise of his discretion in this case either. Collins v. Hayes, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 24.

Enlarging of Time for Transmission of Special Case—Attorney cannot Consent to, when Cause is out of Court.]—A client is not bound by his attorney's consent to the enlargement of the time for transmission of a special case on appeal to the Master-in-Equity, when the cause is out of court by virtue of the provisions of Sec. 172 of the "Mining Statute 1865." Odgers v. Waldron, 1 V.R. (M.,) 26; 1 A.J.R., 71.

Enlargement of Time for Transmission of Case—No. 291, Sec. 172.]—The power conferred by Sec. 172 of the "Mining Statute 1865" (No. 291,) upon the Judge of a District Court of Mines to direct a further time for the transmission of a special case on appeal to the Master-in-Equity, must be exercised before the original or extended time has expired. Ibid.

Extending Time for Appeal.]—After the time limited for appeal by Sec. 172 of the "Mining Statute 1865" from a Court of Mines to the Chief Judge has expired, a Judge of a Court of Mines has no power to extend it. Central Q.M. Coy. v. Morgan, 4 A.J.R., 174.

Time for Appeal—From what Time it Runs.]—Per Holroyd, J.—The time within which an appeal from the decree of a Court of Mines may be made might be held to run from the day on which the decree was settled, though I am myself inclined to think, that it should run from the date of the pronouncing of the decree. Regina v. Quinlan, ex parte Sampson, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 102; 6 A.L.T., 8.

Appeal from Warden Carried through Court of Mines to Court of Chief Judge—Right to Begin.]—Where an appeal from a Warden's Court which has passed through the Court of Mines, is pending before the Court of the Chief Judge, it must be dealt with iu the same manner as if it had come before the Chief Judge without the intervention of the intermediate court; and as the decision of the inferior court is supposed to be right, the duty of showing it to be wrong lies on the appellants, who must therefore have the right to begin. Stevens v. Webster, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 23.

Parties—Representatives.]—Under Sec. 131 of the "Mining Statute 1865," the Chief Judge may, on appeal to him from a Court of Mines, decide whether some of the defendants below, who were served with notice of the appeal, sufficiently represent all the defendants; and it is not necessary that defendants who did not appear in the court below should be served. The Chief Judge has, moreover, the same discretion as the District Judge as to proper representations, and on appeal may review the discretion of the District Judge in the matter. Thompson v. Begg, 2 V.R. (M.,) 1; 2 A.J.R., 3.

Evidence—Point not Taken Below.]—On an appeal to the Chief Judge it was contended that there were houses built on a machinery area which had been undermined. The point was not taken in the court below. Held that the Court could not regard the plan annexed to the case for the purpose of deciding whether houses were in fact so built. Vivian v. Dennis, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 29.

Objection not Taken in Court Below.]—At the hearing of a plaint by a shareholder, seeking to upset the forfeiture of his shares for non-payment of a call, no objection was taken by him in the Court of Mines to the regularity of the meeting at which the call was made, and no attempt was made to amend the plaint and put it in issue. On seeking to raise the objection on appeal, Held that the objection could not then be raised, and plaint dismissed without prejudice to the question of the regularity of the meeting. McLennan v. Myrtle Creek Coy., 1 V.R. (M.,) 39; 1 A.J.R., 157.

Appeal from Court of Mines to Chief Judge—Evidence.]—Per Molesworth, J.—"The judge's notes of evidence are only to be taken with reference to the arguments urged before me and made the ground of appeal. The parties are not to object that they did not show evidence of something as to which objection was not taken." Barker's G.M. Coy. v. Keating, 1 A.J.R., 55.

Appeal from Court of Mines—Increase of Damages.]—An appeal from the Court of Mines opens the whole case, and the Appellate Court may increase the amount of damages. United Working Miners' Coy. v. Prince of Wales Coy., N.C., 71.

Rehearing.]—A rehearing should be decided according to the law at the time of the rehearing. Semble, that a decree which was right according to the law at the time it was made should not be reversed because the law is altered by a retrospective Act coming into operation between the two hearings. Shaw v. Costerfield G.M. Coy., 1 V.R. (M.,) 7; 1 A.J.R., 17.

Accounts—Act No. 291, Secs. 173, 174.]—Although the order of the Chief Judge is final, yet it is contemplated in Sec. 174 that the case may be sent back to the District Court for its officers to work out ministerially the decree of the Appellate Court. Accounts sent to be taken by the District Court. Albion Coy. v. St. George United Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 37, 60.

Act No. 291, Secs. 173, 174, 175—Taking Accounts—When it may not be Done.]—The taking of accounts is not a purely ministerial proceeding—it is quasi judicial, therefore, since the Judge of the Court of Mines must conclude the hearing before making a decree, leaving nothing more to be done than what is purely ministerial, he cannot take accounts in a suit after having made his decree. Where, therefore, the Judge of a Court of Mines made a decree directing accounts and payment of what should be found due, and proceeded, after his decree was confirmed by the Chief Judge, to take the accounts, a certiorari was granted. Regina v. Rogers, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,)206.

Act No. 291, Sec. 174—Duties of District Court Judge as to Decres of Chief Judge.]—In a proceeding by plaint the judge dismissed the plaint, but the Chief Judge, on appeal, made an order in favour of the plaintiff. The District Judge refused an application for the enforcement of the decree on certain grounds which he had no right to take cognisance of. Held that under Sec. 174 of the Act the decree of the Chief Judge should be entered as a decree of the District Court and be acted on accordingly, and that the judge could exercise no discretion as to its propriety, his duties being only ministerial; but the proper mode of redress is not an appeal to the Chief Judge against the dismissal of the summons to enforce, though the Court will entertain an appeal on the order for costs made upon the dismissal. Bain v. M'Coll, 5 A.J.R., 17.

Costs of Appeal — Act No. 291, Sec. 173.]—Where a suit might have been dismissed in the Court of Mines as wrongly framed, but there had been a miscarriage on two other points appearing in the case but not argued, the appeal was dismissed without costs. Banks v. Granville, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 158.

Notice of Particulars—Copy of Rules—18 Vict. (No. 42,) Secs. 2 (vi.) and 3.]—The notice of particulars and the copy of rules, which by Secs. 2 (vi.) and 3 of the "Mining Companies' Act," 18 Vict., No. 42, must be given to the Clerk of Petty Sessions by persons forming a company under that Act, need not be separate documents if all the particulars which should appear in the notice of particulars are comprised substantially in the wording of the rules themselves. In re Harrison, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 47.

"Declaration — "Copy of Rules"—18 Vict. No. 42 Sec. 2 (vi.)]—A mining association under the Act No. 42 cannot be "a company within the provisions of the Act" unless the "declaration" and the "copy of rules" mentioned in Sec. 2, Sub-sec. 6 of the Act have been registered in accordance with the provisions of that section as two separate documents. Carter v. Watson, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 222.

[See provisions of Sec. 6 of Act No. 409.]

Act No. 42, Secs. 2, 6—Act No. 56, Sec. 8.]—The terms of Sec. 2 of 18 Vic., No. 42, are mandatory, and Sec. 6 of the Act having been repealed, the mode of correcting errors provided by that section no longer exists, and the effect of Sec. 8 of 21 Vict., No. 56, is limited in its application to companies formed under that Act, and cannot be extended to companies formed under No. 42. Oriental Bank v. Casey, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 229.

Irregular—Non-compliance with Acts—Members not Protected.]—C., a member of a mining association, pleaded to an action by W. for a debt incurred "for and on behalf of the association," as to part of the debt, that it was incurred by the association as a company duly formed under the "Mining Companies Act," 18 Vict., No. 42; and as to the rest of the debt that C., by merely holding shares in the company, had authorised only the lawful acts of the company, and that the acts out of which the later debt arose, were acts "done by the company without C.'s privity, and after it had ceased to be a company under the provisions of the Act" 18 Vict., No. 42, by the operation of Secs. 7 of that Act. It was shown that the association had not complied with some of the provisions of the first sections of the Act 18 Vict., No. 42 or Sec. 65 of the Act No. 56, viz., a copy of the "Rules of the Association" had been registered, but no "deed notice, or other document whatsoever;" that the shareholders having held themselves out to the public as partners, and having incurred a partnership debt, and not having formed a company in accordance with the provisions of the enactment, could not avail themselves of its exemption, and that creditors were not to be deprived of their right of enforcing payment of the partnership debt from any of the partners, and that C. was liable for the whole debt. Carter v. Watson, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 222.

Memorial—Act No. 109.]—If the memorial required by the Act No. 109 be in the form required by that Act, a mining company may be "registered" under that Act, although the memorial does not truthfully set forth the facts required in it by the Act. In re Mackenzie, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 135.

Memorial–No. 228, Sec. 9.]-Where the memorial of a mining company has not been filed with the clerk of the "nearest" Court of Mines under No. 228, Sec. 9, Held that the omission was fatal to a summons in which the official agent sued a shareholder for contribution. Wooller v. Carver, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 1.

[Under Sec. 6 of Act No. 409 the memo. must be lodged with the Registrar-General.]

Act No. 228 — Registration.] Under the "Mining Companies' Limited Liability Act 1864" (No. 228,) the incorporation of a mining company is to be effected by registration with the clerk of the Court of Mines for the district in or nearest to that in which it carries on its operations; but not necessarily with the clerk at the place within the district at which such court sits nearest to the company's operations. The Attorney-General v. The Prince of Wales G.M. Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 208, 219.

Certificate, Evidence of What—How Binding.]—The certificate of incorporation of a company under the Act No. 228 is conclusive evidence of the prior assent of the shareholders to registration, as well as of all other preliminaries to registration; and the certificate of registration may be given stating the memorial of registration to have been lodged at a prior date, and such certificate will be evidence of prior incorporation at that date. Ibid, pp. 221, 222.

Registration—Certificate.]—A mining company or any other person may obtain a certificate of its registration as often as it or he pleases on payment of the proper fee. Regina v. Green, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 202.

Evidence of Registration—Certificate Signed by Deputy-Registrar Sufficient—Act No. 409, Sec. 10.]—Regina v. Walters, ante column 139.

Certificate of Registration—Act No. 409, Secs. 6, 7, 8, 10, 116, 118—No Liability Company—Non-payment of 5 per cent. of Capital at Time of Registration.]—A plaintiff no-liability company was registered regularly and upon a proper statutory solemn declaration of its legal manager that 5 per cent. of its subscribed capital had been paid up at the time of registration, which statement proved to be false. Held that although Sec. 10 makes the certificate conclusive evidence of registration, and Secs. 6, 7, and 8 make a registration conclusive evidence of incorporation, yet Sec. 118 provides that the 5 per cent. shall be paid up and a declaration made to that effect, and not that the declaration shall in any way supply the want of fact alleged in it; and that a no-liability company under Act No. 409, having an assignment of a lease under Act No. 291, suing for trespass or injury upon the leased land may be defeated by a defendant showing that one-fifth of its capital was not paid up at the time of its registration. Park Coy. v. South Hustler's Reserve Coy., 9 V.L.R. (M.,) 4; 4 A.L.T., 135.

Company for Mining on Private Land—May be Incorporated under Act No. 228.]—A company formed for the purpose of mining for gold upon private land may properly be incorporated under Act No. 228. Bonshaw Freehold G.M. Coy. v. Prince of Wales Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 140, 152.

A company mining on private land may be incorporated under No. 228, since the general words of Sec. 2 of that Act are not to be limited by those in Sec. 25. Davies v. Cooper and Adair v. Cooper, 2 V.R. (L.,) 95; 2 A.J.R., 62.

Title of Company—"Mining Companies Act 1871," Secs. 9, 118—Limited.]—Secs. 9 and 118 of the "Mining Companies Act 1871" do not render it necessary for a company incorporated under that Act to have the word "Limited" added to its name. Clarence United Coy. v. Goldsmith, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 14; 3 A.L.T., 147.

Amalgamation of Companies.]—See cases ante columns 139, 140.

Registered Company—Whether it Represents former Partnership.]—A party was registered as owners of a claim under the title of the "W. Coy." Eight of the party entered into an agreement with other parties to form a new company to work the claim upon certain terms. Shares in the new company were given to some of the original party; some were reserved presumably for others of such party; and some of the party were completely excluded from the new company, which was duly registered under No. 228 as a new company. On a suit by the company for encroachment on the claim, Held that the company did not represent the partnership or the excluded members of the partnership, and had no title to maintain the suit. Warrior Coy. v. Cotter, 3 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 81.

Liability for Debts Incurred before Incorporation—Acts Nos. 109 and 228.]—A company formed under the Act No. 109 ("Mining Partnerships Act") as the M. Coy. (Limited), incurred a debt to I., and then became incorporated under the Act No. 228 ("Mining Companies Limited Liability Act 1864") as the M. Coy. (Registered), and took over the assets of the company. I. sued the corporation for the debt of the company, and obtained a verdict subject to a motion for a nonsuit. Held that the Act No. 228 did not alter the remedy or redress possessed by a creditor from that which he possessed before the Act; and that whatever the remedy was which a creditor possessed under the Act No. 109, that remedy existed under the Act No. 228; and that, it being difficult to say what that remedy was, the best course was to nonsuit the plaintiff and let him begin de novo as against the company existing before incorporation, in the manner he might be best advised. Irving v. Minerva G.M. Coy., 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 78.

Appointment of Directors—Rule Providing for an Extraordinary Meeting to Set Aside Resolution of Annual General Meeting.]—A rule providing for the rescinding, at an extraordinary meeting, of resolutions passed at the general annual meeting does not apply to rescinding the appointment of directors elected at such annual meeting. Schaw v. Wekey, 1 V.R. (L.,) 205; 1 A.J.R., 161; Aberfeldie G.M. Coy. v. Walters, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 116. See ante column 142.

Powers of—How far Consent Decree Sanctioned by Directors Binding on Company.]—The plaintiff and defendant companies (A. and G.) were the holders of adjoining frontage claims on the W. lead. The defendant company (G.) measured from the datum peg. The plaintiffs were entitled as assignees of adjacent block claims, and the defendants to similar block and frontage claims intersecting the frontage claims of both on the W. lead. A collision having occurred, and a compromise having been discussed, it was agreed to have the boundaries settled by an amicable suit, and consent decree in the Court of Mines, and by a decree, conformable with one initialled at the meeting of the companies, two lines, A, B, B, C, meeting at B in an obtuse angle, were fixed as the boundary. The directors of the G. company reported upon these arrangements, which were well-known to the shareholders of both companies, and the report was adopted. The A. company brought a plaint alleging encroachment by the G. company, and seeking relief. The deed of association of the G. company required the consent of a general meeting to any contract exceeding £1000, and the matter in dispute was valued at £1050. Held (1) that the provisions in the deed did not refer to "a bargain" but to a "contract" in a limited sense, and that the directors' powers to dispose of the property were not controlled thereby except as to purchase and hire of machinery; (2) that the consent decree was binding on the G. company as sanctioned by the directors, the manager, and the solicitor of that company, and relief granted as prayed. Albion Coy. v. St. George United Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 37, 51, et seq.

Power to Bind Company—Incurring Debt and Borrowing Money.]—See In re Tyson's Reef Coy. and Colonial Bank v. Loch Fyne Coy., ante column 147.

Overdraft Sanctioned by Quorum — Cheque Signed by One Director, but Amount Passed by Board of Directors.]—Bank of New South Wales v. Moyston Junction Coy., ante column 147.

Powers of—Borrowing Money.]—Duly appointed directors of a mining company can act as agents for the company for the purpose of borrowing money. Bank of New South Wales v. Undaunted G.M. Coy., 1 V.R. (L.,) 146; 1 A.J.R., 131.

Guarantee Given by Directors—Power to Bind Company.]—The directors of a mining company gave a guarantee as follows:—"We, the undersigned directors of the New Ringwood Antimony Mining Company, Limited, in consideration of the Bank of Victoria having, at our request, transferred to an account opened by us in the name of the New Ringwood Antimony Mining Company, Limited, the sum of £804 6s., standing in the name of M. as liquidator of the above company, do hereby guarantee the Bank of Victoria from all loss or damage the bank may sustain in respect of any action M. may take against the bank for having parted with the fund standing in his name as liquidator of the company to us the directors of the said company." By the regulations of the company the directors were empowered to give a guarantee for an overdraft. Held that the guarantee was beyond the power of the directors under the regulations, and under the "Mining Companies Act" (No. 409,) and that the money having been already transferred when the guarantee was made, there was no consideration for it. White v. Bank of Victoria, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 8; 3 A.L.T., 90.

Quorum of Directors not Fixed—Contracts not Vitiated thereby.]—By rule 22 of a company's deed of association the directors were bound to appoint a quorum. Before a quorum was so appointed certain of the directors apparently acting as a quorum entered into a contract with the plaintiff. After the contract was entered into the quorum was fixed. Held that the contract was binding; that the directors having full authority to appoint a quorum, and having acted as if they had done so, the plaintiff was entitled to assume that they had done that which they ought to have done and to act accordingly. Anderson v. Duke and Timor G.M. Coy., 1 A.J.R., 161; 1 V.R., (L.,) 203.

Property of Company—Demand for, by Attorney whose Authority was not Signed by a Quorum of Directors or by Manager.] — In an action of detinue for the recovery of books and other property belonging to a mining company, it appeared that the authority to the company's attorney to make the demand was not signed by a quorum of directors or by the manager qud manager. Held that the evidence of authority to make the demand was insufficient. Aladdin and Try Again Coy. v. Schaw, 2 V.R. (L.,) 18; 2 A.J.R., 20.

Power of Directors to Let on Tribute—"Mining Companies' Limited Liability Act 1864"—"Mining Companies' Act 1871," Sec. 124—"Mining Statute Amendment Act 1872" Sec. 7.]—All companies registered under the "Mining Companies Limited Liability Act 1864" (No. 228,) and not registered as "no liability" companies under the Act No. 409 ("Mining Companies Act" 1871,") are by virtue of Sec. 124 of that Act brought under Part I. of the Act; and therefore Sec. 7 of No. 446 ("Mining Statute Amending Act 1872,") prohibiting the making of tribute agreements except with the consent of the shareholders, applies to such companies. Regina v. M'Dougall, 3 V.R. (L.,) 66; and Tommy Dodd Coy. v. Patrick, 5 A.J.R., 14, overruled. Chun Goon v. Reform G.M. Coy., 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 128, 151; 3 A.L.T., 137.

"Mining Companies' Act 1871" (No. 409,) Sec. 131.]—Sec. 131 of Act No. 409, which prohibits letting on tribute without the sanction of the shareholders, only applies to a lease of a mine on tribute. Ibid at p. 150.

Sale of Property by Director—Acquiescence of Plaintiff.] — A mining company incorporated under Act No. 228, being in embarrassed circumstances, sold great quantities of ore to its legal manager. The sale was made by the directors without the knowledge of the shareholders. The Act No. 228 and the deed of association of the company required sales to be by the directors, not by the shareholders. Subsequently one of the shareholders, who, at the time of the sale, had been a director, brought a suit to avoid the sale or make the defendant liable for the difference between the price given and what plaintiff asserted to be the true price, on the ground that the sales were unjust to the shareholders; that defendant, as manager, knew the true value of the ore that he sold on behalf of the company to himself at too low a price; and that the shareholders had no knowledge of his being the purchaser. Held that since the Act No. 228 and the deed of association of the company required sales to be by the directors, and the plaintiff was at the time of the sale one of the directors who assented thereto, he had acquiesced in the sale and was debarred from suing to impeach it, and bill dismissed with costs as against the defendant manager. Youl v. Lang, 1 A.J.R., 9.

Power to Sell Real Estate.]—Where directors sold real estate belonging to a mining company without the authority and sanction of the company in a general meeting, Held that by the terms of the deed of association such sale should have received such sanction, and being made without such sanction it was voidable, and the directors were liable for the fair value of the land. Reeves v. Croyle, 2 V.R. (E.,) 42; 1 A.J.R., 109; 2 A.J.R., 13.

Authority to Sell—Extraordinary Meeting, Act No. 409.]—Under the Act No. 409 the sanction of an extraordinary meeting is not necessary to the sale of part of the property by the directors. Directors of a company offered to sell part of a company's property (water rights) under a contract which had a condition that the sale should be sanctioned and authorised by an extraordinary meeting of the company. A resolution was passed at such meeting authorising the sale of the property, but not specifying the particular contract. Held that the condition had been substantially complied with. Baw Baw Sluicing Coy. v. Nicholls, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 208; 5 A.L.T., 73.

Acquiescence by Shareholders — How far it ratifies Acts of Directors otherwise Ultra Vires.]—Creswick Grand Trunk Coy. v. Hassall, ante column 148.

Liability of Directors making Dividends out of Capital.]—Where the directors of a mining company in contravention of a rule in the deed of association made dividends partly out of profits and partly by encroaching on the capital, Held that neither the company nor a shareholder had any remedy against the directors, as the act was not shown to be fraudulent. Reeves v. Croyle, 2 V.R. (E.,) 42; 1 A.J.R., 109; 2 A.J.R., 13.

Liability of Promoters for Secret Profits made on Formation of Company.]—Benjamin v. Wymond, ante column 141.

Power of Director to Enforce Forfeiture.]—A person, being a shareholder or director of an incorporated company, is not precluded from enforcing a forfeiture incurred by such company for breach of a bye-law; though he may be accountable in equity for so doing. Smith v. Golden Gate G.M. Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 5.

A director of a company who has obtained, while acting as such director, information as to the period when its miners' right would terminate, is not estopped, after he has ceased from acting as such director, from instituting a suit to obtain possession of its mining claim. Lennox v. Golden Fleece and Heales United Q.M. Coy., 4 A.J.R., 154.

But see Harrison v. Smith, ante column 143.

Directors' Powers and Liabilities—Payment of Manager's Costs of Litigation—Payment to Officer of more than he could Legally Claim.]—Hardy v. Wilson, ante columns 146, 149.

Appointment of Manager—Need not be under Seal—Act No. 228.]—The appointment of the manager of a mining company registered under the Act No. 228, is not an "office," but a "situation" under a contract for service, and need not be under the corporate seal of the company. The sealed articles of association of a company registered under the Act provided that one P. should be the first official manager; that the company should last seventeen years; and that a general meeting should have the power of removing the manager from, and electing a new person to fill the "office" of manager, and P. signed the memorial required by Sec. 9 of the Act to be filed for incorporating the company, and at the first general meeting resigned, and W. was elected and appointed manager. This appointment was not under the corporate seal. W. convened an extraordinary general meeting, as manager, to resolve on an increase of capital, and the meeting was held and the resolution carried. In pursuance thereof the company sued a shareholder in the County Court for calls of increased capital. The company was nonsuited, and appealed. Held, on appeal, that W.'s position was not an "office," but a mere "situation" under a contract for service; and that his appointment was good though not made under seal; and appeal allowed. Royal Standard G.M. Coy. v. Wood, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 85.

Liability of Member for Contract Made by Agent—"Mining Companies Act 1864 Amendment Act," Sec. 9.]—A member of an unincorporated mining company is, under Sec. 9 of the "Mining Companies Act 1864 Amendment Act" (No. 324,) not liable upon a contract made by the manager or agent of such company to whose appointment he did not consent, and to whom he has given no authority in writing to contract. Renwick v. Barkas, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 269.

Power of Manager to Contract for Necessaries—Act No. 409, Secs. 21, 40.]—Sec. 21 only gives a manager authority to bind the company for necessaries up to £50, and a manager has no authority to bind the company to a larger amount except by express authority given by the board of directors. M'Iver v. Duke Coy., 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 449.

Authority of Manager—Agreement by Manager to Let on Tribute.]—The manager of a mining company, incorporated under the Act No. 228, has no inherent authority to bind the company by an agreement for letting a portion of its land on tribute. Chun Goon v. Reform G.M. Coy., 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 128, 148, 149; 3 A.L.T., 137.

Where one of the rules of a company, registered under Act No. 228, was ultra vires, Held that that did not vitiate the rest. Solomon v. Collingwood Q.M. Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 128.

Chairman of Meeting at which Rules were Made Estopped from Objecting to Form of Meeting.]—See S.C., ante column 159.

Validity of Rules.]—Rules and articles of a mining company incorporated under Act No. 228, whether made before or after incorporation, are valid only so far as they are not inconsistent with the Act, and rules cannot be made for winding-up otherwise than as the Act provides. Creswick Grand Trunk G.M. Coy. v. Hassall, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 49, 81.

And see S.P., Tommy Dodd Coy. v. M'Clure, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 237.

A mining company registered under the Act No. 228 cannot, under Sec. 39 of the Act, make rules providing for forfeiture of shares. Nolan v. Annabella Coy., 6 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 38; N.C., 19.

For facts, see S.C., ante column 153; but now see Sec. 54 of Act No. 409.

Power of a Company under Act No. 228 to Make Rules for Forfeiture.]—Even where a deed of association of a mining company under Act No. 228 has been signed before incorporation, such a company has no power to make rules for the forfeiture of shares, and any acts by directors under such rules are unauthorised. Jenkins v. Speed, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 255; N.C., 67.

But where a company registered under Act No. 228 made rules in its articles of association executed after registration providing for forfeiture in a way not exactly following, but still not directly contrary to the provisions of the Act, Held that the rules so made were valid. Shaw v. Costerfield Mining Coy., 1 V.R. (M.,) 7; 1 A.J.R., 17.

Rules made at Meeting of Shareholders—Proxies Admitted Illegally—Rules Invalid.]—Highett v. Sun Q.M. Coy., 4 A.J.R., 119. See S.C., post columns 1022, 1023.

Rules can only under Sec. 39 of the Act No. 228 be altered after incorporation by an extraordinary meeting duly convened. A1 G.M. Coy. v. Stackpoole, 4 A.J.R., 170.

[Compare Sec. 58 of Act No. 409.]

Rules can only be made by a mining company after incorporation at extraordinary meeting. Ballarat and Chiltern G.M. Coy. v. Cleeland, ante column 160.

A company registered under Act No. 228 cannot make rules as to extraordinary meetings. Tommy Dodd Coy. v. M'Clure, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 237.

Rules for Continuance in Office of Directors.]—The provisions of the articles of association of a mining company registered under Act No. 228, and the regulations thereunder, are invalid if not in accordance with the terms of the Act. A rule for the continuance in office of directors for more than a year is invalid as in contravention of the implied provisions of Sec. 39 of the Act. Schmidt v. Garden Gully Coy., 4 A.J.R., 166, 137. For facts, see S.C., ante column 138.

Allotment of—Tribute Companies.]—A mining company, registered under Act No. 228, advertised on 15th August that shareholders in the company would have shares in two tribute companies to be formed in proportion to shares they held in the original company, if the scrip were left on 24th August. G. purchased 200 shares in the company on 18th August, and left the scrip with the company. On 26th August G. sold his shares in the original company, and, on applying for the tribute shares, they were refused. The tribute companies were not registered until 5th September. G. brought an action against the original company for not allotting tribute shares, and obtained a verdict. On rule nisi for a nonsuit, Held that the tribute companies having been formed before G. sold his shares, the sale did not carry the tribute shares, and that the action was rightly brought against the original company. Rule discharged. Gordon v. Golden Fleece Coy., 3 V.R. (L.,) 195; 3 A.J.R., 80.

Transfer of Shares—Fictitious Person.]—A shareholder was sued for contribution in respect of shares in a mining company, and it appeared that three months before the company was wound-up he had transferred his shares and procured registration of the transfer to one John Smith, of Latrobe-street, Melbourne. The transfer purported to be accepted and signed by John Smith, of Latrobe-street. On winding up the company, John Smith could not be found or heard of in Latrobe-street. Held that it was not to be presumed that John Smith was a fictitious person, since it would be in effect to prove that defendant was guilty of forgery. Simpson v. Mullaly, 2 V.R. (L.,) 56; 2 A.J.R., 45.

Transfer of Shares—Evidence of.]—Reefs Q.M. Coy. v. Bennett, ante column 155.

Issue of New Shares—Fraud—Liability of Transferee.]—See Creswick Grand Trunk Coy. v. Rowell, ante columns 155, 156.

Transfer to Escape Payment of Calls.]—An absolute transfer made to a third person, though made to avoid payment of calls, is not per se mâla fide. Sleep v. Virtue, 2 V.R. (L.,) 29; 2 A.J.R. 20.

Transfer of Shares—Setting Aside Sale of—Miner's Right.]—Where L., a holder of a miner's right, and an insolvent, before sequestration transferred shares to K. as a trustee, who had no miner's right, and K. sold to G., who had notice of the trust—Held that L.'s official assignee in setting aside the sale to G. need not have a miner's right and need not show that the alienation was fraudulent under the Insolvency Acts. Goodman v. Kelly, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 332.

And see also as to the transfer of shares, the cases collected under VIII. WINDING-UP—Contributories.

Rectification of Register—Act No. 409, Sec. 35—Practice.]—Proceedings under Sec. 35 to rectify the register of shares, by having a shareholder's name inserted as a transferee, may be taken by summons, or in any way consistent with substantial justice, and the judge has jurisdiction to hear a case though no plaint is filed. Murphy v. Cotter and United Hand and Band Coy., 7 V.L.R. (M.,) 12; 2 A.L.T., 150; 3 A.L.T., 17.

Forfeiture of Shares.]—Provisions for forfeiture are regarded as exceptional, and to be strictly construed. Nolan v. Annabella Coy., 6 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 38; N.C. 19; and see S.C. ante column 153.

Forfeiture—How it Affects Liability for Calls.]—So long as a shareholder's name remains on the register he is liable for calls; the absolute forfeiture of his shares does not relieve him. Guthridge v. Gippslander Coy., 5 A.J.R., 161.

Forfeiture under Articles of Association.]—A company registered under Act No. 228 by articles of association executed after registration provided for the forfeiture of shares in a manner not exactly following, but still not directly contrary to the provisions or policy of the Act. C., a shareholder, who had executed the articles, had his shares forfeited for non-payment of a call. Upon suit by his official assignee to have the forfeiture set aside, Held that the forfeiture made under the articles of association was valid, notwithstanding that the company was registered under the Act No. 228. Shaw v. Costerfield M. Coy., 1 V.R. (M.,) 7; 1 A.J.R., 17.

Forfeiture—Non-payment of Call.]—The partners in a mining claim incorporated themselves into a company. It was provided by the rules of such company that the company should take over the liabilities of the partnership, and discharge them out of the first profits received; that a bill of sale should be given by the company, upon request of certain creditors, as security for a debt owing to them; and that the shareholders should contribute the capital by such instalments as the directors should appoint. The bill of sale, though requested, was not given, and instead the directors made a call to pay the debt, for non-payment of which all the plaintiffs' shares were forfeited. Held that the directors had power to make the call for the purpose of paying the debt; and that the forfeiture was not impeachable on the ground that the call was improper. M'Lennan v. Myrtle Creek Coy., 1 V.R. (M.,) 39; 1 A.J.R., 157.

Forfeiture—Non-payment of Calls—Act No. 228—Act No. 409.]—Held, per Barry and Williams, JJ. (dissentiente Fellows, J.,) that the Act No. 409 is not retrospective as to companies registered under Act No. 228, so as to authorise a forfeiture in accordance with Act No. 409 for non-payment of calls made under No. 228. The Tommy Dodd Coy. v. Patrick, 5 A.J.R., 14.

But it was Held in Chun Goon v. Reform G.M. Coy., 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 128, 151; 3 A.L.T., 137; that all companies registered under the Act No. 228, and not registered as No Liability Companies under Act No. 409, are, by virtue of Sec. 124 of Act No. 409, brought under the operation of Act No. 409, Part I., Secs. 1-58.

Dividends on Shares.]—Per Molesworth, J.—The profit of mining shares, as between persons successively entitled, goes to the person entitled when the dividend is payable, not when the gold is raised. Shaw v. Wright, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 57, 71.

Mortgage of Shares—Once a Mortgage always a Mortgage.]—The principle once a mortgage always a mortgage applies to shares in mining companies, and must be followed out with such allowances as the character of the case may require. A new rule is not to be created for this species of property. Niemann v. Weller, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 125, 137, 138.

Person not Executing Instrument of Association not Liable for Calls—Act No. 56, Sec. 3.]—An allottee of shares in a mining association registered under the "Mining Association Act 1858," who has not executed the instrument of association, can not be sued by the director of the association for calls due under the instrument, inasmuch as Sec. 3 of Act No. 56 provides that "the instrument shall be subscribed by each member." Farran v. Bowman, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 150.

Who is a Shareholder—18 Vict. No. 42, Sec. 14.]—A person who has made a written application for, and is the holder of, shares in a mining company, is a "shareholder of the shares subscribed for" within Sec. 14 of No. 42, although he may not have subscribed the instrument of association of the company. Melville v. Higgins, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 306.

Mining Partnership—Act No. 109—Who are Shareholders.]—A person may be a shareholder in a mining company under Act No. 109 even though such "holder" of shares has not executed deed of association. Farran v. Bowman, and Melville v. Higgins distinguished. Maconochie v. Woods, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 249.

[But now see Sec. 13 of Act No. 409.]

Act No. 228, Sec. 3—Shareholder not Signing Deed of Association.]—L. applied for shares and enclosed £30. Twenty-five were allotted to him, and £5 was returned, but L. did not sign the deed of association. Held that although the Act No. 228, Sec. 3, does not contemplate the execution of the deed as essential, yet as it appeared that both L. and the company contemplated the signing of a deed as essential to constitute L. a member of the company and L. had not signed, he was not a shareholder and was not liable for calls. Guiding Star Coy. v. Luth, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 94.

Meetings—Notice to Call Extraordinary Meeting—Act No. 228, Sec. 23.]—Sec. 23 providing for the calling of an extraordinary meeting means that the meeting shall be convened fourteen days at least after the last insertion of advertisements; and therefore where a meeting was convened twenty-four days after the last insertion, Held that it was duly convened. Robin Hood Coy. v. Stavely, 4 W.W. & A'B.(M.,) 26.

Increase of Capital—Notice of—Act No. 228, Sec. 24.]—The provisions of Sec. 24 are only directory and not mandatory, and therefore where a defendant in an action for calls objected that no written notice of the increase of capital was made according to the provisions of that section, Held that he was liable. Ibid.

Notice of Meeting—Act No. 228, Sec. 23.]—The notice of meeting under Sec. 23 of Act No. 228 should be a fourteen days' notice, and therefore a meeting called six days after notice has been advertised is an irregular meeting. M'Lister v. Garden Gully Coy., 5 A.J.R., 152; L.R., 1 App. Ca. 39.

Meeting Irregulary Called.]—A rule of a mining company provided that if the manager neglected for four days to call a meeting after a requisition to that effect had been delivered, then a majority of the members might call one. Held that the act of the requisionists in calling a meeting within the four days was not validated by the manager's subsequent neglect. Aberfeldie G.M. Coy. v. Walters, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 116.

Notice of Meeting.]—No need to prove actual knowledge on part of a shareholder. Cushing v. Lady Barkly G.M. Coy., ante column 150.

Meetings—Notice.]—Where the rules of a mining company do not prescribe any mode of summoning a general meeting, such meeting must be summoned by serving the individual shareholders with separate notices thereof. Charlton v. Barkly Reef G.M. Coy., 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 101.

Meeting of Shareholders—Not Authorised to Pass Resolutions as to Sale, when Advertisement only Refers to Winding up.]—Hick v. Havilah G.M. Coy., ante columns 149, 150.

Right to Vote—Neglect to Pay Calls, How it Affects.]—Aberfeldie G.M. Coy. v. Walters, ante column 150.

Reception of Proxies.]—Where the rules provide for proxies being received, they must be received. Hick v. Havilah G.M. Coy., ante columns 149, 150.

Act No. 228, Sec. 39—Meeting of Shareholders—Proxies—Calls.]—The "Mining Companies Act" (No. 228,) Sec. 39, empowers a "majority in number and value of the shareholders" to make rules. At a meeting at which eight only of thirty-seven shareholders were present, but thirteen others were represented by proxies, rules were made authorising proxies, and the same meeting elected directors, who subsequently sued for calls. Held that since proxies cannot be allowed till provided for by the rules, there could be no valid meeting held with proxies present till rules were passed authorising them, and that consequently the meeting was informal and the rules invalid, as also the election of directors, since to enable proxies to be present the rules authorising them would have to be passed by a regular meeting of a majority in number and value of the shareholders; and that the election of directors being invalid, the calls made by them were invalid also, and could not be recovered, and that the execution of the deed, containing the rules, by the defendant, such deed not having been executed by the other shareholders, could not bind him. Highett v. Sun Q.M. Coy., 4 A.J.R., 119.

[See Secs. 43, 58 of Act No. 409.]

Meetings—"Mining Companies Act" (No. 409,) Secs. 41, 43, 58—Proxies.]—Where a notice of an extraordinary meeting under Sec. 41 had been duly given pointing out the several objects of the meeting, Held that a proxy could be admitted under Sec. 43 in order to constitute the majority necessary under Sec. 58 for the purpose of making rules. Robertson v. Weddell, 5 A.J.R., 115.

Right to Inspect Book of Account—"Mining Companies Act 1871," Sec. 38.]—A minute-book containing minutes of the proceedings of the directors of a mining company, and including the accounts of the company as brought before the directors and passed for payment, is not a "book of account" within Sec. 38 of the "Mining Companies Act 1871," and is not, therefore, open to the inspection of shareholders under that section. James v. Thomson, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 125; 6 A.L.T., 12, sub nom. Thompson v. James.

Right of Shareholders to Impeach Rules.]—Schmidt v. Garden Gully Coy., ante column 150.

(5) Contracts and Power to Mortgage.

Power to Make Promissory Note.]—Semble, that a mining company incorporated under the "Mining Companies Limited Liability Act 1864" has no power to make a promissory note or bill of exchange. M'Mullen v. O'Connor, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 200.

Contracts by Company—How far Person Contracting with a Company Bound to Inquire into Regularity of Proceedings.]—Anderson v. Duke and Timor G.M. Coy. and Commercial Bank v. M'Donald, ante column 151.

Tribute Agreement—"Mining Statute Amendment Act 1872" (No. 446,) Sec. 7.]—The provision in Sec. 7 of Act No. 446, prohibiting certain mining companies from entering into a tribute agreement, unless with the sanction of a general meeting of the shareholders, makes it incumbent upon a person entering into such an agreement with the manager or directors to inquire whether such sanction has been duly given. Chun Goon v. Reform G.M. Coy., 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 128, 151; 3 A.LT., 81.

And Sec. 131 of Act No. 409, which prohibits letting on tribute without the sanction of the shareholders, only applies to a demise of the land. Ibid., p. 151.

Company—Registered under No. 228—Power to Mortgage—Past Debt.]—A mining company, registered under the Act No. 228 ("Mining Companies Limited Liability Act,") possesses only the powers given by that Act; and in consequence is unable to mortgage its plant, &c., for a past debt, the Secs. of the Act (21, 25) relating to mortgaging only giving power to mortgage for present advances. M'Kean v. Cleft in the Rock G.M. Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 42.

[Compare Secs. 47, 48, of Act No. 409.]

Mortgage to Secure Past Debt—Liability.]—It is not competent for a mining company registered under the Act No. 228 to mortgage its plant and tools of trade to secure a past debt, and if they do give such a mortgage they cannot be held liable to pay the amount of the debt, either upon an express or an implied covenant in the mortgage deed. Commercial Bank of Australia v. Grassy Gully Coy., 2 V.R. (L.,) 23. 2 A.J.R., 18.

[Compare Secs. 47, 48 of Act No. 409.]

Mortgage—Act No. 228.]—Where a mining company incorporated under the Act No. 228 mortgaged their plant, &c., by bill of sale, and part of the consideration expressed in the bill had been previously advanced; but the residue was advanced subsequently to the bill being given. Held that the mortgage was valid. Commercial Bank v. M'Donald, 2 V.R. (L.,) 211; 2 A.J.R., 120.

[Compare Secs. 47, 48 of Act No. 409.]

Resolution Authorising Borrowing—Act No. 228, Sec. 25—Future Advances.]—A resolution of an extraordinary meeting of a mining company, authorising the directors to borrow, and execute necessary securities, would (but for the Act No. 228 Sec. 25, repealed by No. 409) authorise a mortgage to a bank for a past overdraft and future advances; such mortgage is good as to future advances, and, in subsequent dealings, the bank is at liberty to apply the receipts from the company, to repayment of the past debt. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy. v. National Bank of Australasia, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 206.

Bill of Sale—Act No. 409, Sec. 48.]—A bill of sale given by a mining company over certain property is binding against the company under Sec. 48, although no extraordinary meeting was called to authorise it. Campbell v. Hassan, 5 A.J.R., 135.

And a bill of sale sealed by the company's seal is binding under the Act No. 409, sec. 48, although not affixed in the presence of two directors as required by the rules. Newey v. Rutherford, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 340; see ante column 230.

Notice of—Act No. 228, Sec. 24.]—The provisions of Sec. 24 as to increase of capital are only mandatory and not directory, and therefore where a defendant in an action for calls objected that no written notice of the increase of capital had been given according to the provisions of that section, Held that he was liable. Robin Hood G.M. Co. v. Stavely, 4 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 26.

[Compare Sec. 45 of Act No. 409.]

Rules Increasing Capital after Incorporation—Calls—"Mining Companies Statute," No. 228, Sec. 39.]—By Sec. 39 of the "Mining Companies Statute" (No. 228,) rules can only be altered after incorporation by an extraordinary meeting duly convened. When therefore the capital of a company was increased by a rule made at an extraordinary meeting not duly convened, Held that the company could not sue for calls made in respect of such increased capital. The A1 G.M. Coy. v. Stackpoole, 4 A.J.R., 170.

Calls to be Paid on an Impossible Day.]—Where a notice was advertised to the effect that "unless calls were paid on Thursday, 31st June," shares would be forfeited, Held that the notice was insufficient as fixing an impossible day. Wood v. Freehold United Coy., 1 V.R. (E.,) 168; 1 A.J.R., 173.

Notice of Making Calls.]—See Solomon v. Collingwood Q.M. Coy.; Clunes and Blackwood Coy. v. Coulter; and Goldsbrough Mining Coy. v. M'Bride, ante columns 157, 158.

Making of Calls—When Made.]—Calls are made when the resolution is passed, not when the call is payable. Hodgson v. Fermoy G.M. Coy., ante column 158.

And see Cushing v. Lady Barkley G.M. Coy., ante column 158, as to verbal direction as to time and place of payment.

Making of Calls—Directors must be Duly Elected and Qualified.]—Highett v. Sun Q.M. Coy., ante column 1023; Barfold Estate G.M. Coy. v. Klingender, ante column 148.

It is not enough that a call be made by directors de facto, the directors to be competent to make such a call must be directors de jure as well. Schmidt v. Garden Gully Coy., 4 A.J.R., 66, 137.

Payment of Call.]—See Umphelby v. Wilkie, ante column 159.

Object of Call—Payment of Debt.]—Directors have power to make a call for the payment of a debt. M'Lennan v. Myrtle Creek G.M. Coy., ante column 1020.

Liability for Calls—Transferee Cannot Object to the Invalidity of Forfeiture.]—Jones v. Star Freehold Coy., ante column 160. And see Guthridge v. Gippslander Coy., ante column 1020; and Creswick Grand Trunk Coy. v. Rowell, ante column 156.

Act No. 409.]—Act No. 409 is not, except as to winding up, retrospective, and does not apply to companies registered under No. 228 so far as the provisions for enforcement of calls are concerned. Regina v. McDougal, ex parte Baillie, 3 V.R. (L.,) 66; 3 A.J.R., 40.

But see Chun Goon v. Reform G.M. Coy, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 128, 151; 3 A.L.T., 137; in which it was held that all companies registered under Act No. 228 and not registered as a No Liability Company under the Act No. 409 are by virtue of Sec. 124 of the Act No. 409 brought under the operation of that Act, Part 1, Secs. 1-58.

Act No. 228, Sec. 39—Liability for Calls.]—Where rules were passed at a meeting, not duly convened in accordance with Sec. 39 of Act No. 228, authorising the increase of capital, Held that the company could not sue for calls in respect of such increased capital. The A1 G.M. Coy. v. Stackpoole, 4 A.J.R., 170.

Act No. 409, Secs. 52-56.]—The justices have jurisdictiou where a suit is brought before them to enforce the payment of calls within twelve months after the call is made, the sixteen days' limit in Sec. 52 only applying to suits in the County Court, and though shares are forfeited under Sec. 54 for non-payment within a fortnight, yet the liability for calls remains until the shares are sold under Sec. 55, the forfeiture not being final as there may be a redemption under Sec. 56. Guthridge v. Gippslander G.M. Coy., 5 A.J.R., 161.

Liability of Shareholder—"Mining Companies Act 1871," Secs. 52, 54.]—So long as the name of a shareholder in a mining company appears on the register of shareholders he is liable to have payment of calls not more than twelve months old enforced against him by justices, though the calls be more than fourteen days old, jurisdiction in the matter being given to justices by Sec. 52 of the "Mining Companies Act 1871" (No. 409), and Sec. 54 of the same Act not operating to forfeit the shares by non-payment of calls, but leaving the directors an option of suing for calls instead of enforcing the forfeiture. Regina v. M'Gregor, ex parte Wilkinson, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 167, 2 A.L.T., 4; sub nom. Ex parte Wilkinson.

Duties of Justices on Complaints for Calls.]—On a complaint for calls it was contended as a defence that the statutory provisions, as to notice of a meeting to increase capital in respect of which the calls accrued, had not been complied with, and the justices acceded to this and dismissed the complaint. Held that they ought not to embarrass themselves with such considerations. Creswick Grand Trunk Coy. v. Rowell, 2 A.J.R., 35.

Including Calls in One Complaint—Act No. 267, Sec. 73.]—The Court held an objection that there must be a separate complaint for each call and a separate order fatal. Ogier v. Ballarat Pyrites Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 245.

But in Guthridge v. Gippslander G.M. Coy., 5 A.J.R., 161; and in Regina v. McGregor, ex parte Wilkinson, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 167, 2 A.L.T., 4; the Court held a company might sue for several calls under one complaint.

Service of Plaint upon Company—"County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 122—"Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 91.]—Service upon a mining company registered under the Act No. 228, of a plaint summons, may, under the joint operation of the "County Court Statute 1869," Sec. 122, and the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 91, be effected by service upon the manager, even though he be not at the registered office of the company as required by Sec. 14 of Act No. 409. Porter v. Leviathan Coy., 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 228.

Service of Summons on Company—"Mining Companies Act 1871," Sec. 14.]—A summons to a mining company, registered under the "Mining Companies Act 1871," was delivered to the manager personally at an office other than the registered office of the company, in a registered letter addressed to him at such other office. Held good service of the summons. Regina v. Lawlor, ex parte Lone Hand G.M. Coy., 8 V.L.R., (L.,) 207.

And see generally cases ante columns 161, 162, et seq.

Validity of Rules as to Winding-up.]—A company registered under Act No. 228 cannot provide by rules passed either before or after incorporation, for winding-up in a different mode from that contemplated by that Act; and such a company cannot, by resolution of the shareholders, validly sell the whole of its property, and thus virtually wind itself up in a manner different from that authorised in the Act. Creswick Grand Trunk G.M. Coy. v. Hassall, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 49, 81.

Rules made by a company registered under Act No. 228 providing for winding-up otherwise than as the Act contemplates are ultrâ vires. A valid resolution to wind up can only be adopted at an extraordinary meeting summoned in accordance with that Act. Tommy Dodd Coy. v. M'Clure, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 237.

A company registered under the Act No. 228 cannot be wound-up under the "Companies Statute 1864." In re Collingwood Q.M. Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 190.

Act No. 228—Act No. 409, Sec. 112—Voluntary Winding-up.]—A dividend due by a company upon shares improperly forfeited is a debt for which a shareholder can sue, and the existence of such a debt owing by the company prevents its being wound up voluntarily under Sec. 112 of Act No. 409. Tommy Dodd Coy. v. M'Clure, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 237.

Proof of Debt Incurred by Directors—Authorisation of Company not Necessary.]—The directors of a mining company incurred a debt to a bank, which, upon the winding-up of the company, proved its debt in the Court of Mines. The official agent and other creditors opposed the proof on the ground that the debt had been incurred by the directors without the sanction of the general body of the shareholders. On rule nisi for a certiorari to quash the order allowing the proof, Held that it was premature to object to proof of the debt, and that the ultimate battle might yet be fought on the question whether this debt should be paid as against the general body of the creditors. In re Tyson's Reef Coy., 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 162.

Debt for which Shareholders may Sue—What is —Dividend.]—See Tommy Dodd Coy. v. M'Clure, supra.

What Constitutes a Good Debt.]—The A. Bank had made advances to a company, and, with the sanction of a meeting of shareholders not regularly convened under Sec. 23 of the Act, transferred this overdraft to the C. Bank. The C. Bank presented a petition for the winding-up of the company. Held, by the Privy Council, reversing the Supreme Court [Regina v. Bowman, ex parte Willan, 3 V.R. (L.,) 258; 3 A.J.R., 22,] that the overdraft so transferred constituted a good debt, it not being incumbent on the C. Bank to show that all proceedings of the mining company and its shareholders inter se had been strictly regular before it advanced the money. Colonial Bank v. Willan, 5 L.R. P.C., 417; 43 L.J. P.C., 39; 5 A.J.R., 53.

Stale Demand—Act No. 345, Sec. 93—Act No. 409, Sec. 71.] — In December, 1873, a bank recovered a judgment in the County Court against a company, and in August, 1878, removed such judgment to the Supreme Court under Sec. 93 of the Act No. 345, and issued a writ of fi. fa., which was returned unsatisfied. In September, 1878, the bank petitioned for the winding up of the company, but the District Judge dismissed the petition on the ground that the removal did not revive the judgment. Held that the combined effect of Sec. 93 of Act No. 345, and of Sec. 71 of Act No. 409, was that the removal to the Supreme Court did not create a new debt, but was only a means of enforcing a remedy for the original debt, and that, therefore, the petition was not based upon a judgment obtained within the previous year (as under Sec. 71 of No. 409,) and was properly dismissed. Commercial Bank v. Hope Tribute Coy., 5 V.L.R. (M.,) 1; followed in Watson v. Commercial Bank, 5 V.L.R. (M.,) 36; 1 A.L.T., 94.

Signature of Petition.]—It is not necessary for creditors petitioning for a winding-up order to sign the petition when the petition is verified by affidavit. Osborne v. Gaunt, 3 A.J.R., 47.

Act No. 409, Sec. 61—Proof of Service of Petition.]—An order was made for winding up a company; it did not appear that seven days' notice of the application had been given, except that the order recited that it was made upon reading the affidavit of a person who swore he had served the company. Held that the order was bad, that proof of service could not be made by affidavit under Sec. 61. Garrett v. Creeth, 5 A.J.R., 36.

Act No. 228, Sec. 28 — Service of Notice of Petition.]—Service of notice of petition under Sec. 28 of Act No. 228 at the office of a company which has become defunct is good service. *Colonial Bank v. Service of Notice of Petition—Act No. 409, Sec. 15 — Company Defunct — Publication in "Gazette."]—Where a company has delivered up all its books and papers to the Clerk of the Court of Mines, and its name plate is removed from the door of the registered office, it may for all practical purposes be deemed to be defunct, so as to justify publication of notice of petition for winding up in the Gazette under Sec. 15 of the Act No. 409, even although the registration of its office has not been cancelled. Regina v. Leech, ex parte Tolstrup, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 494; 1 A.L.T., 109.

(c) Official Agents and Liquidators—their Appointment and Powers.

Appointment of Liquidator—Proxies—Act No. 409, Sec. 74.]—Where after a company had been wound up, one person holding proxies for two creditors constituted the meeting of creditors for the appointment of a liquidator. Held that the appointment of a liquidator by that person was good. Regina v. Cogdon, ex parte Hasker, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 88.

The appointment of a liquidator at a meeting of creditors composed of one person holding proxies for two creditors is good. Regina v. Leech, ex parte Tolstrup, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 494.

Appointment and Removal of Liquidator — Sanction of Court—Creditors' Meetings—Act No. 409, Secs. 74-78.]—A liquidator cannot be appointed except by the sanction of the Court under Sec. 75, and should only be removed after he has had an opportunity of being heard both by the creditors in their meeting and before the judge whose sanction for his removal is requested; the effect of Secs. 74-78 is that the sanction of the Court is required for his removal. Where a meeting of creditors appeared to be a fraudulent scheme to substitute one liquidator who was not to give security in place of one who had given security, and to carry out such a project against the wishes of another creditor who had a larger interest than those who actually voted, the Chief Judge affirmed the district judge's refusal to sanction the removal of the old liquidator and the appointment of a new one. Rigby v. Hasker, 5 V.L.R. (M.,) 32; 1 A.L.T., 88.

Appointment of Liquidator of a Mining Company—Judgment for Work and Labour Done—18 Vict. No. 42, Sec. 14—No. 56, Sec. 63.]—A Court of Mines, by virtue of Sec. 14 of No. 42, may, upon judgment recovered in the County Court against a mining company, and upon complaint of a creditor that such judgment is unsatisfied, appoint a liquidator, but Sec. 63 of the Act No. 56 does not give such court jurisdiction to pronounce judgment against a mining company "for work and labour done and materials supplied, and for interest due and payable upon an account stated;" and such a judgment is not a judgment on the basis of which, if unsatisfied, a liquidator to wind up the company can be appointed by the Judge of a Court of Mines. The proper course is for the judgment to be recovered in the County Court, and for the Court of Mines to appoint the liquidator. Wilson v. Broadfoot, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 214.

Power to Sue for Capital Subscribed for—18 Vict. No. 42—11 and 12 Vict. c. 43, Sec. 11.]—B. was appointed, by order of the Court of Mines, a liquidator of a company. O'F. was a subscriber to and shareholder in the company. B. sued O'F. by summary plaint before magistrates for "the balance of subscribed capital due from O'F., which sum did not include any call." Held, reversing the magistrates, who had nonsuited the plaintiff, that the suit being for capital and not calls, and as the manager of the company could not have sued for capital, the cause of action arose after B.'s appointment; and, as proceedings were instituted within six months, B. was entitled to sue. Nonsuit set aside. Verdict for plaintiff. Broadfoot v. O'Farrell, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 102.

Power to Sue for Calls.]—See cases post column 1038, under Calls—Enforcement of.

Official Agent—Right to Sue for Accounts—Act No. 324, Sec. 6.]—A mining company, registered under the Act No. 228, and mining on private property alienated from the Crown, was ordered to be wound up. R. was appointed official agent. Previous to the order for winding-up, the company had been sequestrated by order of the Court for breach of an injunction. R. brought a suit against the directors and managers of the company charging them with misappropriation of the gold raised and other assets, with mutilating and concealing account-books, and with improper payment of dividends to certain shareholders out of borrowed moneys and not out of profits; and praying for accounts, declaration, and enforcement of liability. Held, upon demurrer, for want of equity in R., by Full Court, affirming Molesworth, J., that R., as official agent, had a right and an equity to bring the suit, under the Act No. 324, Sec. 6, in his own name, as representing the company, and that the sequestration was no bar to his right, the assets of the company not having come into the possession of the sequestrators. Reeves v. Croyle, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 302.

[Compare provisions of Sec. 89 of Act No. 409.]

Mining Company—Act No. 228, Sec. 33—Duty of Official Agent as to Resisting Proof of Debts—As to Enforcing Contributions from all Shareholders.]—Bill by S. and five other shareholders in the B. company against the manager, other shareholders, and C., the official agent, alleging proof by defendant shareholders of debts not really due, and collusion between such shareholders and C., and seeking a declaration that such proof of debts should be expunged, and that defendants should be liable to contribute. Held, on demurrer, that Sec. 33 of Act No. 228 does not expressly direct that official agents shall have the same powers and duties as official assignees under "Insolvent Acts" Nos. 17 and 19, and those Acts did not impose on assignees the duty of resisting proof of debts, and that a case of collusive omission was not proved against C. to subject him to the jurisdiction of a Court of Equity as for a breach of trust; that the Court had no power to enforce contribution; and that where the defendants had had their debts allowed by a District Court of Mines, and no appeal was made, a Court of Equity has no jurisdiction to review such allowance. Demurrer allowed. Semble, an official agent conclusively enforcing contributions from some, and omitting to do so in case of others, would be ground for a Court of Equity to compel him to bear the loss, and perhaps to enforce contributions. Smith v. Seal, 3 A.J.R., 8.

[Compare Sec. 95 of Act No. 409.]

Powers of Liquidator's Successor—No. 324, Sec. 8.]—Under Sec. 8 of the "Mining Companies Limited Liability Amendment Act" (No. 324,) a suit for contribution which has been commenced by an official agent may be continued by his successor, without entering any suggestion of the change. Selfe v. Simpson, 2 V.R. (L.,) 99; 2 A.J.R., 63.

[Sec. 8 of Act No. 324 has been repealed and re-enacted by Sec. 80 of Act No. 409.]

Official Agent—Contract by.]—A contract by an official agent appointed under Sec. 6 of the Act No. 324, to give a person whom he is suing for contribution time until the proceedings against the other shareholders have been determined is not ultra vires, and the succeeding official agent may, by virtue of Sec. 8 of the Act, sue on the contract. Hasker v. Schlesinger, 4 A.J.R., 186.

County Court Judge's Order—18 Vict., No. 42, Secs. 2 and 3.]—An order for winding-up a mining company made by a County Court judge, appointing a creditor to sue for unpaid calls under Act No. 42, Secs. 2 and 3, omitted the words "and to do all other acts which may be necessary to carry out the provisions herein contained." Held that it was a sufficient compliance with the Act to render the appointment of a creditor good, and to entitle him to sue for calls. In re Harrison, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 47.

[Sec. 90 of Act No. 409 gives the liquidator power to sue for calls.]

Order based upon County Court judgment—18 Vict., No. 42, Sec. 14.]—B. recovered judgment against the A. company, for goods delivered, in the County Court, and an order was made by the Court of Mines, based upon that judgment, winding up the A. company, and appointing B. liquidator; B. then sued W. for a debt due in respect of his shares and recovered a verdict in the County Court. The order for winding up was based upon an affidavit showing that an office copy of judgment had been served on the manager, and that judgment had been unsatisfied for seven days, but no process or warrant of execution had issued. Held that the judgment of the County Court was such a judgment as is contemplated in 18 Vict., No. 42, Sec. 14, and that Sec. 14 contemplates that process and not judgment should be served in order for such judgment to be the basis of a winding-up order, and that as no process had been served and seven days could not have elapsed since service of process, the order was invalid, and B. was not entitled to sue. Wilson v. Broadfoot, 2 W. & W. (L.) 96.

[Compare Sec. 60 (ii.) of Act No. 409.]

Conditional Order Bad under Act No. 228, Secs. 30, 31.]—An order for winding up a mining company directing the company to pay a debt or give security by a day named; and by which in default of making payment or giving security the company was ordered to be wound up, is bad, the "Mining Companies Limited Liability Act 1864" (No. 228,) Secs. 30, 31, not authorising a conditional order; and an official agent appointed by such an order cannot sue the shareholders for contribution. Haigh v. Hart, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 123.

[N.B.—Sec. 64 of Act No. 409 does not give the judge power to make an order as for payment of debt, but authorises him either to grant the prayer for winding up or to dismiss the petition.]

Act No. 228, Secs. 30, 31—Evidence Necessary to give Jurisdiction.]—An order by the Judge of the Court of Mines winding up a company was made "upon hearing the petition herein and the order made herein, and upon reading the affidavit of H. and upon hearing the petitioner's attorney." The liquidator appointed sued a shareholder in respect of unpaid capital, viz., his contribution towards his shares in "additional capital," and recovered from a magistrate an order for payment. Held, on appeal, that, there being no evidence of the sanction of the majority in number and value for the increase of capital, as required by Secs. 30 and 31, the order for winding up was bad, as it made no attempt to show the matters necessary to give jurisdiction. Magistrates' decision reversed. Campbell v. Carver, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 48.

Order Good as to Part—Bad as to Part.]—It is beyond the jurisdiction of a Judge of the Court of Mines to give costs in the order for winding up a mining company under the Act No. 228, Sec. 31; but where such an order gave costs and was otherwise valid, the Court treated the part giving costs as surplusage, and allowed the rest to stand. Walker v. Jenkins, 1 V.R. (L.,) 9; 1 A.J.R., 25.

Where an order for winding up was bad on its face as showing no jurisdiction, a second order was allowed to be made without an order to set aside the first order, the petitioner being held justified in treating the first order as a nullity. Reeves v. Bowden, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 218; N.C., 17.

An order to wind up a mining company under the Act No. 228, recited that a judgment had been recovered against the company; that execution had been issued, but not satisfied; that the judgment creditor presented a petition to wind up, setting forth the facts already recited; that the company had been duly served with the petition and did not appear; but the order did not recite the anterior proceedings at length. Held that the order set out sufficient facts to show jurisdiction. Davies v. Cooper; Adair v. Cooper, 2 V.R. (L.,) 95; 2 A.J.R., 62.

See Sec. 66 and Sched. V. of Act No. 409.

Signature of Judge to Order—Evidence Statute, Sec. 54.]—The Court can take judicial notice, under Sec. 54 of the "Evidence Statute" (No. 197,] of the signature of the Judge of a District Court of Mines to an order for winding up a mining company under Sec. 31 of No. 228, where the judge has merely signed his name, without describing himself as "Judge of the said Court of Mines." Walker v. Jenkins, 1 V.R. (L.,) 9; 1 A.J.R. 25.

Order in Schedule V. of Act No. 409, Sec. 66, for What Intended.]—The form of winding-up order in Schedule V. of the "Mining Companies Act 1871" (No. 409,) is intended for cases in which the company is petititoner or appears. On appeal, Held that such an order may be made exparte, and if made in the scheduled form is on its face unobjectionable, although it does not show any notice to or appearance by the company wound up. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy. v. National Bank of Australasia, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 206; on appeal, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 61, 69.

Order under "The Mining Companies Act 1871" (No. 409.]—A judgment creditor of a mining company obtained an order to wind it up under the Act No. 409; but no liquidator was appointed. Subsequently, by an order of the same court, the first order was discharged, and nothing more was done under it. Held that if the winding-up order was irregular the Court that made it could set it aside; and that, assuming it to be irregular, since neither the creditor nor any one else had taken any steps under it for the appointment of a liquidator, the right of the company to sue in Equity remained. On appeal, Held that such an order may be made exparte, and if in the scheduled form it is on its face unobjectionable, although it does not show any notice to or appearance by the company, and decision of Court below affirmed. Ibid.

Informal Order—Setting Aside.]—Where an order was made by a District Court Judge winding up a company and objections were taken:—(1) That the petitioning creditor, a bank, was not a creditor, the directors not having authority to contract the debt; (2) That sufficient notice of the application was not given, —the Court granted a rule absolute in the first instance to bring up the order on certiorari. Regina v. Hackett, ex parte Golden Gate Coy., 3 A.J.R., 73.

A good winding-up order under the Act No. 409 is the common property of all the creditors and cannot be discharged on the consent of the petitioner. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy. v. National Bank of Australasia, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 206, 210.

Order Bad—Laches in Moving to Set it Aside.]—Winding-up orders only terminate the operations of companies, and their existence is an obstacle to other creditors entitled to obtain such orders doing so. Where, therefore, an order was improperly obtained, but list of creditors and contributories had been settled and it was generally acted upon for two months, when a contributory with full knowledge of the fact applied to set it aside, the Court refused to set it aside on the ground of his laches in applying. Watson v. Commercial Bank, 5 V.L.R. (M.,) 36; 1 A.L.T., 94.

Appeal from Winding-up Order—Act No. 291, Sec. 172—Act 409.]—Though Act No. 409 contains no express provision for appealing from winding-up orders, yet it does impliedly in conjunction with Act No. 291—Semble, that the limit of time (ten days) in Sec. 172 of No. 291 is not binding in the case of a person affected by an order procured without notice to him. Ibid.

It will require a very strong case of irregularity in obtaining the order, and an application should be made with great promptitude, to set aside a winding-up order when it has been made by the proper judge and extensively acted upon, other enforcements of rights suspended, and much trouble and expense incurred under it. Smith v. Australian and European Bank, 8 V.L.R. (M.,) 23; 4 A.L.T. 26.

Where Liability to Contribute arises—Jurisdiction of Justices, Limitation to.]—The liability of shareholders in respect of contributions upon the winding-up of a mining company under the Act No. 228, arises immediately the winding-up order has been made, and the period of limitation of the jurisdiction of justices to order payment begins to run from that time. Hart v. Garden, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 213.

[See Sec. 94, Sub-sec. i. of Act No. 409.]

Where Liability to Contribution arises—No. 228, Sec. 36.]—The commencement of the winding-up of a mining company under the Act No. 228, Sec. 36, dates from the presentation of the petition, and not from the date of granting the order; and a shareholder who has parted with his shares between the presentation of the petition and the granting of the order is liable to contribute in respect of such shares. Reeves v. Millsom, 1 V.R. (L.,) 15; 1 A.J.R. 28.

[Compare Sec. 94, Sub-sec. i., of Act No. 409.]

Executors of Deceased Shareholders—No. 228, Sec. 37.]—Under Sec. 37 of the "Mining Companies Limited Liability Act 1864" (No. 228,) executors of a deceased shareholder cannot be sued at petty sessions for contribution in respect of shares held by their testator at the time of his death in a mining company registered under the Act and being wound up under it. The section confines the power to enforce payment of contribution to the case of present shareholders only, and it cannot be extended to the representatives of a deceased shareholder. Cooper v. Bath, 2 V.R. (L.,) 136; 2 A.J.R., 86.

[But see now Sub-sec. ii. of Sec. 94 of Act No. 409.]

Liability of Past Sharsholder—Question for Magistrates.]—Sec. 36 of No. 228 enacts that past shareholders of a mining company shall not be liable to contribute unless present shareholders are unable to pay or cannot be found. In an action by the official agent of a mining company against a past shareholder for contribution, it is a question of fact for the decision of the magistrates whether the present shareholders of the company could or could not be found. Reeves v. Ninham, 1 V.R. (L.,) 100; 1 A.J.R., 90.

[There appears to be no analogous enactment in Act No. 409, the contributories being defined in Sec. 94.]

Liability of Transferor—Transfer of Shares not Registered.]—A shareholder in a mining company incorporated under the Act No. 228, had paid his calls by allowing, under an arrangement with the manager, a debt due to him by the company for goods to stand against the amount of calls, and had subsequently transferred his shares bonâ fide. The transfer was executed by him, and transmitted to the directors for registration with the necessary fee; but the directors, without due cause, omitted to register the transfer. The company was wound up, and the official agent sued the shareholder for unpaid capital on his shares. Held, that the defendant was not liable as a shareholder as regards the shares transferred. O'Donovan v. O'Farrell, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 169.

[Act No. 409, Sec. 94, Sub-sec. i., only regards as contributories those who at the time of presentation of the petition are registered shareholders.]

Transfer of Shares—Liability of Transferor.]—A shareholder cannot, when the company is unable to pay dividends and calls are due by surrendering his shares, escape liability to contribution, even though the transfer be bonâ fide, and recognised by the company. Reeves v. Highett, 1 V.R. (L.) 110; 1 A.J.R., 84. S. P. Reeves v. Bonneau, 1 A.J.R., 116.

And the fairness and bona fides of the transfer are matters for the magistrates acting as jurymen to consider. Reeves v. Bonneau, 1 A.J.R., 116.

Transfer of Shares—Cessation of Liability.]—In the absence of any proof of a rule of a mining company registered under Act No. 228, that transfers are not to be recognised until passed by the directors, a shareholder who has transferred his shares, such transfer having been accepted by the transferee more than three months before the petition for winding up, but not having been passed by the directors till within that period, ceases to be liable for contribution from the date of the transfer. Jones v. Simpson, 2 V.R. (L.,) 96; 2 A.J.R., 63.

Issuing Distress Warrant under No. 228, Sec. 38—Affidavits.]—A justice, before issuing a distress warrant for contribution under Sec. 38 of the "Mining Companies Limited Liability Act" (No. 228,) without a summons to show cause, must be satisfied that the money was required for the payment of the company's debts; and the affidavit in support of an application for a rule nisi to compel a magistrate to issue such a warrant must state the proceedings in the Police Court, it not being sufficient to state that the magistrate was satisfied that the money was required for payment of the debts. Regina v. Gaunt, 1 A.J.R., 36.

[Compare Sec. 101 of Act No. 409 as to present provisions for enforcing contribution.]

Distress for Calls—No. 228, Sec. 38.]—A distress warrant for non-payment of calls under Sec. 38 of the "Mining Companies Act" (No. 228,) cannot be issued without the previous issue of a summons upon the shareholders to show cause. Smith v. Cogdon, 4 A.J.R., 76.

[Compare Secs. 95—102, of Act No. 409.]

Contribution, Suing for—Unpaid Calls—Condition Precedent.]—On the winding-up of a mining company, certain calls previously made remained unpaid, and the official agent sued the holder of the shares, on which the calls were unpaid, for contribution. Sec. 36 of the Act No. 228 provides that no contributions shall be recovered by the official agent exceeding the amount unpaid on shares. Held that suing for the unpaid calls was not a condition precedent to suing for contribution; that the company being in liquidation, an action for calls would be improper; that it was impossible that defendant could be vexed by a second action for calls; and that the official agent might recover the amount unpaid as for contribution. Simpson v. Hunt, 2 V.R. (L.,) 54; 2 A.J.R., 44.

[Compare Secs. 90, 94, and 95 of Act No. 409.]

Suit by Official Agent for Contribution—Title to Sue.]—Where an official agent of a mining company incorporated under the "Mining Companies Act" (No. 228), who was appointed under a winding-up order made under the "Amending Act" (No. 324,) Sec. 6, sued for contribution and did not expressly allege that the company was registered under the Act No. 228, Held, on demurrer, that such an allegation was not necessary. Hasker v. Schlesinger, 4 A.J.R., 186.

Settling List of Contributories — Objection to Winding-up Order—Act No. 409, Sec. 97.]—On an application to settle the list of contributories under Sec. 97 by the liquidator of a mining company, an order to wind-up which has been made, the judge ought not to entertain objections to the validity of the order for winding-up. Regina v. Trench, ex parte McDougal, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 309; 2 A.L.T., 60; sub nom. Ex parte McDougal.

Notice to Contributories—Act No. 409, Secs. 96-99.]—Although Sec. 99 as compared with Secs. 96-98 seems to require contributories to pay on a past day and before list of contributories has been settled, yet if the contributory has had reasonable notice he must pay. The list of contributories was advertised under Sec. 96 on 16th September, and the order for payment under Sec. 98 was made 18th October. On 19th October, notice was served upon the contributory (H.) requiring him to pay within ten days after 16th September in accordance with the provisions of Sec. 99. On 29th October the liquidator applied to a magistrate for a distress warrant, which was refused. Held that H. having had a longer notice than that prescribed by the Act was liable, and rule absolute for a mandamus to compel issue of distress warrant granted. Regina v. Cogdon, ex parte Hasker, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 88.

Suit for Contribution—No Set-off.]—W. was sued by B., the official agent for contribution, and set-off a promissory note for £205 due to him by the company and unpaid. Semble that there could be no set-off under Act No. 228, and Held that even if there could be the justices had no jurisdiction in the matter of a set-off for £205. Wynne v. Barnard, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 35.

[See Secs. 100 and 101 of Act No. 409.]

Who may Sue for.]—The official agent of mining company registered under the Act No. 209 is the proper person to sue for calls due on shares when the company is being wound up, and he may recover summarily before justices. In re Mackenzie, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 135.

Suing for Calls.]—A mining company which has been wound up before the date of a summons requiring a shareholder to pay calls, cannot be made plaintiff in the summons Regina v. Gaunt, ex parte Turner, 2 A.J.R., 106.

Suing for Calls—"Mining Companies Statute 1871" (No. 409), Sec. 105]—A mining company in course of being wound up under the "Mining Companies Statute 1871" cannot sue for calls. The proper person to sue for such calls is, by virtue of Sec. 105 of the Statute, the official liquidator. Great Northern Coy. v. Maughan, 4 A.J.R., 161.

Suing for—Limitation—11 and 12 Vict. Cap. xliii., Sec. 11.]—An order was made, under 18 Vict. No. 42, Sec. 14, to wind up a mining company, and the person appointed to wind up the company sued the shareholders summarily before justices for calls. An objection was raised that the limitation of six months in "Jervis' Act" (11 and 12 Vict. cap. xliii.,) Sec. 11, applied, and that the complaint upon which the summons was founded, not having been made within six calendar months from the time when the calls became due, the calls could not be recovered summarily before justices. Held (dissentiente Molesworth, J.,) that the calls sued for were substantially the same thing and might have been recovered in the same summary manner by the manager of the company during its existence, and therefore that the period of limitation (six months) which began against the manager ran on against the person appointed to wind up, and that the latter could not sue after the former

[But see Sec. 90 of Act No. 409.]

Recovery of Calls—Liquidator—"Mining Companies Act 1871" (No. 409), Secs. 52, 90.]—Upon the winding-up of a mining company registered under the Act No. 228, the official liquidator may, under Sec. 90 of the "Mining Companies Act 1871," recover in a County Court calls made by the company before winding up in the same manner as the manager of the company might have done had the company continued, and he is not subject to the limitation imposed on the latter by Sec. 52 of the latter Act, of suing within fourteen days after the call is made. Hasker v. Bride, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 460.

Payment of Calls cannot be Enforced in Equity.]—In a suit by the official agent of a company seeking to recover calls due on shares in the names of the directors and manager, or in those of their nominees, Held that the payment of calls could not be enforced in a suit in Equity. Reeves v. Croyle, 2 V.R. (E.,) 42, 48; 2 A J.R., 13.

Enforcement of Payment of Calls Recovered by a Company before it was Wound Up.]—A company obtained a judgment in 1869 for calls, in 1870 it was wound up, and an official agent appointed. Judgment was signed, and execution issued in 1871, but there was no entry of a suggestion of the appointment of the official agent. Held that the omission was fatal, and that the execution should be set aside. Barfold Estate G.M. Coy. v. Davies, 2 V.R. (L.,) 154; 2 A.J.R., 97.

Where a shareholder has paid certain calls to the directors he cannot be compelled to pay them a second time to the official agent. Reeves v. Brown, ante column 159.

MISTAKE.

Concurrent Jurisdiction of Equity.]—M. and Y. being in partnership, agreed to divide their land on the assumption that M.'s portion was worth £700 more than Y.'s, and that Y. should in the division of assets, get the whole benefit of this excess. The portions were valued, and M.'s portion appeared to be worth £655 10s. more than Y.'s. Y. purchased from M. part of his share for £461, and on the deed of partition being executed, M. paid to Y. the balance of the £655 10s. On suit by M. to have the mistake rectified, and offering to take back the land conveyed to Y. upon a proper adjustment, Held, on demurrer to the bill, that a court of law could not do justice to the parties, and that it was a proper question of mistake in which Courts of Equity had concurrent jurisdiction. Affirmed on appeal, chiefly on the ground of M.'s lien on the overpaid purchase-money. Manson v. Yeo, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 155, 187, 189.

Relief against, when Granted.]—Equity only interferes in a case of mistake where two parties acting together are honest or each believes the other to be so. In re Gipps Land Steam Navigation Coy., ex parte Chuck; 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 141.

Relief against, when Granted.]—At an auction sale B. purchased lot No. 139, and also lot No. 140; but, at the time of sale, agreed to let P. have lot No. 140. The clerk, by mistake, drew up memos. of agreement giving P. lot 139, and B. lot 140, and conveyances were prepared accordingly. B. entered into possession of lot No. 139 and built upon it, and P. entered into possession of lot 140. Afterwards P. conveyed by deed lot No. 139 to two purchasers, one of whom took possession of the corresponding portion in No. 140 and B. similarly sold a house on lot No. 139 to a purchaser, but the conveyance was of a portion of lot No. 140. B.'s vendee sued P.'s vendee to have the conveyances rectified and ejectments restrained. Held that notwithstanding the want of privity the plaintiffs were entitled to relief on the ground of mistake, and that plaintiffs were entitled to their proper lot, No. 139, upon showing title to and conveying lot No. 140 to the defendants. Sutherland v. Peel, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 18.

Relief against, when Granted.]—L. was in occupation of a residence area under the Ballarat Bye-laws, which in December, 1865, the defendant applied to have put up for sale. L. transferred to W. in February, 1866. In July, 1866, the land was advertised for sale in the Government Gazette, the value of the improvements being stated at £50, that being their value at a valuation made in February; but W. had, in the meantime, in ignorance of the proceedings to sell the land by the Government, spent £400 in improvements. The defendant bought the land in August, 1866, at the upset price. He paid this at once, and also £50 for the improvements, and obtained the Crown grant. On the evidence, it appeared that the defendant and the Crown were ignorant of the increased improvements, both thinking the improvements were worth £50. On a bill and information by the Attorney-General against the defendant, praying that the sale and the grant to the defendant purchaser might be set aside on the ground of mistake, Held that the sale was made and the grant issued on a mutual mistake, and the sale and the grant ordered to be set aside. Semble, that the Crown is entitled by information to redress injuries to others, as well as to itself from the wrongful consequence of its own mistakes. Attorney-General v. Belson, 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 57.

Relief against, when Granted.]—Plaintiff having two estates, 6A and 1B, and intending to sell 1B; by mistake the other was put up for sale, and the defendant, knowing it to be the most valuable, purchased it. He did not take possession of it, but asserted his rights to timber removed from the other estate, and subsequently his conduct was not straightforward. Upon bill by plaintiff seeking a reconveyance of the estate, and containing an offer to convey all the other to the defendant, Held, per Molesworth, J., that there was no mutual mistake, but that plaintiff was entitled to the reconveyance upon paying defendant his purchase-money with interest at 8 per cent., and his costs of suit. Upon appeal by plaintiff, appeal dismissed without costs. Ashley v. Cook, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 204; 2 A.L.T., 2, 50.

In Issue of Crown Grant.]—Where concealment or mistake as to the issuing of a Crown grant is alleged in the pleading, it should have reference to the mind of the Governor himself, and he, personally, should be described as deceived or mistaken. S. made an application to purchase Crown land, which was refused on the ground that it was auriferous; H. then applied for a mining lease, and a notification of the intention to grant it was published. A company, formed with H.'s consent, commenced to work the land, and afterwards S., knowing this, renewed his application to purchase, which was granted by the Crown Land department in ignorance of the application for the lease. On information by the Attorney-General setting forth the facts, and seeking to set aside the Crown grant as issued to S. in mistake, a demurrer was allowed. Attorney-General v. Sanderson, 1 V.R. (E.,) 18; 1 A.J.R., 21.

MONEY CLAIMS.

Action for—Where it will not Lie.]—An action for money lent will not lie for money lent by one player to another for the purpose of gambling, though it be admitted that the game was not an illegal one. Ritchie v. Eckroyd, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 98.

(2) Money Had and Received.

Action-at-Law against Trustee who has Appropriated Trust Money to Use of Cestui que Trust.]—Y. paid money to G., his attorney, to be divided among Y.'s creditors, who should sign a composition deed. F., a creditor, did not sign, but applied to Y. for payment of a dividend under the deed. Y. told G. to do so. G. did not pay. Y. then applied to G. for an advance, and G. said, "There is F.'s money; it would not be right to give that;" and refused to give it on the ground that he was a trustee for F. F. brought an action for money had and received against G. The County Court Judge refused to nonsuit, and entered a verdict for plaintiff. Held, on appeal, that G. had in fact appropriated this money for the use of his cestui que trust, and he could be sued at law. Appeal dismissed. Gresson v. Foster, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 187.

Against a Warden—Money Paid in "to Abide Event of Appeal."]—M. and others were sued by B. and others for a mining encroachment before the defendant as warden. The defendant decided in favour of B., and ordered certain sums to be paid. M. gave notice of appeal, and on the same day B. issued an execution, and some of M.'s goods were seized under it, along with the mine. M. then went to the warden's clerk and paid into court a sum of £150 to stay the execution, and received a receipt from the clerk. Execution was then withdrawn from the mine, and from M.'s individual property. The appeal was allowed as to M., but dismissed as to others, and the warden made an order for payment out of court of the £150 to B. and others. M. sued the warden for money had and received, and on an account stated. Held that M. was not entitled to succeed, the £150 being paid in "to abide the event of the appeal," and the inference being that M. and the others went together to take common luck in the appeal, and if B. succeeded against any of M.'s party he was entitled to the money. Morganti v. Bull, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 134.

For Illegal Purpose—Payment of a Larger Dividend to One Creditor than to the Others.]—At a meeting of creditors of a firm of L. and H., it was arranged that H. should be allowed to purchase back the estate by a composition of 8s. in the £. The defendant bank, as creditors, refused to assent unless H. should pay them 15s. in the £. H. consented to this, and gave the bank bills at 12 months, D. becoming surety. D., to secure himself, obtained an absolute conveyance of some of H.'s land. H. paid the bills, obtained a reconveyance from D. and then sued the bank for the amount of the bills. Held that if H. had paid the amount into a bank, he would be entitled to a verdict, he would not have been in pari delicto with the defendant bank, but having paid the bills without communicating with D. and without pressure was not entitled to the verdict. Rule absolute for a nonsuit. Harris v. National Bank, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 261; N.C. 72.

Action by Cestui que Trust against Trustee—Trusts not Closed.]—In an action by a cestui que trust, who had obtained advances from his trustees, and had executed a deed assigning to them his interest in monies coming to him under the trusts, upon trust to repay themselves, and also to pay any prior encumbrances, and to pay the balance to him, the cestui que trust put in the deed as evidence of his claim. Held that since the action ought to have been brought on the deed, and the trusts were not closed, the plaintiff by putting in the deed and showing that the trusts were not closed, had nonsuited himself. Evans v. Nicholson; Merry v. Nicholson, 2 V.R. (L.,) 80; 2 A.J.R., 59.

Action by Receiver in an Equity Suit.]—An administratrix who had settled her share of an intestate's estate by a marriage settlement, deposited large sums belonging to the estate at interest in a bank, and obtained advances on the security of her share. In a suit in connection with the intestate's estate a receiver was appointed of the estate; but the administratrix never drew out the money from the account of the estate, nor handed it to the receiver, who did not, consequently, formally re-deposit such money, but the money was treated as the money of the receiver, and a large portion of it was transferred to his account, and the receiver's account was overdrawn to the extent of a portion transferred to a suspense account. The bank subsequently claimed a lien on the residue for the overdraft. The receiver sued the bank for money had and received. Held that the transfer by the bank, together with certain letters which passed between the bank and the other parties, were sufficient to fulfil in this case the requirements of this form of action, viz., an ascertained debt due by the administratrix to the receiver, an equal or larger debt due to the administratrix by the bank, and an agreement that the bank should be the receiver's debtor, instead of that of the administratrix; that there was no quasi estoppel preventing the bank from denying that it held to the use of the receiver; and that the bank was entitled to charge bank interest on the receiver's overdraft, though at a greater rate than it allowed on the deposit. Ware v. London Chartered Bank, 2 A.J.R., 70.

When Maintainable.]—R. applied to K. for a loan, and K., not being in funds, drew an accommodation bill on R., and, in order to enable him to discount the bill, he handed R. certain shares to be deposited with the person who would advance the money. L. discounted the bill for R., who deposited the shares with him as security not only for that advance, but also, in violation of the agreement with K., to cover any other bills L. might discount for R. The bill was twice renewed, and during the currency of the last renewed bill, L. discounted two drafts for R. at his request, which were dishonoured. L. sold the shares and appropriated part of the proceeds to pay the drafts, and retained the balance till the bill became due, when he sued K. for the difference between the balance of the proceeds of the shares and the amount of the bill. K. obtained leave to appear, but took no further steps, and eventually paid the difference. K. then discovered how L. had dealt with the shares, and sued for trover and conversion, with a count for money had and received, and a verdict was returned on the first count for L., since K. had not proved a right of property or possession at the time, not having offered to redeem; but on the second count K. recovered damages. On rule nisi to reduce damages, Held that K. was not seeking to recover money voluntarily paid, and was not bound in the action on the bill to plead payment to the extent of the proceeds of the securities, since that would have been to recognise and condone the improper conversion by L., and that the action for money had and received was maintainable, and rule discharged. King v. Levinger, 2 A.J.R., 113.

Clerk of Petty Sessions—Excessive Fees.]—Where M., a clerk of Petty Sessions, had acted tortiously in receiving more money as fees than he was entitled to claim, Held, reversing the Judge of the County Court, who had nonsuited the plaintiff C., who had sued M. for money had and received, that, the payment not being a voluntary one, the excess could be recovered by C., and that as the amount was very small it was unnecessary to proceed against the Crown. Cobb v. Munce, 3 A.J.R., 46.

When Maintainable—Money Paid for Illegal Purpose not Carried Out—Duress.]—A. had a claim against the Government which he was unable to get paid, and S. offered to use his influence with the Minister, in whose department the matter was, if A. would authorise him to stop £500 out of the amount to be recovered under the claim; the £500 being intended as a bribe to the Minister. A. thereupon executed a bond for the sum, and gave S. a power of attorney to draw the money from the Treasury when it should be payable. The £500 was not used as a bribe, the Minister having left office, and three years afterwards the Government recognised A.'s claim, and the money for it was voted. S., meanwhile, had lodged the power of attorney at the Treasury, and refused to allow A. to obtain the money without paying the £500, and eventually A., in order to obtain the money, paid S. the £500, and recovered a verdict for it as money had and received to his use, it having been paid under compulsion. On the rule for a nonsuit S., for the first time, raised the plea that according to A.'s own showing the money had been paid for an illegal purpose, and that the evidence did not show compulsion. Held that the money was recoverable, since the illegal purpose had not been carried out; that since S. was able, under the power of attorney and the forms of authority to receive the money in use at the Treasury, which power and forms were executed by A., to prevent A. from receiving any of his claim, the parties were not on an equal footing, and there was oppression on the part of S.; and that A. might contradict the deed which asserted that there was a debt due from him to S.; and rule for a nonsuit discharged. Armitage v. Smith, 4 A.J.R., 175.

Plea under Sec. 51 of "Police Offences Statute 1865" that contract was by way of gambling must negative every other hypothesis save that of illegality. Miller v. Harris, 1 V.R. (L.,) 91; 1 A.J.R., 83; post under PRACTICE AND PLEADING—At Law—Pleading—Plea—Generally.

When it Lies.]—B. owed S. £15, and E., S.'s trustee in insolvency, sued E. in the County Court for that sum. Before trial B. informed E. that he had a claim against S. and it was agreed that B. should pay E. £7 10s. as in full. B. then gave E. a cheque for the amount. When he gave the cheque he had funds to meet it, but before the cheque was presented he had given several other cheques, and in the result there were insufficient funds to meet the one given to E. E. without notice to B. sued him in the County Court and recovered a verdict for £15 and costs. Execution was issued but was not satisfied as B.'s goods were claimed under a bill of sale. It was then discovered that B. had funds in the bank, and a judge's order was obtained attaching the £15 and costs, and the amount was paid to E. B. sought to get it back and recovered a verdict in the County Court. On appeal, Held that B. had no cause of action and could not sue for money had and received. Ecroyd v. Bennetto, 4 A.J.R., 150.

Auctioneer—Grantor of Bill of Sale Selling in a Way that was not Authorised.]—D. granted L. a bill of sale over certain goods to secure bills of exchange which were afterwards dishonoured. The bill provided for D. retaining possession of the goods (the stock-in-trade of D.'s business), and selling the goods in the ordinary course of business, accounting to L. for the proceeds. Before the bills of exchange became due D. sent the goods to an auctioneer for sale by auction, and they were sold notwithstanding a notice from L. that he claimed the proceeds. L. sued the auctioneer for money had and received, and in trover. Held that D.'s only interest in the goods was to keep possession of them until default in payment, the property being in L.; and that the authority given to sell did not bar L.'s action, because the goods were not sold in the ordinary course of business. Verdict entered for plaintiff. Lockhart v. Gray, 5 A.J.R., 178.

Payment under Garnishee Order by Mistake.]—A party paying money under a garnishee order which has been made upon a mistake as to facts, cannot recover such money unless the order has been set aside before action brought. Partridge v. National Insurance Coy. of Australasia, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 203.

R. recovered judgment in the Supreme Court against John P. for £78 16s. 2d. One James P. held a policy of insurance from an insurance company over certain premises which had been recently burned down. R. went to the secretary of the company, asked if John P. was entitled to the sum insured, and the secretary, in mistake, replied that he was. It was then arranged that the company should consent to a garnishee order for the amount of the judgment debt, and an order was made dated 5th May, 1876. R. had in the September preceding, assigned the judgment to P. The company paid the amount of the judgment to their solicitors, who paid it, less the garnishee's costs, to R.'s attorney, who paid to P., after deducting his own costs, a balance of £69 2s. 2d., by the direction of R. On 10th May it was discovered that James P., and not John P., was the person insured; and on 17th June a summons was issued to set aside the order, which was rescinded on 22nd June. The company had, however, on 19th May, sued P. for the money paid them under the garnishee order, and recovered a verdict. P. appealed on the ground that they should have been nonsuited, since the money had been paid under a judgment of the Supreme Court, and there was no privity between P. and the company. Held that there was privity between the parties, since P. stood in the same position as R.; but that the garnishee order being still in existence at the time the company sued formed a bar to the suit, since it assumed that the company had money liable to satisfy the judgment, and it was not competent for the company to deny the truth of the assumption till they took steps to have the order set aside; and appeal allowed. Ibid.

When Maintainable—Over-payment by Mistake.]—A shire owed K. a debt, and by inadvertence the shire secretary wrote out a cheque for more than the sum, and K. received it, and without examining it gave it to B. to cash, and B. gave him only the amount for which the cheque was intended to be drawn. Four months afterwards the shire discovered the error and sued K. for the balance for money had and received and for money paid. The jury found that K. had received only what was due to him, but had taken the cheque as cash. Held that the shire could recover from K. Shire of Rutherglen v. Kelly, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 119.

By Mistake—Purchaser giving too High a Price.]—A purchaser, who is misled by an erroneous statement by the vendor as to the total cost of goods bought by him into giving a higher price than he otherwise would, may recover the difference between the two prices in an action for money had and received, although he may have had before him materials from which the correct total cost of the goods could be computed. Grimwood v. Smith, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 433.

Money Entrusted to Defendants to Pay a Dividend—Revocation of Authority before Payment.]—The directors of a company declared a dividend and placed the amount necessary to pay it to the defendant's credit upon trust to pay the dividend. Before payment, the company, in general meeting, rescinded the resolution to pay a dividend, although the dividend had been advertised. Held that the company was entitled, on counts for money had and received, to repayment of the amount, and that a promise by one or two of the defendants to pay dividends to some of the shareholders on a condition which was not performed was ineffectual as a defence. United Hand and Band Coy. v. M'Iver, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 471.

Sub-tenant—Landlord—Distress.]—Wherever a plaintiff, in consequence of a dealing with the defendant, has been forced to pay a debt for which the defendant was primarily liable, the money so paid is money paid for the defendant's use. T., a landlord, leased land to E. for five years. E. subleased to N. during the term for the remainder of the term. E.'s rent being in arrear, T. distrained on N.'s sheep and sold them to N., and the bailiff also sued N. on a promissory note given for the rent, which N. paid. Held that the money paid being the plaintiff's (N.), it was immaterial whether it was paid in purchase of the goods, or merely to release and get them back, and the plaintiff was entitled to sue E. for the money so paid as money paid to his use. Noyes v. Ellis, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 307.

One partner cannot recover as against another for money paid to his use, but only on an account stated and settled, when the sum due has actually been ascertained, and one of the partners has promised to pay that sum to the other. Perkins v. Cherry, 3 A.J.R., 51; see S.C. post under SET-OFF.

When Maintainable—Consideration for Executed Contract.]—C. verbally promised S. in consideration of £600, that he would not lodge a caveat against the bringing of certain land under the "Transfer of Land Statute," that he would assist S. in obtaining a certificate of title, and would give a transfer of his interest. C. carried out the contract as far as he could, the land was bought under the Act, an increased contribution being made to the guarantee fund, and it was agreed that £50 should be deducted from the sum to be paid to C. Held that though C. could not recover on the agreement, since it was not in writing, he could maintain his action upon an account stated for the amount of the consideration. Coker v. Spence, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 273.

And see Perkins v. Cherry, ubi supra.

Award—Submission by a Chairman of a Board in his Individual Name.]—A matter in dispute between W. and a road board was submitted to arbitration, and the deed was executed by E., the chairman of the board, under his signature of E.E. An award was made in favour of W., and E. was ordered to pay certain moneys. The Judge of the County Court, in an action for money due on the award and on an account stated, refused a nonsuit which was moved for on the ground that the defendant E. was not personally liable since he had executed the agreement to refer as chairman of the board. Held, on appeal, that E. had made himself personally liable for the debt of another, and he was rightly sued in his individual capacity. Appeal dismissed. English v. White, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 14.

MORTGAGE.

I. CONTRACTS OF MORTGAGE.

What is a Mortgage.]—Where an owner in fee (A.) borrowed money on the property as security from H., and it was agreed that H. should take a conveyance to himself, and that A. should pay him a certain rent, being interest on the advance at the rate of 10 per cent., and that H. should have the produce of the land until the amount and interest was paid off; and H. gave A. a lease for five years at the fixed rent, with an option of purchase at the end of the term on payment of the advance, Held that this was a mortgage, and that A. was entitled to redeem during the term. Murphy v. Mitchell, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 194.

Selection under "Land Act 1865" (No. 237,) Sec. 42—"Land Act 1869" (No. 360,) Sec. 31—Decision in another Suit.]—M. selected land under Act No. 237, Sec. 42; improved it, and was entitled to purchase from Crown on preferential terms under Sec. 31 of Act No. 360. M. owed money to O., and a fi. fa. being issued against him, H. advanced the money to M. to pay off O., M. authorising sheriff to sell the land to H. for the money he had advanced, which was done. M. received further advances from H., and took a lease from him at a rent as a means of providing for interest. H. afterwards got the Crown grant issued to him. After this M.'s interest was sold under a fi. fa., held by another person, to B., and B. brought a suit—B. v. H.—to redeem H., which was dismissed. B. afterwards assigned his interest to M. Held that the transaction between M. and H. was a mortgage, and that M. was entitled to redeem, the suit B. v. H. being no obstacle, as the subsequent assignment B. to M. removed what would be a bar to M. Ibid.

"Land Acts" (No. 237,) Sec. 42—No. 360, Sec. 31—Equitable Mortgage.]—A., a licensee under Act No. 237, Sec. 42, had an execution issued against him, and a friend of his, B., verbally agreed to advance him the amount due on condition of A. letting sheriff sell the land to B. for that amount, and that Crown grant should issue to B. as a security. B., having obtained the grant, died shortly afterwards. A.'s interest and right in the lease were afterwards sold to C. under another execution. Suit by C. against B.'s executors to redeem. Held, affirming County Court judge, that inasmuch as the plaint alleged no facts to show that under the "Land Acts" the Crown grant should be deemed a graft upon the license, the contract was void under the "Statute of Frauds," that there could be no mortgage of an estate not then in existence, and there could be no equitable mortgage, as A. had not then the Crown grant. Harrison v. Murphy, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 105.

Parties to Contract—Mortgagors.] — A mortgagee cannot be allowed to set up two different persons as mortgagors (by different transactions) of the same property. London and Australian Agency Coy., Limited, v. Duff, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 19, 28, 29.

Amount and Extent of Security—Mortgage of Station—Right to Discounts—Sums Paid for Rent and Management.]—F. mortgaged a station to his general mercantile agents to secure payment of a bill of exchange for a loan. The bill was renewed several times, but eventually the mortgagees had to take it up, and F. assigned his estate for the benefit of his creditors. The mortgagees then sold the station. At each renewal the mortgagees discounted the bill at a bank and charged F. with the discount in their periodical accounts as his agents. A second mortgagee of F. obtained a decree for account, and the Master's report allowing these charges for interest was confirmed. The mortgage also empowered the first mortgagees to pay, on the default of the mortgagor, all necessary sums for keeping up the license of the station, and for all licenses and penalties under the "Scab Act." They paid rent, fees for scab licenses, and sums for sheepwash, though F. remained in possession and management. The Master allowed these payments in his report and the report was confirmed. Upon appeal to the Privy Council, Held, that the charges for interest were rightly allowed; that, as the charges for discount had not been paid by F., they were not a satisfaction of the interest; that these charges did not imply that the first mortgagees had paid such discounts as agents for F. on his personal security, and could only prove against his estate for the amounts; that the entries of sums received from F. were appropriated to other specified advances; that the charges for rent and scab licenses were properly allowed, and were not to be taken as paid by the first mortgagees merely as agents for F.; but that the sums for sheepwash were not within the provisions of the mortgage, and should be disallowed, and as to these sums the decree of the Supreme Court was varied. Fenton v. Blackwood, 2 A.J.R., 99; on appeal, Ibid, 124.

On appeal to the Privy Council, 5 A.J.R., 39; 5 L.R., P.C., 167; 22 W.R., 562.

Mortgage or Sale.]—M., being in embarrassed circumstances, executed a conveyance purporting to be an absolute bill of sale of certain premises to E., the alleged consideration being certain overdue bills and an advance in cash, there being at the time a mortgage on the land. The balance of testimony on the whole was, that the consideration was inadequate. The visible possession of the property remained unchanged, M. continuing to live on part of the property and collecting the rents of the residue. After his insolvency M. began to give receipts for rent, as agent of E.; but no accounts rendered were proved between them. On suit by the official assignee of M., praying that the conveyance should be set aside or should be declared a mortgage, Held that the conveyance was a mortgage. Halfey v. Egan, 4 A.J.R., 147.

Vivum Vadium—Absolute Sale by Plaintiff of Equity of Redemption by Letters of Defendant to be Regarded and Operate as a Second Mortgage—Redemption.] — The plaintiff, who had mortgaged his property to B., wished for a further advance from the defendant, and the defendant would not advance upon a second mortgage. Plaintiff therefore sold the equity of redemption absolutely to defendant, defendant to have possession, and out of the rents to keep down the interest on the first mortgage, which he was to pay off, and pay off the further advance and interest thereon, defendant giving a letter admitting the transaction to be a mortgage. On the defendant paying off the money due to B. he wrote a letter to plaintiff undertaking to sell and convey the property to plaintiff on receiving the amount due within twelve months, otherwise the plaintiff was to forfeit his interest in the property. The plaintiff answered by letter, undertaking merely to hand over the proceeds of another property towards payment of the purchase-money as per defendant's last letter, but in no other respect adopting the terms of defendant's letter. On a bill by plaintiff for redemption, Held by Molesworth, J., and affirmed, that the original transaction placed the defendant in the position of creditor holding a vivum vadium redeemable without limit of time; that the two letters were a sufficient compliance with the "Statute of Frauds," but they were open to objection because of the uncertainty as to who was entitled to the mesne rents, and that if the defendant were to be entitled without accounting, such an arrangement would be oppressive; that this arrangement, arrived at by the letters, was not binding in its strict terms as to time, but that as the parties had no dealing for buying or selling, and considered themselves as mortgagor and mortgagee, the time fixed for redemption was no more binding than it was in the case of ordinary mortgages. Decree for redemption. Mouatt v. M'Kenzie, 5 A.J.R., 47, 147.

II. Equitable Mortgages.

Equitable Assignment—What is.]—In December, 1864, H. and A., then partners as squatters, authorised C. and M. to sell certain sheep on their behalf. C. and M. thereafter made advances to H. and A. to the extent of about £10,000. At this time a bank was pressing H. and A. for payment of a debt of £3800, and with the view of satisfying the bank C. and M. at the request of H. and A. wrote the bank manager as follows:—"Messrs. H. and A. have placed in our hands for sale 34,000 wethers. When sold they ought to realise a sum that will leave £8000 to £9000 over and above our advances. Messrs. H. and A. have asked us to hand over to you £3800 out of the proceeds of these sheep, after paying ourselves our advances and travelling expenses. We are prepared to do this on your getting from these gentlemen an order upon us to that effect." This did not satisfy the bank, and at the request of H. and A. a letter was written by C. and M. to the plaintiff as follows:—"At foot you have a copy of the letter we wrote to (the manager) of the Bank of Victoria. The bank is not satisfied with that letter, but is pressing H. on account of H. and A., to give them your acceptance instead. In event of your agreeing to do this, we hereby undertake to hand over to you £3800 out of the proceeds of these sheep, after paying ourselves our advances, with commission and interest and travelling expenses. The surplus should amount to from £8000 to £9000." In pursuance of this request and in reliance upon the promise of C. and M., the plaintiff accepted and delivered to H. four bills of exchange for £1000 each, which H. discounted, and applied the proceeds in payment of the debt to the bank, and no notice of his so doing was given to C. and M. by H. and A., or by plaintiff. Some of the sheep were sold by C. and M., who received the proceeds, and the remainder were attached in the hands of C. and M. by a writ of foreign attachment obtained by a creditor of A. No notice of this order was given to plaintiff, and it was made without his knowledge or consent. On bill by plaintiff against C. and M. seeking to establish the letter to plaintiff as an equitable assignment, and to have a specific lien upon the sheep enforced, C. and M. demurred for want of equity generally, and on the specific grounds that it did not appear that there was an equitable assignment to plaintiff of £3800, or any other part of the proceeds of the sheep, or at least any equitable assignment thereof, to which A. was a party, and that the plaintiff did not offer to redeem C. and M. Molesworth, J., allowed the demurrer, on the grounds that no order had been received from H. and A. as required by the letter to the bank; that C. and M. had received no notice of the acceptances having been given by plaintiff; and that such acceptances were not such as were requested by the letter to plaintiff, since, instead of giving one acceptance of £3800 to the bank, he gave four of £1000 each to the draft of H. alone, and that they were not directly used in the way proposed by that letter. On appeal, Held, per the Full Court, that the first letter constituted no part of the contract contained in the second; that no notice to C. and M. was, under the circumstances, required to complete plaintiff's security; and that a substantial compliance with the terms of the letter to the plaintiff had been shown by the bill, since H., as one of the principals in the matter, had authority to vary the details of the arrangement. Appeal allowed, and demurrer overruled. Williamson v. Cuningham, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 188.

Right of Mortgagee to Interest.]—Where a bank claimed to be equitable mortgagee of deeds, which the defendant alleged to be merely deposited for safe keeping, the issue was sent to a jury for trial. The jury found in favour of the bank, and upon the suit coming again before the Court to be disposed of, the bank asked for interest at 10 per cent. Held that the bank was not entitled to interest at 10 per cent.; but was only entitled to the ordinary interest, not having previously demanded interest from the mortgagor. National Bank v. Clark, 1 A.J.R., 14.

Power of Sale if Bill not Paid.]—C. was Crown grantee of certain land, and gave B. an equitable mortgage over the land to secure an advance by B. As further security C. gave B. a bill accepted by C. for the amount. The equitable mortgage recited that C. authorised B. to sell the land if the bill "payable to B. or order" was not paid. B. in default of payment sold to L. L. sued C. to recover possession. The County Court Judge nonsuited, on the ground that no bill "payable to B. or order" was produced, and that non-payment by C. of the bill accepted by him would not justify B. in selling. Held, on appeal, that the bill alluded to being the only one produced, it was to be assumed in the absence of other evidence that it was the one referred to in the mortgage. Nonsuit set aside. Lear v. Connell, 3 A.J.R., 41.

Vendee without Notice—Equitable Mortgagees of Vendor.]—The title of a bonâ fide purchaser, without notice, of goods in a bonded store, for which he obtained a transfer into his own name, on production of endorsed bonded certificates, is, in equity, to be preferred to that of mortgagees, who have only a prior equitable right, even after notice by the latter to the warehouseman. Ross v. Blackham, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 159.

Land under the "Transfer of Land Statute" may be mortgaged by way of equitable mortgage by deposit of the certificate of title. London Chartered Bank v. Hayes, 2 V.R. (E.,) 104; 2 A.J.R., 60.

There Cannot be an Equitable Mortgage by a Selector under the "Land Acts" not having the Crown Grant.]—See Harrison v. Murphy, ante column 1049.

Priority between Successive Equitable Mortgages.]—See cases post column 1054.

The proper remedy in equity of an equitable mortgagee is a sale, and not a foreclosure. Bank of Victoria v. Cozens, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 93; White v. Hunter, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 178, 185.

III. Transfer and Assignment.

Equitable Mortgage—Registered Security.]—Title deeds were deposited by H. with C., by way of equitable mortgage, with a memorandum duly registered acknowledging that this deposit was made to secure payment of moneys lent. W., at H.'s request, paid off C., and took over the deeds as security for his advance without any memorandum. Held that the transaction did not operate as an assignment of the benefit of the memorandum as a registered security. White v. Hunter, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 178.

Breach of Trust—Notice through a Solicitor Employed by both Parties.]—See Chomley v. Firebrace, 5 V.L.R. (E.) 57, under Transfer of Land (Statutory)—Transfers.

Quære.—Where a mortgage purports to be for money lent, whether the assignee of a mortgage could be affected by notice that it was for the purchase-money, and that the mortgagee had no title. Dallimore v. Oriental Bank, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 13.

IV. Several and Successive Mortgages.

Priority — Equitable Mortgage — Subsequent Equitable Mortgage—Registration of First.]—H. deposited with a bank title deeds as a security for a balance then due, and to cover further advances, and executed a memo. to that effect. Afterwards the bank voluntarily parted with the deeds to enable H. to raise money upon them (and being informed of H.'s intention.) H. afterwards deposited them with plaintiff's solicitor to secure an advance of £600, neither the plaintiff or his solicitor knowing of the equitable mortgage to the bank. After hearing of this advance, the bank then registered their memo. The plaintiff then brought a suit against the representatives of H. and the bank, claiming priority in respect of his mortgage. Held that the maxim "Qui prior est tempore potior est jure" only applies when both equitable mortgagees are deceived; that the bank was not deceived; and that plaintiff was entitled to the relief he sought. Decree made for immediate sale on consent of all parties sui juris. Henty v. Hodgson, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 250.

Legal Mortgage—Registration—Priority.]—G., knowing that title deeds of C. were in W.'s hands, but not that they were held as security, and without inquiry of W., subsequently made advances to C., and took a legal mortgage of the lands comprised in the deeds, which mortgage was duly registered. Held that G.'s registration did not give him priority over W.; and as G. was aware of the deposit with W. he could not claim as a purchaser for value without notice. White v. Hunter, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 178.

See S.C. under Deed, ante column 355, and as to priority dependent on registration see Fraser v. Australian Trust Coy., columns 355, 356.

Mortgages of Several Properties—Second Mortgage to Different Persons—Principle of Division.]—A. mortgaged X to B.; B. sub-mortgaged X and mortgaged Y to C. to secure £40,000; B. then made a second submortgage of X to D. to secure £30,000, and a second mortgage of Y to E. to secure £8000. C. became mortgagee in possession of X and received certain payments out of sale of stock, and sold X, there being from the proceeds a surplus after paying his debt; and sold Y to D. for £18,000. In a suit for adjustment of the rights of the mortgagees, Held that C. should be paid his debt out of X and Y rateably according to their respective values, and that surplus of the proceeds of each should be paid to D. and E. respectively. White v. London Chartered Bank of Australia, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 33.

Consolidation—Land under "Transfer of Land Statute" (No. 301) — Land not under Act.]—L., being registered as proprietor of land under No. 301, mortgaged it to the defendant, and by several mesne transfers the land became vested in the plaintiff as registered proprietor subject to the mortgage. The defendants held another mortgage from L. over land not under the Statute and claimed to consolidate the two mortgages. Held that a mortgage of land under No. 301 cannot be consolidated with a mortgage of land not under the Act. Greig v. Watson, 7 V.L.R (E.,) 79; 3 A.L.T., 13.

VI. Rights and Liabilities of Mortgagors and Persons Claiming through them.

Purchase of Equity of Redemption—Effect of, as to Indemnifying Mortgagor.]—There is no implied contract for the purchaser of an equity of redemption at a sheriff's sale to indemnify the mortgagee (sic! sed quære "mortgagor"!) against the mortgage debt. The defendant bank had made advances to a company secured by deposit by way of equitable mortgage of the company's lease, and also by promissory notes given by plaintiffs as sureties for the company. The bank recovered judgment against the company and at a sheriff's sale under execution of the judgment purchased through a trustee for the bank the lease of the company's land, subject to the lien of the bank. On a motion to restrain the bank from levying execution on a judgment recovered in an action on the promissory notes, Held that the principle of an implied contract for indemnity could not be extended to the purchaser of an equity of redemption at a sale under an execution. Robertson v. Bank of Victoria, 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 85.

Mortgage of Equity of Redemption—Suit to Set Aside—Misrepresentation—Onus Probandi.]—In a suit by a mortgagor (lately an insolvent) to set aside on the ground of misrepresentation or mutual mistake a release by the official assignee of the mortgagor's equity of redemption, for accounts against the mortgagees, and in effect to have the benefit of a subsequent resale by the releasee's purchaser, it appeared that the official assignee had in the release admitted the truth of the representations made to him, and that the mortgagee had thereafter taken a conveyance from him of all the estate vested in him under the insolvency. Held that the onus probandi was upon the mortgagor, who was primâ facie bound by the admission under seal of his vendor, the assignee, to prove the falsehood of the representations, and not upon the mortgagees to establish their truth. Brougham v. Melbourne Banking Corporation, L.R. 7 Ap. Cas., 307: overruling Molesworth, J., 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 214.

Release of Equity of Redemption.]—Where a mortgagor, in consideration of the mortgage debt, releases the equity of redemption to the mortgagee, the parties should be regarded, until the contrary is shown by the party impeaching the release, as on the ordinary footing of vendor and purchaser. Brougham v. Melbourne Banking Corporation, L.R., 7 Ap. Cas., 307.

Right of Mortgagor to Set Asids Release of Equity of Redemption.]—Where a release of an equity of redemption was made by the official assignee of an insolvent mortgagor, who subsequently, after obtaining his certificate, obtained from the assignee a conveyance of all his interest in the insolvent estate—Held, that assuming the release to be voidable, an equity to set it aside was an equitable interest in the property to which it related, and therefore was part of the estate vested in the official assignee. The mortgagor, therefore, under his conveyance from the official assignee, obtained a locus standi to maintain the suit. Brougham v. Melbourne Banking Corporation, L.R., 7 Ap. Cas. 307, confirming Molesworth, J., 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 214.

Action by Mortgagor—Consent of Mortgagee—Transfer of Land Statute, Sec. 94.]—In an action of ejectment by a mortgagor of land against the representative of his mortgagor, the objection that no consent of the plaintiff's mortgagee to the bringing of the ejectment, as required by Sec. 94 of the "Transfer of Land Statute," has been stated or proved may be cured by amendment, and cannot therefore be taken on appeal. Such an objection, moreover, is not one of which the Judge of the County Court is bound to take notice unless raised by the parties. Griffin v. Dunn, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 419.

Mortgagor in Possession after Default.]—A mortgagor in possession after default is a tenant at sufferance and not a tenant at will. Ibid.

Mortgagor of Mining Claim—Right to have Rent Paid to Preserve the Lease.]—A mortgagee of a mining leasehold, in possession, is bound to pay the rent to save mortgage leasehold from forfeiture, being entitled to charge the mortgagor therewith. If the property be not worth the rent he should at all events give it up to the mortgagor. Where, therefore, such a mortgagee paid the rent for some time, and after decree for redemption wrote to the mortgagor for advice as to whether he should continue to pay the rent or not, and the mortgagor having declined to advise the mortgagee, who was at the time largely overpaid, discontinued to pay the rent, and the lease became thereby forfeited. Held per Molesworth, J., affirmed upon appeal, that the mortgagee was liable to make good to the mortgagor the value of the lease at the date of forfeiture. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy. v. National Bank of Australasia, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 60. On appeal, Ibid, 198; 1 A.L.T., 181.

Action by Transferee of Mortgagor for Use and Occupation—Mortgagee not in Possession—Act No. 301, Secs. 93, 94.]—See Louch v. Ball, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 157; 1 A.L.T., 10, under Transfer of Land (Statutory)—Mortgages.

Right to Title Deeds.]—When mortgage-money is due, an offer by the mortgagor to pay it, if the mortgagee will first deliver up the title deeds, is not a good tender, and will give the mortgagor no right of action against the mortgagee for non-delivery of the deeds or for their loss. The mortgagor must offer absolutely, and without any condition, to pay the mortgage debt due in order to make a good tender. Armstrong v Robinson, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 17.

An action for the non-delivery of the deeds, or for their loss, will not lie at law before payment of the money due. Ibid.

Mortgagor having Redeemed when Entitled to Writ of Assistance or Habere against Tenant of Mortgagee.]—Slack v. Atkinson, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 32; 1 A.L.T., 113, 139. Post under Practice, &c.—Equity—Writs.

VII. Rights and Liabilities of Mortgagees and Persons Claiming through them.

Interest — How Accruing — Apportionment.]—Per Chapman, J.—Interest on mortgage securities is considered to accrue de die in diem, and the rule as to apportionment is not defeated by its being in fact payable half-yearly or quarterly. It is not analogous to rent, and, therefore, needs not the aid of the English Statute to render it apportionable. In re Mitchell, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 167, 171.

Right of Equitable Mortgagee to Interest—Rate when Interest not previously demanded.]—National Bank v. Clark, ante column 1052.

Interest—Agreement to Reduce Acted Upon.]—Where a mortgage is overdue, a verbal bargain between mortgagor and mortgagee to reduce the rate of interest, acted upon for some time, is binding in equity; and this applies also as between the mortgagor and the executors of a mortgagee. Lewis v. Levy, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 110.

Receipt by Executor of Part Payment of Principal.]—One of the executors of a mortgage, having reduced the rate of interest payable by the mortgagor, and having also received part payment of the principal, Held (dubitante curid) that the principal sum was in part discharged. Ibid.

Accounts—Mortgagee—Improvements.]—Where a mortgagee knows of a defect in his title, and that a sale through which he claims is unreal, and that the person entitled to redeem never acquiesced in the sale, he will not generally be entitled to be allowed for improvements, but will not be charged with income of mortgaged land so enhanced by improvement. Per Molesworth, J. Slack v. Atkinson, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 335.

But Held by Full Court on appeal, that as the person entitled to redeem had to a certain extent misled the defendant by his conduct, the defendant mortgagee was entitled to credits and allowances in respect of increased price and improvements, and that the accounts should be taken on that basis. Atkinson v. Slack, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 128.

Mortgagee in Possession—Costs of Proving Expenditure in Improvements.]—A mortgagee in possession owning land adjoining the mortgaged premises erected buildings running over both properties, a thing he was not warranted in doing. Held not entitled to his costs in the Master's office of proving the amount of expenditure in substantial improvements. Slack v. Atkinson, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 195.

Mortgagee in Possession of Mine—Expenses of Unproductive Mining.]—Where a mortgagee had mined extensively, and, as to a large part of the mining, without profit, but had mined judiciously, and to a great extent following out work commenced by mortgagor, and the decree directed that he should account as a mortgagee in possession should, in regard to wilful default, Held that he was entitled to the expenses of unproductive mining and prospecting. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy. v. National Bank of Australasia, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 173.

Power of Mortgagee in Enforcing Securities.]—A mortgagee is entitled to make the best of his securities and to enforce them in such order as he may think fit. Walpole v. Colonial Bank, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 315, 325; 6 A.L.T., 147.

And where the security was a mortgage of a policy of life assurance which was to be void in the event of the assured's suicide except to the extent of the interest of a bonâ fide assignee, provided notice was given within a certain time, Held, per Molesworth, J., and affirmed, that the mortgagee was not bound to embark in litigation with the company to recover the policy-moneys before compromising with the company; and, per the Full Court, that the mortgagee was under no liability to see that the notice required was given. Ibid, pp. 325, 334.

For facts see S.C., ante column 724.

Power of Mortgagee to Enforce Security—Administrator Pledging Assets for Purpose of Carrying on Trade with Mortgagee's Knowledge—Mortgagee Barred.]—Swan v. Seal, ante column 437.

Power of Sale—To Whom it Passes.]—Where a mortgagee dies before exercising a power of sale, such power passes to his personal and not his real representative. J.A.S. was mortgagee of certain land with a power of sale. J.A.S. died in England intestate in November, 1861. F.R.S. was devisee of the heir-at-law of J.A.S., and proved the will, and obtained administration in England to J.A.S.'s personal estate. O. was appointed agent of F.R.S. by power of attorney, inter alia, to take out administration to the estate of J.A.S. in the Australian colonies. O., without taking out administration, sold the mortgaged property to S., who obtained possession, and then sold to the defendant H. O. absconded without accounting to F.R.S. for purchase-money. The plaintiff W. obtained administration in Victoria of the personal estate of J.A.S., as attorney under power of F.R.S., in December, 1865, and, in conjunction with F.R.S., brought a suit against C., the mortgagor, for foreclosure, making H. a co-defendant in order to dispossess him and avoid his alleged title. Held that the power of sale could not be exercised by F.R.S., or his attorney under power, until taking out administration in Victoria, such power passing to the personal and not to the real representative, and that the sale by O. must be set aside, because if F.R.S. himself had sold to S. he might, on obtaining administration in Victoria, disaffirm his own acts and maintain the suit. Walduck v. Corbett, 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 48.

Power of Sale.]—Semble, that a power of sale under a mortgage deed, exercised by a sale to a trustee for the mortgagee, cannot be exercised a second time; at any rate, not without a fresh demand of payment. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy. v. National Bank of Australasia, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 206, 219.

Power of Sale—Whether it Passes to a Sub-Mortgagee.]—Quære, whether a power of sale passes to a sub-mortgagee, see Slack v. Atkinson, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 335, post column 1068.

Power of Sale — Demand — Wrongful Sale — Laches of Mortgagor.]—H., in 1874, deposited scrip of 200 mining shares held by him with the defendant bank as a security for an overdraft, constituting the manager his attorney to sell shares when default was made in moneys secured, and pay out of proceeds money secured, and hold surplus on trust for the mortgagor. Verbal requests for payment were made in January and February, 1875; and in February, 1875, the manager wrote to H. stating that shares had been sold, which was not the case, they having been transferred by a fictitious sale to a nominee of the bank. In January, 1877, the bank sold 125 shares for a large sum; and in February, 1877, plaintiff, believing that the bank still had the shares, demanded them, when the manager offered to give up the balance of the shares on payment of the amount due. The shares were subsequently sold, and the plaintiff, having in February, 1878, tendered the amount due, which was refused, in August, 1878, brought a bill for redemption, seeking to set aside sale. Held, per Molesworth, J.—(1) That the bank had not proved a sufficient demand for the payment as would warrant it in selling, even if whole number of shares had remained unsold. (2) That the bank had no right to sell unless it could in 1877 restore all the shares to the plaintiff, or until there was an adjustment of their relations as to 125 shares really sold; that mortgagor being poor was entitled to consideration, and was guilty of no laches or acquiescence so as to bar his right. Decree for payment of equivalent value of the whole number of shares with dividends, shares to be treated as of their value at the date of institution or of decree. On appeal affirmed chiefly on the ground that transfer by bank to nominee and the false statement of a sale having been made rendered the subsequent real sale invalid. Decree varied by charging bank with interest on value from February, 1878, till date of decree instead of dividends, on the ground of the plaintiff's laches. Hicks v. Commercinl Bank of Australia, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 228; 1 A.L.T., 60.

Semble, per Molesworth, J., it is not a sufficient demand for a bank official to require verbally a customer to pay his debt and talk of power of sale being exercised, unless he sends him away under the impression that the sale will be probably effected without further notice. Ibid, p. 234.

Sale under Power — Proceeds Deficient.]—A mortgagee sold under his power of sale and did not realise the whole amount of his mortgage debt, and then sued the mortgagor on the covenant to pay. Held that the mortgagee can set all his remedies in operation at once and was entitled to sue. Pattinson v. O'Mara, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 103.

Powers of Sale— Several.]—Per Molesworth, J.—Mortgagees having several powers of sale over different lands comprised in different mortgages are not authorised in exercising them in one sale. Per Williams, J.—Courts of Equity may sanction such a sale where the mortgagee clearly proves that the sale so made has been more beneficial to all parties concerned than a sale in separate lots would have been. The onus of proof is on the mortgagee. Ross v. Victorian Permanent Building Society, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 254, 265, 271; 4 A.L.T., 61.

Power of Sale—Mortgage of Land under General Law and under Act No. 301.]—A. mortgaged to a building company land under the general law, and land under the Act No. 301. The mortgagee sold the whole land as a lot and under one sale. Held, per Stawell, C.J., and Holroyd, J., that, there being a great difference in the manner of disposing of the proceeds of land mortgaged under the general law and under the Act, and the Act containing special clauses as to payment of the purchase money and as to title, the combination and selling in one sale of land subject to different mortgages some under the Act and some under the general law was improper. Ross v. Victorian Permanent Building Society, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 254, 269, 275; 4 A.L.T., 61.

Mortgage of Personalty—Notice of Default sent through Post — Mortgagee Selling Goods after Tender of Amount Due.]—M. gave S. a mortgage over goods with a proviso for redemption, S. being at liberty to sell on making a demand in writing personally or through post office, and on mortgagor failing to pay. The notice in writing never reached M., though there was evidence that it had some days prior to the sale been duly posted. S. seized the goods and sold them, but before the sale M. tendered the amount of the debt, which S. refused. M. sued S. for trespass and detinue. Held that the notice sent was sufficient, and that S. was justified in seizing the goods; that S. was not warranted in selling the goods after tender of the amount due. Verdict for defendant on first count; for plaintiff on second count. Damages £300, the value of the goods as fixed by plaintiff and not controverted. Mills v. Smith, 3 A.J.R., 111.

Mortgagee in Possession — Seizure of After-acquired Property of Mortgagor.]—D. mortgaged all the stock, &c., depasturing on a station, and his interest in the station, to P. The mortgage deed contained a clause providing for seizure by P. of all working horses, bullocks, &c., on the station, and all so found upon the station in lieu of or in addition to those at date depasturing and used thereon in default of payment. Default was made in payment, and subsequently to the default D. purchased 350 head of cattle, and put them on the station. Eight months afterwards P. entered into possession, and seized the 350 head of cattle. On suit by D.'s official assignee, Held that D. not having objected at the time of seizure, the seizure by P. completely divested the equitable title sought to be enforced, and bill dismissed. Goodman v. Power, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 96.

Subsequent Mortgagee Selling Property Previously Mortgaged to Another.]—M., owner of one share in a mining company, mortgaged it to P., to secure a loan. M. remained with the other shareholders in possession of the whole mining property. M. then, without the consent of P., joined in a mortgage with the other shareholders of all the mining property, including the share mortgaged to P., to a bank, with power of sale over the whole. The bank sold, and P. sued the bank in the County Court and recovered judgment. On appeal, Held that the judgment was wrong, it not appearing from the case that the bank had done anything whereby P. was in a worse position as a co-shareholder with the purchaser from the bank, than he would have been in as co-shareholder either with the bank or their mortgagors. Bank of Australasia v. Platt,1 W. & W. (L.,) 212.

Purchase by Mortgagee under the Power of Sale.]—A purchase by a mortgagee of mortgaged property, sold either under the power of sale or in execution of a decree against the mortgagor company (obtained collusively between the mortgagee and directors) does not operate to vest an absolute title in the mortgagee. National Bank of Australasia v. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy., L.R., 4 App. Cas. 391.

Right to Distrain for Rent on Mortgage.]—A mortgagee is not entitled to treat the mortgagor as a tenant unless there be a special provision to that effect. Where, therefore, a mortgage deed provided that the mortgagor should be a tenant-at-will to the mortgagees, and should pay rent in the shape of redemption moneys, and that the mortgagees should have power to distrain, and the covenant for quiet enjoyment was omitted, Held that the mortgagees might distrain for rent. Moore v. Lee, 2 V.R. (L.,) 4; 2 A.J.R., 16.

Costs Between Mortgagees — Mortgages of Several Properties—Second Mortgages to Different Persons—Costs of Suit between 1st and 2nd Mortgagees.]—A. mortgaged X to B.; B. sub-mortgaged X, and mortgaged Y to C.; B. then made a second sub-mortgage of X to D., and a second mortgage of Y to E. In a suit in New South Wales between C. and E. caused by B.'s misconduct, C. recovered some of his costs from E., but had to abide some of his costs. On a bill brought by D. for an adjustment of rights, Held that C. was entitled to charge as against D. all costs properly incurred in resisting the suit in New South Wales not recoverable against E. in that suit. White v. London Chartered Bank of Australia, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 33.

Insolvency of Mortgagor—Release of Estate—Right of Mortgagee to full Amount Due.]—The insolvency of the mortgagor and the subsequent release of his estate from sequestration does not extinguish the mortgage debt, but the mortgagee is entitled to claim the amount due to him on his security. Hodgson v. Young,6 A.L.T., 117.

Mortgagee in Possession—Mortgagor Agent of Mortgagee.]—R. mortgaged his estate to F. & Co. The rents of R.'s estate were reserved in wheat and sent to R. & Co., who separated the wheat into two lots, distinguishing between what was due to R. and what was that of the tenants. R. being embarrassed, and not being able to pay the instalment of the debt falling due, agreed to collect the rents as F. & Co.'s agent. One of the firm said to him, "As you are not able to pay this, I shall now require you to act as our agent in receiving the rent in money and wheat as it falls due;" and to this R. agreed, and handed in a list of what was due from tenants and his rent-roll. R. also gave evidence that he had agreed to receive the rents for F. & Co., the money as soon as received, and the wheat as soon as possible after it was received to be disposed of by F. & Co. to the best advantage; but R. did not use the word "agent" in describing himself or his firm, ou their undertaking to receive the rents for F. & Co. R. became insolvent, and his assignee took the wheat. In an action for trover by F. & Co., a verdict was returned for plaintiffs, and upon rule nisi for a new trial, Held that R. had become agent for F. & Co., and that his acts were their acts as mortgagees in possession; and that the verdict should be upheld. Flower v. Webster, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 380.

Mortgagee in Possession, Who is.]—Where a plaintiff in a redemption suit reads from his answer an admission by which it appears that the defendant collected certain rents as agent for the mortgagor, the plaintiff cannot treat him as to those rents as mortgagee in possession. Slack v. Atkinson, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 335.

Accounts by Mortgagee in Possession—Receipts by Mortgagor as Agent for Mortgagee.]—Where a bank was mortgagee in possession and the mortgagor received rents and profits as its agent in decree for an account of bank's receipts with wilful default, the bank was only charged with the mortgagor's receipts as its agent only so far as he had paid them to the bank. Dallimore v. Oriental Bank, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 13.

For facts see S.C. post columns 1067, 1068.

Mortgagee in Possession—Interest.]—A mortgagee in possession is not chargeable with interest on his receipts if, when he took possession, an arrear of interest was due to him, unless by setting up a title adverse to the mortgagor he has lost the immunities of an ordinary mortgagee. National Bank of Australasia v. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy., 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 61; L.R. 4 App. Cas. 391.

Liability of Mortgagee Exercising Power of Sale.]—A mortgagee exercising his power of sale, has some of the liabilities of a trustee. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy. v. National Bank of Australasia, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 206.

Liability of Mortgagor Exercising a Power of Sale in Contravention of Terms of "Transfer of Land Statute" as to Notice.]—The mortgagee in such a case is liable to be charged with the value of the land at the time of sale, or at the time of decree, at the mortgagor's option. M'Donald v. Rowe, 4 A.J.R., 134.

For facts see S.C. under TRANSFER OF LAND (STATUTORY)—Mortgage.

Mortgagee Selling—How far a Trustee for Mortgagor.]—Per Holroyd, J.—A mortgagee is only a trustee of the surplus purchase money when the property is sold. He sells to the best advantage to himself, and is not obliged to consult the advantage of the mortgagor so long as he keeps within the terms of his power. Ross v. Victorian Permanent Building Society, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) at p. 273; 4 A.L.T., 17, 61.

Mortgagee in Possession—Receipts.]—A mortgagee is accountable, not merely for his actual receipts whilst in possession of the mortgaged property, but also for whatever is received by those to whom he transfers possession under an arrangement inoperative to transfer title, and in derogation of the rights of the mortgagor. National Bank of Australasia v. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy., L.R. 4 Ap. Cas. 391.

Sale by Mortgagee—Liability of Mortgagee.]—A mortgagee is chargeable with the full value of the mortgaged property sold, if from want of due care and diligence, it has been sold at an under value. National Bank of Australasia v. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy., 2 V.L.R. (E..) 206; 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 61, 70; L.R., 4 Ap. Cas. 391.

Mortgagee in Possession—Redemption—Accounts—Wilful Default.]—By a decree made 18th May, 1874 (reported 5 A.J.R., 47) the plaintiff was declared entitled to redeem a house and premises, and ordinary mortgage account was directed with wilful default. Evidence was given to show that an adjoining house of similar nature brought during the same period higher rents than those received by mortgagee. The Master surcharged the defendant with half the difference received from two houses respectively. On exceptions to report, Held that Master was right in charging defendant with additional sums as to rent he might have received before October, 1863, at which time defendant had regarded himself as absolute owner, but he should not be so charged after that date. On case coming on for further directions as to costs, Held that, where a mortgagee claiming to be absolute owner resisted the right to redeem and failed, the plaintiff mortgagor was entitled to his costs down to and inclusive of original hearing, and defendant mortgagee entitled to his costs of the account and hearing on further directions. Mouatt v. Mackenzie, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 73.

Accounts—Sale by Mortgagees—Bill for Account during Currency of Promissory Note.]—The defendants (mortgagees) sold under a power of sale contained in their mortgage deed, partly for cash, and partly by means of promissory notes. F., to whom the equity of redemption had been assigned during the currency of two of the promissory notes, filed a bill for an account and payment to him of any surplus, alleging in the bill that the money received and the amount of the current notes would exceed the money owing on the mortgage security. Held, on demurrer, that the bill was premature and that F. had no equity, the bill not being framed as a bill of discovery to protect future rights, and not alleging that the plaintiff had offered to pay what might be due to the mortgagees. Fenton v. Blackwood, 1 V.R. (E.,) 124; 1 A.J.R., 104.

Account—Mortgagee Dealing with Property so as to Lessen its Value.]—B. and others mortgaged certain station property to C., and mortgagors and mortgagee joined in selling the mortgaged property to a company, and the purchase-money was paid partly in cash, partly in debentures, and partly in paid-up shares, which were all retained by the mortgagee as security for the debt. By an agreement made between the company and the vendors certain concessions were to be made by the vendors in the event of the property not being of the value represented, and shortly after the sale the company represented that the property was of less value than was stated, and demanded a concession. B. assented to one concession, but on a further concession being demanded by the company absolutely refused to assent thereto. C., however, agreed to the concession, and made an agreement with the company by which he gave up some of the debentures and paid-up shares to the company, and assented to the dividend on the rest of the paid-up shares being deferred until a dividend of seven per cent. should be paid on the ordinary shares. On bill by B. against C. seeking for inter alia the ordinary mortgage account, and for an account of what C. ought to have received from the company on behalf of B. but for the second concession, Held that the second concession, so far as it affected B. being unauthorised, C. should be responsible for it, and should not be entitled as a set-off against his responsibility to any advantage which B. might indirectly derive from the arrangement. Bell v. Clarke, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 283, 300.

Accounts were taken before the Chief Clerk in pursuance to the decree. On appeal from the Chief Clerk's decision in taking the accounts, Held that C. must be charged with the value of the paid-up shares and debentures as they were at the date of the second concession. Ibid, p. 304.

VIII. Foreclosure and other Remedies for Non-payment.

Mortgage of Land under "Transfer of Land Statute" (No. 301)—Secs. 84, 85, 98, 99.]—Where land is mortgaged under the Act No. 301, foreclosure is to be sought under the provisions of Secs. 98 and 99, and not in the old way by a suit in Equity. Greig v. Watson, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 79, 84; 3 A.L.T., 13.

Rights of Equitable Mortgagees.]—The proper remedy in Equity, of an equitable mortgagee by deposit of title deeds, is a sale and not a foreclosure. Bank of Victoria v. Cozens, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 93; White v. Hunter, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 178, 185.

Against an Infant.]—An infant foreclosed is entitled to a day to show cause notwithstanding "The Trustee Act 1856." Bank of Victoria v. Cozens, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 93.

Parties.]—Where in a suit by the assignees of a mortgagee of a lease against the assignees of the mortgagor and the mortgagor, for an account and payment or foreclosure, A., one of the assignees, and G. and M., two others of the assignees of the mortgagor, claimed antagonistically under different assignments, Held that A. and G. and M., though claiming antagonistically, might be made defendants, and a decree was made for an account, &c.; and that on the "defendants or one of them paying, &c.; the plaintiff should transfer, &c.; but that in default of the defendants or any of them paying, &c., the defendants be all foreclosed." Tuckett v. Alexander, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 87.

Mortgagor in Possession Receiving Rents between Ascertainment of Amount due by the Master and Time Fixed for Payment and Reducing Amount due by Mortgagor.]—Where a plaintiff mortgagee in possession had obtained a decree in a foreclosure suit, and between the time of ascertainment of amount due by the Master and the time fixed for payment, received rents, and the amount due by the mortgagor became thereby reduced. Held, on motion, that the proper course is to refer it back to the Master to ascertain the amount due and to fix a new day for payment—in this case fixed at three months from finding of amount due by the Master. Payne v. Keogh, 2 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 30.

Foreclosure Granted notwithstanding Irregular Proceedings in the Master's Office.]—Where under a foreclosure decree the Master had reported the amount due and fixed the day for payment, and in arriving at the amount due had credited the mortgagee with interest prospectively down to day for payment, and had debited the mortgagee, who was in possession, with the amount that would probably be received for rents down to that day, on a motion for an order for foreclosure absolute, default having been made in payment at time appointed, the Court, while questioning the propriety of the course pursued, made the order absolute, inasmuch as the mortgagor had not appeared to object when the report was confirmed. Australian Trust Coy. v. Colonial Bank of Australasia, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 105.

Interest Allowed where Foreclosure Suit is Undefended.]—Where a foreclosure suit is undefended the Court has power to allow the mortgagee compound interest. Ronald v. M'Pherson, 1 A.J.R., 105.

Mortgagee in Possession carrying on a Sheep Station after Decree for Redemption—Motion for Foreclosure.]—In a redemption suit the Master found a certain sum due and an order was made on further directions that plaintiff might redeem within six months, and if default was then made should stand foreclosed. During this time the mortgagee being in possession of the premises, a sheep station, carried it on. Default having been made in payment, a motion for foreclosure was dismissed by Molesworth, J., but Held by Full Court that a reference to Master should be ordered to inquire whether the amount due had been decreased in the six months, and if it had not been, then order absolute for foreclosure would be granted. Dallimore v. Oriental Bank, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 203.

Practice—Enlargement of Time for Payment.]—Defendant had been ordered to pay amount due within six months or be foreclosed. Defendant stated that the land was highly auriferous, that he had formed a company to work it, and had a large claim pending against the Government. Plaintiff filed no affidavit in opposition. Time enlarged for three months, on terms of defendant paying all costs within a month; interest to run in the meantime. Wills v. Ogier, 2 A.L.T., 1.

IX. Redemption.

When Mortgagor Entitled.]—Defendant promised to subscribe £100 towards the erection of a church, and a committee appointed raised £40 by subscriptions. Defendant then purchased the land as for £140 paid partly by cash, partly by bills. In order to raise funds for the erection, D. discounted a promissory note of £315 signed by the committee and endorsed by him, and by a bill of sale granted the land to the committee as for the £40 received. It was agreed that the bill of sale should not be executed till the promissory note was met. Defendant having met the bills for the purchase money of the land, had it conveyed to him absolutely. The promissory note was dishonoured, and defendant mortgaged the land to secure advance of £500, out of which he satisfied the promissory note, and handed the surplus to the treasurer of the committee. The committee demanded a conveyance, which defendant refused, except on terms of being indemnified against his liability under the mortgage deed, and afterwards paid off the mortgage, had the mortgage transferred to himself and brought ejectment against the committee. On suit for redemption by committee, and for restraint of ejectment proceedings, Held that plaintiffs were entitled to redeem, on paying defendant the principal and interest of the mortgage debt, and interest to himself on that sum, to date, cost of insurance and of ejectment proceedings. Bulling v. Bryant, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 121.

Right of Redemption as Affected by Priority of Registration of Mortgage Deeds.]—Fraser v. Australian Trust Coy., ante column 356.

When Barred — Laches — Acquiescence.]—In May, 1866, P. left with B. shares of P.'s in a mining company, transferred into B.'s name, as security for the payment of P.'s acceptance due in November, 1866. The acceptance was dishonoured at maturity. B. retained the shares and paid calls upon them. Subsequently dividends were paid upon the shares, which B. received in excess of the amount of his debt. No communication took place between P. and B. from December, 1866, to January, 1871, when P. demanded an account and transfer of the shares, which B. refused. On bill for redemption, Held that P. was entitled to redeem, and was not barred by laches or acquiescence. Port v. Bain, 2 V.R. (E.,) 177; 2 A.J.R., 129.

Not Barred by Laches.]—B., being embarrassed and unable to pay certain calls which were due on mining shares held by him, transferred the shares into the name of W., in consideration of W. lending him enough to pay the calls. After the transfer W. paid calls on the shares, which were low in value, for some years. Subsequently the shares rose, and on the whole yielded in dividends more than was due by B. to W. W. died, and her executors published the usual advertisements calling on those who had claims against the estate to give notice of their claims. Of these advertisements B. took no notice, but subsequently brought a suit for redemption of the shares against W.'s executors. There was evidence to show that the original transaction was a mortgage. Held, that B.'s neglect for several years to assert his claim, notwithstanding the advertisement by W.'s executor, did not bar him, but that his conduct disentitled him to costs. Bryant v. Saunders, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 225.

Dismissal of Suit to Redeem by Purchaser of Mortgagor's Interest at Sheriff's Sale—Subsequent Suit by Mortgagor, who had become Purchaser's Assignee—Decree in First Suit no Bar.]—Murphy v. Mitchell, ante column 408.

Beneficiaries under a Voluntary Settlement—Accounts by Mortgagee in Possession—Receipts by Mortgagor as Agent for Mortgagee—Parties—Practice—Trustee out of Jurisdiction.]—D., by one entire contract, purchased on 4th March, 1863, freehold and station properties from C. and B., and mortgaged same to C. and B. to secure purchase-money. Some of these stations were never delivered to D.; C. and B. sub-mortgaged to a bank. D. subsequently, in 1863 and 1864, mortgaged other lands not in the sale to C. and B., and C. and B. sub-mortgaged these to the bank. On 31st May, 1864, the bank entered into possession of property as mortgagee, D. at that time signing a letter stating he had given possession to the bank of the various station properties including those of which he had never received possession himself, and acted as the bank's agent till 1867, when he was displaced. On 1st October, 1870, D. executed a voluntary postnuptial settlement, by which he granted the equity of redemption in all his mortgaged properties to one Gilbert in trust for his wife's appointee, and in default of appointment upon certain trusts for his wife and children. On 1st June, 1871, D.'s estate was sequestrated and Goodman appointed assignee. C. and B. assigned all their interest to the bank, and Goodman released the equity of redemption vested in him as assignee to the bank; in Goodman's release certain lands mentioned in certain paragraphs of the bill were not comprised. On 22nd March, 1874, D.'s estate was released from sequestration. The defendant trustee, Gilbert, was out of the jurisdiction. Held, in a redemption suit by the beneficiaries under the settlement, that they were only entitled to redeem lands not comprised in Goodman's release, the settlement being void as against Goodman as to the rest; that it was not necessary for Gilbert to sue as a co-plaintiff or to be served; that Clark, a mortgagee who was not a defendant, was not a necessary party to a suit in which parties were litigating as to the equity of redemption. Accounts decreed against the bank as mortgagee in possession, for what it had received or might have received, but for wilful default, but the bank only charged with D.'s receipts as its agent only so far as he had paid them to the bank. Dallimore v. Oriental Bank Corporation, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 13.

Who May Redeem,]—Where an insolvent, after obtaining his certificate, took a conveyance from the official assignee of all his interest in the insolvent estate, which comprised, among other things, an equity of redemption, which had been released by the assignee, but about which there was a dispute, Held that the insolvent had, by his purchase, obtained the right to redeem. Brougham v. Melbourne Banking Corporation, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 214, 225; 2 A.L.T., 81.

Creditor Purchasing from Official Assignee of an Insolvent Heir-at-Law of Mortgagor — Champerty.]—C. mortgaged to A. for £500 by several mesne assignments, and the mortgage became the property of D. All these assignments treated the £500 as due. D. sub-mortgaged to Q. for £200. Q. sold all his interest in it to defendant for £300 by a deed which recited that £300 and no more was due to Q. The defendant sold the land in fee to S. absolutely for £367. S. mortgaged the property to a building society as for £480 advanced, and further charged the property with a sum of £120 advanced to him by the society. C., the original mortgagor, died intestate before any assignment was made, leaving an infant son (J.C.) his heir-at-law. J.C. became insolvent in 1866, and Shaw became his official assignee. In July, 1866, plaintiff, who was a creditor of J.C.'s, purchased the insolvent estate from Shaw. In December, 1866, the building society ejected plaintiff and sold to X., who mortgaged to a building society. X. sold the equity of redemption to defendant. On a bill by plaintiff against defendant to redeem, Held that the sale to S. was a sham and void; that defendant repurchasing the equity of redemption subjected the estate to plaintiff's rights through J.C. as if he had never sold to S.; that J.C. being in possession of the hotel at the time plaintiff purchased from Shaw, and the plaintiff being a creditor interested in making the most of J.C.'s estate, his bill was not champertous, and he was entitled to redeem. Quære, whether a power of sale would pass to a sub-mortgagee like Q. Slack v. Atkinson, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 335; Atkinson v. Slack, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 128.

Offer to Redeem—Demurrer.]—On a demurrer to a bill for the sale of mortgaged lands on the ground that the bill contained no offer to redeem, it appeared that plaintiffs could not have a partition; and, the offer to redeem being merely formal, the demurrer was overruled. Hunter v. Rutledge, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 331, 357; N.C., 61, 74.

Practise in.]—The defects or omissions in a bill framed to set aside a mortgage may be supplied from the answer, so as to enable the Court to pronounce a decree for redemption. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy. v. National Bank of Australasia, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 61, 67.

Beneficiaries of Voluntary Settlement Seeking Redemption—Trustee out of Jurisdiction—Not Necessary to Join Him as a Co-plaintiff or to Serve Him with Bill.]—See Dallimore v. Oriental Bank, ante columns 1067, 1068.

A mortgagee is not a necessary party to a suit where parties are litigating as to the right to equity of redemption. Ibid.

Practice—Exceptions to Master's Report—Special Agreement—Accounts.]—Where, in a suit for redemption in which a decree has been made, a motion was made by plaintiff for an order directing the Master to review his report and receive evidence as to an alleged agreement to depart from the ordinary course of dealing between mortgagor and mortgagee as to the appropriation of payments, Held, on the motion and on exceptions, that such agreement should be distinctly stated in writing in the office by way of objection, surcharge, or otherwise; and evidence thereof should be tendered to the Master, otherwise the Court cannot, upon exceptions, re-open the matter. Ross v. Victorian Permanent Building Society, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 59.

Decree—Date for Redemption—How Fixed.]—It is usual in a decree for redemption to direct payment of the money in six months from the date of the report finding the amount due. Where the case was complicated, and there was a hearing upon further directions, the six months were increased from the date of the report and not from the hearing on further directions. Jamieson v. Johnson, 2 V.R. (E.,) 26; 2 A.J.R., 7.

Decree for Redemption—Where Bill Impeached the Mortgage and did not Pray to Redeem.]—In a suit to set aside a sale and to have mortgaged property recognised, the bill impeached the mortgage, but did not pray to redeem. Held, by the Full Court, affirming Molesworth, J., that if upon the pleadings there are facts necessary to maintain a redemption suit, a decree for redemption will be granted, although the only case made by the bill is the invalidity of the mortgage and subsequent dealings, and no redemption is prayed by it. Upon appeal to the Privy Council, Held that although a mortgagor is not entitled to a decree for redemption on a bill which impeaches the mortgage securities and contains no prayer for redemption, yet such rule does not apply when the issues disclosed by the pleadings are not merely mortgage or no mortgage, but whether the defendant, by means of his acts subsequent to the impeached mortgage, had ceased to be mortgagee and had become absolute owner, and also whether the mortgagee's advances on the footing of the mortgage had not been more than satisfied by his receipts, the bill praying for an account, and offering to allow to the mortgagee all just credits. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy. v. National Bank of Australasia, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 206; on appeal 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 61; on appeal to Privy Council, sub nomine National Bank of Australasia v. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy., L.R. 4 App. Ca., 391.

Construction of Decree—Order Directing Mortgagee out of Possession and Purchaser from Him in Possession to Give up Possession.]—An order of the Court directing a defendant mortgagee out of possession, and a co-defendant, an equitable purchaser from the mortgagee in possession, to give up possession to the mortgagor, does not impose upon the mortgagee the active duty of giving up possession, but only means that he shall let the mortgagor take possession without obstruction. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy. v. National Bank of Australasia, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 259, 270.

Decree Directing Certain Accounts to be Taken—Report Made in Pursuance of such Decree—Exceptions.]—A decree directed redemption in the ordinary way, directing accounts to be taken of the mortgage debt and of the receipts of the mortgagee as mortgagee in possession. The decree also noticed the fact of a release by G., the official assignee of the mortgagor of the equity of redemption to the defendant bank (the mortgagee) as affecting other rights, but as in no way affecting the mortgage debt. The Master reported a certain sum due to the defendant bank as mortgage debt without noticing the effect of the release of the equity of redemption upon such mortgage debt. Upon exceptions to the report based upon the release by G. accepted by the bank as discharging all moneys owing to the bank up to the date of the release, Held, by the Full Court, affirming Molesworth, J., that it was not competent for the Master to consider the release by G. as operating in any way as a discharge of the mortgage debt, and that any such objection to the account on the ground of the release should have been taken by appeal from the decree and not upon exceptions to a report which had followed the decree consistently. Dallimore v. Oriental Bank, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 56.

Who Entitled to Mortgage Money.]—The personal representative of a deceased mortgagee is entitled in equity to the mortgage-money, but the mortgagor is entitled to redeem upon payment to the real representative. Walduck v. Colgin, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 1, 5.

Deceased Mortgagee—To Whom the Mortgage-money may be Paid.]—A payment of principal and interest, when due, to the attorney under power of the real representative of a deceased mortgagee, if out of the jurisdiction, is good, though such attorney has not taken out administration to the estate of the mortgagee and misappropriated the money; but such payment made before the money is due is invalid. Ibid.

A mortgagor, to save forfeiture, may make a strict legal tender or payment of the mortgage-money either to the real or personal representative of the deceased mortgagee. But where the money has not been paid or tendered on the day for payment, i.e., on the day when there was constituted a duly appointed agent of the real representative—and a legal forfeiture has been incurred, the mortgagor can then only wait and make a valid payment to the personal representative of the mortgagee. Walduck v. Dane, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 8. 13.

Interest—Right of Mortgagee to After Tender of Principal and Interest.]—A mortgage contained a covenant for payment of interest by equal quarterly payments, so long as the principal remained unpaid. After the day fixed for payment of principal, and between two of the quarterly days for payment of interest, six months' notice to redeem was given. At the end of the six months principal and interest to date were tendered, and refused by the mortgagee, who insisted on his right of interest up to the next quarterly day of payment. On bill to redeem, Held that the amount tendered was sufficient, and that the mortgagor was entitled to his costs of suit; that interest stopped from the day of tender, but that the mortgagee was entitled to all interest on the sum tendered actually obtained by the mortgagor after tender. Conroy v. Mason, 2 V.R. (E.,) 93; 2 A.J.R. 46.

What is a Good Tender.]—See Armstrong v. Robinson, ante column 1056.

Interest.]—D., an administrator, entitled beneficially to one-third of his wife's land, and holding the other two-thirds on trust for his children, borrowed money from the defendant bank and expended it in improving the whole of the property, which he mortgaged to the bank as security for the loan. The bank advanced the money and took the mortgage, with notice of the children's interest. On suit by the children for redemption, Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to be let into possession of or to receive two-thirds of the rents of the improved value of the land upon payment to the bank of two-thirds of the money advanced by the bank, with interest at eight per cent., and not at rate fixed in the mortgage, and that defendant bank should do everything to vest the legal estate in the two-thirds of the land in the plaintiffs. Droop v. Colonial Bank of Australasia, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 7.

[NOTE.—The parties consented to and acted upon a suggestion by the Court that the land should be sold.]

Costs—Mortgagee Claiming as Absolute Owner.]—Where a mortgagee claiming to be absolute owner resisted right to redeem and failed, Held that mortgagor was entitled to his costs down to and inclusive of original hearing. Mouatt v. Mackenzie, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 73; for facts see S.C. ante column 1063.

Costs.]—In a suit to have an absolute conveyance declared a mortgage, for redemption and accounts, the defendant by his answer offered to allow redemption, though he had previously claimed to hold absolutely. Held, that on a decree being made for redemption, plaintiff mortgagor was entitled to his costs of suit up to decree, and defendant mortgagee to his costs subsequent thereto. Pickles v. Perry, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 66.

Mortgagor's Costs.]—A mortgagor filed his bill to redeem. The mortgagee resisted, on the ground of a sale and subsequent purchase by him. By the decree the sale was declared void, and the plaintiff entitled to redeem. Held that the mortgagor was therefore entitled to his cost up to the decree. Slack v. Atkinson, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 195.

Costs.]—Where a mortgagor, seeking to redeem land alleged to have been sold by the mortgagee, proved that the alleged sale was, on technical points, invalid, but his bill contained charges of fraud and collusion against the mortgagee and the purchaser, which were totally unfounded, Held that, though entitled to redeem he should pay the costs of the mortgagee and of the purchaser. Ross v. Victorian Permanent Building Society, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 254; 4 A.L.T., 17.

Costs of Mortgagee—On Further Directions.]—By the decree in a suit to set aside a sale by the mortgagee and to redeem, the mortgagee was ordered to pay costs up to the decree. Accounts were directed, but no day was fixed for redemption. On further directions after report finding a balance due to the mortgagee in possession, Held that the costs subsequent to the decree should follow the ordinary rule in a redemption suit. Jamieson v. Johnson, 2 V.R. (E.,) 26; 2 A.J.R., 7.

Costs of Mortgagee.]—Where a mortgagee, who has improperly exercised his power of sale, has been paid off before a suit in substance for redemption was instituted, the rule that a mortgagee is entitled to his costs will not apply; and if, after decree for redemption, he resists the redemption in the Master's office, he will have to pay the costs subsequent thereto. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy. v. National Bank of Australasia, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 173, 192, 193.

Mortgagee's Costs.]—In a suit for redemption in which the mortgagor succeeded, upon taking the accounts a balance was found due to the mortgagee. Held that the mortgagee was entitled to his costs in the Master's office and on further directions. Slack v. Atkinson, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 195.

Costs—Of Mortgagee.]—In a redemption suit against a mortgagee in possession, a decree was made in favour of plaintiff with costs, and he then agreed to pay the mortgagee a sum named by the mortgagee. The mortgagee withdrew from the agreement, and insisted upon accounts. In the accounts brought in both parties claimed a balance. The Master found in favour of the mortgagee, but for a smaller sum than that claimed, but for a larger sum than that agreed upon at first. Held, upon further directions, that the mortgagee should have his costs subsequent to the decree. Murphy v. Mitchell, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 140; 2 A.L.T., 26.

Costs—Mortgagee with Notice of Claims.]—A bank took a mortgage over an entire property, in which the plaintiffs, as next-of-kin, were jointly interested with the mortgagor as administrator, and beneficially entitled in his own right, with notice of the plaintiffs' claims, and persistently litigated with them, and set up defences which failed. Held that the bank should pay the costs of the suit, except of a charge of fraud in the bill which failed; and that the plaintiffs must pay so much of the bank's costs as were attributable to resisting such charge. Droop v. Colonial Bank of Australasia, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 7.

Costs.]—A mortgagee who, in a redemption suit, sets up and fails to prove an absolute title to the mortgaged property, and is then found to have been, at the date of suit, overpaid as mortgagee, will not only not be entitled to his costs of suit, but may have costs given against him. National Bank of Australasia v. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy., L.R. 4 App. Ca., 391.

Costs.]—A mortgagor paid off part of the principal to one of several executors and tendered the remainder, which the other executors refused, insisting that the whole sum was due. On bill for redemption, a reference was made to the Master-in-Equity, who found that the sum tendered was all that was due. Held that, though the plaintiff had thus sustained the substance of his bill, yet he and the defendants having been guilty of irregularities in the payment off of the part, no costs should be allowed to either side. Lewis v. Levy, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 106.

Negligent Navigation at Sea.]—See post under SHIPPING.

NE EXEAT COLONIA.

The writ ne exeat colonid may issue for costs before taxation. Musson v. Bourne, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 1, 4, 5.

An order for the issue of such writ may be made by a single Judge in Chambers; and the writ may be issued on such order without drawing up any order of Court. Ibid, p. 6.

Though the sum for which the party be arrested be in the body of the writ, it should be "endorsed in words at full length," as an intimation to the sheriff. Ibid, p. 6.

The omission of such endorsement may be amended by the Court. Ibid.

Service of Copy—Supreme Court Rules, Cap. x., Rule 20.]—It is not necessary to serve the defendant with a copy of the writ ne exeat colonid. Simpson v. Goold, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 245, 247.

Where the order for the writ of ne exeat colonid is obtained from a Judge in Chambers, a formal order to the officer for its issue should be drawn up. Ibid, p. 248.

Application to Set Aside—Discharge of Defendant.]—On application to set aside a writ of ne exeat colonid the defendant will not be discharged on his own affidavit denying that there is any balance due to the plaintiff. Ibid.

Per Chapman, J.—"If upon the face of the bill and answer, it can be ascertained that it is almost certain there will be no balance due to the plaintiff on taking the accounts, then the Court will discharge the defendant. There is another course frequently adopted, which is, that if the Court is satisfied after answer that the defendant has been arrested for too large an amount, the Court will, upon application being made for the purpose, reduce the amount endorsed upon the writ, and allow the security to be taken for the smaller amount." Ibid.

Return of the Writ.]—The return which the ordinary form of the writ ne exeat colonid requires the sheriff to make under seal is confined to the security taken by him, and not to the mere return of the writ of arrest, which is in the usual form corpus cepi. Ibid.

Discharge from Arrest.]—Where a defendant has stated in writing that he intends to leave the colony, the Court will not discharge him from arrest under the writ, merely on his affidavit that he never did intend and does not intend to leave the colony. Ibid.

Motion to Set Aside—Defendant Leaving Colony in Ordinary Course of Business and Returning Again in Time for Payment.]—In the suit accounts were decreed and defendant ordered to pay into court £700 within three months. The defendant was captain of a vessel, and was leaving Melbourne in the vessel on a voyage to Newcastle. The plaintiff obtained a writ ne exeat colonid, and the defendant gave his bond as bail. Defendant's affidavits stated that the vessel he was in command of was trading between Melbourne and Newcastle, and that he would be in Melbourne before the time for payment of the £700 had elapsed and before final taking of accounts. Writ and bail bond set aside. Smith v. Knarston, 3 A.J.R., 103.

NEGLIGENCE.

1. What Amounts to.

Of 'Bus Driver—Contributory Negligence.]—For circumstances under which a 'bus driver was held guilty of negligence for getting off the seat to look after a horse that had fallen, and not keeping the reins, and a passenger who got out of the 'bus whilst it was in motion and was injured, was held not guilty of contributory negligence. See Melbourne Omnibus Company v. Thomas, N.C. 15.

Of Licensed Carrier—"Licensed Carriage Stat. 1864" (No. 217) Sec. 14.]—The disregard of the provisions of Sec. 14, of Act No. 217, forbidding more than one person to be carried on the box of a coach is not conclusive proof of negligence as against the owners in the case of an accident. Robertson v. Carmody, 1 V.R. (L.,) 6; 1 A.J.R. 24.

Adjoining Houses—Lateral Support.]—Where W. was sued for negligently excavating so close up to P.'s house as to cause the fall of the house and consequent injury, Held that, it appearing from the evidence that P.'s house was substantially built, and that the house fell partly through its own weight and partly through its not being shored up, that the fall was to be attributed to the superincumbent weight of the house and that therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to recover, being only entitled to the support of the land in its natural state. Piper v. Walsh, 5 A.J.R., 13.

Negligence consists in doing that which a person ought not to do, or omitting to do that which he ought to do, in disregard of the rights of another. Fergusson v. Union Steamship Company, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 279, 286; 6 A.L.T., 120.

2. Parties Liable.

Collateral Negligence of Persons Employed.]—Per Stawell, C.J.—If the injury arises from the collateral negligence of persons employed, they, and not the employers, are liable, unless the employers actually interfere. Badenhop v. Mayor of Sandhurst, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 136, 141.

Liability of Corporation for Injuries Caused by Negligent Mining under Streets under which Permission to Mine has been Given.]—See S.C., ante column 859.

Person Undertaking a Duty — Independent Contractor.] — A landlord, at his tenant's request, undertook to renew the roof of the house, and employed a contractor to do the work. During the progress of the work injury was done to the tenant's goods by a sudden and very heavy rain, and the absence of sufficient precaution in carrying out the work. Held that the landlord was liable for the injury. Meyers v. Easton, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 283.

Corporation Undertaking Repair of a Bridge—Independent Contractor Employed to Make a Side Road.]—Bossence v. Shire of Kilmore, ante column 862.

Obstruction on Road — Materials Left by a Contractor—Corporation Liable.]—Bell v. Shire of Portland, ante column 859.

Contractor — Sub-Contractor.] — P. contracted with a borough to repair streets, &c., under a contract which required him to light and fence obstructions, and which forbade his sub-letting the contract without consent. P. sublet a part to W. without consent, and W. failed to light and fence, whereby B. fell over the obstruction and suffered injuries. Held that P. was not liable in an action by B. for W.'s negligence. Phillips v. Byrne, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 179.

Construction of Railway—Liability of Contractor for Injury done through Sparks from Engine—"Public Works Stat., No. 289," Secs. 77, 138—Act No. 344, Sec. 71.]—T., the owner of a farm, sued a railway contractor in the County Court for injuries caused by C.'s negligence in using a locomotive so that sparks issued therefrom and caused the injuries. The County Court Judge directed the jury that the Act No. 580, which authorised the construction of the railway, did not authorise the use of the locomotive in its construction, and the jury found for the plaintiff. Held on appeal that the "Public Works Stat." (No. 289) impliedly authorised the use of locomotives by the Board of Land and Works, and therefore by its contractors, and that Sec. 71, of Act No. 344, also gave the authority more expressly; and that C. was not liable except upon proof of negligence in not using all reasonable precautions. Case to be re-heard. Topham v. Christie, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 306; 1 A.L.T. 43.

Contractor Erecting Hoarding—Sub-contractor.]—A contractor who has been allowed to enclose a part of a street with a hoarding for the purpose of carrying on building operations, and of depositing building materials, is absolutely responsible for the use of such hoarding, and of a gate constructed in it, in such a manner that no injury shall result to the public. When, therefore, a passer-by was injured through the negligent use of the gate by an independent sub-contractor, who had undertaken to supply the defendant (the contractor who had been allowed to erect the hoarding) with building materials, Held that the defendant was liable for the injury occasioned. Evans v. Martin, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 176; 2 A.L.T., 7.

Public Body — Statutory Authority.] — By accepting the authority given to it by a statute to do acts, which, without such authority, would constitute a public nuisance, a public body undertakes an obligation to use all the care necessary to protect the public from injury, and cannot, by employing an independent contractor to do the acts, relieve itself from this obligation. O'Brien v. Board of Land and Works, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 204; 2 A.L.T. 22.

The Board of Land and Works let a contract to H. and G. to cart waterpipes, and deposit them in streets to be named. H. and G. received instructions to deposit pipes in a certain street, but in doing so left one of them lying partly on the paved crossing of that street and another. Over this pipe the plaintiff fell and sustained injury thereby. Held that the Board of Land and Works, and not the contractors, was liable. Ibid.

Although the Board of Land and Works is a public body, discharging statutory duties, it is liable for the improper execution either by the Board or its agents of works constructed in discharge of those duties by which injury is occasioned. Victorian Woollen and Cloth Manufacturing Company v. Board of Land and Works, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 461; 3 A.L.T., 65.

Accidental Fire Spreading to Neighbour's Land—Liability.]—It is the duty of any person who originates or brings any matter, animate or inanimate, attended with danger on his ground to keep it within bounds: but no duty is cast upon a landowner to keep within bounds, and from spreading into a neighbour's land a fire which is raging on his land through no fault of his own. Batchelor v. Smith, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 176; 1 A.L.T., 12.

Careless Use of Fire.]—A person lighting a fire on his own land does it at his own risk, and notwithstanding that he uses diligence to prevent it spreading he is answerable for the mischief it may cause, and the question of his diligence does not require to be considered. Sheehan v. Park, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 25; 3 A.L.T., 98.

Corporation Succeeding to Liabilities of its Predecessors.]—Dummelow v. Mayor etc. of St. Kilda, ante column 860.

3. Railways.

Negligence—Extinguishing Lights—Contributory Negligence.]—B., a female passenger, arrived in Melbourne by train twenty minutes before midnight, her luggage having been sent on by a previous train. B. was informed that she must go and identify the luggage, and after waiting in the waiting room till 12.18 she went to the parcels office and on her return the station lights were extinguished and she fell and was injured. Held that the defendants were guilty of negligence, it being their duty, if the station was kept open after midnight, to inform persons on the station that the lights were going to be extinguished; that B. was on the station with the leave of the defendants and was guilty of no contributory negligence. Black et uxor v. Board of Land and Works. 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 12.

Swing Gates at a Highway—Contributory Negligence.]—A boy entered by one of the swing gates at a railway crossing, and instead of crossing directly in a line with the footpath by which he had entered the gate, he crossed the line diagonally towards the footpath on the other side of the line and was run over and killed. Held that there is no obligation on the part of a railway company to place men at the swing gates to warn crossers, except perhaps where a sudden curve, a hill or building intercepts the view of the line, and that crossers cross at such places at their own peril and must take proper precautions. Rule absolute for nonsuit. Gallogly v. M. and H. B. U. Railway Company, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 58.

Board of Land and Works—Unlighted Railway Station—Injury to Person Accompanying Passenger.]—S. was accompanying a passenger to a night train. He took a ticket for the passenger, crossed the line at the ticket office end and saw the passenger off. He then proceeded along the platform in order to depart by a public crossing at the other end; but, in the darkness, he fell into the ashpit and was injured. At the ticket office end there was a lamp, but at the opposite end none. S. did not return by the way he came because a train was approaching that end. Verdict for S. Rule nisi for a new trial, or to enter a nonsuit on the grounds (1) that defendants were not liable to be sued in this action; (2) that there was no duty or contract as regarded S. obliging defendants to light the place where the accident happened; and (3) that there was no evidence of negligence to go to the jury. Held that the fact that the Board was a public body acting as trustees did not exempt them from liability, that they were not public officers, that the Board was under an obligation as regarded S., that the question of negligence was one for the jury, and rule discharged. Sweeney v. Board of Land and Works, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 440.

Dangerous Track—Friend of Passenger Injured—Duty of Board of Lands and Works.]—The proprietors of a railway owe a duty to the friends of a passenger going to a station to see him off or to meet him, where such a practice is allowed by the proprietors, to protect them from any dangerous place which may exist, not only in the regular approach to the station, but also in any other approach which is allowed to be commonly used by persons going to and from the station. And this duty extends to a person not a friend of a passenger, but accompanying friends going to meet a passenger. Langton v. Board of Land and Works, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 316; 2 A.L.T., 65.

Leaving Articles upon Platform.]—A passenger alighting at Melbourne was passing along the platform of the station about 5.20 p.m. in May, the lamps not being lighted, when he tripped against an engine spring left on the platform and injured himself. In an action for negligence, Held that the sufficiency of light, the placing of articles on the platform before the passengers had left, and the position of the articles, were all questions for the jury, and the Court would not interfere with their verdict for the plaintiff. Burke v. Board of Land and Works, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 356; 5 A.L.T., 122.

Crane Allowed to be Used by Persons Sending Goods — Railway Department — Liability for Defective Condition.] — The plaintiff was in the employ of B. and Co., who were sending logs of timber by rail, and was loading the vans with these logs by means of a crane allowed by the Railway Department to be used by persons sending goods, when he was injured by the logs falling upon him owing to the defective condition of the crane. Held, per Stawell, C.J., and Higinbotham, J. (dissentiente Williams, J.,) that the plaintiff was more than a bare licensee, and that the department was liable for the defective condition of the crane. Sheridan v. Board of Land and Works, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 421; 5 A.L.T., 138.

4. Actions.

(a) Under the "Stat. of Wrongs 1865."

Apportionment of Damages—Nominal Damages — "Stat. of Wrongs 1865," Sec. 14.] — Since, under the 14th Sec. of the "Stat. of Wrongs 1865," the jury, in an action by the administrator of a person killed through the defendant's negligence, must apportion the amount of damages given amongst those persons on whose behalf the action is brought, a verdict for a farthing, if there be more than one such person, since a farthing cannot be apportioned, cannot be upheld. Shallue v. Long Tunnel Gold Mining Company, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 56.

Proper Measure of Damages as Compensation for Death.] — See M'Lean v. Board of Land and Works, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 239; 3 A.L.T., 8, ante column 340.

Action by Widow—"Stat. of Wrongs 1865"—"Mines Regulation Act 1873," No. 480.]—The action which, before the passing of the Act, No. 480, might have been brought by a miner injured in a mine, or by his executor for the benefit of his relatives, at common law, or under the "Stat. of Wrongs," is governed by Sec. 8 of Act No. 480, and may under that Sec. be brought for the benefit of the widow and children. Kaye v. Ironstone Hill Lead Gold Mining Company, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 148.

W., the plaintiff, was a labourer in defendants' employ, working at a puddling-machine. The complaint was that defendants had negligently permitted a chain connected with a truck used to discharge auriferous matter into the puddling-machine to be in an unsound condition and to break, whereby the plaintiff was injured. There was evidence that the chains being used in wet earth became in time rusted, and were at no time tested by defendants. The plaintiff had, in his "tipping" the truck, used means which relieved him from exertion, but increased the strain on the chain. It was not certainly proved that plaintiff had knowledge of the weakness of the chain; he had conversations as to necessity of shackles with the engineer. Held, per Stawell, C.J. and Barry, J. (dissentiente Williams, J.) that there was evidence to go to a jury of defendants' negligence, and to rebut contributory negligence, and a rule nisi for a nonsuit discharged. Withell v. Lowe, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 57.

Master and Servant—Conveying Servant to place of Work.]—B., who was performing certain work under contract with M., was requested by M. to accompany him to another place, an out station, for the purpose of assisting in other work not in the contract, and upon M. insisting B. allowed him to drive him there in his buggy. B. did not trust the capacity of M. as a driver, but eventually consented to allow M. to drive him. On the journey, whilst going up a slight incline, the buggy came in contact with a fallen limb of a tree, the kingbolt parted, and B. and M. were thrown out, and the former sustained severe injuries, and accordingly sued M. for damages for breach of a promise safely to convey him for profit. Held that the driving of B. by M. was not the consideration which moved B. to go to the out-station, but that, even if no profit or reward were proved to M., he would be liable for the injury to B. if there were any evidence that M. had not used due care and skill as a gratuitous bailee; that mere proof of an accident does not in all cases throw upon a defendant the burden of showing the real cause of the injury; there must be reasonable evidence of negligence; but, per Stawell, C. J., and Barry, J. (dissentiente Williams, J.,) that where, the thing being under the management of the defendant, the accident is such as in the ordinary course does not happen if those who have the management use proper care, it affords reasonable evidence, in the absence of explanation, that the accident arose from want of proper care; and that the jury should have been allowed at the former trial to decide upon the circumstantial evidence, and to infer from the position of the buggy, and of B. and M., after the accident, that the buggy had been driven against a fallen branch, and that that would be evidence to go against them of negligence. But, per Williams, J., that B. was not entitled to succeed unless there were affirmative proof of negligence on the part of M., and that there was no such proof in this case. On appeal to the Privy Council, held that B. was not entitled to a verdict in the absence of any evidence of gross negligence on the part of M.; and that the evidence did not show such negligence as to make M., performing a gratuitous service for B., responsible; and decision of Supreme Court reversed. Bateman v. Moffatt, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 125; 1 A.J.R., 10.

On appeal sub. nom., Moffatt v. Bateman, L.R., 3 P.C., 115; 1 A.J.R., 12.

Steam Roller—Question for Jury.]—An injury to plaintiff was occasioned by his horse taking fright at a steam roller employed by a municipal council in a street. In an action it was held that the question whether the council, by placing a notice upon a stand in the roadway, stating that the roller was at work, but leaving the street open to traffic, had taken proper precautions to prevent accident, was a question for the jury; but the Court granted a new trial on the ground that the steam roller was at rest taking in water, and that that there was contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff. Levy v. Mayor, &c., of St. Kilda, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 302.

Obstruction to Road—Question for Jury.]—In an action against a municipal council to recover damages for injuries sustained in falling over materials left upon a public road for its repair by the council, it is essentially a question for the jury whether the materials left on the road were of such a character as to be dangerous. Ogburn v. President, &c., of Shire of St. Arnaud, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 308.

Medical Examination of Plaintiff.]—In an action for damages for injury sustained by the plaintiff from an omnibus company, Molesworth, J. (in Chambers) allowed the defendant company to obtain an order to have the plaintiff medically examined, before any pleadings had been delivered in the action. Phillips v. Melbourne Tramway and Omnibus Company, 1 A.L.T., 116.

Medical Practitionsr Negligently Signing Certificate of Insanity Under Sec. 11 of the "Lunacy Stat., No. 209."]—Smith v. Iffla, Roberts v. Hadden. See ante column 899.

Passenger—Onus of Proof.]—It is sufficient evidence to launch the case against a carrier that a passenger travelling in a public vehicle, is thrown therefrom by an accident, though the cause of such accident be unexplained. The onus lies on the carrier to show that the accident was not the result of negligence on his part. Pink v. Melbourne Tramway and Omnibus Company, 6 V.L.R. (L.) 186; 2 A.L.T. 18.

Accident to Person not in Vehicle—Mode in Which Accident Occurred.]—Although the mere fact of an accident occurring to a person not being carried in a vehicle owing to the shying of the horses is not of itself sufficient to launch the case against the owner of the vehicle and dispense with the establishing by the plaintiff of some act of negligence on the part of the defendant beyond mere proof of the accident; yet the manner in which the accident occurred may nevertheless be considered by the jury, to enable them to arrive at a conclusion as to whether there was or was not actionable negligence on the part of the defendant. Phillips v. Melbourne Omnibus and Tramway Company, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 229.

Negligence in Driving—Evidence.]—Per Williams, J. The mere fact that a person lawfully walking along a street was run over by a vehicle raises a primâ facie case of negligence. Per Curiam. Where a cart is driven at a smart trot across a principal line of traffic at a busy time of the day, that is sufficient evidence of negligence to go to a jury. A statement made by the driver of the cart that he was in the employ of the defendant, is admissible as evidence in an action of negligence. Brundell v. Wane, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 319; 3 A.L.T., 22.

Break-down of Passenger Coach from Unexplained Cause—Burden of Proof—Res ipsa loquitur—More than Statutory Number of Passengers.]—S. sued R. for damages sustained by him while travelling as a passenger in one of R's coaches. A wheel had come off the coach, before the end of the journey, from some unknown cause, for it was shown that the coach and the way its wheels were secured was of approved construction, and in good order. There were, however, more than the statutory number of passengers on the coach at the time of the accident. Held that it was for the jury to determine whether the fact that more than the statutory number of passengers were carried, was or was not in some way connected with the accident. It is a question for the judge whether there is evidence, reasonably fit to be considered by the jury, of negligence connected with the injury. Proving the break-down of the coach in a manner which does not usually happen without negligence, is sufficient to launch the plaintiff's case; and the onus then lies on the defendant to rebut the presumption against him, by satisfying the jury by evidence reasonably sufficient for the purpose, that he has not been guilty of negligence, which was in reality a cause of the injury. It does not lie upon the plaintiff to prove that the breach of the statutory duty was the cause of the accident. Smith v. Robertson, Anderson v. Same, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 256; 4 A.L.T., 45.

Railway Company—Level Crossing.]—A light or notice at a dangerous place is only necessary when the public have right of access. W. was approaching a station belonging to the defendant company, and being anxious to catch a particular train, which was nearing the station, diverged, instead of going by either of two routes, one of which led to the platform by steps, and the other by a public bridge, from the lawful crossing at an acute angle, went over the rails, and was attempting to mount to the platform by means of a step placed there for the sole use of the company's servants, when he fell, was caught by the train, and injured. Held that the company were not guilty of negligence in not having a light or notice at the spot where he diverged; that W. was a trespasser, and diverged at his own hazard. Rule absolute for a nonsuit. Williams v. Melbourne and Hobson's Bay United Railway Company, 3 V.R. (L.,) 91; 3 A.J.R., 51.

And see Black v. Board of Land and Works, and Gallogly v. Melbourne and Hobson's Bay Railway Company, ante column 1078.

Falling into a Dangerous Hole—Forgetfulness—Question for Jury.]—L., being in defendant's store on business, fell through an unprotected hole in the floor into a cellar, and was injured. L. sued defendant for negligence, and recovered a verdict. It appeared from the evidence that L. had been in the store before, and had seen the hole covered with hatches, and on the occasion when he was injured, forgot about the hole, or thought that the hatches were on, it being dark at the time. Held, on rule nisi for a nonsuit or new trial, that jury having found defendants guilty of negligence, the plaintiff's forgetfulness was a question of contributory negligence for the jury, and not a question of law for the Judge. Rule discharged. Leahy v. Stuart, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 310.

Where the Court were of opinion that there was evidence of contributory negligence, it granted a new trial on payment of costs, on the ground that, though contributory negligence as a rule is a question for the jury, yet that rule is subject to the principles of law that every verdict is to be founded on, and not in opposition to, the evidence adduced. Levy v. Mayor of St. Kilda, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 302.

"Statute of Wrongs," No. 251, Part II.—Contributory Negligence—Direction to Jury.]—Rule nisi for a new trial. The plaintiff sued the defendants for negligence as the administratrix of her husband, who had lost his life by passing along an unfenced road under defendants' care, which had been suddenly flooded during the night. The Judge directed the jury that they were to determine whether the road was dangerous, and asked them whether the deceased had foolishly and recklessly formed an opinion as to the safety of going along the street, and told the jury that if the defendants were guilty of negligence, no mere want of care on the part of the deceased would exonerate the defendants. Held a good direction. Smith v. Mayor of Emerald Hill, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 431.

Evidence of.]—In an action against a shire council for injuries to a horse, which, while straying on a highway under the care and management of the council, fell into a hole in or near the highway, and was injured, the Court held that if the horse strayed through the default of the plaintiff, such default was evidence of contributory negligence. Smyth v. Shire of Kyneton, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 37; 3 A.L.T., 99.

Damage Caused by a Nuisance—Contributory Negligence.]—Contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff is no defence to an action for damage caused by a nuisance. Smyth v. Shire of Kyneton, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 231.

Obstruction on Road.]—Where a fence has been erected across a road, having a slip panel wide enough for vehicles to pass through with ordinary care, the corporation is not liable for an accident under circumstances showing the want of such care. Munro v. Shire of St. Arnaud, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 217.

Accident in Street—Drunkenness of Plaintiff.]—In an action for damages in respect of injuries caused by the plaintiff's falling from a vehicle on a dark night into a cutting at the end of a street then being formed, the plaintiff having driven through a panel, which some one had removed, of a fence placed by the corporation across the street, the drunkenness of the plaintiff is material to the question of the liability of the corporation which had the control of the street. Mayor, &c., of Melbourne v. Brennan, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 113; 4 A.L.T., 1.

If a man trespasses on another's land, knowing that he is running into danger, although he does not know in what part of the land the danger is situated, and is injured, his own wilful act is regarded in the eye of the law as the cause of the injury. If he had trespassed without notice of the danger the injury would not be attributed to him. If he has a right to go where he is going, and knows there was danger in his path, and comes upon it without perceiving it, he will be deemed guilty of contributory negligence or not, according to the degree of caution which he has exercised in approaching it. Boyle v. Shire of Mornington, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 265; 5 A.L.T., 83.

Unprotected Bridge.]—A person, who was in bad health and had been drinking, fell from an unprotected bridge under the control of a shire council, and sued the council for their negligence. The jury found that the plaintiff could have avoided the accident by the use of ordinary care, and yet returned a verdict for the plaintiff. Held that the verdict could not be sustained, and rule absolute to enter a verdict for defendants. Hynes v. Shire of Broadford, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 346.

Order for Payment of Money—Revocation.]—J. gave B., the sub-manager of a firm, an order for a certain sum upon the manager of the firm, and at the same time signed an account purporting to be between J. and the firm, whereby the firm admitted the order and gave credit for it. Before payment of the order, J. called on the firm and told them not to pay it. In an action by J. for a balance of wages due by the firm, Held that, although J. might revoke the order before payment, if no steps had been taken to pay it, J., by signing the account, had changed his own position and induced the firm to change their position in regard to him, and could not therefore be permitted to stop the order. *Grice v. (1) On What Grounds Granted or Refused.

New Trial in County Court.]—See cases ante column 259.

Misdirection in Law—What is and What is Not.]—On the trial of an action of trover, and also for certain empty bags which had before the floods contained salt, the Judge said to the plaintiff's counsel, "I suppose the count in trover is for the bags." Counsel made no answer; but the Judge was under the misapprehension that he had replied in the affirmative. The Judge assuming his apprehension to be correct, that the count only covered the empty bags, directed the jury that as there was no evidence of conversion as to those bags, they must find for the defendant. As a matter of fact the count covered the bags of salt as well as the empty salt bags. The mistake was not corrected, and the jury found for the defendant. Held that the mistake and the direction founded on it, did not amount to a misdirection in law; that it was the right and duty of counsel to interfere and correct such mistake; and that counsel not having done so at the trial when the mistake could have been readily corrected, a rule nisi for a new trial, on the ground of misdirection, granted to have the matter discussed and settled, should be discharged with costs. Halfey v. Cole, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 37.

Direction to Jury.]—A Judge is right, in trying a case as to whether a contract has been formed or not, to leave it to the jury whether conversations and letters put in evidence form a contract or not, instead of deciding the question himself as a matter of law. Hardy v. Anderson, 2 A.J.R., 110.

A Judge should not be bound by every inadvertent word used in summing up; though it may have been an ill-advised word, it will not be binding upon him, if the jury are properly seized of the case. Ibid.

Jury Not Directed as to Part of Amount Sued for—Objection Not Taken at Trial.]—In an action by a trustee in insolvency for money paid as a preference, a verdict was given for the defendants, and a new trial applied for on the ground that the jury had not been directed as to part of the amount sued for, that being in respect of bills current and not then due, the defendants were not entitled to retain the amount. A new trial was refused on the ground that the objection had not been taken during the progress of the trial. Aylwin v. Callaghan, 4 A.J.R., 79.

Misdirection, What is.]—In an action upon a deed, on the issue non est factum, it is not misdirection to tell the jury that, if they find for the defendant, they will not necessarily find the plaintiff guilty of forgery, whereas if they find for the plaintiff they will find the defendant guilty of perjury; but this is merely a strong mode of putting to the jury on which side the onus of proof lay—on which side the proof of the affirmative rested. Bishop v. Stone, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 98; 1 A.L.T., 168.

Misdirection—Omission to State that Plaintiff's Interest was only a Life Interest.]—In an action for trespass by cutting and making a road on plaintiff's close, in which the plaintiff had only a life interest, the County Court Judge directed the jury that there was no question of title involved. Held, a misdirection and new trial ordered. Shire of Portland v. Kennedy, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 140.

When Granted—Misdirection.]—Where, in an action for assault, the defendant sets up as a defence that he used no more violence than was necessary to establish his legal right, the jury should be directed that the defendant's assertion, if proved, entitles him to a verdict, otherwise a new trial will be directed. Johnson v. Rushford, 2 A.L.T., 58.

For a case where the Court was divided as to a certain direction being a misdirection, see Walker v. George, 5 A.J.R., 29, ante column 369.

Misdirection as to Measure of Loss.]—Harwood v. Stackpoole, ante column 340.

Discovery of Fresh Evidence—Rule of Law.]—The Court refused to grant a new trial, applied for as on the discovery of fresh evidence, upon an affidavit that the defendant was not aware of the existence of a rule of law of another colony, which rule of law he had omitted to prove at the trial. Goldsbrough v. M'Culloch, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 154.

Discovery of Fresh Evidence.]—M. sued S. for breach of a contract to deliver a certain quantity of coals. The measure of damages was difference of price at which defendant had agreed to supply them, and the market value, M. swearing that he had paid a certain price for a quantity bought through a Mr. L. The jury gave plaintiff a verdict for what he claimed. Rule nisi for new trial on the ground that defendant had been taken by surprise, it being sworn in an affidavit by a bookkeeper of L.'s that no such purchase had been made through L. Held that it was not to be assumed that jury had arrived at their estimate solely on plaintiff's evidence, but on the whole evidence, some of which contradicted plaintiff. Rule refused. Morley v. Smith, 3 A.J.R., 108.

Discovery of New Evidence.]—Where a party seeks for a new trial on the ground of discovery of new evidence he must prove that the evidence could not have previously been procured by the exercise of reasonable diligence. Leury v. Want, 5 A L.T., 121.

Discovery of Fresh Evidence—What Must be Shown.]—Applications for a new trial on the ground of the discovery of fresh evidence are viewed with disfavour by Courts of Justice. On such applications the following conditions must be satisfied:—(1.) It must be shown clearly that the new evidence was not in the possession of the party applying, and could not by proper diligence have been procured by him at the time of the first trial. (2.) It must appear that the newly discovered evidence is such as ought, if it had been brought forward at the first trial, to have led the jury to come to a different conclusion from that at which they have arrived. Ward v. Hearne, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 163; 6 A.L T., 49.

Discovery of Fresh Evidence.]—Where the new evidence relates to alleged facts not known to the defendant before the trial, and which could not have been discovered by the exercise of reasonable diligence on the part of his legal advisers, the Court will grant a new trial. Egdin v. Horner, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 353, 358.

Improper Admission of Evidence.]—The Board of Land and Works invited tenders for occupation for depasturing purposes of a certain run. W. tendered and was accepted, having paid a certain bonus and rent. Licensees of adjoining runs were in occupation of parts of this run, and though the Board promised to give W. full possession, they never did. W. had expended large sums in improvements, and sued the Board for damages. Certain conversations between W. and successive Presidents of the Board were received in evidence. On rule nisi for a new trial Held that, as some of the conversations were received without objection, objections to the evidence, which was merely a repetition of testimony previously received, could not be entertained, as the plaintiff was not fairly apprised of the risk he incurred in tendering it. Williams v. Board of Land and Works, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 130.

Improper Reception of Evidence.]—In an action for assault and false imprisonment the plaintiff was cross-examined as to transactions with a third person (S.) out of which the assault arose; and the evidence of S., called by the defendant, was admitted to contradict the plaintiff's evidence on those points. Held where a witness is asked questions with a view to disparaging his character solely, and not material to the issue, his answers should be accepted as final. Rule absolute for a new trial on improper reception of evidence. Lorimer v. Henderson, 3 V.R. (L.,) 10; 3 A.J.R., 28.

Improper Admission of Evidence.]—The Court will not grant a new trial on account of the admission of evidence which ought not to have been received, provided there be sufficient, without it, to authorise the finding of the jury. Tracy v. Luke, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 64.

Improper Admissions of Evidence—Interrogatories and Answers.]—The Court grants a new trial where improper evidence is formally objected to and received, unless it can see clearly that the improper evidence could not have weighed with the jury, or that a contrary verdict would have been against evidence. A defendant, to prevent plaintiff going into a rebutting case, put in certain interrogatories and answers to show that plaintiff had knowledge of defendant's title. Held that such evidence was tendered under a misapprehension of the law as to the plaintiff going into a rebutting case, and was only referred to on that question, and could not have influenced the jury, as they could not draw any inference of fact from it. New trial refused. Welsh v. Hackett, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 155.

Improper Reception of Evidence.]—A document which is put in evidence subject to the opinion of the Court in banco, whether it could be received, and what would be its effect if received, is not received as evidence so as to furnish grounds for a new trial on the improper reception of evidence. Ireland v. Chapman. 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 242.

Improper Admission of Evidence.]—In the case of a conflict of testimony, where evidence has been improperly admitted which might influence the minds of the jury, even though there was other evidence on the same point, the party objecting to the improper admission will be entitled to a new trial. But where the evidence was all one way, although a portion was improperly admitted, yet if a verdict returned in opposition to that portion would have been set aside as against evidence, the verdict actually returned (in accordance with that portion) will not be disturbed. Dowsett v. Smith, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 58.

Improper Admission of Evidence.]—If evidence is admissible in one of two different aspects it cannot be rejected, because it would not be admissible in the other; nor can a new trial be granted on the ground of its admission. Horne v. Milne, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 296; 3 A.L.T., 23.

Improper Admission of Evidence.]—A new trial will be granted if hearsay evidence be admitted on cross-examination, subject to objection. Williams v. Spowers, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 82; 3 A.L.T., 113.

Evidence Improperly Admitted.]—In an action for dishonouring a cheque, whereby the plaintiff lost a partnership into which the other party refused to enter by reason of such dishonour, evidence of the probable value of the partnership was improperly admitted, though without objection on the part of defendant's counsel, and the Judge omitted to warn the jury that they should not take the amount of the loss of the contract as the measure of damages; Held that it was the duty of the Judge so to warn the jury, and that his omission to do so entitled the defendant to a new trial. Dyson v. Union Bank of Australia, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 106; 3 A.L.T., 135.

Rejection of Evidence—Devisavit vel non—Proof.]—Plaintiff tendered in evidence in an action for ejectment a will, the execution of which was proved, but no direct evidence was offered as to the testator's competency. Defendant then went into evidence to prove his incompetency, whereupon plaintiff tendered rebutting evidence, which was rejected. On a rule nisi for a new trial, Held that the onus of proving the issue devisavit vel non in all its parts, including that of competency was upon the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff could not sever his case; that as no new matter had been introduced by the defendant there was nothing to rebut. Rule discharged. Wharton v. Tuohy, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 217.

Improper Rejection of Evidence.]—In an action by a father for breach of a covenant to teach contained in an indenture of apprenticeship by which his son was bound, the son swore that he had not been taught, and the defendant then tendered evidence to contradict such statement, which evidence was rejected. Held that the principal issue being whether the son had been taught or not, such evidence was admissible as being tendered for the purpose of contradicting the apprentice on a material matter. Rule absolute for new trial. Buzolich v. Fletcher, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 356.

Verdict Against Evidence or Against Weight of Evidence.]—The principle on which the Court acts in granting new trials is this: That where the jury have not misapprehended the issue, and have not disregarded the Judge's direction, taking, as it were, both the law and the facts into their own hands; and where the verdict is sustained by any evidence at all, though there be evidence directly against it, it ought not in general to be disturbed. Though the verdict be one which the Judge would not if sitting in the jury-box have given himself, it will not be disturbed on that ground. The Court only interferes where the evidence is wholly opposed to the verdict, or where there is documentary evidence very inconsistent with oral testimony. Owston v. Mullen, 4 W.W. & A'B., (L.,) 36.

Verdict Against Evidence — Decided Conflict Between Oral and Documentary Evidence.]—Held, following Owston v. Mullins, supra., that a new trial will be granted under such circumstances. Stephens v. Shire of Belfast, 5 A.J.R., 79.

And see S.P., Treen v. Cameron, 5 A.J.R., 32; and ante column 369.

Verdict Against Evidence.]—Per Privy Council. There ought not to be a new trial unless the verdict was so contrary to the weight of evidence that the Court must say that the jury were wrong in giving such a verdict upon the evidence before them. Forbes v. McDonald, 5 A.J.R., 85.

Verdict Against Evidence.]—Although the Court is unwilling to grant a new trial when there is conflicting evidence of the same nature, yet there ought to be a distinction where the evidence differs in its character and value, e.g., as in the case of engineers against members of a council as to the damage done by an overflow of sludge. Cameron v. Shire of Mount Rouse, 5 A.J.R., 136.

Verdict Against Evidence—Evidence of Experts.]—Where only a question of fact is involved the Court can estimate the value of the evidence as well as a jury, and, if the verdict is not according to evidence, can grant a new trial; but when the question depends also on the evidence of experts, the Court cannot tell how far the verdict may have been influenced by their opinions, and will not grant a new trial unless there has been a manifest mistake and miscarriage of justice. Turner v. Van Hemert, 2 A.J.R., 114.

Verdict Against Evide ce—Question for Jury.]—M. sued an insurance company on a policy for £350 on some buildings. The fire which destroyed the buildings was caused by the negligence of the Railway Department. In addition to the buildings, uninsured property was destroyed. The company refused to pay till M. had settled with the Railway Department, which he did for £500 in full of all demands. M. then sued the company, and recovered £150. The company moved for a new trial on the ground, among others, that the verdict was against evidence, since M.'s claim for £350 was included in the £500 paid by the Railway Department. Held that the question whether M.'s claim for the insured property was included in the £500 was a question for the jury, and new trial refused. M'Ilree v. Norwich Union Insurance Company, 4 A.L.T., 45.

Conflict of Evidence—Matter of Fact.]—Where there is a mere conflict of evidence the Court will not interfere with verdict of the jury on a matter of fact. Kong Meng v. Peters, 1 A.L.T., 136.

Finding of Jury—Credibility of Witness.]—The Court will not interfere with the finding of a jury where the case is oue involving the credibility of witnesses. Bishop v. Stone, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 98; 1 A.L.T., 168.

Conflict of Evidence—Unsatisfactory Verdict.]—Where there have been two trials in a case, and both have resulted in a verdict for the same party, and the evidence is conflicting, the Court will not, in the absence of peculiar circumstances, grant a third trial, the judge who tried the case not being dissatisfied with the verdict, though the verdict is unsatisfactory to the Court. Brophy v. Bonham, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 256; 2 A.L.T., 33.

Finding of Jury on Unsufficient Grounds.]—Two trials of an action on a breach of contract, had resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff, and the defendant moved for a third trial. The application was refused, although there was little difference in the state of the case at the two trials, as the only objection was, not that the finding of the jury was contrary to law, but that it was on insufficient grounds, and as there was some shred of a case to go to them, and they might draw inferences from the conduct of the parties between the two trials, each endeavouring to extract from the other as much favourable to his case as he could. Maclaine v. Clarke, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 119.

When a plea of waiver is put in to an action on a promissory note, the fact of the plea must be strictly proved, and the Court will interfere if the finding is based upon unsatisfactory evidence. Bank of Australasia v. Cotchett, 4 V.L R. (L.,) 226.

Jury, Bringing in two Inconsistent Special Findings.]—For circumstances and terms on which a new trial was granted when a jury had found two inconsistent special findings. See Bowman v. Homan, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 390.

Verdict Inconsistent With Special Finding.]—Where a verdict is inconsistent with the special findings of the jury, the Court will not allow it to stand, but will grant a rule absolute for a new trial. Ogden v. Board of Land and Works, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 469; 3 A.L.T., 63.

Inconsistent Verdict.]—M. instructed W. by telegraph to purchase certain shares, at discretion, naming the prices at which the shares were quoted. W. advised M. that the shares were rapidly rising, and eventually purchased at nearly double the prices M. had quoted. The shares then fell and M. declined to take them. The jury found for W. for the then value of the shares, though W. had not actually delivered them. Held an obvious mistake and new trial granted. On the new trial the jury found that W. had not properly exercised the discretion as to price allowed him by M.; but that M. had not repudiated the purchase within a reasonable time; yet they returned a verdict for M. Held that on this inconsistent verdict there should be a new trial. Were v. Muston, 4 A.J.R., 82.

Different Verdicts on Same Facts.]—It is no ground for granting a new trial in a case, that in another case, in which the facts were precisely similar, a different jury has given a different verdict to the one given in the second case. Bogg v. London and Australian Agency Corporation, 4 A.J.R., 70.

Verdict Against Evidence—Judge Satisfied With Verdict.]—Where the Judge who tried the case has expressed himself as satisfied with a verdict, the Court will not, except under special circumstances, interfere with the verdict by granting a new trial, on the ground that it is against evidence. Meagher v. London and Lancashire Fire Insurance Company, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 390.

Judge Dissatisfied with Verdict.]—Where a Judge is dissatisfied with a verdict, such verdict will not be allowed to stand, and a new trial will always be granted. Polynesia Company v. Bank of New South Wales, 3 A.J.R., 52.

Judge Dissatisfied with Verdict.]—A new trial will always be granted where the Judge who tried the case is dissatisfied with the verdict. McDonald v. Hughes, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 59; 3 A.L.T., 103.

Judge Not Dissatisfied With Verdict.]—Where the evidence for one side or the other does not greatly preponderate, and the Judge has expressed himself as not dissatisfied with the verdict, no new trial will be granted. Carroll v. Melbourne Omnibus Company, 4 A.J.R., 138.

On Ground of Surprise.]—When a party at a trial has been taken by surprise, and a verdict returned against him, the Court will grant a new trial, if the nature and fact of the surprise be clearly shown, and the Court be satisfied that the verdict is substantially wrong. Clough v. London and Australian Agency Corporation, 4 A.J.R., 69.

On Ground of Surprise.]—H. sued as mortgagee or unpaid vendor of certain goods upon a policy of fire insurance. At the trial, H. set up a claim for part as still being his own goods.

The Court granted a new trial on the ground of surprise in H.'s setting up a claim as owner. Haynes v. Royal Insurance Company, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 125.

Verdict for Plaintiff in Absence of Defendant When Case Called on—Division of Lists.]—In an action on a bill of exchange against the drawer, the case was called on earlier than was anticipated by reason of a division of Nisi Prius lists. The defendant put in no appearance, and a verdict was entered for the plaintiff. The affidavits showed that defendant had a good defence on the merits, and under the circumstances the Court granted a new trial. Chapman v. Ireland, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 328; 1 A.L.T., 49,

But see Mays v. Watmough, ante column 259.

Absence of Witness.]—The accidental absence of a witness at a trial is not a good ground for a new trial. Dines v. Farrington, 1 A.J.R. 135.

Necessary Witness Absent—Practice.]—A new trial will not be allowed on the ground that a necessary witness could not be obtained in time to give his evidence at the trial. If such a witness is not forthcoming at the trial, the party requiring him should apply for an adjournment till he can be produced. Loney v. Excell, 5 A.L.T., 168.

Evidence Taken Under Commission not Forthcoming at the Time of the Trial.—Johnston v. Jackson, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 331; 1 A.L.T., 49. ante column 370.

Mistake in Awarding Damages.]—M. instructed W., by telegraph, to purchase 100 shares in a mining company, at discretion, naming the prices at which the shares were quoted. W. advised M. that the shares were rapidly increasing in price, and eventually purchased the shares at nearly double the prices M. had quoted. The shares then fell, and M. declined to take those W. had purchased. On the trial the jury returned a verdict for W. for the then value of the shares, though W. had not actually delivered them. Held that this was an obvious mistake in the verdict, and that there should be a new trial. Were v. Muston, 4 A.J.R., 35.

When Court will Interfere in the Matter of Damages.]—The Court refused a new trial in an action for personal injuries occasioned by the defendant's negligence, where the jury had apparently given no compensation for permanent injury, though the evidence negativing such permanent injury was apparently not so strong as that in its favour, on the ground that in the absence of mistake or misconduct in the jury, their decision on such questions cannot be interfered with. Geach v. Board of Land and Works, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 29.

And see generally on the question of damages the cases, ante columns 336, 338, 339, 340.

Damages Assessed Generally on Several Breaches of which One is Bad—Venire de novo Proper Remedy not New Trial.]—Nolan v. Chirnside, ante column 341.

Plaintiff Remitting Improper Damages.] —Where, on the argument of a rule nisi for a new trial, the plaintiff remitted the damages improperly awarded to him at the trial, a new trial was refused. Hamilton v. Walker, 4 A.J.R., 36.

Improper Compromise—Who May Take Advantage of.]—Where a plaintiff is entitled to all he claims or nothing, and the jury give him a verdict for half his claim, the defendant is not entitled to a new trial on the ground that the verdict is an improper compromise. It might, however, be a reason for granting a new trial on the application of the plaintiff, on the ground of inadequacy of damages. Logan v. Spence, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 197.

Plaintiff Receiving Inadequate Damages.]—The defendant is not entitled to a new trial, because the damages received by the plaintiff were not so large as the plaintiff ought to have received. M'Ilree v. Norwich Union Insurance Company, 4 A.L.T., 45.

M. sued an insurance company on a policy for £350 on some buildings which had been burnt down by reason of the negligence of the Railway Department. There was some other property destroyed, which was uninsured, and the company refused to pay until M. had settled with the Department, which he did for £500, in full of all demands. M. then sued the company, and recovered £150. The company moved for a new trial on the grounds, among others, that M's. claim was included in the £500, and that if M. were entitled to anything over the £500, he was entitled to £350. Held that the Company was not entitled to a new trial on this ground. Ibid.

Mistake of Jury.]—At a trial the jurors gave a verdict for a certain sum, under a mistaken impression that the Court would make deductions for a set-off, and admissions as to payments, &c., made by the defendant; the amount of the deductions which the jurors ought to have made was admitted. On affidavits by three of the four jurors to this effect, the Court granted a rule nisi for a new trial. Welsh v. Smith, 1 V.R. (L.,) 87; 1 A.J.R., 88.

On Ground of Mistrial by Challenged Juror.] —On an application for a new trial on the ground that a juror, who had been challenged by the defendant, nevertheless sat on the trial; per Williams, J. On applications of this sort there should be a distinct statement that the applicant had not exhausted his challenge. Bryens v. M'Lennan, 1 A.J.R., 89.

Disqualified Juror not Challenged.]—If a juror, who is disqualified, be not challenged at the trial, the Court will not grant a new trial upon affidavits of the subsequent discovery of such disqualification. Sinclair v. Harding, 2 V.R. (L.,) 185; 2 A.J.R., 114.

Authority of Counsel Before Trial to Consent to Verdict.]—Where defendant's counsel had authority before trial to consent to a verdict, and the defendant being present in Court when he consented to a verdict had not expressed dissent, the Court refused a rule for a new trial. Jones v. Hodgson, 5 A.J.R., 17.

Limits to Comments on Conduct of Opposing Counsel.]—Plaintiff was asked certain questions in cross-examination as to his having executed a deed of assignment, and he answered that he had. This was objected to, and defendant put the deed in when plaintiff's counsel objected that it was not admissible, but immediately afterwards withdrew his objection. Defendant's counsel then declined to put the deed in, plaintiff's counsel commented on this, and asked the jury to believe the plaintiff rather than the witness who contradicted him, as they might fairly infer that the deed, if defendant had not been afraid to put it in, would have shown that the plaintiff was not quite disinterested. Held that the plaintiff's counsel pushed his privilege too far, but it was not a case for granting a new trial. Challacombe v. Wiggins, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 330; 3 A.L.T., 33.

False Imprisonment and Malicious Prosecution—Two Actions by two Persons for the Same Cause Against the Same Defendant—Cross Rules for New Trial.]—L. C. brought an action against J., and J. C. against J. for the same cause. The jury found for plaintiff, in the first action, damages (£50,) and entered a verdict for defendant in the second. On cross rules by defendant in the first case, and by plaintiff in second, for new trials on the ground that verdicts were in each case against evidence, the Court ordered verdict to stand in first case, and entered a stet processus in the second, each party to pay his own costs in the second case. Coe v. Jamieson, 3 A.J.R., 118.

Omission in Rule Nisi to State Grounds of Misdirection Complained of.]—Where a rule nisi for a new trial omitted to state the grounds of misdirection, the Court held that any objection to the rule could be made when it came on for argument. Walker v. George, 5 A.J.R., 21.

Rule Nisi When Granted.]—A rule nisi for a new trial should not be granted, generally speaking, if it would not be made absolute in the absence of any cause shown. Meyers v. Easton, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 283.

Leave to Move that Verdict be Entered—Damages Contingently Assessed—Plaintiff May Not Move for New Trial.]—A plaintiff may not move for a new trial where a verdict has been directed for the defendant, and contingent damages assessed, with leave to the plaintiff to move that a verdict be entered for himself. The plaintiff can do no more than move in pursuance of the leave reserved. Hasker v. Moorhead v. Blackwood, v. M'Mullen, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 160.

Objection Not Taken at the Trial.]—The rule which guides the Court in refusing new trials where the objection was not taken at nisi prius is adhered to generally, and alike whether it be applied to the improper reception or admission of evidence, or to the direction of the Judge on matter of fact, and whether the omission be on the part of the plaintiff or defendant. If parties come prepared to try issues and confine themselves to certain of them, or to one only, or to a particular view or hearing of the evidence with respect to that one, they are not at liberty to open up a new and totally different case in Banco, and it would appear that the result is the same whether the omission to take the objection, or to present the particular view to the jury, or to the judge, arise from inadvertence, forgetfulness, or deliberate intention. Roycroft v. Iago, 4 A.J.R., 145.

Seduction — Plaintiff Not Standing in Loco Parentis—Objection Not Taken at Trial.]—In an action for seduction the sole defence raised was that the defendant was not the father of the child, and a verdict was given for the plaintiff. On a rule nisi for a new trial it was objected that the plaintiff did not stand in loco parentis to the girl, and there was no evidence that he paid her anything for her services. Held that these objections not having been taken at the trial, the rule must be discharged. Ibid.

For a case in which the Court granted a new trial on an objection not taken at the trial, see Hartney v. Higgins, ante column 454.

Rule Nisi—Abandonment—Costs.] — Where a rule nisi for a new trial had been obtained, and before it came on for argument, but after briefs had been delivered, notice of abandonment had been served upon the other side by the party obtaining the rule, the Court discharged the rule with costs, leaving it to the Prothonotary to ascertain what costs had been incurred before service of the notice of abandonment. Chirnside v. Sanderson, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 53.

Costs of Rule.]—A defendant is entitled to his costs of a rule for a new trial, though a new trial be not necessary, if the jury by mistake have included in their verdict an amount not proved, which error can only be rectified by obtaining a rule nisi for a new trial, and this is not altered by the rule being discharged on terms of the plaintiff consenting to the necessary amendment. Quarrell v. Brown, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 212.

Costs.]—To a declaration on a promise to marry, defendant pleaded that he had never promised as alleged. On a rule nisi for a new trial (the jury having given substantial damages) on the ground that the fresh evidence showed that the plaintiff was not a widow, and had not been married to A., as she swore, but had been married to B. who was now living. Rule absolute granted on terms of defendant withdrawing his plea and pleading otherwise as he might be advised, and of his paying the taxed costs of the rule and of the former trial. Egdin v. Horner, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 353.

NONSUIT.

Per Privy Council—In every case before evidence is left to the jury there is a preliminary question for the Judge, not whether there is literally any evidence, but whether there is any evidence upon which a jury can proceed to find a verdict for the party producing it upon whom the onus of proof is imposed. Giblin v. M'Mullen, L.R. 2, P.C. 317.

Per Privy Council—A nonsuit should not be entered if there is any evidence whatever to go to the jury. Forbes v. M'Donald, 5 A.J.R., 85. For facts see S.C., ante column 24.

Proof of Issue—Plaintiff Offering no Evidence.]—If a plaintiff offers no evidence in support of the issue he has to prove he must be nonsuited; and if he offers some, however slight, he must not sever his case. Wharton v. Tuohy, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 217.

When Granted—Improper Admission of Evidence.]—Where, in a dispute as to the proper position of certain land, and the deeds of other lands have been improperly admitted in evidence to show the position of one of the abutting streets, it is no ground for a nonsuit if there be sufficient evidence without them to support the verdict. Small v. Glen, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 154; 1 A.L.T., 197.

Duty of Judge Where Evidence Conflicts.]—Where the evidence is conflicting, the Judge ought to send the case to the jury, or, if he nonsuit, he ought only to say that there is no evidence fit to be sent to a jury with which they could deal; he is not to offer any opinion upon the effect of the evidence. A Judge should not nonsuit because some of the evidence for the plaintiff suggests that the cause of action was a felony. Foster v. Green, 8 V.L.R., (L.,) 19; 3 A.L.T., 97.

How far Evidsnce for Defendant may be Considered in Entering a Nonsuit.]—See Burns v. Slater, ante column 876.

Objection by Way of Nonsuit—How it Should be Taken.]—An objection by way of nonsuit at a trial ought to be taken upon some specific grounds, and not upon the general ground that there is no case to go to the jury. Band of Hope and Albion Consuls v. Mackay, 2 V.R. (L.,) 158; 2 A.J.R., 112.

Setting Aside Nonsuit.]—It is not necessary to state any grounds in a rule nisi for setting aside a nonsuit. Bishop v. Martin 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 33.

When Set Aside.]—Where evidence on behalf of a plaintiff was tendered for one purpose (parol evidence explanatory of a contract,) and it was rejected by the Judge as inadmissible for that purpose, and the plaintiff thereupon elected to be nonsuited, but afterwards it appeared that the evidence was admissible, and material for another purpose (viz., to explain the true state of accounts between the parties,) not presented at the trial. Held, by Stawell, C.J., and Williams, J. (Molesworth, J., dissenting,) that there should be a rule to set aside the nonsuit, and directing a new trial. Beedle v. Thomas, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 89.

When Set Aside.]—A plaintiff who was present, but whose counsel was absent, was nonsuited, but was not formally called in the usual way. The Court set aside the nonsuit, and granted a new trial on payment of the costs of the day, but without costs of the rule. Francis v. Dunn, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 201.

When Set Aside.]—A. brought an action for assault against B. B. apologised and agreed to pay costs. During negotiations as to costs, B., without any communication to plaintiff, got a nonsuit recorded. Rule absolute to set aside nonsuit with costs. Boyle v. Hepburn, 3 A.J.R., 73.

Jury Discharged Without a Verdict.]—Where a jury was discharged without being able to agree as to a verdict, the Court refused to grant a rule to enter a nonsuit pursuant to leave reserved. Filgate v. Thomson, 5 A.J.R., 66.

In County Court—County Court Act, No. 184.]—Where the plaintiffs sued defendant in the County Court at Sandhurst, for the expense of making a drain, and the particulars of demand were drawn in the form of a declaration, and the defendant demurred to the plaint and particulars as not disclosing a cause of action, the County Court Judge nonsuited the plaintiffs on that ground. On appeal Held that the objection was one to the proofs and not to the pleadings. Nonsuit set aside, case remitted for hearing. Mayor of Sandhurst v. Sherbon, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 37.

Affidavit Sworn Before Notary.]—Where an affidavit is sworn before a notary in a place where there is a commissioner of the Court, evidence is required of the notary's signature, In the Estate of Sutherland, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 23; 5 A.L.T., 156.

NUISANCE.

Noxious Trades.]—Per Barry, J. To constitute a nuisance there need not be injury to the public health. If a noxious trade is established in a place and people come to reside in the neighbourhood, or a road is brought to it, the public are entitled to complain. Judicial notice must be taken that this country is in a state of progressive location; it is only being inhabited by degrees. Regina v. M'Meikan, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 68.

Flow of Sludge—Diversion.]—Where sludge from the workings of a third person flows through the plaintiff's land, defendants have no right to intercept such sludge and divert it into their own land for the purpose of extracting water from it, and then to allow the residue in a more mischievous form, to resume its previous course down to the plaintiff's land. Bonshaw Freehold Gold Mining Company v. Prince of Wales Company, 5 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 140, 162.

Flushing Closet—Percolation of Water Used.]—M'Ewan v. Mills, see post column 1101.

Claim in Respect of Future Contingent Liability of Land to be Depreciated in Value through being Flooded—Future Damages.]—A declaration set forth that defendants had cut away the bank of a river, placed the earth forming it so as to protect a public road from floods, and afterwards removed it, but did not replace any of the earth removed in the original position on the bank of the river, by which plaintiff's land was flooded, and was liable to be flooded. Held that in the case of such a nuisance, no cause of action arose in respect of a future injury until such injury occurred; that until such injury occurred there was no damnum. Manson v. Shire of Maffra, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 364; 3 A.L.T., 32.

Use of Nightsoil for Manure.]—The use of nightsoil for manure is not a nuisance at common law, and since it is not, a bye-law for preventing it is not authorised by Sub-sec. 8, of Sec. 213, of Act No. 506. Higgins v. Egleson, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 196.

Obstruction of Sea Breezes and View—Private Persons Suing.]—Courts of Equity do not treat agreeable views and clear ventilation as valuable rights legally enforceable, or the infringement of them as nuisances. Private persons can only sue to restrain public nuisances when they are specially injured by a breach of public trust. Palmer v. Board of Land and Works, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 80.

See S.C. ante columns, 329, 330.

Presumption of Nuisance—Posts Placed on Road for Protection of Public.]—Birmingham v. Shire of Berwick, ante column 861.

Unwarrantable Erection of Fence Upon a Road—Who may Sue—Liability.]—The unwarrantable erection by a Municipal Council of a fence upon a road, is a nuisance, which affords only one cause of action to an adjoining owner injured thereby, and for which he may recover prospective damages. And he will not be bound by acquiesence in the nuisance if he were not aware that injury would result to his property. No damages can be recovered by a tenant of such adjoining land for an injury to the reversion. Kensington Starch and Maizena Company v. Mayor of Essendon and Flemington, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 265; 2 A.L.T. 35.

Altering Street—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 377.]—A Corporation in altering levels of streets under the powers given by Sec. 377, must not do so, so as to create a public nuisance, e.g., by obstructing the access to a public highway, or so as to interfere with or injure private rights. King v. Mayor, &c., of Kew, ante column, 855.

Obstruction in a Public Highway.]—A permanent obstruction placed in a public highway without lawful authority, which renders such highway less commodious than before to the public, is a public nuisance at common law, punishable by indictment, and removable by any member of the public whose right of user of the highway is obstructed by it. Fergusson v. Union Steam Navigation Company, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 279, 287; 6 A.L.T., 120.

Landlord—Defendant.]—M. was the freehold owner of certain stores, and previous to his letting the premises to A., a tenant, he had built a closet so constructed as to require its being daily cleansed. During A.'s tenancy A. flushed it with water, and the water used for this purpose becoming foul, used to percolate into the cellars underneath, and thence into the plaintiff's adjoining cellars. The plaintiff sued M., and obtained a verdict. On rule nisi for a nonsuit, Held that the closet was not per se a nuisance, that it need not have been used at all, and whether used or not the landlord would have been entitled to the rent reserved; that the adoption of the particular mode of cleansing by the tenant created the nuisance, and that M., as landlord, was not answerable for his tenant's act. Rule made absolute. McEwan v. Mills, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 118.

Liability of Occupier.]—S. was the occupier of certain cottages from and through which a drain-pipe came, which caused a nusiance on B.'s land. Held that S. as such occupier was liable for the nuisance, although he had not constructed the drain. Braine v. Summers, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 420; 3 A.L.T., 57.

Liability of Council for Nuisance Under Executed Contract.]—Weir v. Mayor of E. Collingwood, ante columns 230, 231.

And see Palmer v. Board of Land and Works, and Kensington Starch and Maizena Company v. Mayor of Essendon, ante columns 1100, 1101, as to rights of parties to restrain.

Nuisance Caused by Several Persons.]—It is no defence to a suit to restrain a nuisance to set up that so many other persons have contributed to the nuisance that it would be useless to restrain the defendants. Bonshaw Freehold Gold Mining Company v. Prince of Wales Company, 5 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 140,156.

Pleadings in Action—Plea of Acquiescence.]—In an action for a nuisance the defendant put in a plea setting up the plaintiff's acquiescence in certain erections and improvements on the defendant's premises made with a view of endeavouring to prevent a nuisance. Held bad. Cooper v. Dangerfield, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 96; 6 A.L.T., 8.

Per Holroyd, J. To render the plea good, the defendants would have to show that the plaintiff knew, not that the alterations made by the defendants were made to prevent a nuisance, but that the result of such alterations would be a continued nuisance. The responsibility of attempting improvement was upon the defendants, but the effect of their attempt was not for the plaintiff to foresee. When the plaintiff merely knows that certain alterations in works which cause a nuisance are being effected with a view to make and keep those works inoffensive, he cannot be assumed to know that those alterations will end in a result exactly the reverse of their object. Ibid.

Declaration for a nuisance caused by defendant in carrying on his business as an iron-founder, on premises adjoining the plaintiff's. Plea, that the defendant's business was a necessary and a proper one, carried on in an inoffensive manner; that the defendant had three years before, with the plaintiff's knowledge, erected certain buildings and improvements intended to prevent the nuisance; and that the plaintiff, knowing the purposes for which such buildings were erected, had consented and acquiesced in their erection. Held bad, as neither raising the general issue, nor affording a good defence on equitable grounds. Ibid.

Injunction Against Crown.]—The Court has no jurisdiction to prevent a nuisance on the part of the Crown if the matter does not rest on a contract. Pike v. The Queen, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 194; 2 A.L.T., 75.

For facts see S.C., ante column 323.

Revocation of License to Commit Nuisance—When Permitted.]—Aitken v. Bates, ante columns 827, 828.

Flow of Sludge—Mining Works—Issue at Law.]—The plaintiff company were seized of certain lands on which they were mining; the defendant company were mining on Crown lands adjoining. The defendants had allowed the sludge from their works to flow into a certain creek on defendant's land, rendering it unfit for mining purposes. On motion for interlocutory injunction restraining defendants from permitting the overflow of sludge, Held that the plaintiffs were suffering from day to day an inconvenience from the pollution of their water, and a class of inconvenience which is in one sense irreparable, that is, hardly reducible to damages, and injunction granted. Held also that where there is no question as to plaintiff's title or as to fact of nuisance, but only as to whether nuisance was committed by defendants or not, an injunction will be granted without an issue at law being directed. Bonshaw Freehold Gold Mining Company v. Prince of Wales Company, 4 W. W. & A'B., (E.,) 126.

Flow of Sludge—Injury to Land—Reversioner.]—Where the flow of sludge had accumulated on surface land in the occupation of a tenant of the plaintiff company, and the defendant company had agreed with the tenant to pay him an adequate compensation for the injury caused thereby, Held that the plaintiff company, as reversioners, were entitled to protect their land from an accumulation of sludge upon it, which would probably injure its value permanently, but that they might be fully compensated in damages at the termination of the lease, and it was not a case for interlocutory injunction. Ibid.

Cause to Stand Over—Conflicting Evidence.]—Where the evidence was very conflicting the Court ordered the cause to stand over for six months with liberty to bring an action at law. Lockhead v. Noble, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 131.

Bill Retained—Action at Law.]—In a suit for an injunction to restrain several distinct and different nuisances caused by an iron foundry, there was no doubt as to the plaintiff's title to the land, or as to the inconvenience suffered by him from the foundry; but the Court distinguishing between inconvenience and nuisance, and thinking it advisable that the question whether a nuisance was in fact committed, should be tried by a jury, ordered the bill to be retained for six months, with liberty to the plaintiff to proceed meanwhile by an action at law. Cooper v. Dangerfield, 10 V.L.R (E.,) 29.

Suit for Injunction—Three Nuisances out of Six Proved—Costs.]—In a suit for an injunction to restrain the defendant from committing six alleged nuisances, the plaintiff proved three only, but the nuisances proved were not distinct in character from those not proved. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to his general costs of suit. Cooper v. Dangerfield, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 145.

Suit for Injunction — Delay — Costs.] — The defendants began to commit nuisances by means of an ironfoundry in 1878, but at first only in a small degree, gradually increasing their magnitude till 1883, when plaintiff instituted a suit to restrain them. The plaintiff made few complaints, and mild, till shortly before suit, when they became vehement. Held that the delay in bringing the suit was not so long as to convert the defendant's encroachment into a right, or to disentitle the plaintiff to his costs of suit. Ibid.

Endeavour to Abate Nuisance—Acquiescence.]—Semble, Acquiescence by the plaintiff in buildings and erections being put up at a large expense by the defendant, in order to try and abate a nuisance, will not bar the plaintiff's right to an injunction if the endeavour be unsuccessful. Ibid.

Complaint for Creating a Nuisance Under "Public Health Act," No. 310, Sec. 32—Adjournment for Opportunity of Abatement—Practice.]—See Regina v. Marsden, ex parte Corbett, ante columns 498, 499.

"Public Health Stat.," No. 310, Sec. 32.]—Rule nisi calling on M'M., proprietor of a bone mill at Flemington, to show cause why a criminal information for a nuisance should not be filed against him. Held that the same principles which guide grand juries should guide the officers here who stand in the place of grand juries, and that affidavits showing a strong primâ facie case, being sufficient to justify a grand jury in filing an information, would be sufficient here; that the jurisdiction of the Court is not taken away by Act No 310, which contains no express enactment to that effect; but that as the Central Board of Health had issued an order to abate the nuisance, the Court would presume that the Board would see its orders carried into effect, and that the Court is loth to interfere except in extreme cases. Rule discharged, defendant paying costs. Regina v. M'Meikan, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 68.

The complaint must be laid at the instance of the Local Board, but the summons under Sec. 32 of Act No. 310 may be in any person's name. Cruikshank v. Kitchen, ante column 498.

15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 13.]—15 Vic. No. 10, Sec. 13, confers larger powers on the Supreme Court than the Court of Queen's Bench, and the Court has a discretion as to granting criminal informations. Rule absolute for leave to file a criminal information for a nuisance where a summons before justices for the nuisance had been dismissed. Regina v. M'Meikan, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 267; N.C. 72.

Act No. 265, Sec. 5, Sub-sec. 7—Carting Nightsoil—Licence.]—All that the Act requires is a licence from the municipality from which the nightsoil is carted away, and it is not necessary to obtain a licence from another municipality through which it is being carted. *Fitches v. This lane had been metalled and formed, and was used as a thoroughfare, though it had not been set out in accordance with Secs. 11 and 12. Held that the existence of the footway in fact was sufficient evidence to constitute a footway within the meaning of Sec. 5, Sub-sec. 13, and that proof of compliance with Sec. 11 was not necessary. Order nisi for prohibition discharged. Regina v. Lloyd, ex parte Leonard, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 79.

Act 265, Sec. 8—Obstructing Street by Exposing Goods for Sale.]—To constitute an offence under Sec. 8, it is sufficient if an owner authorise his servant to expose the goods for sale, and if any part of the goods are exposed for sale, the justices may infer that a portion of the goods in cases not opened to view were similarly exposed. Regina v. O'Flaherty, ex parte Winter, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 14; 4 A.L.T., 147.

Act No. 265, Sec. 16, Sub-sec. 7—Allowing Cattle to Wandsr in ths Streets.]—Held that the enactment must be read as "wilfully allowing, &c.," and that wilfulness was an essential element in the offence. Regina v. Shuter, ex parte Walker, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 204.

Act No. 268, Sec. 16, Sub-sec. 8—Attack by Dog.] It is necessary that the "permitting" under the section should be wilful, and the owner of the dog is not liable for the offence if he is not present at the time of the attack. Regina v. Munro, ex parte Stephen, 5 A J.R., 16.

Obstructing Water Course—"Police Offences Stat., 1865," Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 1.]—Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 1 of the "Police Offences Stat. 1865," applies only to artificial, and not to natural, watercourses. Weist v. Whittan, 1 A.J.R., 78.

Polluting a Fountain—"Police Offences Stat. 1865," Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 1.]—An iron tank used to collect and hold water from the roof of a house for drinking purposes is not a "fountain" within the meaning of Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 1 of the "Police Offences Stat. 1865." Stewart v. Finnegan, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 93.

Wilful Trespass—"Town and Country Police Act 1855," No. 14, Sec. 15, Sub-sec. 7.]—The cases of wilful trespass contemplated in Sec. 15, Sub-sec. 7, of Act No. 14, are those where a person in undisputed possession, finding a trespasser warns him off, and in such the justices have jurisdiction; but it is not contemplated in the Act that justices should have jurisdiction in such a complicated case as the right of property in a school-house. Fisher v. Wheatland, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 130.

Wilful Trespass—Act. No. 265, Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 6.]—A trespass committed by a person authorised by another person who claims to be a part owner of the premises alleged to be trespasseed upon, is not a wilful trespass within the jurisdiction of justices under Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 6, of the "Police Offences Stat. 1865." Regina v. Mollison, ex parte Colclough, 4 A.J.R., 75.

Trespassing in Pursuit of Game.]—An entry upon land "to seek" game is an offence, and is not within the protection of Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 6, as to entry upon land in "pursuit" of game. Plier v. Trumble,, 4 A.J.R., 26.

Act No. 265, Sec. 17, Sub-sec 6—Damaging a Fence.]—It is open to the defendant, on a complaint before justices for trespass and damaging a fence, to prove that the complainant was not possessed of the property damaged. M'Mahon v. O'Keefe, 1 V.R. (L.,) 125; 1 A.J.R., 121.

Wilful Trespass—"Police Offences Stat. 1865," Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 6.]—R. was warned not to enter a private market, but, notwithstanding the warning, entered with his horse and cart, and was turned out, but pushed back and took out his horse and cart. Held that R. was not guilty of wilful trespass under Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 6, of the "Police Offences Stat. 1865," in respect of such re-entry, to bring out his horse and cart Regina v. Lloyd, ex parte Rowan, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 227.

Act No. 265, Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 6—Wilful Trespass—Possession Obtained by Subterfuge.]—B. was convicted by justices under Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 6, of the Act for wilful trespass upon his brother's house. It appeared that the brother (the informant) had been in undisturbed possession of the house, having the key of it, that B. obtained the loan of the key on the pretext of getting some of his luggage out of the house, and then refused to give up possession. Held that the Court would not interfere with the conviction, there being evidence to support the justices' determination, and that they fully understood the law. Regina v. Taylor, ex parte Blain, 5 V.L.R (L.,) 271; 1 A.L.T. 39.

Act No. 265, Sec. 17, Sub-sec 6—Trespass.]—The trespass mentioned in Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 6, of Act No. 265, must be a personal act. Regina v. Garside, ex parte Biggs, 6 A.L.T., 152.

"Police Offences Stat. 1865," Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 7—Injury to Property.]—Where five persons were summoned before justices for damage to a tramway, the damages being estimated at £62, and all the parties were summoned as for £15 damages, and one of them on conviction with £5 damages, appealed on the ground that the damage done amounted to £62; and by Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 7, of the "Police Offences Statute," the justices only had jurisdiction when the damage was under £20; and that it was impossible to apportion the damages between the five offenders, Held that the objection was fatal, and appeal allowed with costs. Smith v. Perkins, 1 A.J.R., 28.

"Town and Country Police Act," 18 Vic., No. 14, Sec. 15—Injury to Boat in Hobson's Bay.]—See Webb v. Andrews, ante column 752, and compare Sec 17, Sub-sec. 7, of Act No. 265.

Wilful Destruction of Property—Act No. 265, Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 7.]—Where a tenant cuts down a fence he is guilty of no offence under the Statute, the landlord's remedy being by civil action. Regina v. O'Brien, ex parte Davidson, 5 A.J.R., 16.

Destruction of Property—Act No. 265, Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 7—In Assertion of Right.]—C. was convicted of cutting down a fence upon private property belonging to W. It appeared that a public road on the property was fenced across, and that the track generally used diverged upon W.'s property, that C. went along the track and cut down the fence, believing that the place where he cut it was on the road, though actually it was on W.'s property. Held that he was liable, and conviction by justices affirmed. Cahill v. White, 5 A.J.R., 73.

Accidentally Breaking Glass in a Window—"Police Offences Stat. 1865" Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 7.]—Accidentally breaking glass in a window is not an offence under Sub-sec. 7 of Sec. 17 of the "Police Offences Statute 1865." Regina v. Little, ex parte Reynolds, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 124; 4 A.L.T., 4.

Act No. 265, Sec 17, Sub-sec. 7.—Injury to Property.]—Held, per Stawell, C.J., and Williams, J., dissentiente Higinbotham, J., Sub-sec. 7 of Sec. 17 (in this respect the same as Sub-secs. 3, 4, 5, and 6,) refers to acts committed wilfully and intentionally, and does not refer to injuries occasioned by negligence: such last mentioned injuries are to be compensated for by actions seeking damages, and do not constitute offences within the Act. Regina v. Alley, ex parte Davey, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 59; A.L.T., 158.

Act No. 265, Sec. 18—Possession of Stolen Property—Evidence.]—Defendant was summoned to satisfy justices that she came lawfully by property found in her possession and alleged to have been stolen. Defendant's counsel made a statement that the property was her own property, and this statement was not contradicted by any evidence brought before the justices. On this the justices dismissed the summons. On appeal, Held that they were right. Cameron v. Thompson, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 70.

Act No. 265, Secs. 3, 23—Cruelty to Animals.]—See Anderson v. Wilson, under ANIMALS, ante column 28.

Abusive Language in a Place of Public Resort—"Vagrant Act," 16 Vic., No. 22, Sec. 5.]—The defendant was convicted in Petty Sessions for that he was on a certain day "in a certain public place, to wit, a room in the Shamrock Hotel, Barkly-street, Ararat, where the public were then assembled, and there had the right of free access, ingress, regress, and departure, and did use abusive language towards one S., whereby a breach of peace might have been occasioned, to wit, &c." Held, reversing decision of General Sessions, that the room might have been shown by evidence to have been a place of public resort within the meaning of Sec. 5 of the Act No. 22, and an order, quashing conviction by Petty Sessions, on the ground that the conviction did not show upon its face that the room was a public place within the meaning of the Act, was itself quashed. Swan v. M'Lellan, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 6.

[Compare the provisions of Act No. 265, Sec. 26.]

Act No, 265, Sec. 26—Obscene Language in a "Public Place."]—The board-room of a district road board, although the Act No. 176 requires the public to be admitted to the proceedings of the board, is not, during the sittings of the board, a public place within the meaning of Sec. 26 of Act No. 265. Taylor v. Phelan, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 242; N.C. 59.

Act No. 265, Sec. 26—Public Place.]—A room in a publichouse is not a public place within Sec. 26, necessarily, for a public place is a place where all the public may pass and repass at any hour of the twenty-four, and not where the public may resort for particular purposes at certain hours only. Morgan v. Smallman, 5 A.J.R., 165.

Act No 265, Sec. 26—Insulting Words.]—C. was summoned and fined for using insulting words "whereby a breach of the peace might have been committed." There was no breach of the peace in fact committed. Held that the summons disclosed no offence under Sec. 26 of the Act. Clarson v. Blair, 3 V.R. (L.,) 202; 3 A.J.R., 82.

Act No. 265, Sec. 26—"Insulting Words" in Public Place—Publichouse Bar.]—An information was laid for using insulting words in a public place. The evidence proved that the words had been used in "P.'s publichouse at B." Held that the justices might infer that the language was used on the premises of a licensed publican, and that the bar, at which it was sworn people had drinks in that publichouse, was an open bar in such premises. Regina v. Carr, ex parte Sanderson, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 188.

Drawing for Prizes in a Lottery by a Mode of Chance—"Police Offences Stat. 1865," No. 265, Sec. 31.]—A person not being beneficially interested in a lottery cannot be convicted of an offence under Sec. 31 of the "Police Offences Stat. 1865," for drawing for, or throwing for, or competing for, a prize in such lottery by dice or any other mode of chance. Bergin v. Cohen, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 133.

Amending Act, No. 424, Sec. 2—Lottery.]—The appellant C. was convicted of "assisting in managing and conducting a certain lottery, &c.," under Sec. 2 of the Act, but there was no evidence to show that the defendant C. was beneficially interested. Held that under such a conviction it is absolutely necessary to show that the person charged had a beneficial interest in the lottery. Appeal allowed. Cooey Hing v. Sadleir, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 130.

Assisting in Managing a Lottery—Act No. 424, Sec. 2—Bensficial Interest.]—On a charge of assisting in managing a lottery it is not necessary to show any beneficial interest in the lottery in the person charged, or in any other person. Regina v. Sturt, ex parte Ah Tack, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 103.

Act No. 424, Secs. 4, 6—Betting—"House, Office, Room, or Place"—Evidence.]—In an information under Sec. 6 of the Act, evidence was given of betting having taken place in a shop upon a certain day, not the day mentioned in the conviction. Held that there being no evidence of betting upon the day mentioned in the conviction, the case failed, and the date not having been amended, the conviction was ordered to be quashed. Zucker v. Jennings, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 168.

A "shop" is within the meaning of a "house, office, room, or place" in Sec. 6. It is not necessary for the information or the conviction to charge, that the betting was upon any event or contingency of or relating to any horse race, &c., specified in the latter part of Sec. 4 of Act No. 424. Jacobs v. Jennings, ibid, p. 172.

Act No. 424, Secs. 4, 6—Act No. 267, Sec. 73—Gaming—Two Offences.]—An information was laid against D. "for that he used a public-house" for the purpose "of money being received by and on behalf of himself, and for the consideration for an undertaking to pay certain money on the contingency of a horse race." The justices dismissed the information on an objection that the words "by and on behalf of" constituted two offences, and therefore the information was bad under Sec. 73 of Act No. 267. Held that the objection was untenable, and rule absolute for justices to hear case. Regina v. Moore, ex parte Duncan, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 1.

"Amendment Act," No. 424, Sec. 10—Betting Lists.]—C. erected a square board standing on the ground and supported by two uprights on two feet resting on the ground on "the Hill" at the Flemington racecourse, and was seen to take bets and to enter names on the board, using it as a betting list. Held that the spot occupied by the board was a "place" within the meeting of Sec. 10 of Act No. 424. Walker v. Cowen, 3 V.R. (L.,) 244; 3 A.J.R., 119.

Act No. 265, Sec. 32—Illegal Detention of Property—Contract of Letting.]—A Mrs. W. made an agreement with pianoforte sellers, W. and Co., to hire a piano, paying so much before delivery and so much by instalments, the property to be hers after a certain amount had been paid, with a proviso that she should have no property in it until that amount had been paid. When a small part of the purchase money had been paid, her husband sold the piano to B, who claimed it as against W. and Co. Held that it was an offence within Sec. 32, and that W. and Co. were entitled to a verdict. Wilkie v. Brew, N.C. 16.

"Under Police Offences Stat., 1865," Sec. 32—Illegal Detention of Goods—"Documents."]—H. was entrusted by C., as agent, with documents bearing on C.'s title to certain land, to obtain legal advice thereon. On C.'s demanding them back, H. pleaded inability, stating that they had been transmitted to a barrister, approved of by C., for opinion, and that the barrister upon being requested to return them stated that he had mislaid them. The justices ordered H. to return them, or pay £10. Held that the documents were not goods; and that the Justices had therefore no jurisdiction under the "Police Offences Statute 1865," Sec. 32. Headland v. Charlesworth, 1 A.J.R., 89.

Act No. 265, Sec. 32—Books of Mining Company.]—Books of a mining company are not goods within the meaning of Sec. 32. Zumstein v. Frey, 3 V.R. (L.,) 212; 3 A.J.R., 108.

Illegal Detention of Property—Due Notice.]—Under the "Police Offences Statute," No. 265. Sec. 32, on a charge for illegally detaining property, a demand by the complainant is a sufficient notice within the section.—Longford v. Meldrum, 4 A.J.R., 21.

Act No. 265, Sec. 32—Illegal Detention of Property—"Volunteers' Stat.," No. 266, Sec. 12.]—By the Stat. No. 266, the arms issued to a volunteer corps are vested in the commanding officer, and to justify the detention of a rifle by a gunsmith, an order from such officer is necessary. Hitchins v. Mumby, 5 A.J.R., 114.

Illegal Detention of Goods—Letter—"Police Offences Stat. 1865," Sec. 32.]—A letter is not "goods" within the meaning of Sec. 32 of the "Police Offences Stat. 1865," relating to illegal detention of goods, so that justices have no jurisdiction to convict for illegal detention of a letter. Regina v. Heron, ex parte Hamilton, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 21.

Act No. 265, Sec. 32—Illegal Detention—Removal of Fence.]—K. was entitled to an allotment of Crown Land under a miner's right, on which was erected a fence. This fence became the property of A., who removed the fence to an adjoining highway. B. purchased the allotment from the Crown under conditions of sale which reserved leave to the owner of improvements to remove them within a month. A. had not removed the fence within the month, and B. took possession of it on the highway. Held that A. could not, under Sec. 32 of Act No. 265, complain of B.'s detention of it as illegal. Ryan v. Nagle, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 1.

Idle and Disorderly Person—Act No. 265, Sec. 35, Sub-sec. 4.]—R. S. and A. S., husband and wife, occupied a house for which R. S. held a beer license, and this house "was frequented by prostitutes, who were in the habit of receiving men there for the purposes of prostitution." R. S. and A. S. were convicted at General Sessions "for being occupiers of a house frequented by persons having no visible means of support." Held that prostitutes were persons having "no visible means of support," and, as such, are idle and disorderly persons within the meaning of Sub-sec. 4, Sec. 35, of the Act; that the wife was rightly charged and convicted as "occupier," occupier being equivalent to "keeper" and not to "occupant" in its legal sense. Convictions upheld. Regina v. Sayers, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 46.

Frequenting a House—"Police Offences Stat.," Sec. 35, Sub-sec. 4.]—L. was convicted for being the occupier of a house "frequented" by persons having no lawful visible means of support. It appeared that L. was the occupier of a house, and that three girls (reputed to be prostitutes) resided with her. One had done so ever since L. first occupied the house, and the other two had done so for six weeks previous to the summons; but none of them paid any rent. Held that the fact that the girls resided in the house for some time did not prevent its being held that they "frequented" it; and that the girls were not the occupiers of the house, but were merely tolerated there by L. Leister v. Short, 1 V.R. (L.,) 187; 1 A.J.R. 151.

Act No. 265, Sec. 36, Sub-sec. 3—Fraudulent Representations to "Charitable Institution and Private Individual."]—The word "charitable" in Sub-sec. 3 of Sec. 36, governs both "institution" and "private individual," and the justices have not jurisdiction over offences which are ordinary impositions upon private individuals. The offence is that of a person who endeavours to obtain as a gift of charity some benefit or advantage by means of a fraudulent representation. Regina v. Armstrong, ex parte M'Pherson, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 234; 3 A.L.T., 9.

Act No. 265, Sec. 36, Sub-sec. 5—Indecently Exposing Person—Evidence.]—A. was convicted for indecent exposure of his person under Sec. 36 of the Act, and the question reserved was whether certain evidence, which put a true colour upon certain acts which were equivocal, and which rebutted a defence of infirmity, was admissible. Held that where the act was equivocal, there being a doubt whether the act was wilful or not, evidence was admissible, and it was also admissible to rebut the defence set up. Vernon v. Mollison, 5 A.J.R., 123.

Sec. 36, Sub-sec. 5—Indecent Exposure—What is.]—On a charge of indecent exposure it is unnecessary to prove that the prisoner was actually seen by any one in the highway when he was exposing himself; it is sufficient to prove that he was in view, and could have been seen by any person there. Regina v. Benson, ex parte Tubby, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 2.

"Vagrant Act," 14 Vic., No. 4, Sec. 3—Summary Jurisdiction of Magistrates.]—The game of "red and white" at cards is, not in itself, an "unlawful game;" and unlawfully playing the game does not make it an "unlawful game," or constitute the offence of "playing at any unlawful game" within the meaning of the "Vagrant Act," Sec. 3, so as to give magistrates summary jurisdiction over the offence, the game not being enumerated in that section as an unlawful game. Regina v. Smith Brown, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 121.

What Constitutes an Offence — Wilfulness or Intention.]—Wilfulness, or intention to commit an offence, is not to be taken as a necessary ingredient in a statutory offence, unless the statute creating the offence so provides. Persse v. Smith, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 201.

2. Under other Statutes.

"Criminal Law and Practice Stat. 1864," Sec. 34—Assaulting a Police Officer in the Execution of his Duty.]—Where a constable comes up after an assault has been committed, it is his duty, under Sec. 56 of the "Police Offences Stat. 1865," if required by the person assaulted, to arrest the offender; and if such offender forcibly resist, he may be convicted, under Sec. 34 of the "Criminal Law and Practice Stat. 1864," of assaulting a peace officer in the execution of his duty. Regina v. Huxley and Walsh, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 15; 3 A.L.T., 96.

3. Punishment of Offences and Jurisdiction of Justices.

Act No. 265, Sec. 8—Act No. 22, Sec 8—Obstructing Street by Exposing Goods for Sale—Non-removal of Goods After Notice—Forfeiture.]—

Sec. 8 of Act No. 265, provides two independent punishments for two distinct offences; the one being a conviction for obstructing the street by exposing the goods for sale; the other forfeiture of the goods when not removed after six hours' notice; the conviction for the first offence need not precede a forfeiture of the goods exposed and not removed. Although no power is given by Sec. 8 of Act No. 265 to justices to forfeit, yet (dubitante, Williams, J.) the power may be inferred from Sec. 8 of Act No. 22 ("Interpretation Act.") It is sufficient if an owner authorise his servant to expose the goods for sale, and if any part of the goods are exposed for sale, the justices may infer that a portion of the goods in cases not opened to view were similarly exposed. Regina v. O'Flaherty, ex parte Winter, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 14; 4 A.L.T., 147.

"Police Offences Stat. 1865," No. 265, Sec. 16, Sub-sec. 7—Conviction—Second Offence—Act No. 630, Sec. 5.]—Defendant had been previously convicted of an offence under Sec. 16, Sub-sec. 7, of Act No. 265, and was convicted of a second like offence, and under it sentenced to pay £10. The Court of General Sessions quashed the conviction on the ground that it had been made under Sec. 16, Sub-sec. 7, of Act No. 265 (which left the justices no jurisdiction as to the amount of the penalty, but compelled them to inflict a penalty of £10 for a second offence.) Sec. 16, Sub-sec. 7, of Act No. 265 was repealed by Act No. 630, Sec. 5. On appeal to the Supreme Court, Held that the conviction was good. Dobson v. Sinclair, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 69; 3 A.L.T., 106.

Conviction for—Compensation—"Police Offsnces Stat. 1865." Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 1.]—A conviction under Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 1, of the "Police Offences Stat. 1865," is not bad, because it does not also award compensation to the person aggrieved, since the provision for the award of compensation and the penalty are quite distinct. Stewart v. Finnegan, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 93.

Conviction for Trespass—Penalty—Lighter Penalty in the Alternative.]—In convicting for wilful trespass, under Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 7, of the "Police Offences Stat. 1865," the justices have no power to award an alternative lighter penalty in the case the defendant should quit the premises trespassed upon within a certain time. Regina v. Synnot, ex parte Main, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 35.

Jurisdiction of Justices when Ousted by Question of Title, and Claim of Right.]—Regina v. Webster, and other cases, ante columns 745, 746, 747.

Order for Delivery of Stolen Property—"Police Offences Stat. 1865," Secs. 19, 32.]—An order for the delivery of stolen property under Sec. 19 of the "Police Offences Statute 1865," cannot be enforced by the justices making an order for payment of the value of such property under Sec. 32 of that Act. Regina v. Templeton, ex parte Rea, 4 A.J.R., 116.

Act No. 265, Sec. 26—Jurisdiction to Add Hard Labour to Imprisonment.]—Justices have no power, under Sec. 26, to add hard labour to imprisonment in default of payment, and a prisoner so sentenced was on habeas corpus ordered to be discharged. In re Rogers, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 449.

(Sec. 26 is repealed by Act No. 502, "Judicature Act 1874.")

Conviction — Act No. 265, Secs. 26, 63.]—Under Sec. 26 the conviction must order, in default of immediate payment, commitment to prison as an alternative, and must be complete in itself, and Sec. 63 does not apply to Sec. 26, so as to control or supplement it. Regina v. Crotty, ex parte Gavin, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 6; 4 A.L.T., 147.

"Police Offences Stat. 1865," No. 265, Sec. 32—Limited "Trover" Jurisdiction.]—A. assigned his stock to N. by bill of sale. N. sold part of it, viz., 2 cows to K. K. demanded the cows from A., who refused to give them up. The justices made an order for delivery of the cows. Upon an order nisi for prohibition, Held that, by Act No. 265, the magistrates had a wider jurisdiction than, as was contended, between assignor and assignee only, and had not exceeded their jurisdiction. Order discharged. Regina v. Barnard, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 249.

Followed in Longford v. Meldrum, 4 A.J.R., 21.

Inability to Obey Order of Justices.]—S. had in his possession goods of M., and was summoned under Sec. 32 of the "Police Offences Stat. 1865" for illegal detention of the goods, and an order was made that S. should deliver the goods before a certain date. Before the date fixed an order was made by other justices, at the suit of S., against M. for payment of certain moneys due, and in default a distress warrant was issued, and on the date fixed for delivery up of the goods under the first order a constable executed the distress warrant, and took possession of the goods. M. summoned S. for disobedience of the order for delivery of the goods, and the justices who had made the order fixed the value of the goods, deducted the amount of the distress warrant, and ordered payment of the balance to M. The justices fixed the value of the goods arbitrarily without taking evidence, and when sold they realised about half of the value so fixed, and S. paid the difference between what they realised and the amount of the distress warrant to M. On rule nisi for a prohibition against the order directing payment of the difference between the value fixed by the justices and the amount of the distress warrant, Held that the order was wrong, and that S. had not disobeyed the order directing delivery up of the goods, but was unable to comply with it owing to the distress warrant. Regina v. Wyatt, ex parte Strettle, 4 A.J.R., 25.

Act No. 265, Sec. 32—Illegal Detention of Property—Ordsr.]—On a complaint under Sec. 32 of No. 265, the defendant set up a counter-claim, which the justices allowed to a certain amount, and ordered the goods to be delivered upon tender to defendant of a seaman's advance note for such amount. On disobedience a further order was made for the value of the goods. Held that the first order was bad, and that the second order based upon it could not stand; and that the order should have been made for delivery upon payment of the counter-claim in money. Regina v. Marks, ex parte O'Day, 5 A.J.R., 71.

Under Sec. 32 of the Act the value of the goods is to be determined by the same justice who heard and determined the original complaint, and the same justice must make the order for costs. Regina v. Call, ex parte Barber, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 346.

Illegal Detention—Order for Delivery or Payment of Value—Amendment—Costs—"Police Offences Stat. 1865," Sec. 32.]—Justices have no authority on a complaint, under Sec. 32 of the "Police Offences Stat. 1865," for illegal detention of goods, to make an order for delivery up of the goods, and also, in default, payment of their value; but, in drawing up the formal order, there is nothing to prevent the justices omitting that which is in excess of their jurisdiction, and making the order for delivery only. If they award costs in such order, the Court may amend by striking out the part relating to costs. Regina v. Miller, ex parte Dreher 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 157; 4 A.L.T., 12.

Indecent Exposure—Punishment—"Police Offences Stat. 1865," Sec. 36.]—On a conviction, under Sec. 36 of the "Police Offences Stat. 1865," for indecent exposure, justices may inflict the additional punishment of whipping, without further evidence as to the prisoner's age than their own conclusions. It then lies upon the prisoner to show that he is under the age mentioned in the Statute. Regina v. Benson, ex parte Tubby, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 2.

But a single justice, not being a police magistrate, has no power when adjudicating under Sec. 36, Sub-sec. 5, to inflict a whipping under Act No. 399, Sec. 33. Purcell v. Nimmo, 3 V.R. (L.,) 233; 3 A.J.R., 112.

Sentence for Unlawful Assault—Act No. 233. Sec. 38.]—Morrison v. Clarke, ante column 753.

Assisting in and Managing a Lottery—"Police Offences Stat. 1865," Part 2, Sec. 63—Act No. 424, Secs. 2, 17.]—C. was convicted and fined for assisting in and managing a lottery contrary to the provisions of the Act No. 424 ("Police Offences Stat. 1865" Amendment Act,) Sec. 2, and of Sec. 31 of the "Police Offences Stat. 1865," and on appeal to the General Sessions the conviction was affirmed subject to the opinion of the Supreme Court, on the points as to whether there should have been an adjudication of distress to bring the penalty under Sec. 31 of the "Police Offences Stat. 1865" before proceeding to imprisonment; whether before C. could be imprisoned he should be summoned to show cause, and whether there was evidence, that any one was beneficially interested in the scheme. Held that it was unnecessary to consider the third point, because the fact that tickets were sold, showed that some one was beneficially interested; that since the necessity for issuing a summons could not arise till after the conviction, the question in no way affected the conviction; and that as to the first point of Section 2 of the Act No. 424 was to be considered, as contained in Part 2 of the "Police Offences Stat.," the objection failed because Sec. 63 of that Statute authorised the course pursued; but that since the Act No. 424 made itself part of the "Police Offences Stat." generally, and not of Part 2, the justices could not award, as under Sec. 63, imprisonment in default of payment, without an intervening distress, and the conviction must be quashed. Cooey Hing v. Kabat, 4 A.J.R., 118.

Acting as Banker and Croupier at a Common Gaming-house — Penalty — "Police Offences Stat. 1865," Secs. 43, 63.]—Defendants were convicted, under "Police Offences Stat. 1865," Sec. 43, of having acted as banker and croupier respectively at a common gaming-house, and were adjudged to forfeit and pay the sum of £20 each, and each conviction then proceeded as follows:—To be paid immediately, and also to be paid and applied according to law, and the said sum not having been paid immediately, we, in the exercise of our discretion—which discretion we hereby exercise—adjudge the said defendant to be imprisoned. . . . for the space of three calendar months, unless the said sum shall be sooner paid. Held that the justices had power under Sec. 63 of the same Act to adjudge immediate imprisonment upon default of immediate payment without intervening distress, and that the convictions were good. Ex parte Fat Tack, ex parte Ah Poon, 6 A.L.T., 37.

Costs.]—Held, also, that the justices had a discretion, under Sec. 63, to award or not to award costs. Ibid.

Hearing Separate Summonsss Together.]—Three summonses in the same terms issued against three defendants for assisting in managing a certain lottery, were heard together, and the defendants convicted. On rule nisi for a prohibition, Held that the summonses were rightly heard together. Regina v. Sturt, ex parte Ah Tack, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 103.

Penalty — Method of Enforcing.] — Where a statute, "Sale of Poisons Act 1876," authorising the infliction of a penalty, is silent as to the mode of levying for the penalty, distress must precede imprisonment. Regina v. Shillinglaw, ex parte Chine and Ah Sen, 6 A.L.T., 161.

Vagrant Act, 16 Vic., No. 22, Secs. 2, 6—Power to Arrest—Warrant.]—Where justices, who had ordered the arrest of persons as vagrants for not giving a satisfactory account of themselves, were not seized of the case, and there was no information, summons, or warrant, and the parties were not offending at the time of arrest, Held that as there is no power under the "Vagrant Act" to arrest without warrant in cases where the act of vagrancy charged is the not giving to the justices a satisfactory account of means of livelihood, the arrest was bad. In re Cornillac, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 193.

OFFICE.

Statutory Office—Tenure Cannot be Altered by Commission Under Which it is Granted.]—Where an office is created by statute with a certain tenure, the tenure cannot be altered by the terms of a commission granting such office to the person appointed. Per Stawell, C. J., and Barry, J.; and per Molesworth, J.—A commission purporting to confer a different tenure would be altogether invalid. Regina v. Rogers, ex parte Lewis, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 334.

Manager of Mining Company—Situation Not an Office.]—The appointment of the Manager of a Mining Company, registered under Act No. 228, is not an "office," but a "situation," under a contract for service, and need not be under the Corporate Seal of the company. Royal Standard Gold Mining Company v. Wood, ante column 1017.

The word "officer" in Sec. 38 of the "Statute of Trusts 1864," includes the assistant manager of a bank. Regina v. Draper, 1 V.R. (L.,) 118; 1 A.J.R., 94.

PARLIAMENT.

Barrister, Member of One House Practising Before the Other.]—A barrister who is a member of one House of Parliament may plead before a committee of the other. Harbison v. Dobson, 2 A.J.R., 51.

Offence Against House of Parliament—Personating an Elector—"Electoral Act 1865," Sec. 116—"Judicature Act," No 502, Sec. 15, Sub-sec. 7—Jurisdiction of General Sessions.]—See Regina v. Hynes, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 292; 2 A.L.T., 45. Post under SESSIONS—Jurisdiction of Court of General Sessions.

Vote of Money to do a Work Confers No Authority.]—The fact that Parliament has voted a sum of money to defray the expenses of a certain work, gives no legal authority to do such work. Parliament may annul rights by legislation, not by votes of money for an object. Brooks v. The Queen, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 100, 110; 5 A.L.T., 199.

PARTNERSHIP.

I. THE CONTRACT.

Part Owners of Land—Graziers—Conversion into Partnership Property.]—W. and R., not previously partners, purchased lands, and sheep grazing on them, at an entire price, paid by their equal separate moneys and bills. After the purchase, each removed a portion of the sheep to their respective stations, and sent others in lieu of them. The substituted sheep and their progeny were there for three years, managed as joint property by R., and a station fund was lodged in a bank on their joint account, deducting station disbursements. Held that the lands were purchased, not to be sold as a joint speculation, but to be ultimately divided, and in the interim used only as a joint grazing farm; that W. and R. became partners in grazing as a result of being part owners in land, and did not become part owners of land in order to become partners in grazing; that there was nothing to convert separate property into partnership property, and that the land was therefore real and not personal estate. Ware v. Aitken, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 152.

G., a baker, being indebted to T. S. & Co., assigned his machinery, materials, etc., to T. S. & Co. T. S. & Co. took possession. B., one of the firm, acted as manager, and G. as salaried assistant. T. S. & Co. dissolved partnership, but this business was conducted as to the world in substantially the same manner as before, the only difference being that B. no longer remitted profits, but kept the proceeds and paid expenses—the partners agreeing that "G.'s business was to be worked within itself," with a view to a sale to B. M., the plaintiff, supplied necessary goods to B., and B. gave a promissory note, signed "T. S. & Co., in liquidation," M. being at this time aware of the dissolution. On an action on the note against T. S. & B. for goods sold and delivered, judgment went by default against B., but a verdict was entered in favour of T. S. On motion to enter a verdict for M., Held that, as creditors of G., T. S. & Co. were not partners with B., or liable for his acts, but as trustees they were entitled to all the proceeds of the business, and that a new partnership arose of T. S. & Co., B. managing on their behalf, and that T. S. was answerable for a debt properly incurred in the management of this business. Verdict entered for plaintiff. Moore v. Slater, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 161.

Participation in Profits.] — By agreement between A. and B., A. was to assist in preparing certain models for exhibition. B. had agreed to give A. 30s. a week while preparing models, and afterwards said that this amount should be treated as an advance, and that A. should "stand in," and refused to give A. more, representing that the less he received then the more he would get ultimately, and that it was as much to A.'s interest as his own to keep the expenses down. Held that it was evidence of a partnership. Smith v. Jones, N.C., 21.

Agreement to Share Profits — Agreement for Half Proceeds in Lieu of Rent.]—An agreement made between M., the landlord, and H., the lessee of a public-house, that every month an account of profits should be taken, and a half thereof should be paid to M. in lieu of rent, does not constitute a partnership between M. and H., so as to authorise H. to pledge M.'s credit for goods supplied to H. in his business as a publican. Regina v. Willis, ex parte Martin, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 149.

Agreement to Share Profits—Stipulation that one should be a Dormant Partner, and not Liable for Losses.]—R. was carrying on business alone, and was indebted to B. By a deed of March, 1874, it was recited that B. was about to purchase one-fourth interest in the business for the benefit of her son, aged 19, in R.'s employ, and that B. was to have sole control of the share in the business until the son came of age, and to have power to dispose of the share in case the son died under age. R. covenanted to assign in consideration of the purchase money, which was treated as paid to B. or her nominee, one fourth interest in the business, with all usual clauses in assignments from one partner to another, to pay her until son's majority, one-fourth of the profits, provided that until son's majority B. should not be liable for losses, or be held out to the world as a partner, and that R. would, during that period, indemnify her against losses, and that R. should allow B. access to the books, and behave towards her as a partner. Held that B. being entitled to profits, she was for the time a partner with R.; and that the matter being a purchase for a price never to be repaid, it was not a loan, and that B. could not prove in competition with other creditors. In re Ruddock, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 51; 1 A.L.T., 25.

Contract for Joint Sale of Goods.]—An agreement as follows:—"It is understood that we are to have one-fourth interest in T. and Co's remaining stock of rice, being about 1400 tons, ex Seagull, Portlaw, and Manifred, at £18 per ton in bond, four months' credit, with interest from 1st October. We are to receive 2½ per cent. commission on all rice sold through our hands (signed) A., agreed T. and Co.," does not constitute a partnership between the parties to it, and an action may be maintained at law for a loss on the transaction. Turnbull v. Ah Mouy, 2 A.J.R., 40.

Series of Isolated Transactions Held not to Constitute a Partnership.]—Boyd v. Holmes, ante columns 183, 184.

Bill Seeking Declaration of Partnership against Two Defendants—Proof of Sub-partnership between One of Defendants and Plaintiff.]—Bill sought a declaration of partnership and accounts as against two defendants, S. and T. S., one of the defendants, admitted there was a sub-partnership between him and plaintiff as to the half share of his partnership with T. in several contracts on separate bargains. On July 19, 1872, S. and T. entered into a contract as between themselves to share profits, taking no notice of plaintiff. In several of the contracts plaintiff superintended the men and paid wages, but his doing so was quite consistent with his being a ganger or a clerk of works. There was no proof of plaintiff having been consulted as to the contracts. Held that there was no partnership between plaintiff and both defendants, and the plaintiff could not turn his bill for accounts against two defendants into a bill for an account against J., who admitted a sub-partnership as to several of the contracts. Farham v. Thomas, 3 A.J.R., 103.

Joint Adventure—Recovery at Law of Part Expenses.]— C. and L. agreed that they should pay equally all the expenses of working a mine. C. and L. were owners of machinery which they agreed should be carried to the mine, and that all expenses connected with the mine should be borne equally by them until a company floated to work the mine, and in which they were shareholders, should be registered. L. had promised to pay C. a cheque for £28 as half the expenses, and C. sued L. for money paid. The Judge of the County Court nonsuited C., holding C. and L. to be partners. Held that the promise to pay an ascertained sum entitled C. to have the case sent to a jury; that the agreement was for a definite period, and a special object, and the fact that gold obtained during that period was to be placed to their joint account did not constitute a partnership. Appeal allowed. Collins v. Locke, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 13.

Incomplete Negotiations.] — An action was brought for breach of an alleged agreement to enter into partnership. A mere skeleton of an agreement was entered into, the terms of which were to be filled up by the parties subsequently. Held that in the absence of the fact of the parties having been previously acting together, so that their antecedent conduct might afford some grounds for drawing inferences, from which an agreement might be deduced, there was no binding contract. Ferrie v. Whitehead, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 132.

Share of Dividends—Mine.]—The plaintiff and others entered into an agreement with defendants that plaintiffs and others should work a share in a mine "on terms," viz., that they should receive £2 a fortnight each, and half the overplus of the dividend, after deducting the wages. Defendants then put an end to the bargain, and plaintiff claimed to be entitled as a partner, but acquiesced in an arrangement by which defendants paid for labour of plaintiff and three others, two "on terms," and two on wages, dividing amongst them the total amount which was received by plaintiff on their account. Held that there was no partnership between plaintiff and defendants under the original agreement, and that plaintiff could not claim an account of net profits as distinguished from dividends, as plaintiff had only stipulated for a share of dividends. Meldrum v. Atkinson, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 154.

E. M. and L. were partners in a contract to construct a railway. The deed of partnership, December, 1858, provided (inter alia) that L. should receive out of the entire net profits, as a debt due from it, the sum of £100 per month for the use of plant, chattels and effects brought in by him, the property after completion of the contract reverting to him absolutely. L., in fact, acted as a trustee for A. and B. Fresh plant and material were afterwards brought in and used. By deed, March, 1860, the partnership between E. M. and L. was dissolved, and a new partnership between L. and W. created on terms that the plant, &c., should be valued and assigned to W., and the amount of the aluation applied for the benefit of A. and B.; and by the deed E. and M. assigned their interests to W., and L., with A. and B.'s consent, assigned the plant, &c., to W. In a suit for accounts the Master in his report excluded from the disbursements a sum of £76,000, which had been spent in purchasing fresh plant, &c., and included only as disbursements the sum of £1500 paid to L. at the rate of £100 per month. Held that the Court could not go behind the provisions in the deed; and that, under the deed of 1858, L. being under no obligation to purchase fresh plant, &c., and such fresh plant being by the deed of March, 1860, treated as L.'s property, the expenses of repairing old and purchasing fresh stock should be borne by L. alone, and not by the partnership, and master's report affirmed. Evans v. Guthridge, 1 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 119.

Terminated Agreement—Forfeiture.]—A partnership agreement, containing a clause of forfeiture in certain events, having been terminated by consent, without any reservation as to forfeitures already incurred, the Court would not allow a prior forfeiture to be enforced against one of the partners. Collins v. Robbins, 5 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 194.

Meaning of the Word "Stevedoring."]—Semble, that "dumping" wool is not comprised within the term "stevedoring," in an agreement as to the latter business. Ibid.

When a deed of partnership between three partners, provided that no partner should dispose of his share except with express consent of a majority, and A wished to dispose of his share to D., B., one of the partners being a lunatic, Held that the consent of the partner selling and of one other partner was sufficient. In re Anderson, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 133.

Deed Containing Mutual Releases in Respect of Partnership Claims or any Other Account Whatever—ejusdem generis—Action by Partner on Money Counts.]—See Cameron v. Hughes, post under SUITS, &c., BETWEEN PARTNERS, &c.

Reference to Arbitration—Injunction to Restrain Partner from Interfering.] — F. carried on business as brewer and entered into partnership with E. and W., a deed being drawn up by which F. was appointed brewer and manager, and containing provisions for referring disputes to arbitration. Provision was also made for half-yearly meetings, and, at one of these, so much dissatisfaction was expressed at F.'s management that he resigned, and his resignation was accepted, and E. appointed manager. F. now insisted that his partners had no power to remove him except for just cause, and that they had no cause for so doing, and that the dispute was one properly referrable to arbitration. Held that E. and W. were justified in removing F., and that the arbitration clauses only referred to disputed accounts; and injunction granted to restrain F. from interfering in the business as manager, without prejudice to the right of F., if any, to act as brewer. Gough v. Farrington, 1 A.J.R., 3.

II. AGREEMENTS TO BECOME PARTNERS.

Uncertainty—Contrary to Public Policy.]—An agreement for mutually sharing, in certain proportions, the profits of all patents, industries, and copyrights possessed, or to be possessed by either party, indefinite as to duration, is not so uncertain or against public policy, as to prevent the Court from dealing with it. Le Roy v. Herrenschmidt, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 189.

Specific Performance.]—Specific performance of an agreement for a partnership is generally refused where part of the consideration consists of duties of which specific performance cannot be enforced. Ibid.

Specific Performance.] — Where a plaintiff seeks to enforce a partnership agreement, the terms of which are not reduced to writing, he must prove distinctly what its terms are. And unless the parties have engaged to execute some instrument of which execution can be ordered, Courts of Equity will not decree specific performance of an agreement for a partnership. Ogier v. Booth, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 160; 5 A.L.T., 109.

Shares and Proportions.]—M. purchased an hotel in 1875, and agreed with K. that he should share in the venture. K. paid a small part of the purchase-money, M. the rest, and M. received the rents and profits until 1877, when a re-sale was made at a profit. On bill by K. for a half share of the profit, there being a conflict of evidence, Held that K. was entitled to half such profit; but that, not having strenuously resisted M.'s contention, of which he was apprised before the re-sale, that he was not entitled to so much, K. was not entitled to costs. Kilpatrick v. Mackay, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 23.

Partnership in Selections—Partnership in Produce.]—In 1874 C. D. and W. took up adjoining selections under the "Land Act 1869," Sec. 20, and obtained licenses therefor, fenced and improved them. D. paid all the licence fees, and supplied all moneys for materials, &c. In 1877 leases were issued to C. D. and W., in accordance with the provisions of Sec. 20, and they agreed that the accounts should be adjusted between them by W. transferring to D. the lease of his selection, and, before this was done, C. and W. agreed that, in consideration therefor, W. should have an equal share in C.'s allotment, and that they should carry on a farming business thereon in partnership. In pursuance of the agreement they worked the lands in partnership, and stocked and improved them till W.'s death, on 11th September, 1883. On suit by W.'s administrator, seeking a declaration that a partnership existed between C. and W. in reference to the selections, Held that the agreement between C. and W. as to the transfer of W.'s selection being illegal under the "Land Act 1869," Sec. 21, the plaintiff was precluded from claiming the land as partner; but that there had been a partnership as to the farming business, and the plaintiff was entitled to half the partnership property on the land at W.'s death, but not to the subsequent produce. Wisbey v. Churchman, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 214; 6 A.L.T., 82.

III. Liability of Partners to Third Persons.

On Mortgage of Personalty of Firm.]—One partner can bind his co-partner by a mortgage of personal property of the firm, to secure a partnership debt. Williamson v. Cuningham, 3 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 188, 201.

Security Given by One Partner on Behalf of Firm.]—J. and G. entered into partnership on the agreement that each partner should contribute a certain amount of capital. J. did not bring in his stipulated amount of capital, and the firm commenced business with deficient capital. To remedy this G. borrowed from K., by means of acceptances, which he signed at various times, to the extent of £3000. There was a clause in the partnership deed, providing that no partner should give any note, bill, or security for the payment of any money on account of the partnership, without the written consent of the others, and if any partner should give any such without such consent, it should be deemed to be given on his separate account, and he should discharge the same out of his own moneys, and indemnify his partners against the same. There was evidence that J. had profited by, and was well aware of the transaction, although he had given no consent in writing. On taking accounts the Master reported that this sum of £3000 was due by the firm, and J. took exception to this on the ground that G. was really responsible for it. This exception was allowed, and G. appealed, and on appeal, Held that J. was aware of the whole transaction, and had profited by it, and so must have given his consent, and exceptions disallowed. James v. Greenwood, 1 A.J.R., 125; 2 A.J.R., 14.

Squatting Partnership—Power to Borrow so as to Bind the Firm.]—Per Molesworth, J. The power of borrowing by partners, so as to bind the co-partners, is incidental to a squatting, like a mercantile, partnership. Glass v. Higgins, 2 V.R. (E.,) 28, 31.

Proof of a debt as a partnership liability was admitted on a promissory note, given by one member of a squatting partnership on behalf of the firm. Ibid.

Power of Partner in Squatting Partnership to Give Lien on Wool.]—White v. The Colonial Bank, 2 V.R. (E.,) 96; 2 A.J.R., 49.

For facts, see S.C., ante column 840.

Promissory Note made in Name of Firm for Payment of Separate Debt of Partner—Presumption.]—A partner made a promissory note in the name of the firm, and gave it to a creditor in payment of his separate debt. For six months beforehand the partner had been in the habit of drawing cheques in the same way, for the same purpose, and these had been duly honoured. Held that this practice gave the creditor reasonable ground to presume that such partner had authority from the firm to make a promissory note in the manner, and for the purpose mentioned, and that the firm was liable. London Chartered Bank of Australia v. Kerr, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 330.

Breach of Trust—Liability of Co-partner of Executor.]—Two executors, J. T. and T. T., got in the estate of their testator, and lodged the overplus, consisting of money, in a bank. Of this a certain sum was advanced to J. T., who was in partnership with B., and was secured by an acceptance of B. and J. T., drawn in favour of T. T. in his private capacity. B. was aware that the money the firm received was a trust fund. T. T. had the bill discounted, and applied the proceeds to his own use. B. and J. T. paid the amount to the acceptor. Held that they, nevertheless, remained liable to the estate as having been parties to the breach of trust. Jones v. Taylor, 2 V.R., (E.,) 15.

Old and New Firms—New Firm taking Liabilities of Old.]—R. and F. were trading together in partnership, and, amongst other liabilities, incurred a large indebtedness to F. S. and Co. whilst this partnership was solvent, and the accounts showed a large excess of assets over liabilities and an increase of profits. Forster, a clerk in the employ of R. and F., was admitted as a partner, and had access to the account books. R. and F. swore that the new firm took over the assets and liabilities of the old firm, and there was evidence that the profits of the new firm were applied to extinguish the old liabilities. F. S. and Co. knew of the change in the firm, and the accounts submitted to them were in the same form, and treated the members of the firm of debtors in the same way under the old firm as under the new. Held by the full Court, reversing Molesworth, J., that the debt was transferred to the new firm from the old, as between the partners, and that the creditors, F. S. and Co., adopted that arrangement, and adopted the new firm in place of the old. Ex parte Rolfe and Bailey, in re Rutledge, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 16. Affirmed on appeal to the Privy Council, L.R., 1 P.C. 27.

Assets, What Are—Bank Shares.]—A deed of partnership between A. and M. contained a promise that the firm should take over the assets, and become responsible for the debts of an old firm of M. and N. Held that under this clause the new partnership was not entitled to separate bank shares deposited by M. and N. to secure a joint debt to a bank. Agnew v. M'Gregor, 1 A.J.R., 133.

On Joint Speculation.]—Where three persons joined in a guaranty for £10,000 to a bank for an overdraft on account of a vineyard speculation this was held not to limit the liability of one of them, to one third of that amount, as there was evidence of his recognising an extension of the undertaking. Holmes v. Bear, 2 A.J.R., 9. Affirmed on appeal, Ibid 41.

Loan of Capital Under No. 179—Creditor Claiming Under a Deed of Assignment.]—J. T. H. agreed with B., by deed, to make certain advances for the purposes of a business to be carried on by B., in the name of H. and Co., but under the control of H., who was to participate in the profits. The deed, which was drawn with express reference to the Act No. 179, provided that J. T. H. was not to be a partner. This business, which was unsuccessful, was carried on till September, 1869, when a new partnership was entered into between B. and W. H. for the purpose of carrying on the same business under the same name, J. T. H. to be in no way interested in the profits, but to receive the promissory notes of the firm for the debt due by B. in respect of the advances made to the former business. The new firm carried on business till January, 1870, when they executed a statutory deed of assignment in trust for creditors, in which J. T. H. was entered as a creditor, but the trustee refused to pay him a dividend on the ground that he was not entitled to rank in the joint estate until all the joint creditors had been paid, there being no separate estate, the trustee alleging that J. T. H. was either a partner in the firm or personally responsible for its debts. On rule nisi to compel the trustee to pay a dividend to J. T. H., Held that there was not sufficient evidence that the creditors of the firm considered J. T. H. as a partner; that if they had so considered him they ought not to have executed the deed of assignment in which he appeared as a creditor, and rule absolute, but considering J. T. H.'s conduct, without costs. In re Harcourt and Bailey, 1 V.R. (E.,) 104; 1 A.J.R., 76.

IV. Liability and Duties of Partners inter se.

When One Partner Insane—Dissolution—From what Date—Arbitration—If made during Insanity not Binding—Remuneration to One Partner—Valuation, not Sale.]—X. and W. were carrying on a business in partnership under a deed which contained the usual stipulations for fidelity, justice, and diligence; that each should not, without the consent of the other, endorse, sign, draw, or accept any bill of exchange or promissory note; and that each should enter all moneys paid out or received by him in the partnership books. It provided also for each partner giving the other a week's notice calling upon him to make reparation in case of infringement of any clause by that other, and, after the week's notice, for a settlement of disputes by arbitration; and that, on arbitrators' decision, the offender should be excluded from participation, and be paid off. In January, 1871, W. became eccentric, and accepted bills on London for £1100, and failed to enter an account of them. X. got no satisfactory explanation, and sent the week's notice, and, this being unnoticed, appointed his arbitrator, and, on 9th March, obtained an award in his favour. W.'s insanity had become more and more marked during February and March, and on 18th March he was confined in a lunatic asylum. X., acting under the award, treated the assets as his own, made arrangements for paying off W.'s share, and carried on business in his own name. On bill by lunatic and his committee, seeking to set aside the award, and have a dissolution declared and accounts taken, Held that the award was not a bar to the dissolution sought, and that W., though not entitled to a dissolution on the ground of his own insanity, was entitled by the way X. had prematurely taken upon himself the ownership of the assets, the dissolution to date from the decree; that the award made during W.'s insanity was not binding on W.; that X. was to be remunerated for his working the business alone since the 8th of March; and that as the deed contemplated a valuation and not a sale on dissolution, for which it expressly provided, a similar course should be adopted as to a dissolution arising from W.'s insanity. Gregory v. Welch, 3 V.R. (E.,) 6; 3 A.J.R., 3.

Accounts Taksn by Master—Excess of Capital of Lunatic Partner Bearing Interest—Value of Leasehold Premises—Discrepancy as to Balance Sent Back to Master for Re-consideration.]—Accounts were decreed in a suit seeking dissolution and accounts. On exceptions to Master's report, Held that, it appearing that the lunatic partner's excess of capital in October, 1869, was £3400, such partner being sane at the time, the partnership fund was liable for interest up to October, 1871, the year's relations commencing as by balance-sheet of October, 1870, and after the partner became lunatic in March, 1871, the same partner made no distinct offer to his committee to pay off excess of capital; that a rest should not be taken in March, 1871, but in October, 1871; that the Master should have in his accounts valued the leasehold premises in which business was carried on, and that the Master be directed to value them at £300; that it appearing by the accounts that there was a discrepancy as to balance arrived at, such discrepancy should be referred to the Master for reconsideration. Gregory v. Welch, 3 A.J.R., 102.

Where One Partner Insane.]—In a suit by the committee of a lunatic against the lunatic's partner, the plaintiff had unsuccessfully applied for a receiver. The defendant, however, had been in the wrong in two other instances in the suit, and had had the use of the money awarded to plaintiff since the dissolution of partnership, and the benefit of the goodwill and connection without paying for it, owing to his partner's lunacy. Upon winding up the suit on further directions, the Court thought justice would be done by making each party bear his own costs, and by not charging the defendant interest upon the amount found due to the lunatic's estate. The partnership property was ordered to be handed over to the defendant, who was to execute an indemnity against all liabilities. Gregory v. Welch, 4 A.J.R., 14.

Where One Partner Insane.]—One of two partners had become insane, but was released from confinement, and his partner made an agreement with him for dissolution. In this agreement the lunatic partner acted through one of his sons, but assented to the agreement, and as part of it signed a promissory note. Subsequently the lunatic's partner wished to revive the partnership, and made an agreement to that effect with one of the lunatic's sons, without in any way consulting the lunatic, who upon its being brought to his knowledge, absolutely refused to assent to it In a suit to enforce the agreement, Held that as the plaintiff had, in the agreement for dissolution, treated his partner as sane, he was estopped from setting up his incapacity to reject the agreement for reviving the partnership, and fulfilment of the first agreement decreed. Upon appeal Held that the decree was right, and that the Court would not measure the amount of mental capacity of a person. Creswick v. Creswick, 4 A.J.R., 23. On appeal—Ibid, 93.

Suit for Dissolution and Accounts—Authority by One Partner to an Agent to Arrange a New Partnership or Sell Assets—Different Arrangement made by Desd—Plaintiff's Refusal to Ratify such Arrangement.]—The plaintiff and defendant were in partnership, the plaintiff residing in Europe and sending out goods to defendant, who managed business in Melbourne. Differences arose, and plaintiff sent out H. as his agent to arrange for a new partnership, in which H. was to have an interest, and for a sale of the assets. A different arrangement was made by deed between H. and the defendant by which partnership was dissolved as from a certain date, and the plaintiff and defendant were to divide assets. Plaintiff refused to ratify this, as it was beyond H.'s authority to make such an arrangement. Bill by plaintiff for dissolution, sale and accounts. Defendant demurred on ground that settlement arrived at was one authorised by power of attorney H. held from plaintiff. Held that power of attorney did not warrant such an arrangement, and demurrer overruled. Oppenheimer v. Oppenheimer, 3 A.J.R., 60.

Mining Partnership—Account—"Mining Companies Amendment Act" (No. 324,) Sec. 9.]—A partnership was not registered under Act No. 228, and some of the partners proceeded by plaint under Sec. 177 of Act No. 291 against their co-partners for accounts. Held that in Sec. 9 of No. 324 the word "action" is used strictly and means an "action" on a contract by a third person against the partnership, and that no evidence in writing of authority is necessary to establish liability between mining partners as to expenditure incurred by other partners with sufficient authority. Allardyce v. Cunningham, 5 A.J.R., 162.

One Partner Purchasing Assets at a Sale made upon a Dissolution.]—A partnership firm getting into difficulties assigned all its joint property to trustees upon trust for creditors, one partner at a sale of the property made by the creditors bought the assets, no other offers having been made. A bill was brought by the other partner seeking for a declaration of trust as to the purchase and for accounts. Held that assignment of property on trust for creditors was a dissolution of partnership, and there being no evidence that the defendant had bought the assets on account of the partners that defendant was as much entitled to bid for the assets as a stranger. Bill dismissed without costs. Muir v. M'Gregor, 3 A.J.R., 14.

Sale to One Partner—Fraudulent Misrepresentations.] — A. and B. entered into an agreement for partnership under which each was to bring in £10,000 as capital, B.'s consisting, not of money, but of stock in trade at cost price. A. agreed to purchase B.'s interest on the valuation of B.'s stock in trade, made by B. and accepted by A. as correct. A. afterwards discovered it was at cost price worth less by £6000 than B.'s valuation. Bill by A. seeking to have sale set aside, partnership revived and accounts taken. Held, on demurrer, by Molesworth, J., that plaintiff was not entitled to relief because he could not reinstate B. into the subject of the bargain, plaintiff having sold some of the assets since the transaction, and demurrer allowed. Per the Full Court that the facts stated did show some ground of relief, viz., plaintiff's right to have accounts taken, and demurrer overruled. Per Molesworth, J.—If a misrepresentation made at the commencement of a partnership remained uncorrected and influenced the plaintiff at its close in his bargain to purchase it would have the same effect as if then repeated. Longstaff v. Keogh, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 175.

Action at Law—Money Lent to a Partner.]—L. lent his partner, R., a sum of money which was to be paid as his share of the capital. L. sued R. for the money and obtained a verdict. Held, on rule nisi for a nonsuit, that L. was entitled to sue. Lee v. Roberts, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 26.

Suit to Establish Partnership—Costs.]—In a suit to establish a partnership and for accounts defendants admitted partnership, but set up an unsuccessful defence of composition with creditors. On taking accounts the Master found a sum due from them to plaintiff. Held that defendants were to pay plaintiff his costs up to and inclusive of hearing. England v. Moore, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 312.

And see also cases under following subheadings.

V. RETIREMENT AND EXPULSION OF MEMBERS.

P. was entitled to one-third of a mining claim (A), and also to one-sixth of an adjoining claim (B). The other shareholders of the two claims agreed behind P.'s back to amalgamate the two claims to form a company with 1800 shares to be incorporated under Act No. 228. This was acted upon and P. was registered as for 150 shares in the B. claim, but was excluded altogether in respect of his interest in the A. claim. P. brought a bill against the company and its legal manager seeking to be registered as for 450 shares. Held that P. had no right to object to other shareholders in the two claims forming themselves into a company and assigning to him 150 shares only, or totally excluding him; he had a right to object to being included at all; that this grievance consisted in the company having appropriated his one-third interest in the A. claim without his consent; that he had a right to claim that third, but not without agreement, to claim a number of shares as an equivalent for it against partners who wrongfully excluded him; that P. might have a case against the shareholders in claim A. individually. Bill dismissed without prejudice to P.'s right to set aside the amalgamation and to enforce against the company his property in the A. claim and recover its value from the other shareholders in the A. claim. Parle v. Harp of Erin Coy., 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 98, 107, 109.

Injunction to Restrain Partner from Interfering.] —Four out of five partners who owned coal mines and brickfields in Tasmania applied for an injunction to restrain the fifth partner, who was managing the affairs of the partnership in Melbourne, from interfering in the business, and for a receiver over the property in Melbourne. It appeared that the defendant was not managing in a satisfactory manner; but the Court, thinking him rather culpable as to his temper than as to his honesty, refused the application, the defendant undertaking to change the registry of a schooner belonging to the firm, but which was registered in his own name, to meet a bill about to fall due and to pay all current liabilities. The defendant complied with the first condition, his compliance with the third was doubtful; but with the second he did not comply. After a delay, caused by his partners becoming aware of the breach in vacation time, a fresh application was made to restrain the defendant from interfering, and for a receiver of the partnership property in Melbourne. The injunction and receiver were granted, but the plaintiffs were required to meet the current liabilities, subject to a right to move, subsequently to the receiver's appointment, for the application of the funds in his hands for that purpose, the Court requiring this on account of the unusual course pursued in appointing a receiver of the property in Melbourne, leaving the property in Tasmania untouched. Barrett v. Snowball, 1 A.J.R. 8.

Misconduct of Partner's Agent.]—Two partners agreed that one of them might absent himself from the business and act by attorney. Accordingly one partner appointed an attorney under power and retired to Scotland. The attorney improperly withdrew bills of the firm deposited for collection, and placed the proceeds of their discount to the credit of his principal, in payment of a debt alleged to be due to the principal by the firm. The other partner filed a bill claiming to act alone, and to restrain the attorney from obstructing him from so acting. On demurrer for want of equity, Held that since the absent partner was responsible for the attorney's acts, and that the misconduct of the attorney if committed by the absent partner himself would only give the plaintiff a right to file a bill for an injunction against its repetition and for a dissolution of the partnership, the plaintiff was not entitled to act alone, and demurrer allowed accordingly. Terry v. Strachan, 1 V.R. (E.,) 180.

Forfeiture when Incurred.]—The plaintiff and defendants entered into a partnership agreement, under which one of them (the defendant B) was to take up and cultivate a farm, and the others were to contribute the expenses. The plaintiff paid only part of his contributions, and had denied his liability, and had stated his inability to pay and his desire to withdraw. In a suit for a declaration of the plaintiff's right to his share, the Court held that he had not forfeited his interest; that none of the partners, by asserting unfounded claims were able to forfeit their actual rights; but the plaintiff was ordered to pay up his contributions with interest at 8 per cent., with half-yearly rests; the partnership to be dissolved from the date of the decree. Dobbs v. Bromfield, 4 A.J.R., 8.

But when the partnership agreement is unconditionally terminated by consent, a prior forfeiture cannot be enforced. Collins v. Robbins, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 194.

Repudiation of Rights—Laches.]—Where plaintiff claimed to be a partner with defendant in certain mining shares, and it appeared that while plaintiff was a director of the company the shares became unprofitable, and plaintiff joined in resolutions forfeiting them, and denied all interest in them in order to avoid liability, upon bill by the plaintiff seeking to have the defendant declared a trustee of a certain number of the shares, Held that the plaintiff had not lost his right to be declared a partner in the shares by his attempt to repudiate them when unprofitable. Upon appeal this decision was affirmed, and Held that plaintiff was not guilty of laches in not prosecuting his claim for six years, he being during that period actively engaged in the affairs of the company. M'Ewing v. Auld, 4 A.J.R., 13; on appeal, Ibid, 49.

Right of Retiring Partner to Join in Sale of Assets.]—B., and the two defendants, in 1876 entered into a partnership for twelve months. By the partnership agreement it was provided that if after the twelve months any partner wished to retire he could do so by giving three months' notice in writing, and that if all the partners should agree, the partnership might be continued for one or two years longer, in which case an endorsement was to be made to that effect; and that rent, cost of repair, rates, wages, and expenses should be paid by the partners in equal shares. The partnership owned a patent for branding stock, and owned stock-in-trade and tools, and debts were owing to the firm. No endorsement was made, but the partnership was continued for four years. In 1880, defendants gave B. notice that the partnership was dissolved, and requested him to concur in winding-up, and in distributing the moneys to be derived from the sale of assets. They forthwith took possession of the business and effects, dismissed the workmen, and re-engaged them as for themselves. They also issued a circular stating that the partnership was dissolved, and that they were going to carry on the business. On motion by B. for a receiver and injunction, Held that the defendants had acted unwarrantably in excluding B., and had no right to treat the assets as their own; and motion granted. Boyle v. Willis, 1 A.L.T., 189.

VI. Dissolution.

What Constitutes—Assignment of Joint Property in Trust for Creditors.]—An assignment of all the capital of a partnership firm on trust for creditors puts an end to its dealings, and on the same principle that the assignment of all a trader's property was, by the decisions of English Courts and by English Statutes, an act of bankruptcy, such an assignment by a partnership firm is a dissolution. Muir v. M'Gregor, 3 A.J.R., 14.

What Operates as.]—A mere refusal to acknowledge that a partnership exists, where there is no time specified for the partnership to continue, does not necessarily operate as a dissolution. Kin Sing v. Won Paw, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 303.

Loss of Rights by Acquiescence—Dissolution by Marriage.]—Three sisters, having saved some money, induced other members of their family to emigrate, and in conjunction with them, started a small grocer's shop. Other members of the family came out, and were taken into the business. No accounts were kept between them, and they lived together using the proceeds of the business indiscriminately. Gradually the elder brother assumed the management, conducted all out-door business himself, and acted as though he were sole owner. One of the sisters married in 1861, and another in 1862. The sister who first married took no more part in the management, and after the marriage of the second sister, the business was carried on by two brothers and another sister. One of the brothers alleged that there was an agreement by which the three sisters were to retire and take £300 as their share of the assets. Disputes arose, and the first married sister (M.J.) and the unmarried sister (E.C.) declared the partnership to be still existing. Held, per Molesworth, J., that the acquiescence of the others in the elder brother's acting as sole owner, would deprive them of their rights as partners in the partnership at will; that the marriage of M. J. terminated the partnership, that she agreed to take £300 for her share, of which £100 had been paid, and was entitled to interest on the balance at eight per cent.; that E. C. was only entitled to a fifth share up to the date of M. J.'s marriage. Upon appeal, Held that M. J. was only entitled to £200; that upon M. J.'s marriage, the partnerships still subsisted between the others; that on the marriage of the second sister, it was put an end to as far as she was concerned; that as one of the brothers had been bought out, E. C. was entitled to a half share of the partnership; and that the elder brother should be charged with interest at eight per cent. for partnership moneys he had expended in land. Johnson v. Colclough, 4 A.J.R., 53. On appeal—Ibid, 131.

Indorsing Note in Name of Firm after Dissolution.]—An ex-partner in a dissolved firm has no power to endorse a promissory note made payable to the firm, in the name of the firm, unless he has express authority from his former co-partners to do so. Paterson v. Hughes, 2 V.R. (L.,) 148; 2 A.J.R., 96.

Rights of Partners to Carry on the Same Sort of Business after a Dissolution on Expiration of Term, and to Solicit Custom—Goodwill.]—There is nothing to prevent partners from carrying on respectively the same kind of business in another place after the expiration of the partnership firm, and there is no reason why towards the end of the term they may not solicit a continuance of the business to each. Nor is there any legal obligation to carry on the business in such a way as to preserve the goodwill. A. and B. were partners for a certain term, under a deed which provided that in six months after termination, accounts were to be taken, valuation made, provision made for debts, and the balance to be equally divided. Shortly before end of term, A. sent round a circular to customers, giving them notice of impending dissolution, and of his intention to carry on the same kind of business in other premises, and soliciting their custom. Bill and motion for injunction by B. restraining the issue of such circular. Injunction refused. Cornwall v. Hicks, 5 A.J.R., 61.

Court will not Generally Interfere unless Dissolution Prayed.]—Courts of Equity are disinclined to interfere in partnership affairs, unless a dissolution is sought; but this rule should not be extended so as to force a plaintiff to an unfair dissolution, as a means of obtaining redress. Le Roy v. Herrenschmidt, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 189.

Refusal of Partner to Account—Order for Payment into Court.]—Courts of Equity in suits for partnership accounts, so long as the accounts remain open, are very reluctant to order money to be brought into Court; but where defendant does not in his answer allege that there will be a balance in his favour, or where money has been received in violation of good faith an order may be made. Hart v. Belinfante, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 196.

Plaintiff, a member of a Melbourne firm of S.B. & Co., was also a member of a London firm of H. & Co. The Melbourne firm was dissolved by effluxion of time 1st August, 1861. The London firm sent out an agent to wind up affairs between them and the Melbourne firm, and pressed defendant B. for an account, which was refused. After this, in September, B. withdrew from the firm a sum of £1777, there being at the time no money due to B. from the firm. Plaintiff's bill alleged that a sum of £16,000 was due to him by the Melbourne firm, and the answer alleged that this was true without taking into account the losses occasioned by plaintiff's wilful neglect and default. On motion upon affidavits verifying bill and alleging that a receiver had been appointed, Held that this case came within the exception, and order made for payment into Court. Ibid.

Dissolution Refused where Plaintiff has Broken Conditions—Injunction.]—Plaintiff and defendants carried on partnership, but none of the parties had observed the conditions of the partnership deed. After a while disputes arose and plaintiff dissolved a collateral partnership of which he and another member of the main partnership were members, and the withdrawing partner covenanted not to carry on business in their trade except as a shareholder in the main partnership. Subsequently he entered into negotiations for the purchase of another business in the same trade, which plaintiff regarded as a breach of the covenant, and which caused ill-feeling between plaintiff and defendants. The defendants denied plaintiff certain privileges to which he was entitled under the deed of partnership, and he obtained an injunction to restrain them from so doing. After further disputes plaintiff brought a suit for dissolution, which the Court refused to grant on the ground that he himself had not fulfilled the conditions of partnership, or performed his duties towards the defendants, but the injunction was continued. Campbell v. Blair, 4 A.J.R., 148.

Suit for—Parties.]—In a suit for dissolution of a partnership, all persons who have an interest in the suit must be made parties. Dancker v. Porter, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 313, 326. For fuller statement of the facts see S.C. post under PRACTICE AND PLEADING—IN EQUITY—Bill.

Procedure in Suits for Dissolution—Costs—Against Executor of Partner.]—In a suit for dissolution, one of the defendants was the executor of a partner, and had never interfered in the disputes between the surviving partners, but reasonably objected to a dissolution. The Court ordered the plaintiff to pay his costs of suit. Campbell v. Blair, 4 A.J.R., 148.

Where One Partner Insane.]—Gregory v. Welch, Creswick v. Creswick, ante columns 1128, 1129 1130.

When Granted or Refused—No Misconduct—Strife Between the Partners.]—Where a partner sued for a dissolution, and no misconduct was proved against the defendant partner, but there had been strife between the partners, the quarrels having been begun by the plaintiff, and the defendant was the more violent of the two after the quarrels had once begun, the bill was dismissed, with costs. Mitchell v. Welsh, 4 A.J.R., 183.

Receiver—Lunatic Partner—Doubtful Award.]—W. and X. entered into a partnership under a deed which provided that if an award, to be made as therein provided, were made finding that any of the provisions of the deed had been contravened by either partner, the partner so offending should at once cease to have any further interest in the business, and should be paid off his share of the partnership capital. X. became eccentric, and improperly gave a bill in the name of the firm without W.'s consent. W. requested an arbitration, but X. took no notice, so W. proceeded ex parte, as provided by the deed. An award was made and acted on by W., who treated the partnership assets, after dissolution, as his own. X. shortly became insane, having shown symptoms of incipient insanity before the reference to arbitration. Motion by X. and his committee, in a suit to set aside the award and dissolve the partnership, for a receiver. Held, per Molesworth, J., that though the validity of the award was doubtful through X.'s having so soon afterwards become insane, that did not justify the appointment of a receiver at the request of X.; and that X.'s insanity was not to deprive W. of his power of managing the partnership property, no misconduct having been proved against him. Gregory v. Welch, 2 V.R. (E.,) 129.

Injunction—Receiver—Accounts.]—A. and B., in partnership as solicitors, upon dissolution agreed that A. should collect the assets and pay the debts, and that B. should pay to A. certain sums of money. A. filed his bill alleging that B. had improperly collected assets and appropriated them to his own use, giving particular instances, and had permitted persons indebted to the firm to set off their debts against B.'s private debts to them, and praying for a dissolution, injunction, receiver, and accounts. Upon motion by A. a primâ facie case being made an injunction was granted against B. restraining him from collecting or recovering partnership debts; and at the hearing, which was undefended, the relief prayed was granted; but the Court refused to appoint A. as receiver without a reference to the Master that relief not being prayed for, or, under the circumstances, to order the defendant to pay into Court the sum payable on the dissolution to A., or then to make an order for costs. Hewitt v. Akehurst, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 93.

Winding up.]—Where a plaintiff seeks to have a partnership wound up as dissolved, and the property sold, he must prove that the partnership actually existed, not simply that parties agreed to become partners in a given event, and either that it has been legally dissolved, or that he is entitled to have it dissolved by the Court. Ogier v. Booth, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 160, 164; 5 A.L.T., 109.

VII. Death of Partners.

Purchase of Partnership Property by Surviving Partner.]—Held, per the Full Court, that a surviving partner in dealing with the executor of his deceased partner for the purchase of the partnership estate is bound to lay before the executor the fullest information as to the estate, and to conceal nothing material, either purposely or through carelessness; but per Privy Council, quære, whether this is necessarily so. Clark v. Clark, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 303, 322; L.R., 9 Ap. Cas., 733, 741.

VIII. Suits and Actions between Partners inter se, and between Partners and Third Persons.

Action for Work Done—Partnership Dissolved before Work Done.]—C. sued G. in the County Court for commission for work done in procuring a loan. When C. received instructions for the work he was in partnership with M.; the partnership was dissolved in February; the loan to be procured was not a partnership matter, and was actually procured in March. Held that C might sue without making M. a co-plaintiff. Clarke v. Gouge, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 468.

Partnership Deed — Confined to Partnership Matters.]—By a deed between C. and H., C. and H. dissolved partnership, and H. assigned to C. all interest in the partnership assets and effects, and the deed contained mutual releases in respect of all claims "on account of the partnership or any other account whatsoever." C. sued H. on money counts in respect of non-partnership matters, and H. pleaded the release. Held that the words "any other account whatsoever" referred to an account ejusdem generis with the partnership account and did not refer to the moneys sued for. Judgment for plaintiff. Cameron v. Hughes, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 43.

Parties in Suit by Shareholder against Managers and Trustees.]—Per the Full Court—Where one person, a member of a mining partnership, complains of a special injury to himself, done by defendants, managers and trustees of the partnership, it does not follow because he is one of several shareholders and it is possible all the others might have been injured in a like manner, that all should be joined as co-plaintiffs in a suit in equity against the defendants. Ogier v. Smith, N.C., 3.

Suit for Account of Partnership Affairs—Joinder—Trustees of Share of Partner.]—E., M., and L., trading under the name of E. M. & Co., contracted to construct a railway. In 1859, L. by deed covenanted that N.G., R.G., and J.W. should be entitled each to a third of L.'s share of the profits and of his interest in the property of the firm, and that he would hold the same in trust for them. In February, 1860, N.G., R.G., and J.W. assigned all their property to three trustees (H., W., and C.) in trust for their creditors. In March, 1860, the firm of E. M. & Co. was dissolved, and a fresh partnership formed between L. and the defendant (W.), under the style of L. W. & Co. In the deed by which the firm of E. M. & Co. was dissolved, and to which N.G., R.G., J.W., and their trustees, L., W., and the Bank of New South Wales were parties, was a covenant that the share of L. in the new partnership should be held in trust for the persons entitled thereto under the deed of 1859. A bill was filed by L., N.G., R.G., and J.W. against W.W., praying (inter alia) that it might be declared that N.G., R.G., and J.W. were each beneficially interested in one-third of the capital and net gains of the business of the firm of L. W. & Co. reserved to L., on the ground that their beneficial interest did not pass to their trustees H., W., and C. by the assignment of February, 1880, and for an account of the dealings of the firm of L. W. & Co., and of the monies received, &c. The bill also contained an allegation that the Bank of New South Wales had been paid off and made no claim on the funds or the parties. Demurrer by defendant for (inter alia) misjoinder and want of parties, Held that N.G., R.G., and J.W. might properly join L. as co-plaintiffs, being his ultimate cestui que trustent, subject to a charge for the creditors for whom H., W. and C. were trustees, that H., W., and C. ought to have been joined as plaintiffs, since the bill did not allege that they made no claim, but that they had no right, and in order to dispense with the making them parties this latter allegation would have to be shown by clear detailed facts, whereas it was merely stated as a conclusion of law; and that the allegation that the bank had been paid and made no claim rendered it unnecessary that it should be a party. Little v. Williams, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 32.

Prior Publication.]—The use of an invention by the inventor for the purposes of his trade, and the sale of work produced by such invention, amount to a prior publication of the invention, and are sufficient to avoid a subsequent grant of a patent for the invention. Ellis v. Geach, 4 A.J.R., 163.

Design, What is—"Copyright Act 1869," Sec. 3.]—A new shape for an iron frame for the door of a safe, is not a "design" within the meaning of Sec. 3 of the "Copyright Act 1869," so as to be capable of registration under that Act. Regina v. Radke, ex parte Dyke, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 23.

Semble that it would form the subject of a patent. Ibid.

(2) Assignment Sale and License to use.

Sale under Execution.]—A patent cannot be sold under a fi. fa. Brown v. Cooper, 1 V.R. (L.,) 210; 1 A.J.R., 162.

Permanent Interest when Given.]—A person possessed of a secret invention for a medicine, a trade mark for its sale, and a market established for it, entered into an agreement with another, for an indefinite time for the making of the article by the other, and sales were conducted on a joint account, and the profits divided. The agreement was terminable at the pleasure of either. Held that the patentee had not given a permanent interest to the other person in either the secret or the trade-mark. Weston v. Hemmons, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 121.

Publication—Want of Novelty—Infringement.]—Suit instituted by a plaintiff company to restrain the infringement of a patent. The plaintiff company purchased from S. his patent for making composition pavement. The specifications described the process as consisting of four layers, the ingredients of each of the three lower layers being stone, tar and lime; of the top layer, stone and lime. Held that the patent was bad, because, taking lime as the only novelty, the patent claimed much which was not new, without discriminating between new and old; also, that though the defendants, in making their pavement in a place where some mortar had been left, accidentally mixed some lime with their compound, this was no infringement of the patent even if it were a valid patent. Patent Composition Pavement Coy. v. Mayor, &c., of Richmond, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 50, 55.

Using Patented Article Purchased in Another Country.]—Where a patent was taken out in Victoria for an American windmill, with improvements, and K. purchased in New South Wales and used in Victoria an American windmill with those improvements, Held, that K.'s user was an infringement of the patentee's rights, although there was no evidence that he knew of the patent or of the improvements. M'Lean v. Kettle, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 145; 5 A.L.T., 107.

Injunction—Where Validity of Patent not Established.]—On motion, in October, 1871, for injunction to restrain the sale and manufacture of a specific alleged to be an infringement of the plaintiff's patent, the patent having been granted in August, 1870, and its validity impeached by the defendant, order refused until the patent should be established at law. Lande v. Lawrence, 2 V.R. (E.,) 171.

Suit by Assignee—Copyright Act (No. 350,) Sec. 55.]—The assignee of a patent may, under Act No. 350, Sec. 55, sue in the County Court any one infringing the patent. Shepherd v. The Patent Composition Pavement Coy., 4 A.J.R., 143.

Novelty.]—In a suit by an assignee of a patent against the patentee for infringement the latter cannot dispute the novelty of the invention. Shepherd v. Patent Composition Pavement Coy., 5 A.J.R., 27.

Injunction—Accounts—Costs.]—Where a patent had been taken out in Victoria for an American windmill, with improvements, and K. purchased in New South Wales and used in Victoria an American windmill with those improvements, an injunction was granted to restrain him. During the suit several issues had been sent to a jury, and were all found against K., who persisted in litigating the matter, which was to him of very small importance. Held that the patentees were not entitled to an account of the profits, or to a delivery up of the windmill; and, upon the facts, that they were not entitled to the costs of the suit, although they were entitled to their costs of issues found by the jury in their favour. M'Lean v. Kettle, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 145; 5 A.L.T., 107.

On what Grounds Granted.]—On an application for the renewal of a patent to one H. for the manufacture of ice, the commission arrived at the conclusion:—1. That the invention was meritorious. 2. That it had proved useful to the public. 3. That the fact of its not having been brought into operation at an earlier date during the original term of the patent was satisfactorily explained. 4. That neither the original patentee nor his assigns had been able to obtain a due remuneration for the money and labour expended in perfecting such invention, and that those conditions existed which entitled the petitioners to the favourable consideration of the Crown. They therefore recommended:—1. That the original term of fourteen years be extended for seven years more. 2. That in the new letters-patent granting such extension there should be a recital that the further remuneration payable by the petitioners to the inventor formed part of the consideration of the grant, and a proviso that the said letters-patent should be void if the terms of such remuneration were not duly observed. 3. A limit on the price to be charged to the public. 4. Provision for the costs of the Crown and the opposers of the application. In re Ice Company's Patent, 1 A.J.R., 9.

PAWNBROKER.

"Pawnbrokers Statute 1865" (No. 248,) Sec. 29—Refusing Pledgor Inspection of Entry of Sale.]—Where a pawnbroker refused to allow a pledgor to inspect entry of sale as to goods pawned which he alleged had been sold, and was summoned and fined under Sec. 29 of Act No. 248, the Court refused to issue an order of prohibition. Regina v. Tucker, ex parte Aarons, 3 A.J.R., 69.

Lien on Stolen Goods Pledged—"Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864," Ssc. 399.]—B. obtained goods by means of valueless cheques, and pledged the goods. After B.'s conviction for obtaining goods by false pretences one of the original owners applied to have the goods returned. Held that, notwithstanding Sec. 399 of the "Criminal Law and Practice Statute 1864," the pawnbroker was entitled to retain the goods as against the owner till he had been paid the amount he advanced on them, on the ground that the contract between the person who sold the goods and B., who bought them, was voidable only and not void, and that if, before the contract was rescinded by the seller, B. parted with the goods to a pawnbroker, without any notice of the manner in which they were obtained, the pawnbroker was entitled to a lien as against the original owner for the sum advanced on the goods. Regina v. Clarke, alias Bonnefin, 1 A.L.T., 116.

Application for License—Power of Justices—"Pawnbrokers Statute 1865," Sec. 5.]—Under Sec. 5 of the "Pawnbrokers Statute 1865" justices, if satisfied with the character of the applicant, must grant him a license, without taking into consideration whether a pawnbroker's shop be required in the locality or not. Ex parte Mendelssohn, 2 A.L.T., 45.

Jurisdiction of Justices—Under "Pawnbrokers Statute 1865," Sec. 5.]—The words of Sec. 5 of the "Pawnbrokers Statute 1865" are mandatory, and upon an application for a pawnbroker's license, the justices, if satisfied that the character of the applicant is good, must grant him a license. If being so satisfied, they refuse to grant a license, no appeal will lie, but a mandamus may issue to compel them to hear and determine according to law. Ex parte Nyberg, in re Nicholson, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 292; 4 A.L.T., 78.

See S.C. post under STATUTES—Construction and Interpretation—General Rules.

Pledge-ticket — Signature of Pawnbroker — "Pawnbroker's Statute 1865," Sec. 21.]—A pledge-ticket contained the particulars inserted in the original entry in the pawnbroker's book; but at the bottom, by way of signature, there were printed the words "Lewis M. Myers, per," followed by the written signature "F. O'Farrell," being the signature of the person employed by Myers at the establishment. Myers was summoned under Sec. 21 of the "Pawnbrokers Statute 1865" for neglecting to give a pledge-ticket with the pawnbroker's signature attached, and convicted. On order nisi to quash, Held that, where a Statute merely requires that a document shall be signed, the Statute is satisfied by proof of the making of a mark upon the document by, or by the authority of the signatory, and that the signature was a sufficient compliance with the section. Regina v. Moore, ex parte Myers, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 322; 6 A.L.T., 151.

PAYMENT.

When it Should be Pleaded.]—See King v. Levinger, 2 A.J.R., 113, ante columns 1043, 1044.

Voluntary—What is.]—Ibid.

What is—Payment after Date Specified in Bond.]—It is no answer to an action on a covenant for non-payment of money on the date mentioned in the covenant that the money was paid on a subsequent date and before action, and the plaintiff in such an action may recover damages for the breach. Anderson v. Stewart, 4 A.J.R., 170.

What Amounts to.]—A company, whose current account at a bank was overdrawn to the extent of £5600, gave a mortgage to the bank to secure £6000 and interest. The bank placed £6000 to the debit of a new account called the "secured account," and credited the current account with £6000, thus placing it £400 in credit. Held that this transferring the amount from one account to the other did not amount to a payment, and did not discharge a surety responsible to the bank for the overdraft. Bank of Australasia v. Cotchett, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 226.

A debtor paying in money may apply it as he pleases, but, having paid it in generally, it rests with the creditor to apply it in the liquidation of the debt as he pleases, and the transferring the amount from one account to another does not in any way dispose of the debt; the debt is not paid. Ibid.

What Amounts to—By Agent—Question for Jury.]—Plaintiffs were in the habit of occasionally employing the secretary of the defendants, a public body, to collect their accounts, and had more than once signed, at the request of such secretary, receipts in blank upon official forms of account without reading them, in order to enable him to obtain payment for them of accounts due from the defendants. The secretary, after his resignation as secretary, received payment from the defendants of an account due to the plaintiffs, giving them the usual receipt, and misappropriated the money. Held that it was a question for the jury to determine whose agent he was, so as to decide whether a plea of payment was proved. Davies v. Swan Hill Shire Waterworks Trust, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 48; 5 A.L.T., 179.

Attorney—Receipt by.]—An attorney is not an agent to receive a demand for payment or to pay money. Lee v. Melbourne and Suburban Ry. Coy., 1 W. & W. (L.,) 34.

See S.C., post under SOLICITOR—Relations with respect to Clients.

Part Payment of an Account—Acknowledgment.]—P. was attended by R., a medical practitioner, R. being sent for by P.'s partner while P. was unconscious. P. refused to ratify his partner's conduct, but paid a small part of the account sent in by R. Held that that afforded evidence of an admission of a liability to pay the whole amount. Patten v. Rudall, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 148.

Person Making Payment not Authorised by Decree.]—See Phair v. Powell, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 177; 2 A.L.T., 71; post under PRACTICE AND PLEADING—IN EQUITY—Decree and Order.

What is.]—A bank sued C. and B. to recover £377, the balance due on a promissory note for £500 in favour of the bank. C. allowed judgment to go by default, and B. defended on the ground that the bank had been already paid. It appeared that the bank had proceeded against C. and had obtained an order for attaching sufficient moneys in the hands of a debtor of C. to pay the note. The debtor applied to set the order aside, and eventually an order was signed by consent for payment of the sum. On the day such order was signed, but before it was served, C. signed an order directing his debtor to pay the sum due to C. to one M., for C., and the debtor paid it to M., who paid it into the bank to C.'s credit. The bank appropriated it in payment of other debts of C., and then proceeded against B. for the balance due on the note. Held that the money had not been paid under the attachment order, but under the order from C. and on his behalf, and as he had not appropriated it in payment of the note, the balance was still due and unpaid, and that B. was liable upon it. Commercial Bank v. Cowland, 4 A.J.R., 162.

Offer of Money as Stakes for a Race—Acceptance with a Warning that all Forfeits Due were to be Paid.]—Money paid is to be applied according to the intention of the party paying it, and money received according to that of the receiver. When nothing is said by the payer the recipient dictates the ground on which he receives the money. F. entered a horse for a race and tendered £20 as the amount of the stakes, and told the secretary he paid it for his right to run his horse in the race. The secretary accepted it, but said that the horse would not be allowed to run unless F. paid certain forfeits which F. disputed. F.'s horse was not allowed to run, and F. recovered a verdict for £20 on a count of money had and received. On rule nisi to set aside verdict, Held that as the secretary had not declined to accept the money, he must be taken to have received it in the spirit and subject to the terms in which it was paid, and that therefore he could not appropriate it to the payment of the forfeits. Rule discharged. Filgate v. Thompson, 5 A.J.R., 124.

Set-off Against Rates—Appropriation of Payments.]—A corporation sued M. to recover £182 for rates, and defendant pleaded a set-off. The plaintiff corporation met this by showing that the money was appropriated to rates due prior to October, 1863, when the old municipal council was abolished and a new council established. It was contended that some of these rates prior to October, 1863, were not properly recoverable as the proper formalities had not been observed. Held that in this case the creditor had appropriated the payment of the old debts and the debtor had assented to that; that unlawful debts cannot be liquidated by appropriation, but only those barred by the Statute of Limitation. Set-off allowed to a certain extent, Mayor of Fitzroy v. Mahony, N.C. 68.

(3) Payment of Money Into and Out of Court.

In County Court Action for Conversion—Effect of.]—In an action in the County Court the particulars of demand stated a conversion of specified goods, and the defendant paid a certain sum into Court. Held that the payment admitted the conversion complained of, and not merely a conversion to the extent of the sum paid in. Lawes v. Price, Warren v. Same, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 250; 4 A.L.T., 59.

Suit to Restrain Enforcement of Contributions.]—In December, 1871, an injunction was granted restraining defendant C. from further proceeding with execution of warrants of distress against certain plaintiffs, on condition that they should lodge £235 with the Master. In March, 1872, the bill was argued on demurrer, and dismissed as against C. Motion by plaintiffs for payment out of Court of the £235. Order made for payment out of the sum without prejudice to the rights, if any, of the plaintiffs to be recouped, if the sums levied on them were in excess of their contributions to a certain company. Smith v. Seal, 3 A.J.R., 19.

PENALTY.

Penalty or Liquidated Damages.]—B. contracted with the defendant shire to execute certain works within a certain time, payment to be made monthly with a condition that if, in the opinion of the engineer, B. should employ bad materials, or execute the matter imperfectly, the defendant might take the work out of B.'s hands, and retain as "ascertained damages for breach of contract all monies in their hands due to the contractor." B. sued the shire for breach of contract in not making monthly payments and other counts, and recovered £1296 damages. It appeared by defendant's plea that the engineer had been of opinion that B. had broken his contract, and that the contract had been taken out of B.'s hands, and money due to him retained. On rule nisi to enter verdict for defendants, Held that the penal sum was to be regarded as a penalty to be assessed by a jury, and not as liquidated damages. Verdict entered for defendant on so much of the plea as justified the discharge of the plaintiff from his contract. Otherwise judgment for plaintiff. Blair v. Shire of Leigh, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 281.

When Penalty Amounts to a Prohibition.]—An act, for doing which a penalty is prescribed, is thereby prohibited. Attorney-General v. Mayor of Emerald Hill, 4 A.J.R., 135.

On Covenant—Penalty or Liquidated Damages.]—A contract for the sale of a draper's business contained a covenant that the vendor would abstain for ten years from carrying on the business of a draper in the town, or within five miles of the town in which the business sold was carried on, and would not sell or let a certain other store of the vendor to any person who should carry on such business, and that in the event of a breach of the covenant by the vendor, he should pay £2000 to the vendee by way of liquidated damages, and not as a penalty. Held that the £2000 was recoverable as liquidated damages. Gleeson v. Kingston, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 243; 2 A.L.T., 33.

Per Stawell, J.—In such cases as the present the Court is not influenced solely by the words used; calling the sum liquidated damages will not make it so; the Court looks at the intention of the parties, and at all the circumstances, and regards the amount as a penalty, however strong the language selected, if the covenant comprises various contingencies differing in importance, and the sum is made payable on the occurrence of any of them; as it will not be supposed that the parties contemplated the committing an act of injustice. Ibid.

How Enforced.]—Where the power to award immediate imprisonment in default of immediate payment is not expressly given by Statute, it is necessary, in all cases where the Statute authorising the infliction of a penalty either directs a levy by distress or is silent as to the mode of levying for the penalty, that distress should precede imprisonment. Ex parte Fat Tack, ex parte Ah Poon, 6 A.L.T., 37.

For Practising as a Legal Practitioner without due Qualification—Acts 5 Will. IV., No. 22; 11 Vict. No. 33; Sec. 13, No. 159.]—The Act 11 Vict. No. 33, Sec. 13, enacts by reference the provisions of the Act 5 Will. IV. No. 22, relating to the recovery of forfeitures and payments for offences under the Act No. 33, relating to persons practising as legal practitioners without due qualification; and the repeal of No. 22 by the Act No. 159, left the provisions incorporated from the Act No. 22 in the Act No. 33 in full force as if they had been enacted in full in the last-mentioned Act. Fenton v. Dry, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 64.

Under "Electoral Act 1865," Sec. 133—Who may Recover—Qui tam Action.]—A private prosecutor upon a qui tam information cannot recover the penalty imposed by the "Electoral Act 1865," Sec. 133, upon a returning officer who has been guilty of dereliction of duty; but the prosecution must be instituted by the Attorney or Solicitor-General, or by a prosecutor for the Queen. Regina v. Cope, ex parte Willder, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 397.

PENSION.

"Constitution Act," Sec. 51—Order-in-Council.]—An order was made under the "Constitution Act" for regulating the granting of pensions to persons retiring or being released from office on political grounds, and a patent for a pension was issued under the order. Sec. 51 of the Act provided that the amount should be so granted, that the same should, so far as might be, accord with 4 & 5 Will. IV., c. 24. The fund limited by the Legislature for pensions was £4000, and the number of pensioners was limited, while under the English Act the fund was practically unlimited. The order provided that the pension incidental to certain offices should not exceed £1000, and to other offices £700. Held, by Stawell, C.J., and Williams, J. (dissentiente Barry, J.,) that the order had been framed to accord, as far as might be, with the English Act, and a demurrer to a scire facias, to repeal the patent on the ground that the order had not been well made, overruled. Regina v. Ireland, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 291.

"Pounds Act 1874"—Effect of—Common Law Right.]—The "Pounds Act 1874" does not do away with the common law right to impound animals trespassing. Main v. Robertson, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 25.

Pigs—Cannot be Impounded for Trespass under Act No. 237, Sec. 48.]—The manager of a common is not empowered, by virture of Sec. 48 of the "Land Act 1865" (No. 237,) to impound pigs for trespass upon the common. The words "cattle, sheep, and goats," in the section, do not include pigs. Geoghegan v. Talbot, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 187.

[See now Sec. 60 of Act No. 360.]

Cattle Trespassing from Highway.]—The owner of land adjoining a highway is not necessarily bound to fence it off; but, if cattle stray upon the land, when unfenced, from the highway, the owner of the land is not entitled to impound such cattle until their owner has had a reasonable time for driving them off. Butcher v. Smith, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 223.

Adjoining Owners of Unfenced Land.]—Both adjoining owners must know their own boundaries, and must keep their cattle within them, though there be no fence between; and either may impound in case of cattle trespassing. Ibid.

Sheep "under the charge of a shepherd" may be impounded for trespass. Brough v. Wallace, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 195.

Cattle Damage Feasant — Detention—"Pounds Act 1874," Sec. 14.]—An owner of land may, in the absence of any enactment to the contrary, seize and drive off or impound cattle, damage feasant, or may drive them to a convenient place for the owner, and so far detain them, and, under the "Pounds Act 1874," Sec. 14, he may under certain circumstances detain them to give the owner an opportunity of taking them on payment or tender of trespass rates; but the detention must be for the purpose of impounding, if they are not so taken away by the owner. Jones v. Campion, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 473.

Sheep Damage Feasant — Detention.]— Sheep seized as a distress, damage feasant, need not be conveyed to the nearest pound immediately and without any delay, but may be detained for a reasonable time; and a person lawfully seizing sheep, damage feasant, and detaining them for an unreasonable time previously to impounding them, or treating them in an improper manner after seizure, e.g., driving them too fast, does not thereby become a trespasser ab initio. Sanderson v. Fotheringham, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 289; 6 A.L.T., 122.

Illegal Impounding.]—G. had a license from Board of Land and Works to graze his cows in the South Park from 6 a.m. till 6 p.m., and on condition that no cows should be in the park at night. G. afterwards obtained permission to enclose and use a portion of the land to be used at night as a stockyard. R., a servant of the board, found some of G.'s cows at 7.45 p.m. outside the stockyard and impounded them. G. summoned R. for illegally impounding. Held, reversing the justices, that the board could legally impound, and were not put to their remedy for breach of the conditions of the license, and that cattle should not have been in the park outside the stockyard after 6 p.m. Ritchie v. Gillespie, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 40.

Illegally Impounding—What is.]—M. seized sixteen horses of plaintiff, put them in his yard, demanded trespass-money and said he would send the horses to the pound if the trespass-money were not paid. The poundkeeper refused to impound the horses, and M. thereupon let them go. Held that there was a seizure only, and not an impounding, and that a conviction, which had been made against M. for illegal impounding, was wrong. In re Rawlings, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 22.

Notice of Impounding—"Pounds Statute 1865" (No. 249,) Sec. 11.]—Where an impounding agent delivered to the poundkeeper a written memorandum in the form of a letter headed "Loddon, 2nd November, 1868," Held that the memorandum was not in accordance with Sec. 11 of the Act, as it did not express whether the land was enclosed and cropped, nor did it express the place of trespass. Wingfield v. Glass, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 4.

Notice of Impounding—What Sufficient.]—A notice of impounding was given by defendant to plaintiff at the time of impounding as follows:—"Impounded by the manager of the L. and W. Farmers' Common, on 4th October, 1870, 1415 sheep (describing the sheep) mostly belonging to Mr. P. (plaintiff). Trespass damages on the lot. M. (defendant)." Held that this was a sufficient notice, since the fair inference was that the sheep were impounded from the common by the managers; and a reference to the schedule of the "Pounds Statute" would show the scale of rates which should be tendered for trespass on that description of land. Pettett v. Mellies, 1 A.J.R., 164.

Notice of Impounding—Description of Land.]—A notice of impounding was headed "Meredith, 6th January, 1871," and contained no other description of the situation of the land. Held a sufficient description. O'Keefe v. Behan, 2 V.R. (L.,) 16; 2 A.J.R., 19.

[Compare Sec. 19 of Act No. 478.]

"Pounds Act" (No. 478,) Secs. 14, 19, 33, Sub-sec. 3—Memorandum given to Poundkeeper.]—Sec. 33, Sub-sec. 3, creates the offence of illegal impounding, and Secs. 14 and 19 declare what illegal impounding is, but non-compliance with the latter part of Sec. 19 as to the memorandum to be furnished to the poundkeeper is not an offence within Sec. 33, Sub-sec. 3. Conviction of justices quashed. Robertson v. Main, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 5.

"Pounds Act 1874," Sec. 14—"Place Trespassed upon."]—The "place trespassed upon" in Sec. 14 of the "Pounds Act 1874" means the place where the cattle trespassed by feeding without authority. Sanderson v. Fotheringham, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 289; 6 A.L.T., 122.

Per Higinbotham, J.:—The actual spot where the seizure took place and the actual place of residence of the owner, agent, or overseer must be taken in every case to be the true termini of the statutory limit of distance (within five miles of the place trespassed upon.) Ibid, p. 295.

"Pounds Statute 1865"—Construction.]—The provisions of the "Pounds Statute 1865," as to driving to the "nearest pound," are merely directory and not mandatory, the language used being affirmative and not negative. Butcher v. Smith, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 223.

Act No. 478, Sec. 14—Illegal Impounding—Burden of Proof of Exceptions.]—An information was laid for illegally impounding certain sheep known by defendant to belong to an owner resident within five miles, without giving forty-eight hours' notice. Semble that the onus of proving that the case was or was not within the exception of Sec. 14 did not lie on the defendant. Mack v. Murray, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 416.

Act No. 478, Sec. 28—Illegal Impounding—Notice to Poundkeeper.]—Although Sec. 28 directs that notice of intention to complain should be given to the poundkeeper at the time of releasing the sheep, the only object of such notice is to get a fund in hand to satisfy the owner's claim, it is not a condition precedent to the right to sue for illegal impounding. Stephen v. Gill, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 178.

"Pounds Act 1855" (No. 39,) Sec. 25—"Illegal."]—The word "legality" in Sec. 25 means legality under that Act; i.e., to say that all the requirements of that Act as to impounding have been complied with. A person impounds "illegally" if he has not complied with the requirements as to the modus operandi prescribed by the Act, and magistrates have no jurisdiction to decide questions of title under that Act. Degraves v. Bennett, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 191.

"Pounds Statute 1865" (No. 249,) Sec. 25—Notice of Appeal.]—Where K., on paying pound fees and damages, released his cattle and gave notice to poundkeeper of his intention to appeal, but such notice was not lodged at the time of release, but two days afterwards, Held that the words "at the same time," in Sec. 25, must be strictly complied with, and that K. was too late. Parker v. Kelly, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 28.

"Pounds Statute 1865" (No. 249,) Sec. 26—Practice on Appeal.]—M. impounded sheep belonging to P. P.'s superintendent (C.) gave notice of appeal in P.'s name, but proceedings were instituted, and a conviction against M. was obtained in C.'s name. Held that the conviction could not be sustained, that the same name must be used throughout. Prohibition granted. Regina v. Taylor, ex parte Macdonald, 3 V.R. (L.,) 13; 3 A.J.R., 31.

"Pounds Statute 1865" Sec. 26—Legality of Impounding—Question for Justices.]—On a complaint for illegally impounding, the question of "the legality of the impounding," which the justices have to try under Sec. 26 of the "Pounds Statute 1865 (No. 249,) is not whether the seizure has been legal or not, but whether the requirements of the "Pounds Statute 1865" have been complied with, and they have no power to enter into a question of title. Rowe v. Middleton, 2 V.R. (L.,) 59; 2 A.J.R., 54 (sub nom. Middleton v. Rowe.)

[Compare Sec. 29 of Act No. 478.]

Order for Damages for Illegally Impounding—Notice to Poundkeeper—"Pounds Act 1874," Secs. 28, 29.]—Before an order under Sec. 29 of the "Pounds Act 1874" finding that an impounding was illegal and giving damages in respect thereof, can be valid, there must have been a notice to the poundkeeper, under Sec. 28 of the Act, of intention to complain against the impounder for illegally impounding, though the owner may not seek to have the cattle released before such order. Regina v. Taylor, ex parte Hailes, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 149.

"Pounds Act 1874"—When Notice under Sec. 28 Necessary.]—Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers) —When a complaint for an illegal impounding is lodged against an impounder it is not necessary that strict proof of the notice in writing to the poundkeeper, under Sec. 28, of intention to complain should be given, since by neglecting to give the notice the complainant only deprives himself of the right to claim from the poundkeeper the trespass rates paid to and retained by him. It is only in proceedings against the poundkeeper for the illegal detention of the cattle impounded that it is necessary to give such proof of notice. Regina v. Littleton, ex parte Kirk, 6 A.L.T., 21.

"Pounds Act 1874," Sec. 29—Words Necessary to give Justices Jurisdiction—"Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," Sec. 113.]—Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers)—It is unnecessary that the particular nature of the illegality under Secs. 14 or 19 of the "Pounds Act 1874," should be set forth in an order of justice for illegally impounding made under Sec. 29 of that Act. The order is valid and sufficient, according to Sec. 113 of the "Justices of the Peace Statute 1865," if the subject matter is set forth in the words of the Act on which the order is framed. Ibid.

Where an order alleged that the defendant "did illegally impound eight head of cattle" without adding the words "contrary to the provisions of the 'Pounds Act 1874,'" Held that the order was bad; and prohibition granted. Ibid.

"Pounds Statute"—Jurisdiction of Justices on Summons for Illegally Impounding.]—See O'Keefe v. Behan, 2 V.R. (L.,) 16; 2 A.J.R., 19; ante column 746 under JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

18 Vict. No. 30—"Land Act 1862," Secs. 68, 122, 129—Remedy for Trespass.]—D. was appointed herdsman of a Farmers' Common, and impounded two horses belonging to the defendant for trespass on the common. The magistrate held that the only remedy was under the "Land Act 1862," Sec. 129, and ordered poundage to be repaid. Held, on appeal, that the remedy provided in Sec. 129 was inadequate, and did not deprive an owner of his rights, independently of the section, and that as Act 18 Vict. No. 30 is silent as to particular persons who may impound, D. might, as the person in possession, impound animals damage feasant. Appeal allowed. Douglas v. Reynolds, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 1.

[Compare Sec. 60 of Act No. 360 with the provisions in "Land Act 1862."]

Poundage Fees—How Recoverable.]—The right to recover any deficiency in poundage fees, charges, and expenses in the proceeds of impounded animals given by the "Pound Act," 18 Vict., No. 30, Sec. 22, to poundkeepers, can only be enforced by the specific remedy given by the Act, viz., before Petty Sessions, and the County Court has no jurisdiction in the matter. Bourne v. Jones, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 45.

Damages for Trespass by Sheep—Jurisdiction of County Court—"Pounds Statute 1865," Sec. 33.]—Sec. 33 of the Statute does not take away the jurisdiction of the County Court to give damages for trespass by sheep. Mulhare v. Lindsay N.C. 14.

Damage for Trespass—Special Damage—Jurisdiction of Justices—"The Pounds Statute 1865."]—Where trespassing cattle were given up to the owner, instead of being impounded, upon his promising to pay what should be due, and the justices awarded a sum for special damages over and above the ordinary rate allowed by the "Pounds Statute 1865" (No. 249,) Held that the justices had no power to make such an order, and decision reversed. Wilson v. Powell, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 249.

Trespass Rates—Agreeing upon Higher Rates than those Provided—Offence—"Pounds Act 1874," Secs. 17, 33 (viii.).]—Although the parties may have agreed upon higher trespass rates than those provided for by Sec. 17 of the "Pounds Act 1874," the rates to be tendered are those provided for by that section, and a refusal to release the animal seized on tender of the lower rates, even where a higher rate has been agreed upon, constitutes an offence within Sec. 33 (viii.) of the Statute. Persse v. Smith, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 201.

"Pounds Act 1874," Sec. 15—Order for Trespass Fees and Fine in One—Amendment—Costs.]—Justices have no power to order the payment of trespass damage, and also to impose a penalty for illegally impounding, in one and the same proceeding. Should justices, however, do so, the Court has power to amend the proceeding by striking out the order as to damages and fees; but where the respondent did not appear, the Court, in amending the order and discharging a rule to prohibit, ordered him to pay the costs of the application. Regina v. Heron, ex parte Jones, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 140; 4 A.L.T., 6.

Receiving Evidence—"Pounds Act 1874," Sec. 15.]—On a complaint, under Sec. 15 of the "Pounds Act 1874," for the amount of trespass rates in respect of trespassing cattle delivered to some person for the owner, the justices must hear evidence, and determine whether such person was a person having authority to receive them. Schneider v. Wright, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 62.

"Pounds Act 1874" (No. 478,) Secs. 14, 15—Recovery of Trespass Fees—Demand.]—In order to enable a complainant to recover trespass fees it is not necessary for him to make a demand of them personally to the owner; and restoration of sheep trespassing to the owner's agent or overseer is sufficient. A selector under the "Land Act" (No. 360,) who has not fenced his land, may drive off trespassing sheep, and recover trespass fees on restoration of them, although he may not "impound" until his land is fenced. M'Millan v. Gove; Regina v. Puckle, ex parte Ware, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 142.

"Pounds Statute," 18 Vict. No. 30, Sec. 32—"Owner" and "Occupier."]—F. was manager of a Farmers' Common duly proclaimed under the "Land Act 1862," and he seized and impounded sheep found on the common. G., the owner, sued F. for illegal impounding. Held that F. was not the "occupier" under Sec. 32 of the "Pounds Statute," but was the "owner" under that Statute solely by force of the "Land Act 1865" (No. 237,) Sec. 48, and that F. was entitled to impound the sheep. Goldsbrough v. Fletcher, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 213; N.C., 14.

As to managers of commons see now "Land Act 1869," Sec. 60.

Trespass Rates—Who may Recover—"Pounds Act 1874," Secs. 12, 15.]—A licensee of land, under the "Land Act 1869," Secs. 19 and 20, is debarred from recovering trespass rates or damages under the "Pounds Act 1874," Secs. 12, 15, unless he has enclosed his land with a substantial fence. Allan v. M'Intyre, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 133; 4 A.L.T., 4.

Occupier—Manager of a Common—"Land Act 1869," Part iv.—"Pounds Act 1874," Sec. 15.]—The managers of a common under Part iv. of the "Land Act 1869" cannot sue for trespass rates under Sec. 15 of the "Pounds Act 1874," not being occupiers within the meaning of that section. Regina v. Carr, ex parte Sanderson, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 178; 6 A.L.T., 53.

Act No. 478, Sec. 15—Owner.]—It is only the owner of trespassing cattle who can, under Sec. 15, be sued for the trespass rates, after restoration of the cattle to him or his servant; and a manager of a station is not an "owner" to be sued for trespass rates. Lewis v. Green, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 354; 5 A.L.T., 121.

Seizure and Detention for Purposes of Impounding—Plea—"Pounds Act 1874," Sec. 14.]—In an action for trespass and detinue for seizing cattle if the defendant pleads, under Sec. 14 of the "Pounds Act 1874," that the cattle were seized and detained for the purpose of being impounded, the plea must state the existence of the conditions specified in that section, otherwise it will be defective. Jones v. Campion, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 170.

Action for Trespass in Seizing Sheep—Justification under Sec. 14 of the "Pounds Act 1874"—Plea.]—A plea to an action for trespass for seizing sheep which justifies, under Sec. 14 of the "Pounds Act 1874," must deal with all the conditions stated in that section. If it omit to deal with those in the latter part of the section, on the assumption that they are for the benefit of the defendant, and may therefore be waived by him, the plea will be bad. O'Shea v. D'Arcy, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 142; 1 A.L.T., 170.

Seizure of Sheep by Managers of a Common—What must be Pleaded in Action for—"Pounds Act 1874."]—In an action against the managers of a common for seizing and impounding sheep, the defendant managers must in their plea, as any other owner of land must, allege all that is necessary to show that the impounding was done in such a manner as to conform to the conditions imposed by the "Pounds Act 1874." It is not sufficient merely to plead that the defendants were managers of the common, and in that capacity impounded the sheep as trespassing upon the common. Sanderson v. Fotheringham, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 17; 5 A.L.T., 172.

"Pounds Act" (No. 478,) Sec. 33, Sub-sec. 1—"Rescue."]—To constitute a "rescue," there must be something amounting to a breach of the peace, or an act likely to provoke a breach of the peace, and in the presence of the poundkeeper. Where, therefore, a person took his horse out of an enclosed paddock belonging to the poundkeeper, but outside of the limits of the pound, there being at the time no one in charge of the horse, Held that there was no "rescue" or "pound breach." Lodge v. Rowe, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 65.

"Pounds Act," 18 Vict. No. 10—Offence Against—Conviction.]—It is not necessary that a conviction for the offence of impounding cattle out of the police district in which the cattle were distrained, should be had at the "nearest petty sessions" to the pound. Ex parte Beilby, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 281.

"Pounds Statute" (No. 249,) Sec. 20—Proceeding for an Offence under the "Pounds Statute" (No. 478,) Sec. 31.]—Under the Act No. 249 it is not an offence for a poundkeeper to assist in driving cattle to pound, though it is under No. 478. No. 478 is not retrospective in this section (31.) Anderson v. Deasy, 5 A.J.R., 14.

Jurisdiction of Justices to Determine what is a "Substantial Fence" within Act No. 478, Sec. 14—Not Governed by Meaning of "Sufficient Fence" in "Fences Statute" (No. 479,) Sec. 4.]—See Regina v. Hutchinson, ex parte Jessell, ante column 458.

POWERS OF APPOINTMENT.

Defective Execution—Wife in Favour of Husband—Formalities.]—Where a marriage settlement reserves to wife a power of appointment by deed to be executed by two witnesses and with husband's consent in writing, Held, per Molesworth, J., that Court will not aid, as an intended execution of it, a deed executed by wife in favour of husband unattested, and without husband's consent in writing. Bennett v. Bennett, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 280.

POWER OF ATTORNEY.

Filing of—"Instruments and Securities Statute" (No. 204,) Sec. 98.]—The word "unless" in Sec. 98 must be taken in its usual signification, and must not be read as "until." Therefore a power of attorney must be filed before or at the time of executing a conveyance, which is executed under such a power, otherwise the deed is of no effect unless confirmed in the way pointed out in the Act. Pratt v. Williams, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 22.

Death of Principal before Registration of Power—"Instruments and Securities Statute" (No. 204,) Secs. 95, 99.]—The first portion of Sec. 95 ending with the words "until the death, &c., shall have been registered as hereinafter provided" must be read as explained by the subsequent portion beginning "every act within the scope, &c.;" in that way all the parts of the section are consistent with each other, and the section itself is consistent with the subsequent sections, particularly Sec. 99. Where the Registrar of Titles refused to register a transfer of certain land, the title to which depended on a deed purporting to have been executed under a power of attorney, on the ground that evidence must be given of the principal being alive at the date of the registration of the power, Held that he was right. In re Woods, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 233; N.C., 26.

When Person Contracting with Attorney Need not Require Production of Power.]—A person contracting with an attorney under power, if the power be not referred to during the negotiations, need not require the production of the power, more especially where the agent holds himself out as possessing other authority to contract. Brown v. Hardy, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 245.

Attorney Acting in Excess of—Ratification.]—An attorney under power to grant leases upon certain terms acted in excess of his power, but the principal on becoming aware of it, did not repudiate the contract made in excess of the power. Held that the other party to the lease was entitled to enforce his remedy for breaches on the part of the principal. Ibid.

Authority Conferred by—Non-Registration—Creditors' Deed.]—The registration of a power of attorney is not necessary to the validity of a creditors' deed which has been executed by the attorney under power of a creditor. Stacpoole v. Glass, 1 V.R. (L.,) 195; 1 A.J.R., 154.

Authority to Take out Letters of Administration.]—See post under WILL—Probate and Letters of Administration.

Petition for Winding-up Company Presented by Attorney under Power—Insufficiency of Authority.]—See In re Provincial and Suburban Bank, ante column 166.

Power of Attorney—Filing of.]—Where an applicant for administration holds a power-of-attorney for the next-of-kin, which has been registered under Sec. 98 of Act No. 204, such power-of-attorney need not be filed in the Supreme Court. In re Mitchell, 3 A.J.R., 18.

Verification of Execution of Power—Affirmation.]—Where the execution of a power-of-attorney was verified by affirmation before a commissioner, the Court refused to accept such in the absence of evidence that the person verifying had conscientious scruples against taking an oath. In the Estate of Talents, 9 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 27.

Verification of Power of Attorney.]—The Court will not accept verification by a notary public where the party is resident within access to a commissioner of this Court. In the Goods of Crowther, 3 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 63.

Affidavit Verifying Power—Defect in Affidavit how Cured.]—In the Estate of Downing, ante column 23.

Execution of Power made in England Attested by Notary, and Not by Commissioner—Matter Affects Court only, and not Parties.]—In re Chaplin, ante column 23.

Verification of Power of Attorney.]—The practice of the Court is to require the due execution of a power-of-attorney to be verified before a commissioner of the Court in the county where it is executed, or proof from some person in Victoria as to the handwriting of the grantors of the power. In the Will of Taylor, 1 A.L.T., 45.

Power of Attorney—Limited to Personal Property.]—In an application for administration with an exemplified copy of the will annexed, the power of attorney only referred to personal estate. Held that this was insufficient, and that the power must refer to both realty and personalty. In the Will of Sutherland, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 29; 5 A.L.T., 120.

Amendment of Bill—Supreme Court Rules, Cap. VI., R. 20.]—Rule 20 does not permit of a suit being converted, so as to urge a totally opposite view by amendment of the bill. Officer v. Haynes, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 115.

Misjoinder, Objection for—When Bill Requires Amendment.]—See Graham v. Gibson, post under sub-heading Parties.

Amendment of Record.]—See Bailey v. Wright, post under sub-heading Parties.

Amendment of Bill—Striking out Averment that a Necessary Party was out of the Jurisdiction.]—See M'Donald v. Rowe, post under sub-heading Parties.

Amendment of Bill after Answer—Costs.]—An order was made for amendment of bill by inserting new allegations charging wilful default, but defendants' costs of appearing on the summons for the order were allowed them, as the amended bill required no further answer. Harding v. Smith, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 118.

Amendment of Decree by Inserting Direction Omitted from Original Decree—Interval of Six Years—Supplemental Order.]—See Attorney-General v. Huon, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 184; 2 A.L.T., 73, post under DECREE AND ORDER.

Signature of Counsel.]—If the original draft of an answer be signed by counsel, the engrossment, sworn by the defendant and delivered to the plaintiff, need not have upon it any copy of such signature. Lee v. Robertson, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 374, 380.

Signature of Counsel.]—The rule is that the answer should have the signature of counsel. Order made directing defendant's solicitor to be at liberty to annex name of counsel to the copy delivered, defendant paying costs of motion to set answer aside for irregularity. Flanner v. Williams, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 327; 1 A.L.T., 113, sub nom. Flannery v. Williams.

Putting in without Oath or Signature—Defendant out of Jurisdiction.]—Before the Court will make an order for leave to put in the answer of a defendant out of the jurisdiction without oath or signature it must be satisfied that defendant is aware of what is being applied for, and that he concurs in the application. Green v. Sutherland, 2 W.W. & A'B (E.,) 134.

Putting in without Oath or Signature—Power of Attorney.]—Where a defendant was in England, but had left a very full power of attorney with a solicitor to appear and defend and answer in all suits, on motion by the plaintiff that the defendant's answer might be taken without oath or signature, Held that as there was a full power of attorney the motion should be granted. Munroe v. Munn, 2 A.L.T., 25.

Endorsement of Name and Address—Supreme Court Rules, Cap. V., R. 32—Costs.]—Where a defendant, pleading in person, delivered his answer without an endorsement, as required by Supreme Court Rules, cap v., r. 32, of his name and address, upon motion to set it aside as irregular the Court permitted him to endorse his name and address, but ordered him to pay the costs of the motion. Bowman v. Bowman, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 114.

Time for Answering—Plea Overruled.]—A plea put in to an information and bill had been overruled, no time for answering had been fixed by the Court in its judgment overruling the plea and no application had been then made for time to answer although the time for answering had elapsed. The plaintiff then set down the suit as undefended. On motion that the setting down be set aside as irregular, Held that the provision in the rules as to the Court allowing time to answer on disposing of a plea does not import that a defendant should necessarily have time to answer; that the obtaining time is a privilege which the Court gives the defendant, and he should be the moving party for obtaining it and not the plaintiff. Motion refused. Note: the cause was subsequently heard as undefended. Attorney-General v. Prince of Wales Coy., 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 27.

Admissions.]—Where an answer erroneously admits a sum of money mentioned in the bill, the defendant making such an answer cannot as to his liability to account for wilful default contradict his own answer, though the error in the bill appears by evidence in the suit. Allan v. Lane, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E..) 1, 8.

Admissions Contained in—How Avoided.]—Per Full Court—The admission of a defendant in his sworn answer is unimpeachable by cross bill, or by evidence in contradiction; and the only course which a defendant, wishing to avoid the effect of such an admission, can take is to move for leave to amend by putting in a supplementary answer. Cuningham v. Platt, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 55, 67; 3 A.L.T., 126.

Facts not Traversed by—Further Evidence.]—In equity facts not traversed, e.g., the incorporation of a company, are not necessarily taken as proved. But if the plaintiff be taken by surprise by an objection of this kind, the Court will allow the case to stand over for further evidence. London and Australian Agency Coy. v. Duff, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 19.

"Statute of Frauds."]—A defendant denying an agreement stated in the bill may rely on the "Statute of Frauds" without pleading it. Jennings v. Tivey, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 152, 153.

Semble, that the defence of the "Statute of Frauds" may be relied on although not pleaded. Randall v. Mau, 2 V.R. (E.,) 158, 163; 2 A.J.R.,, 103.

Supplemental Answer—Proof of Facts occurring after Bill Sealed.]—In a suit for specific performance of an agreement to lend money on mortgage, after evidence had been taken, a lis pendens against the property was removed, and the mortgagor executed a further security over the property. On motion for leave to put in a supplemental answer, leave was given to prove these facts at the hearing. Phelan v. O'Shanassy, 2 V.R. (E.,) 120, 121; 2 A.J.R., 67.

Summons for Information Sought by Bill—Registrar of Titles.]—In a bill in a suit relating to registration and bringing land under the Act No. 301, the Registrar was as a defendant interrogated as to the title laid before him of a defendant who was applying to bring the land under the Act and how the same was made out. The Registrar answered, refusing to give the information. Upon summons for a full answer, Held that the Registrar must answer fully. Hodgson v. Hunter, 3 A.J.R., 64.

Insufficiency of—Interrogatories as to Documents in Possession of Defendants—"Evidence Statute 1864," Sec. 19.]—The bill sought for discovery of a list of certain books, plans, &c., in the possession of defendants. The defendants refused to answer this interrogatory. On summons under Supreme Court Rules, cap. v., r. 34, by way of exception for insufficiency, Held that as Part II. of "The Evidence Statute" (No. 197,) afforded a simpler and less expensive remedy for discovery by a summons in Chambers, the Court would not compel an answer as to the documents in the defendants' possession. Motion refused. Learmonth v. Bailey, 5 A.J.R., 93.

Insufficiency — Negative Pregnant — Accounts.] —Suit by infant next-of-kin against administrator of an intestate, with other next-of-kin defendants. The answer of the administrator admitted the grant of administration; but, to a paragraph stating that the intestate died seised and possessed of real and personal property exceeding £1000 in value, and including certain specified lands and chattels, merely replied:—"Save as hereinafter set forth, I deny the allegations in the 4th paragraph of the bill mentioned." Also, in answer to an allegation that after the sale a considerable sum remained available for distribution, the defendant merely denied that a considerable sum remained, &c. To an allegation that the defendant kept back certain chattels from sale and used them himself, whereby the said chattels became depreciated in value, and the defendant caused a considerable loss to the estate, the defendant replied admitting the keeping and using the chattels, but denying that they were depreciated in value, "or caused a considerable loss to the said estate." The defendant denied generally that he had used part of the moneys for his own business, and had permitted another person to use the residue. A paragraph in the bill alleging that the plaintiff from time to time applied for an account and distribution, and that the defendant neglected and refused, &c., was met by a general denial. The bill also required the defendant to furnish accounts of the property and of his application thereof, and instead of doing so the defendant set out a story from which it was to be inferred that the intestate held the land mentioned in the bill as a trustee for the defendant and his brother, who allowed the intestate to have a home on the land as long as she lived, and it was submitted that it was an unnecessary and useless expense to set out accounts. Held that the answer was not full enough, that the defendant ought to have stated distinctly that the land mentioned in the 4th paragraph did or did not belong to him, or he might set out the circumstances and state his belief as to who was entitled; that in denying a considerable loss, the defendant should have answered that the loss, if any, did not exceed a certain sum, or have given some intelligible restriction; that it was not proper to deny a whole paragraph, and that the defendant should have set out the accounts required, notwithstanding that accounts had been filed in the Master's office under the Rules of Court. Dick v. Dick, 2 A.L.T., 17.

Writs of Summons.]—There can be no copy of the seal on the sealed writ of summons endorsed on a bill in Equity, and the omission of the usual letters, "L.S.," from a served copy of the writ does not vitiate the copy. Jamieson v. Allen, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 19.

The Master's name need not be added to the copy for service of the sealed writ. Ibid.

The writ must contain the name of every plaintiff; but need not contain the "place of business" or "address" of the plaintiffs, except when they appear in person. Ibid.

Writ of Summons—Duration of Service—Supreme Court Rules, Cap. V., R. 4.]—The period for which a writ of summons remains in force under Supreme Court Rules, Cap. V., R. 4, cannot be extended by the effect of an order for leave to serve the bill out of the jurisdiction. Young v. Dickson, 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 56.

Writ of Summons—Supreme Court Rules, Cap. V., R. 3.]—Where, on a motion for an injunction, the plaintiff's name was omitted from the writ of summons, and defendant took a preliminary objection at the hearing on that ground, Held, following Jamieson v. Allen, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 19, that such objection was fatal. Smith v. Blacker, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 1.

Writ of Summons.]—Where an order had been made directing an amendment of the suit by making G. one of a class on behalf of whom the plaintiffs were suing a co-defendant, on the day when the writ was endorsed on the bill expired, upon application to the Court in Chambers an order was made directing the issue of a new writ to the new defendant endorsed on the amended bill. Graham v. Gibson, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 103, 108; 1 A.L.T., 8.

Service of Printed Copies.]—If the original bill, bearing the seal of the Court, be in writing, there is nothing to prevent the service upon the defendants of printed copies. Dancker v. Porter, 1 W.& W. (E.,) 313, 332.

Facts taken Against Pleader — Illegality.]—The rule is that every fact left doubtful is taken most strongly against the pleader; and though there may be an exception where one aspect of the doubt would make facts alleged illegal, such illegality amounting to a crime or breach of public duty, yet the rule holds good where a conveyance is at one time authorised and at another not. Where, in a bill to enforce an equitable mortgage of a lease under "Land Act 1865" (No. 237,) the bill did not state the date of the lease, it was assumed against the pleader that the mortgage was made within three years after the date of the lease and was, therefore, illegal under Sec. 15. M'Nicoll v. Ferguson, 5 A.J.R., 67.

Allegations of Fraud.]—If the relief sought by the bill is based on fraud, the failure to prove it is fatal; but if by striking out of the bill the charge of fraud there is sufficient equity stated and proved, and the charge of fraud is only subsidiary, it is a matter only affecting costs. London Chartered Bank v. Lempriere, L.R. 4, P.C. 572.

Allegations of Fraud.]—Per the Full Court—When a bill charges fraud, and also makes an alternative case apart from fraud, relief on the alternative case may be given, although the charge of fraud fails on the evidence. The true test is, whether the bill contains an equity, independent of, or only dependent on the fraud alleged. The Creswick Grand Trunk G.M. Coy. v. Hassall, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 49, 79.

Allegations of Fraud.]—It is sufficient if a bill states a case of fraud by allegations of information and belief merely as to fraudulent use of documents and as to fraudulent pretence. Hofer v. Silberberg, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 125.

As to costs where bill contains allegations of fraud see cases ante columns 235, 236.

Allegations of Part Performance.]—A plaintiff alleging in his bill an agreement and acts of part performance need not state in terms that he relies upon them as such. Jennings v. Tivey, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 152, 158.

Allegation that Land is Dedicated as a Highway.]—It is not sufficient, in a bill for the use of a highway, to state facts which may be evidence of the dedication of land to the public. The bill should also state that the land is dedicated. Webb v. Were, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 28.

Necessary Allegations.]—If bill alleges possession by a plaintiff, seeking a declaration of trust against one defendant, and a conveyance from another defendant as purchaser with notice, such allegation is sufficient for sustaining a charge of constructive notice from plaintiff's possession without alleging the inference that such possession is constructive notice. Wilson v. Boyd, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 98.

What Should be Set Forth—Inferences not Necessary.]—It is only necessary that a bill in Equity should set forth a narrative of the material facts and circumstances on which the plaintiff relies, the specific relief sought, and general relief. It is not necessary that the inference which the plaintiffs desire to be drawn from the facts should be indicated otherwise than by the prayer. Clark v. Clark, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 303, 330.

Prayer for General Relief.]—Under a prayer for general relief, relief warranted by the facts put in issue may be given, although the prayer does not properly distinguish the relief to be had under different aspects. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy. v. National Bank of Australasia, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 206.

Relief Included in Prayer.]—If a plaintiff fails to establish one case, but states and proves another, he may have any relief to which he is entitled, if it is comprised specifically or generally in the prayer. S.C., 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 61, 67.

Multifarious—Defendants Claiming in Different Rights.]—A. and B. mortgaged certain land, sold to C. by agreement in writing, and afterwards paid mortgage off and obtained a reconveyance to themselves as tenants in common in fee. C. sold part of the land to various purchasers, A. and B. conveying. C., in 1842, sold all his right, title, and interest in the land unsold to D. by memo. in writing. In 1843, D. executed a declaration of trust in writing in favour of his sister E., the plaintiff. In 1870, C., by deed, conveyed his interest in unsold land to E. E. entered into possession in 1843. E. sold part of her interest to co-plaintiffs, and mortgaged other parts to certain defendants.

In December, 1871, the Registrar of Titles gave notice, by advertisement, of an application by defendant F. to bring this unsold land under the "Transfer of Land Statute." Caveats were lodged. Amended bill alleged false allegations by F. as to his purchase of land from A. and B., and that he had never been in possession and alleged possession by E. and co-plaintiffs since 1843. A. died intestate, and left G. his heir, in whom was the legal estate in one moiety of the land. B. had died, and his legal estate in the other moiety became vested, by mesne assignments, in H. and K. Bill by E. and her purchasers for declaration of right to land subject to E.'s mortgages as against F., and for conveyances by G., H., and K., and to restrain the Registrar of Titles and F. from registering or bringing the land under the Act. Held that the bill was not multifarious as against F., G., H., and K., or as against the Registrar. Hodgson v. Hunter, 3 A.J.R., 41.

Multifarious.]—A bill to restrain an act of a grantor of land, as a public nuisance, especially injuring the plaintiff, and also as an act inconsistent with the grant of land under which he derives his title to relief, is not multifarious. Webb v. Were, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 28.

A bill claimed relief as to two allotments of land held under different grants, but confirmed by a deed coupling the titles. Held not multifarious, as the rights arising out of the separate grants closely resembled one another, and there was no other defendant interested in only one of the matters in the bill. Multifariousness is now treated as a question of convenience, and it certainly is more convenient to have rights closely resembling each other dealt with between plaintiff and defendant in one suit rather than in two. Ibid.

Multifarious.]—Two brothers R. were in partnership and agreed to purchase land for tannery purposes, and certificate of title issued to a son of J.R. (one of the partners.) J.R. deposited certificate of title as partnership property to secure an overdraft with the plaintiff bank. J.R. died and his wife became administratrix; S.R., the other partner, carried on the business on his own account and incurred fresh liabilities. Bill by bank against S.R. and administratrix to enforce a banker's lien on the partnership assets generally and in particular on the land. Held that in the absence of evidence of partnership between S.R. and J.R.'s widow there was no colour for greater part of relief, yet the interests of the two defendants were so far blended that bill was not multifarious. Bank of Victoria v. Rawling, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 111; 2 A.L.T., 9.

Injunction against Mining on Private Property—No Consent of Crown—Bill and Information joining Attorney-General held Multifarious.]—Attorney-General v. Scholes, ante column 912.

And for a similar case where the bill was held to be not demurrable, see Attorney-General v. Gee, ante column 912.

See also United Hand and Band Coy. v. National Bank; Merry v. Hawthorne; Learmonth v. Bailey; Simson v. Scallan; post under sub-heading Demurrer.

Signature of Counsel—Insufficient Allegation of Fact—Objections Taken by Demurrer.]—Allegations of fact in a bill in the form "The plaintiff is informed and believes that" are not positively stated, and are insufficient, and the bill should be signed by counsel. The foregoing objections may be taken by demurrer. M'Donald v. Board of Land and Works, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 90.

Demurrer—Crown Lands—Want of Parties.]—Palmer v. Board of Land and Works, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 80, ante columns 329, 330.

Demurrable Bill—Defence of "Statute of Limitations"—Defence not Raised by Demurrer or Plea—Defendant Required to Answer only Part of Bill.]—Where a bill was demurrable by reason of "Statute of Limitations," and the defence was not raised by demurrer or plea, but in the answer, and was taken as a preliminary objection, bill dismissed with costs as upon objection. Bill dismissed with costs as against a defendant who was only required to answer two paragraphs and not to consider the rest of the bill, on which power to demur turned. Kemp v. Douglas, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 92.

Demurrable—"Statute of Limitations."]—In 1837 C. purchased Crown lands, and in the same year by lease and release, conveyed them to B. for consideration. The Crown grant was subsequently issued to C., and bore date 30th November, 1838. By lease and release, dated 1839, C. conveyed to T. for consideration, a portion of the same lands. B. died in 1839, having by will devised all his real estate to trustees, who in 1861 brought a suit against a purchaser from T. for recovery of the part of the allotment C. had conveyed to T. The bill, after stating the above facts, alleged that both T. and the defendant had notice of the prior sale to B., that such sale was valid and effectual to pass C.'s interest to B., and had priority over the sale to T., but did not allege that B. had ever entered into possession of the property, but averred that the defendant "obtained and took possession and occupation at some time unknown to the plaintiff within six years now last past, and has ever since been and now is, in such possession and occupation." Demurrer by defendant that it appeared from the allegations of the bill that the suit had not been brought within the period limited by the "Statute of Limitations." Held that on the pleadings it must be taken that those through whom defendant claimed were in possession from the date of T.'s purchase, down to the time when defendant himself took possession within the last six years, and that B. never was in possession at all; and that if it had been intended to rely on the fact that defendant had not been in possession any more than the plaintiff, during the earlier years of the period of limitation, the bill should have pleaded that fact. Demurrer allowed, leave given to amend. Dalton v. Plevins, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 81.

Demurrable—Want of Parties—Dissolution of Partnership.]—Suit by one of the shareholders or partners in an association or partnership, which was unincorporated, against the directors and other shareholders, praying that an account might be taken of all the transactions of the partnership, and for a dissolution, and also for other relief. The bill (inter alia) alleged that "the plaintiff and defendant are the present shareholders and partners, and the only shareholders and partners in the said association." The bill, however, disclosed other persons who, at some former period, were shareholders and partners in the association, and these were not shown by the bill to have transferred their shares in accordance with the deed of settlement executed by the partners. On demurrer, for want of parties, Held that the general allegation that the plaintiff and defendants were the only partners was not sufficient, and demurrer allowed with costs. Dancker v. Porter, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 313.

For other instances of demurrable bills see post under sub-heading Demurrer.

Cross Bill where Requisite—Defence of Drunkenness.]—To a suit for specific performance of an agreement which the defendant alleged that he signed when drunk, the drunkenness is available as a defence without a cross bill. Scates v. King, 1 V.R. (E.,) 100; 1 A.J.R., 71.

Cross Bill.]—If a defendant sets up a defence to the enforcement of a plaintiff's rights under his deed, and it is inequitable that the plaintiff's rights should be suspended unless the deed is totally set aside upon terms, then a cross bill is necessary, but not in cases where a third person or the Crown has by deed affected to grant an interest inconsistent with the defendant's rights. Aladdin G. M. Coy. v. Aladdin and Try Again G. M. Coy., 6 W.W. and A'B. (E.,) 266, 278.

Bill of Review—Co-ordinate Jurisdictions.]—The rule of practice requiring that before a bill of review or bill in the nature of a bill of review is filed in a Court of Equity, the leave of the Court in which the original suit was instituted should be obtained, does not apply to courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction. In cross suits in a Court of Mines between the W. company and the P. company the decree fixed a boundary line, and restrained the companies, respectively, from mining on opposite sides of it. On appeal to the Chief Judge he varied the decree by declaring that the boundary line should be deemed to determine the rights of the parties only with regard to their claims on the Frenchman's Lead, and so far as was shown by their present discoveries as to the course of the leads. A bill in equity was filed by the W. company against the P. company, alleging that since the decree it had been discovered that all the gold removed by the plaintiff company, south of the boundary line, was upon the Golden Point Lead, and within the plaintiff's claim on that lead, and seeking an injunction to restrain defendants from prosecuting the decree in the Court of Mines or mining within the plaintiff's claim on the Golden Point Lead. On motion to set bill aside as irregular, Held, by Molesworth, J., that leave of the Court in Equity was necessary in order to enable the plaintiff company to bring a bill which sought to vary and delay decree of Court of Mines. Motion granted. On appeal to the Full Court—Held that the practice as to obtaining leave of Court did not apply to Courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction; that if the leave of any Court was necessary it was the leave of the Court of Mines; that the decision of Molesworth, J., abridged the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, which could only be done by express statutory enactment. Appeal allowed. United Working Miners' Coy. v. Prince of Wales Coy., 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 8.

Motion to Set Aside a Bill—"Supreme Court Rules," cap. vi., r. 1 — Cap. x., r. 7.]—Rule 1 of cap. vi. is only intended for the protection of the next friend, and the omission to file such an authority cannot be taken advantage of by a defendant. Semble—Rule 7, cap x., requiring the numbering of folios in the margin of the bill, though dealing with a trivial matter will be regarded by the Court, and a bill offending in this particular will be set aside, but generally upon terms as to costs. Mahood v. Odell, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 73.

Where defendant's solicitor has accepted service of bill, and has undertaken to demur, plead, or answer, this is a waiver of a technical objection under cap. vi., r. 1. Attorney-General v. Cant, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 113.

Motion to Set Aside.]—Where a defendant, two days after time for answering had expired, gave notice of motion to set aside bill and writ of summons, as the latter did not contain the name and address of the plaintiff, the Court dismissed the motion as being made too late. Held that generally applications of that nature by defendant should be made in the time given him for answering. Wills v. Ogier, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 317.

Dismissal for Want of Prosecution.]—Defendant gave notice of a motion to dismiss for want of prosecution. Plaintiff, before this motion came on, set down the cause, and gave defendant notice of the step. Defendant moved to dismiss, and mentioned to the Court that the cause had been set down since the motion to dismiss. Plaintiff did not appear on the motion to dismiss, and the cause was dismissed. On motion by plaintiff to reinstate, and that defendant should pay the costs, Held that the defendant was not, after learning that the cause was set down, bound to call the attention of the Court to that fact, or bound to suit his motion to it; that he was regular in what he did; and that the bill was rightly dismissed. However, under the circumstances, bill reinstated on terms of plaintiff paying costs both of the motion to dismiss and of the motion to reinstate. Thompson v. Tullidge, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 108.

Dismissal for Want of Prosecution.]—Where notice of motion to dismiss a bill for want of prosecution as not being set down for evidence within the time prescribed by Supreme Court Rules cap. vi., rr. 13, 14, is served upon the plaintiff, it is not sufficient for the plaintiff to pay the costs of the notice of motion, he should give the defendant an enforceable undertaking to speed the cause and pay the costs. Govett v. Crooke, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 30.

Motion for Dismissal for Non-Prosecution—Effect of Order of the Privy Council.]—Pleas put in by defendant were overruled with costs by the Primary Judge and the Full Court, and pending an appeal to the Privy Council, the defendant had answered, and the case was set down for evidence April. 1878. The Privy Council, 25th January, 1879, reversed orders, saving to the defendant the benefit of his plea with liberty to amend pleadings. On 18th June, 1879, the defendant moved to dismiss for want of prosecution. Held that as the Privy Council order gave the plaintiff liberty to amend under leave of the judge by Supreme Court Rules, cap. v., r. 11, and as the judge might direct further answer from the defendant, the setting down for evidence was inoperative, and the motion refused. Brougham v. Melbourne Banking Corporation, 5 V.L.R., (E.,) 110; 1 A.L.T., 29.

[NOTE.—The Court having intimated that plaintiff should be called upon to make his election to amend or proceed without amendment, notice of motion for such an order was given, and by consent an order was made accordingly.]

Notice of Motion for Dismissal—Service on Assignee—Costs.]—A notice of motion for dismissal of a bill for want of prosecution, after the insolvency of the next friend of the infant plaintiff, should ask for costs generally, and not against the testator's estate, and need not be served upon the official assignee. Flannagan v. Flannagan, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 77; 1 A.L.T., 183.

Dismissal for Want of Prosecution—Delay.]—A plaintiff has a right, without assigning a reason for his delay, to have a first motion to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution dismissed, on undertaking to speed the cause, and pay the costs of the motion. Hoff v. Hoff, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 187.

Dismissal—Time—Delay.]—Each of several co-defendants stands by himself as regards the time for dismissing a bill for want of prosecution. But the Court refused to dismiss a bill for want of prosecution where the delay was caused by another defendant not having answered. Healey v. Mason, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 301.

Dismissal—Plaintiff to Speed the Cause.]—In a suit the answer had been delivered on the 8th December, 1879, and at the time of the motion (17th June, 1880) the suit had not been set down for evidence. By consent, the answer was deemed to be delivered as on 4th May. On 6th June, a summons had been taken out for insufficiency of answer, but was delivered too late. Held that the bill should not be dismissed if the plaintiff undertook to speed the cause and pay the costs of the application to dismiss; in default, bill to be dismissed with costs. Virtue v. Cameron, 1 A.L.T., 196.

Motion to Dismiss—Receiver not Previously Discharged.]—In a suit between plaintiff and the Crown and other defendants, in which a receiver has been appointed on the motion of the plaintiff, it is no bar to a motion by the plaintiff to dismiss as against the Crown that the receiver has not previously been discharged on motion. Barber v. Barter, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 153.

Dismissal—Non-appearance of Plaintiff.]—If the plaintiff does not appear upon a cause being called on for hearing, upon proof of service upon the defendant of notice by the plaintiff of his having set the cause down for hearing, the bill will be dismissed with costs. Mouatt v. Kaye, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 312.

Compromise not Carried out.]—In a suit in reference to a dispute about a mining lease, a compromise was agreed to by which the land was to be divided. The defendants were to receive £75, and the bill was to be dismissed without costs. The land had been divided, but the £75 had not been paid. The plaintiff filed affidavits setting out that there was a difficulty in obtaining the money, as many persons were interested, and they lived at long distances from each other. The defendants contended that they were entitled to have the bill dismissed with costs, leaving it to the plaintiffs to enforce the compromise. Bill dismissed with costs, not to exceed £75; defendants to have the costs of the motion. Molony v. Spence, 1 A.J.R., 14.

Motion to Dismiss — Insolvency of Plaintiff before Hearing—Delay of Trustee in Electing whether to Proceed.]—S. filed a bill which was set down for hearing, but before it was heard S. placed his estate in a trustee's hands in trust for creditors. Defendant applied to have the suit dismissed, but the Court let it stand over for six weeks for the trustee to elect whether to proceed or not. At the expiration of the time, an application was made for an extension of the time and refused, the Court directing notice to be served on the trustee binding him to elect within a given time. On the day the notice expired the trustee elected to proceed, and the case was set down for hearing, the trustee having entered a suggestion that he was plaintiff. At the same time the defendant gave notice of a motion to dismiss. On motion for that purpose, Held that defendant should have served notice to bring the case to a hearing; and, since the trustee had, during the pendency of the notice, elected to go on, there was no unreasonable delay. Motion refused. Smith v. Knarston, 3 A.J.R., 82.

Dismissal.]—Quære—Whether, when the only witness of the plaintiff has taken a half interest in the subject matter of the suit as a speculation, that fact is not in itself a reason for dismissing the bill. Atkinson v. Lansell, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 236.

Dismissal—Consent in Administration Suit after Decree.]—Where the usual administration decree had been made in a suit by a creditor, the Court refused to dismiss the bill as of course, upon the consent of all the parties to the suit, but required an affidavit showing the circumstances and stage of the suit, and the proceedings, and who were the parties then interested in the estate, also that the parties consenting to the dismissal were the only parties interested. Bank of New South Wales v. Strettle, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 116; 2 A.L.T., 2.

Dismissal—Liberty to Apply to Amend—Notice.]—When an objection that the husband of a married woman should be joined as a party has been upheld, and it was ordered that case should stand over with liberty for plaintiff to apply to amend by adding the husband, and no such application has been made, the proper course is for the defendant to move on notice that plaintiff within a given time apply for liberty to amend or in default that bill be dismissed. Howe v. Crisp, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 24.

Dismissal—Written Consent by Solicitor for Defendant.]—On the day on which suit was set down for evidence, counsel for plaintiff applied to have case dismissed, stating that defendant's solicitor was prepared to give a written consent thereto. Per Holroyd, J.—Such consent must be given by counsel in open Court. Afterwards on application by plaintiff's counsel the case was struck out. Barry v. Kennedy, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 108.

Dismissal before Answer—Notice.]—Where a plaintiff seeks to dismiss his bill without costs after the time for answering has expired, and no answer has been delivered, he should serve notice of motion upon the defendant. If such notice be not served, the bill will be dismissed with costs. Blair v. Palmer, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 133.

Dismissal—Motion by Some of Defendants.]—Where a motion to dismiss a bill is made by two only of several defendants, the Court will make an order of dismissal as against them only, and not as against the other defendants. Treacy v. Watson, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 140.

Dismissal—Notice of Motion.]—Where one of the defendants in a suit moves that the bill be dismissed as against him, notice of the application must be served on the other defendants, and an affidavit of the service filed if they do not appear. Cohen v. Lintz, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 149, 151.

Bill in the Nature of a Supplemental Bill—Where Necessary.]—See Watson v. Kyte, post column 1172.

(10) Costs—See COSTS.

Service of Notice—Form—Necessary Parties.]—The only necessary parties under the Supreme Court Rules, cap. v., r. 7, are persons interested within the jurisdiction. There is no power under the rule to bind persons out of the jurisdiction. Fawkner v. Fawkner, 1 V.R. (E.,) 140; 1 A.J.R., 121.

Construction.]—Where a decree orders the defendant to execute at the plaintiff's expense a proper memorandum of discharge, it impliedly means him to deliver it up to the plaintiff when executed. M'Clure v. Marshall, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 1.

Demand by a solicitor's clerk of a document ordered to be delivered up is not sufficient, it should be a demand by the plaintiff himself or his solicitor. Ibid.

Declaratory.]—The Court has no jurisdiction to make a purely declaratory decree, but when the bill in addition seeks the appointment of a guardian this renders the suit maintainable. Stephen v. Stephen, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 94.

Delay in Procuring Appointment from Master—"Supreme Court Rules," Cap. VI., R. 22.]—A decree was pronounced in a suit. The plaintiff, who had carriage of the suit, finding that defendants were poor, did not within the time limited by Rule 22, procure an appointment from the Master. Afterwards some of the defendants acquired property. On a motion twelve months afterwards by defendants that decree might be declared abandoned and proceedings stayed, and, on summons by plaintiff, that plaintiff might be at liberty to obtain an appointment from the Master under Rule 22, notwithstanding the delay, Held that the delay by both the plaintiff and defendants in coming to the Court was, in the discretion of the Court, a bar to the relief they sought respectively, and that the rule applied only to interlocutory orders, and not to the main progress of the suit. Motion and summons respectively, refused. Reeves v. Croyle, 3 A.J.R., 15.

Taking Out—Administration Suit—Decree never Taken Out—A Defendant, being a Creditor of Estate, allowed to have Carriage of Suit.]—A decree was made in an administration suit but the decree was never taken out. On motion by a defendant, a creditor in the estate, after a long delay on account of his poverty, Ordered that defendant should have power to take out decree and have carriage of the suit. Palmer v. Palmer, 5 A.J.R., 130.

Assignment by Plaintiff after Decree of Amount Due—Motion for Conduct of Cause by Assignee.]—W. instituted a suit against trustees and executors of his wife's will and settlement to obtain repayment of a sum advanced by him, and after decree assigned his interest to H., who, on W.'s refusing to prosecute the suit or attend for cross-examination in the Master's office, moved for leave to have the conduct of the suit. Held, per Molesworth, J., that the motion was irregular, and the assignee could only effect what he wished by an original bill in the nature of a supplemental bill. Affirmed on appeal, on the principle of refusing to interfere in a matter of practice, but, semble, that the Primary Judge might have granted the application. Watson v. Kyte, 2 V.R. (E.,) 61; 2 A.J.R., 41.

Effect of Order of Court—Receiver.]—Where the Court made an order authorising the expenditure of £2500 by a receiver on improvement of testator's property, and the receiver spent £2532 without any further order, and then applied for a credit of £32 to be allowed him in his accounts, motion refused. Where the Court sanctions a certain sum to be expended that sum is not to be exceeded. Simson v. Simson, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 97.

Person making Payments not Authorised by Decree.]—Where under an administration decree directing the sale of a testator's estate, and investment of the proceeds in Government debentures, and payment of the income to a guardian for future maintenance of infants, the property had been sold and the proceeds paid into Court, Held that the guardian was not entitled to the payment thereout of past maintenance, or of repairs to the property, or rates thereon paid by her, or of costs of probate to the executors undertaken to be paid by her; none of these payments having been provided for by the decree. Phair v. Powell, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 177; 2 A.L.T., 71.

Liberty to Apply—Application.]—Applications under a liberty to apply reserved in a decree, must be as to matters consonant with the decree. Ibid.

Liberty to Apply.]—Liberty to apply refers only to subject of the suit. In a suit by two legatees under a will, which the trustees resisted on the ground that it would be unsafe to distribute the assets owing to liability of deceased to a company, an administration decree for accounts of assets was made. An application under liberty to apply was made as to whether accumulations of income of an infant's share went to her on attaining majority, or went to swell the corpus. Application refused, the question not having been raised originally in the suit. Pinnock v. Hull, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 186.

Consent Order—Motion to Commit for Breach of an Injunction.]—The bill was sealed on 16th November, 1860. On the 29th November a rule nisi was made absolute for an injunction restraining the defendants, their servants, agents, and workmen from trespassing or encroaching upon the premises of the plaintiffs, and from taking any quartz or other material therefrom; and a writ of injunction in these terms was thereupon issued, bearing date the 1st December, 1860. The defendants demurred to the bill, and the demurrer was allowed. The plaintiffs appealed against the order allowing the demurrer; but pending the appeal an arrangement was made between the parties whereby the defendants consented to a perpetual injunction, upon the plaintiffs abandoning their appeal, and paying costs of the demurrer; and by an order of the 14th March, 1861, made upon motion of plaintiffs' counsel with consent of counsel instructed by defendants' solicitor upon the record, it was (inter alia) ordered that the defendants should be restrained from encroaching upon the premises in the plaintiff's bill mentioned, &c. This order was drawn up under the signature of the Master-in-Equity, and the seal of the Master's office, and was served upon all the defendants about the 28th of March; but no writ of injunction was issued except that of the 1st December, 1860. The case came before the Court on notice of motion that the defendants therein named should stand committed for breach of the injunction issued in the cause under the seal of the Court, and bearing date the 14th day of March, 1861. At the hearing the motion was granted, but attachment was ordered to lie in the office for one month. Upon appeal by defendants, Held that for those who chose to consent, the suit was still in court, and that this order by consent substantially withdrew the demurrer and judgment thereon, and bound the defendant. Lane v. Hannah, 1 W. and W. (E.,) 66.

Consent Decree—Affidavit of Personal Service of Bill upon Defendant.] — Where a bill was served personally upon the defendant, upon motion for decree by consent, signed by the defendant, the Court, before making the decree, required an affidavit of personal service of the bill upon the defendant. Brown v. Brown, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 36; 1 A.L.T., 122.

Decree pro confesso — When Made.] — See Mitchell v. M'Dougall, post under (40) SUIT—Suit Generally.

Amendment of Decree.] — A decree for administration directed the usual accounts, but omitted to direct an account of the proceeds of real estate sold by the administrators, and six years after, the next-of-kin, having the carriage of the decree, but not parties to the cause, moved to amend the decree by inserting the omitted direction. Held, at that distance of time, and the decree being the property of the parties to the cause, the amendment could not be made at their instance, but a supplemental order was made to the effect desired. Attorney-General v. Huon, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 184; 2 A.L.T., 73.

Decree Cannot be Varied on Motion in the Suit.]—A decree had fixed a certain sum as the rate to be allowed for the past maintenance of an infant. Motion, on notice, that it might be referred to the Master to inquire by whom the infant had been maintained prior to the decree, and what portion of the sum per annum to which she had been declared entitled had been expended in her maintenance, and to whom the same should be paid. The motion was made on affidavits which stated that owing to the infant's being afflicted with a disease more had been expended by her mother than was allowed by the trustees and had incurred debts, and that the rate allowed was insufficient. Held that while the motion was one which on the merits should be regarded with favour, it was an application seeking to go behind the decree, and that the Court was bound by the decree and could not vary it, and motion refused. Green v. Sutherland, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 74.

Of Primary Judge—When Full Court will not Vary.]—Where a decree is, in other respects, unobjectionable, the Full Court will hesitate to disturb the conclusions of the Primary Judge upon conflicting evidence. Bonshaw Freehold G.M. Coy. v. Prince of Wales Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 140, 162.

Varied on Motion.]—Where difficulty was caused in obeying the terms of a will through the illness of some of the objects under the will, the Court took cognisance of the fact, and accordingly varied a decree ordering the terms of the will to be carried out. Kearney v. Lowry, 1 A.J.R., 95.

Varying or Discharging.]—A testator directed that his property should be converted and transmitted into the hands of trustees in Ireland, and that his children should be sent to Ireland to be educated. The testator's widow instituted a suit to have the will set aside on this point, alleging that it would be prejudicial to the children's health if they were sent to Ireland. The Court ordered the terms of the will to be complied with, but directed that maintenance should be provided for the widow and children pending their departure to Ireland, but that maintenance was not to be allowed for more than six months from the date of the decree. When the six months were nearly up the widow moved for an extension of the period of maintenance on the ground that the children were too ill to be sent to Ireland, and the Court took cognisance of the fact and varied the decree by directing that maintenance be paid for three months from the date of the order for variance. Ibid.

Varying or Discharging—Supreme Court Rules, Cap. VI., Rule 21—Variation as to Costs—Effect of Exhibit not Read.]—A decree was made ordering plaintiff to pay defendant's costs. A motion was made under r. 21 of Rules, cap. vi., and on the ground that a certain letter (Exhibit Q) had not been read. Held that rule 21 applies only to cases in which a party insists that the Master has not correctly taken the order of the Court, and that the question of costs should be argued with the rest of a case, but the Court entertained the application because of Exhibit Q, as having not been in fact read. Motion refused on the merits of the case. M'Kean v. Francis, 5 A.J.R., 158.

Varying or Discharging—Supreme Court Rules, Cap. VI., Rule 21.]—An application which is virtually an application that as a point of law decided in the decree would have an operation on both sides, the decree should be rectified by applying the same principle to both sides, is not within the letter and spirit of rule 21 of Rules cap. vi., and will be refused. Porteous v. Oddie, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 148.

Varying or Discharging—Supreme Court Rules, Cap. VI., Rule 21.]—Semble, a mistake in a decree may be rectified although the eight days mentioned in Rule 21 may have expired. Hunniford v. Horwood, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 250; 1 A.L.T., 65.

Motion to Vary—Supreme Court Rules, Cap. VI., Rule 21.]—Where a decree was pronounced on the 14th of February, and on the 10th of March following, an appeal being pending, a motion was made to vary it under rule 21 of cap. vi. of the Supreme Court Rules, and there was nothing to show when the decree was drawn up, the motion to vary was dismissed, with costs. Attorney-General v. Lansell, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 155; 3 A.L.T., 107.

Varying—Costs.]—After a decree has been passed and entered, the Court will not alter or vary it, on motion, by giving costs to one of the parties. Cohen v. Lintz, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 222; 6 A.L.T., 63.

Sale under Decree.]—A motion for liberty to the plaintiff to bid at a sale under a decree should not be made ex parte. Royce v. Parker, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 1.

Sale under Decree.]—Where under a decree the property had been put up for sale by public auction, and the biddings had not reached the reserve fixed by the Master, on motion, Ordered that Master be at liberty to sell by private contract, based upon tenders for which advertisements should be inserted; such tenders to be forwarded direct to the Master. Gordon v. Campbell, 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 47.

Further Directions and Exceptions.]—Where a suit comes on, on exceptions and further directions together, the exceptions should be disposed of before the further directions are considered. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Pie, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 186, 187.

Decree on Further Directions in Administration Suit where Master was Ordered to Report as to Debts, &c., becomes Property of Creditors and not merely of Parties—Not Made unless the Master Advertised for Creditors, and None Appeared.]—Orton v. Prentice, ante column 16.

Decree directing Accounts to be Taken—Report in pursuance of Decree—Objection should Not be Taken by Exceptions to the Report, but by Appeal from the Decree.]—Dallimore v. Oriental Bank, ante column 1070.

Irregular Order.]—Where one of two defendants entered into a liquidation by arrangement before an order was made directing them each to pay certain sums, and making them jointly liable for costs, Held that defendant was not entitled to have the order discharged for irregularity. England v. Moore, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 48; 1 A.L.T., 114.

Order—Sufficient though not Showing Jurisdiction upon Face.]—Where an order does not show upon its face the jurisdiction to make it, it is sufficient if the facts, showing jurisdiction, appear in the affidavits upon which the order is drawn up. In re The Belmore Silver and Lead M. Coy., 2 V.R. (E.,) 126, 129; 2 A.J.R., 76.

Order Nisi.]—It is not obligatory on persons applying for an order nisi to set out facts which may be used against them. Ex parte Lonie, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 128, 133; 5 A.L.T., 94.

Setting Down for Hearing.]—Where a plaintiff did not set down a demurrer for argument within eight days after its delivery, order made ex parte that plaintiff should pay the costs of the demurrer, together with the further costs of the suit. Fisher v. Jacomb, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 97.

Accidentally not Set Down in Time—Prevailing by Default—Application to Reinstate—Supreme Court Rules, Cap. VI., Rule 8.]—A bill was served upon C., a defendant, and also notice of motion for an injunction on 8th December, 1871. C. delivered a demurrer on 12th December. The pendency of the demurrer was urged as an objection to hearing the motion, and, by consent, an order for an injunction was obtained on 13th December, the plaintiffs alleging that the demurrer was set down for 5th February, 1872, certain moneys having been paid into Court. The plaintiff failed to set down demurrer within eight days under rule 8 of the Supreme Court Rules, cap. vi. On 1st February, the defendant C. obtained an order ex parte that plaintiffs should pay costs of demurrer, and that the bill should be dismissed with costs. On motion to set aside this order, Held that the principle of an allowance of a demurrer putting a bill out of Court does not apply to a constructive allowance by neglecting to set it down in time, and the Court, acting in its discretion, should relieve the plaintiffs in this case on the ground that the money paid into Court under the injunction motion showed the bonâ fides of the plaintiff's intention to prosecute the suit. Order of 1st February set aside. Smith v. Seal, 3 V.R. (E.,) 22; 3 A.J.R., 3.

Time for Arguing — Pendency of Notice of Motion for an Injunction.]—Pending a notice of motion for an injunction, a demurrer was delivered. Held that plaintiff was not entitled to have the demurrer argued instanter, but had the option of proceeding at once with the argument on the motion, or of postponing it until after the demurrer had been argued. Merry v. Hawthorn, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 329.

Proceeding to Hearing pending Appeal from Judgment on Demurrer—19 Vict. (No. 13,) Sec. 5—"Supreme Court Rules," Cap. VI., Rule 7.]—Proceeding to hearing pending the appeal from a judgment on a demurrer in the suit is irregular, and the defendants who have demurred may put in their answer after the appeal is decided. Attorney-General v. The Mayor of Emerald Hill, 4 A.J.R., 135.

Defendants' Names by Initials only—Objection.]—An objection that defendants are described by initials only and not by full names may not be taken by demurrer. Attorney-General v. Gee, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 122, 132.

Laches.]—Per Molesworth, J.—Laches is not available on demurrer. Longstaff v. Keogh, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 175.

"Statute of Limitations"—Raising by Demurrer.]—In Equity a defence under the statute may be raised by demurrer. Urquhart v. M'Pherson, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 17, 23; 1 A.L.T., 126.

Bill not Signed by Counsel—Insufficient Allegations of Fact—Objections that may be Taken by Demurrer.]—See M'Donald v. Board of Land and Works, ante column 1166.

Suit for Specific Performance — Prayer that Defendant might Answer Requisition on the Title if Expense would not be Incurred—No Allegation that Expense would not be Incurred.]—See Mudie v. Kesterson, 4 A.J.R., 172, post under VENDOR AND PURCHASER—THE CONTRACT—Conditions of Sale, &c.

When not Sustainable.]—Where a bill seeks some variation in a decree of the Court of Mines, and also makes out a case for relief independently of the variation of the decree, on the ground of irreparable mischief, complication of accounts, difficult ascertainment of boundaries, specific performance of contracts or some of them, a demurrer will not lie. Semble that if a bill is objectionable on the ground of indistinctness, a demurrer to it will not lie unless that indistinctness is a ground of demurrer specifically taken. United Working Miners' Coy. v. Prince of Wales Coy., 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 8.

When not Sustainable.]—For circumstances in which a demurrer for want of equity, want of title, inconsistency, want of parties, bar by the Statute of Limitations, no offer to do equity, and insufficient allegations of notice was disallowed, see Hunter v. Rutledge, N.C., 61. Appeal Ibid 74, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 331.

For Want of Equity—When Overruled.]—A demurrer for want of equity should be overruled, if any of the relief sought is sustainable. Webb v. Were, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 28.

Want of Equity.]—F. and H., owners of a gold mine, entered into an agreement with the plaintiff, by which plaintiff was to float a company to purchase the mine, in which F. and H. should have a certain number of shares, the sale was to be effected within a certain time fixed, or otherwise the agreement was to be void, and, if plaintiff succeeded, he was to get a certain commission. Plaintiff agreed with defendants to join with him in floating the company. The defendants, before the expiration of the time, entered into an agreement with F. and H. to buy the mine for themselves, and after the expiration of the time purchased the mine for themselves. On a bill by plaintiff against defendants for a share in the benefit of their purchase, Held, on demurrer, that the plaintiff had no equity to maintain his bill. Per Molesworth, J., that there is no contract express or implied that co-adventurers in a contemplated purchase to be completed within a given time shall not deal singly with the vendor for a bargain to come into operation after the original bargain has expired by effluxion of time. Pokorney v. Ditchburne, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 284, 291.

Want of Equity—Multifariousness—Want of Parties—Prayer for General Relief.]—Bill stated the existence of the A. company holding a mining lease from the Crown, plant, and machinery, which were mortgaged to the defendant bank to secure £15,000; an arrangement between the A. company and the defendant, that a new company should be formed to mine on the land; that plant, &c., should be transferred to new company (plaintiff) subject to mortgage—in the following way, that the mine should be sold under a fi. fa. to C. as a trustee for defendant, C. to transfer to the new company for £3750. This was carried out and plaintiff entered, expending £3749 in mining, and paying £2055 to defendant on account of mortgage. The defendant, on non-payment of the residue, entered and sold to L. In a suit by the A. company against the bank and L., this sale was set aside, and the A. company declared entitled to redeem, and the sum of £3749 was credited to defendant. The bill was to set aside the sale by defendant to the plaintiff company, and for payment of the sums of £3749, £3750, and £2055. Held, on demurrer by Molesworth, J., and affirmed, that though the pleadings did not show plaintiff to be entitled to the special relief sought, yet the facts disclosed an equity which might be enforced under the prayer for general relief; that the bill was not multifarious by setting out the proceedings with the A. company, and that the A. company was not a necessary party. United Hand and Band Coy. v. National Bank of Australasia, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 74.

For Want of Equity.]—For circumstances in which a demurrer for want of equity was allowed, see Merry v. The Queen, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 7; 1 A.L.T., 137.

When Sustainable.]—For circumstances in which a demurrer for want of parties for multifariousness, and that there was a remedy at law, was sustained, see Merry v. Hawthorn, N.C., 41.

Multifariousness — Want of Equity — Sale of Mine.]—B., manager for the plaintiffs, as their agent, and knowing its value, sold a mine belonging to the plaintiffs nominally to defendant C., but really to B., C., D., and E. B., C., D., and E., with F. and G., formed a company to work the mine, no others being shareholders. Suit by plaintiffs against B., C., D., E., F., and G., and the company, charging first four with a fraudulent conspiracy, and treating F. and G. as trustees or purchasers with notice, and seeking to set sale aside, accounts, and, as against B., a return of commission on the sale. Demurrers for want of equity and multifariousness. Molesworth, J., allowed both. Held, on appeal, that the individual relief sought against B. was only incidental to the real object of the suit, and that the bill was not multifarious; but demurrer for want of equity allowed, there being no allegation that the mine had been assigned to the company, or that the motive for which the company was alleged to have been formed was carried out. Learmonth v. Bailey, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 34.

Offer to Redeem Mortgagee.]—Where the plaintiffs prayed for a sale of mortgaged land, and the defendants demurred on the ground that the plaintiffs did not offer to redeem a mortgagee, Held that as the plaintiffs would not have a partition the offer to redeem would be merely formal, and that the omission did not constitute a sufficient ground of demurrer. Hunter v. Rutledge, N.C., 61, 74; 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 331, 357.

Demurrer—Mortgage—Equitable Assignment—Mistake—Amendmsnt—Question of Legal Title—Costs.]—A sugar company by deed, 4th July, 1873, mortgaged to defendants S.E. and W., the plant, buildings, machinery and effects then employed by the company in its business, and comprised in a schedule to the deed, and all the plant, buildings, machinery, &c., which might be erected or brought on the land during the continuance of the security, and all sugars, syrups, "spouts," roots, charcoal, and other assets which were or might be brought upon the land during the continuance of the security. On 22nd August, 1874, mortgagees sold to plaintiff all property comprised in mortgage, and in written contract for sale certain silent spirits belonging to company, but in possession of defendants B. and C., warehousemen, were expressly mentioned. These silent spirits were in August, 1873, drawn out of a vat then on the land into 47 casks and the casks deposited in B. and C.'s warehouse, being composed of spirits upon the land at the time of the mortgage, and of spirits subsequently manufactured by the company, which were mixed together. On a bill by plaintiff against company, mortgagees, and B. and C., to recover the 47 casks, alleging that "spouts" was used for "spirits" in the mortgage deed, Held, by Molesworth, J., on a demurrer by B. and C. on ground of want of equity, that the bill made no case to have the deed rectified, and demurrer allowed with costs. Held by Full Court that bill should be deemed amended by substituting "spirits" for "spouts," and demurrer overruled, costs of demurrer and appeal to be costs in cause. Per Stephen, J.:—As to part of demurrer that remedy was at law and not in equity, that equitable assignment is not confined to assignment of a chose in action, but if a third party is under a liability to the assignor and the bill alleges that assignor will not allow assignee to use his name to sue at law, then assignee may sue third party directly in equity. Per Full Court:—That Courts are disinclined to decide a matter of legal title upon demurrer, thus entering into construction of a document, without seeing the instrument itself or hearing evidence relating to it. Ross v. Blackham, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 220.

Demurrer—Multifariousness—Mining Claims—Conversion into Shares—Official Assignee—Insolvent's Executors.]—An insolvent was at time of insolvency possessed of certain mining claims; after his death these became converted into shares in companies registered in the names of his executors. On a bill by official assignee against executors for transfer of shares and account of dividends, Held, on demurrer by defendants on grounds of want of parties and multifariousness, that the companies were not necessary parties, and that there was such a perfect parallelism between all classes of shares that they might be joined in one suit without making it multifarious. A plaintiff who has a right which another has improperly possessed himself of, is not bound to sue the persons who have acceded to that other person's claim of right. Simson v. Scallan, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 255.

Want of Equity--Want of Parties.]--H. assigned all his property to trustees in trust for creditors. He was sued at law on certain promissory notes given by H. to the plaintiffs as a security for their debt, the plaintiffs refusing to execute the deed of assignment. H. pleaded the assignment and applied for and obtained a commission to examine a certain witness in Liverpool, proceedings in the action being meanwhile suspended. The trustees advertised an offer of £1250 for the estate, and the other creditors sanctioned the acceptance of that offer. Plaintiffs brought a bill in equity against H. and the trustees to have the assignment declared void, and to restrain the trustees from accepting the offer. Held, on demurrer, that the action at law could not determine the validity of the deed, and there were no particular averments to support a charge of fraudulent misrepresentation, and that the executing creditors were necessary parties. Held, also, that there is no equity for a person having a demand against another, and bringing an action for it to prevent, during the pendency of the action, the proper disposal of the debtor's property in order that something may be left upon which to levy at the close of the action. Lord v. Hewitt, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 108.

Who May not be Heard.]—A defendant, who has not answered, cannot be heard at the hearing without a special application for leave. Walduck v. Dane, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 8.

No Affidavit of Service of Notice of Setting Down.]—At the hearing of a suit, two defendants who had not answered did not appear, and there was no affidavit of service upon them of notice of the suit having been set down for hearing. The plaintiff's counsel stating that he was instructed such notice had, in fact, been served, option given to the plaintiff to have the case stand over to give time for filing the affidavit, on payment of the costs of the day, or to have the bill dismissed with costs. Reeves v. Croyle, 2 V.R. (E.,) 42, 43; 2 A.J.R., 13.

Proper Time for Taking Objection for Non-service of Notice of Setting Down.]—The proper time to take an objection as to non-service of a co-defendant with notice of the suit having been set down for hearing is after the pleadings have been opened. Reeves v. Croyle, 2 V.R. (E.,) 42, 44; 2 A.J.R., 14.

After Trial of Issues.]—Where a plaintiff after the verdict on issues sent to a jury fails to set down the cause for further hearing, the proper course for the defendant is to apply by motion on notice to have the cause re-entered on the list for hearing. Pickett v. De La Hunty, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 7.

Suit Standing Over—Fresh Notice.]—Where the hearing of a suit is ordered to stand over for want of sufficient affidavit verifying bill against certain defendants who had not answered, it is not necessary to serve fresh notices of the setting down for hearing upon the defending defendants. Phelps v. Pusey, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 1.

Setting Down for Hearing on Further Directions on a Special Report.]—Per Molesworth, J.—"A cause may be set down for hearing on further directions on a special report, or in any stage of the proceedings." Brown v. Meldrum, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 129.

Suit on behalf of Infant by Stranger—Reference.]—Suit by one D., as next friend of an infant aged nineteen, for the administration of the estate of the infant's father, the defendant being the infant's step-father. Motion by defendant, before answer, that D. be restrained from further prosecuting the suit, and that the bill be dismissed with costs to be paid by him; or that it be referred to the Master to enquire whether it would be for the benefit of the infant that the suit should be prosecuted, and if so, then that he might appoint some other next friend in place of D. The affidavit of defendant stated that D. and the solicitor by whom the bill was filed were unknown to him (defendant), to his wife, to the infant, or to any other member of his family, and that he was a man in needy circumstances. Held, per Chapman, J., that though there were primâ facie grounds for the suit, since it appeared that D. was an utter stranger to the infant, and a mere volunteer, and it did not appear that he was a man of substance, there should be a reference to the Master in the terms sought, with liberty to the Master to report special facts. Rose v. Monahan, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 193.

Appointment of Guardian ad litem—Infant's Assent—Age of Discretion.]—Motion for the appointment of a guardian ad litem to infant defendants. Per Molesworth, J.—If any of the infants are of an age of discretion, I should wish to have an affidavit of their assent to the proposed guardian being appointed. It appearing that the eldest infant was seventeen years of age, motion directed to stand over for an affidavit of his assent to the proposed guardian. M'Crae v. Rutherford, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 164.

Guardian ad litem.]—Where infant defendants have arrived at years of discretion, their consent to the appointment of a guardian ad litem should be obtained and filed. M'Vean v. M'Vean, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 156.

When Application for Appointment of Guardian ad litem Should be Made.]—An application for the appointment of a guardian ad litem for infant defendants should be with the concurrence of the infants, if of sufficient age, or of those having charge of them; or if by plaintiffs, then after the time for answering has expired, upon notice to the infants and those in charge of them. Where, therefore, an order appointing a guardian ad litem to infant defendants had been made before the time for answering had expired, and at the instance of the plaintiff's solicitor, as on behalf of the infants, but without any communication with them or their relatives, it was set aside. Bouchier v. Dawson, 2 V.R. (E.,) 24; 2 A.J.R., 8.

Appointment of Guardian and Next Friend.]—On the death of the guardian and next friend of an infant another next friend must be appointed before a motion for a new guardian can be made. Denny v. Vickers, 4 A.J.R., 6.

Infant Defendant Out of Jurisdiction—Guardian ad litem.]—Where an infant defendant was out of the jurisdiction, and an order had been made directing service out of jurisdiction, an application made for appointment of guardian ad litem before service of the bill was refused. Dodgson v. Ginn, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 74.

Guardian ad litem—Two Applications for Appointment Pending.]—An application was made for the appointment of a guardian ad litem, but no order was made thereon. Subsequently another application was made by the same parties, and on the like materials for the appointment of another person as such guardian. Held that, there being thus two applications pending, the Court must decide between them, or one must be withdrawn with the written consent of the person therein nominated as the proposed guardian. James v. James, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 32.

Guardian ad litem—Affidavit of Fitness.]—Where the appointment is sought of a guardian ad litem, the affidavit of fitness should be made by a solicitor. Ker v. Hamilton, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 172; 2 A.L.T., 13.

Relator who may Be.]—An infant cannot be a relator. Attorney-General v. Scholes, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 164, 173.

Amendment.]—Leave may be given to amend an information and bill, by converting it into an information only, and substituting some proper person as relator, instead of an infant relator. Ibid, p. 174.

What Matters may be Joined.]—In an information and bill by the Attorney-General and a plaintiff, it is not proper to join matters in which both have not a common interest. Ibid, p. 172.

When Directed.]—In an administration suit where the evidence is clear as to the fact of defendant's bigamy, which bigamy shows that she has no legal interest in the suit, and no right to litigate, an issue will not be directed. Graham v. Graham, 3 A.J.R., 55, 58.

(25) Married Women.—See HUSBAND AND WIFE.

(26) Masters' Report and Proceedings in Master's Office.

Confirmation.]—The confirmation of a Master's report not excepted to, though not absolutely of course, neither demands nor receives any examination by the Court, and is not equivalent to previous leave to do an act stated by the report to have been done. Larnach v. Alleyne, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 342, 363.

Presentation for Confirmation.]—Per Molesworth, J. It has been the usual practice of this Court when reports are to be presented for confirmation, for the Master-in-Equity to attend personally for that purpose. This seems an unimportant ceremony, and the Master-in-Equity is put to some inconvenience. I think the business could just as well be performed by his sending the report by some officer, and I intend for the future to follow that course. The Master-in-Equity will commit the report to be confirmed to one of the officers of his department, who will hand the same to me, and I will announce in open Court that it has been presented for confirmation. This course of practice has been decided upon after consultation with His Honour the Chief Justice. 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 152.

Master's Report—Affidavit taken as Part of Report.]—Where an affidavit was filed, with the permission of the Master, stating that he was in fact making a report in accordance with what he considered the "directions" of the judge making the reference, but not according to his own opinion, the Full Court considered the affidavit as being in effect part of the Master's report, and so received it, inasmuch as the case involved the interests of an infant not before the Court otherwise than through the contest for her guardianship. In re Pennington, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 49.

Where Referred Back.]—The Master's report, if his finding be unauthorised by the decree, and opposed to the case made by the bill, will be referred back on the application of a party to the suit. Kendell v. Thomson, 1 W.W & A'B. (E.,) 141.

Reference to Master for Accounts of Receipts and Disbursements—No Reference as to Share or as to Marriage Settlement of Administratrix—Statement in Report of Retention by Administratrix of a Certain Sum as Her Share.]—A suit was commenced for administration of an estate against an administratrix. Ordinary administration accounts decreed with a reference to the Master to account. The report was presented, and a decree made in 1866, on further directions, as to continuance of the accounts. In October, 1867, a supplemental bill was filed bringing before the Court the fact of a marriage settlement made on the marriage of the administratrix. This suit did not ask for administration of the estate of the administratrix, who had died shortly before, it simply brought the persons interested under the settlement. The Master continued the accounts, and presented a report containing a statement that there was a sum of £11,000 retained by the administratrix as her share. On exceptions to the report, the objection being that the Master should have reported that, by the marriage settlement, the sum belonged to the trustees, report amended by inserting a declaration that it only referred to the accounts of her receipts over expenditure without stating whether she was entitled to the £11,000 as her share or not. Ware v. Ware, 3 A.J.R., 127.

Exceptions to where Allowed.]—Exceptions to the Master's report will not be disallowed when the defect is in the decree itself. Sawyers v. Kyte, 4 A.J.R., 144.

Confirmation — Exceptions — Notice — Rules of Court, Cap. VI., Rule 29.]—In a creditor's administration suit the ordinary decree had been made, and under the decree G. had carried in his claim before the Master, who disallowed it. On 23rd September, the Master verbally informed G.'s solicitor of his intention to report against the claim, and on 25th September, without further notice to G. or his solicitor, the Master's report of (inter alia) the disallowance of the claim was presented for confirmation and confirmed. Motion by G. that he might, notwithstanding the confirmation, have leave to except to that part of the report whereby his claim was disallowed. Motion granted upon condition of G. paying the costs and taking the next step within eight days. Per Chapman, J. It appears by rule 29 of cap. vi. of the Rules of Court that, in all cases where creditors come in in the Master's office, they are entitled to notice of the intended presentation of the report for confirmation, the language of the rule being "the parties interested," and a creditor becomes a party in a creditor's suit the instant he comes in, though not named. Clough v. Gray, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 308.

Exceptions—Objections—Draft Report—Supreme Court Rules, Cap. VI., Rules 22, 23, 29—Costs.]—A draft report by the Master was settled, and the defendant lodged a document headed "Objections," but did not lodge any exceptions. The Master initialled the report, and presented it for confirmation, stating it was objected to, and the objections were set down for hearing. The plaintiff gave notice of motion that the objections should be overruled, and defendant thereupon gave notice of abandonment of objections. Held that English practice distinguishing between objections and exceptions was not in force here, and that the Master had pursued the right course, and his report was confirmed; but no costs were given, as the matter had arisen from a confusion of practice. Breese v. Fleming, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 22.

Conclusions—Evidence—"Supreme Court Rules," Cap. VI., R. 28.]—Where a decree directed the Master "to inquire and report the circumstance" of a sale, and whether defendant had notice of transaction, &c., and the Master in his report set out the evidence taken, and his conclusions thereon, Upon Exceptions, Held that he was right in stating his conclusions; but should not have set out the evidence, but merely referred to it. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Pie, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 186.

Decree directing certain Accounts to be Taken—Report consistently following Decree—Objections must be Taken by Appeal from Decree, and not upon Exceptions to Report.]—Dallimore v. Oriental Bank, ante column 1070.

Decree for Redemption—Agreement that Parties should Depart from Ordinary Course of Dealing as between Mortgagor and Mortgagee—Agreement must be Distinctly Stated in Writing in the Office by way of Objection, Surcharge or otherwise—Court cannot upon Exceptions reopen the Matter.]—Ross v. Victorian Permanent Building Society, ante column 1069.

Exceptions to—Notice of Setting Down—Service.]—Per Molesworth, J.—Notice of the setting down of exceptions to the Master's report need not be served upon the other parties to the suit. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy. v. National Bank of Australasia, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 173, 176.

Party Intending to go Behind on Further Directions.]—Where a party, on further directions, intends to go behind the report in regard to costs, and rely on evidence or documents taken in the Master's office, he must give notice to the other parties that he intends to do so, otherwise he can refer only to the report. Pickles v. Perry, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 66.

Hearing on Further Directions — Evidence taken before the Master.]—On a hearing on further directions, evidence taken before the Master cannot be referred to, unless special notice of the intention to read it has been given. [Pickles v. Perry, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 66, adhered to]. Sichel v. O'Shanassy, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 250.

Master's Discretion in Receiving Evidence.]—There is nothing in the rules or practice to restrict the Master's discretion in receiving evidence after hearing all the parties, and reserving his decision until the report is settled, or a warrant to settle is issued, and in any case the proper remedy is not by an exception to his report. Board of Land and Works v. Ecroyd, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 304.

Evidence Received by Master—Exceptions.]—It is not the usual course for parties to obtain the direction of the Court as to what evidence the Master should receive or reject. Therefore, where the Master has determined that he will not, upon an inquiry, receive evidence by affidavit, the Court will not, before such inquiry, entertain a motion for liberty to tender to him an affidavit of a deceased person, and for liberty for him to receive it as evidence. The proper course is for the parties to except to his report when made. Attorney-General v. Huon, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 62.

Jurisdiction of Master to Receive Evidence by Affidavit.]—The Master-in-Equity has no jurisdiction to receive evidence by affidavit, except by consent. Ibid.

Notice.]—Though more convenient, yet it is not the practice to specify grounds in a notice of motion. Musson v. Bourne, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 1, 2.

Notice—Computation of Time.]—Sunday does not reckon in the computation of the two clear days required for a notice of motion. Brown v. Healey, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 47.

Notice of—Service.]—Where a notice of motion had been served as for a defendant by a solicitor not his solicitor on the record, the motion was dismissed upon this objection being taken at the hearing. Tiernan v. Nolan, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 73.

Before Answer.]—Per Molesworth, J.—Although where a defendant makes a motion before answer he should by affidavit prove service of the bill upon him, that is a formal matter which may be supplied by affidavit at hearing of motion, if the bill has been in fact served. Graham v. Gibson, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) at page 104.

It is not the practice in Victoria to set out the address of the next friend in the bill, and the omission to do so will not entitle defendant to insist upon security for costs. Graham v. Gibson, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 103.

Authority of Next Friend—Defendant Cannot take Advantage of Omission to File—Supreme Court Rules, Cap. VI., R. 1.]—Rule 1 of cap. vi. is only intended for the protection of the next friend, and the omission to file such an authority cannot be taken advantage of by a defendant. Mahood v. Odell, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 73.

Necessary and Proper—Principal and Agent.]—Where a plaintiff disaffirms the acts of a person purporting to act as his agent, it is not necessary to make such person a co-defendant. Walduck v. Dane, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 8, 14.

Mortgagee—Litigation as to Equity of Redemption.]—A mortgagee is not a necessary party to a suit where parties are litigating as to the equity of redemption. Dallimore v. Oriental Bank, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 13.

For facts see S.C., ante columns 1067, 1068.

Trustee of Equitable Interest—Out of the Jurisdiction.]—The trustee of a voluntary settlement, if an equitable interest only, need not be joined as a co-plaintiff with the beneficiaries in a suit against a third person relative to the settlement, and, if out of the jurisdiction, need not be served as a defendant. Ibid.

Contractor for a Road Board.]—In an injunction against a road board and its contractor, Held, by the Full Court reversing Molesworth, J., that a person authorised by another is as much bound by a decree as an agent would be; that if the contractor did do the wrong complained of, qua contractor, and not with the authority of the board, the decree should have been against him, but if he did so under the authority of the board, he was their agent, and was an unnecessary party. Mayor of Ballarat v. Bungaree Road Board, 1 V.R. (E.,) 57, 63, and 73; 1 A.J.R., 33.

Information against Town Council.]—Where an information was laid against a town council for improperly accepting a tender, and councillors who had voted against the acceptance were made parties defendant, Held that they were unnecessary parties, and entitled to their costs. Attorney-General v. Mayor of Emerald Hill, 4 A.J.R., 135.

A councillor who had voted for the acceptance of the tender but against whom no improper motives, e.g., being interested in the contract, were charged, and who admitted that he intended to join in completing the contract, was also made a defendant, Held that he was properly made a defendant. Ibid.

Suit to Compel Assignment of Mining Lease in which two Companies were Interested—Companies Necessary Parties—Amalgamation of Companies.]—Certain land was held by the A. company as a claim, and M., a shareholder in the company, having purchased an adjoining claim, agreed to place both claims under the management of a new company to be formed (the B. company). The B. company was incorporated, and a lease was issued over both claims to persons as trustees for the B. company. Subsequently an execution creditor, the purchaser at a sheriff's sale, sued the trustees to compel the assignment of the lease. Held that both the A. company and the B. company were necessary parties. Randall v. Mau, 2 V.R. (E.,) 158; 2 A.J.R., 81.

Suit to have Name Restored on Register by a Shareholder whose Shares had been Forfeited—Amalgamation of Companies.]—See Cushing v. Lady Barkly G.M. Coy., 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 108, 124, 125; 5 A.L.T., 98, ante columns 163, 164.

Company—Claims Converted into Shares in a Company — Executors.] — Where an insolvent's mining claims were after his death converted into shares in a company registered in his executors' names, on a bill by official assignee against executors seeking a transfer of shares, Held that the company was not a necessary party to the suit. A plaintiff who has a right which another has improperly possessed himself of, is not bound to sue the person who has acceded to that other person's claim of right. Simson v. Scallan, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 255.

Necessary and Proper.]—A mining company registered under No. 228, and mining on private property alienated from the Crown, was ordered to be wound-up in July, 1868. The plaintiff, R., was appointed official agent of the company. Prior to the winding-up order, the company had been sequestrated by order of the Court for breach of an injunction. The plaintiff R. filed a bill against the directors and managers of the company charging misappropriation by them of the company's gold and other assets, mutilation and concealment of books and improper payment of dividends out of borrowed money and not out of profits, and sought accounts, declaration, and enforcement of liability. Held, on demurrer, for want of parties, that the sequestrators and the creditor obtaining sequestration, and the Attorney-General, were not necessary parties. Per totam curiam, reversing Molesworth, J., that the shareholders who had received these improper dividends were not necessary parties. Reeves v. Croyle, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 302.

Necessary and Proper.]—W. and B. purchased mining leases from H. and H. for the nominal sum of £26,840, consisting partly of cash, partly of promissory notes, and partly of paid-up shares in a mining company to be formed by W. and B. W. and B. formed the company, stating the purchase-money to have been £36,640, and appropriated the excess, which consisted of shares. Some of these shares were issued to B., who divided them between himself, W., and one S., who joined in endorsing the promissory notes to H. and H. On suit by a shareholder on behalf of himself, &c., against W. and B., H. and H., and the company, an objection was taken that S. was a necessary party, Held that S. was not a necessary party, since the bill did not and could not seek to impugn his rights. Benjamin v. Wymond, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 3; 5 A.L.T., 153, 155.

Effect of Reading Passage from Answer—Trustee and Cestui Que Trustent.]—In a suit by an official assignee of an insolvent to set aside the purchase of a policy of assurance on the insolvent's life, made by the defendant a few hours before the assured's death, charging fraudulent concealment of the insolvent's illness, the answer denied concealment, but stated that the defendant had purchased as trustee for insolvent's wife, and disclaimed all beneficial interest. The plaintiff read this passage from the answer. Held, at the hearing, that the plaintiff had, by reading this passage, precluded himself from taking the view that the defendant was not an obligatory trustee, and that, therefore, the insolvent's wife was, as cestui que trust, a necessary party to the suit. Shaw v. Sterling, 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 84.

In Suit for Accounts against Agent of Trustees.]—A testator, after expressing his confidence in M., directed his trustees to employ him as their agent and solicitor. The trustees P. and B. so employed M., who furnished accounts from time to time to the acting trustee, P., including charges for commission as agent and costs as solicitor. The costs were taxed ex parte, and allowed M. in account without investigation. In 1867, at the instance of a cestui que trust, objecting to M.'s accounts, an order for retaxation was obtained, and had been partly acted upon, when M. died, 3rd May, 1867. A suit was instituted 13th July, 1869, against M.'s administrator, seeking an account of his receipts. P. sued alone. B. not having acted, and being out of the jurisdiction, was named a defendant, but not served. Held that the recommendation in the will was directory only, and not imperative, and so rendered M. merely the agent of the trustees, and did not place him in privity with the cestui que trusts; that P. having acted alone, the case was one merely of principal and agent between M. and him; and that neither B. nor the cestui que trusts were necessary parties. Phelan v. Macoboy, 1 V.R. (E.,) 85; 1 A.J.R., 3. Confirmed on appeal, sub nom. Macoboy v. Phelan, 1 A.J.R., 52.

Remaindermen—Out of Jurisdiction.]—Where an administration suit is brought by tenants for life against executors and annuitants, the infants entitled in remainder, out of the jurisdiction, were held to be necessary parties. Chadwick v. Bennett, 1 V.R. (E.,) 109.

Cestui Que Trustent Suing.]—One of several cestuis que trustent cannot sue without either making all the other cestuis que trustent parties, or suing as on behalf of all. Where one cestui que trust sued the trustee and another cestui que trust, the suit was, at the hearing, converted into a suit by the plaintiff on behalf of all the other cestuis que trustent except the defendant. Fawkner v. Fawkner, 1 V.R. (E.,) 48; 1 A.J.R., 41.

In a Suit between Trustee and Cestuis Que Trustent.]—A testator charged his real estate with payment of his debts, and subject thereto devised it to P. and B. in trust for L. for life, with remainder over to her children as she should appoint, remainder in default of appointment to her heirs. No power of appointment had been exercised. On a bill by the trustees of a settlement executed on the marriage of one of testator's daughters, against P., B. and L., seeking to charge the real assets, Held that P. and B. would, under Rules, cap. v., sec. 10, represent all the cestuis que trustent, but that B. being out of the jurisdiction, and only a nominal defendant, all L.'s children were necessary parties. Bullen v. Phelan, 2 V.R. (E.,) 11; 2 A.J.R., 6.

Where plaintiff sought to enforce a declaration of trust in favour of himself and his brother, who died intestate, and to whom no representative had been appointed, his next-of-kin being out of the jurisdiction, and no relief being prayed for as regarded his interest, Held that it was not necessary to raise a representative to him as a necessary party to the suit. White v. Hoddle, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 82, 95; 2 A.L.T., 9.

Partners—Joint and Several Liability—Supreme Court Rules, Cap. V., R. 29.]—Where a trustee brings a suit against one member of a partnership firm, who has received trust monies with notice from a deceased co-trustee and misapplied them in his firm's business, he may proceed against one of the partners jointly liable without making the other partner a party, but the bill should state the joint liability or facts from which it may be inferred. Mackay v. Caughey, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 56.

Suit to Set Aside Transfer to Married Woman—Husband.]—In a suit to set aside a transfer of real estate to a married woman, as fraudulent and void, the husband is not a necessary party. Shiels v. Drysdale, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 126; 2 A.L.T., 14.

Necessary and Proper.]—A mere grantee to uses, without any legal estate, need not be joined as a party. Therefore, where land was by indenture released to A. to hold to such uses as B. should appoint, and subject thereto, to the use of B., B. granted the land to C. to the use of D. In a suit against B. and D. to affect the land:—Held that C. was not a necessary party, as the legal estate was not vested in him. White v. Hoddle, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 82, 95; 2 A.L.T., 9.

Necessary and Proper.]—A mortgagee of the equitable interest of a devisee under a will, is not a necessary, though not an improper party to a suit by a person claiming the property devised as having been acquired by the testator's fraud. The executor sufficiently represents the property. The Court is very unwilling to burden the plaintiff with the costs of such a party. Bennett v. Tucker, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 20; 3 A.L.T., 108.

Who Should be Plaintiffs.]—Semble, that the Attorney-General should not be joined with other plaintiffs in a bill and information to restrain persons from mining on private property where the defendants are committing different injuries to the different plaintiffs, e.g., where the Attorney-General is injured by the removal of gold, a municipal corporation, that had been joined as a plaintiff, by the damage to streets, and a private land-owner, also a co-plaintiff by damage to his property. Attorney-General v. Rogers, 1 V.R. (E.,) 132; 1 A.J.R., 120, 149.

Joinder.]—Per Full Court.—The Attorney-General and freehold owners of land may join in a suit to restrain a trespasser from mining for gold on the land. Attorney-General v. Lansell, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 155, 172; 3 A.L.T., 141.

And see Attorney-General v. Gee, and Attorney-General v. Scholes, ante column 912.

When Objection for Misjoinder should be Taken.]—In an administration suit by some on behalf of themselves and a class, against executors charging loss of the estate, which had been occasioned by the misconduct of one of the class, G., employed by executors as their agent, on motion by executors before answer insisting that such agent should be separated from the class, and made a co-defendant, Held that the executors as principals might be sued alone, and that in any case the objection as to the misjoinder of G. should not be raised at that stage, as if sustainable the bill would require amendment, and as to propriety of making G. a defendant, that could be raised better after evidence taken. On the hearing an order was made making G. a co-defendant, not upon ground that defendants were of right entitled to it, but upon its appearing on the facts more convenient. Graham v. Gibson, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) pp. 103, 108.

Misjoinder—Amendment—Supreme Court Rules Cap. VI., Rule 20.]—In a creditor's suit for administration, it appeared on the taking of evidence that J., one of the two plaintiffs suing as creditors, was a partner in a firm, and that the debt in respect of which he was joined as a plaintiff, was a debt due to the firm. Held at the hearing that J. was misjoined as a plaintiff, and his partner could not then be joined; that J.'s name must be struck off the record; that such amendment must at once be made on the record, and that the decree should recite that the record was amended by consent. Bailey v. Wright, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 111.

Defendant Objecting that Parties are not Joined not Precluded from Objecting to their being Joined.]—A defendant who has objected that certain persons are necessary parties to a suit, which persons are afterwards joined as co-plaintiffs, is not precluded from afterwards objecting that such persons have no equitable rights in the subject matter of the suit, and are improperly joined as co-plaintiffs. Per Stawell, C.J.:—"He (the defendant) may properly object that the owners of land were, so far as appeared from the pleadings, necessary parties; and yet afterwards when those persons had been made parties, and all the facts had been proved, consistently object that their interests and those of the Attorney-General were diverse, and that all could not be joined in the same bill." Attorney-General v. Lansell, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 155; 3 A.L.T., 141.

Misjoinder—Transferor of Mining Lease Suing with Transferees.]—A., a lessee of a mining lease, was convicted of forgery 16th March, 1882, and B. was under Sec. 8 of Act No. 627 (abolition of forfeiture for felony) appointed curator and, on 31st August, applied to be registered as proprietor of the lease. Early in September, A. having served his sentence, lodged a caveat and, on 13th September, transferred his estate and interest in the lease to B. and D. Suit by A., C., and D. to restrain B.'s registration. Held, on demurrer, that A. as a registered proprietor who had parted with his interest, but the transfer of which was not registered, should be a party to the suit in order to convey, and that he was not misjoined as plaintiff. Mitchell v. M'Dougal, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 13; 4 A.L.T., 114.

Objection for Want of, when Sufficient.]—An objection by answer for want of parties is sufficient if the answer unequivocably designates the class of persons who ought to be made parties, although their names are not mentioned. Cushing v. The Lady Barkly G.M. Coy., 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 108, 124; 5 A.L.T., 98.

Objection to Misnomer.]—In equity, as at law, the only person who can take advantage of the misnomer of a defendant is the person misnamed, and it is no objection in the mouth of a co-defendant. Dancker v. Porter, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 313, 331.

Plaintiffs Suing for Interest which they have Mortgaged.]—Where plaintiffs are claiming an interest they have mortgaged to others, the mortgagees are necessary parties, for it is a general principle that if a plaintiff has transferred his own rights of suing to another person, he shall not sue without making that other person a party. Evans v. Guthridge, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 83, 88.

Persons Possessing Paramount Rights—Rights the Subject of an Account.]—It is not necessary to make persons whose rights are confessedly paramount, parties to litigation between persons having claims subordinate to those rights; and the mere fact of the rights of those paramount persons being the subject of an account, does not render it necessary to make them parties. Ibid, p. 89.

Objection for Want of Parties Raised in Answer, and Disregarded—Costs.]—Where an objection for want of parties is raised by answer and disregarded, and is taken at the hearing and allowed with liberty to amend, the Court will only give leave to amend upon terms of paying costs of and occasioned by the setting down for hearing. Ibid.

Where a Party is out of the Jurisdiction.]—In a trespass suit by a mortgagee and one of two mortgagors of a mining claim, the other mortgagor being out of the jurisdiction, it is sufficient to allege that fact without naming him as a defendant; and where such an allegation was not supported by the evidence, the Court referred it to the Master to inquire whether the co-mortgagor was out of the jurisdiction, and if so, to take the accounts directed by the decree. Mulcahy v. The Walhalla G.M. Co., 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 103.

Averment in Bill of one Defendant being out of Jurisdiction—Return of Defendant.]—In an injunction suit against two mortgagees, R. and B., to restrain them from transferring certain land sold irregularly under the Act No. 301, the bill averred that R. was out of jurisdiction. R. returned before hearing. Held that R. was a necessary party, and that the pleadings should be amended by striking out an averment that R. was out of the jurisdiction, and that a summons should issue to R. to answer, &c. M'Donald v. Rowe, 3 A.J.R., 90; 4 A.J.R., 67.

Validity of—Bill Alleging Fraud and not Pleading Facts as Evidence thereof.]—Bill by contractor against the Board of Land and Works alleging that the plaintiff entered into a contract under seal with the board; that the plaintiff had been paid some of the moneys due to him, but that the board refused to pay the balance on the ground that the plaintiff did not produce the certificate of C., the chief engineer, as required by the contract; that C. withheld the certificate because plaintiff refused to do certain work, which the bill alleged was not comprised in or required by the contract. The bill alleged collusion between the board and C., and fraud on the part of the latter in not giving the certificate; and it prayed for a declaration that the withholding the certificate was a fraud on the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff was entitled to receive all moneys which he would have been entitled to if such certificate had been granted, and for an account and payment. Plea that no moneys were due till the certificate had been given; that no certificate had been given; that it was not by C.'s default that the certificate had not been given, and denial of charges of fraud and collusion, or that defendants were endeavouring to compel plaintiff to perform works not included in the contract. The plea was accompanied by an answer denying any default in C., or any aiding or abetting or collusion. Held a good plea, none of the facts alleged in the bill being alleged as evidence of the alleged fraud. Ramsay v. Board of Land and Works, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 16.

Overruled.]—Where a plea supported by an answer is overruled, the defendant is bound by the answer so far as it goes, but may have liberty to answer such parts of the bill as are not answered. Brougham v. Melbourne Banking Corporation, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 190.

When a plea is simply overruled it is conclusive, and the same defence cannot be raised again at the hearing. Ibid, p. 202.

Upon Marriage and Birth of Parties—Rules of Court, Cap. V., Rules 13, 24.]—After a decree for sale in an administration suit, under which decree a number of infants were interested, another child in the same interest was born. More than three months after the birth of the child an application was made on behalf of the plaintiffs to revive the suit. Held that the jurisdiction of a judge in Chambers under the Rules of Court, cap. v., rules 13 and 24, to make an order to revive a suit which has abated by reason of change or transmission of interest on the birth of a child, cannot be exercised after the expiration of the three months limited by the rule; and where the parties come too late, they are driven to what was the practice prior to the rules, and must proceed by supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of revivor. Bank of Australasia v. Balbirnie Vans, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 85.

Supplemental Bill where Necessary.]—See Watson v. Kyte, ante column 1172.

Supplemental Answer.]—See Phelan v. O'Shanassy, ante column 1161.

Supplemental Suit—Evidence—Parties.]—In a supplemental suit, of the nature of a bill of revivor, to bring before the Court an infant born after, but interested in the decree in the original suit, the regular course is to set the supplemental suit down for taking evidence, and to obtain a supplemental decree; but the evidence need only be the former proceedings and the date of the birth of the child, and the parties need only be the plaintiff in the original suit and the infant. Bank of Australasia v. Gibb, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 95.

Liberty to Revive.]—Liberty will be given to a creditor to revive a creditor's administration suit in which a decree has been obtained unless the plaintiff does so within a limited time. Lonsdale v. Batman, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 341.

Decree in Suit Revived after taking Evidence.]—After evidence taken in a suit by a legatee against executors, one executor died, and the suit was revived against his representatives, who admitted assets of his and of the original testator. Notwithstanding that the defendants had had no opportunity to answer, a decree was made against them and the surviving executor, for payment of legacy and interest, and plaintiff's costs of suit. Baylee v. Morley, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 33.

Order for Revivor.]—In a suit for administration by a sole beneficiary against trustees, a new trustee was appointed after decree, and an order made vesting the estate in him in place of one of the original trustees; the other original trustee applied for an order of revivor. With the consent of plaintiff, order made. Grant v. Grant, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 314.

Death of Party between Argument and Judgment.]—Where a party to a suit dies after judgment reserved, the Court may proceed to give judgment without any revivor being necessary. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Pie, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 186, 191, 193.

Supplemental Order—Amendment of Decree.]—See Attorney-General v. Huon, ante column 1174.

Infant Defendant.]—The Court will, under 13 Vict. No. 31, Sec. 1, make an order for personal service of an infant defendant residing in England, and without any guardian. Colley v. Colley, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 101.

Substituted Service—Infant Defendant out of Jurisdiction—Trustees.]—Upon motion for leave to substitute service upon an infant defendant out of the jurisdiction by serving trustees of property the subject matter of the suit, and in which the infant was beneficially interested, Held that the trustees were not the agents of the absent infant, or persons selected by him, and order refused; but order made to serve infant out of jurisdiction to be verified before a commissioner, such service to be accompanied by a notice that if no application were made on infant's behalf to appoint a guardian, the plaintiff would apply to have a nominee of his own appointed guardian. Ross v. O'Callaghan, 2 W. & W. (E.) 157.

The Court has no power to make an order for service of the bill out of the jurisdiction where the cause of suit arose out of Victoria, and the relief sought was entirely personal against the defendant out of the jurisdiction. Loring v. Brown, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 94.

Service Out of Jurisdiction.]—The Court has no jurisdiction to order service out of jurisdiction of a bill in a partnership suit where the business is carried on out of Victoria, and even if business were carried on partly in Victoria and partly out of it, the Court would have no jurisdiction. Buttner v. Hallenstein, 3 V.R. (E.,) 25; 3 A.J.R., 9.

Service to be Verified before Commissioner.]—Motion for leave to serve defendants resident in Ireland granted; the order directed service to be verified before a commissioner of the Supreme Court of Victoria in Dublin. Solly v. Atkinson, 5 A.J.R., 19.

Service Out of Jurisdiction.]—Upon an application for an order for leave to serve a defendant out of the jurisdiction, it should appear that there is at the place where service is sought to be effected a proper person before whom the fact of service may be duly verified. Dodgson v. Ginn, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 9.

Service of Bill Out of Jurisdiction— "Equity Practice Statute," Sec. 3—Time for Answering.]—In a foreclosure suit affecting land in Victoria, subsequent mortgagees were made parties. The affidavit of plaintiff's solicitor stated that the defendant to be served was resident in London, and that commissioners of the Supreme Court resided there. An order for service was made, the service to be verified before a commissioner, and the answer to be delivered within three months of service. Rhind v. Clarke, 1 A.L.T., 179.

Substituted Service—General Jurisdiction.]—Upon a motion under the general jurisdiction of the Court, leave was given to substitute service of the bill and summons upon an agent under power who was empowered by the defendant to receive the rents of the property, the subject matter of the suit, and bring or defend any actions or suits referring to it. Duhig v. Shannon, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 25.

13 Vict., No. 31, Sec. 1—Agent.]—The 13 Vict., No. 31, Sec. 1, enabling the Court to authorise substituted service "upon the receiver, steward, agent, or other person receiving or remitting the rents of the premises, if any, the subject matter of the suit," does not, where the property is in fact producing no rent, authorise substituted service upon an agent empowered to receive the rents of the property in question. Ibid.

Service upon the attorney-at-law of one of the defendants in an equity suit out of the jurisdiction, deemed good service. Lonsdale v. Batman, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 341.

Substituted Service.]—In a partnership suit substituted service of the bill will not be ordered upon a person holding merely a general power of attorney from a defendant out of the jurisdiction. Buttner v. Hallenstein, 3 V.R. (E.,) 25; 3 A.J.R., 9.

Substituted Service—Service on Defendant in Vacation before he left the Jurisdiction.]—Motion for leave to substitute service on defendant C., who was in England. He had been served before leaving, but such service was set aside as having been made during vacation. Ordered that bill be served on C.'s solicitor by way of substituted service. M'Phee v. Croaker, 5 A.J.R., 4.

Substituted Service — Lunatic Defendant.] — Where a lunatic defendant was resident out of the jurisdiction, an order for substituted service of the bill upon his committee within the jurisdiction was refused, but an order was made for service upon the lunatic in England under Act No. 242. ("Equity Practice Statute 1865," Sec. 3.) Allan v. Wilkie, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 6.

Substituted Service—Amended Bill—Appeal—Discretion—"Supreme Court Rules," Cap. V., Rules 11, 12, 33.]—When an order is made allowing a demurrer and giving plaintiffs liberty to amend within a month, and in default that bill should be dismissed with costs, that does not, in the absence of amendment within time limited, deprive the Court of its inherent jurisdiction to allow substituted service of an amended copy of bill after the time limited. Where plaintiffs amended bill within the time limited but did not serve one of the defendants till after the time, and after the time applied by motion for leave to serve this defendant's solicitor, Held, by Molesworth, J., that the Court had jurisdiction to entertain application, but exercising his discretion he should refuse motion. By Full Court, that court had jurisdiction and had power to control discretion of Primary Judge, and, exercising its discretion, it allowed motion, extending time for amending to six months from date of order, but made no order as to service. Semble, per Molesworth, J., that personal service of an amended bill is not necessary under rule 33, cap. v. of "Supreme Court Rules." Learmonth v. Bailey, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 191.

Substituted Service—Notice of Motion given to Agent.]—Semble, that where a defendant is out of the jurisdiction, and the plaintiff wishes to serve the bill upon his agent, notice of motion for substituted service on his agent should be given to the agent. Clarke v. Were, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 43.

Substituted Service—Defendant Out of Jurisdiction.]—S., a defendant, was out of jurisdiction. B. was his attorney under power. Motion for substituted service upon B. refused. Court requiring an application to accept service to be first made to B. Sargood v. Rutherford, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 187.

Substituted Service—Form of Order—Costs.]—In making an order for substituted service of the bill upon a defendant, the Court followed the form adopted in substituted service of an order nisi in insolvency—i.e., by delivery of bill on any adult at the dwelling-house, or by posting on the door. Costs of such an order are usually costs in the cause. Danby v. O'Keefe, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 69; 1 A.L.T., 178.

Substituted Service—Defendants out of Jurisdiction.]—Order made for substituted service of bill on persons who had acted as solicitors for defendants in a prior suit with reference to the same estate, and who were now in communication with them with reference to the matter. O'Sullivan v. Huon, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 109.

Substituted Service.]—The plaintiff, not being able to find the defendant at his last known place of abode, and having reason to believe that he had left the colony to avoid being served with the bill, moved for leave to substitute service of the bill and writ upon a solicitor who had acted for defendant in a former transaction relating to the land, the subject of the suit, and who was believed to be in communication with the defendant. Leave granted. Howse v. Campbell, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 145.

Substituted Service—"Equity Practice Statute 1865" (No. 242,) Sec. 4.]—Quære, whether it is competent for a person on whom an order for substituted service has been made to move to set such order aside. Held that where a defendant cannot be served and there are reasons for believing that he is keeping out of the way to avoid service and an order for substituted service has been made upon a solicitor who had acted for him in a prior transaction relating to the subject matter of the suit, such solicitor on moving to set aside the order must show that he is not able to communicate with the defendant. Ibid.

In a Suit by Next Friend of Infants.]—Where the Court was of opinion that a suit had been instituted by a mother, as next friend of infant plaintiffs, for her own purposes, and to work out her own private feelings and motives, and not for the benefit of the infants, order made on motion by the defendants staying all further proceedings, but without costs. Murphy v. Kelly, 2 V.R. (E.,) 139; 2 A.J.R., 128.

On Appeal to Privy Council—Security.]—See United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy. v. National Bank of Australasia, ante columns 36, 37.

When Granted or Refused — Administration Suit — Assignment — Creditor of Assignor.]—J.G.W. died intestate in 1859, leaving a widow and children, and possessed of realty and personalty. The widow was entitled to dower out of the real estate. The widow administered to the estate, and in 1860 one of her children instituted a suit for the general administration of the estate. In 1862 the widow married W.M.A., and prior to the marriage executed a settlement of her interest as doweress and next-of-kin, by which she reserved to herself an absolute power of appointment over the sum of £15,000. She died in 1867, having appointed £5000 to her husband, and having appointed him and the trustees of her settlement, executors and trustees of her will. By deed, in 1868, W.M.A. mortgaged the legacy of £5000 to the National Bank of Australasia to secure a debt due by him to the bank. After the death of the widow the suit which had been instituted in 1860 for administration of the intestate's estate was revived against W.M.A., the administrator de bonis non of J.G.W., the trustees of the widow's settlement and executors of her will. A receiver was appointed, and decree and order on further directions made, but the share to which the widow was entitled had not been ascertained, nor had dower been assigned, or any assets distributed amongst the next-of-kin entitled, and nothing had come to the hands of the widow's trustees or executors. In the progress of the suit large sums of which the widow was entitled to a share had been paid into court, amounting to £58,000, which was standing to the credit of the cause. On motion by the National Bank, upon affidavit of the above facts, and upon notice to all parties, for a stop order, Held that the order sought by the bank would embarrass the administration of funds in which many people besides W.M.A. were interested, and motion refused with costs. Ware v. Ware, Ware v. Aitken, 1 V.R. (E.,) 1; 1 A.J.R., 3.

Administration Suit—Privy Council Decree.]—An administratrix, widow of the intestate, obtained an overdraft from a bank, the bank relying upon a lien upon her share of the intestate's estate; but her share and dower were upon her second marriage vested in trustees. In a suit, which on appeal went to the Privy Council, the Privy Council directed that the bank was entitled to a lien upon all arrears of dower and upon the widow's share of personalty, and should be allowed to apply for payment thereout in the administration suit. The bank applied for a stop order to prevent payment to the trustees of the settlement, and the Court with much hesitation and in deference to the decree of the Privy Council made the order as required. Ware v. Ware, 4 A.J.R., 121.

Where a fund is standing in the name of the Master to the credit of a cause, the Court will, upon the application of a mortgagee of a part thereof, with the consent of the mortgagor entitled thereto, grant a stop order thereon. Chadwick v. Bennett, in re Chadwick and Robinson, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 227.

The Supreme Court in its Equitable jurisdiction adopts the practice of the Court of Chancery, as in the Orders of 1841, with reference to stop orders. Ibid.

When Granted.]—Plaintiff, entitled for his life to the income of debentures standing to the credit of the cause, moved, in conjunction with his mortgagees, for a stop order and for an order directing the future income to be paid to the attorney under power of the mortgagees, who were out of the jurisdiction. The Court granted the stop order, requiring the attorney, who was also plaintiff's agent for receiving the income, to be liable for any costs or expenses occasioned to any party to the cause thereby; but refused the order for the payment of future income to the mortgagees. Green v. Sutherland, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 1; 1 A.L.T., 122.

Compromise of Suit—Consent of Party.]—Where an order was made for the compromise of a suit subject to the consent of a party for whom there would probably be nothing in any event, the Court refused to dispense with such consent. London Chartered Bank v. Lempriere, 4 A.J.R., 173.

No Affidavit of Service of Notice of Setting Down for Hearing—Costs.]—Where upon a suit being called on for hearing the plaintiff was not prepared with an affidavit of service of notice of having set the suit down for hearing upon a defendant who did not appear, the cause was ordered to stand over, plaintiff to pay the costs of the day to a defendant who had appeared. Yandell v. Hector, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 173.

Non-Appearance of Certain Defendants—Defendants out of Jurisdiction.]—A suit by a single plaintiff against a number of defendants came on for evidence. Some of the defendants appeared, others did not. There was no allegation in the bill that any of the defendants were out of the jurisdiction. On an objection being taken by defendants under Supreme Court Rules cap. vi., r. 14, that plaintiff had not proved service of bill upon all the defendants, or service of notice of suit being set down for hearing, Held that the defendants, who had appeared, could not at that time take the objection, and that plaintiff might go on with his case, but he must prove proper service on the defendants before the hearing; that where a defendant is out of the jurisdiction, it should be averred in the bill, and proved as part of the plaintiff's case. Honey v. Bucknall, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 327.

Judgment pro confesso—Making up Roll—Order Striking out Co-Plaintiffs.]—Motion that a bill be taken pro confesso. One defendant had demurred to the bill, but the demurrer was overruled in February, 1883, but up to the date of the present motion (December, 1884) no copy of the order overruling it had been served on the defendant, who, with the other defendants, in consequence concluded that the suit was abandoned. An order had been made by the Court to have the names of two out of three plaintiffs struck out. The remaining plaintiff set the suit down to be taken pro confesso. Held that a decree pro confesso would not be made since the case had been allowed to sleep so long, but that the case should stand over, defendants being at liberty to answer; and that the order for striking out the names of the plaintiffs should be endorsed on the roll of pleadings. Mitchell v. M'Dougall, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 340.

(c) Undefended Suit.

Verification of Bill—No Answer Required from Defendant—Affidavit.]—Though no answer is required by the plaintiff from a defendant who has left a suit undefended, it is still necessary that the bill should be verified against him, since he will be bound by the decree. The affidavit verifying the bill should be made by the plaintiff himself, unless owing to his absence or to the facts stated being more immediately in the knowledge of others, the affidavit of some other person is necessarily or properly substituted. Palmer v. Bronckhorst, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 61.

Verification—Supreme Court Rules, Cap. VI., Rule 12.]—Under the Rule of Court, requiring the bill to be verified by affidavit in the case of an undefended suit, an affidavit against the non-defending parties is as necessary, when some only of the defendants answer, as if the suit were wholly undefended. Where there are several plaintiffs, all should join in the affidavit or should assign reasons in the affidavit made by some of them why the others do not join. Evans v. Guthridge, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 83, 85.

Standing Over—No Affidavit to Verify Bill—Costs.]—Where, upon a suit being called on for hearing, the plaintiff was not prepared with an affidavit verifying the bill as against a defendant who had not answered, the cause was directed to stand over, and the plaintiff ordered to pay the costs of the day to the defendant, who did appear. Stratford v. Glass, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 162.

Foreclosure Suit.]—In an undefended foreclosure suit the bill must be verified by all the plaintiffs. Ronald v. M'Pherson, 1 A.J.R., 105.

Verification—"Supreme Court Rules," Cap. VI., R. 12.]—The plaintiff in an undefended suit should always make the affidavit verifying the bill against defendants who do not appear, unless there are some special reasons appearing why he cannot, or unless some other person is a more competent witness. Phelps v. Pusey, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 258.

Verification by Formal Defendant.]—Where a formal defendant, e.g., the Registrar of Titles, leaves a suit undefended, the bill must be verified by affidavit against him. Archibald v. Archibald, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 181.

Affidavit Verifying Bill.]—Where a bill by a banking company is undefended, an affidavit by an inferior officer, upon information and belief, is insufficient. The bill should be verified by an affidavit by an officer having the best means of information. Bank of Victoria v. Rawling, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 111.

Verification—Defendants in Same Interest as Plaintiff.]—Where defendants leave a suit undefended, it is necessary to have the usual affidavit verifying the bill against them, although they may be in the same interest as the plaintiff. Attorney-General v. Shire of Wimmera, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 162.

Verification—Who may Make Affidavit—Next Friend.]—The next friend of infant plaintiffs is not a proper person to make an affidavit verifying the bill in an undefended suit, unless the facts are within his own knowledge. It should be done by some person well informed thereon. Cameron v. Macnamara, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 236.

Verification—Infants—Feme Covert.]—Where a bill is filed by several infants, one being a feme covert, by their next friend, and some of the defendants do not appear, the bill must be verified, as against them, by the affidavit of the next friend and of the infant feme covert, and there must also be an affidavit of the infancy of the plaintiffs. Swan v. Seal, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 57, 60.

Order in Undefended Suit for Payment of Balance Due to Cestuis que Trustent bringing Suit without Prejudice to Rights of other Cestuis que Trustent.]—Buggy v. Buggy, ante column 16.

Effect of Leaving Suit Undefended as to Statements in the Bill thereby Admitted.]—Per Molesworth, J.—When a defendant admits the statements of a bill by leaving the suit undefended, his admission can only be held conclusive for the purpose of granting the relief specifically prayed; the plaintiff is not entitled at the hearing to a different decree to that asked by the prayer. Henderson v. Ellis, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 9.

Costs—Where not Prayed for.]—In an undefended suit for specific performance against the official assignee of one of the contracting parties, where the bill did not specifically pray for costs, the Court refused to make any order for costs against the defendant. Curwen v. Mullery, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 143; 2 A.L.T., 37.

Further Evidence after Verdict.]—In an appeal to the Full Court upon an interlocutory application in a cause, issues on certain points were sent to a jury. Subsequently an application was made to the primary judge to set the case down for taking further evidence on certain points which had not been sent to the jury, and as to the question of costs. Held that further evidence might be taken, but was to be restricted to the points not sent to the jury, and to evidence affecting costs, the finding of the jury being final and conclusive on the points sent to it, but not as to costs without entering into the further merits or demerits of the case. Learmonth v. Bailey, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 85; affirmed on appeal, Ibid, 238.

Taking Evidence.]—The practice in equity is the same as at law, and each party may tender evidence in support of affirmative issues on his side, but plaintiff may forbear to meet affirmative issues lying on defendant, and may, if defendant give evidence on his affirmative issues, rebut it afterwards. Hicks v. Commercial Bank of Australia, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 228.

(42) Transfer of Funds into and out of Court.

Payment into Court—Person's Beneficial Interest in Fund exceeding Amount in his Hands.]—In an administration suit in which the administrator of the realty was plaintiff, and the administrator of the personalty was defendant, the accounts showed that all debts had been paid, and that a balance of £400, the proceeds of sale of realty, was in the plaintiff's hands. Certain credits and charges were claimed by the plaintiff as against this sum but were disallowed, although no report had been drawn up. The plaintiff's interest in the whole fund exceeded the balance in his hands. Defendant moved for an order for payment into Court as shown by the accounts and disallowances. It appeared that the costs already incurred and those likely to be incurred by the plaintiff would greatly decrease the balance. Motion refused under the circumstances. Held that, generally speaking, if the beneficial interest of a person in an entire fund exceeds the amount of the fund in his hands, that is an answer to an application to compel him to pay that amount into Court. Semble, that the existence of the administration bond, there being no imputation of defective security, was also an answer. Molloy v. Molloy, 2 V.R. (E.,) 173.

Payment in—Motion for—Premature.]—In a suit for admistration the administrators had certain funds in their hands. The next-of-kin, who were not parties to the cause, obtained an order committing to them the carriage of the decree in the office, and, before they obtained an order for the carriage of the suit before the Court, they applied, on motion, for an order directing the administrators to pay into Court the funds in their hands. Held premature and unsustainable. Attorney-General v. Huon, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 119.

Refusal of Partner to Account—When Order for Payment into Court Made.]—Hart v. Belinfanté, ante column 1135.

Payment into Court—Fraudulent Conveyance of Equity of Redemption Set Aside—Sale by Mortgagee—Motion for Payment in of Surplus.]—A decree having been made setting aside conveyance of equity of redemption as fraudulent against the plaintiff, a creditor, but no order having been made changing possession, the bill not seeking interference with defendant's possession, part of the property was sold under a mortgage by a building society, and a surplus of £90 remained in the hands of the society. The Court refused, on a summary application made ex parte, to order the defendant, who had received the surplus from the society, to pay the money into Court. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Pie, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 28.

Payment Out of Court—Attorney under Power of Person Entitled.]—When the Master has been directed to pay certain moneys to certain persons, the Court will direct him to recognise and pay the duly authorised attorney under power of such persons. Green v. Sutherland, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 71.

Payment Out—To whom Made.]—The Court will only order payment of money out of Court to the party entitled, or his attorney under power. Payment will not be ordered to the solicitor in the suit. Cameron v. Macnamara, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 284; 4 A.L.T., 37.

Payment Out of Court—Application for—Proceeds of Sale under a Decree—Special Report—

Further Directions.]—In a suit instituted by a mortgagee as creditor, on behalf of himself and all other creditors of the deceased mortgagor, a decree had been made, directing an account of what was due to the plaintiff for principal and interest on his mortgage security, and ordering a sale of the mortgaged premises and the payment of the purchase-money into Court. The decree also directed the usual accounts of the personal estate, and an inquiry as to any other real estate. The Master reported specially that £2206 14s. was due to plaintiff on the mortgage, and that the premises had been sold, and realised the sum of £1243, which was paid into Court. On the report being presented for confirmation, the plaintiff, with the consent of the only defendant who defended, applied for an order for payment out of Court to plaintiff of the amount realised by the sale, there being no other estate, real or personal, to bear the expense of prosecuting the inquiries under the decree. Held irregular, and that the proper course was to set the cause down for further directions on the special report. The suit being subsequently set down for hearing on further directions, a decree was made as applied for. Brown v. Meldrum, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 129.

Per Molesworth, J.—"I think a cause may be set down for further directions on a special report, or in any stage of the proceedings, and I think that is the proper course to be pursued here." Ibid.

Payment Out of Court.]—Payment out of Court of a sum of money paid in by executors as the share to which a beneficiary was entitled, such beneficiary not having been heard of for some time, should be applied for by petition under Act No. 234 ("Statute of Trusts 1864"); and on petition by executors for payment out to executors who wished to distribute it among other beneficiaries, order for payment out made to executors to distribute it on their own responsibility. In re Bourke's Trusts, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 281; 1 A.L.T., 91.

Payment Out—Application for—"Statute of Trusts 1864," Sec. 56.]—Where money had been paid into Court by the executors of a deceased person under Sec. 56 of the "Statute of Trusts 1864," till it was ascertained whether the person entitled was living or dead, and the executors had satisfied themselves that he was dead, and moved to have the money paid out to those entitled, Held that there were not sufficient materials to enable the Court to form a conclusion; that the application should be made by petition, as required by the Act, and not by motion; and that the case did not come under the general rule of Court, that an application might be made by notice where a petition was sufficient. In re Benson, 1 A.L.T., 75.

"Statute of Trusts 1864," Secs. 56, 57—Moneys Paid in under Sec. 56—Application for Payment Out—O. LV., R. 2.]—Summons in Chambers to have certain payments made out of funds paid into Court by an administrator under Sec. 56 of the "Statute of Trusts 1864" (No. 234.) Per Molesworth, J.—The application must be made by petition as provided by Sec. 57 of the "Statute of Trusts." Re Stanton and the "Statute of Trusts," 6 A.L.T., 33.

Service of Petition for Payment Out under Act No. 234.]—In re Edwards, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 109; post under TRUST AND TRUSTEE—Funds in Court.

Payment Out — Service of Notice of Motion for.]—Upon motion in an administration suit, for payment out of Court of the share of a beneficiary, the parties to the suit were served. Held, such service was proper; but that as they had no grounds of opposition to the motion, their appearance was unnecessary, and they were not entitled to the costs thereof out of the share. Punch v. Punch, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 161; 2 A.L.T., 40.

Habere facias Possessionem—When Notice of Motion for should be Given.]—After execution of a writ of habere facias in ejectment, notice of motion for an injunction to restrain execution of the writ is too late. But, semble, if possession was taken after service of notice of motion, an order might be made to reinstate the plaintiff in possession. Innis v. Innis, 2 V.R. (E.,) 109.

Distringas — Setting Aside.]—For circumstances in which a writ of distringas issued against a corporate defendant for an alleged contempt was set aside on motion supported by affidavits, see United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy. v. National Bank of Australasia, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 259; ante column 237.

Writ of Assistance—When Granted.]—An order had been made for the delivery up to defendant trustees of a certain hotel and chattels by the plaintiff, which plaintiff had not complied with. Upon motion an order was made for grant of a writ of assistance to put the trustees in possession of hotel and chattels. Bryant v. Patten, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 218.

When Granted.]—Where a mortgagor has redeemed his property upon suit, and finds a tenant of the mortgagee in possession, he should, if he desire to recover possession, proceed without delay. But having, after a lapse of time, brought an action against the tenant for use and occupation, and accepted a sum as for rent, Held that having treated the tenant as tenant, he could not obtain a writ of assistance or of habere. Slack v. Atkinson, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 32; 1 A.L.T., 139.

Not Granted on an Ex Parte Application.]—A mortgagor redeemed his property upon suit, and finding a tenant of the mortgagee in possession, moved ex parte for a writ of assistance to turn him out. Per Molesworth, J.—"I will only hear any such application, after notice served upon such person, giving him an opportunity of being heard." Slack v. Atkinson, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 32; 1 A.L.T., 113.

Writ Ne Exeat Colonia.]—See NE EXEAT COLONIA.

Ex Parte Order for Writ of Assistance—When Granted.]—Where a decree directing a defendant to deliver up possession of land had been disobeyed, the plaintiff was allowed, upon an affidavit of personal service of the decree, to obtain an ex parte order for a writ of assistance. Bamblett v. M'Culla, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 133.

(B) PRACTICE AT LAW BEFORE JUDICATURE ACT.

See generally under COURT ante columns 277 et seq., and under JURISDICTION, ante column 741.

Enlargement of Term—No Jurisdiction to hear Matters not Pending at Time of Enlargement.]—When the Court had enlarged a term by two days for the purpose of hearing matters pending on the day when the enlargement was made, Held that the Court had no jurisdiction on the two days so added to hear a matter not pending on the day when the term was so enlarged. In re Lyons, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 194.

Of Pleadings.]—See post under PLEADING AT LAW.

Of Rule Nisi—To raise a Technical Objection.]—Bank of Australasia v. Pollard, post under (5) Rules and Orders.

Of Special Case—After Judgment.]—Cohen v. Oriental Bank, post under (8) Special Case.

Of Record.]—Slack v. Winder, post under (9) Trial—Record.

Generally—Practice.]—The "Common Law Practice Act," incorporating into one two Imperial Statutes on the subject of amendments, is of the same effect as those Statutes passed separately, and therefore, as in England, the Court here has not the power to review the discretion of a judge at nisi prius refusing an application to amend. The party aggrieved by the refusal should apply to the Court, not to review that decision, but to allow an amendment, and direct a new trial if substantial justice requires such a course. Appleton v. Williams, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 292.

Of Writ of Habere—Nunc pro Tunc.]—A motion was made on notice, the other party not appearing, for the amendment of a writ of habere in an ejectment action by substituting certain words nunc pro tunc. The Court refused to make the rule absolute in the first instance, where there was no appearance on the other side, but granted a rule nisi. Neil v. Whelan, 5 A.J.R., 77.

When for Plaintiff—Damages.]—If the issues of fact have been tried before those of law, and a verdict found for defendant on a plea afterwards held bad on demurrer, and the plaintiff's damages be assessed contingently, the judgment must be for plaintiff on the issues of law, with the damages so assessed. Connor v. Spence, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 243, 261.

When Granted or Refused.]—A declaration stated that the plaintiff had suffered damage and might sustain further damage, and a verdict was found for the plaintiff. On rule nisi for arrest of judgment, Held that such statement of probable future damage was not a ground for arrest of judgment. Dickson v. Western Freehold G.M. Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 100.

(c) Judgment non obstante veredicto.

When it may be Entered.]—In an action of deceit on the sale of land, plaintiff recovered a verdict on first count (for false representations as to title;) defendant recovered on second count (for failing to perform conditions of sale, damages costs of investigating title,) to which he pleaded not guilty, and defendant added at trial a plea that plaintiff made default in payment of a bill. Held, on rule to enter verdict for plaintiff on second count, that judgment non obstante veredicto could not be entered while there was a plea, i.e., the added plea going to the whole of the second count remaining on the record as found for defendant; that unless defendant elected to give up his added plea, the rule must be absolute, as defendant did not make the title contracted for, and that then plaintiff might move for such judgment, for although this added plea was not in avoidance and confession, the first plea was found in favour of plaintiff, which was equivalent to a bad plea in confession and avoidance. Raeburn v. Murphy, 5 A.J.R., 23.

Judgment by Consent—Fraud.]—Where on a judgment by consent obtained against defendant as heir-at-law of a person who had given certain bills of exchange held by plaintiff, it appeared that there was collusion between the parties and the plaintiff did not deny a charge of fraud against him, but it appeared that the defendant on being examined by the judge in the usual way had not disclosed the fraud or collusion, but on an application to set aside the judgment the defendant abandoned the charge of the judgment having been obtained by fraud, and relied on the objection that since the passing of the "Intestates' Estates Act" no judgment could be signed against a person as heir-at-law, Held that a person who took out a summons on one ground could not be allowed to abandon it and take up another; and no order was made and no costs given, but without prejudice to any subsequent application on the part of the defendant. Slack v. Winder, 1 A.J.R., 170.

In an action for trespass for seizing sheep the defendant pleaded not possessed, and a special plea to which plaintiff replied and new assigned in respect of other sheep, and to the new assignment the defendant pleaded not guilty. At the trial the plaintiff had a verdict on all the issues, with entire damages, without discrimination between the sheep, the subject of the special plea, and those the subject of the new assignment. A rule nisi was obtained to enter a verdict for defendant on the special plea and the plea to the new assignment, and on the special plea a verdict was entered for defendant, who drew up his rule absolute to enter a verdict for him on the special plea only, thus leaving the verdict on the plea to the new assignment untouched. Upon this plaintiff signed judgment for the entire damages assessed by the jury, and the judgment was set aside by an order of a judge. On motion to rescind such order, Held that the order was right; that defendant's rule, being drawn up as absolute only in part, should have directed a new trial, but that the mistake could not be set right after the term in which the rule was made absolute, and that a stet processus was the proper remedy; and rule to rescind refused. Main v. Robertson, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 135.

Judgment Signed Irregularly.]—S. brought an action of ejectment against W. W. entered an appearance, but S. signed judgment December, 1870. Nothing more was heard of the case till October, 1872, when a writ was issued to sheriff to put plaintiff in possession of land. Shortly afterwards W. moved by summons to set aside judgment as irregularly signed. Held that, although the affidavit setting forth defendant's ignorance of judgment being signed was not very clear, judgment should be set aside as having been signed irregularly. Slack v. Winder, 3 A.J.R., 106.

Judgment Removed from County Court—"County Court Statute" (No. 345,) Secs. 56, 93.]—Where a judgment in the County Court was signed by default under Sec. 56, and the judgment was removed into the Supreme Court under Sec. 93, and the County Court judge set aside the judgment in the County Court as irregular, the Supreme Court set aside the judgment as of course. Allison v. McCandlish, 3 A.J.R., 117.

Setting Aside Judgment Signed after Sequestration—Applying within Reasonable Time.]—See Proudfoot v. Mackenzie, ante column 656.

Setting Aside—Forged Guarantee—Costs.]—Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers), set aside a judgment regularly entered upon a guarantee, where the defence was that the guarantee was forged, and the reason why the action was not defended was the defendant's mistaken idea that he had not been served with the writ of summons; and ordered that the defendant might appear and defend on payment of the costs of action and execution, and of the application to set aside the judgment. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. M'Leod, 6 A.L.T., 114.

A second motion cannot be made upon the same materials, i.e., affidavits, unless where the first failed merely for a defect in the jurat or title. In re Heron, 5 A.J.R., 161.

Summons in Chambers.]—A summons in Chambers must show on whose behalf it is issued. In re "Transfer of Land Statute" and the caveat of Fearnley, 2 A.L.T., 32.

Emergency Clause—Reference to Court.]—An application to a judge under the emergency clause should be by summons according to the ordinary chamber practice for an order. But if the judge thinks the gravity of the matter exceeds its urgency, he may refer it to the Court. When a matter is referred to the Court by a judge, the question is not open for the production of fresh evidence. Regina v. Mairs, ex parte Vansuylen, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 43; 2 A.L.T., 126.

Order of Single Judge Sitting as Full Court—Effect of.]—An order of a single judge sitting in the Matrimonial and Divorce jurisdiction, although a proceeding on summons, has the effect of a rule of Court, just as an order of a single judge sitting in the equity jurisdiction has such effect; and the fact that the proceeding is by summons does not import into a proceeding before a single judge sitting as the Full Court the same incidents that attend proceedings by summons before a single judge sitting in Chambers to dispose of Chamber business; and the order so made of a judge so sitting in the Matrimonial and Divorce jurisdiction may itself be a foundation for a writ of fi. fa. Hall v. Hall, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 333.

Date—Heading.]—A rule is properly dated as of the day when it is granted, and not as of the day when it is drawn up. A rule for payment of costs made payable by a rule discharging a rule nisi to quash an order of justices need not be entitled in a cause. Ex parte Kane, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 44.

Order Nisi—When Issued.]—Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers)—An order nisi must be issued within a reasonable time. Graham v. Moylan, 6 A.L.T., 115.

Reasonable Time—What is.]—Where an order nisi for a new trial was granted by the Full Court on behalf of the plaintiff on Friday, 7th November, on the grounds of misdirection, and the plaintiff's solicitor was not aware till Saturday that the rule had been granted, and the following Monday was a public holiday, and the solicitor drafted the rule to submit to counsel at his request, but was unable to see him till the Wednesday following, and attended the Prothonotary on Wednesday morning for the purpose of issuing the rule nisi, and found that judgment had been entered up on behalf of the defendant, the judge holding that since the defendant knew that the order was obtained, he ought to have communicated with the plaintiff before signing judgment, was of opinion that the order nisi was issued within a reasonable time. Ibid.

Returnable on a Holiday.]—An ordinary rule or order is not bad because it is made returnable on a day in term which is a holiday. Regina v. Broderick, ex parte McMillan, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 158.

Rule for Attachment Returnable on a Holiday is Bad.]—See In re Dryden and Merry v. The Queen, ante column 67.

Evasion of Service of Rule Nisi—Motion for Rule Absolute in First Instance.]—Punch v. Punch, ante column 66.

Rule Nisi to Solicitor to Answer Charges against Him.]—A rule nisi to a solicitor calling on him to answer certain statements in an affidavit made by his client may be made returnable on the last day of term. Re Barrett, ex parte Williams, 4 A.L.T., 89.

Enlarging Rule.]—A copy of an order nisi served on plaintiff was headed "In the County Court," and made returnable in the Supreme Court. Held that such error was not a ground for discharging it; the rule might be enlarged in order to serve a correct copy, or the plaintiff might waive his objection on getting his costs. Haylock v. Shannon, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 332.

Rule nisi—Amendment.]—Amendment of a rule nisi to raise a purely technical objection will not be allowed, unless under special circumstances, and where substantial justice would require it. Bank of Australasia v. Pollard, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 66; 3 A.L.T., 103; sub nom. Bank of Australasia v. Follard.

Rule made Absolute pending Order staying Proceedings—Setting aside—Proceedings under.] If a rule be made absolute pending a judge's order staying proceedings in the cause, it can only be set aside by another rule; but the Court set aside a fi. fa. issued under such rule absolute, on a summons to set aside the rule and proceedings thereunder, with costs, if the applicant undertook not to bring an action on the fi. fa.—otherwise without costs. Re Phelps, ex parte Morris, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 417.

Setting aside Order made in Vacation—Filing.]—A party who has obtained an order from a judge in vacation under Sec. 19 of the Act 15 Vict. No. 19, ought, on receiving notice of an application to set such order aside, to file such order. Ex parte Nyberg, in re Nicholson, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 292, 294.

Payment Out of Court—Rule to Restrain Order for—Where Returnable.]—A rule nisi to set aside an order of a judge in Chambers to pay money out of Court may be made returnable either in Chambers or in Court. Bell v. Stewart, 1 A.J.R., 92.

For Rules Nisi for Prohibition and Quashing Orders or Convictions of Justices.]—See cases ante columns 772, et seq.

(6) Service of Proceedings and Process.

Service out of the Jurisdiction—Foreigner—"Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 90.]—Under the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 90, a writ of summons may be served on a foreigner resident out of the jurisdiction, but within fifty miles of the borders of Victoria. Banks v. Orrell, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 219.

Writ Served on Wrong Person—Defendant's Delay in Applying to Set it Aside.]—In February a writ of summons upon a bill of exchange was served upon the wrong person. In March it was handed to the real defendant, who took no notice of it until execution was issued in May or June. In June defendant moved to set aside writ and subsequent proceedings. Held that he was barred by his delay. Henry v. Smith, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 188; 1 A.L.T., 14.

Recovery of Judgment or Verdict.]—Under 18 Vict. No. 42, Sec. 14, the process for the recovery of the amount of any judgment or verdict must be served, and not the judgment or verdict. Rostron v. Hasker, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 44.

Personal Service—Statute Requiring Service.]—Where a statute requires service upon an individual, and does not provide any special mode of service—as by delivery at a specified place or otherwise—then no service other than personal service is sufficient, and that must be proved; and personal service is constituted by service upon the individual himself into his own hand, or so that he is enabled to obtain possession of it, or if it be sufficiently shown that the notice or other document has come into his hands. Regina v. Heron, ex parte Mulder, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 314, 316, 317; 6 A.L.T., 143.

When Permissible.]—The Court has no power to stay a second action brought on a judgment obtained in a former action. Plevins v. St. Kilda and Brighton Railway Coy., 2 W. & W. (L.,) 17.

A plaintiff in a County Court action was nonsuited, he then commenced an action in the Supreme Court on the same cause of action, and proceedings were stayed until he paid costs in the County Court. Plaintiff then commenced a third action of a similar nature in the Supreme Court, and proceedings in that were stayed. On rule nisi to set aside the last order staying proceedings, Held that the action was rightly stayed; that plaintiff must first pay the costs of the first action in the Supreme Court. Bowman v. Whelan, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 40.

Tender of Debt — Costs of Attorney.] — Per Williams, J. (in Chambers): — Where, after action commenced, the defendant tenders the amount of the debt to the plaintiff, he will not be allowed a stay of proceedings unless he also, at the same time, tender to the plaintiff's attorney a sum of money, as payment of his costs; and the fact that the plaintiff's attorney demands an exorbitant sum as payment for his costs does not exonerate the defendant from this duty. Smith v. Scott, 6 A.L.T., 46.

Commission to Take Evidence Abroad — Condition—Stay of another Action Pending between the Parties.]—In an action against a bank an order was made in Chambers allowing a commission to examine witnesses on behalf of the defendant to be issued to England, but on the condition that an action brought by the bank against the plaintiffs should be stayed. The action by the bank against the plaintiffs was on a bill of exchange, and leave to defend had been refused in this action, except on conditions, which were not complied with. The action against the bank was for the alleged breach of an agreement by the bank not to issue execution on certain judgments obtained against one of the plaintiffs, on the condition that the joint bill of that and the other plaintiffs should be given as security for the amount of the judgment debts. The bank had issued execution on the judgments before the bill became due, and when it became due and was dishonoured, commenced proceedings against the joint acceptors. The Court varied the order by allowing the bank to sign judgment in the action on the bill, but to stay execution till after the hearing of the action against it on the agreement. Kirby v. Bank of Australasia, 4 A.L.T., 13.

Under Sec. 266 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865"—Costs of Arbitration.]—See Farrell v. Imperial Fire Insurance Coy., ante column 49.

Setting aside Declaration—Separation of Writ—Waiver.]—If a declaration be delivered more than twelve months after the writ of summons was returnable, the action is dead, and the declaration may be set aside in default of any precedent process to support it. And Semble that if this were merely an irregularity, and not a nullity, the defendant would not have waived his right to set aside the declaration by not objecting to it at the time of delivery and retaining it three days before he took out a summons to set it aside. De Castella v. De Castella, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 468.

Summons to Set aside a Writ of Fi. Fa. on Ground of Irregularity—"Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 421.]—A summons to set aside a writ of fi. fa. on the ground that more than six years had elapsed from the date of recovering judgment to that of issuing the writ, stated that the writ "was irregularly issued on a judgment over six years old." Held that the grounds were sufficiently set out under Sec. 421 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," and that at all events it was merely a matter for costs. Platts v. Wright, 1 A.L.T., 131.

Setting aside Rule made Absolute Pending Order Staying Proceedings—Fi. Fa.]—See re Phelps, ex parte Morris, ante column 1211.

Setting aside Order made in Vacation.]—See ex parte Nyberg, in re Nicholson, ante column 1211.

Writ Served on Wrong Person—Defendant Moving to Set aside Bound by Delay.]—See Henry v. Smith, ante columns 1211, 1212.

Duty of Court—Case for Jury.]—On a special case stated for the opinion of the Court on a point of law, the Court is not bound to decide for the plaintiff if, in the case, anything appears which ought to be left to a jury. Munro v. Shire of St. Arnaud, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 217.

Amendment — After Judgment.]—The Court granted a rule nisi to amend a special case after judgment thereon. Cohen v. Oriental Banking Corporation, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 278, 289.

What Sufficient.]—Notice of trial eighteen days before the civil business is sufficient notice in a cause in a Circuit Court. Hunt v. Ford, 1 W. & W. (L.) 115.

Act No. 274, Sec. 138.]—Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers).—Notice of trial under Sec. 138 must be reckoned exclusive of the first day and inclusive of the last. Griffiths v. Holmes, 2 A.L.T., 146.

New Notice of Trial.]—A new notice of trial is necessary where a rule of Court has been made as that it is supposed to be in invitum, but it is not necessary where both parties consent to a postponement. Where a cause was made a remanet from one sittings to another, and then postponed by order of a Judge in Chambers on consent to another sittings, the Court granted upon an affidavit as to merits, a new trial upon terms as to costs. Whitelock v. Hancock, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 202.

Notice of Trial before Issue Joined—New Trial—Costs.]—A plaintiff's attorney served a notice of trial upon a defendant before issue was joined upon a replication, and proceeded to a hearing, and obtained a verdict, the defendant not appearing. On rule nisi to set aside notice of trial and subsequent proceedings, Held that defendant was entitled to have a new trial, but (dissentiente Higinbotham, J.) that if he chose to take a new trial under the circumstances, the costs of the first trial must abide the event of the second. Palmer v. Wilson, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 101.

Venue—Plaintiff's Right to Choose.]—Except in a local action, the plaintiff has a right to lay the venue where he pleases, unless there is a preponderance of inconvenience occasioned to the defendant by his choice. Simson v. Guthrie, 4 A.J.R., 76.

Change of Venue.]—A defendant can change the venue on the common affidavit if he has obtained time to plead, not if he has been put on terms to plead issuably. Lane v. Victoria Q.M. Coy., 1 A.J.R., 118.

Change of Venue—Preponderance of Convenience as to Trial.]—W., a trainer of racehorses at Geelong, sued S. for a libel published in his paper at Melbourne, to the effect that W. ran his horses unfairly in order to suit his betting transactions. W. laid the venue at Geelong where he resided and had his stables, and where most of his witnesses were employed. S. pleaded a justification, the particulars of which specified many races, nearly all of which were run in Melbourne, and applied for a change of venue to Melbourne on the ground, which he proved, that he would have to call a great many witnesses who were to be found only in and around Melbourne. Held that the principle on which such applications are dealt with is that of the preponderance of convenience for the purposes of the trial, and that, as W. would launch his case by simply proving publication of the libel, while the burden lay on S. to prove his plea of justification, which would require a multitude of witnesses residing in and about Melbourne, W.'s right to choose the venue must give way. Wilson v. Syme, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 200; 2 A.L.T., 21.

Change of Venue—After Trial.]—Where after a trial in which the jury has disagreed it is sought to change the venue the Court will not do so except on very strong grounds. Paterson v. Luke, 6 A.L.T., 140.

(c) Verdict.

Leave to Set Aside—Leave Reserved for Court to Draw Inferences of Fact.]—The Court has, under a reservation of leave for one of the parties to enter a verdict, with leave reserved for the Court to draw inferences of fact, the power to draw inferences of fact, with the view of avoiding a new trial, in the event of their being of opinion that the jury has arrived at a wrong conclusion; but, unless the jury have drawn a wrong inference the Court will not draw another, merely because they would themselves have given a different verdict. Hasker v. Moorhead v. Blackwood v. McMullen, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 160, 168.

Setting Aside.]—A verdict will be set aside on the ground that it was given on a trial where the order for a trial before a jury was drawn up ex parte, no summons having been served upon the defendant to bring him before the judge who made the order, and the trial which took place on such order being consequently irregular. Plummer v. Fletcher, 4 A.J.R., 36.

Amount Recovered in Excess of Sum Claimed in Particulars of Demand.]—Where a plaintiff had recovered more than was stated in his particulars of demand, which were not annexed to the record, or proved to have been delivered by his attorney, he was held not bound by such particulars, and was allowed to retain the sum recovered. Simson v. Mitchell, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 114.

Delivery of Record — Ne Recipiatur.] — Per Stawell, C.J. (in Chambers):—A record may be delivered to the Prothonotary for trial at a sittings, unless a ne recipiatur has been entered. Rosenthal v. Union Steamship Company of New Zealand, 1 A.L.T., 131.

Withdrawing Record—Counsel without Brief—Nonsuit.]—A case put at the bottom of the list was unexpectedly called on; counsel for the plaintiff stated that he had no brief, and that plaintiff was not present, and applied to withdraw the record. Held that counsel without a brief could not withdraw the record, and the plaintiff being nonsuited, the Court set aside the nonsuit on terms of the attorney himself paying the costs of the rule and of the day; Held also that plaintiff's attorney might have withdrawn the record. Bishop v. Martin, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 33.

Withdrawing Record — Costs — Setting Aside Rule for Defendant's Costs.] — Where several actions by different plaintiffs against the same defendants for the same cause of action are set down for trial at the same sittings, and one of such actions has been already tried, and a rule obtained for a new trial, an apparent conflict between the charge of the judge on the new trial of the first case, and the opinion expressed by the Court in making absolute the rule for the new trial, is a sufficient excuse for the withdrawal of the record by the plaintiffs in the subsequent actions, and the defendants in such actions will not be entitled to their costs of the day. Searle v. Hackett, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 442; 2 A.L.T., 88.

Per Stephen, J. :—An application to set aside a rule as of course obtained by the defendants in such actions ought to be made to the judge who was to try the case. Ibid.

Per Higinbotham, J. :—There is no impropriety in making the application to another judge. Ibid.

Amendment of Record where Verdict Incorrectly Stated.]—A Judge in Chambers has power to amend the record of the verdict by adding "s" to the word defendant where the record incorrectly stated the verdict to be entered for "defendant" instead of for "defendants." Slack v. Winder, 5 A.J.R., 19.

Adding to Record—Power of Judge.]—A judge has power to add to the record at the trial a plea of leave and license after the case is closed; and where this added plea makes no difference one way or the other in affecting the verdict of the jury, it does not form a ground for a new trial. Ireland v. Chapman, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 242.

Practice where English Courts do not Agree—Queen's Bench.]—Where the Superior Common Law Courts at Westminster differ in their practice, the Supreme Court in its common law jurisdiction will follow the practice of the Queen's Bench on all occasions. M'Mullen v. Phillips, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 15.

Right to Begin—New Trial.]—H. and another sued on a policy of life assurance for the amount of the policy and bonuses not ascertained and for interest. Defendant pleaded that the company had bought the policy, and offered at the trial to admit the interest and bonuses. At the trial the judge intimated that the defendant had the right to begin, but the plaintiffs disregarded this opinion and began. On rule nisi for a new trial, Held that the defendant had the right to begin since the damages were liquidated, and the plaintiff was bound to accept the admission as to the interest and bonuses; and that the plaintiffs, having begun, did so at their own risk, and rule for a new trial made absolute. Hardy v. Anderson, 2 V.R. (L.,) 41; 2 A.J.R., 36.

Address of Counsel where Defendant has not Pleaded to the Declaration—Common Law Procedure Statute (No. 274,) Sec. 433.]—If a defendant do not plead to the declaration, his counsel, though he may call evidence, cannot sum it up in a second address to the jury unless the plaintiff consents. Elms v. Melbourne and Hobson's Bay Ry. Coy., 1 A.J.R., 112.

Addresses of Counsel—Assessment of Damages—Common Law Procedure Statute (No. 274,) Sec. 433.]—Sec. 433 of the Statute, which gives the right of summing up the evidence, or of reply "upon the trial of any cause," does not include a mere "assessment of damages," on which the old practice applies. Rule nisi for a new assessment, on the ground that plaintiff's counsel was not allowed the right of reply, discharged. England v. Melbourne and Hobson's Bay U. Ry. Coy., 3 V.R. (L.,) 9; 3 A.J.R., 28.

Counsel Withdrawing.]—During the trial of an action for malicious prosecution, plaintiff's counsel threw up his brief, and defendant's counsel claimed a verdict for defendant, which was entered, plaintiff and his solicitor being present at the time and saying nothing. Plaintiff obtained a rule nisi for a new trial. Held that the verdict was irregular, and must be set aside, and the Court being of opinion that the evidence showed reasonable and probable cause of belief, ordered a nonsuit to be entered, leave having been reserved at close of plaintiff's case to move for a nonsuit. Hall v. Blackett, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 216.

"Common Law Procedure Statute No. 274, Sec. 88—Expiration of Writ—Renewal.]—There is no provision in Sec. 88 for the renewal of a writ after its expiration, and a judge has after such expiration no power to order its renewal. Hepburn v. Dawbin, 6 A.L.T., 129.

Declaration on Agreement.]—If an agreement be declared on, the plaintiff must either produce the agreement or give satisfactory evidence as to its non-production. Wilson v. Holmes, 1 V.R. (L.,) 53; 1 A.J.R., 117.

Evidence Admissible under Plea of "Not Guilty."]—A declaration originally in case, and to which "Not Guilty" only was pleaded, was allowed to be amended by striking out the averments of negligence, thus becoming a declaration in trespass. No amendment was, however, made, and the defendants made no application to add a plea of "not possessed" (of the engine which caused the damage.) Held that the defendants could not be allowed to give evidence under the plea of "not guilty," which would have been admissible under the plea of "not possessed." Tobin v. Mayor, &c., of Melbourne, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 41; 3 A.L.T., 78, 100.

Rebutting Case — When Plaintiff may Make Out—Unexpected Defence.]—If the defendant raises an unexpected defence the plaintiff has a right to make out a rebutting case; but, in order to do so, the witnesses to prove it should be ready, and the evidence should be tendered, or an adjournment should be asked for in order to enable the witnesses to be present, otherwise the plaintiff will lose his right. Bishop v. Stone, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 98; 1 A.L.T., 168.

Issues.]—An issue at law was taken by demurrer on some pleadings, and an issue of fact on others. Per Stawell, C.J. (in Chambers.)—It is a matter of discretion resting with the plaintiff whether he will proceed first with the demurrer or issues of fact. Daily Telegraph Coy. v. Berry, 1 A.L.T., 69.

When Immaterial Issue Raised.]—In a contract for the sale of ground comprised in an application for a mining lease, readiness and willingness on the part of the vendor to assign or convey not being a condition precedent to his right to recover the purchase-money, an allegation to that effect, if traversed, raises an immaterial issue. Cane v. Sinclair, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 60; 5 A.L.T., 186.

(C) Pleading at Law Before Judicature Act.

Embarrassing, not Bad.]—A declaration alleged that plaintiff delivered to a carrier (defendant,) as such carrier, certain goods to be carried by defendant from M. to S., and to be delivered "for" one Ah Chong, of S., for reward by plaintiff. Held, on demurrer, that, though the declaration, as framed, might be embarrassing with respect to the meaning of the word "for;" yet as it was quite consistent with the declaration that the goods were intended for delivery to Ah Chong, not on his behalf, but on behalf of the plaintiff, it could not be held bad. Ping Kong v. Robertson, 1 V.R. (L.,) 141; 1 A.J.R., 124.

Inconsistent with Evidence—Amendment—Costs.]—A declaration in an action for damages for injury caused by neglect, stated that the injury was caused by the negligence of a servant, W., in defendant's employ. The jury found that W. was not in defendant's employ, and that the injury was caused by the negligence of one B., in defendant's employ. Held that the declaration should be amended; that the verdict should stand; but that plaintiff should pay the costs of the rule to enter a verdict for the defendant, and the costs of the witnesses called by defendant to prove that W. was not his servant, and that plaintiff should not be allowed the costs of the witnesses called by him to prove that W. was in defendant's service. Atkinson v. Dehnert, 6 A.L.T., 10.

Counts.]—Tort and contract cannot be joined in one count of a declaration. Young v. Ballarat Water Commissioners, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 306, 314, 317.

In a declaration a count setting out a contract, and averring generally performance of all conditions precedent, except in so far as the defendants waived the performance of such conditions, and alleging a breach of the contract, contained a subsequent breach sounding in tort in that the defendants had prevented the plaintiff from fulfilling certain of the conditions precedent. Held, on general demurrer, that the count in tort was bad, and that it ought to have been struck out on summons. Ibid.

Counts—Breaches.]—Where several breaches are laid in one count, every breach must be a legitimate conclusion from the whole of the statements contained in the count, or in the declaration, if there be only one count. Ibid, p. 314.

Action on Bond—Setting out Breach—"Under the Declaration."]—Day v. Union Gold Mining Company, ante column 118.

Per Stawell, C. J. (in Chambers)—The two counts of trover and detinue cannot stand together in a declaration unless the Judge in Chambers sees peculiar circumstances justifying such a combination. Dougharty v. Dougharty, 2 A.L.T., 147.

Form and Construction of Declarations in Actions of Libel.—See ante columns 364, 365.

Declaration on Policy of Insurance—Negativing Exceptions.]—Osborne v. Southern Insurance Company, ante column 732.

Inference of Fact—No Power of Court to Draw.]—A declaration set out a lease containing a covenant as to sale by assignees to lessor of certain fixtures and movables, and set out facts not expressly averring a contract, but facts from which it might be inferred. Held that the Court had not, on demurrer, power to draw inferences of fact, but that the jury might on trial. Malmsbury Confluence Gold Mining Company v. Tucker, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 213.

On Covenant—Inference—Averment of General Performance — Special Demurrer.] — Where a declaration does not set out a covenant verbatim, but sets out the legal effect of it, without, however, setting out a condition which the Court would infer if the covenant were set out verbatim, and there is an averment of general performance on the part of the plaintiff, the averment will be held, on demurrer, to cover the implied condition, it being a defect of form, not of substance: but semble that on special demurrer it would have been held bad, and the plaintiff would have had to amend, on summons by the defendant, by inserting a statement of the implied condition, or, if the plaintiff refused to amend, the declaration would have been struck out. Kreitmayer v. Kennedy, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 215.

General Averment of Performance of Conditions Precedent with a Negative Clause—Exceptions Not Negatived in one of the Breaches.]—A declaration upon a contract set out a general averment of all conditions precedent, and a negative averment that nothing happened or was done to prevent the plaintiff from maintaining the action. Held that this was not sufficient, that the breaches should negative the exceptions contained in certain conditions of the contract; that where an express exception having reference to the subject of the breach is introduced into the obligatory clause of an instrument upon which the defendant is charged, such exception should be negatived in the averment of the breach, otherwise the breach is bad on demurrer. Hobart v. Victorian Woollen Company, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 30; 2 A.L.T., 120.

Plea—To Action for Money Received—No. 265, Sec. 51—Gaming and Wagering.]—A plea, under the "Police Offences Statute 1865," Sec. 51, to an action for money had and received that the contract was by way of gaming or wagering, must, to render it good, negative every hypothesis which, consistently with the pleadings, would tend to show that the contract was valid. Miller v. Harris, 1 V.R. (L.,) 91; 1 A.J.R., 83.

Plea of Illegality.]—A plea of the illegality of a contract must negative every hypothesis under which the contract could be legal. Clarke v. Pitcher, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 128; 5 A.L.T., 17.

Plea of "Never Indebted"—Does not Put in Issue the Incorporation of a Company.]—Bank of New South Wales v. Moyston Grand Junction Company, ante column 164.

Husband Suing in Trespass for Surgical Operation on Wife—Plea Bad for not Alleging that Operation was Necessary for Preserving Wife's Health or Life.]—Tate v. Fisher, ante column 535.

Pleading Act of Parliament—Waiver.]—A party in an action cannot waive one part of a section of an Act of Parliament, and rely on the other part, though the part waived would be advantageous to him. O'Shea v. D'Arcy, 1 A.L.T., 170.

Plea of Justification in Action of Libel.]—See cases ante columns 366, 367.

Action of Trespass—What Plea of Impounding must Specify.]—Jones v. Campion, Sanderson v. Fotheringham, ante column 1155.

Plea of Fraud in Action on Contract.]—M'Millan v. Sampson, ante column 463.

When Invalid—Not Traversing.]—In an action on a policy of marine assurance over the hull and furniture of a ship, the declaration averred a custom concerning the carriage of sheep for hire by ships from Newcastle, New South Wales, to New Zealand, to load on the deck a reasonable number of the sheep so carried; and that a reasonable number were so loaded on the deck of the ship in question, and further averred that the sheep so loaded on the deck were necessarily jettisoned for the safety of the ship from the peril of the seas, and that the plaintiff had to and did pay a large sum for general average. The fourth plea set up another and different custom—when sheep were loaded on deck, not to pay general average for any of them jettisoned; and alleged that by reason of this custom plaintiff had not become liable for general average. Held, on demurrer, that the plea was bad for not traversing the policy or the custom set up by the declaration. Lindsay v. Hopkins, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 5.

And for instance of a bad plea to a declaration on a policy, see Clough v. Hopkins, ante column 732.

Defence of Forfeiture for Felony—How Pleaded.]—A plea to an action of trover in the Supreme Court, raising the defence that the defendant had committed a felony, and had been tried for it before an inferior Court, and that his goods had been forfeited, need not aver that the offence committed was within the jurisdiction of the lower Court; and if such plea do not expressly state that the plaintiff was convicted, but contains averments which shew that a conviction must have occurred, it is not a ground for general demurrer, but merely for applying to have the plea amended or struck out. McCrae v. Isaacs, 1 V.R. (L.,) 27; 1 A.J.R., 36.

Plea of Statute of Limitations by a Banker.]—See O'Ferrall v. Bank of Australasia, ante column 83.

Action on Bond.]—To a declaration on a bond for breach of the conditions contained in it, the defendant pleaded that, since action brought, the bond had been rectified under a Decree in Equity, and his subsequent compliance with the condition of the bond so rectified. On demurrer, Held no answer to the action, since the breach was before action brought. Barber v. Cobb, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 18.

Condition Precedent—Non-Performance of—When Defendant Allowed to Plead.]—Withers v. Greenwood, ante columns 200, 201.

A plea of "leave and licence" is no answer to an action on contract. Robertson v. English, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 238.

Tender.]—A plea of tender is only applicable to cases where the party pleading it has not been guilty of any breach of his contract. M'Ewan v. Dynon, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 271.

Plea of tender does not bar subsequent plea of want of jurisdiction. In re The Ferret, 8 V.L.R. (A.,) 1, 6, post under SHIPPING—Practice and Procedure in Vice Admiralty Court.

Plea of Acquiescence—In Action for a Nuisance.]—Cooper v. Dangerfield, ante column 1102.

Mutual Credit and Set Off.]—C., the official assignee of J., sued K. to recover money had and received to the use of C., and found due on accounts stated between C. and K. K. pleaded (1) never indebted; (2) mutual credits between J. and K. which showed before J.'s sequestration a balance in K.'s favour, and offered to allow C. to set off against the moneys owing them by J. the money they owed to J. Held on demurrer that as the money was in fact received by K., before sequestration, the plea (No. 2) might be deemed an argumentative form of the traverse "never indebted" which on general demurrer would be a good plea. Courtney v. King, 6 W. W.& A'B. (L.,) 36.

Pleading Set Off to Action on Bill of Exchange.]—Nisbet v. Cox, ante column 99.

What Amounts to Plea of Paymsnt in Action on Bill.]—Saunders v. Matthews, ante column 101.

Severing—When Proper.]—To a count in a declaration that defendant did not, would not, and could not grant to the plaintiff a lease, the defendant pleaded as to so much as alleged that he did not and would not grant to the plaintiff the said lease, that plaintiff never tendered the lease for execution. On objection that the plea, being pleaded only to part, was bad because it admitted part not pleaded to, Held that the plea dealt with the breach in the only way possible; that the breach was properly severed, and one plea properly pleaded to the willingness which implies ability, and the other to the ability; and plea upheld. Pinn v. Barbour, 1 V.R. (L.,) 136; 1 A.J.R., 127.

Stating Matsrial and Immaterial Facts.]—Where a plea states two facts, one material to the defence, and one immaterial, the defendant need not prove the whole of the plea; it is sufficient if he prove that part of it which constitutes a good defence. Main v. Robertson, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 25.

In an action of trespass for seizing sheep, the defendant pleaded that the sheep were trespassing upon his land, and that he took them to the nearest accessible pound, and there impounded them in accordance with the "Pounds Act 1874." The plea also alleged that the sheep had been found trespassing on the same land within twelve months previously. Held that the defendant need not prove the allegation as to the previous trespass, since the common law right to impound remained, and in order to show that defendant had no right to impound, the plaintiff would have to show that the case came within the terms and conditions by which such common law right has done away with. Ibid.

Plea—"Not Guilty"—Action for Negligence.]—A declaration averred that defendants were possessed of a certain locomotive, which was being driven along a highway under the management of the defendants, and that the defendants had so unskilfully and negligently managed the said locomotive, that sparks issued from the locomotive, and injured the plaintiff by burning her eyes. The defendants pleaded "Not guilty." Held that such plea did not amount to a denial of the ownership of the locomotive by the defendants, so as to put it in issue. Tobin v. Mayor, &c., of Melbourne, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 488; 3 A.L.T., 78.

General Issue—What Admitted by.]—In an action for trespass for injuries occasioned to the plaintiff on a highway, by an engine containing fire, the general issue admits the truth of an averment that the defendants had an engine there at the time alleged, and the defendants will not be allowed to produce evidence to disprove such averment. Tobin v. Mayor, &c., of Melbourne, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 41; 3 A.L.T., 100.

Avoiding Circuity of Action.]—Declaration on a policy of life insurance. Equitable plea that there had been an agreement between the insured and the insurance company that the insured should sell and the company should buy the policy. Held a good plea, as avoiding circuity of action. Hardy v. Anderson, 1 V.R. (L.,) 193; 1 A.J.R., 159.

Equitable.—Where a replification is pleaded on equitable grounds, and cannot be sustained as an equitable defence, owing to the absence of necessary parties in a suit which should be brought to sustain the equity, the Court will not reject the words, "on equitable grounds," where such plea is put forward substantially, as well as in terms as a replication in equity. Goldsborough v. McCulloch, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 113, 123.

Equitable Plea—"Stat. of Limitations."] — A pleading on equitable grounds must state facts showing that a Court of Equity would give the relief which the party pleading claims. Where, therefore, to a plea of the "Stat. of Limitations," plaintiff put in a replication that he brought his action within six years after he had notice of a certain fraud, on account of which he sought to impeach a contract, Held that that fact alone would not entitle him to an injunction in Equity. Urquhart v. M'Pherson, 3 V L.R. (L.,) 65, 76.

Plea in Action on Guarantee—Plea of Principal Creditor not Proving an Insolvency of Guaranteed Debtor—Not a Good Plea.]—National Bank v. Plummer, post under PRINCIPAL AND SURETY—Discharge of surety.

Action on Bill of Exchange—Equitable Plea that Matters in Dispute in Agreement under which Bill was given had been Referred to Arbitration and Award made in favour of Defendant.]—See Murphy v. Glass, ante column 100. And see other cases, ante column 100.

Action for a Nuisance—Plea of Acquiescence when not good on Equitable Grounds.] — Cooper v. Dangerfield, ante column 1102.

Action of Trespass—Pleading Equitable Title in Defendant, but Plea alleging no Notice thereof to Plaintiff.]—Hunter v. Hodgson, 3 A.J.R., 31, post under TRESPASS—To Land, &c.

(c) Plea puis darrein continuance.

Adding after Verdict.]—An uncertificated insolvent sued for work done, and one of the pleas (which defendant obtained leave to add, and which was added without altering the date of the pleas) was to the effect that the assignee had served on the defendant notice of his claim after the date of the other pleas, but not in the form of a plea puis darrein continuance. Held that the Court, after verdict, would not allow a plea puis darrein continuance to be added. Nott v. Robertson, 9 V.L.R (L.,) 163; 5 A.L.T., 32.

When Demurrable.]—P., by written agreement, "let and rented unto" W. an hotel, calling it "my house" throughout the agreement, and signing simply in his own name, and not as agent for anyone. P. became insolvent, and his assignee sued W. for a balance of rent. W. pleaded that P. made the agreement as agent for B., and not otherwise, and that after the making of the agreement, and both before and after the rent was due, and before suit, B. gave W. notice not to pay the rent to P. The replication to the pleas simply set out the agreement. W. demurred for that the replication neither traversed nor confessed, and avoided the matter pleaded. Held that the replication was bad, and the pleas good. Jacomb v. Wrigley, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 137.

Husband Suing for Trespass for Surgical Operation on Wife—Replication Bad for Omitting to State that Plaintiff did not Sue for Grievances Justified in Pleas.]—Tate v. Fisher, ante column 535.

How Easement Alleged in Pleadings—Replication Must Aver its Essentials, e.g. its Termini.]—Butcher v. Smith, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 223. Post under TRESPASS—To land, &c.

Departure.]—A replication which excuses the not doing what a plaintiff ought to have done, by stating that the declaration by implication alleges that it has been done, is a departure. Campbell v. Bent, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 337.

Action on Bond—Replication Should Assign Breaches.]—Miller v. Tripp, ante column 118.

Departure—Declaration for Breach of Contract—Plea of Waiver—Replication Setting up False Representations by Which the Waiver was Obtained.]—O'Shanassy v. Littlewood, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 117, post under VENDOR AND PURCHASER—THE CONTRACT—Conditions of Sale, Inquiries, &c.

Departure.]—To a count in trespass, defendant pleaded that the subject matter of the trespass was not the plaintiff's as alleged; plaintiff, in his replication, alleged that the plaintiff was proprietor of the land under the "Transfer of Land Stat.," and was induced by the fraud of the defendant to transfer to the defendant. Held that the replication was a departure, and could not be sustained. Frawley v. Ewing, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 197; 5 A.L.T., 66.

Demurrer—Objection for Non-delivery of Points for Argument.]—The parties are not at liberty, on argument of a demurrer, to take the objection that points for argument have not been delivered under Sec. 74 of "The Common Law Procedure Stat. 1865," (No. 274.) Bateman v. Connell, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 203.

General Demurrer — When Sustainable.] — A declaration alleged that R. and S. G. were drawers of a bill accepted by C.; that they endorsed the bill to one S. without recourse; that S. endorsed the bill to R. and S. G., and it was dishonoured, &c. S. put in a general demurrer that the declaration did not disclose any liability on the part of S., and it was not shown that he was the "S." who endorsed the bill. Held that the objection was not one for general demurrer; but that S. should have applied in Chambers to have the declaration amended. Gibbs v. Shappard, 2 A.J.R., 108.

Where General Demurrer will not lie.]—See M'Cras v. Isaacs, 1 V.R. (L.,) 27; 1 A.J.R., 36, ante column 1221.

No Power of Court to Draw Inferences of Fact.]—Malmsbury Confluence Gold Mining Company v Tucker, ante column 1219.

Writ of Summons and Declaration—Mistake in Plaintiff's Name.]—Plaintiff was named Jabes in original writ of summons and in the declaration, but James in the copy writ served on defendant. Defendant moved to set aside declaration as irregular. Motion dismissed, leave given to amend copy served. Plevins v. St. Kilda and Brighton Railway Company, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 17.

By Adding a Statement which is Not True—"Common Law Procedure Statute" No. 274, Sec. 377.]—W. sued as administrator of his son to recover damages from the company for the death of his son. Defendants pleaded inter alia that W. was not administrator. It appeared at the trial that administration was granted to W. subsequently to the date of the writ, and the plaintiff was non-suited. Rule nisi to set aside nonsuit and amend the declaration by inserting as the date of the writ a day subsequent to the grant of administration. Held that the Court could not amend the record so as to make it bear a false statement. Rule refused. Wilks v. Australian Trust Company, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 78.

Of Declaration—Declaration Inconsistent with Evidence.] — Atkinson v. Dehnert, ante column 1218.

"Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 377—Misjoinder of Defendant—Amendment.]—N. was misjoined in an action against executors. As a matter of fact N. had never acted. After verdict N. applied to have his name struck out on the ground of misjoinder. Held that though such amendment must be applied for at the time, and cannot be entertained after verdict, yet where the application is made at the trial and liberty is reserved by the Judge to the Court to make the amendment, the Court may do so after verdict. Harker v. M'George, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 104.

Of Plea — Ambiguity.] — In an action on a bond entered into by a surety that S., the Curator of Intestate Estates, "should duly pay, or account for, all monies which should come into his possession, or be under his control," the surety pleaded that S. did "duly pay or account for all moneys which came into his possession, and which were under his control," and a second plea identical with former, save that it omitted the second "which." Held, on demurrer, that the first plea was good, but that the second should be amended to prevent ambiguity. Regina v. Shovelbottom, Regina v. Sandars, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 188.

Amendment of Declaration in Action of Libel.]—Clegg v. Bryant, ante column 368.

Defective Plea — Who Must Correct.] — The tendency of the Court is to accept as valid a plea, which by reasonable construction can be held sufficient in substance, casting upon the opposing party the necessity of applying to a Judge in Chambers to correct the pleading if defective in form. Commercial Bank of Australia v. Grassy Gully Company, 2 V.R. (L.,) 23; 2 A.J.R., 18.

Of Plea.]—On an action to recover damages for injury to a horse and waggonette hired on Sunday, the plea stated that the contract was made on a Sunday, but the jury found that the contract was not made on Sunday. On a motion for a new trial or nonsuit, the Court refused to allow the plea to be amended, so as to state that the contract was to be, and was carried out, on Sunday. Garton v. Coy, 4 A.J.R., 115.

Application to Amend Plea, and for New Trial Thereupon.]—In an action for breach of a contract to let a public-house, the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff had represented himself as a respectable married man of good fame and character, which he was not, and the plaintiff recovered a verdict. On rule for leave to set aside verdict and amend plea, by adding that plaintiff was living in open adultery, Held that as it did not appear that what was represented or what defendant believed was the inducement for entering into the contract, and that the desired amendment would not, on the facts alleged, entitle the defendant to a verdict, the rule should be refused. Bartlett v. Hoskin, 5 A.J.R., 69.

Adding Plea—"Common Law Procedure Statute, 1865," Sec. 377.]—H. sued as mortgagee, or unpaid vendor of certain goods, upon a policy of fire insurance. At the trial H. set-up a claim for part as being still his own goods, and was given a verdict for the whole amount claimed. The defendants applied for leave to amend, by adding a plea to the effect that no claim had been made by H. as owner, within the time prescribed by the policy, and for a new trial, alleging that they had been taken by surprise by H's claiming as owner. Held that there could be no amendment since this was not a question in controversy between the parties at the time of the trial, within the meaning of Sec. 377 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute, 1865;" but that, since the defendants were taken by surprise, a new trial should be allowed. Haynes v. Royal Insurance Company, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 125.

A trial had taken place in which the jury had disagreed, and the case was set down for a new trial. Per Higinbotham J., (in Chambers,) Neither party is to be allowed in such a case to amend the pleadings without paying the costs of the first trial. Ferguson v. Thomson, 3 A.L.T., 15.

"Judicature Act 1883" (No. 761) Secs. 10, 19—Supreme Court Rules 1884, Order 63, Rule 2.]—By Sec. 19 of the Act provision is made for rules empowering a Judge to entertain all applications whatsoever, whether within his jurisdiction as a Judge of the Court or not, provided such application, was such as requires to be promptly heard, and therefore under Order 63, Rule 2, of the Supreme Court Rules, a single Judge may, under circumstances of urgency, hear an application which otherwise would be properly heard by the Full Court. In re Transfer of Land Stat., ex parte Peck, 10 V.L.R., (L.,) 328; 6 A.L.T., 162.

Substitution of Plaintiffs—Costs—Order 16, Rule 2.]—In an action brought by a bank to recover possession of land of which it was alleged that the defendant was caretaker, it was discovered, after the action was commenced, that the legal estate was vested in M., the bank's manager, as trustee for the bank. Application in chambers under Order 16, Rule 2, by the plaintiffs, to have M. substituted as plaintiff. Order granted by Higinbotham, J., on terms of plaintiff's paying costs occasioned. Bank of Victoria v. M'Lay, 6 A.L.T., 27.

Third Party Proceeding—Wrongdoer Seeking Contribution Against Another Wrongdoer—Order 14, Rule 48—Person Out of Jurisdiction.]—In a case where a defendant sought to bring a third party before the Court, in an action against the defendant, by the representative of a person who was killed by the breaking of a rope—the third party being the person who supplied the rope, Held, per Holroyd, J., that Order 16, Rule 48 only applies to cases of contribution or indemnity, under neither of which cases the present application fell; that the application should be dismissed on the ground of simplicity, i.e., it was simpler for the defendant, if defeated, to bring an action against the person who supplied the rope. Semble that third party proceedings do not apply to a person resident out of the jurisdiction. Round v. Victorian Stevedoring and General Contracting Company, 6 A.L.T., 88.

Specially Endorsed Writ on a Cheque—Order 3, Rule 6—Appendix C., Sec. 4.]—Per Higinbotham, J.—A cheque is only an accepted bill of exchange, and as the drawer of a bill is, under Appendix C., Sec. 4, entitled to notice of dishonour, so a maker of a cheque is entitled to notice of dishonour; that the endorsement should contain a statement that the cheque was presented and dishonoured in order to make it a specially endorsed writ. Nathan v. Turnbull, 6 A.L.T., 139.

Practice Under "Judicature Act"—Order 20, Rule 1 (a,) (c)—Order 26, Rule 1, Appendix C., Sec. 4—Act No. 204, Sec. 19, Schedule 2.]—An action was brought as on a specially endorsed writ on a bill of exchange—the writ being endorsed according to the form given in Schedule 2 to Act No. 204 ("Instruments and Securities Stat.") Held, per Williams, J., that the writ was a specially endorsed writ within the meaning of Appendix C., Sec. 4, and that defendant must deliver a statement of defence. Goodwin v. Heanchain, 6 A.L.T., 160.

"Judicature Act 1883," Sec. 59—Appendix A, Part I., No. 5—Writ to be Served Out of the Jurisdiction.]—Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers.) Where a party wishes to issue a writ of summons, to be served on a British subject out of the jurisdiction, the proper method is to apply to the Judge before the writ is issued, who will insert the number of days allowed for appearance in the original and the copy, and will initial both documents, the copy ought then to be lodged with the Prothonotary. Priestly v. Davis, 6 A.L.T., 18.

Signing Final Judgment—When Plaintiff Allowed—Order 14, Rules, 1, 3.]—Per Higinbotham, J, (in Chambers.) By the words of Order 14. the plaintiff is not to be allowed to sign judgment merely because the defendant's affidavit does not show a complete "defence," and the power given by Order 14, Rule 3, to order the defendant to attend and be examined on oath should only be exercised in exceptional cases. Wainman v. Hansen, 6 A.L.T., 24.

Where a plaintiff, the surviving partner of a building firm, claimed a balance of £163 6s. to be due to him from the defendant, who alleged a payment by him to the deceased partner of £200 beyond the amounts acknowledged by the plaintiff, and contended that he had over-paid the defendant's firm by £36 14s., Held that the defendant's affidavit contained sufficient allegations and facts to entitle him to defend the action, and summons under Order 14, Rule 1, for liberty to sign final judgment, or that the defendant might be ordered under Rule 3 to attend and be examined on oath, dismissed with costs. Ibid.

Application to Sign Final Judgment on Writ Specially Endorsed—Order 3, Rule 6—Order 14, Rule 1—Order 3, Rule 6 (F.)]—Order 3, Rule 6, (F.) only applies to cases where the relationship of landlord and tenant exists, and does not apply to a case where the owner of land seeks to recover possession from a trespasser. Application under Order 14, Rule 1. Dismissed with costs. Davies v. Herbert, 6 A.L.T., 70.

Application to Sign Final Judgment—No Defence to Writ—Order 14, Rules 1, 4.]—In an application to sign final judgment on the ground that there is no defence, plaintiff must show that the money is owed legally; but plaintiff was allowed to sign final judgment as to certain items which were not in dispute. Traders' Company v. Sutton, 6 A.L.T., 113.

Act No 761, Sec. 41—Order 16, Rule 40—Service of Notice of Decree Upon a Person out of the Jurisdiction.]—Application to serve notice of decree upon interested persons resident in Sydney granted. Six weeks fixed as the time within which they must apply to vary the decree. Hayes v. Wilson, 6 A.L.T., 87.

"Judicature Act 1883," Sec. 8, Sub-secs. 4, 64,—Charging Order—Equitable Claim.]—Application for an order under Sec. 64 of the "Judicature Act 1883" charging certain mining shares held by the defendant, for a debt due by her for calls to the plaintiff company, for which she had given a cheque, which was dishonoured. The defendant alleged that she held the shares in trust for her husband. Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers,) took into consideration the equitable claim, under the power conferred by Sec. 8, Sub-sec. 4, of the Act, and considering that on the facts the claim was not established made the order absolute. Long Tunnel Gold Mining Company v. Zimmier, 6 A.L.T., 25.

Action for Fraudulent Representation—Statement of Claim—Particulars—Order 19, Rules 4, 5, 6, 7—Appendix C, Sec. 6, No. 14.]—In an action for fraudulent representation the statement of claim was that the defendants fraudulently represented to the plaintiffs that certain land was of a "certain value," knowing the same to be untrue, and that plaintiffs were induced to lend money on such representation, &c. On summons, in Chambers, by defendants, under Order 19, Rule 7, for a further and better statement of claim, Held, per Higinbotham, J., that in an action for fraudulent representation the precise nature of the alleged representation is a material fact which should not be omitted from the statement of claim; that even if it were not included in the form of claim in Appendix C, Sec. 6, No. 14, the defendant would be entitled in an action of this nature to particulars; and he might be entitled to special particulars beyond those contained in the forms, if it should appear to be necessary (vide Order 19, Rule 6); and summons allowed with costs. Desailly v. Ham, 6 A.L.T., 21.

Particulars—Application for when made—Order 19, Rule 7.]—Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers)—Applications for particulars under Order 19, Rule 7, ought to be made by the defendant before he has delivered his statement of defence, and by the plaintiff, if the statement of defence is such as would entitle him to particulars, before he has delivered his reply. In future, applications for particulars after the party applying has pleaded, will not be granted, unless under special circumstances. Taylor v. Port, 6 A.L.T., 155.

Equitable Execution by Appointment of a Receiver—Act No. 761, Sec. 9, Sub-sec. 8.]—Before granting equitable execution by appointing a receiver under Sec. 9, Sub-sec. 8, the Court must be satisfied that plaintiff has tried all he can to get satisfaction at law, and that means that he must do all he can in Victoria to get satisfaction of his judgment. Ettershank v. Russell, 6 A.L.T., 140.

(c) Staying Proceedings.

Staying Proceedings—Action under "Instruments and Securities Stat. 1864," Part I—Service of Writ—"Supreme Court Rules, 1884," Order 10, Rule 6; Order 16, Rules 4, 6, 14.]—Action against H. and K., who were partners, upon a cheque drawn by them. They were not sued in the name of the firm, but as joint contractors. The writ was served upon the manager of the two partners. The service, which was defective under Sec. 19 of the "Instruments and Securities Stat, 1864," was treated by K. as good service, and he took steps to defend the action. H. was out of the jurisdiction, and so was not served. Application, in Chambers, by K. that all further proceedings as against him should be stayed until the writ was served upon H., and he had appeared, or judgment had been signed against him. Held, per Higinbotham J., that K., having accepted the service, was in no better position than he would have been in if, under the old procedure, he had been sued alone for a debt jointly due by him and another person, in which he could only have compelled the joinder of the other contracting party by giving the plaintiff a better writ; that, under the new rules, even this limited right is taken away, for under Order 16, Rule 6, a plaintiff is at liberty to join one or more only of the parties liable, and under Rule 4 of the same Order judgment may be signed against one or more defendants who may be found to be liable without amendment, and application dismissed with costs. Oriental Bank v. Halstead, 6 A.L.T., 30.

Filing Memorandum of Close of Pleadings—Order 23, Rule 5.]—It is only the plaintiff who can file the memorandum, and he should not file it until issue has been joined between all the parties, and the whole of the pleadings have been thereby closed, and not merely the pleadings between particular parties referred to in Rule 5. Freehold Investment Company v. Thompson, 6 A.L.T., 126.

Application for Action to be Tried with a Jury—Order 36, Rule 6.]—Applications to have an action tried with a jury should (Per Holroyd, J.,) be made ex parte, and do not require an affidavit as to the nature of the action. The Judge will look at the pleadings, and decide thereupon, Pralle v. Slater, 6 A.L.T., 70.

Per Williams, J.—Where pleadings are produced, no affidavit as to nature of the action is necessary, but where they are not, an affidavit is necessary. Coulson v. Campbell, 6 A.L.T. 89.

Coulson v. Campbell, followed by Higinbotham, J. Green v. Embling, 6 A.L.T., 98.

Application for Trial by Jury—Order 36, Rule 6.]—Per Williams, J. (in Chambers)—In all applications for trial with a jury an affidavit stating the nature of the action is necessary. Simmons v. Hall, 6 A.L.T., 45.

Reservation of Law Points—Order 25, Rule 2.]—In an action against a Justice for issuing a warrant on a Sunday, certain points of law raised in the defence were ordered to be tried before the trial of the action. Graham v. Haig, 6 A.L.T., 158.

Action Under Old Procedure—Cross Action Under New Procedure — Costs—"Judicature Act 1883," Sec. 8 (V.,) Order 65, Rule 27, Sub-sec. 12.]—Action for balance of a banker's account commenced before the coming into operation of the "Judicature Act;" cross action on the same subject matter by the defendants against the plaintiffs under the Act. Application in Chambers on behalf of the defendants in the cross action under Sec. 8 (V.,) of the Act to be allowed to set up, by way of counter claim, equitable facts entitling the defendants to a stay of proceedings, defendants offering, if the application were granted, to abandon their cross action, ordered per Higinbotham, J, that the action be carried on under the "Judicature Act," that the defendants be at liberty to set up equitable facts by way of counter claim, and that the defendant have a week from the date of the order to deliver his counter claim. The costs of the cross action to be paid by the defendants to the plaintiffs, the costs of the application and of the order to be costs in the action. Ettershank v. Russell, 6 A.L.T., 19.

New Procedure Ordered to be Adopted after Commencement of Action on Affidavit of Counter Claim —Costs.]—Where an action was commenced under the old procedure, and the defendants put in an affidavit stating that there was a cross claim for damages, and that this cross claim could, under the "Judicature Act," be set off against the claim of the plaintiffs, ordered, per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers,) that the action should be carried on under the ordinary proceedings under the "Judicatare Act." Costs of the application to be costs in the cause, and defendant to have six days to deliver his counter claim. Langton v. Gillespie, 6 A.L.T., 20.

Summons — Signature of Judge — Service — "Judicature Act, 1883," Secs. 36, 41, Order 54, Rules 4, 10, Order 64, Rule 11—"Common Law Procedure Stat. 1865," Sec. 420.]—Summons (in Chambers) calling upon the defendant to show cause why an order of Williams, J., should not be set aside on the grounds—1st, that the copy of the summons upon which the order was made was not signed by a judge, and, 2nd, that the copy summons was served upon the plaintiff's attorney after the hour of two o'clock on the day previous to the date at which, by the copy, it was directed that all parties should attend the Judge in Chambers. Held, per Williams, J., that as Order 54, Rule 10, provides that these summonses should be in the form No. 1 in Appendix K, and that appendix not providing for the name or signature of a judge, no signature was required by the Judge or his associate in his name; and that Secs. 36 and 41 of the "Judicature Act 1883," repealing Sec. 420 of the "Common Law Procedure Act 1865," Order 54, Rule 4, was in force, and copy summonses must be served before two o'clock, as there provided. Rudduck v. Clarke, 6 A.L.T., 46.

Affidavit in Support of Summonses—Order 38, Rule 10—Order 66, Rule 7—Order 70, Rule 1.]—Objections were made to the affidavit in support of a summons in Chambers—1st, that it did not show on whose behalf it had been filed, in accordance with Order 38, Rule 10; and, 2nd, that the folios were not numbered in accordance with Order 66, Rule 7 (m.) Williams, J. (in Chambers) upheld the first objection, but allowed an amendment under Order 70, Rule 1, and dismissed the second on the ground that Order 66, Rule 7, did not apply to such an affidavit as this, which was not required to be printed. Ibid.

Affidavits—"Supreme Court Rules, 1884," Order 38, Rule 23.]—Rule 23 of Order 28 of the "Supreme Court Rules, 1884," applies to affidavits in Chambers only. Regina v. Birkett, ex parte Chambers, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 313.

Application for Leave to Defend—"Supreme Court Rules, 1884," Order 38, Rules 23, 24—Copy of Writ and Summons should not be Annexed to the Affidavit, but must be Referred to as an Exhibit.]—London Discount Bank v. Prendergast, ante column 99

Power of Judge in Chambers to fix Costs.]—See Freehold Investment and Banking Company v. Thompson, Fahey v. Ivey and Kennedy, Coulson v. Campbell, ante column 240.

Abolition of Terms—Act No. 761, Sec. 13.]—For effect of Sec. 13 in abolishing terms, see in re Husbands and Husbands, under ARBITRATION, ante column 53.

Terms—15 Vic., No. 10, Sec. 19.]—Per Higinbotham, J. (in Chambers.) "The Judicature Act 1883," Sec. 13, which abolishes terms, except as a measure for determining time, repeals Sec. 19 of 15 Vic., No. 10, commonly called the "emergency clause." Regina v. Bailes, ex parte Pickup, 6 A.L.T., 29.

Statement of Claim—Insufficient—Appendix C.' Sec. 7, No. 2—Order 9, Rule 4.]—In an action for the recovery of land the statement of claim was as follows: "The plaintiff is entitled to recover possession of Crown allotments 5 and 6, Sec. 14, town and parish of Dandenong, County of Bourke. The plaintiff claims possession." Williams, J. (in Chambers,) Held this not to be in accordance with the rules, and ordered it to be struck out, but subsequently, because the summons was not properly served, refused the application to strike out or amend, defendant to pay the costs of the summons, and allowed the plaintiff to amend within a week.—Rudduck v. Clarke, 6 A.L.T., 45, 46.

Statement of Claim—Insufficient—Amendment—Order 70, Rule 1.]—Holroyd, J. (in Chambers,) ordered a statement of claim in an action for breach of agreement and non-payment of salary, to be amended, under Order 70, Rule 1, by inserting the dates and sums in figures, by adding the signature of the counsel who drew the statement, the place of trial, and by stating the particulars as to the salary the plaintiff was to receive, and the expenses he had been put to by the breach of the agreement. Vail v. Gilmour, 6 A.L.T., 64.

(2) Statement of Defence and Counterclaim.

Statement of Claim—Statement of Defence—Set Off and Counterclaim.]—A statement of claim was for arrears in rent due by defendant, for rates paid on the property, and for damages for breach of contract, and covenants contained in a lease to keep in repair. Statement of defence alleged a set off for work done and money paid, and defendant counterclaimed for damages caused by the trespass of the plaintiff. Holroyd, J. (in Chambers,) Held that the defendant ought with regard to the set off to give the particulars of the work done and money paid, and with regard to the counterclaim ought to give the dates of the trespass and the items. Freehold Investment and Banking Company v. Thompson, 6 A.L.T., 65.

Pleading—Statement of Defence—Order 19, Rules 4, 5, 7, 19, 27—Appendix D, Sec. 6.]—Action for wrongs. The statement of defence denied the "material allegations" in the statement of claim. The second paragraph of the statement of defence alleged that the alleged injuries were occasioned by a certain instrument, and that the defendant had not the care and management of or any property in such instrument. Held, per Higinbotham J. (in Chambers,) that the first statement was insufficient, though semble had it followed the form in Schedule D, Sec. 6, it would have been sufficient; but that the second was not only an allowable but a very proper one to put on the record, and was not in any way embarrassing. Blackburn v. Mayor of Melbourne, 6 A.L.T., 154.

Defence and Counter Claim—Order 21, Rules 10, 11.]—Where a defendant mixed up a defence and counter claim without distinctly separating the counter claim, the Court held that the pleadings were embarrassing and must be struck out, and that it was proper to apply before trial to strike out such pleadings. Ballarat Banking Company v. Wall, 6 A.L.T., 157.

For circumstances in which a reply was ordered to be struck out or amended on the grounds that it raised a "new assignment,' contained inconsistent statements, and did not clearly raise the points of law which it intended to raise, thereby violating Rules 6 and 7 of Order 23. See M'Kenzie v. Hanham, 6 A.L.T., 153.

PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.

I. Rights and Liabilities of Principal with Regard to Third Persons and Vice Versa.

Agent Entrusted with Goods — Storage.] — A factor, or person entrusted with goods, with power simply to sell and deliver them, is not presumed to have authority to stipulate for his principal with the buyer for storage of the goods by the principal on the buyer's behalf, in the absence of evidence of an authority in that behalf by the principal. Brebner v. Birkett, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 205.

Not Within Factor's Act—6 Geo IV., Cap. xciv., Sec. 2.]—The word "person" in Sec. 2 of 6 Geo. IV., cap, xciv., must be construed as "factor" or "agent," and applies only to factors or agents having mercantile possession, so as to be within the mercantile usage of getting advances, and not to persons where the relation is that of master and servant, or employer and clerk. A bill of lading of goods landed, but not delivered to the consignee, was endorsed by him for a specific purpose, and on a subsequent day handed by him to B. for the purpose merely of enabling delivery of the goods to be expedited, and freight to be paid. B. held the bill of lading. Held, that B. was merely a clerk to the consignee, and not the consignee's agent "entrusted" by him with the bill of lading, within the meaning of Sec. 2 of 6 Geo. IV., cap. xciv. Levi v. Learmonth, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 283.

Suing in Own Name.]—W. and H., as agents for undisclosed principals, joined with R. in a joint purchase of Crown lands. W. and H. advanced to R. £1024, being one-fifth of the purchase money, out of their principals' moneys. R. signed a declaration of trust as to the land he purchased in favour of W. and H. as to one-fifth. R. had no notice that W. and H. were only agents. The representatives of some of the principals brought a suit against R. to enforce their equity to one-fifth of the land. Held on demurrer that the plaintiffs suing on behalf of sufficiently affirmed the investment on behalf of all the undisclosed principals, and that W. and H. were not necessary parties. Demurrer overruled. Hunter v. Rutledge, 6 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 331.

Husband Acting as Agent for Wife Without Disclosing Principal—Right to Sue Wife When Ascertained to be Principal.]—See M'Intosh v. Tonkin, ante column 547.

(c) In Other Cases—Authority of Agent.

Excess of Authority — Ratification — Contract Made on Sunday.]—An agent who is authorised to sell partly for cash, partly on credit, exceeds his authority if he sells for cash only, and similarly where the agent arranges a sale which is conditional upon approval of title by purchaser's solicitors; but if the principal acquiesces with knowledge of authority having been assumed by agent this affords strong evidence of the power in the agent: where defendant (vendor) having distinct early knowledge of an agreement made on his behalf, though in excess of authority as above stated, subsequently wrote to the purchaser stating that he would be bound if a contract was made, this is a sufficient ratification of such a contract if made (per Molesworth, J., and affirmed.) Semble, per Molesworth, J., if an agent without authority signs a contract as on behalf of principal, the latter may adopt it without writing, and make it good under Stat. of Frauds. Per Molesworth, J.—A contract made by land agents on a Sunday is not binding on principal by 29 Car. 2, Cap. 7, and such objection may be taken at hearing, though not stated in answer if it appears that fact only became known to principal on taking of evidence. Per totam curiam. A land agent is not within the Stat. 29, Car. 2, Cap. 7, since "other person" means a person ejusdem generis with "Tradesman, artificer, workman, labourer," and therefore a contract made by land agents on behalf of principal on a Sunday does bind a principal. Ronald v. Lalor, 3 A.J.R., 11, 12, 87.

Agent Exceeding His Authority.]—N. held an island under a lease for purpose of exporting guano, and gave C., his agent, a power of attorney to do all that N. could do "in gathering, collecting and exporting guano." C., as such agent, chartered a ship, of which H. was master, simply for purpose of sending to N. "samples of guano and despatches." H. sued N. on the charter party. The pleadings did not aver that the despatches bore upon "the gathering, collecting and exporting of guano," and the plea stated that "samples" were not commonly sold as merchandise. Held that the agent had exceeded his authority, and that N. was not liable. Hort v. Nicholson, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 183.

Agent Acting in Excess of Authority—Government Officer.]—By Rule 17 of the Civil Service Regulations, no officer may incur any liability on behalf of the Crown without the authority in writing of the Minister of his department; and, by Rule 20, no information out of the strict course of official duty is allowed to be given by any officer without the express direction or permission of the responsible Minister. C., the Chief Engineer, wrote to the Minister of his department, requesting authority to so far depart from the regulations of the service as to obtain the professional opinion of independent engineers upon some points raised by the Engineer-in-Chief in his report of some works executed under C.'s direction. The Minister replied that he had no objection to C.'s so doing. The engineers requested by C. to give their opinion did so, and addressed their report to C. Afterwards the Minister wrote to the Treasurer requesting him to make provision for the payment of the engineers for their report, but this was not done. On suit by the engineers against the Crown, Held that there was no agency proved by reason of these letters on the part of C. to incur the liability for the Crown, since the letter from C. to the Minister was under Rule 20, and not Rule 17, and the letter from the Minister to the Treasurer was merely an expression of opinion; and plaintiffs nonsuited. Adams v. The Queen, 2 V.R. (L.,) 145; 2 A.J.R., 96.

Liability of Corporation for Illegal Seizure by Inspector of Licenses—Excess of Authority.]—See Henderson v. Mayor of Melbourne, ante column 214, under CORPORATION.

Extent of Agent's Authority — Delivery — Acceptance.]—An authority given to an agent to purchase goods for his principal, for use upon the principal's premises, does not impliedly authorise him to direct delivery of the goods elsewhere. If the agent, after selecting and purchasing the goods, order their delivery elsewhere than at the principal's premises, delivery at the place so directed does not amount to an acceptance to satisfy the Statute of Frauds. Mitchell v. Watson, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 493; 2 A.L.T., 99, sub nom., Watson v. Mitchell.

Agent Drawing Drafts—Change of Authority.]—As a general rule a person, without inquiry, taking drafts drawn by an agent as agent for a principal, does so at his own risk; but this does not apply where on former occasions drafts so drawn and taken have been honoured. Where, therefore, Y., a squatter, authorised his overseer to draw drafts without restriction as to the manner up to June, 1868, and after that time imposed the restriction on him that the drafts should be endorsed by Y., and a person who had taken drafts from the agent before took drafts drawn payable to bearer after that date without Y.'s endorsement, which were dishonoured, Held that Y. was bound to communicate the restriction of the overseer's authority to draw by ordering him to draw payable to bearer, subject to Y.'s endorsement; and that not having altered the form of the drafts when he changed the nature of the overseer's authority, there was evidence to go to the jury of Y.'s liability, and a rule nisi for a nonsuit which had been obtained discharged. Fletcher v. Youl, 1 V.R. (L.,) 61; 1 A.J.R., 101.

Authority of Agent—Breach of—What is.]—Where an authority is given to an agent to sell for cash, and he sells giving a month's credit, that is a breach of his authority, and specific performance cannot be enforced. Breese v Lindsay, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 232; 4 A.L.T., 20.

See S.C., VENDOR AND PURCHASER—Specific Performance.

An authority to sell real estate does not extend to receiving purchase money. Laughton v. Munro, N.C., 31.

Authority of Agent—Breach of.]—Per Molesworth, J., following Hamer v. Sharpe, L.R., 19, Eq. 108. A general authority to an agent to sell land does not authorise him to enter into an open contract. But, per Stawell, C. J.—Where land is entrusted to an agent to sell without instructions as to conditions, and he enters into an open contract, quære, whether as between vendor and purchaser, that contract is absolutely void. Ross v. Victorian Permanent Building Society, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 254, 266, 270; 4 A.L.T., 17.

Agent Acting Contrary to Authority—Refusal of Principal to Ratify.]—Oppenheimer v. Oppenheimer, ante column 1130.

Bank Manager, Authority of.]—Colonial Bank v. Ettershank, ante column 83; Harrison v. Smith, ante columns 79, 80.

Agency — Philanthropic Society — Liability of Committee-men for Overdraft—Authority not Withdrawn.]—An action was brought by a bank to recover from the members of a committee of a society for the promotion of temperance the amount of an overdraft. At a meeting of the committee in June, 1874, the treasurer was empowered to operate upon the account at the bank, and his signature on cheques was accepted as sufficient guarantee. The account then became overdrawn. Held that the authority given to the treasurer being unrevoked, the members who were aware of the overdraft and did not express their dissent, were liable; and that members assenting to one overdraft would, until such assent was revoked, be liable for future overdrafts. English, Scottish and Australian Chartered Bank v. Adcock, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 157.

Liability for Orders of Manager of Company as to Goods Supplied.]—Where goods were delivered to H., and were afterwards seen on the company's premises, and it was proved that H. had been at one time manager of the company, Held that there was no evidence of agency, or of H.'s being manager at the time the goods were ordered. Maxwell's Reef Company v. Irving, 3 A.J.R., 26.

Overseer of a Station — Authority.] — The situation of overseer on a sheep station does not necessarily authorise him to draw drafts for station purposes, his position being completely analagous to that of the manager of a mine. Fletcher v. Youl, 1 V.R. (L.,) 61; 1 A.J.R., 101.

Authority of Agent — Authority to Complete Verbal Agreement as to Cancellation of Policy—Recission.]—An agent of a life assurance company, who has been entrusted with a cheque to purchase a policy, which it was agreed should be cancelled, has no authority, in the absence of an express authorisation to rescind the agreement. Hardy v. Anderson, 1 A.J.R., 136.

Authority of Agent—Verbal Recission of Contract for Sale of Land by Agent of Vendor.]—A person appointed as attorney under power with authority to sell land, and "to rescind any contract for sale," has power verbally to rescind a contract entered into for sale of land, and such verbal recission is binding on his principal. Bartlett v. Looney, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 14.

Evidence of Election to Sue Principal—Evidence to go to Jury.]—H. authorised C., as his agent, to buy cattle for him, furnishing C. with one or more drafts for a certain amount, in which the name of the drawer and payee were left blank, and on the side of each draft was a written statement by the manager of the bank, that the draft would be honoured in favour of any payee. C. purchased cattle from M. and B., disclosing his principal in each case. C. filled in his own name as drawer in each draft, and M.'s name as payee in one, B.'s in the other. The cattle were delivered, and on the drafts being dishonoured the vendors sued H. At the trial the Judge nonsuited each plaintiff on the ground that there was conclusive proof that each elected to give credit until the draft should be honoured by C. alone. Held by Stawell, C. J., and Barry, J., (dissentiente Williams, J.,) that there was no such conclusive evidence of election, but only facts, from which the jury might or might not have inferred the election. Rule absolute to enter verdict for plaintiffs in each action. Mate v. Herbert, Bardwell v. Herbert, 2 W. and W. (L.,) 258.

Wrong Committed by Agent—Fraud.]—A principal is liable for every wrong of the agent committed in the course of his employer's business, and for his benefit, though no express command or privity of the principal be proved; and no sensible distinction can be drawn between the case of fraud and that of any other wrong. Stevenson v. Bear, 2 V.R. (L.,) 220; 3 A.J.R., 23.

Liability for Tort of Agent—Malicious Prosecution.]—See Lennox v. Langdon, ante column 880.

Husband and Wife—Contract by Wife—Ratification.]—W. sued H. for breach of agreement to lease a hotel. It was proved that Mrs. H., acting on H's. behalf, had contracted to sell the business, but that H. himself had subsequently executed the lease. Held, reversing County Court Judge, that there was evidence to go to the jury to sustain plaintiff's case; nonsuit set aside, new trial directed before Supreme Court. Whitesides v. Hayes, 3 A.J.R., 32.

Selling Liquor Without a Licence—Wife not Deemed to be Husband's Agent.]—Hettenbach v. Isley, ante column 833.

Person Fraudulently Altering a Bill Made Agent by Negligence of Drawer.]—A bill was drawn on E. for £60 on a printed form and handed to him for acceptance. E., whose sight was weak, was under the impression that the sum was properly written in writing and in figures, and accepted as for £60. After E.'s acceptance, the drawer or some one with his consent altered the sum to £160 and made the necessary additions in the writing and figures on the bill. The alteration was rendered perfectly easy by the manner in which the words and figures representing the original amount were filled in. The bill as altered, was endorsed and delivered to a bank, which had no notice of the fraud. The bank sued on the bill for £160 and recovered a verdict. On rule nisi to set aside the verdict, Held, that E., by his negligent conduct, must be deemed to have made the drawer, or the person who altered the bill with the drawer's consent, his agent to alter the bill; and verdict upheld. Bank of Australasia v. Erwin, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 70.

Contracts for Sale of Land Made by Agents.]—See VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

II. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF AGENTS TO THIRD PERSONS AND VICE VERSA.

Liability on Contract—Signature.]—A contract was worded "As agents for Mr. B. we have this day sold Mr. A. 3000 sheep at the rate of 11s. 6d. per head" and was signed "Powers, Rutherford and Co., per W. A. Torrance," and A. brought an action against P., R. and Co., for non-delivery of the sheep. The plea set out the contract. Held upon demurrer to the plea that the defendants being described "as agents for Mr. B." did in the sale act as such agents and their signature "per W. A. Torrance," was a signature in such a capacity; that there was no distinction between the limitation as agents, being placed at the beginning or at the end of the contract. Judgment for defendants. Aitken v. Power, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 172.

Personal Liability of Agent on Contract.]—H. sent his horse to B., a horse-dealer, to sell. B. sold the horse and signed a sale note as follows:—"Sold this day, to S., through W. C. S., chestnut horse, belonging to H., branded ——, which I guarantee all right, for the sum of £30. £30 received same date—B., on account of H." Held that B. did not render himself personally liable on the guarantee, but had acted on account of H. in giving it. Sprent v. Bowes, 1 A.J.R., 111.

Sale as Agent for Named Principal—Receipt for Deposit on Same Paper Without Stating Agency.]—An agent made a sale note as follows:—"As agents for Mr. J. R., we have this day sold to P. the lease of the R. Hotel—W. H. and Co.," and on the same paper, at the foot of the note, drew up a receipt for the deposit as follows: — "We acknowledge having received cheque for £50, being deposit on the above sale, from P. W.H. and Co." Held, that the whole note must stand together, and that on the document as a whole the agent acted as agent for R., who was the proper party to be sued for return of the deposit, after the sale had gone off. Groom v. Parkinson, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 14; 5 A.L.T., 171, sub nom, Parkinson v. Groom.

Person Acting as Agent for Company not then in Existence.]—Persons professing to act as agents for companies not then in existence must be treated as principals, and are personally liable for breach of the contract, one to the other. Cane v. Sinclair, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 60; 5 A.L.T., 186.

Certain bills of lading, invoices, &c., of a consignment of champagne were handed to A. on agreement with D. to the effect that A. was to dispose of the goods to M., and to share in the profits. A. disposed of the goods, and by a letter accepted the terms as to sharing profits, and stated that he acted as agent for W. (the shipper.) In an action by D. against A. as principal for a share in the profits, Held that A. could not dispute his own liability, and was liable as principal in the arrangement made. Danby v. Adet, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 17.

Untrue Representations of Authority—Plaintiff's Knowledge—Burden of Proof.]—In an action by a purchaser of land for untrue representations as to the authority of an agent to sell the land, it is necessary for the plaintiff to show not merely that the agent made such representations, but also that the plaintiff was induced by such representations to enter into the contract; the onus of proving that the plaintiff was aware, at the time of the contract, that the agent had not the authority alleged, lies on the agent. Adamson v. Morton, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 307; 3 A.L.T., 31.

Right of Agent to Sue for Non-delivery of Mining Shares.]—C., a broker, as agent for W., bought shares in mining companies from M. The bought-note was made out in the following form:—"C., stock and share broker, 8th January, 1872. Sold by order, and on account of M., 100 Great Success at 16s. 6d., £82 10s." M. refused to deliver, and C. had to buy other shares to supply his customers at an advanced rate. C. brought an action in his own name for non-delivery against M. The County Court Judge non-suited C. Held an appeal that there was evidence both ways as to whether plaintiff acted as principal or agent. Nonsuit set aside. Clarke v. Mellor, 3 A.J.R., 39.

Transmission of Bill from Principal to Agent—Duty of Agent as Regards Obtaining Acceptance.]—Bank of Van Dieman's Land v. Bank of Victoria, ante columns 94, 95.

Admissions by Agent—"Without Prejudice."]—Goodman v. Hughes, ante column 415.

A defendant B., really acting as agent for the purchase of land on behalf of A., but representing himself as agent for S. (A. being anxious not to appear as purchaser,) bought land from plaintiff, and signed contract as on his own behalf. On a bill by plaintiff against B., Held that defendant was liable on the ground that the signed contract would have no effect if it did not bind defendant. Clarke v. Byrne, 3 A.J.R., 20.

Refusing to Disclose Principal.] — S. sued D. for delivering wool which was not equal to the sample. Two bales were shown as samples, but the plaintiff, on opening other bales, found they were of inferior quality, and asked D. to disclose his principal, which D. refused to do. The Judge of the County Court gave S. a verdict. The Court, on appeal, affirmed the decision, thinking there was sufficient evidence to prove that the wool was not equal to the sample. Synnot v. Douglas, 5 A.J.R., 165.

Agent Signing Guarantee to Creditors—Signature Among Those of Creditors.] — G. signed a contract to guarantee a sum to the creditors of a person, of which creditors his firm was one. The contract was as follows:—"We, the undersigned creditors of P. S———, hereby agree to accept the lump sum of £80 as offered by Mr. G. for another party. . . . (Signed.) B. and G. (G.'s firm,) C., A., P., G." Held that G. must have signed as a contracting party, and not as a creditor, and that he must be the "Mr. G." referred to in the contract; and that his principal not being disclosed he was personally liable on the contract. Coote v. Gillespie, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 56; 1 A.L.T., 155.

III. Rights and Liabilities of Principal and Agent Inter Se.

Land Purchased by Agent in Mistake—Principal's Right to Deposit Money Paid by Him to Agent.]—A instructed B. to purchase for him land at the corner of two streets containing 110ft., and paid B. £50 for deposit money. B. purchased land in King-street, but two lots from the corner mentioned, and A. repudiated the purchase. Held that A. was entitled to recover the £50 from B. as money had and received. Allison v. Byrne, 3 V.R. (L.,) 155; 3 A.J.R., 67.

Factor—Selling After Countermand of Authority—Advance Equal to Value of Goods Sold—Damages.]—Where a factor entrusted with goods with an authority to sell them in order to recoup himself for advances made by him to the principal, equal in amount to the value of the goods so entrusted, sells such goods after his authority to sell has been countermanded, but before he has been repaid his advances, the damages in an action of trover by the principal will be only nominal. Osborne v. Synnot, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 209.

Countermand of Authority—Sale—Measure of Damages.]—Wool was consigned to a factor for sale, but before the sale the authority was countermanded. The trustee in insolvency of the principal sued the factor in trover. Held that the defendant had no right to sell after the countermand of authority; and that by the wrongful sale the factor's lien for a debt owing him by the insolvent principal was extinguished, and the measure of damages was the value of the wool. Osborne v. Synnot, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 148.

Suit by Principal to Compel Agent to Transfer Shares — Necessary and Proper Parties — Third Parties.]—Where a principal brings a suit to enforce the transfer of shares in a company purchased by the defendant as his agent, which transfer the defendant refuses on the ground that the company may impeach the purchase as invalid, neither the company nor the former owners are necessary parties. Hardy v. Cotter, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 151.

An agent cannot set up as against his principal in a suit between them the rights of third parties to impeach the validity of a transaction which was the subject matter of the suit. H. employed C., the manager of a mining company, to purchase for H., as his agent, certain shares in the company which were forfeited for non-payment of calls, and about to be sold by auction. C. purchased accordingly, and the purchase money was subtracted from certain costs due by the company to H., as its solicitor. C. had the scrip issued in his own name, and gave them to H., but refused to transfer them to H., alleging that sale was invalid, the proper preliminaries for forfeiture not having been taken. Held that C. could not set up the right of the company to impeach the sale as against H. Decree for transfer. Ibid.

Parol Agreement to Purchase Land for Principal —Agent not Provided with Funds.]—A verbal agreement by an agent not provided with funds to purchase for another, cannot be enforced against the agent having got a conveyance. Pain v. Flynn, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 131.

A company borrowing money on debentures, employed the plaintiff W. to place them in the market under the following terms: "For disposal for three months from date of £30,000. Your commission to be 1½ per cent. by whomsoever sold, but it is understood that, should the whole of the debentures not be disposed of at this time, no commission is to accrue until they are sold." Within the three months tenders were sent in for £6000, but no further tenders being received these were not accepted. Held that the words, "at this time," meant at the end of the three months, and that W. was not entitled to any commission, such right only arising under the contract when all were sold. Were v. South Melbourne Gas Company, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 352.

(c) Account and Fiduciary Position.

Manager of a Station—Purchase of Land Thrown Open for Selection.]—Per Molesworth, J.—An agent in the management of a squatting station is not, as such, disqualified from purchasing land on the station put up for sale by the Government; although his agency might give him peculiar means of knowing its value. Lempriere v. Ware, 2 V.R. (E.,) 1.

Sale of Mine — Vendor and Purchaser — Sub-purchase by Agent for Sale.] — Motion for injunction against disposing of shares in a company, and for a receiver over the shares of certain defendants. (The facts as stated by the bill appear in 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 34.) In addition to those facts it appeared from affidavits in support of the motion that the defendant B., as agent for plaintiff's vendors, had signed a sale note, 15th September, 1873, by which the mine was to be sold for £13,500, half cash, remainder when transfer was completed. The half of the purchase-money was paid to B. on signing of note, and the remainder on 19th September, 1873, when defendant C. was put into possession of the mine. After possession was delivered, B. and defendant C. entered into an agreement by which B. purchased a quarter share in the mine for £3348. Held that after B., as plaintiff's agent had signed contract for sale, all his discretionary powers as agent, all those in which he would be warped by intention to benefit himself, were over; all that remained to be done was the execution of the transfer and payment of the balance of the purchase-money, as to which it did not appear by the bill that B. had to do anything, and that therefore his sub-purchase was good. Motion refused. Learmonth v. Bailey, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 122. Affirmed on appeal, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 228, 241.

Suit by Principal Against Agent for Account.]—Where C. acts as sub-agent for B., who is agent for A., and is in such a position that as between him and B. he cannot set up A.'s title as against B., and there is sufficient evidence to show that B. is responsible to A. for money received by C., and recovered from him by B. in an action at law, in a suit by A. against B. for an account, C. is not a necessary party. Hofer v. Silberberg, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 125.

Suit by Principal Against Agent for Account.]—Generally speaking a principal may proceed against his agent in Equity as well as at law, and especially where there is complexity in the matter. The plaintiff became entitled to large sums of money coming to him from Guernsey, and by two instruments appointed S., his attorney, under power to receive it, and he did receive some small sums under it. S. then informed the plaintiff that it would be necessary for him to sign another document, which he represented came from B., the German Consul, and plaintiff signed it, and the bill charged that this document was in reality an assignment of plaintiff's interest to S. B. received £950 from Germany, and S. brought an action for this amount, and it was paid into Court, and taken out by S. Held on demurrer that a bill against S. for an account would lie. Ibid.

PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.

1. Discharge of Surety.

By Insolvency, &c. — Principal Creditor not Bound to Prove.] — P., in consideration that plaintiff bank would make cash advances to H., guaranteed to pay such advances to the extent of £600. The bank made advances to H. to the extent of £5000. The bank sued P. on his guarantee. P. put in an equitable plea to the effect that, after the guarantee and advances, H. gave certain mortgages, &c., to the bank as security, and that H. became insolvent, and that the bank did not value its securities or prove upon H.'s estate, and that H.'s estate being discharged from insolvency, P.'s guarantee was improperly increased. Held, upon demurrer to the plea, that the bank was not bound to prove; and that the plea was bad, as P. could not show that the bank had violated any duty, a thing which he must prove, in order to entitle him to a perpetual injunction in equity. Judgment for plaintiff. National Bank v. Plummer, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 165.

When Surety not Affected by Principal Creditor's Acts.]—Defendant became surety for G. to a company for £3000, portion of a debt due by R. G. to the company on a mortgage. G. became insolvent, and obtained his certificate, and the company, without defendant's knowledge or consent, proved their debt at a certain amount against G.'s estate, put a smaller value on their securities, and received a dividend on the residue. Held that defendant was not discharged as surety by the acts of the company, nor did their acts amount to an acceptance by them of the mortgage securities in full satisfaction of the value they had placed on them; that the fact of the company having proved their debt, valued their securities and received a dividend on the residue, did not prevent defendant afterwards proving for the sum he might have to pay as surety, and thus, by injuring him, discharge him from his liability, and that he was not bound by the valuation of the securities made by the company. Trust and Agency Company of Australia v. Greene, 1 V.R. (L.,)171; 1 A.J.R., 142.

Guarantee for Overdraft—Amount of Guarantee Exceeded—Surety not Discharged.]—M., in consideration that a bank would allow F. to overdraw from time to time on her current account with a bank, to an extent not exceeding £150, promised the bank to pay them on demand the amount of any overdraft to the extent of £150, with the usual bank interest. F. overdrew to an amount exceeding £150. Held (dubitante curia) that M. was not discharged from his liability. Commercial Bank v. Moylan, 1 A.J.R., 123.

Further Security Taken by Creditor.]—A surety is not discharged by the creditor taking a lien on the next clip of wool in the ordinary form, of sheep over which he already held a mortgage payable on demand. The creditor, by taking such a security, does not impliedly contract to give time to the mortgagee. Swan v. The National Bank, 4 A.J.R., 42, 43.

By Concealment of Alteration of Security.]—K., being in difficulties, altered acceptances of F.'s, which he held, so as to increase the amount, and had also misappropriated moneys of F.'s. F. agreed to take up the altered acceptances if K. would provide security for their amount. K. induced B. to give a promissory note for the amount, and to sign an agreement to mortgage a station as security if required. F. did not inform B. of K.'s forgery and misappropriation. B. went insolvent, and F. filed a bill against his official assignee for specific performance of the contract to mortgage the station. Held, per Molesworth, J., that the surety was discharged by the concealment of the forgery and misappropriation. On appeal, Held, that in contracts of guaranty, the same candour was not required as in contracts of insurance; that B. was not released by F.'s reticence; but that F. was not entitled to the relief prayed, and must prove upon the estate with other creditors, and appeal dismissed. Fitzgerald v. Jacomb, 4 A.J.R., 111. On appeal Ibid, 189.

By Dealings Between Creditor and Principal.]—A surety for payment for goods sold to the principal is not discharged by the vendor taking bills for the amount in the ordinary course of business from the principal without the knowledge of the surety. Dodgshun v. Moss, 4. A.J.R., 118.

By Giving Time.]—All the makers of a bill of exchange being primarily liable, giving time to one does not discharge the others. Colonial Bank v. Ettershank, 4 A.J.R., 94, 185.

By Supineness of Creditor.]—Forbearance or even supineness on the part of a creditor will not release the surety. And if the creditor be inactive or supine in realising upon his securities, the surety should pay off the creditor, and take over the securities, and realise upon them himself. M'Mahon v. Young, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 57.

S. obtained a loan on a policy of insurance on his life, and assigned an East Indian pension to the company by way of security, and executed a power of attorney to their agent to enable him to receive payment of the pension. Y. became surety, and executed his covenant after receipt of a letter from the company's agent, stating that Y.'s liability would cease upon the assignment of the pension, and the power of attorney being recognised and registered at the India office, and a defeasance to that effect was endorsed on the deed, but not executed by the company. The India office did not recognise the assignment, but recognised the power of attorney, and several payments of the pension were made under it to the attorney. The pension was then allowed to fall into arrears. S. subsequently granted another power of attorney to another person to receive the pension and all arrears, and they were accordingly received by such person. In an action by the company against Y., Held that the letter from the company's agent was not an agreement, and could not therefore be set up as a defence; that the power of attorney was not a security; and that, if the pension were assignable, Y. had his remedy against the grantors who improperly paid the holder of the second power of attorney, and if it were not assignable Y. had not been injured, so that in neither case was he discharged. Ibid.

Guarantee of Fidelity of a Clerk—Alteration of Course of Clerk's Business—Alteration Not Carried Out.]—A contract of guarantee of the fidelity of a clerk, which is expressly based upon representations amounting to a promise as to the manner in which the dealings of the clerk will be checked and supervised, is vitiated by an alteration in the course of such clerk's business by the insured, without the insurer's consent; but if the instructions of the insured as to such alteration be not, in fact, carried out by his servants, the guarantee will not be vitiated. Dougharty v. London Guarantee and Accident Company, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 376; 2 A.L.T., 79.

Act of Creditor Producing Injury to the Surety.]—There is no principle that an act by a creditor producing a small injury to the surety shall operate as a total discharge of the surety; it only operates as a discharge pro tanto. Attorney-General v. Huon, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 30, 43; 2 A.L.T., 130.

2. General Principles.

Suretyship for Whole of Debt with Liability Limited to Less Amount—Surety's Rights to Proportion of Dividends Under Insolvency of Principal Debtor.]—F. having an overdraft with defendant bank wanted further advances, which bank made on A. endorsing a promissory note for £2500 to the bank as security. F.'s estate was sequestrated, he being then indebted to the bank in the sum of £3900. Defendant bank proved on this debt, receiving a dividend, and commenced an action against A. on his promissory note, and the bank received payment of it by an arrangement made. Bill by A. for recovery of the sum received by the bank in dividends as upon £2500, Held by the Full Court, on appeal, affirming (Molesworth, J.,) that the plaintiff was entitled to recover as surety a proportionate amount of the dividend as on the note. Ford v. London Chartered Bank of Australia, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 328; 1 A.L.T., 66, 117.

Surety's Title to Securities—Further Security.]—A debtor who had mortgaged lands to his creditor to secure a certain sum, had also obtained a surety for that sum. Wishing to obtain a further advance, he mortgaged other lands to his creditor. The surety claimed to be entitled to the further security. Held that though a surety was entitled to all further securities for the guaranteed debt, he was not entitled to further securities for an additional debt. Swan v. The National Bank, 4 A.J.R., 42.

Debt Recovered From Surety—Right of Surety to Assignment of Securities—"Instruments and Securities Stat. 1864," Sec. 55]—J. recovered judgment against H., who was surety for a debt, as sole defendant, and execution was issued and H. paid the amount of the judgment and costs. H. then brought an action against J. to compel the latter to assign to him the judgment, and the indenture of guarantee upon which H. and others had become sureties. Held that H. was entitled to judgment as to the indenture, but not as to the judgment, since that could not be regarded as a security or of any use in enforcing contribution, and Sec. 55 of the "Instruments and Securities Stat. 1864," only allows the surety to have assigned to him what may be useful in enforcing contribution. Hardy v. Johnston, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 190; 2 A.L.T., 19.

Surety's Right to an Assignment of Securities—Act No. 204, Sec. 55—Promissory Note.]—A surety who has paid his principal's debt is entitled under Sec. 55 of Act No. 204 to an assignment by deed of the securities which the creditor holds, including a promissory note or bill of exchange, and is not bound to accept such promissory note or bill of exchange endorsed by the creditor without recourse. Everingham v. Waddell, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 180; 3 A.L.T., 16.

Amount of Liability.]—In an action the defendants were ordered to bring into Court the sum of £165 as security, and they were then to be allowed to take it out again on giving a bond with sureties for the payment to the plaintiffs of any sum the plaintiffs should recover in the action under the declaration to the extent of £165. The plaintiffs recovered against the defendants in the action the sum of 1s., together with £171 9s. 10d., for taxed costs. Before the plaintiffs recovered this amount the defendants had paid directly to the plaintiffs the sum of £217. In an action against the sureties on the bond, Held that the £217 paid directly was not money "recovered" in the action, that the money paid into Court was not to be deemed included in the direct payment; and that the costs were part of the damages recovered, and should be paid by the sureties to the extent of their bond. Day v. Union Gold Mining Company, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 11.

Liability of a Surety to Administration Bond—Damages Recoverable Against—"Administration Act 1872," Secs. 26, 28.]—In an action against a surety of an administration bond, the breach assigned was that the administrator had misappropriated moneys of the estate, but not that he had failed to furnish true accounts. Held that the form of the pleadings debarred the plaintiff from recovering as damages the costs of an administration suit to prove the breach assigned, such suit not being shown by the pleadings to be necessary; but that, apart from the pleadings, the effect of Secs. 26 and 28 of the "Administration Act 1872," which did not contemplate the necessity of a suit, prevented the plaintiff recovering such costs as damages. M'Carthy v. Ryan, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 189; 4 A.L.T., 33.

The costs of procuring an assignment of the bond, under Sec. 28 of the "Administration Act 1872," cannot be recovered as damages in such an action—Quære, whether they may not form part of the costs of the action. Ibid.

Indemnity—Bills Endorsed by Plaintiffs as Security for Payment for Certain Articles by a Third Person and Discounted by Defendant Who Became Responsible and Obtained a Bill of Sale From Such Third Person—Plaintiffs Entitled to Indemnity Out of Proceeds.]—A., wishing to start in business as a hotelkeeper, the plaintiffs endorsed bills of exchange in favour of the seller of the goodwill and furniture, to secure payment by A. The defendant had these bills discounted, making himself responsible to a bank which discounted them, and taking a bill of sale over the furniture from A. for security. Defendant held the bills, and sold A.'s interest in the hotel to B., taking a bill of sale from B. to secure part of the purchase money, without plaintiffs' consent or concurrence, and afterwards freeing B. from her contract as to the hotel, entered into possession and received and applied the profits to his own use. The defendant compelled some of the plaintiffs to pay the moneys they had guaranteed on the bills of exchange, and recovering part from one of them brought an action on the bills to recover the balance. On bill by plaintiffs against defendant for indemnity, and for an injunction staying the action, Held that defendant was liable to indemnify plaintiffs against the bills out of the proceeds, and to pay back to same the moneys he had recovered. Injunction restraining action granted. Davidson v. M'Carthy, 5 A.J.R., 101.

Contribution and Recoupment—Assignment of Judgment Debt—Damages—"Instruments and Securities Stat." No. 204, Sec. 55.]—McE. & Co. recovered against E., and fifteen others, a judgment, of which E. paid the greater part, including damages and costs, the residue being recovered out of funds belonging to the defendants. E. requested McE. & Co. to assign the judgment, to enable him to enforce contribution from his co-debtors, and on their refusal to do so brought an action. Held that the measure of damages in such an action, which would lie under Sec. 55 of No. 204, was the loss of the full amount, the onus of proving that any of the co-debtors were insolvent lying on the defendants; and that the plaintiff need not lay special damage. Embling v. McEwan, 3 V.R. (L.,) 52; 3 A.J.R., 36.

Defence to Action Against Surety—Act Increasing Liability of Principal.]—An information against a surety to a bond that the Curator of Intestate Estates would duly discharge his duties alleged that the Curator held the office from 1861 till 1st July, 1864, and stated general breaches. On an objection that on the 1st of July, 1864, the Act No. 230 came into force, and enlarged the liability of the Curator, and discharged the surety, Held that, though the Court could take judicial notice of the Act No. 230, still the matter was one that ought to have been pleaded; and that the breaches being assigned without any date, the information was substantially good. Regina v. Shovelbottom, Regina v. Sandars, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 188.

Making Decree an Order of Court—No Application Necessary.]—After the decision of the Privy Council on appeal, no application is necessary to make the order of the Privy Council an order of the Supreme Court. Urquhart v. McPherson, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 290.

PROHIBITION.

Practice on—Stay of Proceedings—Rule to Rescind—Omission of Date of Issue.]—A rule nisi for a prohibition to a Court of Mines against putting the respondents in a suit in possession, was granted on an ex parte motion, returnable in the following term, with a stay of proceedings. Two days' notice of the motion for the rule was not given to the respondents, and the Court, on the motion of the respondents, granted a rule nisi to rescind the stay of proceedings, and referred the rule, on its return, to a Judge in vacation. A lease had been promised by the Minister of Mines of the claim in dispute, to the complainants, who were to be put out by the order of the Court of Mines, to which the prohibition had been obtained, and this lease was to issue in a few days. The rule to rescind the stay of proceedings omitted to state the day of the week on which it issued, but amendment was allowed as regards this omission on terms of adjournment, in order to allow the complainants to produce affidavits, showing that they had made their application for prohibition promptly after the last proceedings in the suit. On the adjourned hearing of the rule to rescind, it was made absolute, as there was no reason why the two days' notice could not have been given, and no sufficient cause had been shown for granting the stay of proceedings on an ex parte motion. Regina v. Cope, in re Moore, 4 A.J.R., 82, 98.

Rule Nisi for—Abandonment—Costs.]—After the issue of a rule nisi for prohibition, if the respondent offers to abandon the proceedings sought to be prohibited, the relator will not be allowed his costs of proceeding further with the rule. Regina v. Leech, ex parte Shire of Tullaroop, 2 A.L.T., 19.

When Issued or When Not—Common Law.]—In order to sustain a prohibition at common law, the Court sought to be restrained must have no jurisdiction whatever in the matter. In the case of a statutory prohibition, the Superior Court can interfere, although the Judge restrained had jurisdiction, if he did not exercise that jurisdiction correctly. And where a prohibition at common law was sought to restrain the Judge of a County Court, whose order was bad on the face of it, and no attempt was made to support it, Held that, though the order could be quashed on certiorari, since there was jurisdiction in the Judge to make it, no prohibition could issue at common law. Regina v. Pohlman, ex parte Patterson, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 122.

Defendants Failing on a Point of Law Not Allowed Afterwards to Fall Back Upon Merits.]—M. and party sued W. and party before a warden to obtain possession of a claim, and the warden decided in favour of the defendants. Plaintiffs appealed to the Court of Mines, the Judge of which reserved a case for the opinion of the Chief Judge. The defendants joined in stating the case, but adduced no evidence in support of their claim, relying merely on the defects of the plaintiff's title. The Chief Judge decided, on the facts before him, in favour of the plaintiffs. When the case was returned to the Court of Mines, to have the decision of the Chief Judge registered, the defendants applied to be allowed to call evidence to rebut the plaintiff's case, but the Judge of the Court of Mines refused to allow them to do so, made a decree against the defendants, and refused a re-hearing. On rule nisi, for a prohibition to restrain the Court of Mines from enforcing the order, Held that the defendants were not entitled to fall back upon the merits of their case after the course they had taken, since that would be to allow them to have a double chance of obtaining a decision on the point of law, and of falling back afterwards on the merits; and rule discharged. Ibid.

"Person Occupying" — Official Assignee of Occupant—6 Vic., No. 7, Sec. 67; 8 Vic., No. 12, Sec. 19.]—B., tenant and occupant of a hotel and premises in Melbourne, rateable to the city rate, became insolvent, and his official assignee attached chattels of B.'s in the hotel. After the attachment, rates became due from "the persons occupying the premises," and the Mayor and Corporation distrained on the chattels for these rates. The official assignee replevied before sale. Upon a special case being stated, Held that the Act 6 Vic., No. 7, Sec. 67, only gave power to levy upon the goods of the person occupying the premises, and that the official assignee was not such a person within the meaning of that section or section 19 of 8 Vic., No. 12, and that the Mayor, &c., had no power to distrain upon the chattels attached. Goodman v. Mayor, &c., of Melbourne, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 4.

Road Act, No. 40—Rates Due from Occupant—Proof of Occupancy.]—H., collector for a road-board, sued L. for rates due on certain land, alleging that L. was the occupant as official assignee of the former proprietors. The only evidence of L.'s occupancy was that the amounts due were ascertained in the middle of September, and the fourteen days' notice of demand required by the "Road Act," No. 40, was served on L.'s agent on 26th September, and that L.'s agent informed H. that L. was in possession at this time. L.'s agent told H. that L. was in possession previously to the service of the notice, and after, and that was the only knowledge H. had of L.'s occupancy. Held that the authority to L.'s agent to enter into occupancy did not include an authority to admit the fact that he had so entered so as to bind L., and that the admission by L.'s agent was not proof of L.'s occupancy sufficient to fix L. with payment of the rates due from the occupant. Laing v. Herbert, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 155.

[Compare Sec. 257 of Act No. 506.]

Weekly Tenant—Rates Payable in Advance—Occupier—Act No. 184, Sec. 208.]—A rate was made by a borough for the year 1865-6, payable in advance by two equal moieties on 1st February, and 1st August, 1866. In the rate, an occupant of certain premises was rated, and on 1st March, 1866, a weekly tenant subject to a week's notice to quit succeeded the original occupant, and paid his share of the rates up to 31st July, 1866. The tenant had paid all rent due to his landlord up to date, and he was summoned to pay in advance the second moiety of the rate due on 1st August, 1866. He contended that on the construction of Sec. 208 of the "Municipal Corporations Act 1863" (No. 184,) that he was only liable to pay rates for the period that he actually was in occupation, and as he might receive notice to quit at any time during the coming six months, was not liable to be rated till the actual period of his occupancy was determined. The magistrates so held, and dismissed the case. On appeal, Held, that the proper construction of the section is, that the person actually in occupation when a period for which rates are made commences, is liable to pay the whole rate, and that the tenant was liable to pay it. Mayor, &c., of Ballarat East v. Davis, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 146.

Act No. 506, Secs. 19, Sub-sec. 5, 20, 285—Severance of District.]—A borough council made a rate on the 13th December, 1875, for the year ending 31st December, 1875, payable on 4th January, 1876. After 4th January, but before demand was made, that portion of the borough in which W.'s property was situated was severed and attached to the Shire of Caulfield, under Sec. 19, Sub-sec. 5. Held that, as the rate was payable when W.'s land formed part of the borough, he was liable for the rate, and that Secs. 19 and 20 only applied to adjustment of rights and liabilities between the municipalities, and that Sec. 285 did not affect W.'s indebtedness. *Woolcott v. 2. Property Rateable.

Land Exempt from Rating—Mines—Act No. 176, Sec. 181.]—All machinery on the surface of the land used for purposes strictly subservient to the working of the mine should be regarded as part of the mine, and within the exemption from rates under Sec. 181 of No. 176. Machinery for separating the metal from the ore does not, however, come within this exemption, as the process may be carried on near the mine, or far removed from it, and such machinery cannot be regarded as a necessary adjunct to the working of a mine. Davidson v. The Stawell Road Board, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 79.

[Compare Sec. 253 of Act No. 506.]

Mining Company—Rateability of Machinery—"Municipal Institutions Act 1863," No. 184, Sec. 182.]—The C. Company were assessed by the defendant corporation for property described as "Engine and battery of twelve heads, blacksmiths' shop, office, and store." Held, it appearing on the special case that the engine and battery were used exclusively for crushing quartz taken from claim, and extracting the gold, that the office was on the claim, and was the registered office of the Company, and that the blacksmiths' shop was used exclusively for keeping in working order the tools and machinery used in the mine; that the engine and battery as a necessary adjunct to the mine were exempted under Sec. 182, but aliter as to other property assessed. Clunes United Company v. Clunes Borough Council, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 96.

[Compare Sec. 253 of Act No. 506.]

"Boroughs Stat. 1869," No. 359, Sec. 197—Smithies Upon a Mine—How Amount of Rate to be Altered.]—A mining company was sued for rates. Their property comprised inter alia three smithies used for the purposes of the mine. The company did not appeal against the assessment, but resisted payment. Held that the smithies were rateable, and that in the form of proceedings the amount of the rate, if excessive, could not be altered. Carlisle Company v. Mayor of Sandhurst, 5 A.J.R., 14.

Auriferous Land—Mines on Private Property—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 253.]—The Court cannot recognise mining for gold on private land, and therefore cannot regard a gold mine on private property, worked without licence from the crown, as a "mine" for the purpose of exempting it from rating under Sec. 253 of the "Local Government Act 1874," which, in the case of gold-mining, applies only to land held under miner's right, or under lease from the Crown. Shannahan v. President, &c., of Shire of Creswick, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 342; 4 A.L.T., 85.

Auriferous Land—Tenant of Surface—Minerals.] A person in possession of the surface of auriferous lands, under a lease, reserving the minerals, and providing that any part of the surface may be resumed for the purpose of working them, can claim no exemption from rating in respect of the minerals, but is liable to be rated upon the whole value of the fee simple of the land including them. Ibid.

Description of Property—"Works."]—Describing merely as "works," land on which there are mines, is, at most, an insufficient description; and insufficiency of description in a rate does not form a valid objection to a demand for payment of such rate. If the words used may include what is rateable, as well as what is not, then they must be taken to mean property rateable. Councillors, &c., of Bulla v. Allison, 1 V.R. (L.,) 79; 1 A.J.R., 77.

Bridge—Whether Used for Public Purpose Only.]—H. built a bridge for Her Majesty on contract, and was under the contract to receive payment by collecting tolls for seven years; and was rated by a Road Board as occupant of the bridge. H. appealed, first to General Sessions and then to the Supreme Court, on the ground that the bridge belonged to the Crown and was "used for public purposes." Held that in order for bridge to be "used" for public "purposes," it must be purely and solely used for such purposes; and that, as public had a right of passage over the bridge, only on payment of a toll, it subserved private purposes also, and was therefore rateable. Hanna v. Seymour-road Board, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 93.

What Property — Flemington Racecourse.]—Under the "Victoria Racing Club Act 1871," Crown lands were leased to the Victoria Racing Club for ninety-nine years, at a peppercorn rent, for the purpose of maintaining a racecourse. Held that the land so leased was not rateable, since it was land, the property of Her Majesty, used for public purposes under Sec. 253 of the "Local Government Act 1874." On appeal to the Privy Council, Held that it was rateable, as it was not shewn that the land was used solely for a public purpose, and that individuals had no beneficial interest in it. Blackwood v. Mayor, &c., of Essendon and Flemington, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 87; on appeal, 2 App. Ca. 574; 46 L.J., P.C. 98; 38 L.T., 625; 25 W.R., 834.

Semble, that a racecourse, for admission to which the public are charged, is not land used for a public purpose so as to exempt the occupiers from rates under the "Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 253. Mayor, &c., of Essendon and Flemington v. Blackwood, 2 App. Ca. 574; 46 L.J., P.C. 98; 36 L.T., 625; 25 W.R., 834.

Police Inspector's Quarters—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 253.]—The liability to, or exemption from, rating under Sec. 253 of the "Local Government Act 1874," of the quarters provided by the Government for one of its officers, depends upon whether it is optional with the officer to reside in the quarters provided for him by the Government. If he is obliged to occupy, as a part of his duty, he is not the occupier, and the premises are not rateable; if he is not under such an objection, he does occupy, and the premises are rateable. Mayor, &c., of Sandhurst v. Chomley, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 207.

Building Vested in the Ministsr of Public Instruction—Not Rateable.]—Shire of Warnambool v. Rawe, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 347; 6 A.L.T., 164, see post column 1269.

Resident on Railway Reserve—Act No. 184, Sec. 182.]—R. was an engine-fitter employed on Victorian Railways, and "had permission to reside" on the railway reserve at Sandhurst; the rate book in the column "Owner" had the entry "The Crown." The magistrates ordered R. to pay the rate levied. On rule nisi for a prohibition, Held that under Act No. 184 it is the property which is made rateable or exempted and not the person; that R. was not exempted under Sec. 182, as he was in occupation for himself, and not for the Crown. Rule nisi discharged. Regina v. M'Lachlan, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 57.

[Compare Sec. 253 of Act No. 506.]

Act No. 289, Secs. 4, 101—"Railway."]—The Court held that under Sec. 4 the word "railway" includes all within the railway fence, and that, therefore, a railway servant occupying a tenement on a railway reserve was exempted from paying rates under Sec. 101. Rule absolute for prohibition. Regina v. Mayor of Sandhurst, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 197.

3. Valuation of Property and Assessment and Apportionment of Rate.

Act No. 506, Secs. 264, 269.]—The "Local Government Act," No. 506, shows a distinct general intent that all rates shall be based on valuations made by valuers under declaration, which are to be binding unless appealed from, and municipal corporations have no power under Sec. 264 to make any alterations in such valuations. Attorney-General v. Shire of Hampden, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 138.

See S.C., ante columns 219, 220.

Mode of Assessing a Gas Company's Property—Act No. 184, Sec. 191.]—Where a gas company has its retorts and gas works in one borough, and its mains and pipes extending over a number of boroughs, the proper basis on which to estimate the valuation is to take the gross receipts, deduct from them the gross expenditure, and so arrive at the profits, and the average of these profits extending over a short period of years will give the net annual value of the whole property; this net annual value is to be apportioned over the whole number of boroughs through which the pipes or mains pass, the value in each borough being ascertained by the value of the land on which the pipes rest, regard being had to the purpose for which it is granted. Mayor, &c., of Fitzroy v. Collingwood Gas Company, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 72; 1 A.J.R., 82.

[Compare Sec. 265 of Act No. 506.]

Valuation of Property—£5 per cent. on Capital Value—"Shires Statute," No. 358, Sec. 209.]—Section 209 of the "Shires Statute" is compulsory, and under that section property must be assessed at not less than £5 per cent. on its capital value, irrespective of its yearly rental. Shire of Metcalfe v. Degraves, 1 A.J.R., 124.

[Compare Sec. 265 of Act No. 506.]

Valuation—Improved Land—"Shires Stat. 1869" (No. 358,) Sec 209.]—Improved land which could not be let at a profit is "other rateable property" within Sec. 209 of the "Shires Stat. 1869," (No 358,) and is therefore to be valued at not less than 5 per cent on its fair capital value. Shire of Bungaree v. Ballarat and East Ballarat Water Commission, 4 A.J.R., 80.

[Compare Sec. 265 of Act. No. 506.]

Valuation — Improved Property — Act No. 358, Sec. 208.]—Under the last proviso of Sec. 208, all improved property must be rated at five per cent. on its capital value; and therefore improved property in a borough must be so rated, although its annual rent would not produce so much as five per cent. on the capital value. Bennett v. Mayor of East Collingwood, 4 A.J.R., 81.

Semble, it is no objection to the validity of a rate that the rate is struck before the valuation is made. Menzies v. Councillors of Newstead, 1 V.R. (L.,) 88; 1 A.J.R., 97.

Water Commission—How Rated—Property in Different Districts—"Shires Statute 1869," Sec. 209.]—The property of a Water Commission in any district is not to be rated by taking the capital value of the land, and adding to it the amount expended on works in that district, since the outlay of capital furnishes no criterion of value. The principle of rating, whether the works are or are not all in one shire or borough, is the same. If an apparatus occupied by one occupier, consisting of several parts, lies in one shire, the rate is on the whole and is received by that shire; and if such an apparatus lies in several shires, the occupier is liable for the same amount of rateable value, but it must be apportioned among the several shires in which the apparatus lies. To ascertain of what the apportionment should be made, a hypothetical tenant should be assumed, with permanent occupation of the whole, with all requisite capital and land, with sub-tenants of the profitable part at a rack rent, and of the rest as contractors at a remuneration; that, from the gross receipts of the commissioners, deductions should be made for working expenses, insurance, maintenance, &c., for interest on working capital, at the rate of from five to eight per cent., for tenants' profit at from fifteen to twenty-five per cent. on working capital, for remuneration for superintendence of the whole apparatus, for interest on the value of the stock of plant necessarily kept on hand, at the rate of about ten per cent., and for shire and borough rates chargeable; and the balance, after such deductions, would be the "rent at which the same might reasonably be expected to be let from year to year, free of all usual tenants' rates and taxes, and deducting therefrom the probable annual costs of insurance and other expenses (if any) necessary to maintain such property in a state necessary to command such rent" ("Shires Stat. 1869," Sec. 209;") and no deduction should be made for interest on borrowed money. For the purpose of distributing the rateable value thus arrived at between the different shires, the works must be divided into the parts directly productive of rateable value, e.g., service pipes, and those which are only indirectly productive, i.e., the rest of the works bringing the water to the service pipes; and the latter must be rated as mere land, buildings, and fixtures, with some additional value from their application to such purposes; the latter rates (of the indirectly productive parts) must then be deducted from the net annual value arrived at as above; and the deduction must be distributed among the respective shires in which such part lies, according to the value, and not according to the quantity of the land; the residue of the rateable value arising from the directly productive parts should be distributed to each shire in which such parts lie, in such proportion as the gross receipts in each district bear to the gross receipts in all the districts. If the value so arrived at be less than five per cent. upon the fair capital value of the property, the case is within the last proviso of Sec. 209 of the "Shires Stat. 1869," and the property must, under that proviso, be rated at five per cent. on the fair capital value of the fee simple thereof. Shire of Bungaree v. Ballarat Water Commission, 4 A.J.R., 160, 187.

Apportionment of Rates of Waterworks—Act No. 358, Sec 209.]—Where a Justice had calculated the apportionment of rates, and arrived at the "fair capital value," omitting to notice the amount of profits made by commissioners, and not allowing any increase on the value of buildings and fixtures by reason of their capacity to be used for water supply, the Court refused to disturb his decision. Shire of Bungaree v. Ballarat Water Commission, 5 A.J.R., 79.

Apportionment of Rates—Particular Period—No Particular Period—Act No. 176, Secs. 183, 208.]—The Legislature, in passing Act No. 176, contemplated (Sec. 183) the making of rates for "a particular period," and the making of them for "no particular period." Sec. 208 only gives apportionment of rates made for "a particular period," and the title of the rate alone must be looked at for its description in this respect. Declaration seeking to recover a portion of a rate. Plea that the rate was intituled, "An assessment to the general district rate made this 16th day of December, 1863, after the rate of twelve-tenths (sic) in the pound, by virtue of Act No. 176." On demurrer to the plea, Held that it was a rate made for "no particular period," and demurrer overruled, and judgment for defendant. Springfield Road Board v. Clarke, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 53.

Apportionment of Rates—Act No. 184.]—The plaintiff, Borough Council, sued G., as occupant, for proportionate part of the "general town rate for the year 1365-6." During G.'s occupation no notice was served on him, he had paid his rent and left the house, and after he had so left he was served with a notice to pay the rates sued for. The case being remitted to the magistrate, it appeared on restatement that the two rates sued for were the following: Rate made 27th February, 1865, for year ending 30th November, 1865; rate made 18th December, 1865, for year ending 30th November, 1866, and that G. had left on the 10th January, 1866, having been in residence since 17th July, 1865. Held that G. was liable for his proportion of the first rate up to 30th November, 1865, but not for any portion of the second rate. Mayor, &c., of Ballarat East v. Gaskell, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 51.

Assessment—18 Vic. No. 15, Sec. 30.]—The words "fair average value" in Sec. 30, mean a fair average during a number of single years, and not an average number of terms greater than a single year. Gurner v. Municipal Council of St. Kilda, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 124.

[See now Sec. 265 of Act No. 506.]

Assessment of Rate—Railway Company—Act No. 506, Sec. 265.]—A railway company appealed to Petty Sessions from a rate. It contended that it was entitled to a deduction—in addition to an allowance for the annual repair of movable stock, rails and framework, so as to maintain the line in an efficient state—of certain other allowances for the ultimate renewal and reproduction of the permanent way, for which it had reserved, out of the annual revenue, a fund as for all contingencies. The Justices disallowed the allowances for reproduction and renewal. Held that the allowance for renewal was correct, there being nothing to shew that the same deductions were made twice over; that if the use of the rolling-stock is taken into consideration as enhancing the rateable value of the line, repairs to the rolling stock should be allowed. Melbourne and Hobson's Bay United Railway Company v. Mayor of Prahran, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 206.

4 Validity of Rate.

Formality of Rate Book—Act No. 176, Sec. 187.]—Where a shire summoned P. for rates, and it was objected that the rate was bad, because it was not in the form required by Act No. 176, in three respects, viz., (1) that the amount in each column was not added up, and set down at the foot of each column; (2) there was no date to the signature of the signing councillors; (3) the president and councillors had not added to their signatures any designation importing membership, Held that none of the objections were fatal. Shire of Ballan v. Partridge, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 245.

[Compare Sec. 262 of Act No. 506.]

Validity—Evidence of—Rate Books.]—The rate books of a Road Board are, under Sec. 206 of the "Local Government Act" No. 176, merely prima facie, and not conclusive evidence of the validity of a rate. Lindsay v. Tullaroop District Board, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 61.

Sec. 287 of Act No. 506 Expressly Makes the Rate Book only prima facie Evidence.

When Rate Valid—Advertising Notice of—Act No. 176, Sec. 186.]—Sec. 186 of Act No. 176, is only directory and not mandatory, and a rate assessed, even without notice being advertised in pursuance of that section, is a good rate. Shire of McIvor v. Nolan, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 259, N.C. 68.

Any person aggrieved by non-compliance with the section may institute proceedings against councillors for a misdemeanour. Ibid.

Semble, a rate struck before the valuation of the property on which it depends is good. Menzies v. Councillors of Newstead, 1 V.R. (L.,) 88; 1 A.J.R., 97. Sub-nom., Shire of Newstead v. Menzies.

Amount of Rate—Not Exceeding 2s. in the £—Act No. 184, Sec. 183.]—The "one year" of the Act, No. 184, Sec. 183, reckons from the 1st of January to the 31st of December in each calendar year. Therefore, where a rate had been struck on the 26th October, 1866, and a previous rate on the 16th November, 1865, and the two rates struck within twelve months of each other, together amounted to more than 2s. in the £ of the net annual value of the property, but only one rate was struck in each of the calendar years 1865, 1866, and such rate separately was under 2s. in the £, Held that the rates were good under Sec. 183 of No. 184. Scantlebury v. The Mayor of Tarnagulla, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 69.

[Compare Sec. 254 of Act No. 506, where 2s. 6d. in the £ is the amount.]

"Retrospective" Rate—Act No. 184, Secs. 186, 200—Ratepayer Omitting to Appeal.]—A general rate was levied by the M. Corporation. The corporation sued N. in the County Court for rates. The corporation had obtained an overdraft from a bank of £793, and the "estimate" showed as the first item of "expenditure" a sum of £1224 6s. 6d. "by bank overdraft," and so far the rate was to have a retrospective effect in paying off the difference, viz., £431. In the County Court, N. objected to the rate as being invalid as being retrospective. The County Court held that the rate was pro tanto invalid, but not wholly invalid; but that as N. had omitted to avail himself of the right of appeal to General Sessions, given by Sec. 200 of the Act, his objection to the validity of the rate should be overruled. On appeal, Held that "retrospective" rates were forbidden as effectually under Act No. 184, Sec. 186, as under No. 176, Sec. 184; and that, as this objection was not capable of being amended or set right on appeal under Sec. 200, N.'s right to object was not waived by his failing to appeal. Appeal allowed judgment to be entered for N. in the County Court. Newman v. Mayor, &c., of Maryborough, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 153.

[Compare Secs. 260 and 276 of Act No. 506.]

Retrospective Rate—"Waterworks Loan Amendment Act," No. 500, Sec. 6.] — The Water Commissioners had made a by-law on the 7th January, 1875, purporting to make a rate for the year ending 30th September, 1875, and sued W. before the justices to recover such a rate for the half-year ending 30th March, 1875. Held that the by-law was valid, and the rate made under it, though retrospective, was good. Semble, per Fellows, J., that a "year" in Act No. 500 means a calendar year. Clunes Water Commission v. Winchester, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 298.

How Council Should Provide for Expenditurs by Levying Rates.]—Attorney-General v. Mayor of St. Kilda, ante column 218.

Rate Made to Satisfy Past Liability—"Local Government Act 1874," Secs. 248, 260.]—The "Local Government Act 1874," Secs. 248, 260, authorises the making of a rate to satisfy past lawful debts and liabilities. Regina v. Oakleigh Shire, ex parte Wilson, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 67; 5 A.L.T, 195, sub nom Wilson v. Shire of Oakleigh.

W., who had obtained judgment against a municipal corporation, levied execution, but obtained little more than would satisfy the expenses of the levy. W. thereupon obtained a rule nisi for a mandamus to compel the council to make a rate for the purpose of satisfying such judgment, such rate, together with the other rate previously made for the current year, not to amount to more than 2s. 6d. in the £. Held that the rule should be made absolute. Ibid.

5. Recovery of Rates and Procedure and Practice thereon.

Complaint for Non-payment of—Period of Limitation—"Municipal Corporations Act 1863," Sec. 205—"Justices of the Peace Stat. 1865," Sec. 51.]—A borough rate was struck on the 5th of May, 1865, a demand was served on B., in writing, under Sec. 205 of No. 184 ("Municipal Corporations Act 1863," on the 4th April, 1866, and B. failed to pay for the space of fourteen days after such demand. In August, 1866, a complaint against B. for non-payment was heard before justices, who dismissed the complaint for want of jurisdiction on the ground that the complaint was not made under the Act No. 267 (Justices of the Peace Stat. 1865") Sec. 51, within twelve months from the time when the matter of such complaint arose. Held, on appeal, that a demand being necessary under the Act No. 184, the period of limitation ran, not from the striking of the rate, but from the expiration of fourteen days after demand in writing; and that the period not having expired, the justices had jurisdiction. Mayor, &c., of Sandhurst v. Broderick, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.) 108.

[Compare Sec. 285 of Act No. 506.]

Suing for—Complaint Must be in Council's Name.] The collector of a borough council cannot, under Sec. 73 of No. 267, sue for rates in the Police Court in his own name; but the Council must be named as the complainant. Regina v. Carr, 1 V.R. (L.,) 1; 1 A.J.R., 23.

Corporation Not Suing in Full Corporate Name—Not Barred.]—Hearn v. Council of Borough of Essendon, ante column 220.

Council Must Sue as Complainant—Act No. 506, Sec. 285.]—A summons was taken out in the name of a collector of rates as complainant. Held that the summons in that form was bad, that the collector might demand the rate, but section 285 only authorised the council to recover, and that the collector was not entitled to sue as complainant. Regina v. Templeton ex parte England, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 305.

Property Exempt Included in a Rate.]—On a complaint in the Police Court for rates, if it appear on the face of the rate that that has been rated which is exempt, the justices can take notice of such an objection. Councillors, &c., of Bulla v. Allison, 1 V.R. (L.,) 79; 1 A.J.R., 77.

Complaint for Rates—Different Rates—Amendment—"Local Government Act 1876, Sec. 285.]—The inclusion of the amount of several rates made under different Acts in one complaint before justices, is not authorised by Sec. 285 of the "Local Government Act 1874." The Court will, however, on a rule to prohibit an order made for payment of rates on such a complaint, amend the order. Regina v. Mayor of Richmond, ex parte Hegarty, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 437; 2 A.L.T., 87.

No Summons for Payment of Rate—Notice that Warrant would be Applied for not Sufficient.]—T. was rated, but declined to pay. A notice was then served upon him by the rate collector to the effect that a warrant would be applied for against him, and requiring him to show cause why execution should not issue for the amount and costs. T. did not attend, and under a warrant his goods were seized. T. then brought an action of replevin. Held that the notice was not equivalent to a summons, and, without a summons to pay, the justices could not issue a warrant; and that as no summons had been issued the justices could not in replevin justify under the warrant. Judgment for plaintiff. Taylor v. Patterson, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 32.

Semble, per Stawell, C. J.—As to resisting payment of rates, a resident in a municipal district who derives all the benefits therefrom, ought not to be allowed to impugn the incorporation of the municipal council, and the creation of the municipality. Ibid.

[Compare Sec. 288 of Act No. 506.]

Demand—Purchaser's Liability for Rates Under Prior Occupancy—Prima facie Case.]—B. purchased rateable property, and was sued by the corporation for rates unpaid for eleven years, which had all accrued due before B purchased the property. The corporation proved the rates by the rate books, and the town clerk and rate collector deposed, from the books and documents and inquiries, that, to his belief, the rates had not been paid. A demand of payment, in compliance with Sec. 229 of the "Boroughs Stat.," was proved to have been made upon B., and non-payment by B. for 14 days after demand was also proved. Held that the corporation had made a prima facie case, and were entitled to recover unless B. could prove that the former owner had paid the rates. Mayor, &c., of Newtown and Chilwell v. Batten, 2 V.R. (L.,) 142; 2 A.J.R., 86.

[Compare Sec. 285 of Act No. 506.]

Demand—Owner for Time Being Liable for Past Arrears without Previous Demand—Act No. 506, Sec. 294.]—Mayor of Wangaratta v. Meighan, ante column 1258.

Demand for Payment—No. 184, Sec. 205.]—Payment of shire rates cannot be enforced by justices unless a demand in writing be made upon the ratepayer before summons, in accordance with Sec. 205 of No. 184. Regina v. Thompson, 1 V.R. (L.,) 2; 1 A.J.R., 23.

[Compare Sec. 285 of Act No. 506.]

Demand for Payment of Rates.]—A demand for payment of rates is sufficiently served by sending it through the post, properly addressed, if it reach the person to whom it is addressed. M'Kenzie v. Shire of Swan Hill, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 299.

Demand for Rates—Sufficient Service what is—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 290.]—Placing a demand for payment of rates in the post, properly addressed, affords prima facie sufficient evidence of service within the "Local Government Act 1874," Sec 290. Regina v. Mayor, &c., of Hotham, ex parte Bent, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 409.

What is Sufficient Demand within the "Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 290.]—If a demand for payment of rates give sufficient information, having regard to the knowledge already possessed by the person to whom it is addressed, to enable him to ascertain the amount really due, it will not be vitiated by want of form or claiming too much, and will be sufficient demand under Sec. 290 of the "Local Government Act 1874." Ibid.

Demand—Notice to Ratspayer—Act No. 506, Secs. 286, 290.]—S., in September 1879, entered into occupation of certain premises at a time when there were arrears of rent from 1875. A demand was made for all the rates, and S. only consented to pay for the time he had been in occupation. It appeared that the demand had not been made by personal service or by notice in the ways provided for in Sec. 290, and the Council relied upon Sec. 286. Held that the notices in Sec. 286 did not refer to the notices in Sec. 290, but to the notices before making the rate and as the notices required by Sec. 290 had not been given, S. was only liable for the rates during the time he had been in occupation. Schafer v. Mayor of Sandridge, 3 A.L.T., 41.

Defences Available—Rateability of Property, not Rate Itself—Act No. 506, Sec. 285.]—R. was rated in respect of a building vested in the Minister of Public Instruction, a portion of which R. occupied. Held, on appeal, that under Sec. 285 by necessary implication, a person may complain of the liability to be rated in respect of the person or the property, though he cannot assail the rate itself, and that he could raise, as a defence in proceedings to recover the rate, the fact that theproperty was not rateable; and appeal allowed. Shire of Warrnambool v. Rawe, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 347; 6 A.L.T., 164.

Enforcing Payment—Objection cannot be taken at Hearing by Justices—Person Sued must Appeal.]—On a proceeding before a justice, to enforce payment of a rate, the ratepayer cannot raise the objection that the valuation on which the rate depended had not been made till after the rate had been struck; the principle being applicable that, when the ratepayer had an opportunity of taking the proper course, viz., appealing to the General Sessions and getting the rate quashed, and has not done so, he cannot be allowed to take an objection which he might have taken on appeal. Menzies v. Councillors, &c., of Newstead, 1 V.R. (L.,) 88; 1 A.J.R., 97, sub. nom. Shire of Newstead v. Menzies.

Failure to Appeal—Objection not Capable of Being Set Right by Appeal—Person not Prejudiced by Failing to Appeal.]—Newman v. Mayor of Maryborough, ante column 1266.

Act No. 359, Secs. 216, 217, 219—Person not having Appealed to General Sessions Against the Rate Entitled to Resist Payment.]—H. was assessed for rates for property within defendant borough, and was summoned before justices for payment. He proved that he was not the occupier of any land within the borough and the justices made an order for payment. H. had not appealed to General Sessions against the rate. Held, that as to Secs 216, 217, and 219, there was a distinction between exemption and absence of liability, and where a person was not in occupation, he need not take any notice of the rating. Appeal allowed. Heller v. Mayor of Essendon, 5 A.J.R., 165.

Appeal against Rate to Petty Sessions—Stay of Proceedings—"Shires Stat. 1869" (No. 358,) Secs. 217, 218.]—Although an appeal to General Sessions under Sec. 218 of the "Shires Stat. 1869," No. 358, on account of any matters omitted from or included in the rate does not prevent the recovery of any such rate, yet an appeal to Petty Sessions, under Sec. 217 of the Act against the assessment of a rate, operates as a stay of proceedings, and, pending the appeal, no action can be taken by the shire council for the recovery of the rate appealed against. Shire of Bungaree v. Ballarat Water Commission, 4 A.J.R., 158.

Who may Appeal—Act No. 184, Sec. 199.]—H., the owner of certain property, had it assessed at a high value in order to qualify himself to be a councillor, to which office he was elected. B., another ratepayer, and not the owner, appealed against the assessment as being too high. Held, reversing the justices, that B. was a person "aggrieved" within the meaning of No. 184, Sec. 199, and might maintain an appeal against the assessment. Brown v. Mayor, &c., of Footscray, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 168.

When Notice of Appeal should be Given—Act No. 176, Sec. 199.]—G. appealed to justices, under the Act No. 176, Sec. 199, against a road rate. The respondents (before the justices) objected that the notice of appeal was not given in time. A notice had been originally given which fixed no date for the hearing, and at the hearing the objection was made that the notice had no date. The justices adjourned, to allow another notice with a date for the hearing to be given, and a second notice with a date was given. On this date the appellant attended, and took part in the proceedings. The second notice was objected to on the ground that it was too late—more than a month after the rate. The first notice had been within the month. The justices heard the appeal, and decided against the rate. They stated a case on the appeal of the Road Board. On the appeal, the Road Board took a third objection, that the original notice did not show the appellant to be the party within the Act. Held that the respondents waived the first objection as to the want of date at the adjourned hearing, and were stopped from taking the second, and could not take the third, which might have been taken at the original and adjourned hearings, at the present hearing. Corio Road Board v. Galletly, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 85.

[Compare Sec. 273 of Act No. 506.]

Notice of Appeal—Jurisdiction of Justices.]—A notice of appeal against a rate given within one month from the time the rate was made, but which gives, as the date for hearing the appeal, a time outside of one month from the date of making the rate, is a good notice of appeal within the Act No. 176, Sec. 199, and Justices in Petty Sessions have jurisdiction to hear such an appeal. Regina v. M'Lachlan, 3 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 120.

[Compare Sec. 273 of Act No. 506.]

What Notice should Contain—Hearing—No. 176, Sec. 199.]—A notice of appeal to justices in Petty Sessions from a road rate, under the Act No. 176, Sec. 199, should name a date for the hearing, and the hearing may be the first after the day named, on which the justices actually sit in Petty Sessions. The notice of appeal should also show, on the face of it, that the person appealing against the rate is a party aggrieved thereby within the meaning of the Act No. 176, Sec. 199; and semble, that if the notice describe such person as the "owner or lessee," and not as the "occupant" of the land, he will not appear to be a party aggrieved within the Act. Corio Road Board v. Galletly, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 85.

Time for Appeal—No Court of Sessions—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 281.]—Where, on an appeal from a rate, there was no Court of Sessions sitting within the time directed by the "Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 281, as that to which the appeal was to be made, a time for the hearing of the appeal was allowed to be fixed at the next available Sessions. Melbourne and Hobson's Bay United Railway Company v. Town of Richmond and Borough of Sandridge, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 81.

Notice of Appeal, Act No. 506, Sec. 274.]—A notice of appeal to General Seasions set out various grounds as to misdeacription of the property. Held that the proper test as to the sufficiency of a notice of appeal is whether the respondents were actually, or might reasonably have been misled, and, if the property was described in the rate book before the justices that was sufficient to enable them to alter the rate. Russell v. Shire of Leigh, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 199; 1 A.L.T., 18.

Jurisdiction of Justices on Appeal—Act No. 176, Sec. 199.]—The words in Sec. 199, Act No. 176, "Court of Petty Sessions holden nearest to such rateable property," are mandatory, and are descriptive of certain justices, and give jurisdiction to those alone. Regina v. McLachlan, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 171.

[Compare Sec. 273 of Act No. 506.]

Jurisdiction of Justices Under Sec. 31 of Act No. 18—Only as to Amount of Assessment.]—Blair v. Council of Ballarat, ante column 752.

7. Other Points.

Action for Excessive Rate Paid Under Protest—Money Had and Received.]—A. Road Board demanded payment of a road rate from K. The rate had been properly struck, but K. contended that certain pasture land, on which a lower assessment was proper, was treated as arable land, on which a higher rate was proper. K. paid the whole demand, under protest, and brought an action in the County Court for the excess due to him, as money had and received to his use. On appeal by the Road Board, Held that K. could not have quashed the rate on certiorari, or have replevied for the excess paid under protest; that K. was bound to tender the amount really due, and might, after such tender have brought his action if a distress were issued for any excess beyond the sum really due and tendered; that "money had and received" did not lie in such a case, as the validity of a rate could not be inquired into in such an action; and that money had and received, not lying, the judgment for K. was erroneous; and appeal allowed. Belfast Road Board v. Knox, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 133.

Mandamus to Rate Collector to Compel Acceptance of Amount to which Justices had Reduced the Rate—"Shires Statute 1869," (No. 358,) Secs. 57, 68, 220.]—Rule nisi for a mandamus to compel the rate collector of the Shire of R. to receive the sum of £114 tendered to him in payment of rates due on the property of T. T. was the owner of land in the Shire, which was rated by the Council at £2800, on which, at 1s. in the £1, the rates amounted to £140. T. appealed to Petty Sessions, and when the case was first called on, it was adjourned for a month, and at the adjourned hearing there were no representatives on the part of the Council. The justices reduced the rates to £114. Sec. 220 of No.

358 requires that an amendment of a rate by the justices should be made by altering the sum at which any person is rated therein. Notice had been served on the Shire secretary to produce the rate book, but it was not produced, so that the justices could not enter the reduced rate therein. T. tendered the sum of £114 to the Shire treasurer and to the rate collector, but neither would take it. Sec. 57 provides that, to entitle a person to be on the ratepayers' roll, he must have paid his rates before the 20th June in each year, and no person not entitled to be in the ratepayers' roll could act as a councillor. Held that the rule ought not to go, as it would lead to nothing, since the words in the Act being "paid," and not "paid or tendered," and the money not having been paid before the 20th June, a mandamus would be useless. Semble, that T. would have an action against the rate collector for not taking the rates. Regina v. Black, ex parte Twomey, 5 A.J.R., 82.

RATIFICATION.

Whsn Impoesible.]—A father allowed his son, who had the same name as himself, to obtain possession of the title deeds of lands belonging to the father. The son represented himself as owner of the land, and mortgaged it to first and second mortgagees. The father recognised and confirmed the first mortgage, but refused to recognise the second. Held that no title passed by either of the mortgages by the son. Ettershank v. Zeal, 8 V.L.R. Of Trespass—How Effected.]—A wrongful act, in order to be capable of being ratified, so as to make the ratifier liable for the wrong, must be an act done by a person professing to act for the use or benefit, or by the authority of the party who is afterwards said to have ratified it. Maudoit v. Ross, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 264, 266; 6 A.L.T., 104.

Evidence of Ratification.]—Evidence of ratification consists of proof of acts or words showing an election of the ratifier to adopt as his own act the act of another known to him, and done by that other for his benefit or in his name. Mere knowledge of the act of the agent is not ratification (though knowledge is a necessary element of ratification,) except where there is an intention to adopt the act at all events and under whatever circumstances. There must be evidence either of participation in the advantage resulting from the act, or of express approbation of the act. Ibid.

RECEIVER.

1. Appointment and Discharge.

Motion for Appointment.]—After an order at the hearing, giving liberty to amend for want of parties, and before amendment, a motion by plaintiffs refused as unprecedented. Gladstone v. Ball, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 9.

In what Cases Appointed—In Suit for Specific Performance where ex parte Injunction has been Granted.]—In a suit for specific performance of a clause for repurchase in an indenture, where an ex parte injunction had been granted against the defendant, the plaintiff moved for appointment of a receiver, and the defendant alleged that the indenture was wrongly prepared in containing the clause of repurchase. Held that the document must be taken prima facie to express the intention of the parties, and that a receiver was necessary for the purpose of carrying out the injunction. Order made. Shaw v. Wright, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 57, 64.

In what Cases Appointed — Partnership — Insanity of a Partner Between Decree for a Dissolution and Report of Master.]—In a suit for dissolution by an insane partner and his committee, a dissolution and accounts had been decreed, no attempt being then made for appointment of a receiver. On application by motion for a receiver before Master's report, Held that no case was made, and motion refused. Gregory v. Welch, 3 A.J.R., 43.

Partnership.]—Where the defendants had improperly excluded the plaintiff from participating in winding up a partnership, and had treated the assets and effects as their own, a receiver was appointed, notwithstanding that the appointment was injurious to all parties. Boyle v. Willis, 1 A.L.T., 189.

Equitable Execution by Appointment of a Receiver—Act No. 761 ("Judicature Act 1883") Sec. 9, Sub-sec. 8.]—Before the Court will grant equitable execution by appointing a receiver, it requires to be satisfied that the plaintiff has tried all he can to get satisfaction at law, and that means he must do all he can in Victoria to get satisfaction of his judgment. Ettershank v. Russell, 6 A.L.T., 140.

Appointment of—Abuse by Trustee of his Discretion.]—See Phelan v. Eaton, 3 V.R. (E.,) 13; 3 A.J.R., 6, post under TRUST AND TRUSTEE. Rights and Powers.

Who may Move for Appointment of New Receiver—Annuitant—Costs.]—In a suit a decree had been made for the administration of the testator's estate. Prior to the decree, a receiver had been appointed who, about twelve months since, left the colony. The testator's widow, a defendant in the suit, was entitled to an annuity charged on the estate, but which had been left unpaid since the receiver's departure. Motion by the annuitant, on notice to the plaintiff, for the appointment of a new receiver. Motion granted; the applicant to have her costs of the motion; the plaintiff though rightly served with notice of the motion, not to have his costs, since it was through his neglect in leaving matters as they were with reference to the receiver that the necessity for the motion arose. Pittman v. Townshend, 1 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 140.

By Whom He should be Proposed.]—The attorney, under power of one of two co-plaintiffs, not the solicitor on the record, proposed a receiver in the Master's office in opposition to the receiver proposed by the solicitor on the record. Held that the Master was right in refusing to receive the proposal as on behalf of one of the plaintiffs. Graham v. Graham, 2 V.R. (E.,) 145, 149; 2 A.J.R., 100.

Who should be Appointed.]—It is undesirable to appoint as receiver, a person who has acted as agent of the defendant in the management of the property. Ibid.

Who should be Appointed.]—A receiver ought to be indifferent between all parties to the cause, and therefore a motion for appointment of the accountant in the office of the plaintiff's solicitor as receiver refused. Hunter v. Hunter, 4 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 17.

Discharge.]—A receiver will not be discharged immediately upon the nomination of new trustees. The estate must be conveyed and the new trustees must execute the deed before he will be discharged. Lane v. Phelan, 2 A.J.R., 10.

2. Powers, Functions, and Liabilities.

Powers and Functions of.]—The functions of a receiver are not at all analagous to those of an official assignee. A receiver's duties are those of collection, not of distribution. It is not his business to set about adjusting the creditors' accounts, and if he does so he misconceives his duties as a receiver. Moreton v. Harley, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 74, 79.

Partnership Suit—Appointment of Receiver—Undertaking by Defendant during Pendency of Motion—Extent of Receiver Order.] — On 20th May notice of motion for a receiver was given. On that day the motion stood over, the defendant undertaking not to sell. On 27th May order for receiver made. On 15th May—orders having been previously given—a sale of property was made to the net value of £1000, of which £800 had been received by the defendant before 27th May, the rest subsequently. On motion by plaintiff, that defendant should pay whole of this amount to the receiver, Held that the undertaking not to sell did not prevent the defendant receiving the proceeds of a sale theretofore made; that the £200 received since 27th May was to be paid over to the receiver. Held also, that a receiver order carries existing chattel property and debts continuing due to a firm at the time the order is made, but not money in the hands of one of the partners, which, on an account taken, he might be subject to hand over to one of the other partners. Moreton v. Harley, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 74.

Powers of—To Carry on Business.]—Permission will not be given to a receiver of an intestate's estate to carry on a business, although it has been carried on by an intestate and his administration, on the ground that the Court ought not, through one of its officers, to carry on a mercantile establishment. Graham v. Graham, 2 V.R. (E.,) 145, 148; 2 A.J.R., 104.

Receiver of Infant's Property has no Power to Sell or Convey under Sec. 6 of "Lands Compensation Statute 1869."]—The Board of Land and Works served a notice to treat under the Acts No. 415 and No. 344, upon an infant's solicitor, which he accepted. A receiver had been appointed of the infant's property. Upon motion on behalf of the infant, that the receiver might be at liberty to treat with the board as to the purchase-money, Held that the solicitor had no right to accept service of the notice, and that a receiver was not included among the persons authorised to sell, convey, release, &c., by Sec. 6 of the "Lands Compensation Stat. 1869," No. 344; but that he was a mere agent of the Court, concerned only with the rents and profits for the time being, not with the inheritance. Hunter v. Hunter, 4 A.J.R., 24.

Upon a subsequent application, the receiver was appointed special guardian of the infant, for the purpose of selling and conveying to the Board of Land and Works. Ibid. 65.

Power to Grant Leases of Infants' Estate.—The general power of the receiver in an administration suit to grant leases of the property of infant parties extends to any number of years during the minority; and the Master may, without an express reference by the Court, approve of a lease for more than one year, if during the minority. Brock v. M'Phail, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 12.

Receiver of Infant's Estate—Land under "Land Act 1862," Sec. 23.]—A receiver of infant's real estate extended to land selected under the "Land Act 1862," Sec. 23. Brock v. M'Phail, 3 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 121.

Land Sold under a Decree—Motion for Leave to Receiver to bring Ejectment against Person in Possession, and for Person in Possession to give up Title-deeds—Costs.]—A decree was made for the sale of certain real estate, of which one P. had been seized, and a receiver had been appointed in the suit. The defendant was the infant heir-at-law of P. Mrs. P., widow of P., and mother of defendant, and who was not a party to the suit, occupied some of the property directed to be sold, and refused either to attorn to the receiver or give up possession. She also refused to deliver up the title deeds, which were in her possession. Motions for liberty to the receiver to bring ejectment against Mrs. P., and for an order upon Mrs. P. to bring into Court, for the purpose of carrying out the decree, the title-deeds in her possession relating to the property directed to be sold. Separate notices of each of these motions had been served on Mrs. P. Chapman, J., made an order as to the first motion, as of course; and as to the second, ordered that Mrs. P., within a week after service of the order upon her, deliver into Court all deeds exclusively relating to the title of P. to the property directed to be sold. No order was made as to costs, because an unnecessary notice was served upon Mrs. P. as to the first motion, His Honour considering that the costs of that might be set off against the costs of the other. Royce v. Parker, 1 W. &. W. (E.,) 267.

Attornment to Receiver.]—The Court has no jurisdiction to order a person in possession of land, to attorn to a receiver, where the tenancy is not clear, or where a right of purchase is set up by such person. Brydon v. Innes, 5 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 189.

Appointment as against a Person Subsequently made a Party to Suit.]—Motion for an order for H. and B. to deliver certain property to a receiver. A receiver was appointed before H. was made a party to the suit. Held that the Court could not make an order as against H. unless and until an application was made extending the appointment of the receiver to H. as a new defendant. M'Kay v. Bell, 3 A.J.R., 53.

RECOGNISANCES.

To Prosecute Appeal—Appearance—Estreating.]—C. was convicted before justices, and sentenced to six months' imprisonment. He appealed to the General Sessions, and H. and T. became his sureties to "prosecute the appeal with effect." At the hearing, the Chairman of General Sessions estreated the recognisances, C. not appearing in person, but counsel appearing on his behalf. Held that there is no practice to appear in person on a recognisance to prosecute an appeal, and that the recognisances were improperly estreated. Sed aliter in the case of a recognisance to hear judgment. Regina v. Hull and Trevarrow, 3 V.R. (L.,) 143; 3 A.J.R., 29.

"Crown Remedies and Liabilities Stat.," No. 241, Sec. 18—Satisfaction—Costs Against Crown.]—The Court had ordered satisfaction to be entered on a judgment see supra, being of opinion that the recognisances should not have been estreated. The Crown applied to have the words "with costs" struck out. Held that the words in Sec. 18 did not imply that the subject should be entitled to full costs. Satisfaction entered without costs. Regina v. Hull and Trevarrow, 3 V.R. (L.,) 218; 3 A.J.R., 111.

To Keep Peace—Estreatment by Justices before whom Defendant was not Convicted.]—Rule nisi to set aside a judgment recorded against C. on a forfeited recognisance. C. had been bound over to keep the peace for twelve months, and entered into a recognisance. C. committed an assault for which he was fined by one justice, and was summoned to show cause why the recognisance should not be estreated before other justices. In the presence of the sureties, C. confessed the assault to these justices, and judgment was entered on the recognisance being estreated. Held that the justices had personal cognisance of the fact that C. had broken the condition. Rule discharged. Regina v. Cairns, 5 A.J.R., 36.

REPLEVIN.

When Maintainable—Payment to Two Persons Claiming as Landlords.]—R., in March, 1856, by post nuptial voluntary settlement, settled land upon J. and B. as trustees in favour of himself and wife, and in November, 1856, mortgaged this land to T. In March, 1859, R. leased the land to plaintiff, who continued to pay rent to trustees until T., by threatening ejectment, compelled plaintiff to attorn to him. R. then, as agent for J. and B., distrained upon plaintiff's goods for rent in arrears under the lease. Plaintiff brought his action of replevin; R. avowed for rent in arrear, and as agent for J. and B., and a verdict was entered for plaintiff. A rule nisi was obtained to enter a verdict for defendant R. Held that plaintiff did not dispute his landlord's title, but merely showed that by his own act the landlord had deprived himself of the title he previously had. Rule discharged. Taylor v. Robinson, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 69.

Against whom Maintainable—Married Woman having Separate Property.]—Replevin is maintainable against a married woman having separate property, when the warrant of distress was signed by her daughter in her presence, and by her authority, but was not attested before a Justice or Attorney under Sec. 73 of the "Landlord and Tenant Stat. 1864." *Field v. An application was made to set this aside, but the County Court Judge refused to interfere, and M. then issued a writ of replevin in the Supreme Court. On rule nisi, to set proceedings aside, Held that Sec. 97 did not create an entirely new jurisdiction, and the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court was not ousted. Rule refused, the Court not thinking the proceedings showed sufficient irregularity to justify them in interfering. Marie v. Hogan, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 160.

1. Excise and Customs.

Illegal Seizure of Stock—"Distillation Act 1862," No. 147, Sec. 113.]—R. sued M. in trespass for seizing certain stock in a certain paddock. An illicit still had been found in a hut in the paddock, which was rented by R. The hut was occupied by D., and was forty yards away from the house in which R. lived. Held that Sec. 113 of No. 147 must be construed strictly; that words "house, building, premises or place" must be read disjunctively, and that the "premises or place" in which the stock was found was not the same "premises or place" in which the still was found, and the seizure was illegal. Rule absolute to enter a verdict for plaintiff. Ryan v. Moody, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 99.

Registration Fees on Imported Goods—Transhipment—Act No. 144, Sec. 3.]—The registration fees imposed on goods "on their importation into Victoria," by the Act No. 144, Sec. 3, ("Customs Amendment Act") are not payable on goods which are merely trans-shipped without being landed in the colony. Lorimer v. The Queen, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 244.

Recovery of Fees Wrongly Levied—Act No. 49.]—Per Stawell, C.J., and Williams, J. (dubitante Molesworth, J.)—Registration fees wrongly levied, paid under protest, and illegally received by the Customs officers, under the Act No. 144, Sec. 3, may be recovered back by petition against the Queen, under the Act No. 49 (repealed and re-enacted by "Crown Remedies and Liabilities Stat.;) there being an implied contract by the Crown to repay such moneys illegally received on its behalf. Ibid.

Customs Duty Improperly Paid—Remedy—"Customs Act 1857," Sec. 21—"Crown Remedies and Liabilities Stat., 1865," Sec. 20.]—Where a dispute has arisen between the importer of goods and the Customs officer, as to whether any duty is payable on goods, and the importer has paid the duty under protest, he cannot sue the Crown under the "Crown Remedies and Liabilities Statute 1865," Sec. 20. Sec. 21 of the "Customs Act 1857," applies to a case of this sort, and the only remedy open to the importer is to pay the amount under protest, and then sue the collector within three months, as provided by Sec. 21 of the latter Act. The remedy given by the "Customs Act" is obligatory on the importer, and must be followed. Sargood v. The Queen, McArthur v. The Queen, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 389.

Importing Indecent Prints—"Customs Act 1857" (No. 13,) Secs. 34, 165.]—D. was informed against for that he was concerned in importing certain prohibited goods, to wit, a number of indecent prints, paintings, cards, &c. The evidence showed that the defendant applied to clear at the Customs a case of goods, which arrived per ship, and that defendant produced an invoice of a list of goods with their prices without disclosing the names of the vendor, vendee, shipper or consignee; that the case contained in a false bottom a large number of indecent prints, and on the officer remarking "why there's a false bottom," the defendant answered "Oh, no; the case is too large for the goods." Defendant was convicted and fined. Held, on appeal, that there was evidence to support the conviction, and appeal dismissed. Davis v. Sprent, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 86.

Act No. 13, Sec. 233—Act No. 306, Sec. 13—Jurisdiction of Justices—Forfeiture.]—Fellows J. (in Chambers) granted a rule absolute for a prohibition against proceeding in an order of forfeiture made by justices, on the ground that the justices had no jurisdiction to make such order under Sec. 233 of Act No. 13, where they refused to hear the defendants on their refusal to make an affidavit of ownership. Regina v. Call, ex parte Callaghan, 5 A.J.R., 91.

[Compare Sec. 266 of Act No. 768.]

Act No. 646—Watch—Imported in Parts.]—A duty or tax cannot be enforced unless the intention of the Legislature to impose it has been unmistakably expresssed. Where therefore it was sought to enforce payment of duty of watches imported in different packages, so as to be easily fitted together on arrival in Victoria, Held that such goods did not fall with the class on which duty is imposed in Act No. 646. Shaw v. Howden, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 102; 5 A.L.T., 7.

2. Land Tax.

Deduction of £2500—On Estate in which More than One Person are Interested—"Land Tax Act 1877" (No. 575,) Sec. 7.]—If A. and B. are owners of one estate, and B. and C. are owners of another, both over the taxable value, according to the proper construction of Sec. 7 of the "Land Tax Act 1877," the deduction of £2500 must be made from the value of each estate before assessing the tax. Regina v. Cunningham, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 320.

Act No. 575, Secs. 5, 45, 46, 55—Covenant by Tenant to Pay Land Tax.]—Sec. 5 places the incidence of taxes upon the owner of the land, and Secs. 45 and 46 taken together point to the conclusion that the landlord is the person who is liable to pay the tax ultimately, and therefore a covenant by the tenant to pay the land tax is void as against the provisions of those sections. Sec. 55, in providing that all "agreements or covenants contrary to the intent of the Act," shall be void, is retrospective, and therefore a covenant in a lease made prior to the Act to pay all taxes present and future is void. Trenery v. Stewart, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 247; 1 A.L.T., 37.

Act No. 575, Sec. 3—One Person Owning Several "Landed Estates."]—An owner of several "landed estates" is entitled under Sec. 3 of the Act to only one deduction of £2500 on the valuation of the whole of his property, and not to a deduction of £2500 on each of his estates. Docker v. The Queen, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 316; 1 A.L.T., 49.

"Land Tax Act 1877," No. 575, Sec. 4—"Landed Estate" Subject to Mortgage—Valuable Consideration.]—A father bought for his children a station, consisting of freehold land under the "Transfer of Land Stat.," comprising a "landed estate," within the meaning of "The Land Tax Act 1877," and stock thereon; the land being subject to a mortgage under the "Transfer of Land Stat." He requested the vendor to transfer direct to the children, but the vendor refused, on the ground that some of the children were minors. In a subsequent negotiation a transfer was made, subject to the mortgage to the father, who gave his promissory notes for the payment of the purchase money extending over a period of ten years, except a small amount which he paid in cash. He also gave a second mortgage over the land to secure payment of the promissory notes. He then transferred the land, except a small portion which he reserved for himself, to the children, in such portions that each was under the taxable amount, and the children were registered as the absolute proprietors in fee of those portions. The Registrar, however, put the father's name on the Land Tax Register as "owner" of the whole of the land. The stock was not transferred to the children, but depastured on the whole of the land. There was an understanding between the father and the children that the whole of the proceeds, including profit on the stock, were to be applied first in making improvements, and then to make a fund to pay off the liability. The Registrar, though requested to do so, refused to remove the father's name from the Land Tax Register in respect of such Transfer. Upon order nisi to remove his name in respect of all the lands except the portion reserved for himself, Held, per Molesworth, J., and affirmed on appeal, that the liability, under Sec. 63 of the "Transfer of Land Stat.," of the transferees to pay the mortgage debt, did not form a valuable consideration for the transfers to the children, and that the whole dealing was not a transfer bonâ fide for valuable consideration within the meaning of Sec. 4 of "The Land Tax Act 1877," but the transfers to the children were only gifts. Ex parte Finlay, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 68; 5 A.L.T., 182.

Act No. 575, Sec. 24—Lien of Agent—Taxation of Costs.]—Although the Act in Sec. 24 authorises persons to appear by their attorneys or agents, it does not give agents a lien over the papers of their clients to the same extent as if they were attorneys. A Judge of the County Court, in an action by an agent to recover costs of an appeal to the Commissioners, ought, even in the absence of evidence, that the costs claimed are unreasonable, and of a schedule of costs in the Act, to reduce them to what he considers a reasonable amount, where he considers them even under such circumstances too high. Watson v. Clinch, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 278; 1 A.L.T., 40.

Commissioners—Power to Award Costs to Successful Appellant.] — Under Sec. 25 of the "Land Tax Act 1877," the Commissioners of Land Tax have power to award costs against the Crown to a successful appellant against the classification of an estate. Coldham v. The Queen, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 102; 1 A.L.T., 166.

The appellant may sue the Crown for such costs under the "Crown Remedies and Liabilities Act 1864," as a debt due by the Crown. Ibid.

"Land Tax Act 1877," No. 575, Sec. 4—Fraudulent Transfer—Owner.] — Hay Lonie, on the Land Tax Register, in 1882, transferred part of his estate to his wife, wrongly describing her as "Jane Lonie, wife of Henry Lonie." The Land Tax Registrar refused to remove his name from the Register in respect of such transfer. In 1883, Jane Lonie, with the consent of Hay Lonie, transferred the land to her mother, who leased it to Hay Lonie. The Registrar again refused to remove his name. Upon order nisi by Hay Lonie to have his name removed, Held that the transfer of 1882 was not bonâ fide, and Hay Lonie was still the owner under Sec. 4 of "The Land Tax Act 1877," the conveyance of 1883, though made with Hay Lonie's consent, was not his transfer, and the transfer of 1882 was the only one with which the Court had to deal. Order discharged, with costs. Ex parte Lonie, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 128; 5 A.L.T., 94.

3. Stamp Duties.

"Stamp Duties Act," No. 645, Sec. 68—Re-sale of Portion of Purchased Land, and Payment of Duty direct from Original Vendor to Sub-Purchaser.]—W. sold certain lands under Act, No. 301, to the plaintiff company for £5400, and the company re-sold a portion of the land for £3000, W. transferring to the sub-purchasers, and the sub-purchasers paying duty on the £3000. The registration of the residue to the company was refused unless it paid duty on the whole amount (£5400.) Held that the company were liable to duty, to be charged on the proportion of the consideration apportionable to the land to be transferred, i.e., the residue. National Land Company v. Comptroller of Stamps, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 87; 5 A.L.T., 5.

4. Other Taxes and Duties.

Application of Licensing Fees—Act No. 566, Sec. 111—"New Licenses."]—A renewal of a license to a person previously licensed, and in respect of premises previously licensed, is not a "new license" within Sec. 111, nor is an annual license issued to a transferee of a license in respect to the same premises, in respect of which the fees must be paid into consolidated revenue; but where a licensed person procures a transfer of his license from one house to another, an annual license afterwards issued to him in respect of the latter house is a new license. The Queen v. Mayor of Melbourne, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 446.

RIVER.

Placing Obstructions in Navigable River.]—Every navigable river is a public highway, and one of the incidents common to it, and to a highway on land, is that a permanent obstruction placed in one or the other without lawful authority, which renders it less commodious than before to the public, is a public nuisance at common law which may be punished by indictment, and which is removable by any member of the public whose right of user of the highway is obstructed by it. Fergusson v. Union Steamship Company, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 279, 287; 6 A.L.T., 120.

Negligently Navigating — Vessel Taking the Ground.]—The right of the public in exercising the right of navigation in a navigable river is not limited to the water in the alveus of the stream, and the right of user does not cease, nor does the navigation become negligent, if the bed or the semi-liquid matter forming the bed of the river is disturbed by a vessel in motion. Fergusson v Union Steamship Company, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 279, 285-6; 6 A.L.T., 120.

Plaintiff was lessee and occupier of a steam ferry across the Yarra. This ferry was worked by means of chains which lay along the bottom of the river when the ferry boat was drawn in to the bank. The defendants' steamboats, when steaming down the river, caught and carried away these chains while they were resting on the bottom of the river. On these occasions the defendants' vessels, though drawing upwards of seventeen feet of water at the stern, had gone down the river when the guage indicated that there was not more than fourteen or fifteen feet of water in the river, and this was charged against them as negligent navigation. The bottom of the river where the accident occurred consisted for about the first two feet of liquid mud, in which the ferry chains were lying, and through which the defendants' vessels forced their way, causing the damage complained of. At the trial a verdict was given for the plaiutiff. On a rule nisi to set aside the verdict and to enter a nonsuit, pursuant to leave reserved, Held that the defendants had not been guilty of negligent navigation, and that the plaintiff had no right to put the chains where they were, since they formed an obstruction to a navigable river, and were consequently a public nuisance. Ibid.

SALE.

I. Sale of Goods.

Resale of Goods not "Cleared" or Paid for.]—On a "resale" of goods at the risk of the purchaser it appeared that one of the written conditions of the sale by auction was that "all purchases must be cleared . . . within twenty-four hours, in default of which the auctioneers will have it in their power or option to cancel the whole of the sale, or such portion of it as may remain uncleared, or to resell the same," when the purchaser "will be held liable for all loss and expenses attending such sale." A purchaser bought some of the goods, but did not "clear" a portion of them, and they were resold by the vendor's order for the account, and at the risk of the purchaser. A sum less than what they were originally sold for was realised, which sum, less the auctioneer's commission, was sued for by the vendor as "loss and expenses." At the "resale" other lots of goods of the same "description, quality, and value" were substituted for the original lots, but the case did not state that they were of the same "condition." Held that the goods resold must be substantially identical with those originally sold; and a nonsuit which had been granted to the defendant in the County Court was upheld. Matthews v. Benjamin, 3 W.W. & a'B. (L.,) 124.

Conditions of Sale—Catalogue.]—P. purchased salvage goods at a sale by auction, the goods being described as four bales of newspaper, but turned out to be bales of calico, which were of greater value, and which the auctioneer refused to deliver. The conditions of sale contained inter alia a clause to the effect:—"If auy error is made in describing the quality of any of the lots it shall not vitiate the sale, but the purchaser shall be bound to take the article sold with all faults as it lies here, packages full or empty not known or guaranteed." On action for non-delivery, Held that the catalogue and conditions of sale must be read together, and that what was sold and bought was a chance, and that defendant was bound to deliver. Crespin v. Puncheon, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 203; 3 A.L.T., 4.

Sale of Goods of a Certain Kind ex a Certain Ship to Arrive—Double Event.]—See Cohen v. Cleve, post column 1292.

Conditional Offer to Sell by Letter—When it does not Amount to an Enforceable Contract.]—Cakebread v. Huddart, ante column 184.

And for other contracts of sale see ante columns 186, 187.

Goods over the Value of £10—Acceptance.]—B. was offered sheep for sale by A., and B. agreed to take them if after acceptance he should approve of them. Their value exceeded £10. B. approved of them and they remained in A.'s hands on B.'s application to oblige B. During this time they were attacked by disease and some died. B. sent an agent to take possession of them with written authority naming their number. A. then tendered to the agent a lesser number than those approved of, not only by those which had died but by some lambs which he kept back. B. refused to accept. Action by A. against B. Held that there was no acceptance to satisfy the "Statute of Frauds;" that B.'s purchase and approval were of the lot mentioned as a whole, and that he did not so approve of every individual of the whole so as to make a new contract concerning the lesser number. Adams v. Brown, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 176.

What is Sufficient — Acceptance — Extrinsic Evidence.]—Defendant, of Ballarat, ordered of plaintiff, in Melbourne, iron pipes to be delivered by the railway at Ballarat. Plaintiff accordingly forwarded pipes by train, but defendant not deeming them of the required weight left them lying at the station to the order of plaintiff. In the correspondence between the parties with reference to the sale and delivery there was no identification express or by reference to any particular pipes. Plaintiff brought an action for goods sold and delivered, and goods bargained and sold, and recovered the price of the pipes. On rule for a nonsuit, Held that there was no acceptance to complete a sale and delivery; that extrinsic evidence to identify any particular pipes as those bargained and sold under the correspondence was inadmissible; and, the correspondence alone not identifying any particular pipes, that it did not constitute a sufficient memorandum within the Statute of Frauds. Wilkie v. Hunt, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 66.

Sec. 17—Act No. 204, Sec. 108—Acceptance by Receipt and Retention.]—S. sold certain goods to W. by means of an auction sale, and the memorandum of sale contained the word "conditionally" which was after the sale struck out by the auctioneer. W. retained the goods for seven days. S. sued W. for the price of the goods in the County Court, and was nonsuited. Held that even if there was no sufficient memorandum, W.'s retention of the goods for seven days was sufficient evidence of acceptance to go to a jury. Appeal allowed. Service v. Walker, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 182.

Part Delivery — No Acceptance.] — Where machinery was purchased by a company, and most of it remained on the vendor's premises, but part was removed by a carrier under company's directions, and then stopped in transitu, Held that there was no receipt or acceptance of the whole, or of part on account of the whole, and without a memorandum in writing to satisfy the "Statute of Frauds," there was no sale. M'Iver v. Duke Coy., 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 449.

Part Delivery—Payment of Warehouse Rent.] —Where warehouse keepers, also unpaid vendors, had delivered part of the goods, and had also received payment of warehouse rent, Held, per Privy Council, no delivery, the payment of rent not operating as a constructive delivery of the whole. Lange v. Grice, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 251; on appeal sub nom. Grice v. Richardson, L.R. 3 App. Ca., 319; for facts see S.C. post column 1295.

What is Sufficient Acceptance and Receipt.] —Delivery of goods purchased by an agent, who has authority to purchase goods for use at a particular place, but not to authorise delivery at any other place, at such other place, does not amount to an acceptance and receipt which will satisfy the "Statute of Frauds." Mitchell v. Watson, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 493. 2 A.L.T., 99, sub nom. Watson v. Mitchell.

Sufficiency of Memorandum.]—Bought and sold notes of tea signed by the seller's agent is sufficient evidence to satisfy the Statute. Moss v. Fowler, 3 A.J.R., 122.

Sufficiency of Memorandum—Signature by Auctioneer as Agent for Purchaser.]—At a sale by auction the auctioneer had a book containing conditions of sale and columns for entering in a single line the numbered description of each lot, the buyer, and the price. At the end of the conditions and above the columns the auctioneer had signed his own name. The defendant Ross bought several consecutive lots. In the line containing the entries respecting the first lot bought his name was written at full length in the proper column, but underneath the word "Do" was written in the proper column instead of the full name. Held that the auctioneer was the purchaser's agent only to write his name at full length, and that the signing of the word "Do" in the respective columns was not sufficient to satisfy the Statute. Williams v. Ross, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 285.

Entries by Auctioneer's Clerk of Name of Purchaser—What should be done.]—Moss v. Cohen, ante column 71.

Signature by Parties or their Agents—Auctioneer's Clerk.]—Per Fellows, J.:—It is doubtful whether an auctioneer's clerk has power to bind a successful bidder by entering his name as purchaser in the sale book. Service v. Walker, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 182.

Entry by Auctioneer's Clerk—Bought Note not Containing Warranty Announced at Sale.]—Certain flour at an auction sale, which was warranted at the sale, was knocked down to R., and R.'s name was entered by the auctioneer's clerk in the sale book. The bought note described the flour as "Rochester," but did not contain a warranty that it was "first-class," as announced at the sale. R. refused to accept the note or to accept a bill for the price, or to take the flour except a small portion for the purpose of testing it. Held that there was no evidence to satisfy the "Statute of Frauds," and embodying the warranty, and that R. was not liable for non-acceptance. Pratt v. Rush, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 421.

Signature by the Parties or their Agents—Auctioneer's Clerk.]—At a sale by auction, the purchaser is not bound by the auctioneer's clerk writing his name for him in the auctioneer's book, in the absence of evidence to show that he knew of this method of proceeding, and that he, by acquiescence in the practice, authorised the clerk so to write his name. Hill v. Willis, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 193; 2 A.L.T., 20.

(c) When Title Passes by.

Vendor Remaining in Possession—Subsequent Insolvency—Title of Trustee.]—W. bought of M. ten tons of iron of a certain description provided he had so much in stock, and received invoices for the goods, and paid for them. The goods, however, by arrangement remained in the possession of M., who subsequently became insolvent. The goods had been done up in lots, and this it was contended was a specific appropriation in favour of W. The trustee in insolvency refused to deliver the goods, and W. sued in trover and recovered. On rule to enter a nonsuit or verdict for defendant, Held that there had been no specific appropriation, and so the property in the goods did not pass, notwithstanding that M. had no more than the exact quantity bought in his possession, for W. would have been bound to take away ten tons of the description of iron sold; that though W. had seen the iron done up in a stack, in the absence of M., it was unnecessary that M. should have informed them that the stack in question was not intended for them, or that W. should inform M. that he intended to take it, and that M. should assent; and that W. could not recover the price as for money had and received, as the money when paid to M. became his own; and rule absolute for a nonsuit. Warnock v. Blyth, 4 A.J.R., 47, 180.

Fit for Purpose—Question for Jury.]—The article delivered must answer the description contained in the contract or which would be so contained if the contract were accurately drawn out; and if the subject matter purchased be merely the commercial article of that name, it must be that article in a saleable or merchantable condition—fit for some purpose; but, if it be an article purchased to be used for a particular purpose, it must be reasonably fit for that purpose. Where plaintiff purchased a Corbett's reaper and binder, in the absence of an express warranty, Held that the plaintiff was to receive an article fit for some purpose, and it is a proper question for the jury to determine whether the article was fit for some purpose, i.e., in fair order, and the Court refused to disturb the finding of the jury on that point. Corbett v. Taylor, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 455.

Sale of Goods of Specific Denomination—Not in esse or Capable of Inspection.]—Where an article of specific designation is sold, and not shown to be in esse or capable of inspection, an implied warranty of merchantable quality goes with it. Thomas v. Marks, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 217; 6 A.L.T., 91.

Sale with "All Faults" Rebutting Implied Warranty that Goods are Merchantable.]—See Service v. Walker, post column 1294.

Declaration that A. and B. agreed that B. should deliver and A. accept and pay for 45 half-tierces of Barrett's anchor-brand twist tobacco, ex a certain ship called the R. to arrive, at the price of 5s. per lb. in bond all round, and on other terms set out in the contract; and alleged as breach, that though the R. arrived after the agreement without 45 half-tierces of the tobacco specified, but with 45 half-tierces of an inferior kind of tobacco, yet B. after such arrival and before suit, delivered to A. 45 half-tierces of tobacco, ex the R., of an inferior kind as and for the 45 half-tierces of the kind agreed to be delivered. And A. not knowing, &c., and believing, &c., and that B. was delivering, &c., under and in pursuance of the said agreement, received the said tobacco, and paid for the same at the rate, &c., according to the agreement. And B. has not delivered to A. the 45 half-tierces of the specified tobacco ex the R. Held, on demurrer, that the original contract was on a double event—the arrival of the R. and her arrival with tobacco of the kind specified; that the original contract was gone when the R. arrived without tobacco of the kind specified; that on the subsequent facts of mere delivery and acceptance, no implied warranty was imported; and that in the mere absence of such warranty, and of all fraud, the declaration was bad, and the plaintiff had no remedy. Cohen v. Cleve, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 167.

As to Title.]—A warranty as to the vendor being the owner of the article sold may be implied from the circumstances of the sale. Smith v. Starling, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 178; 5 A.L.T., 65.

Sale "with all Faults"—No Implied Warranty—No Warranty that Bulk was Equal to Sample.]—Service v. Walker, post column 1294.

As to Title—Sale by Auction.]—See Robbins v. M'Culloch, ante column 72.

(iii.) In other Cases.

Oral Warranty — Sold Note Containing no Warranty.]—K. sold F. certain horses, orally warranting them to be staunch and sound. The sold note afterwards delivered was silent as to the warranty. Held that the contract was oral, and the sale note did not constitute the contract, but was in the nature of a mere invoice, and that F. could recover on the verbal contract. Faram v. Kerr, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 146.

Verbal Warranty—Contract in Writing.]—K. sold a horse to M., verbally stating that it was sound. After the sale a memo. was signed by M. to the effect:—"Sold to K. one bay horse for the sum of £30, for which I have received payment." Held that if the statement could be assumed to be embodied in the verbal agreement for sale, the document contained all the necessary elements of a contract, and was the best evidence of the contract; and as it was silent as to the warranty there was no warranty. M'Devitt v. Kattengall, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 89.

Sale by Auction—Sample Produced—Contract not Mentioning Sample—"With all Faults"—No Warranty that Bulk was Equal to Sample.]—See Service v. Walker, post column 1294.

Wire of a Certain Size—Breach of Warranty—Plaintiff not Bound to Return Goods.]—Plaintiff purchased from the defendant a quantity of fencing wire of No. 6 gauge. Plaintiff inspected the wire and thought it was No. 6, but whether it was so or not could not be verified without careful application of a No. 6 gauge. Plaintiff, on discovering that the wire was not of the size mentioned, was held entitled to recover as on a breach of warranty, and not bound to return the wire before being entitled to recover. Duckett v. Belgian Export Coy., 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 36.

Right of Purchaser after Receiving and Retaining Goods to Recover for Breach of Warranty.]—A person buying goods with an implied warranty that they are of merchantable quality is at liberty to take the goods, keep them, use them, and then either to set up their inferior quality in answer to an action for their price, or else to institute an action to recover damages for their inferiority. Thomas v. Marks, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 217; 6 A.L.T., 91.

Sale of Sheep—Price Does Not Affect a Warranty.]—B. sold sheep to R.; R. alleged that B. represented that the sheep were free from fluke, and had come from the Bogan River, whereas the sheep were found to be flukey, and came really from the Broken River, which was noted for the presence of fluke, as Bogan River was for its absence. A low price was given for the sheep. R. sued B. for breach of warranty, and the jury found for B. On rule nisi for a new trial, Held that the price in no way affected the warranty, and though there might be a warranty with a small price as well as with a large price, still the jury might take the low price into consideration. Rule discharged. Richey v. Birkin, 3 A.J.R., 121.

Onus of Proof.]—B. purchased from G. certain tea by sample. B. swore positively to the fact that he had carefully examined the samples, and G. swore as positively that the tea in bulk corresponded with the tea in the samples. Held that the plaintiff was not relieved from the necessity of proving the fact affirmatively, even though a verdict for defendant would raise a presumption of fraud on plaintiff's part. Boyd v. Goulstone, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 181.

Warranty—With all Faults.]—Goods were sold by auction, and a sample was produced at the sale, but the contract which was in writing made no mention of the sample; and one of the conditions of the sale was that the goods were to be taken with all faults. Held (1) that there was no sale by sample; (2) that there was no warranty that the bulk was equal to the sample, such a warranty only arising upon an express warranty by using words to the effect that the bulk is "equal to sample"; (3) that the words "with all faults" rebutted the presumption of an implied warranty that the goods were merchantable, and in the absence of fraud the buyer took the risk of the quality. Service v. Walker, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 348.

Sale of Article of Food by Description.]—Where an article of food is sold by description, the vendee is entitled to have, not only merchantable goods, but merchantable goods of the description agreed upon. Spence v. Duffield, 1 V.R. (L.,) 49; 1 A.J.R., 74.

Conditions of Sale—Goods Purchased Proving to be of Superior Value—Clause Providing that Error in Describing Quality shall not Vitiate the Sale.]—See Crespin v. Puncheon, ante columns 1288, 1289.

Sale of Certain Goods to Arrive ex Certain Ship—Delivery and Acceptance of Inferior Goods does not Warrant Quality.]—Cohen v. Cleve, ante column 1292.

Measure of Damages—Sale of Chattels the Subject of Common Demand and Supply.]—Where a person purchases a chattel which is a subject of common demand and supply, the purchaser of such an article, in the event of the vendor not complying with the agreement, must go into the market and buy it; and there is no instance in which the purchaser of such an article received any more damages than the difference between the contract price and the market price which he has to give for it. Thompson v. Marshall, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 150.

Measure of Damages—On Delivery of Inferior Goods—Difference in Price—Special Damages.]—In an action for damages for delivery of flour of an inferior quality to that contracted for the plaintiffs claimed as damages the difference between the value of that which ought to have been delivered and that actually delivered; and also special damages for the freight paid for transhipment of the inferior flour to another country, and for its passage back after rejection by the consignees. Held that they were entitled to recover damages on the first ground; but that in the absence of evidence that the parties at the time of the contract contemplated that the flour should be exported, they could not recover on the second. Spence v. Duffield, 1 V.R. (L.,) 49; 1 A.J.R., 74.

Delivery Orders—Payment of Warehouse Rent—Part Delivery.]—Goods remained in the possession of unpaid vendors who were also warehousemen, the vendors gave the usual bonded certificates to the purchasers W. and Co., who resold to L. and Co., and handed them the certificates duly endorsed. L. and Co. obtained delivery of part of the goods on presentation of the certificates, and paid rent in respect of such portion, but on presenting the other certificates were refused delivery on account of W. and Co.'s stopping payment. W. and Co. before their sale to L. and Co. had received the certificates duly endorsed as deliverable to their order, and the goods were transferred into the names of W. and Co. in the warehouse books, and rent charged as against W. and Co. as from the date of the sale to W. and Co. Three days after such transfers into the names of W. and Co. W. and Co. stopped payment, and their trustee in insolvency claimed the goods, delivery of which was refused. Held that, as to L. and Co., the defendants had the right to stop delivery, as to W. and Co.'s trustee, the defendants, by specially endorsing the certificates and making the transfers in their books, and by charging rent, had changed their position from that of unpaid vendors to that of warehousemen, and could not refuse delivery to W. and Co.'s trustee. Held, per Privy Council, that unless actual possession of the goods sold has been delivered to the purchaser the vendor is not deprived of his right of lien as against the assignees of the purchaser in the event of his insolvency; and (reversing Full Court) that the charging of warehouse rent, and the endorsement by the vendor's clerk of the warehouse certificates, and the transfer into W. and Co.'s names did not amount to such a delivery actual or constructive as would defeat the vendor's lien; and that the goods therefore never having left the possession of the vendors were subject to their lien, which revived upon W. and Co.'s insolvency. Lange and Richardson v. Grice, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 251.

On appeal sub nom. Grice v. Richardson, L.R. 3 App. Cas. 319, 47 L.J., P.C., 48; 38 L.T., 677; 26 W.R., 358.

Sale of Goods in Bond—Transfer of Bonded Certificates—Part Payment of Rent.]—D. sold fifty chests of tea to P., and received in payment his acceptance, which was overdue and unpaid. These chests were in a bonded store belonging to D. The usual bonded certificates were delivered to P. at the time of the sale. P. obtained possession of part of the goods, and paid D. a portion of the warehouse rent on account of the goods—viz., the whole rent due on the part delivered and part of the rent due on the remainder. P. executed a creditor's deed, and his acceptance was dishonoured. Held, on special case stated, that D. was entitled to a lien as an unpaid vendor. Fraser v. Dalgety, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 227.

Goods Marked in Bonded Certificates but not Separated.] — Defendant, the proprietor of a bonded store, received a number of cases of brandy from S. and Co., and gave them bonded certificates for the goods. S. and Co. then sold a portion of these goods to W., who resold them to plaintiff; and, at plaintiff's request, the proprietor of the store transferred the quantity purchased by plaintiff into his name, and marked an equivalent portion of the certificates accordingly; but the goods represented by the certificates so marked were not selected or ear-marked to distinguish them from the rest of the goods. Plaintiff requested the proprietor to deliver his goods to him, but the latter refused because S. and Co., not being paid by W., had attempted to exercise their right of stoppage in transitu, and had given defendant notice not to deliver. Plaintiff sued in trover. Held that the admission by defendant in marking the certificates amounted to a change of possession of the proportion of the goods purchased by plaintiff, although they had not been separated from the rest; and that he was estopped from denying plaintiff's right to their possession; and that plaintiff could maintain trover to recover that proportion. Isaacs v. Skellorn, 1 V.R. (L.,) 46; 1 A.J.R., 74.

Goods in Bonded Warehouse—Warrants Indorsed in Blank—Indorsee.]—Imported goods were placed by the importers in a bonded warehouse of the defendants. Warrants were given with the words "deliverable to their order by indorsements thereon" on them and signed by defendants. The importers sold the goods to a merchant, indorsed the warrants in blank, and delivered them to the purchaser. The purchaser deposited the warrants with a bank to secure an advance, which was also secured by a promissory note, which was not paid at maturity. The bank, fearing the purchaser's insolvency, delivered the warrants to plaintiff, which, with a written notice to transfer, were presented to defendants, who refused to transfer unless with the permission of the importers, and such permission was refused. Plaintiff tendered the rent, and then sued the defendants in trover. Held that, the warrants given to the importers being general and indorsed in blank, the presentation of the indorsed warrants and demand for possession put an end to the unpaid vendor's lien for purchase-money, and that the plaintiff had sufficient special property in the goods to enable him to maintain his action for trover. Rule for nonsuit discharged. Dredge v. Blackham, 3 V.R. (L.,) 101; 3 A.J.R., 75.

Bill of Exchange not Paid—Sale by Vendee.]—See Martin v. Coombs, 4 A.J.R., 27; ante column 187.

Acceptance of a Bill of Exchange — Sale in Bond.]—L. M. & Co. sold brandy in bond to S.M., took the purchaser's acceptance at three months for the price; and endorsed and handed to him the bonded storekeepers' certificates for goods purchased. S.M. paid no rent for the goods and did not get them transferred into his own name in the books of the storekeeper. Within two months after the purchase, and during the currency of the bill, S.M. died in insolvent circumstances. S. and B., who represented S.M.'s creditors, obtained from the storekeepers some of the brandy. During the currency of the bill S. and B. were sued by L. M. & Co. in trover. Held that, notwithstanding the finding of the jury that a custom existed whereby an unpaid vendor who took a bill of exchange lost his right of stoppage in transitu, the plaintiffs were entitled to stop the brandy in transitu. Lorimer v. Cleve, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 223.

Sale of Goods in Bond—Acknowledgment of Title by Warehouseman.]—B. & Co. sold tobacco in G.'s bonded store to M., received payment and handed the bonded certificates to M. M. resold to D. and got four bills in payment, handing D. the certificates. D. endorsed the certificates to a bank for value. D. became insolvent, and the bills were dishonoured. M. then gave notice of his claim to the warehouseman by asking for a stoppage, which was not granted because the correct list of the goods was not forthcoming, and the bank by presenting the certificates subsequently obtained a transfer of the goods. Held that M. never having had his rights recognised by the warehousekeeper was not entitled to stop the goods in transitu. Moss v. Grice, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 230.

SEDUCTION.

Proof of Service—Absence from Father's House—Animus Revertendi.]—C. sued M. for loss of services by the seduction of his daughter. The daughter was residing with M., and performing services for him at his residence, but under no contract of service at the time of her seduction; but there was evidence of an animus revertendi to her father's house at the time, and she was afterwards delivered there. She was in the habit, during her visit to M., of returning home once a week and assisting in the household duties, on one occasion remaining there to take part in cleaning and arranging the house. Held that the evidence of service thus afforded was not neutralised by a mere visit, and that she still remained in the service of her father if she went to plaintiff's house animus revertendi; and there being evidence of such an animus a verdict for plaintiff was upheld. *Cumber v. For Breach of Injunction—Common Law Procedure Statute, Sec. 243—Corporation—Writ must be Produced.]—On rule nisi for sequestration of the property of defendant company for breach of injunction, Held that Sec. 243 of "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865" applies to the property of a corporation; but the Court discharged the rule because the writ of injunction was not produced in Court. *Parade G.M. Sequestration for Disobedience of an Order Refused where Order Bad and Unworkable.]—An injunction against the defendant company was obtained, and there being doubt as to whether an appeal would lie to Privy Council, an order for injunction was made by the vacation judge. This order directed the plaintiff company to keep accounts pending an appeal to the Privy Council. The plaintiffs found this unworkable, and thinking it beyond the power of the judge to make such an order, notified their intention of moving in term to have it set aside, and refused to comply with it. Motion for sequestration of the estate of the plaintiff company for disobedience of the order refused, such order being bad and unworkable. Alma Consols Coy. v. Alma Extended Coy., 5 A.J.R., 2.

"Justices of Peace Amendment 1876" (No. 565.)

When Appeal Lies—Costs.]—There is no appeal to General Sessions under Act No. 267, Sec. 140, against an order made under Act No. 268 against a father for the support of his illegitimate child, and therefore the Court of General Sessions has no jurisdiction to give costs in such an appeal under Sec. 147. Regina v. Justices of Central Bailiwick, ex parte Moltine, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 302.

When it Lies—"Wines Beer and Spirit Sale Statute" (No. 227,) Sec. 67 — Act No. 267, Sec. 140—Whether Adjudication of Forfeiture a Conviction.]—A revenue officer had seized a certain quantity of ale on the ground that it was being sold without a license. The justices before whom the owner appeared adjudged the liquor to be forfeited under Sec. 67 of Act No. 227. The owner appealed to the General Sessions. Summonses were taken out by the City Council for prohibition against the appeal on the ground that the General Sessions had no jurisdiction by the owner for prohibition against the order of forfeiture. Held that the "adjudication" of forfeiture was not a "conviction" against which an appeal would lie under Sec. 140 of Act No. 267; and that Sec. 67 provided for forfeiture only where the owner did not appear. Prohibition granted in each instance. Regina v. Pohlman and Regina v. Sturt, in re White, 5 A.J.R., 22.

Where it Lies—Conviction for Indecent Exposure—Age of Offender.]—Where, in a conviction for indecent exposure under Sec. 36 of the "Police Offences Statute 1865," the justices have sentenced the prisoner to be whipped, without any evidence that his age exceeds sixteen years than their own conclusions, and the prisoner succeeds in showing that he is under sixteen, his remedy is by appeal to the General Sessions, and not by a rule to quash the conviction. Regina v. Benson, ex parte Tubby, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 2.

Where it Lies—Act No. 268, Sec. 40—From Maintenance Orders.]—Sec. 40 impliedly gives the right of appeal to General Sessions against the maintenance orders of justices, and the chairman must do his best to carry out the intentions of the Legislature by moulding a system of practice and procedure. Regina v. Justices of Central Bailiwick, ex parte M'Evoy, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 90; 2 A.L.T., 125.

See also Regina v. King, ex parte King, ante column 534.

Appeal to General Sessions—Practice—Recognisances not Forwarded by Clerk of Petty Sessions.]—M. sued C. in Petty Sessions and recovered a verdict. C. appealed to the General Sessions, but the recognisances to prosecute the appeal, although lodged with the Clerk of Petty Sessions, had not been forwarded by him. The Chairman of General Sessions ordered the appeal to be struck out and the judgment of Petty Sessions to stand. Held that the appellant should not be prejudiced by the default of the clerk; and, in answer to an objection that the fees had not been paid, that the clerk was bound to answer for the fees if he had taken the recognisances without the fee. Rule absolute for mandamus to compel the Chairman of General Sessions to hear the case. Regina v. Pohlman, ex parte Cobb, 3 A.J.R., 38.

Practice—Quashing Order made on Appeal from Justices — Case Remitted to Justices.] — The Supreme Court has a discretion as to whether, having quashed an order of the General Sessions, it will remit the case to the justices to be heard on the merits. Where, therefore, on an appeal to General Sessions from a conviction by justices the Sessions quashed the conviction on technical grounds, without going into the merits, and stated a special case for the opinion of the Supreme Court, the latter Court quashed the order of the Sessions, and held that, as from the conduct of the appellant and the nature of the objections taken it was evident that he had no case on the merits, the conviction of the justices should be affirmed, and that the case should not be sent back to them to be heard on the merits. Ah Fan v. Sturt, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 201.

Where the Appeal will be heard.]—The Supreme Court will decline to hear an appeal from a Court of General Sessions, where in the case judgment has not been delivered, but "reserved" in order to obtain the opinion of the Supreme Court. Fitzpatrick v. Hackett, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 335.

Practice—Act 28 Vict. No. 267, Secs. 135, 159.]—The proper practice under Secs. 135, 159 of the Act No. 267 is for the Court of General Sessions to make an order, and then state a case for the opinion of the Supreme Court. Clunes United Coy. v. Clunes Borough Council, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 96.

Stating Case for Opinion.]—A Court of General Sessions must hear and determine the whole case before stating a case for the opinion of the Supreme Court. Blackwood v. Mayor, &c., of Essendon and Flemington, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 87, 94.

Stating Special Case—Act No. 565, Sec. 36.]—The Chairman of General Sessions need not since Act No. 565 decide a case before submitting it to the Court. He is (Sec. 36) to state the facts specially for the determination of the Court. Batchelder v. Carden, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 45.

Act No. 565, Sec. 31—Notice of Appeal.]—Notwithstanding Sec. 31 of Act No. 565, where a Chairman of General Sessions decides a matter as to the sufficiency of grounds of appeal in the notice before stating a special case to the Supreme Court, the fact of his having referred the question to the Supreme Court gives it jurisdiction. Russell v. Shire of Leigh, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 199; 1 A.L.T., 18.

Mandamus to State Special Case—Act No. 267, Sec. 135.]—Semble, the language of Sec. 135 is compulsory; mandamus issued to Chairman of General Sessions to state a special case, even though there was no point of law arising. Regina v. Pohlman, ex parte Bagshaw, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 208.

Stay of Proceedings.]—An appeal to the General Sessions does not operate as a stay of proceedings, although a special case to the Supreme Court does. Ex parte Baker, 1 A.L.T., 43.

Case Stated for Supreme Court by General Sessions—Power of Supreme Court—Costs.]—The Supreme Court has no power to award costs on a case stated from General Sessions. Moncrieff v. Moncrieff, 5 A.L.T., 192.

Power of Supreme Court on Special Case Stated by General Sessions — Costs — Rehearing.]—The Court, upon a case stated by General Sessions, has no longer (since the passing of the Act No. 565) any power to award costs, nor can it direct a rehearing. Dobson v. Sinclair, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 69; 3 A.L.T., 106; sub nom. Sinclair v. Dobson.

Power of Supreme Court to Reverse Record of General Sessions—Habeas Corpus.]—The Supreme Court, or a Judge of the Supreme Court cannot, on an application for a writ of habeas corpus, reverse a record of the Court of General Sessions. Where, therefore, prisoners were duly convicted of forgery by a Court of General Sessions, and sentenced, the Court refused to entertain affidavits that the chairman of the Court who had sat alone, had, before the trial, been removed from office and had not been reappointed. Re Armstrong & Stewart, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 101.

Jurisdiction to Amend Convictions or Orders of Justices.]—The power of Courts of General Sessions, as to the amendment of convictions or orders of justices, are confined to amendments in matters of form. There is no power to substitute a substantially new and different order or conviction for that which is the subject of appeal, and no power to substitute one sentence for another where the amount of the sentence is discretionary with the justices. Harrup v. Templeton, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 185.

Jurisdiction—Act No. 502, Sec. 15 (vii.).]—The offence of personating an elector at an election of a member of Parliament under the "Electoral Act 1865," Sec. 116, is an "offence against either House of Parliament" within the meaning of Sub-sec. vii. of Sec. 15 of the "Judicature Act" (No. 502,) and is, therefore, excepted from the jurisdiction of Courts of General Sessions. Regina v. Hynes, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 292; 2 A.L.T., 45.

Jurisdiction—"Judicature Act" (No. 502,) Sec. 15 (xiii.)]—The offence of unlawfully and indecently assaulting a girl under twelve years of age is within Sec. 15, Sub-sec. xiii. of the "Judicature Act" (No. 502,) which excepts the defilement of women and girls from the jurisdiction of the General Sessions, which accordingly has no jurisdiction over such an assalt. Regina v. Herbert, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 205; 4 A.L.T., 39.

Jurisdiction — "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute 1864," Sec. 40—Maintenance Order.]—The Court of General Sessions has jurisdiction, on an application to it, under Sec. 40 of the "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute 1864" (No. 268,) to review an order of maintenance, when the appellant does not appear, to confirm the order without hearing evidence, and to award costs to the respondent. Regina v. Chairman, &c., of General Sessions Melbourne, ex parte Kemball, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 40; 5 A.L.T., 177.

Act No. 268, Sec. 40—Bastardy Order.]—Per Judge Macfarland—Under Sec. 40 the Court of General Sessions has jurisdiction to quash, confirm, or vary a bastardy order, whether an appeal has been entered or not. Ludgrave v. Belcher, 5 A.L.T., 72.

Jurisdiction as to Costs—Confirming Order of Justices under Sec. 40 of the "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute 1864"—Costs.]—The Court of General Sessions has power, under Sec. 40 of the "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute 1864," when confirming an order of justices made under Sec. 31 of that Statute, to award costs. Moncrieff v. Moncrieff, 5 A.L.T., 192.

Jurisdiction as to Fixing Valuation of Property for Rating Purposes.]—See Regina v. Cope, ex parte Mayor of Essendon, ante column 126.

Jurisdiction as to Costs—Act No. 310, Sec. 48.]—On an appeal to General Sessions under Sec. 48 of Act No. 310 as to the amount of compensation to be given to occupiers of land taken for the purposes of a drain, the General Sessions as arbitrators can only enter into the amount of compensation, and cannot enter into the question of its necessity, or award costs on the appeal. Regina v. Pohlman, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 109. See S.C., ante column 497.

Jurisdiction as to Costs—Dispute between two Shires.]—The council of the shire of T. resolved that a bridge at the boundary between that shire and the shire of N., required repair ing, and gave notice thereof to the council of that shire, with notice to treat. The council of N. declined to join in the work, and the council of T. obtained from the Chairman of General Sessions a summons calling on the other shire council to show cause why the work should not be executed. This was heard and dismissed with £15 15s. costs. The council of T. then obtained a rule nisi for prohibition, on the ground that the Chairman of General Sessions had no power under the "Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 395, to award costs. The council of N. submitted, and offered to abandon the order as to costs, and to pay all costs of the rule nisi. A meeting was held between representatives of the councils to arrange as to the costs, and there were conflicting affidavits as to the arrangement made, the council of T. insisting that the costs were to be paid as between attorney and client. In the correspondence, the latter council had at first met the offer of the other, by a statement that it would be better that the rule should come on to be made absolute, to establish a precedent. The Court made the rule absolute with costs. Regina v. Leech, ex parte Shire of Tullaroop, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 189; 2 A.L.T., 19.

Commitment for Trial at Next General Sessions —Remand to Court of Assize—Act No. 502, Secs. 13, 32.]—M. was committed for trial at General Sessions. The Court of General Sessions sat on 14th November, and there being no business the chairman was about to adjourn when he was informed of M.'s commitment. The case was adjourned until the next day when the chairman refused to discharge M. in the absence of the Crown Prosecutor and remanded him until the next Court of Assize. The warrant was exhausted on the 15th, and no fresh warrant was issued. On a writ of habeas corpus, Held that M. was not in unlawful custody, that under Secs. 13 and 32 the justices had power to transmit for trial at the assizes a presentment, and that the chairman had no power to discharge M. In re Marshall, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 427; 3 A.L.T., 57.

SET-OFF.

Creditor of Insolvent Purchasing Assets—Right to Set-off his Debt against the Price.]—K. owed D. £74, K. called a meeting of his creditors, and prepared an account of his assets and debts; among the former were some goods which D. wished to buy, and among the latter D.'s debt. K. told D. he couldn't sell except for cash as the goods were among the assets. D. said he must have the goods, and at last agreed to pay cash. K. let him have the goods, but did not receive cash on delivery. D. claimed to set-off his debt of £74 against the cash price of the goods. K. assigned all his property upon trust for his creditors. The trustees sued D. for the price of the goods and D. pleaded his set-off; the County Court judge disallowed it as based on fraud. On appeal the Court offered a nonsuit, but this being declined, affirmed D.'s right of set-off in the action. Donaldson v. Couche, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 41.

A solicitor's costs may be set-off against a debt owing by him. Regina v. Alley, ex parte Twigg, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 151; 1 A.L.T., 9.

See S.C., post under SOLICITOR—Costs.

Against Official Assignee—Creditor Preferred by Insolvent.]—One of several creditors fraudulently preferred by an insolvent, is not entitled, in an action by the official assignee, to recover the amount of the fraudulent preference, to set-off the original debt, there being no mutuality between the parties. Courtney v. King, 1 V.R. (L.,) 70; 1 A.J.R., 86.

On Partnership Liability—On Account Stated.] —One partner cannot recover as against another for money paid to his use, but only on an account stated and settled when the sum due has actually been ascertained, and one of the partners has promised to pay that sum to the other. Plaintiff and defendant were partners in a mine, and the defendant claimed money expended in connection with it as a set-off against an action on a bill of exchange brought by plaintiff. There was only a partial settlement, and no dissolution of partnership. Rule nisi to enter verdict for defendant for amount claimed in a set-off discharged. Perkins v. Cherry, 3 A.J.R., 51.

Set-off against Rates—Appropriation of Payments.]—The Mayor of Fitzroy v. Mahony, ante columns 1144, 1145.

Guarantee by Intestate—Debts Owing by Plaintiff to Defendant Administrator—Mutual Debts.]—The N. Bank brought an action against S., as administrator of W., upon a guarantee given by W. to the bank, by which he undertook to pay to a certain extent all advances made to a third person in case of default. S. pleaded that before the time the payment of the advances was due, and before default made, the bank was indebted to him as administrator in various amounts, which he offered to set-off. Held, on demurrer to the plea, that a set-off can be pleaded to an action on a guarantee, such guarantee being in the nature of a debt; but that the debts were not mutual, the debt on the guarantee, in the absence of an express promise to pay by S., was a debt of W. on a contract between him and the bank, and not a debt of S. as administrator. Judgment for plaintiffs, demurrer allowed. National Bank of Australasia v. Swan, 3 V.R. (L.,) 168, 3 A.J.R., 75.

By Garnishee.]—A declaration was drawn under Sec. 204 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute" against a garnishee in respect of a debt due by him to a judgment debtor, containing a special count upon an express contract and common money counts. The defendant pleaded as a set-off a debt due to him from the judgment debtor. Held, on demurrer to the pleas, that the pleas were good. Bishop v. Woinarski, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 31.

Married Woman—Joint Hiring with Husband.]—A married woman who was hired jointly with her husband issued a separate summons for wages. Held that the defendant could not set-off a joint demand against husband and wife for goods supplied. *Regina v. SETTLEMENTS.

I. GENERALLY.

Power to Exchange—Lands Yielding an Equal Rental.]—A settlement contained a clause allowing the trustees to exchange the land settled for other lands "yielding a rental equal in amount to the land exchanged for the same." Held that this must be construed strictly, and would not authorise the trustees to exchange the lands for others of greater value but yielding no rental. Re the "Transfer of Land Statute," ex parte Dougharty, 4 A.J.R., 71.

"Real Property Statute 1864" (No. 213,) Secs. 79,104—Building Leases—Testator's Intention.]—A testator devised lands to trustees, and a sum of money, upon trust to expend it or a sufficient part of it in building four dwelling-houses with out-offices upon the land, or, if four suitable houses could not well be built, a smaller number; and to invest any surplus upon certain trusts, and, until sale, to demise. Upon petition by the trustees for power to grant building leases, Held that such a power was excluded by Sec. 104 of the Act, which excludes from its powers cases in which "an express declaration or manifest intention that they shall not be exercised, is contained in the settlement, or may reasonably be inferred therefrom." Quære whether such a will is a "settlement" within Sec. 79. In re Hall, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 156.

Exoneration of Property Mortgaged—Beneficiaries paying off Part of Debt.]—Where a settlor settled certain real estate, and afterwards mortgaged parts of it, with other property, and died leaving the mortgage still subsisting, and the beneficiaries paid off part of the mortgage debt, Held that the beneficiaries paying off part of the debt were to stand in the place of the mortgagees so paid off. Johnston v. Brophy, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 77, 89.

Where the settlor as to one part of the settled estate mortgaged it with part of the residuary real property, and died leaving the debt subsisting, Held that the mortgage debt should be paid out of the residuary estate comprised therein in exoneration of the settled estate. Ibid.

Vested or Contingent Remainder.]—A., by voluntary settlement, conveyed lands to trustees upon trust to pay the rents and profits to B. for life, and after her death the lands were to remain to the use of C., D., E., F., and G., or such of them as should attain twenty-one years, their heirs and assigns as tenants in common, and in case of the death of all of them before attaining twenty-one years without leaving issue remainder to use of A., his heirs and assigns. There were provisions for maintenance during minority, and a power of sale and leasing until sale by the trustees. B. died before C., D., E., F., or G. attained the age of twenty-one years. Held that C., D., E., F., and G. were entitled upon A.'s death each to one-fifth of the property comprised in the settlement, although then under age. Johnston v. Brophy, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 77, 88.

Suit to Set Aside a Revocation of a Settlement as Procured by Fraud—Representative of Settlor a Necessary Party.]—J.R. executed a deed of trust, by which certain land and moneys were conveyed and assigned to trustees upon trust to divide the income between the settlor and his father during their joint lives, to pay the income to the survivor, remainder over in trust for certain charities, the deed providing that the deed should not be revoked except by the consent of the father. One of the trustees acted upon the settlor's intemperance and weakness, and induced him to execute a deed of revocation, and the trustee appropriated the moneys. Both father and son executed this deed, not knowing its contents. In a suit after the settlor's death by the father to set aside the deed of revocation, Held that the settlor's representative was a necessary party, as he was interested in supporting the deed of revocation. Richardson v. Arthur, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 12.

Suit to Set Aside Conveyance as Against Settlement—By Cestui Que Trust Against Trustees and Stranger—Demurrer.]—A bill alleged that R. died intestate, and seised of land subject to a mortgage to B., that R.'s heir-at-law had agreed to settle the land in trust for R.'s widow and family (including himself) in consideration of his receiving all R.'s personal estate, and paying the debts thereout. This agreement was acted upon by a conveyance to that effect. Afterwards the heir-at law, intending to dispose of his interest in the settled lands, conveyed all the land to D., which was either executed by mistake or procured by D.'s fraud, and D. had conveyed the land to his father for value. On a bill by the beneficiaries under the settlement to set aside the conveyances to D. and D.'s father (the trustees of the settlement refusing to join as plaintiffs, Held on demurrer (1) that the pleadings showed that the legal estate was in R. and not in the mortgagees, and so passed to the trustees of the settlement, whose remedy would be at law and not in equity; (2) that no collusion between the trustees and D. being charged, the mere refusal of the trustees to institute a suit did not justify the beneficiaries in suing D. and the trustees. Demurrer allowed. Ronalds v. Duncan, 1 V.R. (E.,) 146; 1 A.J.R., 144.

In a suit by cestuis que trustent under a settlement to set aside a conveyance by one of the cestuis que trustent under a mistaken belief as to how much of the property he was conveying, Held that the other cestuis que trustent could sue on their own behalf without making the conveying cestui que trust or the trustees of the settlement co-plaintiffs. Ronalds v. Duncan, 2 V.R. (E.,) 65; 2 A.J.R., 30, 45.

Necessary and Proper Parties—Suit to set Aside a Settlement.]—Where a settlement for a wife's separate use was made in pursuance of an ante-nuptial agreement to settle, and the husband was a party to and signed both deeds, but took no interest under them, Held that the husband was not a necessary party to a suit to impeach the settlement. Sinnott v. Hockin, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 205; 4 A.L.T., 10.

Voluntary—Containing no Clause of Revocation—Not Parted with or Disclosed to Beneficiaries—Collusive Sale and Repurchase.]—R., by deed, conveyed certain property to himself and A. upon trust for himself and his family. There was no clause of revocation in the deed, and the other objects of the settlement had no knowledge of its having been executed, R. keeping it in his own possession, and no action being taken upon it. R., wishing to get rid of the deed, effected a collusive sale and a repurchase of the property settled, his solicitor having advised him that he could so get rid of it. By his will he disposed of the property settled in a different manner from that contained in the trusts of the settlement. On suit to establish the deed, Held that the settlement was good though not communicated to the objects under it; that the settlor being advised by his solicitor that he could so avoid it, and thus, by mistake, executing it without a power of revocation, was not a ground for relief in equity, but that R. could only get rid of the settlement effectually by a real sale, and that he must be treated as a trustee for the beneficiaries. Moorhouse v. Rolfe, 4 A.J.R., 159.

Two Voluntary Conveyances—Conveyance by Grantee under Second Voluntary Deed to a Purchaser—Application of 27 Eliz., C. IV.]—If there are two voluntary conveyances, and the grantee in the second conveys to a purchaser for value, such purchaser has the benefit of 27 Eliz., c. iv., against the first volunteer. Ibid, p. 160.

Trustee Adopting a Position Antagonistic to Cestui que Trust.]—Semble, per Holroyd, J.—In a suit against the trustee and cestui que trust of a settlement to have the settlement set aside, the trustee will not be permitted to take up a directly opposite position to his cestui que trust. Davey v. Pein, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 306, 312; 6 A.L.T., 131.

Settlement in Pursuance of Ante-Nuptial Agreement—Refusal of Trustee to Act.]—Where an ante-nuptial agreement to settle property named a person as trustee of the intended settlement, and he refused to act in the trusts of the settlement, Held that such refusal, and the fact that the settlement was made without his consent, did not render it void, for the Court will not allow any trust to fail for want of a trustee, and if one refuses to act another can be appointed in his place. Sinnott v. Hockin, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 205; 4 A.L.T., 10.

Leases of Settled Estates—Act No. 213, Sec. 80—Questions as to Fitness of Proposed Lessee.]—Under Sec. 80, the Court requires the proposed lessee to be a solvent individual, and will not make an order authorising trustees to lease to a company with limited liability. The only way for such a company to obtain a lease is to put forward some solvent person to obtain and hold for them. In re Bergin's Estate, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 131; 1 A.L.T., 5.

Leases of Infants' Lands.]—See under INFANT, ante column 558.

Sale—Suit by Mortgagee.]—Where, in a suit by a mortgagee of settled estates praying for payment or a sale, some of the parties claiming under the settlement were infants, and it was for the interest of the infants that there should be no delay, the Court held that there should be, with consent of the parties sui juris, an immediate sale. Henty v. Hodgson, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 250, 260.

Sale—Application for on Behalf of Infants—Guardian.]—Upon an application for sale of a settled estate on behalf of infants, it is sufficient if a guardian be appointed before the hearing of the petition. Ex parte Dolan, 1 V.R. (E.,) 30; 1 A.J.R., 22.

Sale—Application for on Behalf of Infants—Advertisements.]—On an application for sale of a settled estate on behalf of infants, advertisements will be directed before the appointment of a guardian. Ibid.

Sale—How Conducted.]—The sale of settled estates, upon an order for sale should be by auction and not by private contract. Ibid.

Order for Sale—Directions as to Application of Proceeds.]—Directions as to the application of proceeds of sale will not be given in the order directing sale, but should be the subject of a subsequent order. Ibid.

Order for Sale—Where a Part of Settled Estate is in Mortgage.]—Where the estate to be sold was originally all in settlement, it will be sold as a settled estate, although part of it may have subsequently become absolutely vested. Ibid.

Order for Sale—Investment of Proceeds.]—Petition under Sec. 94 of the "Real Property Statute 1864" (No. 213,) praying for a sale of a part of certain settled estate, and an investment of the money received on the sale, in the purchase of another piece of land. It appeared that the land desired to be sold was an outlying piece dissevered from the other portion of the settled estate, and locally situate in the midst of land belonging to C., whilst the piece of land proposed to be bought was the property of C., but locally situate in the midst of the settled estate. The petition was presented by the tenant for life with the consent of the trustees, and the persons entitled for life in remainder. The first tenant in tail was an infant, and his father, who was one of the trustees, had in that capacity consented to the petition. The Court required the father's consent as guardian of his son, and upon that being done made the order for sale, but held that the investment of the proceeds must be the subject of a distinct application. Ex parte Staughton, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 95.

Sale—"Real Property Statute 1864," Part V.—Purchase Money how dealt with.]—Where a sale of settled estate is ordered by the Court, the purchase money should be paid into the hands of the Master-in-Equity, and a subsequent order obtained for its proper application. In re M'Gregor's Estates, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 1.

Sale—Advertisements under "Real Property Act" (No. 213,) Sec. 98.]—Applications under No. 213, Sec. 98, for the direction of the Court as to advertisements under that section, should be made by motion in Court, and not as in England to a Judge in Chambers. Ex parte Staughton, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 95, 96.

Sale—"Real Property Statute 1864," Sec. 98—Advertisements.]—Under Sec. 98 of the "Real Property Statute 1864" notice of applications to the Court, under part V. of the Act, is to be inserted in such "newspapers" as the Court shall direct. The Court has a discretion under this section to direct the insertion of the notice thereby required in one newspaper only. Mahood v. Carnaby, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 56.

"Real Property Statute 1864," Secs. 114, 115—Examination of Married Woman.]—The examination of a married woman under the "Real Property Statute 1864" (No. 213,) Secs. 114 and 115, will not be taken in open court at the hearing of a petition for sale of settled estates. In re M'Gregor's Estate, 4 V.L.R. Sale—Petitioner, Who should be.]—In a petition under Sec. 94 of the "Real Property Statute 1864" (No. 213,) for the sale of settled estates, the petitioner should be a person beneficially entitled to the present receipt of the rents and profits. A mere trustee cannot be petitioner. In re Ellis' Settled Estates, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 252.

Order for Sale since "Judicature Act 1883."]—Petition under part V. of the "Real Property Statute 1864" (No. 213,) for the sale of certain settled estates. Per Molesworth, J.: The order I will make is such an one as used to be made in Equity, but a question arises whether the Chief Clerk is to have the control of the moneys as the Master used to have. Order made in the usual form except that the proceeds were ordered to be paid into the hands of the Chief Clerk instead of into the hands of the Master. In the Settled Estates of Quinn, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 336.

Exchange—Consent of Settlor and his Wife.]—Where lands were settled by a person upon his wife and children, and it was wished to exchange the lands for others in a manner not in accordance with the terms of the settlement, and the settlor and his wife consented to such exchange, Held that such consent could not bind the children who were not of age and not before the Court, and that the Court would not exercise its discretion so as to allow the land proposed to be exchanged to be registered in the name of the proposed transferees, and thus give an indefeasible title, which might at a future time stand in the way of the children, if they wished to object to the exchange. Re the "Transfer of Land Statute," ex parte Dougharty, 4 A.J.R., 71.

SHARES.

Sale of Shares—To whom Interim Dividends go—Custom of Exchange.]—On 8th May L. sold shares to D., to be paid by bill at three months; L. to retain scrip until D. paid the bill, and D. to be entitled to dividends. One dividend was declared on 24th May and placed to D.'s credit; on 21st June another was declared payable on the 27th of June. On 25th June D. and L. made another agreement as to the re-sale of the shares to L., and in the memo. of sale L. credited D. with the dividend of 24th May only. Held that D. was not entitled to the second dividend, as by the practice of the Stock Exchange L., the purchaser in the new contract of re-sale, was entitled to it. *Dane v. SHERIFF.

Sale of Land by—Notice of Sale—19 Vict. No. 19, Sec. 176.]—A month's notice of a sheriff's sale of land was given, and on the proper day the bailiff put up the land for sale. A person bid money, and the land was knocked down to him. He beguiled the bailiff to a distance of some miles from the land, on the pretence of giving him money, and then gave him none. The bailiff left a person in possession, and after a long interval returned on the same day, and sold the land to B. B. brought an action of ejectment, and a rule nisi for a nonsuit was obtained, on the ground that the sale was complete when the land was knocked down to the first bidder; and that a fresh month's notice was necessary. Held, that the notice already given was sufficient under Sec. 176 of 19 Vict. No. 19; and that the sale had taken place substantially under that notice, and was valid. Beavan v. Chadwick, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 127.

Notice of Sale—19 Vict. No. 19, Sec. 176—Place of Sale.]—D. sold land at Bairnsdale to K., who took possession and paid the purchase-money, remaining in possession after doing so. Subsequently D. obtained a judgment against K. for a debt, and execution was issued directed to the sheriff of the circuit district of Sale, and K.'s estate and interest in the premises were sold by the sheriff of the colony of Victoria, who was also sheriff of the circuit district of Sale, to the the plaintiffs. The sale was held in Melbourne. There was no evidence of any notice of sale as required by 19 Vict. No. 19, Sec. 176. D. brought an action of ejectment against the plaintiffs, and on bill by the plaintiffs to restrain the ejectment by D., and to have him declared a trustee for the plaintiffs, Held that K.'s possession of the land, after the whole of the purchase-money was paid, was part performance of the agreement, and was sufficient to give him an equitable title; that the sale by the sheriff was good, although made out of the bailiwick of Sale, and that no objection as to want of notice having been taken by the owner, due notice should be presumed, and decree made as prayed. Dreverman v. Dogherty, 1 V.R. (E.,) 4; 1 A.J.R., 7.

Sale of Land—Advertisement of Sale—Act No. 19, Sec. 176.]—See In re "Transfer of Land Statute," ex parte Ross, ante column 434.

Certificate of Title under Act No. 301—19 Vict. No. 19, Sec. 176—Notice of Sale—15 Vict. No. 10, Sec. 24—Appointment of Special Bailiff.]—H. sued O'F. for trespass. The leasehold land in question was held by C. as trustee for a company, and on judgment signed against the company, and fi. fa. issued, a special bailiff was appointed to levy the debt and costs. The bailiff sold to H., who obtained a certificate of title under the Act No. 301. O'F., as official agent of the company, demanded possession, and being refused took forcible possession. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover on the certificate of title alone; that the special bailiff's appointment was well made under 15 Vict. No. 10, Sec. 24, the locus in quo being more than 100 miles from the Supreme Court in Melbourne; that Sec. 176 of 19 Vict. No. 19, requiring thirty days' notice of sale, does not apply to a term of years which is only a chattel interest not provided for by the Act. House v. O'Farrell, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 98.

Duty of Sheriff as to Proceeds of Sale of Land—Act No. 301, Sec. 106.]—It is the duty of the sheriff when he sells to apportion the proceeds of the sale of land amongst the writs in the order in which he has received them, and it is not material which of the execution creditors is the first to comply with the provisions of Sec. 106 of Act No. 301. Beath v. Anderson, 9 V.L.R., (L.,) 41; 4 A.L.T., 151.

And see cases post under TRANSFER OF LAND (STATUTORY) — Transfers — Under Sales by Sheriff.

Return to Writ of Fi. Fa.—Deputy Sheriff.]—A return by the sheriff that a seizure had been made by a bailiff acting under a warrant issued to him by a person to whom a writ of fi. fa. had been addressed as "the deputy sheriff for the colony of Victoria at Beechworth" was held a bad return, there being, strictly speaking, no such officer as a deputy sheriff for the colony at Beechworth; and return quashed. Kidd v. Hibberson, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 384.

"Common Law Practice Act" 19 Vict. No. 19, Sec. 176—Power of Sheriff—Execution Debtor's Judgment in another Action.]—Sec. 176 of the Act authorises the sheriff to seize "bonds, specialties, and other securities of the" judgment debtor, and to hold them as security, and to sue for sums secured thereby. It facilitates the recovery of assets to satisfy a judgment and authorises the sheriff to seize a judgment debt owing to the judgment debtor, and gives him the right to enforce it, but does not give him the right to sell it. Where a sheriff sold a judgment belonging to a judgment debtor, Held that the sale was irregular; that the sheriff thereby went out of possession; and that the debtor was thereby entitled to enforce the judgment for his own benefit. Horwood v. Murdoch, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 435; 1 A.L.T., 102.

Several Writs of Fi. Fa.—Goods Sold as under One Writ—Proceeds Applied in Satisfaction of former Writ.]—Several writs of fi. fa. were issued, and the goods were taken in execution and sold as under B.'s writ, but the proceeds were applied in satisfaction of a prior writ. B. sued the sheriff for money had and received. Held that the sheriff must apply the proceeds in satisfaction of the writs according to their priority of delivery to him, but that he seizes and sells under them all. Rule nisi to enter verdict for plaintiff refused. Barnard v. Wright, 5 A.J.R., 66.

Payment by Judgment Debtor—Appropriation.]—Where there were several writs of fi. fa. issued, and the debtor paid to the sheriff a sum of money, informing him that it was to be applied in satisfaction of a certain judgment, and the sheriff applied it in satisfaction of a prior writ, Held that the sheriff had acted rightly; that his duty was that set out in the last case; and that he might disregard the appropriation indicated by the debtor. Slack v. Winder, 5 A.J.R., 72.

Duty in Executing Fi. Fa.—Claim to Goods—Interpleader.]—The sheriff is not bound, where notice has been sent to him with a fi. fa. that a claim to the goods might be made, and that if made it should be contested, to take interpleader proceedings immediately the claim is made, without further instruction, or to proceed in disregard of the claim on the ground that it is frivolous, unless the plaintiff previously undertakes to indemnify him in so doing. M'Gee v. Anderson, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 414.

Order to pay Proceeds of a Sale under Fi. Fa. into a Bank—Regulæ Generales (1854) Chap. IX., Rules 12, 13.]—Per Stephen, J. (In Chambers)—Rules 12 and 13 are repealed by 19 Vict. No. 19, Sec. 2, and therefore the Court has no jurisdiction to order payment as sought. Ex parte London Discount and Mortgage Bank, 2 A.L.T., 111.

Fees and Poundage.]—On 28th October, 1862, execution was issued on a writ, with directions by the plaintiff to the sheriff of Victoria to levy at once, and a levy was made accordingly. On the 29th another writ was issued by the plaintiff to the sheriff at Ballarat, with directions to evy, but not to sell until further orders from he plaintiff. On 4th November the persons against whom execution was issued, executed a deed of assignment under 5 Vict. No. 7; and on the same day plaintiff gave the sheriff of Victoria notice to withdraw from possession, which he refused to do unless paid his poundage, and the poundage was paid under protest. The plaintiff contended that the sheriff was not entitled to poundage, on the ground that, though he had "seized" he had not "levied" as required by the Act. Held that the plaintiff having, by his own act in requiring the sheriff to withdraw, prevented him from earning poundage, could not resist the claim, and that the sheriff was entitled to his poundage. Sichel v. Wittowski, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 394.

Costs of Interpleader Order—"Common Law Procedure Statute" (No. 274,) Sec. 193.]—Barry, J., in Chambers, ordered a bill of costs to be referred back to the Prothonotary, and that he should allow the sheriff his costs of drawing, settling, taking out and serving an interpleader order. Hamilton v. McCarthy, 3 A.J.R., 83.

Act No. 274, Sec. 372, Schedule 34—Mileage—Money Paid into Revenue.]—Under Schedule 34 to Act No. 274, the sheriff is only entitled to charge mileage fees one way, back mileage not counting as part of the distance, but the Court will not make absolute a rule for the sheriff to refund money which he has already paid into the general revenue. Colonial Bank v. Beaconsfield G.M. Coy., 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 168; 5 A.L.T., 32.

Liability—Escape of Person Attached—Negligence of Sheriff—Re-arrest—Remedy of a Creditor—15 Vict. No. 10, Sec. 30.]—H., a defendant in an equity suit, obtained an order dismissing plaintiff's bill with costs, and issued a writ of attachment against the plaintiff in usual form commanding the sheriff "to have him in our Supreme Court at Melbourne on the 17th June, or on the first day on which said Court shall sit in equity next after arrest." Plaintiff was arrested but escaped on the morning of 13th June before the Court sat, was re-arrested and lodged in gaol but was discharged on habeas corpus by the Full Court in banco. On motion by H. to charge the sheriff in regard to the escape from attachment, Held that the sheriff was liable in damages only, including costs of motion, and not full amount on writ, following the analogy of the remedy at law in 15 Vict. No. 10, Sec. 30. Wall v. Hooper, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 185.

Action for False Imprisonment—Arrest—Escape through Negligence—Re-arrest—Right to take Prisoner before Court in another Bailiwick.]—W. had been arrested by the sheriff under a warrant for contempt of the Court in refusing to obey its order as to costs, the warrant named as the day on which he should be brought before the court, a certain day on which W. escaped through the negligence of the sheriff's bailiff, but the sheriff rearrested him at A., out of his bailiwick, and lodged him in gaol until W. was discharged on habeas corpus on the ground that the warrant was sped and no longer in force. W. brought an action for false imprisonment against the sheriff, and recovered a verdict. On rule nisi for a nonsuit, Held that the sheriff had power to rearrest W. inside or outside his own bailiwick wheresoever he might find him, and might also bring an action to recover debts and costs and money he had had to pay owing to W.'s escape, but that the sheriff did not comply with the warrant in placing W., on the re-arrest, in gaol on his own responsibility, and was therefore liable. Rule discharged. Wall v. Meyrick, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 260; 1 A.L.T., 38.

Duty of Sheriff under Writ of Attachment for Contempt.]—See Re Phelps, ante column 67.

Liability for Negligence while Levying under Fi. Fa.]—A sheriff levied under a fi. fa. for £166, on a mine, plant, &c., of a company; and being told by several persons that there was a mortgage on the property, and that a number of the men had not been paid their wages, he sold the next day for £10. As a matter of fact there was no mortgage, and the purchaser, three weeks afterwards, sold the mine, plant, &c., for £240. The company was wound-up, and the execution creditor sued the sheriff for negligence. Held that the sheriff was liable for the difference between the net amount realised by him at the sale, and the amount of the fi. fa. Smith v. Colles, 2 V.R. (L.,) 195; 2 A.J.R., 117.

SHIPPING.

17 and 18 Vict., Cap. 104, Secs. 40, 41—False Declaration in Certificate—New Ship out of Materials of Old.]—W. was informed against before justices for making a false statement in his certificate in having a ship registered as a new ship; the ship was partly built from the materials of an old ship which had been wrecked. The information was dismissed. Held that the fact of whether the statement was false was for the determination of the justices. Semble that it was not false, as the old ship was broken up and nothing but a few fragments of her reappeared in the new vessel. Dunn v. Wilson, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 465.

Ship—Proof of Ownership.]—Semble that a foreign certificate of registration of a foreign ship, when accompanied with evidence of acts of ownership, is evidence of the property in the ship. Dowsett v. Smith, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 58.

British Flag.]—The fact of a ship sailing under a British flag is good evidence that she is a British ship to support a conviction for harbouring a deserter under Act 17 & 18 Vict., c. 104, Sec. 257, without production of certificate of registration or an examined and certified copy thereof. Regina v. Clark, ex parte Doyle, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 440; 1 A.L.T., 105.

"Passenger Act 1855," Sec. 60—Order in Council, No. 20—Offences against—Who are Amenable to Punishment under.]—The words "any person on board," in Sec. 60 of the "Passenger Act 1855," include "the medical officer" of a passenger ship and her third mate, the latter not being at the time in charge of the ship, so as to render them subject to the summary jurisdiction of justices of the peace for offences committed by them against the Order in Council, No. 20, issued under the "Passenger Act" on the 7th January, 1864, and gazetted in Victoria on the 18th of March, 1864. Regina v. Hill, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 91.

"Chinese Passenger Act"—Offences against—Where Punishable.]—An offence against the "Chinese Passenger Act," 18 & 19 Vict., cap. civ., is triable and punishable in Victoria, although the Act itself refers expressly to no colony but Hong Kong, since the "Merchant Shipping Act," part X., relating to procedure for penalties, &c., is applicable to all possessions not expressly exempted, and is imported bodily into the "Chinese Passenger Act." Regina v. Middleton, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 182.

(4) Owners and their Liabilities and Rights.

Owners need not be Licensed as Passage Brokers—"Passage Brokers Act 1863."]—It was never contemplated by the "Passage Brokers Act 1863" (No. 174,) that owners of ships and their managers should be licensed as passage brokers. Where, therefore, S., the manager of the office in Melbourne of the P. & O. S.N. Coy., not being duly licensed to act as a passage broker, let a passage by a ship of the company from Melbourne to Ceylon, and was convicted, Held, on appeal, that he was not liable to the penalty imposed by the Act, and conviction reversed. Sparkes v. Macfarlane, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 90.

Liability of, as Carriers—Where no Proof of Contract.]—W. sued a steamship company for the loss of certain goods, which he stated that he had delivered to the company to be safely carried from Melbourne to Port Albert for freight to be paid by W. Defendants traversed the contract of bailment, and their liability as carriers. The only evidence in support of W.'s case was a receipt for four packages, given by a wharf clerk to the drayman of a person from whom W. had bought the goods, and evidence that three of the four packages had arrived at Port Albert; but there was no mate's receipt or bill of lading signed by the captain, or other evidence of the conditions on which the goods were delivered on board, given in support of the alleged contract. Held that to substantiate the charge of liability against the owners, evidence of the terms of the contract must be given, and that on the evidence given the owners were not liable. Walker v. The Gippsland S. N. Coy., 2 A.J.R., 123.

Liability of Shipowner to Charterers—Delivery of Cargo—Part only Put on Board.]—Under a charter-party the charterers undertook to load a full and complete cargo of guano, which the owners agreed to deliver, and upon which they were to be paid freight. The charterers loaded only a small quantity of the guano, and the owners refused to deliver it. Held in an action by the charterers against the owners, for not proceeding to the port of discharge and delivering, that the owners, having taken part of the cargo on board, were bound to deliver such part. Smith v. Beaver, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 110.

Carriers–Negligence–Liability for Acts of Agent.] Tasmanian shipowners had undertaken to carry certain goods to Melbourne. On the arrival of the goods in Melbourne, they were carted by a person in the employ of the owners' Melbourne agent to the Custom House, and were injured. Held that there was evidence to render the shipowners liable for negligence in respect of the act of their Melbourne agent. Goddard v. Tasmanian S.N. Coy., 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 360; 5 A.L.T., 120.

Liability of Owner—Voyage Abandoned—Sale of Cargo by Master without Authority of Shipper.]—When a voyage is abandoned, the shipowner will be liable in an action of trover by the shipper, if the master sell the cargo without the authority of the shipper, when it is possible to communicate with him. Connor v. Spence, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 243, 262.

For Necessaries—Power of Master to Bind Owner by Contract for Necessaries—Accessibility of Owner.]—For circumstances in which the Court upheld the decision of the County Court that the master of a ship had power to bind the owner by contracting for the services of a tug, see Smith v. Blair, 5 A.L.T., 177.

Liability for Acts of Master.]—An owner of a ship is not liable for the acts of the master when there are means of communication between them. Holmes v. Norton, 1 A.J.R., 93.

Liability for Collision—Compulsory Pilotage.]—See "The Eden," post column 1323.

What are Necessaries.]—Advances by the master to pay off a mutinous crew are not necessaries, even though it be expedient and for the benefit of the vessel that the crew should be paid off as quickly as possible. Dunn v. Hoyt, 4 A.J.R., 3.

Lien of Shipowner on Cargo—Wreck of Ship—General Average.]—See M'Lean v. Liverpool Association, post column 1322.

Liability of Owner for Injuries to Workman Employed about Ship.]—See McLachlan v. Service, ante columns 893, 894.

When Entitled to Detention Money as Witness.]—The expenses of a master, who had appeared in his own cause when suing for wages and who was the sole witness examined, for detention money as witness were objected to on the grounds that (a) it was not necessary that he should have stopped in the country, as he could have had his evidence taken de bene esse; (b) he should have obtained employment, for he must have known that the cause would not have come to a hearing for a long time; and (c), having acted as his own advocate, he was not entitled to expenses as a witness. Held that it was optional whether he should have himself examined de bene esse; that since the delay was caused by the respondent, and the master could not obtain employment for any length of time without entailing more delay, and could only obtain an employment for a short time of an inferior nature, he was not bound to obtain employment; and that his being his own advocate did not debar him from his expenses as a witness, since the parties to a suit in the Vice-Admiralty Court, when examined as witnesses, were entitled to such expenses. Re the "E. M. Young," 2 A.J.R., 85.

Compensation for Loss of Time.]—Ibid.

Claim for Disbursements by, before becoming Master—Maritime Lien.]—A master has no maritime lien for disbursements made by him on account of the vessel after an agreement with the owner that he should become master, but before he was actually appointed. Dunn v. Hoyt, 4 A.J.R., 3.

Suit by Master for Wages and Necessaries—"Imperial Act," 26 Vict., Cap. 24, Sec. 10—Limited to Time when Placed on Register.]—By Sec. 10 of the "Imperial Act" the Court has jurisdiction in claims for necessaries only when the necessaries are supplied in a "British" possession. A master can only claim against his ship for wages and disbursements from the date on which he is placed on the ship's register as master. "The Albion," 3 A.J.R., 72; 27 L.T., 723.

Lien for, Not Lost by Taking Mortgage over Ship.]—A master is not deprived of his lien for wages and disbursements by the fact that he has taken a mortgage over the ship for the balance of his wages and disbursements, especially if the shipowner has fraudulently concealed from him the fact that there was a prior mortgage over the ship. Ibid.

Liability for Injuries Caused by Negligence of Crew.]—The master of a ship in harbour is not liable for injuries caused by the negligence of the crew, he being merely a fellow-servant with the crew. Clancy v. Harrison, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 437.

Neither is a ship-master liable for an injury to a passenger by a plank falling while the ship was at sea, there being no evidence of any personal negligence on his part. Stacpoole v. Betridge, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 302; 1 A.L.T., 43.

Seamen's Wages—Payment of—Discharge—"Merchant Shipping Act 1854," Secs. 209, 210.]—The master of a disabled seaman paid to the shipping master the wages of such seaman, having rendered an account of what wages were due, and obtained from him a discharge. The seaman refused to recognise the payment, and sued the master for his wages and damages for wrongful dismissal, and recovered a verdict. On appeal, Held that though under Secs. 209 and 210 of the "Merchant Shipping Act 1854" the master is bound to render to the shipping master an account of the wages due before he obtains a discharge, he must pay the wages to the seaman himself, and appeal dismissed. Pain v. Kneen, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 73.

Compensation for Wrongful Discharge — Viaticum.]—A seaman wrongfully discharged in the port of Melbourne is not entitled to receive as part of his compensation an allowance for viaticum to his port of engagement, if it be shown that he could have obtained employment on ships bound direct to his port of engagement at higher wages than he was receiving when discharged. The "Ferret," 8 V.L.R. (A.,) 1, 4.

Compensation for Wrongful Discharge—Seamen Participes Criminis in an Attempt to Steal Ship.]—If seamen are participes criminis in an endeavour to steal their ship, they are not entitled to recover either wages or compensation for alleged wrongful dismissal. "The Ferret," L.R., 8 App. Cas., 329, 337.

Six seamen brought a suit in the Vice-Admiralty Court, to recover wages and damages for wrongful dismissal, and the judge found that a total amount of £203 9s. 8d. was due to them, but that the amount due to each was less than £50, and dismissed the suit for want of jurisdiction. On appeal to the Privy Council, Held that under Sec. 15 of the Orders-in-Council passed under 2 Will. 4, c. 51, and Sec. 189 of the "Merchant Shipping Act 1854," the judge was wrong in dismissing the suit for want of jurisdiction, and that a decree for £203 19s. 8d. should be made. Ibid.

Action for Libel—"Merchant Shipping Act" (17 and 18 Vict., Cap. 104), Sec. 176—Discharge of Seaman — Question for Jury.]— A seaman brought an action of libel against a master of a ship for writing "declined" in the certificate of discharge in each of the columns set apart for certificate of character as to his conduct, capacity, and sobriety. Held that the master was not privileged in writing as he did; that the master might have drawn a line across the blank, in which case he would not have been liable, but having written as he did it was a question for the jury whether the word "declined" was really libellous. Garson v. Jacobsen, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 7.

Seaman's Certificate of Discharge—Filling in Column with a Cross.]—Snewin v. Doherty, ante column 361.

Rights of Mortgagee—Freight.]—G. being registered owner of the ship N., of Launceston, Tasmania, consigned and shipped from Launceston certain goods at a certain rate of freight to the plaintiffs. The N. arrived in Melbourne, February, 1867, with the goods on board. G. gave plaintiffs' solicitor a written order directing the master of the ship to deliver the goods to the plaintiffs, which order stated that plaintiffs had settled with G. as to the freight. G. being indebted to the plaintiffs, the debt was reduced by the amount of this freight. G. had mortgaged the ship to the defendant company in September, 1866. On 14th February, 1867, the defendants took possession of the ship; but before this the plaintiffs had presented the order for the delivery of the goods and demanded them, but the master refused delivery. The defendants then claimed freight for the goods from the plaintiffs, and refused to deliver until freight was paid. The plaintiffs paid £197 for freight. On special case stated without pleadings, Held that the arrangements made between plaintiffs and G. before the defendant mortgagees took possession could not be unravelled and disturbed by them after taking possession, and that plaintiffs were entitled to recover back the freight. Goldsbrough v. Melbourne Banking Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 105.

Act 17 & 18 Vict., Cap. 104, Sec. 69—Priority of Mortgages.]—Plaintiffs, in May 1875, advanced money to C.J.H., who executed a mortgage over a ship in statutory form to secure it. C.J.H. at that time was registered owner of 32-64ths of the ship, and held an unregistered bill of sale of the remainder. C.J.H. subsequently mortgaged to H.H., who procured the due registration of the bill of sale to C.J.H. over the 32-64ths, and also registered the mortgage to himself. This was done before plaintiffs registered their mortgage. On bill by the plaintiffs alleging the facts and charging fraud, and that H.H. had notice of their mortgage, Held, upon demurrer, that H.H. had priority under 17 & 18 Vict., c. 104, Sec. 69. Jardine v. Hoyt, 2 V.R. (E.,) 152; 2 A.J.R., 129.

"Beneficial Interest," as Defined by 25 & 26 Vict., Cap. lxiii., Sec. 3.]—The 25 & 26 Vict., c. lxiii., Sec. 3, declaring that "beneficial interest," when used in "The Merchant Shipping Act 1854," includes interests arising under contract and other equitable interests," and that "equities may be enforced against owners and mortgagees of ships in respect of their interest therein in the same manner as equities may be enforced against them, irrespective of any other personal property," applies only to equities against them personally, and not as against the ship or persons having acquired good registered titles to it under the contractors; the clause, in fact, saves the powers of disposition conferred by the former Act (17 & 18 Vict., c. 104, Sec. 69) on registered owners and mortgagees; that is, amongst other things, the power of making a good title, notwithstanding their own unregistered acts. Ibid.

Contract Created by—"Factors Act" 6 Geo. IV. Cap. xciv., Sec. 2.]—The contract contained in a bill of lading is not performed by merely landing the goods; that contract is not only to carry, but to deliver, and until the goods have been taken out of the possession of the shipowners, and have been delivered to the consignee, the bill of lading is in force, and remains a symbol of property which may be "entrusted" to a "person," within the meaning of the "Factors Act," 6 Geo. IV., c. xciv., Sec. 2. Levi v. Learmonth, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 283.

Exceptions from Liability—Rust.]—A bill of lading contained a clause exempting the ship from liability for damages caused by leakage, breakage or rust. The plaintiff sued for damages for the delivery of certain hoop iron in a damaged condition, and the defendants pleaded damage by rust. Held that the plaintiffs to recover must prove that the damage was not caused by rust; and that if some of the damage were caused by rust, and there were other damage superadded to the damage by rust, it was for the plaintiff to show how much of the damage was caused by rust, and how much by other causes. Martin v. Hunter, 1 V.R. (L.,) 144; 1 A.J.R., 128.

Exceptions from Liability.]—A bill of lading contained the following exemptions:—"Restraint of princes or rulers, accidents, loss or damage from any act, neglect, or default whatsoever of the pilot, master, mariners, &c., in navigating the ship, or under any other circumstances." The ship put into Manilla, by the laws of which port the master ought to have included in the ship's manifest all the goods on board; he failed to do this as to a portion, and that portion of the goods was confiscated by the Custom authorities. Held that the words "under any other circumstances" were ejusdem generis with those preceding them, and must in some way be connected with the navigation of the ship. Per Williams, J., that even if it would come within the words "restraint of princes or rulers," yet the causa causans was the master's default, and that the exemptions were no defence. Ah Kang v. Australian S.N. Coy., 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 171; 5 A.L.T., 29.

Action by Indorsee against Ship-owner for Short Weight.]—The plaintiff bank as indorsee of a bill of lading, sued the shipowner B. for short weight in bales of wool delivered. The bills were signed before the goods were received on board the ship. Held that although there was an irregularity in so signing the bills, yet the jury, who returned a verdict for defendant, had had the opportunity of hearing the evidence of mercantile men as to what ought to be the weight of bales shipped and delivered in London, and the Court refused to disturb the verdict. Bank of Australasia v. Blyth, 5 A.J.R., 166.

Wreck of Ship—General Average—Protracted Adjustment—Lien of Shipowner.]—In the case of a wreck where certain holders of bills of lading have to contribute to a general average, and the adjustment is protracted, the shipowner's lien may be satisfied by the consignee tendering his bond for the payment of the contribution when adjusted, and the consignee, when he has tendered such security, is entitled to the delivery of the cargo, and the owner, accepting such security, is relieved from further liability in respect of securing the payment of the contribution. M'Lean v. Liverpool Association, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 93; 5 A.L.T., 1.

Construction.]—A charter party provided that the ship might lawfully carry 252 passengers in the 'tween decks and 9 in the cabin, and should she not be able to carry 252 in the 'tween decks, defendant should pay £5 per head for each less than that number. The ship could not take 252 in the 'tween decks, but could take more than nine in the cabin, and the owner desired to set apart part of that space for their accommodation. Held that there were two contracts, and a breach of the first might be separately relied on. Hart v. Munroe, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 53.

Liability of Owners to Charterers—Part only of Cargo put on Board—Charter Party Providing for a Full Cargo.]—Smith v. Beaver, ante column 1317.

Agreement for Hiring Ship—Construction of.]—See Stewart v. Austin, ante column 190.

Right of Shipowner to Recover Freight—Delivery at Intermediate Place.]—If goods are delivered to be carried to a certain place, a carrier is not generally entitled to freight until delivery at that place. But where a carrier (by sea), at the special request of the consignee, delivers goods at an intermediate port, and the consignee gives an unqualified receipt upon the bill of lading, the carrier is entitled to recover freight. Hunt v. Barbour, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 189.

Right of Mortgagee of Ship to Freight.]—See Goldsbrough v. Melbourne Banking Coy., ante column 1320.

Demurrage—For what Delay Payable.]—A shipowner, by charter party, contracted to bring his ship to "Hobson's Bay, or as near thereto as the ship may safely get," and to deliver "at any wharf where the ship can safely lie afloat." He brought his ship into the Bay convenient to the wharf named by the charterer, and was ready to come alongside the wharf and discharge; but was kept waiting for a berth for four days, and during the time the ship was discharging she was compelled by stress of weather to haul out from the pier for four days. The shipowner claimed demurrage for the eight days so lost. Held that he was entitled to demurrage for such days. Young v. Woolley, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 30.

Compulsory Pilotage — Liability of Owner.]—Where a ship is under compulsory pilotage, and a collision occurs by the fault of the ship, the owners of the ship will not be exonerated from liability unless the collision was occasioned solely by the fault of the pilot. The Eden, 6 V.L.R. (A.,) 8.

Steamer and Sailing Vessel—"Sailing Rules," Articles 15, 16, 18.]—When a steamer and a sailing vessel meet it is the absolute duty of the steamer to give way, under "Sailing Rules" Article 15. If her master is in doubt as to the position or course of the sailing vessel he should slow his engines under Article 16. Though the sailing vessel should then keep her course, under Article 18, that does not necessarily mean the same direction by compass, but the path she ought to take in the particular position in which she then is; in navigating a channel it means following the channel, and, when sailing in a wind, keeping the weather-side. The Easby, 6 V.L.R. (A.,) 1.

Steamship meeting Sailing Vessel—"Rules of Sailing," Article 16.]—When the master of a steamer, which a sailing vessel is approaching in a fairway, sees the latter suddenly alter her course without any apparent reason he is at liberty to assume there is some reason for the alteration, and that it will be adhered to, and he is then, on that supposition, to take the necessary steps to get out of the way, not to slow his engines under "Rules of Sailing," Article 16. The Eden, 6 V.L.R. (A.,) 8.

For Preventible Injury.]—A person is not to stand by and see injury done to his ship which he can prevent, and then to claim damages for the injury which might have been avoided had he taken ordinary precautions. Holmes v. Lloyd, re "The Greyhound," 1 A.J.R., 39.

For Preventible Injury — Onus of Proof.]—Where in a collision it is asserted that any part of the damage might have been avoided, the onus of proving such assertion is on those asserting it. Ibid.

How Ascertained.]—Semble, that the question of damages should be gone into by the parties themselves. Ibid.

Salvage—How Recoverable.]—Salvage is recoverable at common law under the common count "for goods saved for and delivered to the defendant." Buisson v. Warburton, 4 A.J.R., 43, 119.

Contract to Tow Ship for Fixed Price—Employment of Additional Tug.]—Holmes v. Norton, ante column 190.

Services Entitling to Salvage—Recovery of Derelict Property.]—A ship sank with a cargo of copper belonging to M. and N. M. hired a vessel, fitted her out, and sent her to recover the derelict copper. A great part of this copper was recovered under circumstances of great difficulty and danger, and was sold by M. N. filed a bill against M. seeking an account of copper sold after deducting proportionate amount of costs and expenses. Held that M. was entitled to a salvage allowance over and above the costs and expenses. Melhuish v. Miller, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 61.

Jurisdiction of Court of Equity in such a Case.]—Such a case for an account and for salvage allowance comes within the equitable jurisdiction of the Court as one for arranging contribution as in cases of average. Ibid, p. 66.

Validity—Communication with Owners—Power of Agents to take Bond—Termination of the Voyage.]—A ship owned by a person living in New Zealand was directed to go to Melbourne, discharge there, and proceed thence to Newcastle and load with coals. The vessel reached Melbourne, and the cargo was consigned to the promoters as the owner's agents, and the promoters advanced money to the captain, which was repaid by a draft on the owner duly honoured. The captain then obtained three separate advances from the promoters for repairs and wages. To secure themselves, the promoters took a bottomry bond on 24th January, 1874. On 13th January, the owner became insolvent, which was known to the promoters after the execution of the bond. The respondents seized the ship under a mortgage of September, 1873. Held that there was evidence that the voyage was not terminated at Melbourne, and that, therefore, the bond was not invalid on that ground; that the bond was invalid in the absence of communication with the owner, and that the promoters could not convert the advances made upon the personal credit of the owner into bottomry; that agents may, if advances cannot be obtained elsewhere, take the security of a bottomry bond. The Lady Franklin, 5 A.J.R., 185.

General Average—Where and How Adjusted.]—A ship was damaged and driven back by stress of weather, and, in an action for contribution to general average, the evidence of an average-stater, who had purported to adjust the general average at a port not being the port of destination or of actual discharge, upon documents sent to him from the port of discharge, was received as that of an expert, and the facts on which the adjustment was based were proved before the jury. Held, in an action to set aside such adjustment as being made in an improper place, and consequently before an improper person as adjuster, that this was not an adjustment of average in the proper sense of the term, since the whole question was gone into and there was a finding by the jury of the amount of contribution on facts proved before them, the adjuster being merely called as an expert, and no question as to the law of the port of discharge needing determination; and that the adjustment could not be set aside. Connor v. Spence, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 243, 262, 263.

Act No. 255, Sec. 5—"Public Works Statute 1865," Sec. 131—"Melbourne and Hobson's Bay United Railway Companys Statute"—Company's Pier Master.]—D. sent his boat alongside a ship moored to the Railway Company's Pier to receive cargo consigned to him. V., who was pier-master to the company, and also assistant harbour-master, on D.'s denying his obligation to pay wharfage rates to the company, cut D.'s boat adrift after giving him notice as on behalf of the company to remove it. D. sued V. in the County Court for seizing and carrying away his boat, and was nonsuited. Held that V. had such power, and D.'s appeal dismissed. Donaldson v. Vine, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 6.

Dues, Tolls, and Rates—Act No. 209, Sec. 2—Goods Imported "for use of H.M. Government"—18 Vict. No. 9, Sec. 4.]—Goods imported "for the use of H.M. Government" and received and accepted by H.M. Government, are under Sec. 4 of Act No. 9 exempt from the wharfage rates levied under Sec. 2 of Act No. 209. Regina v. Bright, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 184.

Port and Harbour Regulations Clause 31—Providing a Good and Sufficient Gangway.]—It is not enough, in order to comply with clause 31 of the "Port and Harbour Regulations," that the gangway should be ready for use, but it must be attached to the pier. If, however, all who are entitled to be on board are on the ship, it is sufficient if the gangway be ready to be attached to the pier when required. Mackersey v. Whitcher, 2 A.J.R., 62.

"Passengers, Harbours and Navigation Statute 1865," Sec. 40—Regulations Inoperative Outside Limits of Port.]—The Governor-in-Council has no power under Sec. 4 of the "Passengers, Harbours and Navigation Statute 1865" to make regulations operative beyond the limits of the port for which they are made. A regulation which purports to make one offence continuing within and without the limits of the port is altogether bad, and the offence cannot be separated as to that within and that without the port. Regina v. Pearson, ex parte Smith, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 329; 2 A.L.T., 63.

And see also cases ante column 493, under HARBOUR TRUST.

"Passengers, Harbours and Navigation Statute" (No. 255,) Sec. 45—"Owner."]—The notice under Sec. 45 of the Act is properly served upon the person who is the registered owner of a ship at the time of its wreck, and it is to him the harbour-master must look for repayment of any expenses incurred over what may be realised by the sale of the wreck; the fact that the owner has given notice to the underwriters of total abandonment of the wreck puts him in no better position in respect to the harbour officials. Ramsden v. Payne, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 250.

Notice to Remove Wreck and give Security—"Passengers, Harbours and Navigation Statute" (No. 255,) Sec. 45.]—A notice to the owner of a sunken wreck to remove it within a time mentioned in the notice, and to give security for the removal of the ship within a further time mentioned in the notice, is a proper notice under Sec. 45 of the "Passengers, Harbours and Navigation Statute" (No. 255,) for the harbour-master is not to be presumed to know whether the owner will exercise his option of removing the wreck within the original time specified or of giving security for its removal within the extended time, and by such a notice he rightly allows him to exercise his option. Payne v. Fishley, 1 A.J.R., 122.

Suspension of Engineer's Certificate.]—The Court granted a rule nisi to restrain the Victorian Steam Navigation Board from depriving an engineer of his certificate on the ground that notice at ten a.m. to attend the board at eleven a.m. the same day was not a sufficient "copy of the report or statement of the case" within Sec. 23 of 25 & 26 Vict., c. 63. Ex parte Dykes, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 162.

Suspension of Master's Certificate—Jurisdiction of Victorian Steam Navigation Board—Beyond Territorial Limits of Colony—17 & 18 Vict., Cap. 104, Secs. 242, 520—25 & 26 Vict., Cap. 63, Sec. 23—Act No. 255, Secs. 76, 77—Act No. 312, Sec. 2.]—The ship Gulf of Finland struck on a reef off the coast of South Australia, and the Victorian Steam Navigation Board suspended the master's certificate on the ground that he had omitted to take proper soundings. Held, per Stawell, C.J., and Stephen, J. (dissentiente Higinbotham, J.,) that the power given to the board by Sec. 242 of 17 & 18 Vict., c. 104, and Sec. 77 of Act No. 255, was to make inquiry into charges of incompetency, &c., there was no power given to exercise jurisdiction, and that the board had no jurisdiction beyond the territorial limits of the colony; that Sec. 520 of 17 & 18 Vict., c. 104, only refers to offences and complaints of a criminal nature. Summons to prohibit the enforcement of the suspension of the certificate allowed. In re Victorian Steam Navigation Board, ex parte Allan, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 248; 3 A.L.T., 1.

Claim for Necessaries Supplied in another Possession.]—Under no circumstances can the Court of Vice-Admiralty in this colony take into consideration a claim for necessaries unless they were supplied in the possession in which such Court is established. Dunn v. Hoyt, 4 A.J.R., 3.

Claim for Compensation for Wrongful Dismissal.]—The Court of Vice-Admiralty has jurisdiction to entertain a claim by seamen for compensasation for wrongful dismissal. The "Ferret," 8 V.L.R. (A.,) 1.

Claim over £50—Several Claims—"Merchant Shipping Act 1854," Sec. 189.]—Seamen united in an action against a ship for wages, and the amount claimed by each was more than £50, but the Judge of the Court of Vice-Admiralty reduced the sum due to each to less than £50, but the whole amount exceeded that sum. Held, per Sir W. F. Stawell, that under Sec. 189 of the "Merchant Shipping Act 1854," he had not jurisdiction, but Held per Privy Council, that he had jurisdiction. The "Ferret," 8 V.L.R. (A.,) 1; L.R., 8 App. Cas., 329.

Per the Privy Council.—Sec. 15 of an order in Council passed in pursuance of 2 Will. IV., c. 51, gives the Vice-Admiralty Court jurisdiction to entertain a suit brought by any number of seamen not exceeding six, to recover their wages; and such right of suit is not taken away by Sec. 189 of the "Merchant Shipping Act 1854," so long as the total aggregate amount claimed by such seamen exceeds £50. Ibid.

Plea of Tender.]—A respondent in a suit for wages is not barred by a plea of tender from afterwards raising a plea of want of jurisdiction, if it ultimately appear that the amount claimed is less than £50. The "Ferret," 8 V.L.R. (A.,) 1, 6.

Counter Claim.]—A master suing for wages is not allowed, though a counter claim may be raised by the owners, to introduce matters extrinsic to the accounts as between master and owner, since 17 and 18 Vict., c. 104, in effect only allows the bringing forward of a mutual debt. Dunn v. Hoyt, 4 A.J.R., 3.

Interest—Where Allowed.]—Interest on sums advanced by the master is only allowed in cases of bottomry and collision, and the rate allowed is 5 per cent. Ibid.

Costs—Promoter Appearing in Person.]—A promoter who conducts his case in person in the Vice-Admiralty Court is entitled to the costs of engrossed copies of the pleadings made by his proctor, and for such notes of facts and proofs collected by the proctor as may be requisite to enable the party to save the public time by giving to the Court a clear, connected, and succinct narrative of the case, which his necessity compels him to detail and prove in person. Re the "E. M. Young," 2 A.J.R., 85.

Costs—Of Master Claiming Lien for Wages and Disbursements.]—A master of a ship suing for wages and disbursements made by him, obtained a decree in his favour, with costs, which included his expenses as a witness, his maintenance, and compensation for loss of time during the suit. The Registrar taxed the costs, and on appeal from the taxation, Held that where costs are given in an Admiralty suit they are full costs, and that nothing could be struck out for issues on which the promoter had failed; that where, on the pleadings, an admission was made that wages were due, it will not deprive the promoter of expenses as a witness if he fails in other claims, unless the amount admitted to be due for wages be paid into court, or unless the admission be made in such form that application could be made for payment into court; that the amount allowed for maintenance should be what was actually paid for maintenance, and should not be arhitrarily fixed at so much per diem or per week; that compensation for time lost should be made at the rates prevailing in or near the jurisdiction; and that nothing could be allowed in respect of a delay by the promoter himself in bringing the suit. The promoter was also allowed his costs of obtaining security to refund money he took out of court. Dunn v. Hoyt, re the "Albion," 4 A.J.R., 9.

Costs.]—Where the owners succeeded on a reference to the Registrar in reducing the claim, but did not produce the ship's accounts, they were not allowed the costs of the reference. Dunn v. Hoyt, 4 A.J.R., 3.

Costs—Of Objection to Registrar's Report.]—Where an objector to a report of the Registrar substantially succeeded in his objection, but his application was very informal, Semble, that this was a ground for refusing him his costs of the objection. Ibid.

Costs—Before Registrar—Counsel.]—Costs of counsel will not be allowed in proceedings before the Registrar to take accounts. Ibid.

Attachment for Non-payment of Costs—26 Vict., Cap. 24, Sec. 10—Rules 1, 31, 32, 36.]—The promoter P. was arrested under an attachment for non-payment of costs. On motion to set aside attachment on the grounds (1) that it was granted on a day which was not a Court day; (2) other irregularities, such as no notice to show cause, and that it was issued in a cause for "necessaries," whereas the suit was for "building and equipment," Held that there was nothing to show any irregularity after the issue of the attachment, and that it was not a step in the cause but only in personam. Application refused. In re the "Condor," 5 A.J.R., 93.

SIGNATURE.

Required by Statute—What is a Compliance with.]—Where a Statute merely requires that a document shall be signed, the Statute is satisfied by proof of the making of a mark upon the document by or by the authority of the signatory. Regina v. Moore, ex parte Myers, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 322; 6 A.L.T., 151.

I. Articled Clerks.

II. Solicitors.

I. Articled Clerks.

(1) Binding and Service.

What is Service.]—G. was admitted in 1854 to practise as a conveyancer, and entered into partnership with F. as "conveyancer," and the firm of F. & G. was advertised as a firm of "conveyancers." During the partnership G. articled himself to F. an attorney. On motion for G.'s admission, Held, the service must be honest and true, and must be shown by a continuance of the status pupillaris, that G.'s acting as a principal in the conveyancing business was not consistent with his being in statu pupillari, and his service was not good. Admission refused. In re Garlick, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 274.

Time of Serving Articles.]—Where it appeared that A. had served three years in Melbourne regularly, and had during the remainder of his articles been absent in Castlemaine managing his master's business, and frequently consulted his master as to matters of difficulty, Held that A. was not to be credited with the years he had so spent in Castlemaine, and admission postponed. In re Garrard, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 229, 277.

Death of Master—No Relation Back of Fresh Articles.]—An articled clerk had served about a year and a half when his master died. Held that the fresh articles into which the clerk might enter did not relate back to the death of the master; that the death de facto put an end to the former articles, and that the clerk might enter upon new articles without application to the Court. In re Jones, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 57.

Cannot Perform any other Office or Employment during Articles—Clerk a Member of Parliament.]—The fact that an articled clerk has been a member of Parliament during the term of his articles is not an obstacle to his admission as an attorney if it is not shown that his parliamentary duties have occupied him in office hours. Ex parte Duffy, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 142.

Motions for leave to file articles of clerkship nunc pro tunc should be made to the Full Court. In re Crabbe, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 66.

Affidavit Verifying Assignment of Articles.]—An affidavit verifying the assignment of articles may be made by any one who is acquainted with the signature of the solicitor assigning. Leave given to file such an affidavit nunc pro tunc. In re Barrett, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 126.

(3) Examination and Admission.

Practice.]—Where a motion for admission has been refused, and a renewed application is made on further affidavit, express notice of such renewed application should be served on the Law Institute. In re Garlick, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 274.

Fees—Attorney Admitted in one Colony and Serving Further Time in Articles in this.]—An attorney who has been admitted in one colony, but who has had to serve a further time in articles before admission in this colony, must pay for admission here the sum of £42 for admission as an articled clerk, and the sum of £10 10s. as a person admitted in another Court. Ex parte Barrett, 2 A.J.R., 113.

Notice to Board of Examiners—Rules of Court.]—S. was articled in 1859, and served three years under them. After an interval of some years, during which he did not serve, he entered into new articles with another attorney, subsequent to the making of the new rules, and served about three years. He had passed his University examinations, but failed to give a month's notice to the Board. Held that having entered into articles under the old rules, he was entitled to be admitted as under them, even although he had not had his articles assigned by his old master, which was the regular method. Ex parte E. H. Smith, 3 A.J.R., 29, 53.

Notice—Supreme Court Rules, Rule 22.]—The Court will not, in the absence of some urgent reason, admit an attorney to practise before the expiration of the notice prescribed by Rule 22 of the Supreme Court Rules of 3rd December, 1872. In re Bushby, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 487.

Posting Notice.]—The rules of 1854, requiring an applicant to post notices at the prothonotary's office, and at the Supreme Court, are repealed by the Rules of 1865, yet the old practice was followed. The Court did not feel justified in refusing admission to an applicant who had so failed to post notice under the words of Rule 24 of 1872. In re M'Kinley and Williams, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 569; 1 A.L.T., 110.

Examination.]—An applicant for admission must pass all four of the examinations prescribed by the Rules. In re Cowper, 5 A.J.R., 185.

Examinations.]—Where a person has been admitted to practise in another colony in which the time of service is shorter, he must, in addition to making up the time by serving in Victoria, pass the two examinations in law and history prescribed by Rule 18 of December, 1872 (In re Barret, 2 A.J.R., 113, not followed.) In re Morris, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 262.

Examinations—When Passed.]—Examinations at the University to be passed by an articled clerk, with an interval of one academic year between them, may be passed at the beginning and end of the same academical year if the University regulations allow the examinations in respect of two consecutive years to be so passed by students at the University. Re Wisewould, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 60.

Examination Passed after Articles—Rules of 23rd December, 1865, R. 36.]—Where one of the two examinations in law and history prescribed in rule 36 of the Rules of 23rd December, 1865, had been passed after the expiration of the term of the articles, the Court admitted the applicant. Re Major, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 305.

Examination before the Time Appointed by "Reg. Gen." of 16th October, 1882.]—The Court has no power to allow an articled clerk to be examined before the time appointed by Reg. Gen. of 16th October, 1882. In re Gair, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 108.

Examinations—Dividing.]—Where the passing of an examination in the same subject more than once during the course is not required by the University in the course for the degree of LL.B., the Court will act on such practice as regards the examination for attorneys; but the prescribed examination must not be passed piecemeal. In re Moule; In re Skinner, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 286, 287.

Certificate.]—Rule 37 of the Rules regulating the admission of attorneys (23rd December, 1865,) which prescribes the delivery of a certificate in the form "E" one year before giving notice of desire to be examined, must be taken to mean one year at least; and the delivery of such certificate a longer time beforehand is sufficient. Re Kirby, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 285.

Duty of Board.]—The board of examiners should not raise any point for the opinion of the Court, by appending it to their certificate; they should decide themselves, and, if necessary, make a special report. Ibid.

Leave to File Certificate of Matriculation Examination nunc pro tunc not to be granted unless in very Special Circumstances.]—In re Morgan, 5 A.J.R., 69.

"Reg.-Gen.," 11th April 1874—Rule 18.]—An articled clerk who had omitted to produce to the board of examiners, before entering into articles, a certificate of having passed the matriculation examination was allowed to produce it nunc pro tunc. In re Barbour, 3 A.L.T., 25.

Filing Certificate nunc pro tunc—"Reg. Gen." of 3rd December 1872, R. 20.]—The Court cannot allow the certificate required by Reg. Gen., 3rd December, 1872, rule 20, to be filed after the proper date has elapsed, nunc pro tunc. In re Perry, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 47.

II. Solicitors.

English Attorney—"Supreme Court Rules," Rule 23.]—The Court cannot entertain an application for the admission of an attorney, previously admitted to practise in England, to practise in this colony without having obtained a report from the board of examiners, as prescribed by Rule 23 of the "Supreme Court Rules" of 3rd December 1872, In re Pyman, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 486.

"Supreme Court (Conveyancing) Act," 11 Vict., No. 33, Sec. 13—Bill of Sale.]—A bill of sale is not within Sec. 13 of 11 Vict. No. 33, and a person, being an unqualified practitioner, is not liable within that section for drawing a bill of sale for a fee. Franklin v. Drew, 3 A.J.R., 26.

Act 11 Vict. No. 33, Sec. 13—Agreement for Sale of Goodwill and Lease of Hotel.]—W., a hotel broker, drew up an agreement by which W., as agent for C., agreed to transfer the goodwill and lease of a hotel to B., and charged a fee therefor. Held that the agreement did not constitute a formal lease, and was not "a conveyance or other deed or instrument in writing" within the meaning of Sec. 13 of Act No. 33. In re Wayth, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 389; 1 A.L.T., 97.

Penalty for Practising as a Legal Practitioner without due Qualification—Acts 5 Will. IV. No. 22; 11 Vic. No. 33, Sec. 13; No. 159.]—See Fenton v. Dry, ante column 1147.

22 Geo. II., Cap. XLVI., Sec. 11—Offence against—Power of Court.]—The 22 Geo. II., cap. xlvi., Sec. 11, relating to offences by attorneys, for which they may be struck off the roll, is not in force in this colony; but the Court, in its original jurisdiction, possesses adequate powers to control and punish solicitors, as officers of the Court, to the full extent given under the Statute. In re Grieve, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 197.

Rule Nisi to Show Cause against when Granted.]—A rule nisi calling upon a solicitor to show cause why he should not be struck off the rolls will not be granted simply on depositions by an insolvent in the Insolvent Court admitting that he was allowed to participate in the solicitor's professional profits. In re ———. 1 W. & W. (L.,) 204.

When Allowed—Forgery.]—A solicitor will be struck off the roll on proof that he has been tried for forgery, admitted the offence, and been convicted. In re ———, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 211.

For what—Fomenting Litigation.]—The cases in which an attorney will be struck off the rolls are where the attorney has been guilty of felony or gross misdemeanour capable of being tried by a jury, or cases of such misconduct as amounts to breach of trust, misappropriation of a client's money, or the signature of a name to some document without proper authority. Where an attorney had been guilty of writing letters which could only be construed as being intended to foment litigation, and which were capable of being construed as intending to suborn witnesses to commit perjury, and as containing champertous proposals, the Court visited the offence by condemning the attorney in the costs of the rule to strike him off the rolls, and in the costs as between attorney and client, and by suspending him till the costs were paid. In re Gresson, 2 A.J.R., 120.

Retaining Client's Money.]—For circumstances under which an attorney was suspended from practice for two years for retaining his client's money for his own use, by mixing up moneys so received and his own moneys in one account. See In re Dyer, ex parte Pearson, 3 A.J.R., 125.

Appropriation of Client's Money—Suspension though Money Repaid—Costs.] — Where an attorney had appropriated his client's money, but had subsequently repaid it, nevertheless, on the application of the Law Institute to strike him off the rolls, he was suspended for two years, the Court holding that it was its duty to see that persons whom they accredited did not defraud their clients. As no person was named in the rule to strike off the rolls as liable for costs in the event of its being discharged, the Court gave no costs against the attorney. Re Scott, 4 A.J.R., 124.

Remission of Suspension.]—In order to induce the Court to remit a sentence of suspension in whole or in part, it is necessary to show some new matters, some altered circumstances, or some omitted facts which, if they had been presented at the time the sentence was awarded, would have affected the decision of the Court. S.C., 5 A.J.R., 185.

(c) Summary Jurisdiction of Court.

Attachment—For Non-Payment of Money withheld from a Client.]—G., a solicitor, was ordered to pay over money withheld from his client, and before doing so his estate was sequestrated under the Insolvency Act. After sequestration a rule nisi was obtained to attach G. for contempt by disobedience of the order. Against this rule the sequestration was shown as cause. The Court were of opinion that a promise to pay made since the insolvency, though a promise on which an action might well be founded, was no sufficient support to the rule nisi to attach granted before the promise, and the rule was discharged without costs, but without prejudice to re-open the rule at the applicant's own risk as to costs, if, after the intimation of the Court, he should choose to do so on the grounds of a promise to pay since the sequestration. In re Gillow, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 300.

Attachment—Delivery up of Deeds—Refusal to make an Affidavit.]—A rule nisi was moved for attachment of an attorney for non-delivery up of deeds pursuant to an order of Court. Held that the applicant must show that the attorney had the deeds in his possession. Per Stephen, J., that an attachment would not be granted, because the attorney refused to make an affidavit. Re ———, ex parte Morris, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 202.

Petty Sessions—Wilful Misbehaviour—Act No. 267, Sec. 39.]—A solicitor was fined, or in default imprisonment, under Sec. 39 of Act No. 267 for misbehaviour at Petty Sessions. On a rule nisi for certiorari to quash the order of commitment, an objection was taken that there was no evidence to sustain it, but the Court held that there was evidence to show that he had persisted in renewing an application which had been struck off for non-appearance, and refused the rule. Regina v. Mollison, ex parte Faussett, 3 V.R. (L.,) 3; 3 A.J.R., 26.

Misconduct as Commissioner—Not Acting as Attorney.]—The Court has jurisdiction to punish an attorney for acting as a commissioner for taking affidavits after leaving the district to which his commission was restricted, although he was not acting as attorney in the cause in which the affidavit complained of was sworn. In re Purcell, 4 A.J.R., 79.

Application to Punish under 3 Ed. I., Cap. 29.] —An application to the Court to punish an attorney under 3 Ed. I., cap. 29, must be made by counsel if, which is doubtful, the Act be applicable to this colony. Quirk v. Watson, 4 A.J.R., 117.

Where an attorney refuses to deliver a bill of costs, and retains a sum of money belonging to his client, the proper remedy is to apply to a judge in Chambers for an order calling upon the defendant to deliver his bill. Ex parte Crawford, 1 A.L.T., 103.

By Municipal Corporation—How made.]—An attorney who appears for a borough council in a complaint before justices for breach of a municipal bye-law need not show that he was appointed by a resolution of the council, or that the appointment of a previous attorney of the council has been revoked. And, since the enforcement of the municipal bye-laws is one of the every-day purposes for which the municipality was incorporated, an attorney so appearing need not produce any appointment under seal. Regina v. Freyer, ex parte Mayor of Williamstown, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 131.

See S.P., Regina v. Call, ex parte Gillow, ante column 231.

A retainer under seal is necessary when a solicitor appears for a municipal corporation to enable him to recover his costs. Shire of Colac v. Butler, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 137; 1 A.L.T., 3.

See S.C., ante column 230.

But where the seal is attached the Court will presume it was duly attached. Jones v. Star Freehold Coy., 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 223, ante column 160.

When Wife's Retainer Treated as Husband's.]—Sievwright v. M'Evoy, ante column 537.

For Negligence.]—Where a contract was made by H., in Melbourne, by letter with S., at Newstead, for the delivery of flour by S. in Castlemaine, and on breach of contract a suit was brought in the County Court in Melbourne, and H. was nonsuited on the ground that the suit should have been brought at Castlemaine, and H.'s attorney did not get his costs on the ground of negligence; Held, on appeal, that, even assuming the suit to have been brought in the wrong court, still as there was some doubt as to the court in which the suit should have been brought, the attorney was not liable for negligence. Bullen v. Hooper, 2 V.R. (L.,) 108; 2 A.J.R., 66.

Practising in County Court—Taking Counsel's Opinion.]—Semble, that, as an attorney practises as an advocate in the County Courts, he would not in any case be protected in such courts by acting on the advice of counsel. Ibid.

For Acts of Clerks.]—Per Molesworth, J.—If solicitors leave the management of their business to their clerks, and receive the profits of that business, they must submit to have their rights bound by the acts of such clerks. Jamieson v. Allen, 2 W. &W. (E.,) 47, 54.

For Costs—Liability of Attorney for Costs Recovered against Client after Settlement with Attorney.]—An attorney charged his client for attendance of witnesses "as per account," and in full satisfaction thereof took an acceptance from his client for five shillings in the pound of the sum charged, but did not give his client an indemnity. The witnesses sued the attorney for 25 per cent. of their charges, and the client for the other 75 per cent., and recovered a part of their claim against the client with costs. The client thereupon sued the attorney in the County Court for the sums and costs so recovered as for "money paid and damages sustained in defending actions brought to recover moneys which the attorney undertook so pay," and recovered a verdict; the judge refusing to nonsuit. Against this decision the attorney appealed. Held that the action was substantially for money paid; that it was unnecessary to consider whether there was an indemnity given or not, and that the attorney was liable whether he had or had not given an indemnity, having accepted five shillings in the pound as satisfaction in full. Wisewould v. Lee, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 388.

Solicitor Instituting Suit without Plaintiff's Authority.]—In a suit which was instituted S.'s name was used as plaintiff without his knowledge or authority. An order had been made in the suit allowing the plaintiffs to proceed and directing that the plaintiffs should pay defendant's taxed costs of the motion for dismissal. This order was served on S., and was the first intimation he received of his name being used as plaintiff. O. D., a solicitor practising at Wangaratta, was named in the bill as plaintiff's solicitor, but the writ was issued by H., a solicitor practising in Melbourne, who had however only acted as O. D.'s agent. S. moved to strike his name out of the bill, and to make H. liable for the costs of the motion and the taxed costs ordered to be paid by S. Motion refused with costs as to H., but granted as to striking out name without costs. Brew v. Jones, 2 V.R. (E.,) 59; 2 A.J.R., 42.

Attorney commencing Action without Authority.]—An attorney commenced an action of tort on behalf of a person and his supposed wife on instructions from the wife, and did not ascertain whether the husband had authorised the proceedings. Subsequently the supposed husband, who was not cognisant of and had not authorised the proceedings, and who, in fact, was not married to the woman, and was not living with her at the time the action was commenced, nor had been for ten years previously, took out a summons to have his name struck out of the suit and all subsequent proceedings, and to have his costs paid by the attorney, and the defendant also took out a summons calling upon the attorney, in case the male plaintiff's name should be so struck out, to show cause why he should not pay the costs incurred by the defendant through the action being improperly instituted against him. The Court struck the male plaintiff's name out as asked, and ordered the attorney to pay his costs, as between attorney and client, and also ordered him to pay the defendant's costs as between party and party. Hill v. Power, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 109; 1 A.L.T., 169.

Instituting Suit without Authority.]—A rule nisi calling upon a plaintiff's attorney to show cause why he should not pay the costs of the action, as brought without the plaintiff's authority, will not be granted where the materials upon which the application is made disclose some evidence of authority. Coffee Tavern Coy. v. De Young, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 289; 2 A.L.T., 44.

A stranger to the action who is not an attorney is not amenable to this summary remedy. Ibid.

No Authority to File Bill.]—Where a solicitor filed a bill by three plaintiffs, instructed by one of them only, and sent a letter to the other two requesting them to sign a written authority for them to proceed in their names, which letter was not answered, Held that their not answering was a sufficient refusal to give authority, and an order was made on motion by the two unwilling plaintiffs striking their names out, with costs as against the solicitor. Mitchell v. M'Douyall, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 13.

Solicitor Joining a Plaintiff without his Consent.]—The name of a plaintiff having been inserted in a bill without his knowledge or authority, his name was ordered to be struck out with costs as between solicitor and client, to be paid by the solicitor inserting it, who also made himself a co-plaintiff. Lane v. Goold, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 236.

Undertaking to Pay Costs.]—In order to make a solicitor liable on such an undertaking, the affidavit must state distinctly that he undertook to pay personally. In re Moule, ex parte Mitchell, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 15.

Motion to Set Aside Order for Substituted Service—Insufficient Grounds.]—Where an order had been made for substituted service upon a solicitor who had been defendant's solicitor in prior transactions in relation to subject matter of suit, and the solicitor moved for an order to set aside order, the Court not being satisfied with the materials on which the motion was made dismissed it with costs against the solicitor. Howse v. Campbell, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 145.

Order to Supply Document to Client—Unsatisfactory Explanation of Inability to do so.]—Where a solicitor was ordered to deliver to his client a bill of costs sent out from England in an appeal to the Privy Council, and failed to do so, giving an unsatisfactory explanation of his inability, and the matter was twice adjourned in order to admit of a satisfactory explanation being given, the Court ordered the solicitor to pay the costs incurred subsequently to the first adjournment, the solicitor having already been ordered to pay the costs of the day of such first adjournment. Re Hardy & Madden, ex parte Hand and Band Coy., 4 A.L.T., 40.

Attorney not Agent to Pay Money or Receive Demand for Payment.]—The attorney is the agent of the client for all purposes connected with the cause; but is not, merely as the attorney, the agent of his client either to pay money or to receive a demand for its payment. Lee v. Melbourne and Suburban Railway Coy., 1 W. & W. (L.,) 34.

Authority to Bind Client—Compromise.]—An attorney has no power to compromise an action against his clients by an adjustment varying rights of property, unless expressly authorised; and cannot be so authorised by a corporation, unless under the corporate seal. Shiel v. Colonial Bank of Australasia, 1 V.R. (E.,) 40, 47.

Power to Bind Client by Consent to Enlargement of Time for Transmission of Appeal Case under Sec. 172 of "Mining Statute 1865."]—See Odgers v. Waldron, ante column 1007.

Fraud where Acting for Both Parties.]—K. was entitled to the issue of a Crown grant to certain land under Sec. 33 of "Land Act 1862," and agreed to convey to M.B. No grant was issued to K., and M.B. gave N., a solicitor acting for both parties, £20 to complete her title and to obtain the grant. N. failed to do so. Subsequently J. bought K.'s interest in the land at a sheriff's sale under the "Transfer of Land Statute" and N., who was acting for him, obtained a certificate of title for him, and also the Crown grant to which K. was originally entitled. On bill by M.B. seeking to have J. declared a trustee for her, on the ground that his certificate had been obtained by fraud and in collusion with N., Held that N. had not been guilty of fraud, and bill dismissed against N., but without costs. Brew v. Jones, 2 V.R. (E.,) 20; 2 A.J.R., 6.

Disclosure of Confidential Communications to Other Party.]—M. had at one time acted as solicitor for S., and was by her directed to convey a message to the other side. At the trial for nullity of marriage M. gave evidence as to this message in the interest of S.'s husband. Held that the evidence being very conflicting as to when M. ceased to act for S., it being a matter of oath against oath, the Court would not interfere by making him answer as to his conduct, and even assuming that the relation of solicitor and client existed, M.'s lips were unsealed by the message given. In re Moule, ex parte Smith, 5 A.J.R., 121.

For what Attorney may Charge or Not.]—A solicitor assisted an insolvent in preparing his schedule and acted as his solicitor at the meetings in the estate. There were items in the bill of costs for "attending insolvent with official assignee." Held, that the solicitor could not properly charge for his services in these matters. In re Amner, 1 W. & W. (I.E. & M.,) 100.

Dismissal of Bill—Costs.]—Where the parties to a suit agree to compromise without the intervention of solicitors, and a motion is brought for the dismissal of the bill, a defendant's solicitor has no right, in the absence of fraud, to object to such dismissal on the ground that his costs had not been paid. Younghusband v. De Lacy, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 107.

Costs against Municipal Corporation—Retainer under Seal must be Proved.]—Shire of Colac v. Butler, ante column 230.

Right of Solicitor to Costs apart from Client.]—In an administration suit defendants were ordered to pay plaintiffs' next friend or solicitor the costs of the suit, but on appeal the defendants were allowed to set off the costs of the appeal against the costs of the suit. The costs of plaintiffs' solicitor were taxed at £497 0s. 10d. and there was a residue of £170 15s. 10d. in the Master's hands not invested. Upon application by the plaintiffs' solicitor for this sum to be paid him as costs, insisting that he had, by the decree on appeal, been deprived of his right to costs as against the defendants to the extent of the costs on appeal, Held that as the allowance as to a successful appellant was according to the common practice of the Court, the client would have no reason to object, and the solicitor's rights on the subject should not be regarded outside his clients', and application refused. Graham v. Gibson, 4 A.L.T., 111.

"Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 387—Delivery of when Necessary—Question for Jury.]—Where an attorney has been employed in business not clearly professional, it is a question for the jury whether the employment was as an attorney, so as to render necessary the delivery of a signed bill of costs as a condition precedent to an action by the attorney for remuneration. Chambers v. Green, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 194.

Delivery of Signed Bill—Guarantee of Third Person to Pay—"Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," Sec. 387.]—Semble that the provisions of sec. 387 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," as to the delivery by the attorney of a signed bill of costs, merely regard actions between the attorney and client only, and not between the attorney and a third person guaranteeing to pay the bill. In re Lawler, 4 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 8.

Delivery of—Order for Delivery of Bill Several Years after Payment.]—On a rule nisi to rescind an order of a judge for delivery of a bill of costs five years after payment, the Court thought the balance of probabilities, upon a conflict of evidence as to whether a bill of costs had been delivered before payment, or at all, to be in favour of non-delivery at any time, and refused to disturb the order for delivery, though giving no intimation as to what was to be done with the bill when delivered. Re Duffett, ex parte M'Evoy, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 160; 4 A.L.T., 6.

Bad Item — Recovery on the Rest.] — Per Stawell, C.J.—Even supposing there be one bad item in an attorney's bill of costs, the attorney is not thereby prevented from recovering for the rest. Mathews v. Muttlebury, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 104.

Action for—Costs of Old Firm—Set-off—Negligence.]—M. and E., solicitors, had delivered to their clients, M. and S., a signed bill of costs in January, 1862, and sued them for the amount thereof in February, 1862. The bill was for a sum of £175, of which £33 was due by M. and S. to an earlier firm, to whose business M. and E. succeeded. Costs were taxed, and the item £33 was struck out, and the particulars of demand amended accordingly. M. and S. pleaded a set-off, and offered to give evidence of facts showing negligence prior to an equity suit, in which the costs were incurred. Held by the County Court Judge, and affirmed on appeal, that the finding of the taxing officer was conclusive on the matter of account, and that the evidence of negligence was inadmissible, since it did not furnish an answer to the present action. Ibid.

Set-off against Debt.]—Complainant summoned T., a solicitor, for goods supplied, before justices. T. set-off a bill of costs due to him from the complainant. It was objected that no signed bill had been delivered a month before the summons, and the justices disregarded the set-off. Held that T. was entitled to set-off his bill, and case remitted to be adjudicated upon as to items in the bill. Regina v. Alley, ex parte Twigg, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 151; 1 A.L.T., 9.

(c) Taxation of Costs.

Who may not Obtain—Trustees—"Common Law Procedure Statute," Sec. 393.]—H. paid to trustees a sum of money to be applied (inter alia) in payment of costs due to his solicitors. The solicitors delivered their bill, and the parties applied to have it referred to taxation, and the application was granted. On rule nisi to set aside the reference to taxation, Held that the trustees, not being liable either at law or in equity to the solicitors for payment of the bill, could not obtain an order for reference of the bill to taxation, and rule made absolute. In re Bennett & Attenborough, ex parte M'Mullen, 2 V.R. (L.,) 203; 2 A.J.R., 116.

What may be Taxed.]—A bill of costs by a company's solicitor incurred in getting a private Act of Parliament passed for the company, is liable to be taxed under the "Common Law Procedure Statute," Sec. 387. Ex parte Hopkins, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 115.

After Payment — "Common Law Procedure Statute," Secs. 387, 388.]—An attorney and the trustees to a deed of compromise in a suit expressly agreed that the attorney's bill of costs should be paid subject to adjustment, and it was paid, and the receipt given as follows:—"Received this amount undertaking to supply detailed accounts if required, and subject to adjustment." This adjustment the attorney expressly swore was arranged not to include taxation, and no denial of this was made by the trustees. The detailed accounts were furnished and a release given by the attorney to the trustees. One of the trustees died, and after his death the others obtained an order under Secs. 387, 388 of the "Common Law Procedure Statute" to refer the bill to taxation. Held that in the absence of exceptional circumstances the bill could not be referred to taxation, and that no exceptional circumstances appeared in the case. In re Brodribb, Crisp, & Lewis, 1 V.R. (L.,) 214; 1 A.J.R., 165.

"Common Law Procedure Statute" (No. 274,) Sec. 388.] — A bill of costs will be ordered to be delivered under the Act only in case where a bill, if delivered, could be referred to taxation, and where a bill has been paid and more than a year has afterwards elapsed it cannot be ordered for taxation. In re Chambers, ex parte Speed, 6 A.L.T., 125.

After Payment—Act No. 274, Sec. 396.]—Large items which require explanation afford sufficient evidence of special circumstances to justify an order for taxation of payment. Certain costs were demanded from a mortgagor, another sum was offered by his agent, and finally both parties agreed to divide the difference, and the sum so agreed upon was paid. Held that it was an arrangement made for the best at the time, under the pressure to which the mortgagor was subjected, but that it did not preclude the taxation of costs. Order made. In re Bennett & Attenborough, ex parte Cameron, 3 V.R. (L.,) 220; 3 A.J.R., 112.

After Payment—Act No. 274, Secs. 388, 396—Lapse of Time.]—The U. Company had been involved in litigation for a considerable time with a bank; in one suit the company was successful, and a second suit was compromised. In January, 1881, the solicitors received the balance due on account of these suits, and a new board of directors considering that the charges were excessive, applied in July, 1881, more than a year since the first bill was paid, to have the costs taxed. Held that under Sec. 396 of Act No. 274, the payment of the first bill (relating to the first suit) made twelve months before was an insuperable bar to taxation, owing to lapse of time; but as to the second bill, there were special circumstances, e.g., charges for attendance of country solicitor, as well as town agent, documents used in second suit, which had been used in the first and charged twice over, which led the Court to interfere even after the bill had been paid. Order to tax costs of second suit. In re Hardy & Madden, ex parte United Hand and Band Coy., 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 266; 3 A.L.T., 10.

Effect of—Between Party and Party—Not Conclusive between Solicitor and Client.]—Taxation of costs between the parties to a suit is not binding as between the client and his solicitor. It is quite open for the client to say that as between him and his solicitor there are overcharges. Re Read, 1 A.L.T., 130.

Break in Suit.]—A judgment on demurrer, the effect of which is to compel the plaintiffs to amend the bill, and to create a pause in litigation, is not such a break in the suit as would entitle the solicitors to demand payment of their bill of costs up to that time, and make such a payment final unless an application for taxation were made within twelve months. In re Hardy & Madden, ex parte United Hand and Band Coy., 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 476; 3 A.L.T., 76.

Review of Taxation.]—Per Molesworth, J. (in Chambers.)—The Court has no jurisdiction under the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," part 27, to make an order for review of taxation of a bill of costs after twelve months has elapsed from the payment. Attorney-General v. Huon, 1 A.L.T., 203.

Inconsistent Taxation—Court Refusing to Interfere.]—Bowie v. Wilson, ante column 241.

Reviewing Taxation—"Common Law Procedure Statute," Sec. 395.]—The Court will not direct the taxation to be reviewed at the instance of the attorney when he has allowed more than twelve months to elapse, and further steps to be taken, based on the result of the taxation, before making his application for review. Re Phelps, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 344.

Summons to Review.]—A summons should be for a single purpose. It is improper, therefore, to ask in one summons for taxation of some bills of costs and for review of taxation of others. Re Phelps, ex parte Morris, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 417.

Act No. 274, Sec. 440, Sched. 39.]—Costs taxed as between attorney and client were ordered to be reviewed on the ground of one item being in excess of the amount allowed in Sched. 39. On motion to set aside the order, Held that the attorney should in such a case state distinctly the whole amount, and the portion which can be recovered from the opposite side; and that the client was only liable when he agreed to pay, having such knowledge. In re Hardy & Madden, ex parte M'Iver, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 145; 3 A.L.T., 1.

Solicitors in Partnership.]—G. & E. were solicitors in partnership when an action was commenced by them on behalf of L. E. & G. had since dissolved partnership, and after that L. had obtained an order for G. to deliver a bill of costs for taxation, G. being the member of the firm who acted for L. in the matter. Held that, the dealings being with the firm, the firm might have a bill of costs against L., which G. could not set-off if the order were made against him alone. Order set aside. In re Grave, ex parte Livock, 3 A.J.R., 46.

Items Allowable or Otherwise.]—(In Chambers) —Molesworth, J.—Where the defendant had obtained time to answer on payment of £15,000 into Court, and had obtained an order varying the order which had allowed the further time; but the varying order contained no direction as to costs, Held that the costs of the application for the varying order were rightly disallowed. Breese v. Fleming, 1 A.L.T., 129.

Where affidavits had been read on a motion by the defendant, but had not been entered as read in the order made thereon, Held that the costs of the affidavits were properly disallowed. Ibid.

Where the defendant had served notice of motion to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution, and had abandoned the notice, Held that if the Master were of opinion that the plaintiff was liable to have his bill dismissed for want of prosecution when the notice of motion was served, and, in order to prevent such dismissal, set the cause down, then the defendant should have his costs of the notice. Contra if the Master should not be of such opinion. Ibid.

Where the defendant had taken the advice of counsel on the decree, Held that the Master was right in disallowing the charges for the advice in the absence of some special reason, the Master being the proper person to judge of the utility of proceedings when the case is in his own office. Ibid.

Where a proposal for the appointment of new trustees had been supported in the Master's office by affidavits, and the defendant had filed affidavits in opposition, to which the plaintiff replied by further affidavits, and the Master then directed that the evidence should be taken by affidavits, but the defendant objected to such evidence when the proposal came on for hearing, and the Master thereupon directed oral evidence, Held that the Master was the proper person to decide as to what took place before him, and that the costs of the defendant's affidavits were in his discretion. Ibid.

The defendant, though he had not the carriage of the decree, carried in proposals for the appointment of new trustees. Held that it was for the Master to decide how far it was defendant's business to carry in such proposals; unless it were his business to do so, the costs incurred could not be costs in the cause. Ibid.

Where the defendant had had a conference with counsel as to making objections to the report of the Master, which objections were overruled, Held that the Master was right in disallowing the costs of the conference. Ibid.

Items Allowed—Barrister's Fees not Paid—Credit.]—A barrister's fees will be allowed on taxation of costs, though such fees have not been actually paid, but where the barrister has received a bill or undertaking from the solicitor, with which he is satisfied. Breese v. Fleming, 1 A.L.T., 192.

Reservation of Dispute as to Retainer—Balance in Favour of Client—Attachment.]—An attorney's bill of costs was referred for taxation, with a reservation of a right on the part of the client to dispute the retainer as to certain items. On taxation, the taxing officer certified that a balance was due from the attorney. Held that if the client abandoned the reservation of the right to dispute the retainer, it was then open to him to abide by the result of the taxation, and to sign judgment for the amount in his favour, or to obtain a rule of Court for the payment of the amount, upon which rule an attachment for non-payment might issue. Re Phelps, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 344.

Several Bills Referred—Whole Bill Struck Off—One-Sixth Disallowed—"Common Law Procedure Statute," Sec. 389.]—If several bills of costs are referred together for taxation under an appointment obtained within a month after their delivery, a bill which is struck off altogether because it had been paid, is to be computed in ascertaining whether one-sixth has been disallowed. Re Phelps, ex parte Morris, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 417.

Costs of Taxation—Disputing Retainer—More than One-sixth Disallowed.]—Where liberty has been reserved to the client to dispute the retainer as to certain items, or an action has been commenced on one or more of the bills, the client will not be disentitled to his costs of taxation where more than one-sixth of the whole has been disallowed. Ibid.

And see Ex parte Mouatt, ante column 241.

Costs of Application for Taxation—"Common Law Procedure Statute," Sec. 389.]—An order was made for taxation of costs, and the result was that a sum of £352 was taxed off a bill of £1060. Held that the solicitor must pay the costs of the summons and order for taxation. In re Hardy & Madden, ex parte United Hand and Band Coy., 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 450; 3 A.L.T., 75.

Act No. 274, Sec. 398—Judgment on Allocatur—Balance due by Attorney.]—Where, on taxation of costs, a balance is found due by the attorney, the Court, though holding that it could order judgment to be entered upon the allocatur, ordered execution to issue only to the extent of a proportionate part, deducting the share of a co-plaintiff who dissented from the application, and also of the solicitor, who was also a co-plaintiff. In re Hardy & Madden, ex parte M'Iver, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 324; 3 A.L.T., 25.

As against Third Person.]—Generally speaking a solicitor obtaining deeds from a client has a lien upon them for all business done for him, but as against third persons the client can confer no greater rights than he has himself: for a solicitor to be protected against claims of third persons he must show that he gave consideration by acting upon the faith of the possession of the deeds; that he had no notice of rights of third persons, and that his costs remain unpaid. On a motion by a plaintiff in an administration suit that a solicitor bring certain deeds into Court on which he claimed a lien, it appeared that the defendant owed the solicitor a sum of £23 for legal proceedings against M. & D. which were treated in an affidavit prepared by the solicitor as paid, and, in any case, this sum of £23 appeared to be incurred after notice of plaintiff's claim to deeds. Held that the solicitor could not enforce his lien by retaining the deeds, and as to costs in the administration suit the plaintiff's rights were paramount as the claim to these costs arose pendente lite with most distinct notice of the plaintiff's claim, and if the solicitor received payment from the defendant administrator knowing whence the money came he would be liable to refund as for money misapplied by an administrator. Semble that a solicitor is liable to the summary jurisdiction ordering him to produce the deeds. Order made. Jamieson v. Allen, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 47, 51.

Solicitor of Assignor—Order for Production of Deeds on Application of Assignee.]—In re Bennett and Taylor, ante columns 375, 376.

As against a Trust Estate.]—Persons properly doing business for trustees as solicitors or otherwise have generally no claim against the trust estate; no one can give a solicitor a lien upon deeds against a person from whom he could not himself withhold them. K. and others as trustees of a will employed N. & M. to act as their solicitors, and deeds relating to the property came into N. & M.'s hands. In an administration suit instituted after K.'s death it appeared that K. died indebted to the estate in a sum largely exceeding the costs. Held that K. being always indebted to the estate N. & M. had no lien on the deeds for their costs. Sawyers v. Kyte, 1 V.R. (E.,) 94, 97; 1 A.J.R., 64.

Upon What—Fruits of Judgment.]—Although an attorney has not a lien, strictly so called, upon the fruits of a judgment in favour of his client, for costs, yet he has an equitable right, which the Court will sustain, subject to any arrangements which may be made between the parties without an intention of defeating that right. The Court will not only recognise this right, but enforce it if the parties to the cause are obliged to apply to the Court for assistance. If the parties choose, however, to arrange matters between themselves, and without any collusion between them, though that arrangement has the effect of depriving the attorney of his lien, the Court will not interfere. Rutherford v. Powell, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 384.

A defendant entitled to costs of a nonsuit became insolvent before payment, but was indebted to the plaintiffs in a larger amount. Held that the plaintiffs before notice of the claim of the defendant's attorney were entitled to prove upon the estate for the balance of their debt after the amount due to the defendant for costs had been deducted; and that the defendant's attorney was not entitled to a lien upon the costs. Ibid.

Collusion to Deprive of Lien.]—By a family arrangement unknown at the time to a solicitor several actions were bonâ fide settled, under circumstances which showed no collusive intent to deprive the solicitor of his costs. Held that such an arrangement would not be disturbed by the Court although the effect was to deprive the plaintiff's attornies of their lien for costs. Langley v. Hepburn, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 119.

Act No. 379, Sec. 133—Examination of Insolvent.] A solicitor claiming a lien cannot refuse to produce documents required for examination of an insolvent's dealings. In re M'Kay and Bell, 3 A.J.R., 98; and see S.C., ante columns 709, 710.

Payment out of Court—Change of Solicitors—Lien claimed by Old Solicitors on a Deposit paid by Railway Company under "Lands Clauses Consolidation Statute."]—Ex parte Wilmot, ante columns 823, 824.

Authority of Town Agent.]—It is not within the ordinary duties of the town agent of a country solicitor to consent to the dismissal of the bill on condition of each side paying its own costs. Cleary v. Macnamara, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 49.

Delay of Client in Settling Accounts—Reference to Prothonotary.]—Where a client had allowed more than a year to pass without obtaining a settlement of accounts between himself and his attorney in the country, and such attorney afterwards died, the Court on an application by the client against the town agents to compel them to pay over money to him, referred the matter to the Prothonotary to ascertain the state of accounts between the country attorney and the client. Re Klingender, Charsley and Dickson, ex parte M'Cullagh, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 164.

Town Agent's Lien on Client's Money.]—Semble that the town agents of a country solicitor have, as against the client, in respect of a debt due to them by the country solicitor, a lien on moneys of the client received by them, to the same extent as the country attorney has, up to the amount of the debt due by the country attorney. Ibid.

Costs of Country Solicitor.]—The costs of the attendance in Melbourne of the country solicitor of a party to a cause will only be allowed, in taxation between party and party, when the Master is of opinion that his attendance was reasonably necessary. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Coy. v. National Bank of Australasia, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 271, 273.

In no case where the costs of the attendance of the country solicitor are allowed will the costs of the attendance of the town agent of such country solicitor be also allowed. Ibid.

Costs of Country Solicitor Ceasing to have Town Agent.]—Where a country solicitor ceasing to have a town agent opens an office in town for pending business, he is not entitled to the costs of attendance as a country solicitor at the taking of evidence and hearing. Hardy v. Wilson, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 135.

SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

I. When Granted or Refused.

Agreement with Corporation not under Seal—Important Part left Unsettled—Effect of Resolution of a Corporation—Long Performance of Terms of Agreement.]—The plaintiffs obtained permission from the Gold Fields' Commissioner to take two sluice heads of water from a certain creek for mining purposes. This permission was renewed by the Warden of the goldfields. Then the rights in the water became vested in the defendant council under an Act (Act No. 105) with power to continue to previous holders of water rights granted under such permissions as abovementioned the same average supply as before or to pay them a money compensation. The plaintiffs applied for a supply of two sluice heads of water, and the council passed a resolution granting such supply, and a draft of a guaranty to secure that supply with a qualification as to supply in seasons of drought was tendered to plaintiffs and rejected. Plaintiffs received their supply for a long time. On bill for specific performance, Held that the resolution of a corporation is not a contract, and that as an important part remained unsettled there was no concluded contract; that as the bill rested on that alone the demurrer must be allowed without prejudice to the equities the plaintiff had from a long performance de facto of the terms of the agreement. Connolly v. Shire of Beechworth, 5 A.J.R., 50.

There is a great difference between the right to bring an action for breach of contract, and the right to bring a suit for specific performance. In the latter case the plaintiff must show a fair, clear, and conscientious case, and not attempt to get the benefit of a contract snatched by surprise. Rawlings v. Hislop, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 25.

What is.]—Two companies agreed to divide auriferous land in dispute, in equal shares. No surveyors were appointed, but by consent their solicitors marked out on a plan obtained from another company a division line. On the plan the land was bounded by two concentric circles, and two common radii thereof, cutting off common segments thereof; and the division line was drawn midway between the other two. One company receded from the agreement, but was held to it by the Court of Mines. Upon appeal Held that the agreement of compromise to divide the land, being assisted by an admitted plan which sufficiently described the land, was sufficiently certain between the parties, and might be specifically enforced, but Semble that standing alone without the plan it would not be sufficiently certain to be enforced. Nicholas v. James, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 255.

What is.]—An agreement leading to difficulty in its working out, but intelligible, is not too uncertain for specific performance. Forbes v. Clarton, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 22.

For facts see S.C., post column 1355.

What is.]—D. and R., licensees under the "Land Act 1865," held neighbouring allotments, and agreed to exchange each a portion of their respective allotments, and entered into a written agreement, so vague in the description of the lands to be exchanged that it could not be enforced at law. They acted upon the agreement, however, by possession, fencing off and occupation afterwards till R. died. R.'s administratrix obtained a Crown grant of R.'s allotment, and she and plaintiff continued to occupy as plaintiff and R. had done. R.'s administratrix refused to complete, and D. brought a suit for specific performance, untruly alleging that he had obtained a Crown grant of his allotment, but before the hearing he did obtain such a grant. Held dubitante curia that specific performance should be decreed on the ground of part performance. Semble that had D. not obtained his grant, the Court would not have decreed specific performance, because D. would not have been able to perform his part of it. Darcy v. Ryan, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 36; 3 A.L.T., 108.

What is.]—Semble, on motion for injunction that an agreement that a picture which had been painted by one person from notes and information furnished by another, should be the joint property of both, and that they should divide the profits of the sale of lithographed copies, could not be enforced for want of certainty. Mitchell v. Brown, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 168; 2 A.L.T., 67.

Held, after taking evidence, that the agreement to lithograph was too vague and too uncertain to be enforced, there being no terms as to how the picture was to be finished, cost, number of copies, &c.; and that as the picture was joint property, unless the parties could agree as to the disposal, it would be sold, and the profits equally divided, each party to be at liberty to bid at the sale. Mitchell v. Brown, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 55; 2 A.L.T., 154.

"Land Act 1869"—"Subject to my Getting a Lease."]—A., being entitled to a lease under "Land Act 1869" (No. 360,) Sec. 20, signed a document:—"I (A.) sell, subject to my getting my lease, my house, land, and all appurtenances, for the sum of £500, to B." B. did not sign any document. A. subsequently obtained his lease, and, with the consent of the Governor-in-Council, mortgaged it to S. Bill by B. for specific performance against A. and S. Held that the agreement was uncertain as to A.'s getting the lease, and as to the way the land was to be used in the meantime, and as to the time the £500 was to be paid, and that it was unilateral. Stewart v. Ferrari, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 200.

Where an uncertain written agreement for sale of land is contrary to the actual verbal agreement between the parties, a Court of Equity will not enforce it, but will leave the parties to their remedy at law. Ibid.

"Reasonable Compensation."]—A corporation intending to erect a bridge entered into a parol contract with the administrator of a deceased selector to take a portion of the land for the purpose of a road thereto, giving him "a reasonable compensation." An attempt was made to fix the compensation by arbitration, but the time lapsed without an award being made. Held that the parol contract being enforceable on other grounds, it was not too vague, and a reference to the Master directed as to amount of reasonable compensation. Specific performance decreed. Shire of Yea v. Roberts, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 223; 1 A.L.T., 52.

(c) In other Cases.

Against the Crown—Agreement for Selection—Withdrawal of Land under Reservation "on Account of Improvements"—"Land Act 1862," Sec. 46.]—Certain lands were thrown open for selection by proclamation on 10th September. On 8th September a proclamation was made reserving these lands from selection "on account of improvements," which proclamation was not gazetted till the 11th of September. K. duly applied for one of the allotments and fulfilled all the conditions precedent to entitle him to select under Sec. 16 et seq. On a petition by

K. for specific performance, Held, and affirmed on appeal, that under Sec. 46 the Governor-in-Council had power to reserve the lands, and that the proclamation was not too late. Kennedy v. The Queen, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 145.

Against the Crown—"Land Act 1862," Sec. 23—"Amending Act 1865," Sec. 7.]—K. selected land under a certificate issued under the "Land Act 1862," Sec. 23, and the "Amending Act 1865," Sec. 7. His selection was disallowed under a proclamation under Sec. 12 of the last-mentioned Act, on the ground that he had selected as agent for another. Held, on a petition under Act No. 241, that this proclamation was void, and declared that he was entitled to specific performance of the agreement on the part of the Crown to grant him a lease. Kettle v. The Queen, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 50.

Against the Crown—"Land Act 1860" (No. 117)—"Land Act 1862"—Orders in Council.]—D., C., and B., were pastoral occupants of the Lamplough run. Of this run 13,000 acres were proclaimed a common under the "Land Act" (No. 117). The whole of this common was abolished under the "Land Act 1862," and a new common of 3000 acres, portion of the 13,000 acres, was proclaimed. D., C., and B. claimed to resume occupation of the 10,000 acres under their pastoral license. This right was denied, and the 10,000 acres were sold as new runs. D., C., and B. refused to give up possession, and an action of ejectment was brought against them by the Crown. They then filed a petition under the Act No. 49, seeking to restrain the action, to obtain specific performance of an alleged agreement made with them by the Crown for a fourteen years' lease of Lamplough, with covenant for renewal under Orders-in-Council; and in the alternative to have it declared that they were entitled to an annual license of Lamplough, including the 10,000 acres, up to 1870, under the "Land Act 1862." Held, per Molesworth, J., that the petitioners had no rights legally enforceable under the Orders-in-Council, inasmuch as the Crown was not bound by promises, as to Crown lands, of the Queen herself or any of her officers, though acted upon or partly performed, but only by grants under seal, or conveyances exactly conformable to Acts of Parliament authorising them; but that, as following a supposed decision between the same parties at law, the petitioners were entitled to the alternative relief prayed. Held, on appeal, that, conceding the existence of a contract with the Crown which could be enforced in equity, the petitioners had so recognised the "Land Act 1862," and availed themselves of advantages under it, that they could not be permitted wholly to reject that enactment, and claim all the benefits to be had by leases under the Orders-in-Council repealed by that Act; and that the remedy, if any, was at law; and as to the alternative relief given below, that the decree arose from a misapprehension of the decision at law, and ought not to stand. Dallimore v. The Queen, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 18, 33, 44, 45.

Against the Crown.]—Ettershank v. The Queen; Nash v. The Queen; Winter v. The Queen: see under LAND ACTS, ante columns 795, 796, 797.

Against Crown—Application for Mining Lease—"Crown Remedies and Liabilities Statute" (No. 241)—"Mining Statute 1865."]—The plaintiff applied for a gold mining lease under the "Mining Statute 1865" of certain land and was refused, but no reason was assigned for such refusal. The plaintiff then brought a petition under the Act No. 241 to compel specific performance of the alleged contract to grant a lease. Held, by Molesworth, J., and affirmed by the Full Court on demurrer for want of equity, that there was no equity to compel the Crown to grant the lease, and that the fulfilment of preliminaries necessary for the application for the lease gave no rights as against the Crown such as would amount to a claim founded on a contract within the meaning of Act No. 241; that Sec. 39 of the "Mining Statute 1865" leaves it wholly discretionary with the Governor-in-Council to grant a lease or not, and with that discretion the Courts will not interfere. Quære, whether even if it is the duty of the Government to assign reasons for a refusal a mandamus would lie to compel the performance of that duty. Hitchins v. The Queen, 4 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 133.

Against Crown—Suit by a Corporation for Reservation of Land for Public Purposes—"Land Act 1862" (No. 145,) Sec. 6—"Amending Act 1869" (No. 360,) Sec. 38.]—In 1843 the council of the (then) town of Melbourne applied for a reservation of certain Crown lands as recreation grounds, which was approved. In 1855 the Lieutenant-Governor approved of the corporation undertaking the conservancy and planting of the Carlton gardens. Before and after this the corporation was in possession of the Carlton gardens, improving, fencing and maintaining them out of corporation monies and Government monies. Under Act No. 145, Sec. 6, the corporation applied for reservation of the land, and in February, 1864, the land was reserved "for purposes of public recreation" under Sec. 8. Afterwards in March, 1870, the Crown in the Gazette proclaimed part of the land as a road under Sec. 38 of No. 360. On petition by the corporation, Held, and affirmed on appeal, that although there was no grant to the council and although the reservation under Act No. 145 was only temporary, yet there was a valid contract entered into by the Government capable of enforcement and decreed that the whole of the gardens should be reserved. Mayor of Melbourne v. The Queen, 2 V.R. (E.,) 183; 2 A.J.R., 76, 125.

Against Corporation — Not under Seal.]—By "The Beechworth Waterworks Act 1860" (No. 105,) the municipal council, represented by the defendant corporation, was entrusted with the construction and management of waterworks for the district, with power to continue to previous holders of water-rights granted under the permit of a commissioner or warden, the same average supply as they were previously entitled to, or to pay a money compensation; any dispute as to either to be settled by arbitration. A mining partnership, of which the plaintiffs were at the time of suit the representatives, offered to take a certain supply in compensation of their water-rights, and the council passed a resolution accepting the offer, and the town clerk wrote a letter to that effect to the plaintiffs, adding a request for a draft of the guaranty proposed in exchange for the prior rights. The guaranty was never executed, but the supply agreed upon was furnished for ten years. The council in constructing the reservoir cut across and utterly destroyed the plaintiffs' races so that it was impossible to reconstruct them. Upon the council discontinuing plaintiffs' supply they filed a bill for specific performance. Held that the bargain, though not under seal, was a perfect contract on the part of those acting on behalf of the corporation, and had been perfectly acquiesced in by the corporation; that the corporation, having nothing affirmatively to do for the plaintiffs distinguishable from what they had to do in managing the waterworks, the Court could compel them to perpetually allow the plaintiffs the agreed-upon supply of water. Connolly v. The Shire of Beechworth, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 1.

With Variation—Contract under Seal—Covenant not to Build on Adjoining Land—Subsequent Variation.]—Defendant entered into a contract under seal with plaintiff to sell to plaintiff certain land, the contract containing a covenant by defendant not to build on certain land adjoining. The contract was afterwards varied by plaintiff initialling a memorandum on the contract allowing the defendant to build on this strip of adjoining land from the rear, up to a point a certain distance from the street; defendant understanding this point to be 70 feet from the street, plaintiff under the impression that it was 74 feet from the street. Defendant built up to the point 70 feet from the street. It was then further agreed that plaintiff should use the wall of the building erected by defendant as a party wall. Differences arose as to this, and plaintiff filed his bill for specific performance of original agreement, and for an injunction restraining defendant from continuing a breach of covenant as so varied. Held that as the memorandum initialled by the plaintiff specified 70 feet as the distance from the street, it ought not to be varied upon parol evidence of what was understood, and decreed that the contract was effectually varied by the consent of the plaintiff to the erection of buildings erected thereon, and that the plaintiff was entitled to use the eastern wall as a party wall. Specific performance with that variation decreed. M'Kean v. Francis, 5 A.J.R., 158.

Mining on Private Property—Agreement not Illegal—Effect of a License in Writing not under Seal—Meaning of Words "all Legal Agreements."]—There is no illegality in agreements about mining for gold on private property, the parties dealing remaining subject to the Crown's right being at any time asserted. B. was the owner of certain land, which he leased to L. for five years from January, 1870, L. having a right to purchase the fee at a fixed price. On 15th December, 1871, L., by letter, purported to assign to plaintiff (A.) the right to mine on the property for a certain sum, and for the period of two years. D. was at this time negotiating for the purchase of L.'s interest, and on 2nd January, 1872, D. signed a paper by which he "agreed to recognise all legal agreements made by L. relating to the letting of his land for mining purposes." On 4th January, 1872, L. signed an instrument acknowledging that he had sold to D. all his right, title, and interest in the said land. D. refused to recognise the agreement made by L. in plaintiff's favour, alleging it to be an illegal one. Bill by plaintiff against L. and D. to enforce such agreement. Held that although the writing of 15th December, 1871, not being under seal, was revocable at law; yet as a clear contract it would entitle plaintiff to have a specific execution by a grant under seal to the same effect; that the qualification in the instrument of 2nd January, 1872, introduced by the words "all legal agreements" could not be read only as agreements binding in a court of law, or be read with reference to the rights of the Crown or the landlord; that as L. was bound to confirm the contract to plaintiff, and as he had made it a condition precedent in his agreement for sale to D. that such should be affirmed, the plaintiff was entitled as against D., and also as against other defendants, lessees from D., who had notice of plaintiff's claim. Ah Wye v. Locke, 3 A.J.R., 84, 85.

Agreement to Transfer Portion of Lease of Crown Lands—Fraud and Acquiescence—Improvements—Privity—Pleading.]—Where A., a lessee of Crown lands under Act No. 237, agrees to transfer a portion of his lease to B., and B. enters into possession, and afterwards sells with A.'s knowledge to C., who enters and improves, B.'s contract with A. is illegal under Act No. 237, Secs. 13, 14, 15; and without a distinct allegation in the bill to the effect that A. had notice of C.'s improvements, A.'s mere knowledge of the sale to C., and allowing him to enter and improve, do not amount to such fraud and acquiescence as will subject him to be compelled to confirm C.'s title, as C.'s improvements are not referable to any contract with A. Tozer v. Somerville, 1 V.L.R. (Eq.,) 262.

For facts, see S.C., ante column 799.

Registered Proprietor under "Real Property Act" (No. 140)—Agreement to Execute Mortgage.]—The "Real Property Act" protects persons taking conveyances from registered proprietors, but does not protect registered proprietors from being compelled by Courts of Equity to fulfil their contracts. By a memorandum in writing G.M. agreed to advance to D.M. a sum of money to enable him to select land under the "Land Act 1862," and D.M. agreed to select land, and deliver to G.M. the receipt for the purchase-money and rent and the Crown grant, and D.M. agreed to pay the sum advanced at the end of five years, with 20 per cent. interest, and to secure such payments by a legal mortgage of the land selected. D.M. selected land, and paid for it with the money advanced by G.M., and paid rents, and in November, 1864, obtained the Crown grant, and got himself registered as proprietor under the Act No. 140, and refused to execute a mortgage, alleging he had sold to B. In a suit by G.M. against D.M. and B. for specific performance of the agreement to execute a mortgage, Held that as B. had notice of the agreement before the purchase, such an agreement was enforceable, and decree made for specific performance. Maddison v. M'Carthy, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 151, 156.

Of Agreement to Lend Money on Mortgage part Performed.]—O. and D. having a mortgage from P. to secure £6102 1s. 2d., agreed to advance him £7000 over the same property, out of which the old mortgage was to be paid off, and a new mortgage was to be given. In pursuance of this agreement, a deed releasing the old mortgage was executed in escrow by O. and D., and a new mortgage executed by P., who received £178 1s. on account of the £7000. The solicitors for O. and D. subsequently objected to the title on the ground of lis pendens registered against P., and refused to complete the advance, threatening to enforce their remedies on the old mortgage. On bill by P. for specific performance of the agreement to lend, Held that P. having executed the mortgage, and having incurred costs in substituting the new mortgage for the old, was entitled to the advance agreed upon, and to restrain proceedings under the old mortgage; that although a bill does not generally lie for the specific performance of a contract to lend money on mortgage, yet this might be regarded as a bill by a person who has in fact executed a mortgage containing a receipt for consideration, which has been accepted and retained by a defendant refusing to pay the balance of the mortgage-money. Phelan v. O'Shanassy, 2 V.R. (E.,) 120; 2 A.J.R., 67.

Of Agreement for Dividing Profits.]—The Court will enforce an agreement between several persons in the same trade, for the purpose of dividing the profits of all business obtained by any of them, so as to avoid competition. Collins v. Robbins, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 194.

Of Agreement for Partnership.]—See Leroy v. Herrenschmidt, ante column 1124.

Of Letter of Guarantee.]—Plaintiff's son having taken defendant into partnership for a fixed term of three years, plaintiff guaranteed the defendant against loss from the new firm assuming the liabilities of a former partnership. This was acted upon, and the plaintiff gave the guarantee. Subsequently a deed of partnership was executed, which contained no express provision for the new firm taking the liabilities of the old, but it practically did so, and instead of the guarantee, plaintiff gave defendant a bill for £320. Afterwards the defendant, before the expiration of the term, wished to dissolve the partnership, and the plaintiff, at his request, induced his son to retire, defendant by letter becoming security for the repayment of a sum of £320, borrowed to pay off the bill, and undertaking to pay half profits until that sum was paid, if the profits were not less than £40 per month, and in the event of defendant taking another partner, then half his share of profits, if not less than £40 per month. The defendant took another partner, and resisted all liability on the letter. On bill by plaintiff for specific performance of the letter of guarantee, Held that the letter being an express contract in writing, signed by the defendant, it need not show consideration on its face; and that, there being a sufficient consideration disclosed by the collateral facts, the plaintiff was entitled to a decree. Forbes v. Clarton, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 22.

Against Purchaser with Notice—Effect of Registration.]—Specific performance of an agreement decreed against the vendor and a purchaser with notice of the agreement, although the purchaser had obtained and registered her conveyance and the plaintiff's agreement was unregistered. Vockensohn v. Zeven, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 11. Affirmed on appeal. Ibid, p. 122.

Of Agreement for Partition.]—See Arlett v. Kinsella, post column 1359.

Of Agreement for License to Mine—Not under Seal.]—See Miller v. Crawford, post columns 1358, 1359.

Of Agreements for Leases and Option of Purchase.]—See cases under LANDLORD AND TENANT, ante columns 106—108.

II. MATTERS OF DEFENCE.

Fraud — Sale of Claim — Misrepresentation of Purchaser's Agents.]—The plaintiffs were mining on land leased from the Crown, and the defendants were owners of an adjoining claim. The defendants offered their claim for sale to the plaintiffs, and the bargain was concluded on behalf of the plaintiffs by their agent, B., who made some misstatements disparaging the value of the defendant's claim. The contract was concluded. On a suit for specific performance to which a defence was raised, that the vendors had been induced to contract by B.'s representations, Held, per Molesworth, J., that although B. had misstated his opinion to the defendants and generally untruly disparaged the property, and had misstated his authority and used some artifice to mislead the vendors on the subject, yet there was no evidence that defendants had been misled or had relied on his statements, and specific performance decreed without costs. Held, on appeal to the Full Court, that although B. did not state fully and truly his opinion on facts which must have been within his own knowledge, yet conceding that B. made misrepresentations, and that the plaintiffs were bound by them, the defendants were not misled or induced to enter into the contract by them, nor were they made for the purpose of inducing the vendors to contract, nor was the contract obtained in consequence of them; that the subject matter was difficult of estimation, and was a fit matter for an equity suit. Decree affirmed. Learmonth v. Morris, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 74.

Fraud—Sale of Mining Claim—Misrepresentations of Vendee's Agent.]—Where there is proof of the misrepresentations of a vendee's agent but no proof of the vendor being misled by them or being induced to enter into the contract in consequence of them, it is not such fraud in the eyes of a court of equity as to disentitle the vendee to a decree for specific performance of the contract. Ibid.

Misrepresentation — Exchange of Lands — Puffing.]—A. & B. agreed to exchange leases granted under Sec. 20 of the "Land Act 1869." A. represented the land comprised in his lease as well timbered and suitable for the purposes of B.'s business, who was a sawyer. B. refused to complete the contract on the ground that A.'s land was not well timbered; there was evidence that there was a considerable quantity of timber fit for the purposes required. On a suit by A. for specific performance, Held that A.'s representations were within the class of vague and indefinite commendations which amounted to mere puffing and which ought to put a purchaser on inquiry, but that if there had been no timber at all or such a small quantity that the land could not be properly described as timbered at all, A.'s statement, if relied on, might have been a ground of defence. Specific performance decreed. Bramley v. Parrott, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 172.

Misrepresentation—How Defendant Resisting Suit should Avail Himself of.]—In bargains between vendor and purchaser, any representation by the former considered important by the buyer should be incorporated in the contract by way of warranty. In cases where no such warranty is introduced, the representations resting only upon conversations between the parties where wilful falsehood is indulged in by the vendor, the deceit releases the purchaser, but the purchaser must, at the time of the bargain, make the vendor understand definitely that he relies on the representation, and will hold him to it. A. brought a suit for specific performance against B., B., the purchaser, resisting it on the ground of misrepresentations of A. as to certain stock-in-trade being included in the contract, and as to certain average takings in a hotel business being greater than in fact they were. Specific performance decreed, though Court believed that the representations were in fact made, on the ground that B. had never alluded to a rescission of the contract, and by his conduct had led A. to believe that matters were going on smoothly. Bradshaw v. Goer, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 26.

What Signature Sufficient.]—D., the mortgagor of gold mining shares, by indenture, 17th October, 1861, conveyed them to defendant for a fixed sum on conditions that W. (defendant) should prosecute certain suits for the redemption of some of the shares, and that D. should have the right to repurchase the shares at a fixed sum within twelve months. D. alone executed the deed. W. prosecuted successfully the suits, and the mortgaged shares so recovered were transferred to him. D. became insolvent in November, 1861, and the plaintiff was appointed his official assignee. On 20th August, 1862, the plaintiff wrote to defendant offering to repurchase the shares, and tendered the fixed sum named in the indenture; but the defendant refused to assign. Bill by the plaintiff for specific performance of the agreement for repurchase in the indenture. The defendant put in an answer pleading the "Statute of Frauds," as he never executed any agreement for the repurchase. Held that the plea failed; the defendant only took the property under the deed, and he could not use D.'s signature as giving effect to the conveyance, and discard it as to the agreement for a repurchase. Shaw v. Wright, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 57.

What Signature Sufficient.]—Plaintiffs, Crown lessees, leased a mine to tributors under a written agreement, and the defendant, a company, by arrangement with the tributors, obtained possession, and worked the mine. Negotiations for a variation of the agreement were carried on between the solicitors for the plaintiffs and defendants, and a new draft was submitted by the former to the latter. The draft was returned with a memorandum by the defendants' solicitor:—"As altered by me, I approve of this draft on behalf of the company." Plaintiffs' solicitors then investigated the title, and had the draft engrossed, which the defendants refused to execute. Upon bill for specific performance, Held, per Molesworth, J. (affirmed on appeal,) that although on the facts proved the solicitor was authorised to act by the defendant company, and could bind it by a written contract under the "Mining Companies Act 1871" (No. 409,) Sec. 40, yet that his signing the draft as approved did not amount to a signing of the contract within the "Statute of Frauds," as it was not contemplated by either party that the deed should at once be executed. Mogg v. Lord Raglan and St. Arnaud G.M. Coy., 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 138.

Part Performance—Agreement on Dissolution of Partnership Partly in Writing, Partly Parol—Effect of Honorary Engagement.]—The plaintiff and defendant were partners carrying on business as storekeepers in premises built on certain allotments. They agreed to dissolve partnership on the following terms, viz.:—That the defendant should keep the assets and business, paying plaintiff £1500 for them; that defendant should keep allotments 11 and 12, and plaintiff 10 and 10A, these four allotments being purchased with partnership funds, but the partners took conveyances of them as tenants in common, and not as partnership property; and the plaintiff entered into an honorary engagement not to compete in business. Afterwards they made a written agreement on the above terms, but omitting all mention of the four allotments and the plaintiff's honorary engagement. The defendant kept the assets and carried on the business, and got conveyances of allotments 11 and 12, but on the plaintiff entering into a competitive business refused to convey allotments 10 and 10A, although he had title deeds to them, and had the use and occupation of the land. On a bill for conveyance of allotments 10 and 10A, Held that the verbal arrangements as to the four allotments would be an addition to the other terms of the written contract not inconsistent with them; and that as the defendant had got his allotments, and had allowed the plaintiff the use and occupation of the lots 10A and 10 and the title deeds, there was sufficient part performance, and that the plaintiff's engagement not to enter into business was at most an honorary one, and the defendant could not refuse to complete the contract because it had not been carried out. Decree for conveyance of allotments. Jennings v. Tivey, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 152.

License to Mine—Not under Seal—Part Performance.]—A license to mine is an interest in land, and as such can only be created by deed. And where the license is vague, loose, and indeterminate, the Court will not imply the doctrine of part performance (the licensee having entered and expended money) in such a contract to make up for its want of formality; the relief given on the ground of part performance has been given on the basis of something remaining to be specifically executed. Miller v. Crawford, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 199.

Enforcement of Agreement for Partition—Part Performance.]—Where A. and W. as partners had acquired allotments 23 AB and 24 AB, it was agreed that upon dissolution of the partnership A. should hold in severalty the allotment 24 AB, and the northern half of allotment 23 B; and that W. should hold in severalty allotment 23 A and the southern half of 23 B. The partners acted upon this agreement by building separate houses upon their respective portions. W. died and his widow re-married, and she and her husband K. denied any agreement. Held that there was an agreement to the above effect between A. and W., and that the partners having acted upon it by building houses upon their several portions specific performance should be decreed, and that the parties should execute conveyances and releases accordingly. The decree was also made binding upon the infant child of W. unless within six months of coming of age he showed good cause to the contrary. Arlett v. Kinsella, 1 A.J.R., 2.

Part Performance—Contract to Sublet part of Leased Ground—Consent of Crown.]—Plaintiffs were lessees under the Crown, and sued defendant in the Court of Mines for trespass. The defendant T. alleged a contract by plaintiffs to sublet part of the ground leased to him, and had erected a house upon the land. There was no evidence in writing of this contract. Held that there was nothing to show that the Crown had concurred in the sublease; and that there was no contract under seal by the plaintiffs, who were trustees for a mining company; and that defendant had acted foolishly in erecting a house without any bargain which would justify him in bringing a suit for specific performance in respect of it; that defendant had offered no defence available at law or in equity. White v. Tippett, 3 A.J.R., 107.

Part Performance.]—Per Full Court—Where a person was mining for gold under a contract with a mining company as to four acres, which he erroneously supposed to be valid at law, and he then entered into a second verbal contract as to ten acres, which included the four upon which he had previously been mining, and continued mining only on the four acres, and in no way varying his manner of working or of money dealing with the company, Held, not sufficient part-performance of the second contract to take it out of the Statute of Frauds, as the individual was in no way prejudiced, or the company benefited. Chun Goon v. Reform G.M. Coy., 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 128, 152; 3 A.L.T., 137.

Part Performance.]—Possession taken before and irrespective of a contract is not part performance of it. Part performance to take a case out of Statute of Frauds must be by acts having reference to a complete agreement, and occurring after it. Mogg v. Lord Raglan and St. Arnaud G.M. Coy., 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 138, 144.

Part Performance—Parol Contract.]—Where a corporation intending to erect a bridge entered into a parol contract with the administrator of a deceased selector to take a portion of the land selected for the purpose of a road thereto, and the administrator approved of the plans and works, and permitted their construction, Held that the case was taken out of Statute of Frauds, and specific performance decreed. Shire of Yea v. Roberts, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 223; 1 A.L.T., 52.

Part Performance—Agreement to Grant a Further Lease.]—Where a landlord verbally agreed to renew a lease shortly before the old lease expired, and, in pursuance of such agreement, entered and painted the premises causing the tenant much inconvenience thereby, Held, on a suit by the tenant for the specific performance of the agreement, that the inconvenience suffered by the tenant amounted to part performance. Polleykett v. Georgeson, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 207.

Part Performance will not Validate a Contract Void by Statute.]—Chambers v. Chambers, ante column 799.

For other cases of part performance see Shiel v. Colonial Bank, ante column 196; and see post under VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

(c) In other Cases.

Exchange of Leases—"Land Act 1869."]—A. and B., lessees under Sec. 20 of the "Land Act 1869," agreed to exchange leases. B. refused, and to a suit by A. for specific performance, set up as a defence the proviso in the lease, that he should not assign it except by way of mortgage, without consent of the Governor-in-Council. Held that this proviso was not a good ground of defence, as the Court may compel both parties to do all they can, and B. had not shown that he had endeavoured to obtain such consent and failed. Quære whether a lessee who has covenanted with his landlord not to assign without license, and has afterwards agreed to assign his lease, can resist a suit for specific performance, merely by showing that his landlord has refused to consent. Bramley v. Parrott, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 172.

III. PRACTICE RELATING TO.

Reference to Master.]—Suit for specific performance. The bill averred an agreement for sale to the plaintiffs of land selected under the "Land Act 1862," and set out a deed executed in pursuance of the agreement, whereby the defendant granted to the plaintiffs the land and all his interest therein, and covenanted for further assurance that the land was alienated by the Crown subsequently to the passing of the "Real Property Act," and could not be registered under that Act, and prayed specific performance of the agreement, and that defendant might execute the necessary documents for completing the plaintiff's title under the "Real Property Act." The defendant denied the agreement with the plaintiffs, but admitted an agreement with H. G., not a party to the suit, and admitted the execution of the deed in blank, and alleged that H. G. had filled in the names of the plaintiffs, whose names appeared as assignees, H. G. having sold to them; the deed of assignment was in evidence. Held by the Primary Judge (Molesworth, J.) that the matter must be referred to the Master to inquire into the circumstances of the assignment. Further directions reserved. Held, on appeal, that the reference if unnecessary should not have been directed, and that if the plaintiffs can establish their title to relief, the Full Court should not abstain from granting relief, merely because a decree adverse in express terms has not been made; and the Full Court made a decree in the terms prayed. Glass v. Simson, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 67.

Parties—Two out of Three Trustees—Suit for Specific Performance.]—S., a testator, made his will, appointing the two plaintiffs and another as trustees. This third trustee renounced, and the widow under a power in the will appointed T. as trustee in his place. After the appointment but before conveyance of the legal estate to the new trustee, the plaintiffs sold certain land to the defendant. The defendant refused to carry out the contract, and the two plaintiff trustees brought a bill for specific performance. Held that T. was a necessary party to the suit, and case ordered to stand over with liberty to join T. as a party, the costs of the day to be taxed in the ordinary way and not under General Orders of 1828. Sargood v. Henry, 5 A.J.R., 62, 63.

Parties to Suit—Mortgagee.]—A corporation which had the construction and management of waterworks entered into a contract not under seal to supply plaintiffs with water as compensation for depriving them of their water-rights. Subsequently the corporation mortgaged the tolls to the Board of Land and Works. Upon suit by the plaintiff to enforce the contract, the defendant objected that the Board should be made a party. Objection overruled. Connolly v. The Shire of Beechworth, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 1.

Selection under "Land Act 1862"—Costs against Crown.]—On petition under the Act No. 49 by a selector of Crown lands under the "Land Act 1862" for specific performance of a contract for sale of Crown lands by the issue of Crown grants for the land selected, decree made for issue of grants. Per Molesworth, J.:—Where the Crown has not unequivocally admitted the right of a petitioner but has put him to prove his case and put forward certain objections which were given up at the hearing, costs will be given against the Crown. Allnutt v. The Queen, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 135.

Costs.]—Where a plaintiff failed clearly to establish acceptance of an offer by defendants for sale of land, bill for specific performance dismissed with costs. Rawlings v. Hislop, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 25.

Costs—Averments in Bill and Answer.]—Upon bill by a bank, prohibited by its Act from purchasing land except for banking purposes, for specific performance of an agreement for sale of land, Held that as plaintiff did not aver and prove intention of using land for banking purposes, and as it appeared from evidence that it was plaintiff's intention to use land for other purposes, the bill should be dismissed without costs, as the defence of illegality was not raised in the answer. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Buckland, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 29; 4 A.L.T., 143.

Schedule—Enacting Part.]—Where there is any conflict between the schedule and the enacting part of a Statute, the enacting part must prevail. Goodman v. Mayor, &c., of Melbourne, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 4.

A schedule may be used to construe an Act if not clearly inconsistent with it. In re Clerk, 2 V.R. (M.,) 11; 2 A.J.R., 48.

Provisions of Repealed Act kept in Force by Reference in a Later Act.]—Where an act refers to the provisions of a prior Act, it is the same as if every clause so referred to were set out in hæc verba in the referring Act, and although the whole of the prior Act may be repealed by a still later Act, such of its provisions as are referred to in the intermediate Act are, by virtue of such intermediate Act, kept in force for the purposes of such intermediate Act. Fenton v. Dry, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 64.

A later Act does not, by implication, repeal a prior Act when the two Acts are not co-extensive, and do not in fact refer to the same subject matter, and are not inconsistent with each other. Regina v. Parker, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 1.

Conflicting Enactments.]—In a case of conflicting enactments, the Court is bound to hold that view which harmonises with the greatest body of law, especially when such a construction favours the liberty of the subject. In re Burton, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 3.

Duty of the Court.]—Per Molesworth, J.—Judges are bound to follow the distinct language of acts without regard to their policy; where language is indistinct, then with regard to policy; and only where the literal distinct meaning of words is absurd to break through it. Douglass v. Simson, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 32, 41.

The duty of the Court is so to interpret Acts of Parliament that they shall have their full effect, and that the manifest intention of the Legislature shall be carried out. And this principle is to be carried out even though it involve the striking out of words in the Act in order to do so. Regina v. Draper, 1 V.R. (L.,) 118; 1 A.J.R., 94.

Although it is incumbent upon the Court consistently with the correct rules of interpretation so to construe a Statute as to give effect to the intention of the Legislature, yet the Court is not at liberty to act in direct opposition to a series of decided cases on a similar Statute. Hedrich v. Commercial Bank, 1 V.R. (L.,) 198; 1 A.J.R., 155.

The Court is not at liberty to expunge words of an Act according to its caprice. Its duty is to endeavour to make sense of every part of an Act, unless there be a manifest repugnancy, or unless there be an omission, which it is not the province of the Court to fill up. Regina v. Heron, ex parte Bryer, 2 A.J.R., 110.

Where an Act (No. 379) contains no recital showing its special object, the Court will not adopt the view that, if an Act intends alteration, every item of the alteration is to be carried as far as possible. In re Mackay, 3 A.J.R., 10.

It is the duty of the Court in construing a Statute to make grammar of it as well as sense. Per Stephen, J.—It must be construed according to its grammatical meaning, unless such a construction would reduce it to an absurdity, or an impossibility. Jacobs v. Jennings, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 172.

Per Fellows, J.—If it can be prevented, no clause, sentence, or word should be deemed superfluous, void, or insignificant. Semble, a marginal note is not part of the Act. Per Molesworth, J.—Where the object of the Legislature is plain and unequivocal, Courts ought, without violence to the words, to adopt such a construction as will best effectuate the intentions of the lawgiver. Regina v. M'Ilwraith, ex parte Smith, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 166.

Comma.]—A comma is not part of an Act of Parliament. Regina v. M'Cormick, ex parte McMonigle, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 268, 272; 6 A.L.T., 105.

Decisions under Former Act—New Act Adopting totidem verbis the Language of Former Act.]—Where there is a new Act passed adopting without alteration the language of a former Act, the Legislature may, in some degree, be regarded as adopting the construction put upon the former Act by previous decisions on it: per Molesworth, J. Attorney-General v. Shire of Kyneton, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 269.

Effect of Recital.]—Per Fellows, J.—A mere recital of a point of fact or of law in an Act of Parliament is not conclusive. Carvalho v. Black Hill South Extended Coy., 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 225, 231.

Force of "Headings" of Parts into which an Act is Divided.]—Semble, per Stawell, C.J., and Williams, J. (dissentiente Holroyd, J.,) that where a Statute expressly enacts that it is to be divided into parts, and assigns a heading to each part, this arrangement is intended merely to facilitate reference, and not to rigidly limit the sections to the subjects specified, excluding all others, even of a cognate character. Union Steam Shipping Coy. of New Zealand v. Melbourne Harbour Trust Commissioners, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 107; 4 A.L.T., 28.

Per Holroyd, J.—Headings are not like marginal notes; but, on the contrary, are themselves enactments, and must be read as substantive parts of the Act. They indicate primâ facie that every section in the part, and every portion of such section, has some connection with the subject to which, liberally construed, the heading relates. Ibid, p. 184.

"It shall be lawful."]—The question whether the words "it shall be lawful" in an Act of Parliament are mandatory or not, must be solved aliunde, and in general it is to be solved from the context, from the particular provisions, or from the general scope and objects, of the enactment conferring the power. Ex parte Nyberg, in re Nicholson, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 292, 296.

"Pawnbrokers Statute 1865," Sec. 5.]—Sec. 5 of the "Pawnbrokers Statute 1865," which provides that "it shall be lawful for the justices . . . . if they shall be satisfied with the character of the person so applying, to grant a license," &c., is mandatory, and if, upon an application for a pawnbroker's license, the justices are satisfied with the character of the applicant they are bound to grant the license; and if, though so satisfied, they determine not to grant a license, no appeal will lie, but a mandamus may issue to compel them to hear and determine according to law. Ibid; see also S.C. 4 A.L.T., 78.

Per Molesworth, J.—Interpretation clauses must be themselves interpreted reasonably to promote, and not to defeat the purposes of the Act they are intended to elucidate, and the usual restriction "unless there be something in the subject or context repugnant to such construction" must, if not expressed, be of necessity understood. In re Fourth S.M. Building Society, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 54; 4 A.L.T., 182.

Per Higinbotham, J.—Where a leading phrase occurring in an Act of Parliament is of doubtful meaning, and the Legislature has omitted to remove the doubt either by interpretation or recitals, it becomes a necessity to examine the history of the law, and it is permissible to have recourse to all sources of information from which enlightenment can be derived in any degree, great or small, as to the intention of the Legislature. Renison v. Keighran, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 133, 138.

Effect of Interpretation.]—Per Stephen, J.—Where the Court interprets a new Act, such interpretation becomes part of the legislation on the subject. Tommy Dodd Coy. v. M'Clure, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 237, 243.

Authority to do an Act.]—Where an Act of Parliament merely authorises a body to do a particular act, it does not authorise such body to do that act in such a way as to create a nuisance, or to injure or interfere with private rights, unless such an intention clearly appears in the Statute itself, either by express words or necessary implication, and even then the onus is cast upon those who seek to interfere with private rights of bringing themselves within the qualification of the general principle; in other words, where the terms of a Statute are not imperative but permissive, the fair inference is that the legislator intended that the discretion as to the use of the general powers thereby conferred, should be exercised in strict conformity with private rights. King v. Mayor, &c., of Kew, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 183, 187, 188; 6 A.L.T., 54.

"Building Societies Act 1874."]—Where a Statute ("Building Societies Act 1874," No. 493), creates a corporation for a particular purpose, and confers upon it powers for that purpose, such corporation is deemed to have only the powers by Statute conferred upon it expressly or impliedly, and everything else is prohibited. In re Metropolitan Permanent Building Society, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 86; 3 A.L.T., 26.

Overriding Common Law Right.]—To enable that to be done which is expressly in opposition to a clear and absolute common law right, something in the nature of an express authority by Statute would be required. Fergusson v. Union Steamship Coy., 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 279, 289; 6 A.L.T., 120.

"Melbourne Harbour Trust Act 1876," Sec. 50.]—Sec. 50 of the "Melbourne Harbour Trust Act 1876" confers no authority on the Trust to interfere with rights of navigation. Ibid.

Criminal Statute.]—Apart from any application of the principle ejusdem generis, it should be assumed in construing a criminal Statute (Act No. 265) that Parliament intended a similar punishment and an equal mode of legislation for offences classed together as of like nature, unless express words forbid such a construction. Bergin v. Cohen, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 133.

Penal Statute.]—A penal Statute must be construed strictly, and it does not affect this interpretation if the Act is remedial and beneficial as well. Regina v. Dowling, ex parte Laby, 5 A.J.R., 74.

Quasi-Criminal Statute.]—The "Imprisonment for Debt Statute," being quasi-criminal, its provisions must be strictly adhered to. Regina v. Pritchard, ex parte Smart, 2 A.L.T., 58; ante column 346.

"Duties on Estates Statute" (No. 388,) Sec. 24.]—Sec. 24 is not to be construed strictly against those who seek its benefit, because it is an exception to a general rule. Armytage v. Wilkinson, ante columns 389, 390.

"Land Acts 1862 and 1865."]—Statutes affecting the property of the Crown should be construed strictly as to those claiming against it. Acts giving to a class rights in Crown property against the public should be construed strictly as to those claiming against it. Simson v. The Queen, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 113, 125.

Penal Statute.]—Per Williams, J. "Where a Statute creates that an offence which was not an offence before and in the section creating the offence prescribes the remedy or penalty attaching to that offence, that remedy or penalty and none other must be followed." Regina v. Alley, ex parte Davey, 9 V.L.R., (L.,) 59; 4 A.L.T., 158.

Bye-law.]—The same rule is to be observed in the construction of an Act and a bye-law under it, and a penal provision in either must be strictly construed. Regina v. Templeton, ex parte Mow Sang, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 55.

Statute Authorising Penalty—Levy by Distress Should Precede Imprisonment unless otherwise Provided.]—See ex parte Fat Tack; ex parte Ah Poon, ante column 1146.

Enabling Acts.]—Enabling Statutes are to be construed strictly. Brooks v. The Queen, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 100, 109; 5 A.L.T., 199.

Retrospective.]—Per Molesworth, J.—In construing Acts of Parliament the intention to be retrospective can only be effectuated by very clear and distinct words, and exception from the retrospective operation should be construed liberally for the exception. Nash v. The Queen, 1 V.R. (E.,) 118, 121; 1 A.J.R., 103.

When Construed Retrospectively.]—The Courts will not construe an Act retrospectively so as to impose new conditions unless its language absolutely compels them. Regina v. Sturt, 3 V.R. (L.,) 1; 3 A.J.R., 22.

Retrospective Effect.]—Unless the intention of the Legislature is clearly expressed that an Act is to be retrospective it is the duty of the Court to hold that its operation is not to be such as to interfere with existing rights. The presumption in all cases is that the Act regulates the future and not the past, and the maxim—"Nova constitutio futuris formam imponere debet non præteritis" applies. Although an Act is not retrospective as to rights, it is retrospective as to procedure. The Tommy Dodd Coy. v. Patrick, 5 A.J.R., 14, 16.

Retrospective.]—Although the Court will not generally give a retrospective effect operation unless the intention of the Legislature to that effect is clear and unambiguous, yet, where the effect of holding that an Act is not retrospective would be to cause circuity of action, and would be opposed to the true intent and meaning of the Act, the Court will construe an Act retrospectively even although the interpretation be difficult. Trenery v. Stewart, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 247, 254, 255, 256; 1 A L.T., 37.

For list of retrospective and non-retrospective Statutes see under next sub-heading.

Remedies under.]—Where a Statute imposes tolls or other payments (poundage fees), and prescribes the mode in which they may be recovered, no other remedy is to be pursued. Cotter v. Hann, 3 V.R. (L.,) 12; 3 A.J.R., 31.

But the remedies in cases of encroachment under the "Mining Statute 1865" are cumulative and do not oust the ordinary jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. Mulcahy v. Walhalla G.M. Coy., 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 103, 120.

Imposing Taxes.] — Statutes imposing taxes should be construed strictly against the Crown. In the Estate of Henty, 4 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 54.

Time of Passing of Statute.]—When a Victorian Act of Parliament is reserved for the Royal assent it does not "pass" until the proclamation of it in this colony in accordance with 5 & 6 Vict., cap. lxxvi., Sec. 33. In re Turner, 2 W.W & A'B. (E.,) 104.

7 Vict., No. 19, Sec. 18.]—In section 18 of 7 Vict., No. 19, the expression "in contemplation of insolvency," means in contemplation of the sequestration of his estate; whilst the words "knowing himself to be insolvent," mean knowing himself to be incapable of meeting his engagements. The word "or" between the two expressions is used in the disjunctive, separating two distinct states of circumstances, so that the latter expression is not merely explanatory of the former. In re Handasyde, 1 W. & W. (I.E. & M.,) 110.

"Land Act 1865."]—An Act of Parliament ("Land Act" No. 237,) which provides that certain acts shall be deemed a forfeiture of interest, and that upon the publication of declaration of forfeiture in the Government Gazette the terms created by a lease granted by the Crown shall cease and determine, &c., is to be construed in the same way as a similar clause in a lease between subject and subject, where a lessor attempting to eject a lessee would be called on to prove the act of forfeiture on which he relied. M'Dowell v. Myles, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 16.

"Land Act 1869," Sec. 101.]—See Ettershank v. The Queen, ante columns 792, 793, 794.

"Land Act 1862," Secs. 26, 31, 125, Schedule 2.]—Regina v. Taylor, ante column 802.

And for LAND ACTS generally see under LAND ACTS.

18 and 19 Vict., Cap. 56, Sec. 5.]—The Statute which transfers Crown lands to the colonial Legislature does not give to imperfect or honorary contracts of the Crown a binding efficacy as against the Crown. Davis v. The Queen, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 106, 116.

Act No. 273, Part 13—Act No. 379.]—The "Insolvency Statute 1871" (No. 379,) does not repeal Part 13 of Act No. 273. In re Knowles, ante column 627.

18 Vict, No. 3—"Constitution Act"—22 Vict. No. 68.]—18 Vict., No. 3, was recited in a schedule to 22 Vict., No. 68, and the preamble to No. 68 recited the schedule, and enacted that certain Acts, enumerated in the schedule as the same should be altered or amended, should be continued in full force and effect. Held that, rejecting the schedule, yet as 18 Vict., No. 3, was previously in force for one year only, the effect of No. 68 was to make it perpetual, and that the fact of 18 Vict., No. 3, being specified both by date and title was sufficient to make it valid; and that the Constitution Act giving the Legislature power to vary or repeal an existing Act, also gave the Legislature power to continue and re-enact it, and that 22 Vict., No. 68, in making No. 3 perpetual was a re-enactment of it. Ryall v. Kenealy, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 193, 200, 201; N.C., 7.

"Lands Compensation Statute 1869," Sec. 36—"Easement."]—The word "easement" in Sec. 36 of the "Lands Compensation Statute 1869" relates to rights of passage only. Austin v. President, &c., of Shire of Dunmunkle, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 224.

"Landlord and Tenant Statute 1864," Secs. 96, 97—Remedy of Tenant where Justices have Issued without Jurisdiction Warrant of Possession.]—Ex parte Carey; Regina v. Carr; Regina v. Taylor ex parte Blackburn; Ex parte Shaw; ante column 813.

"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 418.]—A hole in a street is not a hole near a street within the meaning of Sec. 418 of the Act. Kensington Starch and Maizena Coy. v. Mayor of Essendon and Flemington, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 265; 2 A.L.T., 35.

Instruments and Securities Statute 1864, Sec. 98—Meaning of Word "Specialty."]—Stackpoole v. Glass, ante column 718.

Non-retrospective Statutes—Act No. 379, Sec. 70.]—Sec. 70 of the "Insolvency Statute 1871" (No. 379) is not retrospective. Dallimore v. Oriental Bank, ante column 469.

Non-Retrospective Statutes—"Married Women's Property Act," Sec. 18.]—Sec. 18 of the "Married Women's Property Act" (No. 384,) is not retrospective. Hutchings v. Cunningham, 2 V.R. (L.,) 236; 3 A.J.R., 64.

"Administration Act" (No. 427)—"Duties on Instestates' Estates Statute 1870" (No. 388.)]—The combined effect of these Statutes is not retrospective as to succession duty. In re Quinlan, 2 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 17.

"Gold Fields Amendment Act" (No. 148.)]—Sec. 4 of this Act is not retrospective. Ex parte Barclay, in re Pascoe, ante column 918.

"Life Assurance Act" (No. 474.)]—This Statute is not retrospective. Ettershank v. Dunne, ante column 724.

"Wines, Beers, and Spirits Sale Amendment Act" (No. 390.)]—This Act has not a retrospective effect. Regina v. Sturt, ante column 830.

Retrospective Statutes—"Duties on Estates Amendment Act" (No. 523.)]—Per Molesworth, J.—The Act is in some degree retrospective as to persons who died between its commencement and its passing. In re Bell, ante columns 390, 391.

"Mining Statute" (No. 291,) Sec. 73.]—This section has a retrospective operation. Vivian v. Dennis, ante column 915.

"Land Tax Act" (No. 575,) Sec. 55.]—This section has a retrospective operation. Trenery v. Stewart, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 247; 1 A.L.T., 37.

Act No. 409.]—Held, overruling Tommy Dodd Coy. v. Patrick, 5 A.J.R., 14, that Act No. 409 in its provisions as to forfeiture of shares for nonpayment of calls is retrospective. Chun Goon v. Reform G.M. Coy., ante columns 1020, 1021, 1026; and see also S.C., ante column 1014.

"Married Women's Property Act," Sec. 5.]—Per Molesworth, J. (in Chambers.) The words "any husband" in Sec. 5 of the "Married Women's Property Act" (No. 384) apply only to the husband in existence at the time the wife acquires the property. Griffiths v. Griffiths, 1 A.L.T., 119.

"Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute Amendment Act 1883," Sec. 25—"Passing" of Act.]—The "Marriage and Matrimonial Causes Statute Amendment Act" (No. 787,) was reserved for the Royal assent on the 3rd November, 1883. The Royal assent was given on the 4th of March, 1884, and was proclaimed on the 7th of May next. Held that the Act "passed" on 4th of March, and that a suit commenced on the 2nd of May, 1884, was not "pending at the passing" of the Act within the meaning of Sec. 25 of the Act. Carlyon v. Carlyon, 10 V.LR. (I.P. & M.,) 51.

"Mining Companies Amendment Act" (No. 324,) Sec. 9—Meaning of Word "Action."]—The word "action" in Sec. 9 of the Act No. 324 means an action on a contract by a third person against the partnership. Allardyce v. Cunningham, ante column 1130.

"Statute of Trusts," Sec. 88—Public Officer.]—Sec. 88 of the "Statute of Trusts 1866" (No. 234,) does not apply only to "public officers," but the word "public" has been inadvertently inserted in the section, and the word "officer" must be popularly interpreted. Regina v. Draper, 1 V.R. (L.,) 118; 1 A.J.R., 94.

The word "officer" in Sec. 88 of the "Statute of Trusts 1864," includes the assistant-manager of a bank. Ibid.

Colonial Act—Repugnancy to Imperial—When Invalidated by.]—The only repugnancy that will invalidate a colonial Act is a repugnancy to some Act of the Imperial Parliament affecting the colony, or some order or regulation made under such an Act, or to some of the leading principles of the Common Law. Regina v. Whelan, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 7, 18.

The Supreme Court has power to examine the validity of an Act of the Parliament of Victoria. In re Dill, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 171, 187.

Colonial—What Imperial Acts they may Repeal.]—Colonial Statutes may repeal Imperial Acts which extend to dependencies of the Crown, being brought into them, together with common law rights by persons who become inhabitants of a colony, but not Imperial Acts which take effect in the colony only. Regina v. M'Carthy, 4 A.J.R., 155.

Therefore although the "Gaols Statute 1864," Sec. 27, is repugnant to Sec. 9 of the "Habeas Corpus Act" (31 Car. II., cap. 2,) the former Act is valid since the "Habeas Corpus Act" extends to the whole of the British dominions. Ibid.

29 Car. II., Cap. 7, Sec. 1.]—The provisions of this Act as to the observance of Sunday are in force in Victoria. Garton v. Coy, 4 A.J.R., 100, ante column 849.

9 & 10 Will. III., Cap. 15.]—This Act giving Courts of Record control over arbitration questions is in force in Victoria. M'Meckan v. White, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 165; Crooke v. Swords, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 136, 139.

4 & 5 Anne, Cap. 16, Sec. 19.]—This Act (a Statute of Limitations) is in force in Victoria. Griffiths v. Block, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 294, ante column 849.

33 Geo. III., Cap. 13.]—This Act is in force in Victoria, so that the Court can, under it, take judicial notice of the date of passing of an Act endorsed thereon. Glass v. The Queen, 4 A.J.R., 133.

38 Geo. III., Cap. 87.]—This Statute providing for the appointment of an executor durante absentiâ is in force but is inapplicable owing to Act No. 427. In the Will of Ryan, 7 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.) 38; 2 A.L.T., 143.

2 & 3 Vict., Cap. 15.]—Semble that this Act (Custody of Infants) is in force in Victoria. Murphy v. Kelly, 2 V.R. (E.,) 139; 2 A.J.R., 128.

8 & 9 Will. III., Cap. 11—3 & 4 Will. IV., Cap. 42, Sec. 32.]—The Act 8 & 9 Will. III., Cap. 11, allowing a judge to certify that there was reason for joining a defendant who succeeds, so as to deprive him of his costs, is in force in this colony; but only applies to actions of pure trespass. The more extensive provision contained in the later Act 3 & 4 Will. IV., Cap. 42, Sec. 32, allowing a judge to certify in actions of trespass on the case, is not incorporated in the "Common Law Procedure Statute 1865," and is not in force in this colony. Dakin v. Heller, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 114; see S.C., ante columns 242, 243.

6 Geo. IV., Cap. 94—5 & 6 Vict., Cap. 39.]—Of these Acts (Factors' Acts) the former is in force, the latter not. Levi v. Learmonth, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 283, 289.

32 & 33 Vict., Cap. 33.]—Quære, whether this Act (Abolition of Forfeiture for Felony) extends to Victoria. Johnston v. Kelly, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 97; 3 A.L.T., 41.

Contract made on a Sunday—Whether it Binds a Principal.]—Per Molesworth, J., a contract made by a land agent on a Sunday is void under 29 Car. II., Cap. 7, and does not bind a principal. Per Full Court, a land agent is not ejusdem generis with other persons specifically named as tradesmen in Sec. 1, and therefore a contract made by a land agent on a Sunday does bind a principal. *Ronald v. TENANT.

1 Tenant for Life and Remaindermen.

Where Entitled to the whole Income—Liability of Trustees.]—W., by his will, directed that his property (a squatting property and stock) should be sold, and the proceeds invested, and the income thereof paid to his wife for life. The trustees continued the station with great success, deducted part of the cost of purchasing the pre-emptive section and other portions of the estate, and of building a house, and paid the remainder of the income to the wife. It was contended that the tenant for life was only entitled to the interest at eight per cent. on the capital value of the property at the expiration of one year from the testator's death. Held, and affirmed on appeal, that the widow was entitled to the clear income of the station crediting her with sums laid out for purchases and improvements, and that the trustees were discharged from liability as to the amount so fairly found to be receivable by her on taking the accounts. Waddell v. Patterson, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 43, 53, 59.

Income—How Calculated upon Property, the Conversion of which has been Postponed.]—Where a testator left the whole of his property to tenants for life with remainder over, and station property, part of the estate, had not been sold till about two years after the testator's death, Held that the income receivable by the tenants for life in respect of the station property was to be ascertained by calculating interest upon the amount actually realised by the sales, at eight per cent., from the time of the testator's death until the time of sale. Chadwick v. Bennett, 1 V.R. (E.,) 109.

Gift of Bank Deposit Receipts Bearing Interest.]—A testatrix devised property, part of which consisted of bank deposit receipts bearing interest, which was not payable till some months after the date of testatrix' death, to trustees upon trust for A. for life. Held that both the sums deposited and the interest thereon were corpus, and should be invested and the interest paid to A. for life. In re Thomas's will, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 25.

Chattels not Mentioned in the Will.]—A testator devised his residuary estate upon trust to A. for life, remainder to B. Certain furniture not mentioned in the will, by verbal agreement between A., B. and the trustees, was sold, and it was agreed that the proceeds should be invested, and the income paid to A. for life. After the sale A. claimed the proceeds of sale. Held that such proceeds should be invested and the income paid to A. for life. Ibid.

Apportionment of Rent—Rent Due at Date of Death not Apportionable.]—See in re Thomas's will, ante columns 45, 46.

Advancement to Tenant for Life with Consent of Reversioners.]—An application for payment out of the estate of a sum of £4000 to one of the tenants for life, all those interested under the will consenting, was refused, it being left to the family to make some arrangement among themselves. Chadwick v. Bennett, 3 A.J.R., 42.

Liability of Tenant for Life for Waste.]—Spotswood v. Hand, 5 A.J.R., 85, post under WASTE.

Management of Estate—Repairs.]—A testator provided for the realisation of all his personal estate and its investment, and directed that the income of the securities and the rents and profits of his real estate were to be paid to M. E. D. for his life, and after his death the real and personal estate were to be conveyed to the University. The will contained powers of leasing and managing by the trustees. The real property consisted principally of a house in Bourke-street, which could not be let unless repairs to the extent of £300 were made. Upon petition under the "Statute of Trusts 1864," Sec. 61, to obtain the opinion of the Court as to whether M. E. D. was entitled to the management of the real property, and whether the cost of repairs should be borne by the income or the corpus, Held that the real estate should be let and managed during the life of M. E. D. by the trustees of the will; M. E. D. to receive the rents and produce, subject to arrangements for repairs; that repairs should be effected at the expense of M. E. D., under the management of the trustees, not paid for out of corpus; that no repairs should be paid for out of corpus; costs of the application to be paid for out of corpus, real or personal. In re Dwight, 4 A.J.R., 33.

Partnership—Will—Corpus—Income—Profits in Business.]—A testator, prior to his death, had been engaged in a partnership business, and by his will appointed his wife and the surviving partner executors, directing them to carry on the business for so long as the wife should think fit, empowering them to continue capital therein invested, and to invest other capital, and directing executors to pay to the wife "the annual income arising from the estate." The wife had allowed the greater part of the profits which accrued after the testator's death to remain in the business as capital. Held that the profits of the business accrued since the testator's death belonged to the wife as income, and she did not lose her rights thereto by allowing part to be invested as capital. Ball v. Ball, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 188; 3 A.L.T., 44.

Liability of Life Estate for Commission and Expenses.]—By his will a testator directed that, as to moneys to be invested as provided for in the will, at least one-half should be invested during the life of his widow, and that the interest and proceeds of a sum equal to a half of such moneys should be paid to the widow during her life, and declared that it should be lawful for the trustees "to retain for themselves a commission at the rate of five per cent. upon all interest, rents and other annual income which shall or may from time to time be gotten in or received by the trustees, &c." The trustees incurred certain expense in endeavouring to recover arrears of interest upon a sum of money lent on mortgage by the testator. Held that the widow's life estate in the moiety was subject to the trustees' commission, but not to the expenses incurred, these being chargeable on the general estate. In re Mitchell, 1 W.W. (E.,) 167.

Loss of Corpus on Realisation of Security—How to be Borne by Life Tenant and Remaindermen.]—Certain money was lent by a testator on the security of the A. property. The widow, who was entitled to the interest of the money lent, died, the interest being in arrear. After her death the property was sold, and only about one-third of the principal and interest was recovered. Held that the widow's representatives and the remaindermen must bear their shares of the deficiency pro rata. Ibid.

Premium Received on a Lease.]—In a suit for administration of the trusts of a will, Held that the tenant for life was entitled as against the remaindermen to a sum received by the trustees as premium for a lease of the estate, such premium being treated as an incident to the income. Lane v. Loughnan, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 19; 2 A.L.T., 113.

Representatives of a Life Tenant—How Entitled to Income Due but not Received at Time of Life Tenant's Death.]—Interest on a mortgage security accrues de die in diem, and is not analogous to rent, not needing the aid of Statute to make it apportionable. Where therefore a life tenant entitled to interest on money lent on mortgage by the testator had died before the interest was received, Held that her representatives were entitled to receive her proportionate part of the income accrued due at the time of her death. In re Mitchell, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 167.

3. Tenant at Will.

What Creates a Tenancy at Will.]—S., a father, occupied land as caretaker for J., his son, the owner. On J.'s leaving the colony, he said "If I never come back you are to keep it," but there was no delivery of possession. Held that no tenancy at will was created thereby, and that it did not amount to a gift. M'Cracken v. Woods, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 23.

A cestui que trust in possession, by permission of the trustee, is a tenant at will, and may therefore bring trespass against a stranger. Cuvet v. Davis, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 390, 396.

THISTLES.

Statute—"Thistles Prevention Stat. 1865," No. 250.

"Thistles Prevention Stat.," Sec. 4—Service of Notice.]—Where a service of notice to keep down thistles under Sec. 4 of the "Thistles Prevention Stat.," No. 250, was made on a water commission, by leaving it with a clerk at their office, and the justices did not consider it sufficient service, and dismissed the case, the Court granted a rule nisi to compel the justices to hear the case, and afterwards made the rule absolute, on the ground that the office of the commission came within the description of "usual place of abode," and that service on the clerk was sufficient. Regina v. Gaunt, ex parte Drummond, 4 A.J.R., 20, 79.

"Thistles Prevention Stat. 1865," Secs. 4, 6—Description of Land.]—A notice to destroy thistles on land, which merely describes the land by stating in what shire and parish it is situated, is insufficient, and will not render the owner of the land liable to the penalties imposed under Secs. 4 and 6 of the "Thistles Prevention Stat. 1865," No. 250, for failing to comply with such notice. Lithgow v. Summers, 4 A.J.R., 90.

"Thistles Prevention Stat." No. 250, Sec. 4—Defendant Using all Reasonable Means to Destroy.]—Where D. had, before notice served, been using all reasonable means to destroy thistles on his land, and continued so doing after the notice, although he did not succeed in destroying them within the fourteen days mentioned in the notice, the justices held that his efforts afforded no answer to the information, and fined him £5, sentence to be deferred for three weeks, and then to be executed whether thistles were destroyed or not. Held, on appeal, that they were wrong. Order made for recording in magistrates' book that defendant had used all reasonable means for destroying the thistles. Dugdale v. Martin, 5 A.J.R., 28.

Sec 4—"Owner."]—Where the defendant was an equitable mortgagee of the land where thistles were found, who had exercised acts of ownership by leasing the property, Held that there was sufficient evidence to show that defendant was the "owner." Haworth v. Hebbard, 5 A.J.R., 28.

"Thistles Prevention Stat.," No. 250—Land Forming One Farm, though consisting of various Allotments—Several Convictions.]—L. was in occupation of a large area of ground used as one farm, but consisting of various allotments, and notice was served upon him to clear off thistles, and three summonses were issued, upon each of which he was convicted and fined. Held that, as the land formed one farm and one notice was sufficient, there was only one offence and not three; and that the Act being penal, and therefore to be strictly construed, the Court would not infer a power to prosecute for repeated acts, when such power was not expressly given. Rule absolute for certiorari to quash second and third convictions. Regina v. Dowling, ex parte Laby, 5 A.J.R., 74.

TIME, COMPUTATION OF.

Fractions of a Day—Court Takes Notice of]—The Court will take notice of parts of a day. Chappel v. Moffatt, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 189.

Where an appeal case was transmitted to, and received by, the Prothonotary on a Saturday before noon (the office closing at noon on Saturday,) and notice of the appeal was not served on the respondent till 6 p.m. the same day (the Act under which the appeal was made providing that notice of the appeal should first be given to the respondent,) Held that the Court would take notice of acts being done at different hours of the day, and that the service was insufficient. Ibid.

The Court takes notice of parts of a day only where it is necessary to determine which of two acts done on the same day is to have priority. Regina v. O'Brien, ex parte Dalmatia Gold Mining Company, 6 V.L.R. (L.) 429; 2 A.L.T., 86.

Where, therefore, justices made an order on the 14th of a month, for payment of a debt, with a stay of proceedings for one week. Held that the 14th counted as one day of the week, and that execution could properly issue on the 21st, Ibid.

Notice of Motion—Computation of Time—Sunday.]—Sunday does not count in the computation of the two clear days required for a notice of motion. Brown v. Healey, 1 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 47.

TITLE AND TITLE DEED.

Pretended Title—32 Henry VIII., Cap. 9.]—The conveyance of an estate transferred by the decree of the Court from one trustee to another cannot be deemed a pretended title; still less can such a trustee be a purchaser within the meaning of the "Pretence Titles Act" (32 Henry VIII., Cap. 9) A'Beckett v. Matthewson, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 29, 33.

Parcel or no Parcel—Question for Jury.]—The question of parcel or no parcel is generally one for the jury, but when the whole description, as well as position, are given by a written instrument, the proper interpretation of such a document is for the Court. Small v. Glen, 6 V.L.R (L.,) 154; 1 A.L.T., 197.

Title in Actions of Ejectment.]—See cases, ante columns 397, et. seq.

Certificate of Title—Plan—Falsa Demonstratio.]—The description of land comprised in a certificate of title, which gave the area approximately, was merely a plan on the margin showing the abuttals at each end to be on a street, and on the plan the dimensions in figures of the boundary lines were marked, but those between the streets fell short by some feet of the actual distance between the two streets. Held that the position shown by the plan should govern the certificate, and that the land should be considered as abutting on the two streets, the dimensions marked in figures being excluded on the principle that falsa demonstratio non nocet. Small v. Glen, 6 V.L.R (L.,) 154; 1 A.L.T., 197.

And see under TRANSFER OF LAND—Certificate of Title.

"Shires Stat. 1863," No. 176, repealed by Act No. 358.

"Boroughs Stat.," No. 359, repealed by Act No. 506.

"Local Government Act 1874," No. 506.

Proclamation of Common Toll Road, where Bad, No. 176, Sec. 254.]—A road extending from F. to H. was proclaimed a common toll road by the Governor-in-Council under Sec. 254 of Act No. 176. The road branched before reaching H., but the two branches united before reaching H., and both branches were used indifferently for direct traffic from F. to H., and the proclamation did not specify which of the branches was intended to be the common toll road. Held that, since it was impossible for the Road Board to know upon which branch to expend the moneys collected for tolls, the proclamation was bad. Gilchrist v. Meagher, 1 V.R. (L.,) 116; 1 A.J R., 98.

[Compare Sec. 433 of Act No. 506.]

Altering Lease of—Neglect of Lessors.]—The Shire Council of C. sued R. on a covenant in a lease for the payment of rent for tolls. The lease and counterpart were executed by both parties in December, and the lease purported to be a lease of the tolls to which the council was entitled; formally, however, the tolls had not been delivered—the proclamation of the tolls not being made till the 14th of January following; and the lease purported to commence from the 1st of February. The council did nothing to enable R. to collect the tolls, by putting up gates, &c., and in the middle of February, R. wrote, complaining of this neglect, and that he could not continue the lease unless steps were taken to remedy what was complained of. Subsequently R. refused to continue the lease, and, in point of fact, if he had not paid a month's rent in advance he would not have taken up the lease at all. The person from whom he had received possession retained possession, and R. was prepared to hand over what he had collected. After the lease was signed by R., a blank left for the date of gazetting the tolls was filled in, with the consent of both parties. Held that the lease was good, the council having power to insert the date with the consent of the lessee; but that the council being solely to blame for the non-receipt of the whole of the tolls for the month must bear the loss, and that the damages which had been given to them in respect of five months' rent should be reduced by the amount of the first months' rent. Shire of Creswick v. Ryan, 1 A.J.R., 169.

Levying at a Check Gate.]—Where a main road is proclaimed a common toll road, and a scale of fees fixed in respect of it, and subsequently a road diverging from it at the toll gate is declared a common toll road, and no separate scale of fees is proclaimed, but a check gate is erected at the junction, tolls may be properly collected at the check gate. Leary v. Patterson, 2 A.J.R., 57.

Second Toll—When Demandable—Acts 16 Vic., No. 40, Sec. 20, No. 176, Sec. 249.]—A second toll is demandable, under the Acts No. 40, Sec. 20, and No. 176, Sec. 249, for the same horses and vehicle going in the same direction on the same day. Ryan v. Polwarth, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 6.

[Compare Sec. 423 of Act No. 506.]

"Boroughs Stat.," No. 379, Sec. 327.]—Under Sec. 327 of the "Boroughs Stat." No. 359 toll cannot be demanded twice within twenty-four hours for the same horse and vehicle returning or going through any toll bar, there being no limitation to the number of times which a person driving the same horse and vehicle may return or go within the twenty-four hours. Maher v. Mulcny, 1 A.J.R., 154.

[Compare Sec. 423 of Act No 506.]

In Respect of what Demandable.]—At a toll-gate tolls were payable as follow:—For every gig, chaise, coach, chariot, or other such carriage constructed on springs, if drawn by one horse, 6d.; for every cart, dray, waggon, wain, or other such vehicle drawn by one horse, 1s. Held that an American express waggon suitable for carrying passengers, constructed on springs, was under the first class, although used by the owner for the purposes of his trade as a storekeeper. Croll v. Linton, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 220. N.C. 17.

[See Sec. 427 of Act No. 506.]

Exemptions from Tolls—"Road Act," No. 40, Sec. 22—Poundkeeper.]—A poundkeeper is not a person in the service of the Government within the meaning of Sec. 22 of No. 40, whereby such persons are exempted from tolls; and where it did not appear that the personal attendance of a poundkeeper was indispensably necessary at the Treasury to pay in his receipts, Held that even if a poundkeeper were a person "in the service of the Government within the meaning of the section, he could not while on such an errand be deemed to be" in the employment and service of the Government. Robinson v. Bonfield, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 302.

Exemption from—Who not Entitled to—Officer in H.M.'s Service.]—An officer in Her Majesty's service is not exempt from payment of tolls when proceeding on duty, in a carriage or other vehicle, since the Act 18 and 19 Vic. Cap. 2, Sec. 79, only exempts him when on horseback. Niall v. Page, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 38.

27 Vic, No. 176, Sec. 252—"Manure."]—Decayed vegetable matter taken from a swamp and kept in a heap, and which is used as a fertilising agent, may, as a matter of law, be regarded as "manure," and therefore a cart conveying such may be regarded as exempt from tolls under Sec. 252 of Act No. 176. Cuthbert v. Daley, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 195.

[Compare Sec. 423 of Act No. 506.]

Act No. 176, Sec. 252—Bone Dust Partly for Export, Partly for Local Use.]—Two cart loads of bone dust were charged with toll, one of them containing such manure for exportation to Ceylon, the other for local use. Held that the cart bearing manure for local use was exempt, that for exportation not exempt. Jopling v. Lawlor, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 3.

[Compare Sec. 423 of Act No. 506.]

Evasion of—What is—No. 359, Sec. 330.]—In order to render a person liable to a penalty, under Sec. 23 of the "Boroughs Stat.," No. 359, for evading a toll, there must be proved on his part a fraudulent intention to deprive the toll-keeper of his legitimate revenue. Ryan v. Roach, 2 V.R. (L.,) 183; 2 A.J.R., 107.

A., on a certain day, drove a leading horse as far as an inn, sixteen chains distant from a toll-gate, and, on arrival at the inn, unyoked one horse, leaving it at the stable till his return. He remarked that he was going to "slew the tollman," and drove through the gate with one horse only, and on his return the horse left behind was again yoked up, and driven home. A.'s employer stated that he was the person who paid the tolls; that A. was not authorised to say he would "slew the tollman;" that the nature of the roads required two horses as far as the inn; that the loading on the way required two horses as far as the inn; that he had rented a stall at the inn for the purpose of leaving one horse there; and that the second horse was not taken off for the purpose of evading toll. Held that there was evidence from which the justices could properly arrive at the conclusion that no fraud was intended, and that there was no evasion of toll intended. Ibid.

Evasion of Toll — Jurisdiction of Justices.]—A person who uses a toll road, but leaves it at a considerable distance from the toll-gate, and passes over a common, thereby contriving to get past the toll-gate without passing through it, commits the offence of evading toll; but the amount of the toll cannot be recovered before justices, for the toll is only payable under Sec. 420 of the "Local Government Act 1874," when the gate has been passed through. Regina v. Call, ex parte Hazard, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 107.

Remedy for Recovery of—"Boroughs Stat.," No. 359, Sec. 326.]—The remedy pointed out in Sec. 326 of the statute, viz., a proceeding before a justice, as to recovery of tolls, must be followed. Cotter v. Hann, 3 V.R. (L.,) 12; 3 A.J.R., 31.

I. TRADE MARK.

1. What is.

Combination of Words—"Aromatic Schiedam Schnapps."]—Plaintiff was the proprietor of a cordial termed "Wolfe's Aromatic Schiedam Schnapps." Defendant, the proprietor of a rival article, described it as "Hart's Imperial Schiedam Schnapps," and "Imperial Schiedam Aromatic Schnapps." Plaintiff prayed for an injunction to restrain defendant from so doing. Held, per Molesworth, J., that from their respective signification, these words "Aromatic," "Schiedam," "Schnapps," and the combination, were public property, and that plaintiff was not entitled to the injunction. Wolfe v. Hart, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 125.

Plaintiff also sought to restrain the defendant from using bottles, labels, and wrappers, similar to, or only colourably differing from, those of the plaintiff. Held, per Molesworth, J., that the combination before referred to being uncommon, ought to be regarded in this part of the motion; and that, although dealers in spirits might not be deceived, yet, there being a probability, by the use of such bottles, labels, and wrappers, of a confusion between the articles, by consumers purchasing from such dealers as vendees of the plaintiff and defendant respectively, the plaintiff was entitled to an injunction to restrain their use. Affirmed on appeal. Ibid.

Schiedam Schnapps.]—W. was registered as the proprietor of the trade mark in "Wolfe's Aromatic Schiedam Schnapps." He was in partnership with B., and the deed provided that B. should not use the words, "Aromatic Schiedam Schnapps," after the dissolution. After the dissolution B. manufactured a similar liquor, which he sold as "B.'s Schiedam Schnapps," and affixed to the bottles labels, stating that he had been W.'s partner; but the labels in no way resembled W.'s labels. Injunction motion by W. against A., who was selling as B.'s agent in Victoria. Held that there was no trade mark in the name, "Schiedam Schnapps" (following Wolfe v. Hart, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 125;) that those words were publici juris, and that B. was perfectly entitled to state on his labels that he had been W.'s partner. Wolfe v. Alsop, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 40.

"Neva Stearine."]—In 1861, plaintiff company, established on the river Neva in Russia, imported into Victoria candles with labels bearing the words, "Neva Stearine." In 1863 German candles, with labels containing the words, "Neva Stearine," were imported and sold; and in 1867 the defendant's predecessor manufactured candles in Victoria, with labels bearing the same words, of which fact, in 1870, plaintiff's agent was cognisant. In 1881 the plaintiff filed a bill to restrain defendant from using the words, "Neva." Held (affirmed on appeal) that plaintiff's acquiescense and delay, since 1870, defeated its title; and that the words, "Neva Stearine," had become publici juris, and that the distinctive character of the name had gone. Neva Stearine Company v. Mowling, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 98, 104; 5 A.L.T., 9.

Per Molesworth, J.—Title to a trade mark may be lost by acquiescence in its use by others. There is a property in trade names. Ibid. p. 102.

"Hop Bitters."]—The term "hop bitters" is a mere description of an article, and may be used by any person who makes bitters from hops, and no person can have an exclusive right to use such term. Hop Bitters Company v. Luke, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 234; 6 A.L.T. 89.

See also S.C., post column 1391.

"Hop Bitters."]—Action under the "Judicature Act 1883" for an injunction to restrain the infringement of a trade mark. The plaintiffs' trade mark, which was duly registered, was a sprig of the hop vine and a bunch of hops between the words "hop" and "bitters." The defendant manufactured hop bitters, and sold them in bottles of the same shape as the plaintiffs', with a label on them bearing a sprig of the grape vine with a bunch of grapes between the words "hop" and "bitters." Held that though the registration of the words "hop bitters" was of no effect, and could not be regarded as giving the plaintiffs any special right to the use of those words, the registration of the design was efficacious, and prima facie gave the plaintiff the exclusive right to the use of that design, and that the defendant's label resembled that of the plaintiff so as to be likely to deceive incautious purchasers, and that plaintiff was entitled to nominal damages, an injunction and costs. Hop Bitters Company v. Wharton, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 377; 6 A.L.T, 176.

2. Proceedings to Restrain Infringement of.

Imitation of Labels — Corks — Infringement.]—The plaintiffs, H. and Co., brandy manufacturers, exported brandy to Victoria in bulk and in bottle, the latter being of a superior quality, and with a distinctive flavouring from the former. W., the defendant, bought H. and Co.'s bulk brandy, and sold it in bottles which were apparently the same as the plaintiffs'. The labels were alike in shape, colour and design, except that defendant had, as a device, a spread eagle, and the plaintiffs an arm holding a battle axe. The words on the labels were as follow: On plaintiffs' were words, "Jas. Hennessy and Co. Cognac," and in small type, "Registered at 304 Stationers' Hall;" on defendant's, "Jas. Hennessey and Co.'s Cognac," and in small type, "Bottled by T. and W. White, Melbourne." The plaintiffs' capsules had an amber coloured rim with the device and prominent words of their labels; the defendant's capsules had no such rim, and had the device and prominent words of his labels. The plaintiffs' corks were stamped with the words, "Jas. Hennessy and Co., Cognac," with a small star; the defendant's, "Jas. Hennessy and Co.'s Cognac," without the star, and both stamps could be seen through the necks of the bottle. Held on appeal, distinguishing Farina v. Silverlock [6 De G. M. & G., 214] and affirming Molesworth, J., that the mere substitution of one device for another, both being in the same position and of the same colour does not neutralise the effect of the other points of resemblance, and that plaintiffs were entitled to restrain defendant from selling the brandy in bottles, with labels, &c., so colourably imitating the plaintiffs'. Injunction granted. Per Molesworth, J., that the imitation of the brands on the corks afforded very strong evidence of an intention to produce an impression on minds of purchasers that it was H. and Co.'s bottled brandy. Hennessey v. White, 6 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 216.

In a case similar to the last, except that the name of the plaintiffs was not on the corks and capsules, and that defendants used as a device an arm holding a dart, and there appeared on the defendants' labels the words, "Bottled by H. M. & Co." in comparatively large type, Held, by Molesworth, J., that although there was no imitation of the cork, and though the words "Bottled, &c.," appeared in larger type than in the last case, yet that the label of the defendants so closely resembled the plaintiffs' that the case was on the whole not distinguishable from Hennessy v. White. Injunction granted. Hennessey v. Hogan, 6 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 225.

Old Bottles Re-used.]—The plaintiffs sold bitters in bottles with the words "Dr. J. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters" stamped in the glass, and labelled "Hostetter's Celebrated Stomach Bitters." The defendants made bitters and sold them in bottles which had been used for the sale of plaintiffs' bitters and stamped as above, and labelled them as "Celebrated Stomach Bitters." The defendants' labels did not in form or colour resemble the plaintiffs', and defendants' bottles were sold in cases branded with the initials of the firm. An injunction was granted to restrain the defendants from selling in bottles so stamped and labelled until further order. Hostetter v. Anderson, 1 V.R. (E.,) 7; 1 A.J.R., 4.

Maker's Name—No Patent.]—The plaintiffs had established their right to the sole use of a device and name by legal proceedings in Scotland. Defendant sold articles which had upon them a fac simile of the plaintiffs' device and the name used by plaintiffs, the only difference being the addition of another word in small letters. At the time the injunction was prayed for, the defendant had but one article bearing the imitation of plaintiffs' device. Upon these facts the Court granted an interim injunction, and upon the consent of the parties a perpetual injunction. Singer Manufacturing Company v. Harold, 4 A.J R., 128.

Fraud not Essential.]—In cases of an imitation of a tradesman's packages, labels, &c., it is not necessary to prove fraud or actual deception in order to obtain an injunction. Wolfe v. Hart, 4 V.L.R (E.,) 125, 134.

Fraud not Essential.]—Per Molesworth, J. To stop the improper use of a trade mark, it is not necessary that there should be an intent to deceive, if the effect of deception be produced. Neva Stearine Company v. Mowling, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 98, 102; 5 A.L.T., 9.

Trade Name.]—H., a testator, carried on a druggist's business as H. & Co., and manufactured and sold a composition known as "H. & Co.'s Soluble Sheep Dip." H.'s executors, upon his death, sold the business, stock-in-trade and goodwill, except the "Sheep Dip," to defendant, and sold the "Sheep Dip" to plaintiff. Defendant carried on the business under the name of H. & Co., and sold a composition under the name of "T.'s Sheep-dipping Composition, manufactured by H. and Co." On a motion for injunction, Held that defendant should be scrupulously cautious in using the name "H. & Co." to any sheep and he was to a certain extent reprehensible, but motion refused on ground of delay. Chinn v. Thomas, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 188; 1 A.L.T., 26.

Sale of Inferior Ale as Ale of a Certain Name and Kind — Misrepresentation.] — See Degraves v. Whiteman, ante column 568.

Injunction when Granted.]—An injunction will not be granted to restrain the use of a trade mark where the words sought to be protected are merely words of description, and are publici juris. Hop Bitters Company v. Luke, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 234; 6 A.L.T., 89.

The words "hop-bitters" are such words. Ibid.

Costs.]—Where the defendant intended to imitate the plaintiffs' labels, so as to deceive the public, though he did not infringe the plaintiffs' trade mark or trade name, the Court, in dismissing a motion against him for an injunction, left him to pay his own costs. Ibid.

And see S.C. ante column 1389.

3. Registration.

Act No. 539, Sec. 7—Rectification of Register.]—D. claimed to be the owner of a trade mark, the use of which he had enjoyed without interference or disturbance for 11 years, but in respect of which he was not registered. R. and P. were registered at the end of the 11 years in respect of a trade mark, which so closely resembled D.'s as to be likely to deceive. D. opposed the application for registration. Held that the register must be rectified by expunging R. & P.'s trade mark. In re Rowley and Pyne, ex parte Dalton, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 307; 5 A.L.T., 91.

Similarity.]—The word "deceive" means to deceive an incautious person. A trade mark was registered, and an application was made by another person to register a similar trade mark, the application being opposed on the ground that the mark sought to be registered was a colourable imitation of the one registered, and calculated to deceive. The Registrar refused the application. On a rule nisi to rectify the register by registering the trade mark, Held that the two were so nearly alike as to mislead incautious purchasers, and rule discharged. In re Eno's Trade Mark, ex parte Kennedy, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 335.

4. Offences against the "Trade Marks Stat."

Using Forged Mark—No. 221, Sec. 6.]—S. was informed against for forging a trade mark with intent to defraud; but there was no count for uttering. On the evidence, it appeared that S. was merely acting as agent for another, and had sold goods for his principal, bearing the forged trade mark. S. was convicted of forging the trade mark, and appealed. On appeal, Held that there was no evidence of forging by S. to go to the jury; that selling was not "using" within the meaning of Sec. 6 of the "Trade Marks Stat. 1864," No. 221; and that there being no count for uttering, the conviction must be quashed. Schemmel v. Cail, 2 V.R. (L.,) 121; 2 A.J.R., 65.

Counterfeiting Trade Mark—Prosecution for.]—For circumstances in which the Court held that there was no evidence that the defendant wilfully and knowingly imitated the plaintiff's trade mark, see Bowman v. Webster, 5 A.L.T., 168.

1. Bringing Land under the Act, and Registration as Proprietor.

Act No. 301, Secs. 24 and 152—Injunction to Restrain Registration — Demurrer — Jurisdiction of Court.]—Bill by H. and others against Hunter, alleging an equitable title by the plaintiffs under an agreement in writing for a price paid with persons originally seised, an application and advertisement to bring the land under Act No. 301 by defendant, and lodging of caveats against such application, and praying for declaration of plaintiff's rights and an injunction to restrain defendant. Held, on demurrer, that as the bill did not negative the defendant's possession, did not show strictly that defendant claimed title, and did not show any obligation or relation between the plaintiffs and defendant, the bill would have been demurrable as to want of equity and indistinctness, and that Sec. 24 of the statute does not create a new jurisdiction of Courts of Equity to protect persons having legal or equitable titles against the inconveniences resulting from improper registration: it merely directs such proceedings as would be right before, according to the interest of the caveator being legal or equitable, and makes notice of that proceeding upon the Registrar a stop to him: that Sec. 152 makes it competent for judges to direct the details of any special procedure under the Act. Hodgson v. Hunter, 3 A.J.R., 13.

Restraining Registrar—Sec. 24—Tenant for Life in Possession Using the Act in order to Obtain Fraudulently a Fee Simple — Privity between Plaintiff and Defendant.]—The plaintiff, G., lent his mother, who was married again to R., a sum of £100, to go in part payment of the purchase money of certain land. The Crown grant issued to R., and by deed the southern half, was conveyed to G. as for £100 paid. G. entered into possession of this half, and built a house upon it. G. afterwards lost the deed. Disputes arose as to the land, and G. afterwards executed a lease for lives to R. and his wife, August, 1870. This lease remained with R. Defendants, after being in possession for a few years, attempted to bring the land under the Act No. 301, and the plaintiff lodged a caveat, and brought a bill to restrain the Registrar from bringing the land under the Act. Held that, as there was a privity between the plaintiff and defendants, and the plaintiff could not bring ejectment because of his lease to the defendants, these facts, coupled with Sec. 24, gave the plaintiff an equity to restrain the Registrar. Injunction granted, also permanent injunction against the defendants attempting to bring the land under the Act under the prayer for general relief. Geraghty v. Russell, 5 A.J.R., 89, 90.

Act No. 301, Sec. 24—Possession—Ejectment—Demurrer.]—There is nothing in Act No. 301, generally enabling a plaintiff to transfer a legal right to a Court of Equity, or to compel a defendant to disclose his title. Where a bill was filed by plaintiff, alleging legal title to land sought to be brought under the Act against which plaintiff lodged a caveat, but alleging nothing as to possession of the land, and seeking discovery of defendant's title, and an injunction against the defendant and the Registrar, Held, on demurrer, that possession by defendant might be assumed, in which case plaintiff could bring ejectment, and demurrer allowed. Jamison v. Quinlan, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 230.

Jurisdiction of Court to Interfere.]—Under Sec. 24 the Court has jurisdiction to interfere and prevent an injustice being done, whether a suit in Equity or an action at law has been instituted or not. In re "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Beissel, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 53, 57.

Order to Restrain—Caveat—Act No. 301, Sec. 24—Adverse Possession.]—B. lodged a caveat against M.'s application to bring land under the Act. B. was in possession, and had been so since 1861, and claimed under a conveyance from C. (1861,) who had been in possession from 1850 until 1861. Held that B. might remain in possession, and successfully resist an action of ejectment by reason of his adverse possession, and that to entitle a person to invoke the remedy in Sec. 24, he must show good documentary title independently of adverse possession. In re "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Brown, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 5.

Act No. 301, Sec. 24—Power of Court to Restrain Registrar from Bringing Land under the Act.]—Where a person is seeking to oppose the bringing of land under the Act, and after the expiration of his caveat, has no remedy by ejectment or in Equity, the Court will on a rule nisi restrain the Registrar under Sec. 24 from bringing the land under the Act. In re "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte, Gunn 3 V.L.R. (L.) 36.

Act No. 301, Sec. 24—Jurisdiction of the Court where the Crown is Seeking to Enforce an Escheat.]—Where the Crown seeks to establish and enforce an escheat, the Court has jurisdiction to restrain the bringing of the land under the Act at the instance of the Crown, although the information shews a legal title in the Crown, and alleges no special equity. Attorney-General v. Hoggan, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 111.

Act No. 301, Sec. 24—Lost Will—Injunction—Trial of Title at Law.]—A. died in 1853, leaving a widow and six children, two daughters, a son W., the plaintiff, a son T., and the defendant. There was long in the widow's possession a document, purporting to be the will of A., dated ——, 1850, and with an imperfect attestation clause. By this certain land was devised to defendant. W. died in 1868 (then of age) intestate, without claiming any of A.'s property, leaving plaintiff his heir-at-law. In 1874 widow died, by her will leaving this land to plaintiff, who proved the will. In 1874 plaintiff got administration to W.'s estate, and in 1878 plaintiff obtained a rule to administer A.'s estate. In 1874 defendant got possession of the land, and conveyed it to defendant H. Bill by plaintiff against defendaut, H. and Registrar to restrain land being brought under operation of Act No. 3 1. Held that if the document of 1850 was an invalid will, plaintiff's title as heir was clear, and plaintiff was entitled to an injunction until further order without prejudice to the question of title, which should be tried at law.—Archibald v. Archibald, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 180.

Duties of Registrar—Court Certifying as to "no Probable Grounds for Refusal"—Act No. 301, Sec. 135.]—The Registrar refused to bring certain land under the Act, in consequence of his putting upon a devise a construction put upon it by the Court of New South Wales, the opposite of a construction put upon the same devise by the Court in Victoria. Against the New South Wales decision an appeal to the P.C. was pending. Held that the Registrar was not justified in refusing, but that under the circumstances he might have postponed the further investigation of title; that as he was the guardian of the assurance fund, the Court would not certify that "there was no probable ground for such refusal" under Sec. 135. In re "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Bowman, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 314; 3 A.L.T., 25.

Evidence to be Considered by Registrar—Surplus Area.]—An application was made to bring a Crown allotment under the Act, and to include in the certificate of title more land than by admeasurements and parcels was specified in the Crown grant. As to this surplus the applicant tendered evidence to shew that he was entitled, but the Registrar refused to accept such, and refused the application until the applicant could show that the plan was correct by the Lands Department issuing an "adjustment certificate." Held that the Registrar was bound to accept all material evidence tendered, and was wrong in insisting upon an "adjustment certificate" as the only evidence which he would receive and act upon. In re "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Rowan, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 286; 5 A.L.T., 87.

And see generally as to registration and duties of Registrar, post column 1409.

(c) Practice in Applications for.

"Real Property Act" (No. 140,) Secs. 21, 22, 23, 81—Summons to bring Land under the Act.]—Sec. 81 does not give jurisdiction to a Judge in Chambers to deal with matters of such vast importance as might arise under a caveat against the first bringing of land under the operation of the Act. That remedy only applies in the case of caveats as to dealing with land under the Act, and not to caveats under Secs. 21, 22, and 23. (In Chambers.) In re Williamson, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 110.

[N.B.—Sec. 81 of Act No. 140 did not give the power of summoning the caveator contained in Sec. 23 of Act No. 301.—Ed.]

"Transfer of Land Stat." (No. 301,) Sec. 24—Jurisdiction of Judge in Chambers.]—The "order of a Judge" in Sec. 24 does not mean "of a Judge in Chambers." The only way to read Sec. 24, which entitles the caveator to an order restraining the Registrar from bringing land under the Act, is that the caveator must bring an action of ejectment, or file a bill in Equity. In re Power, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 81.

But see ex parte Gunn, ante column 1394.

Application to bring Land under Statute—Notice of Summons under Sec. 25 to Produce Deeds.]—All persons who have any claim upon land which is sought to be brought under the "Transfer of Land Stat." must have notice of a summons under Sec. 25 of the Act to produce the deeds relating to the land for the purpose of bringing the land under the Statute. In re "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Morgan, 4 A.J.R., 117.

Act No. 301, Sec. 25—Production of Deeds.]—Per Stawell, C. J. (in Chambers.) Where a solicitor retained deeds claiming a lien on them for costs, and an application was made to compel their production under Sec. 25, Held that such a matter could not be disposed of in Chambers. In re Craig, 5 A.L.T., 54.

Order to Produce Deeds under Sec. 27—Ex parte.]—An order of a Judge to the Registrar to produce the title deeds of land under the Statute, which deeds had been lodged in the Registrar's office, may be made ex parte. Re the "Transfer of Land Stat.," Slack v. Winder, 4 A.J.R., 117.

Caveat Forbidding Bringing of Land under the Act—Act No. 301, Secs. 23, 24—Writ of Ejectment whether Sufficient to Prevent Lapse of Caveat.]—Rule nisi under Sec 23, calling upon S. to show cause why a caveat should not be removed. S. had issued within the month allowed under Sec. 24, a writ of ejectment, but he had not served the writ. Held that the Legislature referred to the commencement of legal proceedings as sufficient to prevent the caveat from lapsing. Rule discharged. In re Slack, ex parte Winder, 5 A.J.R., 83.

Caveat Forbidding the Bringing of Land under the Act—Service of Rule Nisi to Remove Caveat.]—A caveat was lodged under Sec. 22 of the Act No. 301 and an address of the place at which notices were to be served was duly given. The caveatee (W.) summoned S., the caveator, by rule nisi to show cause why the caveat should not be removed, and stating that rule was made absolute upon an affidavit that it had been served at the place mentioned in the caveat. It appeared that the service had been effected on Saturday afternoon when the office was closed, but that S. had knowledge of the service before the rule was returnable. Held dissentiente, Barry, J.) that the Act being very strict as to service, there had been no good service of rule nisi and that the defect in the service had not been cured by the admission of S. that he had received it two days before it was returnable Rule removing caveat set aside. In re "Transfer of Land Stat." In re Slack, 1 V L.R. (L.,) 319.

Caveat — Lapse — Restraining Registrar from bringing Land under Statute—"Transfer of Land Stat.," Sec. 24]—The Court or a judge has no power to make an order under Sec. 24 of the "Transfer of Land Stat.," restraining the Registrar from bringing the land. the subject of a caveat, under the Statute, after the lapse of such caveat forbidding such bringing under. In re the "Transfer of Land Stat," ex parte Aylwin, 4 V.L.R. Notice of Application to restrain bringing under the Act—Service.]—Service of notice of an application is good if given to the Registrar; it need not be given to the applicant also. In re "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Beissel, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 52, 58.

Order Restraining Registration as Proprietor—Obtained in Vacation—"Transfer of Land Stat.," Sec 24.]—An order, under Sec. 24 of the "Transfer of Land Stat.," restraining the registration of an applicant as proprietor, may be obtained from a judge in Chambers during vacation, though the remedy by a bill in equity is open to the caveator. In re "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Mahoney, 1 A.L.T., 132.

2. Certificate of Title.

When Issued—Act. No. 140—Receipt for Crown Grant.]—A purchaser from a Crown grantee of lands selected by such grantee applied to the Registrar-General for a certificate of title. He held merely the Treasury receipt for the purchase money and an instrument of transfer from the Crown grantee to himself. On a summons calling on the Registrar to substantiate and uphold the grounds of his refusal to issue a certificate of title to him, Held that such certificate should not be issued until the Crown grant to the original grantee was delivered up to be cancelled under the Act No. 140. Fitzgerald v. Archer, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 40.

[See also Sec. 35 of Act No. 301—Ed.]

Summons to Registrar under Sec. 135—Decision of Court upon.]—Per Stephen, J.—On a summons to the Registrar of Titles to show cause why he should not grant an unconditional certificate of title, the Court is not called upon to give an absolute and final decision upon the point submitted, as it might do if the parties adversely interested were litigating it. In re "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Folk, 6 V.L.R (L.,) 405.

Mandamus to Registrar.]—Sec. 135 of the "Transfer of Land Stat." renders a mandamus to the Registrar to issue a certificate unnecessary, and it is his duty to issue a clear certificate, unaccompanied by a memorandum, stating that it was issued in compliance with the decision of the Court, when called upon to issue a certificate. Re the "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Paterson, 4 A.J.R., 26.

Compelling Registrar to issue a Certificate—Act No. 301, Sec. 135.]—In the matter of the "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Ross. 2 V.R. (L.,) 10; 2 A.J.R., 19, ante column 434.

Correcting Certificate Obtained by Fraud.]—Even if a Court of Equity cannot correct a certificate of title procured by fraud, which is the special relief prayed, it can, under the prayer for general relief, make a decree ordering defendant to transfer and vest in the plaintiff the land included in such certificate. Campbell v. Jarrett, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 137; 3 A.L.T., 49.

Act No. 301, Sec. 132—Issued on Incorrect Representations — Cancellation.] — A bank had a certificate of title to certain land issued to it, and was registered in respect thereof. The certificate of title was issued on the understanding that R., who was then grazing cattle on the land, was only a trespasser, whereas it appeared afterwards in an action of ejectment brought by the bank against R., that R. had been in possession of the land for more than fifteen years, and a verdict was returned in R.'s favour. On a summons under Sec. 132, Held that the certificate was issued in error and ordered that it be delivered up to be cancelled. In re "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Rigby, 9 V.L R. (L.,) 417; 5 A.L.T., 128.

Error—Sec. 132.]—The error alluded to in Sec. 132 of the "Transfer of Land Stat." does not allude only to a misdescription of parcels; but anything improperly done or omitted to be done may be considered an error under the section. Re the "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Paterson, 4 A.J.R., 26.

Per Stawell, C. J.—"Error" in Sec. 132 means not only a mistake of fact, but also an error of law. In re "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Bond, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 458, 463.

Certificate of Title Wrongly Issued—Act No. 301, Sec. 132—Right of Equitable Mortgagee to Retain.] —M. was the registered proprietor of two leases of certain Crown allotments. In October, 1871, A. issued a writ of fi. fa. against M. On 20th October a copy of the writ was served on the Registrar of Titles, specifying the allotments as those sought to be affected by the writ. Before the three months, before the expiration of which the fi. fa could not operate as a charge upon the land, had expired, i.e, on 5th January, 1872, A. served an alias writ, and under this the land was sold by the sheriff to one P., the transfers from the sheriff, being registered 2nd and 28th March. On 2nd January M. transferred the land to B. for value, and B. obtained a certificate of title.

On application by P. to have his transfers from the sheriff registered, the Registrar refused, but the Court compelled him to register them. The registrar then sought to compel B. to return his certificate of title. B. had deposited the deeds with S. as security for an advance, and S. refused to give them up without payment of this advance. Held that, in the absence of fraud, S. was entitled to retain the certificates till his charge upon the land was paid. Re the "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Patterson, 4 A.J.R., 110.

When Mandamus to call in Certificate will be Granted.]—The Court will not grant a mandamus calling upon the Registrar of Titles to call in a certificate of title or give his reasons for not doing so, unless it is proved to the Court that it appeared to the satisfaction of the Registrar that the certificate had been issued in error, or contained a misdescription of the land, or had been fraudently or wrongfully obtained. Re O'Connell and the "Transfer of Land Stat.," 6 A.L.T., 85.

Act No. 301—Sec. 132—Calling in Certificate.]—The Court will not grant a rule to compel the Registrar of Titles to call in a certificate of title granted to the wrong person, upon an analogy to the proceeding under Sec. 132 of the "Transfer of Land Stat." (under which section the Registrar is the applicant) especially where the applicant has not proved his right to a certificate. The "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Slack, 4 A.J.R.,114.

Cancelling Certificate.]—The Supreme Court in its equitable jurisdiction has no jurisdiction to order certificates of title to be cancelled, the proper relief being to order the inequitable holders to transfer. Gunn v. Harvey, ante columns 403, 980.

Act No. 301, Secs. 47, 49.]—As regards the parcels the certificate is under Sec. 47 incontrovertible, and the "reservations and exceptions" mentioned in Sec. 49 have no reference thereto. Alma Consols Gold Mining Company v. Alma Extended Company, 4 A.J.R., 190.

Act No. 301, Sec. 159—Title of Certificate Holder in Ejectment.]—The title of a plaintiff in ejectment which is based on a certificate of title to a lease under "Land Act 1865," is not affected as to its conclusive character by Sec. 159 of Act No. 301, and a plaintiff relying on such a certificate without going into evidence prior to the title cannot be nonsuited. Miller v. Moresey, 2 V.R. (L.,) 193; 2 A.J.R., 115.

For facts see S.C. ante column 399.

See also Vallence v. Condon, ante column 399.

Under Act No. 140.]—An owner out of possession who receives a certificate subject to rights subsisting under any adverse possession receives evidence of a good title in ejectment until those rights are proved. Murphy v. Michel, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 13; for facts see S.C. ante column 844.

Conclusive Effect of Certificate under Sec. 47 of Act No. 301—Selection of Land by a "Dummy."]—Where M. had selected land really as a "dummy" for H., and after obtaining the Crown grant had transferred to H. under the Act, and H. obtained a certificate of title, Held per Molesworth, J., that the certificate conclusively established H.'s title under Sec. 47, although the transaction was set aside as contrary to the policy of the "Land Act" (No. 237.) M'Cahill v. Henty, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 68, 73.

Per Stephen, J. (at page 157.)—"The certificate is merely an epitome of a prior title; it is nothing on the question of parcels" and the Full Court held that, where there was a variance between the plan and the figures in the body of the certificate, the description in the plan was to govern, rejecting the figures on the principle "falsa demonstratio non nocet." Small v Glen, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 154, 157, 159; see S.C. ante column 1384.

To an action for breach of contract for not giving possession of land, it is not a good plea to urge that before breach vendor acquired a certificate of title. Phœnix Foundry Company v. Hunt, 5 A J.R., 70.

A certificate of title to leaseholds does not defeat the right of the Crown to determine the lease. Matt v. Peel, 2 V.R. (M.,) 27; 2 A.J.R., 133.

In Trespass—Plaintiff Obtaining a Certificate of Title under Sale by Sheriff—Sufficient Title.]—House v. O'Farrell, ante column 1312.

(c) Exceptions thereto under Sec. 49 of Act No. 301.

Fraud.]—See cases post column 1404, et sequitur.

Prior Grant of Certificate.]—The exception in Sec. 49, viz., "except the estate or interest of a proprietor claiming the same land under a prior grant or certificate," does not apply to the case where a proprietor's land has been sold by the sheriff, a transfer under such sale has been registered, and a new certificate issued to the sheriff's vendee. Hassett v. Colonial Bank, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 380, 389; 3 A.L.T., 38.

For facts see S.C. post column 1409.

Volunteer Holding a Certificate—Specific Performance Prayed by a Subsequent Purchaser.]—A. was owner of land, and brought it under the Statute, the certificate of title being issued to B., his son. Shortly afterwards A. contracted to sell the land to C. Bill by C. for specific performance and to have transfer declared void as against him. Held that the transaction was void as against C. under 27 Eliz., Cap. 4, and that it was not protected by Secs. 49 and 50 of Act No. 301, their protection being intended for real purchasers under the Act, and persons dealing with them, not to sons taking presents from their fathers. Colechin v. Wade, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 266.

Act No. 301, Secs. 49, 51—Certificate Issued to Official Assignee Subject to Rights of Dower and Rights under a Voluntary Settlement.]—Where H., an insolvent, paid part of the purchase money of land before his discharge from his first insolvency, and the balance after discharge, and voluntarily settled land by postnuptial settlement upon trustees in trust for his wife and children, and a certificate of title was issued to J., the official assignee under the first insolvency, subject to the rights of dower in H.'s wife and the rights under the settlement, and the settlement was set aside as void at the suit of the official assignee under H.'s second insolvency, Held, per Molesworth, J., that the vesting of encumbrances on a certificate has no further effect under Sec. 49 than to leave the rights under the settlement unaffected though it might be otherwise under Sec. 51. Shaw v. Scott, 3 A.J.R., 16, 17.

Act No. 301, Sec. 49—Who is a "Tenant"—Person in Possession under Unregistered Right.]—Defendant obtained a judgment against W., the registered proprietor of certain land, part of which had been sold to the plaintiff. The sheriff sold W.'s interest under execution to defendant, who registered the transfer in due form, and became registered proprietor. Before and at the time of sale plaintiff gave notice of his protest but did not lodge a caveat. Defendant brought an action of ejectment against plaintiff. Bill by plaintiff to restrain proceedings in ejectment, and praying to be constituted proprietor of the land he had bought. Held that the provisions of Sec. 49 provide for all cases of possession, distinguishing merely adverse possession and tenancy under non-adverse possession, that the saving of tenants' interests has not reference merely to tenants in ordinary parlance as to their tenant interests, but to persons holding under non-adverse possession, and that plaintiff was such a tenant within the meaning of Sec. 49, and relief granted as prayed Robertson v. Keith, 1 V.R. (E.,) 11; 1 A.J.R., 14.

See also S.P. Cunningham v. Gundry, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 197, 201.

"Transfer of Land Stat.," Sec. 49—Interest.]—A tenancy-at-will is an "interest" within the meaning of Sec. 49 of the "Transfer of Land Stat." Colonial Bank v. Roache, 1 V.R. (L.,) 165; 1 A.J.R., 136.

Tenant's "Interests" under Sec. 49.]—The protection afforded to a tenant under Sec. 49 does not extend to protect the landlord's title. Cullen v. Thompson, post column 1400.

Act No. 301, Sec. 49—"Right or Interest."]—The holders of a mining lease of Crown land registered under the "Transfer of Land Stat.," of which another person has a grant in fee from the Crown, by mining on such lands, do not interfere with any "right or interest" of the Crown grantee within the meaning of Sec. 49 of Act No 301. Alma Consols Gold Mining Company v. Alma Extended Company, 4 A.J.R., 190

Object of Proviso in Sec. 49.]—The object of the proviso in Sec. 49 of the "Transfer of Land Stat.," "that the land included in any certificate of title or registered instrument shall be deemed to be subject to the reservations, exceptions, conditions, and powers (if any) contained in the grant thereof," is to prevent the severance of the relation of landlord and tenant; and where persons were in occupation under a mining licence, and a subsequent mining lease was granted to plaintiffs by the Crown subject to the occupation licence, and afterwards the licensee got a grant in fee and leased to the defendants, Held that the plaintiffs were not ousted thereby, but were entitled to restrain the defendants from mining on the property. Ibid.

Reservations in Sec 49 of the "Transfer of Land Stat."]—J. E. applied for a mining lease, and went into possession of the land applied for. By mistake the lease, when ready for issue, was taken up and executed by another person of the name J. E. Upon discovery of the error the lease was cancelled, and a new one issued to the original J. E., who obtained a certificate of title under the "Transfer of Land Stat.," and transferred it to plaintiff. Between the issue of the two leases defendants had taken up the land under miners' rights, and pleaded that the certificate of title was subject to such occupation under Sec. 49 of the "Transfer of Land Stat." Held that the certificate was not subject to such occupation. Munro v. Sutherland, 4 A.J.R., 166.

Act No. 301, Sec. 49—"Mining Stat." No. 291, Secs. 5, 24—Holder of Miners' Rights—Certificate not Conclusive as to Mine.]—A holder of miners' rights is only a tenant-at-will with the qualification that the will is not to be determined in favour of another gold miner (Sec. 29, Act No. 291;) he has no title against the Crown (Sec. 3,) and is not a "tenant" within the meaning of Sec. 49 of Act No 301 as to the land. Plaintiffs held a mining lease from the Crown, and succeeded in an action of ejectment as to the land against the defendants, who claimed under miners' rights. In an action for the gold as mesne profits in which plaintiffs recovered a verdict, Held (dissentiente Stephen, J.,) on rule nisi, that, as the certificate of title was silent as to the mine, and the plaintiffs had to fall back on their lease to show title to the gold, plaintiffs must establish that the gold mine is included in the parcels of the lease, which they could not do, as the defendants claimed under miners' rights, and, therefore, as to the gold, the lease was subject to such rights as "rights and interest subsisting at the time of the lease." New trial unless plaintiff consented to a reduction to nominal damages. Munro v. Sutherland, 5 A.J.R., 139.

Act No. 301, Sec. 49—Rights of Tenant.]—S. brought ejectment against D. D. was in under a tenancy from A., a former owner, who was decreed to convey to S. S. relied upon a certificate of title issued to him upon a conveyance pursuant to such decree Held that under Sec. 49. S.'s certificate of title was subject to the rights of D. Slack v. Downton, 1 A.L.T., 2.

Act No. 140—"Adverse Possession" Reserved in Certificate.]—Where a plaintiff in ejectment received a certificate of title subject to "any rights subsisting under adverse possession of the land," Held that the plaintiff had a good title until those rights were proved, and that the words "adverse possession" in the certificate referred to the "R.P. Stat.," No. 213, Part II. Murphy v. Michel, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 13; for facts see S.C. ante column 844.

As to what is evidence of adverse possession, see Chisholm v. Capper, ante column 846, and Grave v. Wharton, ante column 400.

Act No. 301, Sec. 49—Adverse Possession.]—Per Fellows, J.—The words "adverse possession" in Sec. 49 have not the old technical meaning which they had prior to the "Stat. of Limitations," and the possession means such an ostensible possession in fact as is sufficient to entitle the defendant to the benefit of the Statute. Per Stephen, J.—In order to invalidate a certificate of title, the possession must be shown to be "adverse' within the meaning of the words prior to the "Stat. of Limitations." Staughton v. Brown, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 150, 159, 163. See S.C. ante column 845.

Act No. 301, Sec. 49—Adverse Possession—Tenancy Previous to Mortgage]—A mortgagee brought an action of ejectment against R., a tenant of the mortgagor. R. obtained his lease from the mortgagor on 14th April, which was not registered; the mortgagor mortgaged to plaintiff 24th April. No demand of possession was made to R., he was merely asked to attorn to plaintiff, which he refused. Held that R.'s possession as tenant from the mortgagor was not adverse to plaintiff's title, as it was not to mortgagor's title, and that, under Sec. 49, R.'s right to possession was preserved as against the plaintiff's certificate. Colonial Bank v. Rabbage, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 462.

Production of Certificate—Necessary.]—Where a mining lessee had obtained a certificate of title under the "Transfer of Land Stat.," and relied upon it as conclusive in a suit, the Court held that he must produce it in that suit before he could so rely upon it. Shamrock Company v Farnsworth, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 165.

Lien on.]—Quære, whether any right of lien can be acquired as to a certificate of title under the "Transfer of Land Stat.," No. 301. Swan v. Seal, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 57, 66; 5 A.L.T., 196.

"Transfer of Land Stat."—Duplicate Certificate—Evidence of Title.]—A duplicate certificate of title, under the "Transfer of Land Stat.," is admissible as prima facie evidence of the claimant's title in ejectment. Wilkinson v. Brown, 1 V.R. (L.,) 86; 1 A.J.R., 88.

3. Transfers.

When Good.]—Per Molesworth, J.—A transfer of land under the "Transfer of Land Stat.," executed by the transferror, but not by the transferee, and not registered before the death of the transferror, is, nevertheless, valid, and divests the estate out of the transferror. Tierney v. Halfpenny, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 152, 157.

Registration of Transfer—Act No. 301, Sec. 32—Guarantee Fund.]—Land was vested in trustees with power to sell or mortgage. The trustees executed a mortgage with a power of sale upon default upon one month's notice. The power of sale was exercised, and the purchaser applied to bring the land under the "Transfer of Land Stat.;" but the Registrar of Titles, on the recommendation of the Commissioner of Titles, refused the application. Upon summons to the Registrar to show cause, Held that this was a case in which the Registrar might exercise the powers conferred upon him by Sec. 32 of the Statute, which provides that the Commissioner may require an additional indemnity to be paid to the Guarantee Fund, if he thinks proper, against any uncertain claim or demand arising on the title; and that the transfer should be registered, on such indemnity as the Commissioner might require being given. In re Salter, 2 V.R. (L.,) 113; 2 A.J.R., 73.

Void Settlement under 27 Eliz., Cap. 4—Settlor Acting Collusively—Registration of Settlor's Transferee—Act No. 201, Secs. 49, 139.]—Where a settlor agreed to sell the settled land to M., and the deed of purchase contained false recitals as to the purchase money, although there was some money due to M. at the time of purchase, the Court, while holding that the settlement was void as against M.'s bonâ fide debt, upheld the Registrar's refusal to register the transfer under the Statute to M., refusing to make M. proprietor out of regard to the provisions of Sec. 139 of Act 301, but directed the trustee of the settlement to execute a mortgage to M. under the Act. Moss v. Williamson, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 221.

For facts, see S.C., ante columns 471, 472.

The practice of the Office of Titles of endorsing on a certificate of title issued on a voluntary transfer, "subject to the possibility of the transfer being upset under the "Insolvency Stat. 1871," and the Statute of 13 Eliz., Cap. 5," has no good reason to recommend it. Crow v. Campbell 10, V.L.R. (E.,) 186, 194; 6 A.L.T., 34.

(b) Special Provisions as to Fraud and Notice.

What is Fraud within the Meaning of Secs. 49 and 50 of Act No. 301.]—Per Molesworth, J.—"I should instance as to what might be deemed fraud under the Act, collusion between proprietor, vendor, and vendee, to defeat an equitable interest, or means taken by the vendee to induce a person having equitable interests not to enforce his right or lodge a caveat." Robertson v. Keith, 1 V.R. (E.,) 11, 14; 1 A.J.R., 14.

Quære, Whether dealings completed with a person before he becomes a proprietor under the Act can be protected by the machinery of the Act as to his vendee by making him a proprietor and at the same time a transferor. The immense power the Act gives to a proprietor of completely barring clear equities, presents a reason for Courts of Equity readily interfering by injunction. Davis v. Wekey, 3 V.R. (E.,) 1, 11; 3 A.J.R., 1.

For facts, see S.C., ante columns 570, 571.

Fraud—Act No. 301, Secs. 49, 50.]—Secs. 49, 50 protect a purchaser of land from all incumbrances and trusts, but they do not absolve him from the obligation of performing an express contract into which he has entered, or deprive the Court of the power to enforce such performance. Cunningham v. Gundry, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 197.

Settlement Void under 27 Eliz., Cap. 4—Volunteer Holding a Certificate of Title under Act No. 301.]—A void settlement under 27 Eliz., Cap. 4, is not protected under Secs. 49 and 50 when it is a settlement by a father on a son. Per Molesworth, J.—The protection afforded under those sections being intended for real purchasers under the Act, and persons dealing with them, not to sons taking presents from their fathers. Colechin v. Wade, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 266.

For facts see S.C. ante column 472.

Land was purchased for partnership purposes, and one of the partners transferred the land to his son (an infant,) and a certificate of title was issued to such son. On a bill by a bank to enforce a banker's lien on this land and other partnership assets, semble that the certificate of title was not conclusive. Molesworth, J., following his decision in Colechin v. Wade. Bank of Victoria v. Rawling, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 111, 118.

Sec. 50—Fraud—Constructive Notice—Breach of Trust—Solicitor and Client.]—Per Full Court—Sec. 50 of Act No. 301 should be construed strictly and the exception liberally: the word "fraud" means fraud on the part of either party, and not necessarily of both, and applies equally to cases of fraud by a purchaser as by a vendor. That although a person who purchases from a registered proprietor is not bound to institute inquiries as to vendor's title, yet Sec. 50 is not intended to protect frauds committed by the purchaser himself. Per Stephen, J.—The doctrine of resulting trusts arising from the fact that no consideration was paid may be applied to land under the Statute. A., a solicitor, and the survivor of two trustees under a settlement, under which they had power to invest and vary investments, invested moneys of the settlement in mortgages of land under the general law and under Act No. 301, taking mortgages in his own name. A. was also attorney under power of defendants to invest money for them on mortgage. A., being indebted to the defendants, without the consent of the tenant for life, drew and executed conveyances and transfers of the mortgages from himself to the defendants, untruly reciting the receipt of consideration money, and shortly afterwards committed suicide. Bill by the new trustees of the deed of settlement against defendants for a declaration that the conveyances and transfers were fraudulent, and seeking reconveyances and retransfers. Held, per Molesworth, J., and affirmed, that documents in evidence containing A.'s signature comprising instructions for mortgages and accounts of interest on sums invested signed by A., and tendered to the tenant for life were sufficient evidence as to a trust affecting the moneys invested upon mortgage as against the defendants, and that the defendants were affected through A.'s knowledge with notice of his breach of trust, and that transfers of the mortgages under the general law should be ordered: by Full Court reversing Molesworth, J., that the case was the same as to the land under the Statute. By the Full Court, that the fact of there being no consideration for the assignment of the mortgages was sufficient to rest the judgment upon. Chomley v Firebrace, V.L.R. (E.,) 57.

Secs. 49, 50—Fraud in Acquiring Certificate—Constructive Notice—Tenant.]—"Fraud" does not mean or include fraud of the conveying party in acquiring title; a person innocently taking from another who fraudulently acquired is protected. The protection afforded to a tenant by Sec. 49 does not extend to protect the landlord's title. A., being registered proprietor of certain land under the Statute, and being indebted to B., signed a document in April, 1878, which he believed to be a mortgage, but which was in reality an absolute transfer. B. then obtained a certificate, and was registered as proprietor, and mortgaged to C. on July 12th, 1878. The land was in D.'s possession as a weekly tenant from A. before and since April, 1868. A. detected the fraud, and then brought a bill to have the transfer declared to be by way of mortgage. Held that the mortgage from B to C. was good as against A., C. being protected by Sec. 50; decree for redemption made upon payment to C. by A. or B., and in case of payment by A., B. should repay him, deducting the amount of A.'s indebtedness to him as in April, 1878. Cullen v. Thompson, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 147; 1 A.L.T., 15.

Notice of Fraud—Section 50.]—Section 50 of the "Transfer of Land Stat.," No. 301 protects from constructive notice, but not from actual notice, of fraud. Therefore, where a transferee had at the time of the sale, and accepting the transfers, and more distinctly by service of the bill before the completion of the transaction and payment of purchase money, actual notice of a fraud in the transfer of the property to his immediate transferor, he was held to be not protected by Sec. 50. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Pie, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 186, 193; 1 A.L.T., 156.

Executor Giving a Mortgage under the Act—Protection of Mortgagee.]—Per Molesworth, J.—An executor cannot under the Act mortgage in a case where the mortgage would be invalid as to land not under the Act, and the mortgagee is not protected. Droop v. Colonial Bank, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 228, 232.

But per Stephen, J.—An executor can under the Act sell or mortgage, and is only accountable to his cestuis que trustent. S.C., 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 71, 78.

Sec. 50—Notice—Voluntary Transfer.]—Sec. 50 of the "Transfer of Land Stat." does not apply to a transfer of land without consideration at the time of transfer or previous legal obligation to transfer. Crow v. Campbell, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 186, 194; 6 A.L.T., 34.

For facts see S.C., post under TRUST AND TRUSTEE — CREATION OF TRUST — In other Cases.

c) Transfers under Sales by Sheriff.

Act No. 301, Sec 106—Sale by fieri facias.]—Semble, that Sec. 106 of the "Transfer of Land Stat." does not annul a sale by fieri facias, as against the execution debtor, but leaves the purchaser exposed to be defeated by his acts, until the execution is by some means brought into registration. United Hand in Hand and Band of Hope Company v. National Bank of Australasia, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 206, 219.

Act No. 301, Secs. 106, 107—Registration of fi. fa.—Sale by Sheriff.]—Per Molesworth, J. (following (United Hand in Hand Company v. National Bank, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 206) that Sec. 106 does not avoid a sale by fieri facias as to the rights of a debtor, but only as between a purchaser for value from debtor and a purchaser from sheriff; and that an official assignee is not such a purchaser for value. Bill by official assignee against purchasers for value from sheriff under writ of fi. fa. to set aside the sale on the ground that, though the fi. fa. was duly served on the Registrar under Sec. 106, the transfer was not left for entry under that section within three months, dismissed. Giles v. Lesser, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 38.

Purchaser at Sheriff's Sale whose Transfer is Registered—Rights as against prior Unregistered Purchaser.]—M. B. purchased land from K. before a Crown grant had been issued to K. At a sheriff's sale under an execution against K. J. bought the land. N., a solicitor, who had acted for M. B. in the purchase of the land, and in a mortgage of it to J., procured the Crown grant as for J., and a certificate of title to J., as entitled in fee under the sheriff's sale. On a bill brought by M. B. and her husband to establish their title, Held that the purchase at the sheriff's sale was void as against M. B.'s purchase, save as to the balance of purchase money left unpaid to which, with interest thereon, J. was entitled. Brew v. Jones, 2 V.R. (E.,) 20; 2 A.J.R., 6.

Act No. 301, Secs. 1 6, 135.]—W., B.'s transferor, on 2nd January, 1872, presented transfers of certain land, and B. obtained registration of the transfers and certificates of title. On 20th October, 1871 (i.e., less than three months previously) a copy of a fi. fa., issued against W., was duly served under the Act. On 5th January, 1872, P. served a copy of an alias fi. fa. upon the Registrar. In March P. lodged for registration tranafers of the same land to himself which the Registrar refused to register. Held by the Privy Council, overruling the Full Court, that the Registrar was right in refusing to register P.'s transfers; that previously to 5th January B. had acquired a title to the lands which could only be defeated by a sheriff's transfer of them under the original writ; and as P.'s transfers were in pursuance of an olias writ, and were made at a time when no valid transfer could have been made in execution of the original writ, the Registrar was right in completing B.'s title by registration on 21st January. Ex parte Paterson, 3 V.R. (L.,) 128; 3 A.J.R., 54, 92. S.C. (sub-nom.) Registrar of Titles v. Paterson, L.R. 2, App. Ca. 110.

Construction of Sec. 106.]—Per Privy Council.—The policy of the Legislature in framing this section was evidently to prevent titles from being affected, beyond a limited time, by the operation of unexecuted writs of execution as charges on the land, and to reconcile the rights of judgment creditors with those of a purchaser for value whether with or without notice. Registrar of Titles v. Paterson, L.R., 2 App., Ca. 110, 118.

Rights of Judgment Creditor Under, Sec. 106.]—There is nothing in Sec. 106 to prevent a judgment debtor from making a contract for the transfer of his land to a purchaser for value, subject to the rights which the section gives to an execution creditor, or to a possible purchaser through the sheriff. Such a contract can only be perfected through registration, and must therefore remain defeasible till the writ is withdrawn or satisfied, or the term of three months from a day on which the copy was served, has expired. Ibid.

Duty of the Registrar as to Transfers under Sec. 106.]—It is the duty of the Registrar, under Sec. 106, to register the first transfer lodged if it is a valid one; if such appears not to comply with a condition in the instrument of title prohibiting transfers, the Registrar must determine for himself whether such condition is a valid one. In re "Transfer of Land Stat." ex parte Bond, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 458; 2 A.L.T., 94.

See for facts S.C., post column 1409.

But where the interest of a Crown lessee in a lease, containing a condition not to assign without the leave of the Governor-in-Council was sold under a sheriff's sale, Held that the condition referred only to voluntary assignments, and not to sales by aheriff, and Registrar ordered to register the fi. fa. and sale. In re "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Ellison, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 59.

Effect of Provisions as to Registration Generally.]—See Kickham v. The Queen, post column 1409.

Act No. 301—Secs. 49, 50, 106, 117, 130—Equitable Mortgage—Purchaser at Sheriff's Sale—Priority—Unregistered Encumbrance.]—F., being a registered proprietor, deposited his Crown grant by way of equitable mortgage with plaintiff in January, 1879. B., a creditor, had recovered judgment against F., and on 14th February duly lodged a copy of his fi. fa. with the Registrar, under Sec. 106. The plaintiff on 24th February got a mortaage from F., and shortly afterwards lodged a caveat, and served notice upon sheriff, who had advertised a sale under the fi. fa. The defendant purchased at the sheriff's sale, and claimed to be registered, which Registrar refused. The plaintiff in May applied to have his mortgage registered long after his caveat had lapsed. Held that defendant, not being fixed with notice of plaintiff's claim, had priority. Persons having security by deposit are protected, but not in inactivity, nor by caveats or notices to sheriffs as to intended sales under fi. fa. Patchell v. Maunsell, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 6.

Copy of Writ Erroneously Describing Land to be Levied upon—Effect of Sale upon Certificate of Title.]—A copy of a writ of fi. fa. erroneously set out as the land to be levied upon, the land of a third person bearing the same name as the judgment debtor, and a person purchased this land at the sheriff's sale. Held that the sheriff's sale and the transfer under it put an end to the certificate of title held by such third person. Hassett v. Colonial Bank, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 380; 3 A.L T., 38.

4. Registration and Duties of Registrar.

Effect of Provisions as to Registration.]—The provisions of the "Transfer of Land Stat." referring to registration, have merely the effect that until the transfer to the assignee is registered, the original lessee or proprietor may act so as to defeat the title of the assignee. The Statute does not provide that every person registered is to have a title against the whole world. Kickham v. The Queen, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 1; 3 A.L T., 86.

The Statute has nothing to do with rights, but subjects an unregistered person to be defeated by transfers if registered. But otherwise, a sale of land under it is the same as of land under the ordinary law. S.C. 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 250.

Duty of Registrar—"Transfer of Land Stat.," Secs. 132, 135.]—The necessary conclusion to be drawn from Secs. 132 and 135 of the "Transfer of Land Stat.," is that the Registrar of Titles has imposed upon him the judicial duty of examining into the validity of instruments presented to him for registration. He is not simply to accept all instruments in the order in which they are lodged without reference to whether they are valid instruments or not. In re "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Bond, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 458; 2 A.L.T., 94.

"Transfer of Land Stat.," Sec. 106.]—It is the duty of the Registrar of Titles under Sec. 106 of the "Transfer of Land Stat.," to register the first transfer, under a sale from the sheriff, lodged with him, if it be valid. If such transfer appears not to comply with a condition in the instrument of title prohibiting transfer, the Registrar must decide for himself whether such a condition is a valid one. Ibid.

Costs.]—Where, on a summons to the Registrar to uphold the grounds of his refusal to register a transfer, the Court is of opinion that there was probable ground for the refusal, the applicant must under Sec. 135 pay the costs. Re "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Leach, 5 A.J.R., 72.

Act No. 140, Sec. 80, Forbidding Registration—Cannot be Extended to Include Claims not Referred to—Withdrawal.]—A caveat lodged under Sec. 80 of the "Real Property Act," No. 140, claiming a lien on land for a specified sum, and forbidding the registration of any instrument affecting the land until after notice to the caveator, cannot be extended so as to embrace other claims to which it contains no reference, and so will not be extended to include a claim to the land absolutely, which claim is alleged by affidavit of the caveator; and the person applying to be registered as proprietor may on summons to the caveator obtain an order from a Judge in Chambers for withdrawal of the caveat, upon the terms of paying the caveator the sum specified in his caveat. Ex parte Lyons, 1 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 119.

N.B.—Sec. 116 of Act No. 301 closely follows Sec. 80 of Act No. 140.

Order to Delay Registration—"Transfer of Land Stat.," Sec. 117.]—If a Judge's order, under "The Transfer of Land Stat.," Sec. 117, to delay the registration of a transfer upon the application of a caveator, does not show on the face of it that it has been made within fourteen days after notice to the caveator, and such fact does not appear upon the affidavit upon which the order is drawn up, and to which it refers, such order is bad. In re Wise, 2 V.R. (L.,) 111; 2 A.J.R., 69.

Order Extending Caveat—"Transfer of Land Stat.," Sec. 117.]—An order extending the operation of a caveat, headed in the matter of the "Transfer of Land Stat.," shows an intention to exercise the Statutory jurisdiction conferred by Sec. 117 of the Statute, and may be made without terms as to any undertaking or security by way of indemnity; and it is not necessary that it should show that such undertaking or security has been dispensed with. In re "The Transfer of Land Stat." and the Caveat of Fearnley, 2 A.L.T., 32.

Restraining Registration—Pending Dispute as to Mortgage Money.]—Where an application was made by a mortgagor (caveator) under Sec. 117 of the Act, to restrain registration of dealing with the land pending a dispute as to the mortgage debt, the Court ordered a delay of the registration for a month, the caveator to pay £100 into Court as an indemnity against any loss likely to be sustained thereby. In re "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Peck, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 328; 6 A.L.T., 162.

Restraining Registration—Practice under "Judicature Act 1883"—"Supreme Court Rules" 1884, Order 52, Rule 3.]—An application to delay the registration of dealing with land should be made by motion upon notice under Order 52, Rule 3, and not ex parte. Ibid.

6. Dower.

Acknowledgment of Married Woman—Act No. 353. Sec. 6, Commissioner's Certificate—Onus of Proof that Statute has been Complied with.]—Where the form provided by the "Transfer of Land Stat." for the certificate to be given by a commissioner for taking the acknowledgments of married women to bar dower has not been strictly followed, the onus of proving that the requirements of the Act with reference to the taking of such acknowledgment have been complied with, lies on the person claiming under the acknowledgment In re Kerr, 1 V.R. (L.,) 199; 1 A.J.R., 163.

For other cases see under HUSBAND AND WIFE, ante column 538.

7. Easements and Registration thereof.

Easements Appurtenant — What are.] — Only easements appurtenant to the land registered can be entered upon the register; where, therefore, the owner of certain land granted by deed, for a consideration, a right-of-way over a certain portion of his land to an adjoining owner, Held that this was merely a way in gross, which could not be assigned, and should not be registered. In re "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Johnson, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 55.

Act No. 301, Secs. 17, 64—Easement—Incorporeal Hereditaments.]—Sec. 64 prescribes that when any easement is created over or affecting land under the operation of the Act, a memorial is to be entered upon the folium constituting the title to such land, or, in other words, a blot is to be made in the register on the title to the servient tenement; but there is no provision for showing on the title to the dominant tenement any easement appurteuant to it, although the use of the word "land" will carry with it any easement to which the owner of the dominant tenement can be shown by evidence external to the register to be entitled. There is no provision for registering easements over land not brought under the Act: only such incorporeal hereditaments as are actual estates in land over land not under the Act can be registered. In re "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Cunningham, in re M'Carthy, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 199.

Act No. 301, Secs. 24, 64—Amending Act, No. 610, Sec. 2—Easement.]—B, the owner of the dominant tenement, was bringing certain land under the Act, and sought to have a right-of-way over the servient tenement, which had been granted by deed some time before inserted in his certificate of title. The servient tenement was already under the Act. A judge in Chambers granted an order, restraining the Registrar from bringing this easement under the operation of the Act. Held that under Sec. 24 the Court has jurisdiction to interfere and prevent an injustice being done, whether a suit in equity or an action at law has been instituted or not; and that the owner of the dominant tenement was not entitled under Sec. 64 or Sec. 2 of the Act No. 610, to have an easement over a servient tenement entered on his certificate of title. Rule to rescind order refused. In re "Transfer of Land Stat," ex parte Beissel, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 53.

Right-of-way—Act No. 301, Sec. 64—Act No. 610, Secs. 2, 3.]—J., the owner of the dominant tenement, sued P., the owner of the servient tenement, for obstructing a right-of-way over P.'s land. J put in his certificate of title, showing a right-of-way on the plan in the margin. P.'s certificate of title also on its face showed plaintiff's right-of-way. Certain evidence of Crown grants and defendant's occupation of another adjoining piece of land was rejected, and plaintiff obtained a verdict. On rule nisi to enter a verdict for defendant, Held that even if Sec. 64 of Act No 301, and Sec. 3 of Act No. 610, referred to the same subject matter, although the requirements in the former referred to an endorsement, and those of the latter to a plan in the margin, yet they were directory and not mandatory; and that a certificate that the person named is entitled to an easement is conclusive evidence that he is so entitled. Semble if an error is made as to the width or other particulars of the right-of-way, a new certificate with a correct description may be issued. Rule discharged. Jones v Park, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 167; 1 A.L.T., 10.

Act No. 301, Secs 15, 17, 19, 49—Act No. 610, Secs. 2, 3, 4—Easement Appurtenant to Land sought to be brought under the Act may be Entered upon the Certificate of Title.]—Per the Full Court—Although under the Act No. 301, Secs. 15, 17, 19, the Registrar, on bringing the dominant tenement under the Act, is not justified in describing an easement appurtenant to such tenement on the certificate of title, yet under the combined effect of Secs. 3 and 4 of Act No. 610, taken with Sec. 64 of Act No. 301 (overruling ex parte Beissel,) the Registrar has power to include by designation in the certificate of title an easement appurtenant to the dominant tenement sought to be brought under the Act over land already under the Act. In re "Transfer of Land Stat.," ex parte Metropolitan Building Society, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 361; 6 A.L.T., 171.

Quære, per Full Court, whether the Court has any power to direct an inquiry, or to investigate the title to such easement, inasmuch as no rules have been made under the power given in Sec. 152 prescribing the mode of investigating a disputed title to such easement. Semble that, inasmuch as the Court must determine the matter if it has jurisdiction, and some course of procedure is necessary for that purpose, the Court is at liberty to prescribe the most convenient course, being one which it would have been empowered to prescribe by rule. Ibid., p. 370.

Registration of—Power of Owner of Servient Tenement already under the Act to stay the Registration of an Easement Appurtenant to a Dominant Tenement sought to be brought under the Act.]—Per Stawell, C.J., and Holroyd, J. (dissentiente Higinbotham, J.)—The owner of the servient tenement cannot, by virtue of his estate in such tenement, forbid the registration of an easement over such servient tenement appurtenant to the dominant tenement sought to be brought under the Act, because "the land described in the advertisement" mentioned in Sec. 22 of Act No. 301, does not include the servient tenement.—it only includes the dominant tenement and the easement appurtenant thereto, and in neither of these has the owner of the servient tenement any interest—and it is not sufficient that the easement is something incompatible with the rights of the owner of the servient tenement. Per Higinbotham, J.—"The land described in the advertisement" really includes the servient tenement, and the owner of the servient tenement has then an interest in "the land described, &c.," and may properly lodge a caveat under Sec. 22 against the registration of the easement. Ibid., pp. 371, 375.

8. Leases under the Act.

Certificate of Title to Leasehold—Effect of.]—A certificate of title under the "Transfer of Land Stat.," that a person is proprietor of a leasehold estate for so many years, cannot defeat the right of the Crown to determine the lessee's estate. Matt v. Peel, 2 V.R. (M.,) 27; 2 A.J.R., 133.

Effect of Sec. 42 of the "Transfer of Land Stat." on Unregistered Leases.]—The effect of Sec. 42 of the "Transfer of Land Stat." is not to render a lease, which has not been registered, void, but to make it of no effect as against a subsequent registered conveyance of the land. Morrissey v. Clements, 6 A.L.T., 107.

Lease Destroyed—Effect of.]—If a lease be destroyed, so that its registration thereby becomes impossible, it is still valid as between the parties as a contract. Ibid.

9. Mortgages under the Act.

Land under the "Transfer of Land Stat." may be equitably mortgaged by deposit of the certificate of title. The policy of the Act being to protect a transferee whose title is completed by the issue of a new certificate when the certificate is issued, not before. London Chartered Bank v. Hayes, 2 V.R. (E.,) 104; 2 A.J.R., 60.

Equitable Mortgage—Priority—Purchaser at Sheriff's Sale—Unregistered Encumbrance—Act No. 301, Secs. 49, 50, 106, 117, 130.]—An equitable mortgagee, who does not give notice to the sheriff or lodge a caveat until after a creditor lodges a copy of a fi. fa. with the Registrar, will, by allowing his caveat to lapse, and without taking other steps to protect his interests, lose his priority over the purchaser at the sheriff's sale. Patchell v. Maunsell, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 6.

Act No. 301, Secs. 93, 94—Action for Use and Occupation by a Mortgagor.]—The powers conferred by Sec. 93 of Act 301 upon the mortgagee do not prevent the mortgagor from maintaining an action for use and occupation before the mortgagee enters into possession. F. became registered proprietor of land, and mortgaged the land to a bank. F. then transferred the land, subject to the mortgage, to L. One B., a former proprietor of the land, had executed a deed of assignment, comprising the premises, and the trustees under the deed had let the defendant into possession under a verbal agreement. L. sued defendant for use and occupation, and there was evidence that defendant had recognised L.'s title as mortgagor. Held that such recognition was sufficient to sustain the action, and that no consent in writing by the mortgagee under Sec. 94 was necessary, as the defendant, having previously recognised L.'s title as the transferee from the mortgagor, the mortgagee himself could not bring the present action. Louch v. Ball, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 157; 1 A.L.T., 10.

Liability of Purchaser of Equity of Redemption from Mortgagor, Secs. 90, 110.]—The language of Secs. 90 and 110 of the "Transfer of Land Stat." must not be taken to mean that the purchaser of an equity of redemption of land under the Statute is personally liable to the mortgagee in the first instance, as upon a covenant to pay the mortgage debt. The object of the Act is not to create new liabilities; it is to make the transferee liable to covenants running with the land. Australian Deposit and Mortgage Bank v. Lord, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 31.

(c) Power, Remedies and Liabilities of Mortgagees and Persons claiming through them.

Power of Sale—Notice—Act No. 301, Sec. 85.]—H. mortgaged land to I. by an instrument under the "Transfer of Land Stat." H. being in arrears with his interest was, before the date of the principal becoming due, served with a writ in ejectment, and also discovered that the land was advertised for sale. Upon motion to restrain the sale, Held that I. was not, under Sec. 85, entitled to sell till after a month from date of notice; that the Court would only interfere where an offer had been made of both principal and interest, i.e., where the mortgagee could get all without a sale that he could get with a sale. Motion refused. Hervey v. Inglis, 5 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 125.

Notice of Sale—Sec. 84—Notice by Unregistered Letter Sufficient—Protection of Purchaser under Sale without Notice—Sec. 85.]—Injunction suit against mortgagees transferring certain lands and against H. a purchaser from registering a transfer from the mortgagees. The mortgage given by the plaintiff mortgagor to the defendant mortgagees, was under the Act No. 301, and provided for giving of notice under Sec. 84 in case of default being continued for seven days, and power of sale under Sec. 85 within seven days after service of the notice. In December, 1871, half a year's interest was due, and an agent for the mortgagees sent to the plaintiff a letter, not registered, informing him that unless "the money due under the mortgage be forthwith paid," the mortgagees would proceed to sell. The mortgagees sold part to one purchaser who was not a party to the suit, and part to D., who had no notice of the circumstances. Held, upon motion for injunction, that the notice reaching the mortgagor, though by unregistered letter, was sufficient, the provision in Sec. 84 as to registered letters meaning that the precaution of sending a registered letter must be shown to have been observed where the mortgagee is unable to prove actual receipt; that the notice of December, 1871, was defective (1) in not distinctly shewing whether the mortgagees exercised their option of requiring payment of both principal and interest or of interest only; and (2) in requiring payment "forthwith" and not after seven days' default; that, as H. was a purchaser for value without notice, his purchase was protected; that Sec. 85 validates contracts as well as conveyances and transfers, where registered under the Act, and protects contractors knowing nothing at the time of anything to impugn the validity of the contract. Injunction refused as to H., granted as to defendant mortgagees, until after they had given notice as by Sec. 84 provided. M'Donald v. Rowe, 3 A.J.R., 90.

At the hearing, Held that the mortgagor was entitled to charge the defendant mortgagees at his option with the value of the land at the time of the sale or at the time of the decree. M'Donald v. Rowe, 4 A.J.R., 134.

"Transfer of Land Stat," No. 301, Sec. 85.]—Quære, per Molesworth, J., whether the protection given to a purchaser from a mortgagee by Sec. 85 of the "Transfer of Land Stat.," exempting him from inquiring as to default or notice of sale, extends to a person having only a contract of purchase. M'Donald v. Rowe, 3 A.J.R., 90, doubted. Ross v. Victorian Permanent Building Society, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 254, 265; 4 A.L.T., 17.

A power of sale exercised under Sec. 85 is bad, if with the land under the Statute, there be also sold land under the general law, all being sold under one contract and at one price. Ibid., see facts ante column for 1060.

Sale by Mortgagee—No Interest Passes to Purchaser till Registration.]—Where the mortgagor is a registered owner of leasehold estate under the "Transfer of Land Stat." and a mortgage is made and registered under Sec. 83 and the following sections, so that the only way in which the mortgagee can extinguish the rights of the mortgagor is by foreclosure, under "The Transfer of Land Statute Amending Act," No. 317, Sec. 2, or sale under Secs. 84, 85, and 87 of the "Transfer of Land Stat.;" then whether a sale of such leasehold estate is made by the mortgagee under the statutory power of sale, or as absolute owner, no interest therein passes to the purchaser until registration; see Secs. 42 and 87. National Bank of Australasia v. United Hand-in-Hand and Band of Hope Company, L.R., 4 Ap. Ca., 391.

Remedies of Mortgagee when Principal Debt or Interest Unpaid, Act No 301, Secs. 84, 85, 87—Act No. 317, Sec 2.]—The only way in which a mortgagee can extinguish the rights of the mortgagor, is by foreclosure under Act No. 317, Sec. 2, or by a sale under Act No. 301, Secs. 84, 85, 87. Ibid.

Act No. 301, Secs. 98, 99.]—The remedy of a mortgagee as to foreclosure is not in the old way by a suit in Equity for that purpose, but by following the remedies prescribed in Secs. 98 and 99 of Act No. 301. Greig v. Watson, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 79, 84; 3 A.L.T., 13.

Attesting Witness to a Mortgage—Who may be—"Transfer of Land Stat.," Sec. 115.]—The manager of a bank, who is also a Justice of the Peace, is not incapacitated from acting as attesting witness, under Sec. 115 of the "Transfer of Land Stat.," to the execution of a mortgage, made under the Statute, to his bank, there being no proviso in the section restraining an interested party from attesting. Bank of Victoria v. McMichael, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 11.

Consolidation of Mortgages—Mortgages of Land under the Act and under the General Law—No Power to Consolidate.]—Greig v. Watson, ante column 1054.

10. Remedy in Respect of Deprivation of Land.

Act No. 140—Actions by and against Registrar of Titles—Secs. 116, 118.]—A person fraudulently personated the owner of certain land, brought it under the "Real Property Act" (No. 140,) and had the name of a purchaser from him registered as proprietor thereof. The real owner brought an action for damages, under Sec. 118 of the Act, against the Registrar of Titles. Held that the action did not lie against the Registrar but against the person who had personated the owner, under Sec 116 of the Act, though such person had never been registered as proprietor. Fotheringham v. Archer, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 95.

[Note—Sec. 146 of Act No. 301, closely follows Sec. 116 of Act No. 140.—ED.]

Action against Assurance Fund—Omission of Registrar to Endorse Memo. that Land was Brought under the Act—"Transfer of Land Stat.," Secs. 27, 146.]—T. applied to have certain land brought under the "Transfer of Land Stat.," and lodged the title deeds. The Registrar omitted to endorse, under Sec. 27, on the last material registered document lodged by T., a memo. that the land was brought under the Act. T. applied to O. to advance money to him, and O. advanced it on mortgage of the land, as under the general law, without notice that the land had been otherwise transferred. T. became insolvent, and the mortgage was discovered to be valueless, whereupon O. brought an action against the assurance fund. Held, per Stawell, C. J. and Holyroyd, J. (dissentiente Higinbotham, J.) that Sec. 146 of the Statute only applied to a loss by deprivation of an actual interest in land; that the fund was protected against all claims for which the sufferer could reasonably be required to seek redress against any other person, or which did not directly arise from the operation of the Act; that the section did not apply to a loss of an expectancy of an interest sustained by a person through a fraud which another person was enabled to commit owing to the neglect of the Registrar; that O.'s remedy was against T.; and verdict for defendant. Oakden v. Gibbs, 8 V.L.R. (L.,) 380.

Error or Misdescription of Land—Remedies in Respect of—Act No. 301, Secs. 49, 106, 144, 146.]—The plaintiff was registered proprietor of certain land held by him as a lessee under the "Land Act 1869;" his uncle, bearing the same name, was indebted to the defendant bank, and the bank, as execution creditor under a writ of fi. fa., directed the sheriff to get a description of the land to be levied upon, and served the Registrar with a copy of the writ, erroneously specifying the plaintiff's land as the land to be levied upon. The bank bought at the sheriff's sale, procured a transfer from the sheriff, was registered as proprietor, and afterwards sold the land to one F., to whom the plaintiff gave up possession. Held that the plaintiff was deprived of his land in consequence of the error or misdescription, and the case fell within Sec. 144; that the sheriff's sale and transfer to the defendant put an end to the plaintiff's certificate of title under Sec. 106, so that the objection of a prior registered certificate made under Sec. 49 could not be sustained, and that, under the circumstances, the plaintiff's remedy was not against the Registrar as the guardian of the assurance fund, under Sec. 146. Hassett v. Colonial Bank of Australasia, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 380; 3 A.L.T., 38.

11. Miscellaneous Points.

Misdescription in Application—Fraud—"Transfer of Land Stat.," Sec. 153—How Remedied.]—A misdescription in an application to bring land under the "Transfer of Land Stat.," as that the land was unoccupied, when it was not in fact so, is not fraud within Sec. 153 of the Act, which is fraud with a guilty intention. Wiggins v. Hammill, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 63.

Semble, that as regards fraud under Sec. 153, the matter could not be considered incidentally, and the certificate treated as void in a civil suit; but the person charged with fraud should first be convicted as for a criminal offence, and then proceedings might be taken to cancel the certificate of title. Ibid.

TRESPASS.

1. To Lands and Houses.

What Amounts to—Entry under Contract—Exceeding Terms of Contract.]—An action for trespass is maintainable where the defendant has entered under a contract to cut a certain quantity of timber, and has greatly exceeded the quantity mentioned in the contract. Bond v. Kelly, 4 A.J.R., 153.

What Amounts to.]—The party fence between the land of N. and B. was burnt down, and N. and B. each erected half of a new one. During such erection, B. placed some of the half burned logs of his half of the old fence upon the land of N. in order to make way for the new fence, whereupon N. sued B. for trespass, in the County Court, but failed to obtain a verdict. On appeal, Held that the verdict should not be disturbed, since the placing of the logs on either side to make way for the new fence did not necessarily amount to a trespass. Neaves v. Barrett, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 165.

Wilful and Malicious—Notice not to Trespass.]—Proof of prior proceedings in ejectment is not proof, in an action for mesne profits, of such a "notice not to trespass" as will make the trespass wilful and malicious, under Sec. 3 of 3 & 4 Vic., Cap. xxiv.; a distinct notice should be served. Laidlaw v. Laing, 1 W. W. (L.,) 64.

Who may Maintain Action — Reversioner.]—A reversioner, whose tenants are in possession of the property, may maintain an action for trespass for pulling down a fence upon the land. O'Grady v. Boulter, 2 A.J.R., 118.

No Damage done—Plaintiff Entitled to Recover.]—A plaintiff is entitled to recover damages for a trespass to land, even though no actual damage be done by the trespass; though such damages are merely nominal. Dumont v. Miller, 4 A.J.R., 152.

Committed by Stock — Acceptance of Trespaes Rates for One Trespass no Bar to Action for Previous Treapass.]—The accepting by the owner of land of trespass rates for damage done by sheep, is no bar to an action by him for damages in respect of previous similar trespasses. Mitchell v. Wright, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 273.

Trespass by Dog — Liability of Owner.]—See Doyle v. Vance, ante column 28.

Adoption of Trespass by Taking Advantage of it.]—A defendant is not liable unless he is shown to have been present at, and taken part in, the trespass, or to have authorised or instigated others to commit it for him. Where third persons committed a trespass without the authority of the defendant, Held that he was not liable, though it was done for his benefit, and he took advantage of it when completed. Doolan v. Hill, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 290.

Replication of Private Right-of-Way to Plea that Sheep were Trespassing—What must be set out.]—A replication to a plea, that certain sheep were wrongfully in a close of the defendant, &c., setting forth that the sheep were being driven along a certain road over which the plaintiff had a right-of-way, and that the sheep escaped for want of a fence into the defendant's close without plaintiff's negligence is not sufficient; but must aver the existence of the essentials of the right-of-way, e.g., its termini, &c., otherwise it will not appear that the right-of-way existed over the part of the road in question. Butcher v. Smith, 5 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 223.

"Land Act," No. 360, Sec. 30—Sheep Trespassing—Land not properly Fenced.]—A licensee, under Secs. 19 and 20 of the Act, who has fenced with a fence which is not sheep-proof, may sue for damages for sheep trespassing, although, under Sec. 30, he may not, under such circumstances, impound. Rutherford v Hayward, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 19.

Plea of Impounding in Actions of Trespass—What Plea must set out.]—See Jones v. Campion, O'Shea v. D'Arcy, and Sanderson v. Fotheringham, ante column 1155.

Equitable Title in Defendant—No Notice thereof to Plaintiff.]—A. brought an action of trespass against B. B. pleaded on equitable grounds that the land belonged to C., who had sold it to E., that E. being in possession, and entitled in equity, assigned his interest by memorandum of agreement to F., who had assigned his equitable interest to B.; but the plea alleged no notice to A. of B.'s equitable interest. Held, on demurrer to the plea, that B. being out of possession, and not having given A. notice, had no equity to support his plea. Demurrer allowed. Hunter v. Hodgson, 3 A.J.R., 31.

Substantive Trespass—Matter of Aggravation—Pleading.]—In an action for trespass, the declaration was for breaking and entering plaintiff's close, remaining there a long time and driving away plaintiff's cattle therefrom. Defendant pleaded inter alia that the land was not the plaintiff's. Held, on demurrer to plea, that the driving away the cattle was a separate and substantive trespass, and not a matter of aggravation, and that the plea was not a sufficient answer to the declaration being had as regards the cattle, but good as regards the land. Plaintiff allowed to amend by limiting demurrer to the driving away of the cattle. Cummins v. Dickson, 3 V.R. (L.,) 216; 3 A.J R., 111.

Admission of Plaintiff's Title — Estoppel.] — Where a defendant had said that he knew that plaintiff was owner, and offered to give him five shillings a week for the property, the Court discharged a rule nisi for nonsuit, thinking it impossible to contend against such an admission. Byrne v. Bateman, 5 A.J.R., 78.

Evidence of Possession—Crown Lands—Pastoral License—Parol Evidence.]—In an action for trover for the conversion of sheep, the defendant pleaded that they were trespassing upon land held by him under a pastoral license from the Crown, and put in as evidence in addition to the plan annexed to his license, parol evidence to show that a certain fence over which the sheep had passed was the boundary of his land, and also conversations held in the absence of the plaintiff between the plaintiff's father, who was joint owner of the sheep, and the defendant, which would support defendant's case. Held that the parol evidence was admissible, as also were the conversations with the plaintiff's father, even though plaintiff was absent when they took place. Coutts v. Jay, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 10.

Costs—Action to Try a Right].—Certain land was claimed by G., and was also claimed and trespassed on by E. Before action brought,

E. gave up the land, but afterwards contested G.'s title by a plea of "not possessed," and proceeded to a trial on that plea, which resulted in a verdict for G., with 40s. damages. Held that it was an action to try a right, and certificate for costs granted. Gill v. Ellerman, 2 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 88.

2. To the Person.

False Imprisonment—Action against Justices—11 and 12 Vic., Cap. 44, Sec. 13.]—In Sec. 13 of 11 and 12 Vic., Cap. 44, Sec. 13, the words "no greater punishment than that assigned by law for the offence of which he was so convicted," do not refer to the imprisonment which the justices actually and legally imposed, but to the maximum term of imprisonment to which the person sentenced might under the law have been subjected. Where, therefore, S. was fined £20 and £2 2s. costs for assault, but no mention was made by the bench of a term of imprisonment in default, but the clerk in filling up the conviction inserted the usual alternative of one month's imprisonment, and S. was summoned to show cause why he should not be imprisoned, a return of nulla bona having been made, and the case coming on before one of the former justices and another who had taken no part in the original adjudication, and they both in ignorance of the clerk having filled up the conviction as described, committed S. for two months, and he was imprisoned for a few days and then paid the fine, and brought an action for trespass in respect of this imprisonment, Held that the payment of 2d. into court by the defendant magistrate was sufficient compensation, and, upon a rule for a new trial, confirmed. Smith v. O'Brien, 1 W. & W. (L.,) 386.

False Imprisonment—"Melbourne and Hobson's Bay Railway Company's Act," Sec. 63—Nearest Justice—"Management of Railways Act," Sec. 31.]—An engineer of a railway company arrested a workman of a municipal council for using a right-of-way which the council claimed over the railway. To an action for false imprisonment, the engineer pleaded justification under the Company's Act (16 Vic.,) Sec. 63, and under the "Management of Railways Act," No. 186, Sec. 31. Held that the requirements of the 63rd Section of 16 Vic. were complied with if the person arrested were taken before a justice having jurisdiction in and for the district or place in which the offence was committed, there being no provision expressly requiring the person arrested to be taken before the nearest justice, nor any reason for extending the words "in the district or place" beyond their plain meaning; that the words of the Act No. 186, Sec. 31, which enacts that an officer of the company may seize and detain an offender whose name and address may be unknown to such officer, and give him in charge to a constable, who may without warrant convey him with all convenient despatch before a justice, have as their object the enabling the officer to arrest a transient offender whose name and address the officer does not possess the means of ascertaining; that the section does not require that the name and address of the trespasser should be known personally by the officer before arrest; that if the officer decline to act on information offered on which he ought to act, his declining so to act, with the means of knowledge at hand, will not leave the offender's name and address "unknown" to the officer; that in such case the jury must decide whether the information offered before arrest is sufficient or not; and that the officer must at his own risk arrest a person whose name and address he had the means of knowing. Jenkyns v. Elsdon, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 145.

False Imprisonment—Sequestration before Arrest.]—Defendants arrested plaintiff under a warrant, obtained by them under an order for imprisonment in default of payment of a judgment debt, made on a fraud summons. After the judgment, but before arrest, the plaintiff sequestrated his estate, and defendants had notice thereof. Plaintiff sued in trespass for false imprisonment. Held that such an arrest and imprisonment formed no ground for an action of trespass. Malcolm v. Milner, 1 V.R. (L.,) 74; 1 A.J.R., 112.

False Imprisonment—Justification.]—An action for false imprisonment will not lie when the plaintiff has been imprisoned under a writ of capias issued under a Judge's order, although such order, and all subsequent proceedings under it, have been set aside by an order of the same Judge. Weston v. Collingwood Gas Company, 1 V.R. (L.,) 98; 1 A.J.R., 90.

False Imprisonment and Malicious Conviction—"Justices of Peace Stat., 1865" (No. 267,) Sec. 164—Quashing Conviction.]—W. summoned H. for trespass under No. 267. S., the justice who tried the summons, stated an appeal. This case was remitted, and S. decided on the facts, that H.'s claim of title was not made bonâ fide, and adjudged that H. should pay a certain fine and costs, or be committed in default. H. was committed and liberated on habeas corpus. S. then stated another case, and on that the Supreme Court reversed his determination. H. then sued S. for false imprisonment and malicious conviction, and got a verdict. On rule nisi for a nonsuit, Held that, under Sec. 164 of Act No. 267, it was necessary to have the conviction quashed before H. could obtain a verdict; that it might have been quashed on certiorari, or by appeal to the General Sessions; that the reversal of the magistrates' determination by the Supreme Court was not "quashing." Rule absolute. Hunter v. Sherwin, 6 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 26.

False Imprisonment—Justification—Commitment by Coroner at Inquest for Contempt—"Coroner's Stat. 1865," No. 253, Sec. 4, "Justices of the Peace Stat. 1865," Sec. 39.]—C. sued a coroner for false imprisonment and assault, and the defendant pleaded not guilty and justification; that the trespass was committed by him as coroner, whilst holding an inquest, for contempt of Court. The Judge directed a verdict to be entered for defendant. On rule nisi for new trial or verdict for plaintiff, Held that such a plea of justification was as available by a Judge of an inferior Court of Record as by a Judge of a superior Court of Record, and that the Coroner's Court is a court of record in Victoria; that the power of imprisonment is limited by Sec. 4 of the Act, and by Sec. 39 of Act 267, to 48 hours, which was not exceeded. Rule discharged. Casey v. Candler, 5 A.J.R., 179.

Entire Trespass.]—R. sued M. in trespass, alleging three counts—(1) Assaulting and compelling R. to go on board a ship sailing from Sydney, and imprisoning him there. (2) Keeping him imprisoned until the vessel arrived in Victoria. (3) Compelling him to go to a police station in Melbourne, and imprisoning him until his acquittal. Held that the trespass was entire, and was not capable of being severed so as to allow any of its parts being justified severally; and that there was no power in the Legislature of New South Wales to send R. in custody to Victoria. Judgment for plaintiff. Ray v. M'Mackin, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 274.

See S.C., ante column 178.

Imprisonment—Sheriff—Arrest—Negligent Escape—Re-arrest out of Bailiwick and Lodging in Gaol.]—See Wall v. Meyrick, ante columns 1314, 1315.

False Imprisonment—"Inebriates Act 1872," Sec. 7.]—An action for false imprisonment may be maintained by an inebriate against the superintendent of an inebriate retreat, to which the inebriate has been committed by a warrant under Sec. 7 of the "Inebriates Act 1872," not showing jurisdiction, without first having the Judge's order of commitment set aside. Sec. 7 of the Act affords no protection when the commitment has not been strictly in compliance with the terms of the Act. Langley v. M'Carthy, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 278.

False Imprisonment—Act No 265, Sec. 17, Sub-sec. 6—Wilful Trespass.]—B. contracted with H. to build him a house, and H. became dissatisfied with the way in which the work was progressing, and warned B. that unless he left the premises he would be given into custody. H. then gave B. into custody, and brought a complaint against him for wilful trespass under Sec. 17, Sub-sec 6, of Act No. 265, which the justices dismissed on the ground of the complications as to B.'s claim of right. B. sued H. for false imprisonment, and recovered a verdict. Held, on a rule nisi for new trial, that it was for the jury to say whether B. acted under a fair and reasonable supposition that he had a right "to do the act complained of." Rule discharged. Bailey v. Hart, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 66; 4 A.L.T., 161.

False Imprisonment—Evidence—"Town and Country Police Act 1855" (No. 14) Sec. 15, Sub-sec. 7.]—In an action for false imprisonment against four defendants, in which two, C. and A., took no farther part than to remain in the Police Court silent when a witness said that he had their authority for making the arrest, T., one of the defendants, pleaded a justification under Sec. 15, Sub-sec. 7 of Act No. 14, to the effect that plaintiff was a wilful trespasser. The plaintiff was a schoolmaster, under the management of a board consisting of the defendants, and it was in consequence of his dismissal and persisting in attending the school that the alleged imprisonment took place. Held that the silence of C. and A. in the Police Court was not evidence of admission of facts stated by witness, and verdict entered for them. As to T., verdict against him left undisturbed since the cases contemplated in the Act were those of a person in undisputed possession finding a trespasser, and it was not intended that justices should decide such complicated questions as right of property in a school house. Fisher v. Wheatland, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 130.

Steam Roller in Street Occasioning Injury—Pleading—Amendment—New Trial.]—In an action of trespass it is sufficient to allege that defendants were possessed of a locomotive containing fire, and brought it into a street, and that fire escaped and injured the plaintiff; that constitutes a good cause of action without averring negligence. A declaration averred as above with a further averment of negligence on the part of the defendants; defendants pleaded not guilty. At the conclusion of plaintiff's case, defendants moved for a non-suit on the ground of no negligence being proved when plaintiff applied to amend by striking out the averment of negligence as being surplusage, and the declaration to be altered to one in trespass. Held (dissentiente Higinbotham, J.,) that, although the averment of negligence was surplusage in an action for trespass, yet as the issue of trespass had not been submitted to the jury when they returned a verdict for plaintiff, there must be a new trial. Tobin v. Mayor of Melbourne, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 488; 3 A.L.T., 78.

3. To Goods.

What Amounts to—Consent—Duress.]—A., accompanied by B., a private detective, called on H., a general servant, and asked her if she objected to having her boxes searched. She replied that she had no objection, and preceded them to the room, and inspected the searching process. Subsequently she sued A. for trespass, alleging that she imagined that B. was a detective, and so acted under duress. Held that there was no duress, and that A., having searched the boxes with H.'s consent, had not committed a trespass. Amess v. Hanlon, 4 A.J.R., 90.

Seizure of a Weighing Machine under Act No. 215 —"Weights and Measures Stat. 1864."—Inspector not Liable.]—Where an inspector of weights and measures seized a weighing machine on a Government railway station as being incorrect, Held that he was justified in so doing, under Sec. 49 of the Act, and was not liable in trespass, it not being necessary to determine what steps should have been taken to cause a forfeiture. Regina v. Caddy, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 38.

Measure of Damages.]—B. wrongfully seized sheep belonging to the plaintiff C., and transferred them to E, who was his creditor. E. sold the sheep, and S., a mortgagee of the sheep, had sued E. for the conversion of the sheep, and recovered as damages their value at the time of the sale. C. then sued B. for wrongfully selling and seizing the sheep, and recovered a verdict. Held, on rule nisi, to enter a verdict for defendant, that the plaintiff was not attempting to recover damages twice over for the same conversion, as this action was, in effect, an action of trespass, and that plaintiff was entitled to recover the difference in value at the time of seizure and the sale. Cave v. Beveridge, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 302.

Reasonable and Probable Cause—Search Warrant.]—S. was domestic servant of V. H., and left on 27th December, 1866, and had used in her room certain bedding placed there. Shortly after S. left, the bedding was missed. The cabman who drove S. away informed V. H. that he had, under the directions of S., entered her bedroom (i.e., in V. H.'s house,) and removed a certain bundle containing blankets, and that S, on reaching the house where she went after leaving her situation, took the bundle into her bedroom. V. H. procured a search warrant from the justices, and entered and searched the bedroom with a constable. S. sued V. H. for trespass. Held that the plea which set out the abovementioned facts did not set forth facts amounting to reasonable and probable cause for issuing the search warrant; that it did not state grounds for believing that the defendant had grounds for believing that blankets taken were the defendant's property, nor that he took steps to exhaust his means of knowledge on the question, as to whether they were plaintiff's or defendant's property. Demurrer to plea allowed. Saddler v. Van Hermert, 4 W. W. & A'B. (L.,) 59.

TROVER AND CONVERSION.

What is Conversion.] — Action by official assignee of an insolvent, to recover damages for wrongful conversion of a number of sheep. The defendants set up an agreement made by the insolvent prior to his insolvency, to the effect that defendants should retain possession of the sheep until a mortgage over them, and a lien on the wool, were given, neither of which was given, and, in default, defendants sold. Held that, in order to prove the conversion, there must be evidence of actual conversion, which consists in the defendant taking or using the goods with the intent of exercising ownership on his own behalf, or of someone other than the plaintiff, or a conversion by a refusal to deliver on demand; that the defendants here exercised acts inconsistent with the plaintiff's ownership, and so converted the sheep, and that if the defendants were lienees, they committed a tortuous act, which made them responsible for the full value. Claxton v. Everingham, 6 A L T., 132.

Plaintiff's Title as against Defendant's.]—C.'s father consigned goods to a firm or their assigns. The firm became insolvent shortly afterwards, and their assignee seized the goods. C. brought an action of trover, and recovered the goods. On rule nisi for nonsuit or new trial, Held that though it was not clearly proved whether the property in the goods was in C. or his father, still there was some evidence to go to the jury, and, the jury having found for C., the verdict would not be disturbed. Cooper v. Dodgson, 2 A.J.R., 117.

Action for Wrongful Conversion of Shares—Plaintiff Parting with His Interest.] — G. purchased shares from C. G. received the scrip, handed it to C., and told him to deliver it to D., to whom he (G.) had sold the shares, and obtain the money from him. A dispute arising as to the delivery, G. brought an action against C. for wrongful conversion, and obtained a verdict. On rule nisi for a nonsuit, Held that G. had parted with his right to the shares, and could not sue. Rule absolute. Grant v. Chalk, 3 A.J.R., 43.

Action for Conversion of Shares Deposited as Security—Plaintiff not Proving Right of Property or Possession, not having Offered to Redeem.]—King v. Levinger, ante columns 1043, 1044.

Landlord and Tenant — Theatre — Ornaments Attached to Outer Wall.]—L. had leased to A. a theatre, together with the right of using a certain corridor and appurtenances thereto. On the outer wall of a corridor belonging to the theatre, but not within the boundaries coloured on the plan, nor within the parcels of the lease, were certain ornaments, among others a pier glass, attached to the wall. L. removed this pier glass, and A. sued him for conversion. Held that the corridor did not pass under the demise nor any of the ornaments adorning it, and that plaintiff could not maintain his action for conversion of goods to which he had no title. Aarons v. Lewis, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 317.

Who may Maintain.]—The owner of goods cannot maintain trover for them if the right of possession in the goods at the time of action brought is in a bailee. Glen v. Abbott, 6 V.L.R (L.,) 483.

Owner of Scrip Lent for Illegal Purpose.]—Where scrip had been lent for an illegal purpose, i.e., to enable the borrower to vote at a meeting of a company, the Court refused to assist the lender to recover his property when it had been lent for an illegal purpose. Cane v. Levey, ante column 202.

By Mortgagee of Sheep taken by Purchaser with Notice—Measure of Damages.]—In an action of trover by a mortgagee of sheep, which had been taken possession of by the defendant under a contract of sale with the mortgagor, made before notice of the mortgage and default, though possession was not taken until after notice, the Court held that the proper measure of damages was not necessarily the value of the property converted, but the value of such property to him, i.e., the amount of the debt due on the mortgage, with interest. Donnelly v. Graves, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 247.

TRUST AND TRUSTEES.

Statutes:

"Trustee Act 1856," 19 Vic., No. 20 (incorporating the Imperial Statutes, 13 and 14 Vic., Cap. 60, and 15 and 16 Vic., Cap. 55,) repealed by Act No. 234.

"Stat. of Trusts 1864," No. 234.

I. Declaration and Creation of Trusts.

Verbal Declaration of Settlor—Fraud of Trustee—Insolvency of Settlor.]—M., in consideration of marriage, undertook verbally to settle real property on his intended wife for her life, with remainder to his own children by a former marriage. The marriage took place. After the marriage M. executed a deed which he intended and supposed to be a conveyance to S., in fee on the trusts of the ante-nuptial agreement, but which was, by reason of the fraud of S., a conveyance to him in fee simple absolute, expressed to be for a valuable consideration. M. became insolvent. After his insolvency he executed a written declaration of the ante-nuptial trusts on which the land had been, or was to have been, conveyed in fee to S. On a bill by the wife and some of the infant children of M. against S., and all other parties whose interests were affected, or whose conformity was requisite, Held that a valid trust had originally been created by M., which took all beneficial interest out of him at the time of such creation; that he retained, after his insolvency, a mere capacity to declare the trusts which before his insolvency he had created, and which he was bound ex equo et bono to exercise. Trust established. Martin v. Stephenson, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 261.

"Stat. of Frauds"—Relation of Writing to Subject Matter—"Stat. of Limitations."]—W. and H., acting on behalf of undisclosed principals, advanced money belonging to these principals to R., under an agreement they made with R. and others to join equally in the purchase of a special survey in Gippsland, and they paid to R. for that purpose £1024, being one-fifth of the purchase-money. R., with the consent of the contributors, purchased land at Gippsland, and signed a declaration that when the grant was issued, he would hold the land in trust for the co-adventurers. No grant of this Gipsland section was ever issued. R. then, with the consent of the Government, substituted a selection near Geelong for the first section. His co-adventurers protested against this, and W. and H. claimed their money back; the money was not returned, and R. did not acknowledge it as a debt. R. then selected other land at Port Fairy, as a further substitution, and a Crown grant was issued in respect of this to R. In 1869 the representatives of the undisclosed principals of W. and H. brought a bill against R. and other persons, to whom he had mortgaged the land, seeking to establish their right in equity to one-fifth of the land. Held by the full Court, reversing Molesworth, J., that the declaration of trust signed by R. as to the land to be granted at Gippsland was a declaration of a future trust to be impressed on any land granted by the Crown in substitution for the Gippsland section; that, though R. never got the Gippsland section, yet the trust was not inoperative for want of a subject, because he substituted in effect the Port Fairy land for the land described in his written declaration; that the letter of W. and H. demanding the repayment of £1000 had no effect, and that R. being an express trustee, the "Stat. of Limitations" did not run against the plaintiffs; that as the mortgages executed by R. were given to the mortgagees without notice of the trust, they could not be disturbed; that all the plaintiffs wished was a sale of the equity of redemption subject to those charges, and there was no need of an offer to redeem; and that W. and H. were not necessary parties. Hunter v. Rutledge, 6 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 331, 353, 354, 356, 357; N.C., 61, 74.

Recitals in Deed Sufficient to Satisfy "Stat. of Frauds" as to Declaration of Trust, but Proved to be Untrue.]—Moore v. Hart, ante column 411.

Selecting Land as Trustee for another — When Declaration of Trust not necessary.]—Raleigh v. M'Grath, ante column 787.

Lost Deed — Memorial Registered — "Stat. of Trusts 1864," No. 234, Sec. 97.]—A. conveyed land to B. in escrow on condition that B. should execute a declaration of trust in favour of A. A. died, and B. refused to execute such declaration, but the matter was referred to arbitration, and the award declaring trusts, was made a rule of Court. B. executed a declaration of trusts, and the deed was registered; this deed was last in the hands of R., who had gone out of the jurisdiction, and had not been heard of for nine years. After the declaration the sheriff sold under a fi. fa. all B.'s interest in the land to D. On bill by one of A.'s children, a beneficiary, Held that D. was a trustee for plaintiff, and that the declaration of trust was well executed by B., he having the legal estate; that under the sheriff's sale only B.'s interest as trustee passed, and that the memorial of registration was sufficient evidence to satisfy Sec. 97 of Act No. 234. Hunniford v. Horwood, 5 V L.R. (E.,) 250.

Setting aside — Accounts under.] — Plaintiff executed a declaration of trust by which he conveyed all his property to his brother in trust for himself upon certain trusts declared in an indenture of even date. Plaintiff sued to have the declaration set aside, on the ground that he was drunk, and in his evidence stated that he had not professional advice when he executed it. There was a prayer in the bill praying, in the alternative for accounts to be taken under the declaration. Held on the evidence that plaintiff was not drunk, and though he had not had sufficient advice, yet that was not made out in the bill, and accounts directed to be taken. Paholke v. Paholke, 2 A.L.T., 134.

Gift with Verbal Expectation as to how Beneficiary should Dispose of Proceeds.]—A Roman Catholic priest gave to H. a deposit receipt for some moneys belonging to him in a bank under circumstances which the Court held were sufficient to pass the property as a donatio mortis causâ. The donor threw out an expectation that H. should regard herself as a trustee for the poor. H. wrote some ambiguous letters about this as if supposing herself bound by trusts, the sum largely exceeding her expectations, and wrote letters to the archbishop expressing her intention of holding the money for charitable purposes. Held that no trust was declared, and that H. had a perfect legal right to do with the money as she pleased. Tierney v. Hulfpenny, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 152.

Husband and Wife Living Apart—What Acts of Husband do not amount to a Declaration of Trust of Property for Wife.]—Tennant v. Bell, ante columns 539, 540.

Land Purchased with Plaintiff's Money.]—Plaintiff agreed to purchase land, and paid half the purchase money. He then left for N.Z., and from time to time remitted moneys to his wife to be expended in completing the purchase. On his return he was informed by his wife that it had been so applied, and that the conveyance was deposited in a bank for safe custody. After her death the bill alleged that he discovered that the land had been conveyed to trustees for the wife and children. On a bill to have the land conveyed to him free from the trusts of the settlement, Held that the fact that the plaintiff was an uncertificated insolvent, shortly before the purchase, was no bar to the suit, but considering the fact that, instead of reclaiming the purchase money remitted to the wife he had sanctioned its employment in the purchase, and that he had, at any rate, acquiesced in and confirmed the settlement in the wife's favour, the Court dismissed the bill. Mason v. Sawyers, 2 V.R. (E.,) 36; 2 A.J.R., 12.

Manager of Station Property Purchasing Parts of Property Thrown Open for Selection.] —W. died intestate, and his widow took out administration. J. W. was appointed manager of a station of W.'s. Parts of the station were thrown open for selection under the "Land Act 1862," and J. W. employed servants on the station to select portions, paying the rents and purchase money out of W.'s personal estate in the first instance, and re-paying the money to the estate out of sums advanced by a bank on the security of the selections. Other parts of the land were put up by auction, and J. W. purchased these on an understanding that he was to purchase as the widow's agent, and hold, on behalf of the estate, the purchase money being provided as mentioned above. On bill by the next of kin against J. W., who claimed to hold the lands so selected and purchased as his own, Held that, although J. W. was competent to purchase for himself under other circumstances, yet his claim to the land as his own was a fraud upon the estate under the circumstances, and J. W. was declared a trustee for the personal estate of the lands so selected and purchased. Lempriere v. Ware, 2 V.R. (E.) 1.

Volunteer — Trust Executed — Donee Obtaining Adverse Possession under Trust.]—A. sold his equitable interest in land under an agreement for sale in writing made in his favour by X. and Y. to B., who thereupon entered into possession. B., by writing, declared a trust as to said land in favour of his sister C., and by it directed A. to convey to C. A., by deed, conveyed his equitable interest in the land to C., who entered into possession in 1843, and remained in possession until suit brought (1872.) In a suit by C., to seek declaration of right to land against D., who claimed as to part of land by purchase from X. and Y., and for conveyances by E., F., and G., in whom the outstanding legal estate formerly in X. and Y. had become vested, Held, on demurrer, that Courts of Equity will not refuse to assist volunteers except where volunteers seek to establish title against donors or those claiming under them; that the gift to C. was executed by the direction made in B.'s memorandum for A. to convey; that no stranger could resist the assertion of C.'s claim, C. entering under a gift and remaining in adverse possession for more than 15 years. Demurrer overruled. Hodgson v. Hunter, 3 A.J.R., 41.

Gift of Property with Honorary Obligation to Maintain Donor—Suit for Declaration of Trust after Donor's Death.]—S. for some time had been living with D. and his wife, and was maintained by them out of charity. S received a sum of £3000 under a will, and he drew a cheque for the greater part of this in Mrs. D.'s favour, placing her under an honorary obligation to maintain him during his life, and to let him have back such sums as he wanted. S. continued to live with D., and drew on this fund. S. and D. bought a farm in partnership, Mrs. D. advancing £1600 out of the fund for the purpose. D. shared in the proceeds, and died. The curator administered and brought a suit for a declaration of trust in Mrs. D. as to £500 of the fund remaining and for accounts as against D. and Mrs. D. as trustees. Held that there was nothing in the transfer of the sum to Mrs. D. coupled with the conditions in S.'s favour to establish a trust in favour of the next of kin of S. as against Mrs. D. Bill dismissed. Weigall v. Daubin, 5 A.J.R., 94.

Defendant Obtaining a Rule to Administer and not Taking it Out.]—Where a defendant, holding real estate, obtains a rule to administer, but fails to take it out, and remains in occupation, he is considered a trustee for a person obtaining revocation, and a rule to administer to himself. Dryden v. Dryden, 2 V.L.R (E.,) 74.

When Husband Constructive Trustee of Property for Wife.]—Smith v. Hope, ante column 541.

"Stat. of Frauds"—Act No. 234, Sec. 97—Fraud as Taking a Case Out of Statute.]—W. employed L. to purchase land for her, furnishing L. with part of the purchase money for the purpose. L. got a conveyance to himself pretending to W. it was for her, and allowed W. to lay out money on the land on this supposition. Bill by W. against L. to have L. declared a trustee. Held, on objection, that plaintiff's title was avoided by "Stat. of Frauds," re-enacted by Act No. 234, Sec. 97 ("Stat. of Trusts,") as seeking to establish a trust by parol evidence, that there was such evidence of fraud on L.'s part that the case was taken out of the Statute. Decree made. Wilson v. Boyd, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 98.

Constructive Trustee—"Stat. of Trusts 1864," Sec. 77—Administrator.]—An administrator of an intestate dying after the passing of the "Stat. of Trusts 1864," No. 234, is not a trustee within section 77 of the Act. In re Bowman's Trusts, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 124; 2 A.L.T., 13.

Land Purchased on Security of Trust Estate.]—A.C. was tenant of lot 7 and registered proprietor of lot 6. After his death intestate his wife took out administration, and purchased the fee of lot 7, securing the purchase money by a mortgage of lots 6 and 7. The wife married again, and her second husband alleged an oral agreement before marriage that if he would spend money in putting the house on lot 7 in repair, and in paying off the mortgage he should have lot 7. she representing that both lots were hers absolutely. The husband did so expend money, and the mortgage was paid off, and lot 7 was transferred to the husband under Act No. 301 as for £5, and the wife was registered in respect of lot 6. In an administration suit by the intestate's children, Held that the verbal agreement before marriage was inoperative by the "Stat. of Frauds," and that the protection afforded by Sec. 50 of the Act No. 301 did not apply to a transaction without consideration at the time of the transfer, or previous legal obligation to transfer; that the nominal consideration of £5 was immaterial, and that both lots were subject to the trusts of the administration of A.C.'s estate. Crow v. Campbell, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 186; 6 A.L.T., 34.

II. Acceptance and Disclaimer.

Acceptance of Trusts.]—Per Molesworth, J., and Full Court—The mere execution of a trust deed is an unconditional acceptance of the estates conveyed and of the trust unless the contrary is expressly said; there is no implied condition that all the trustees are to sign before liability attaches to any one of them signing before the others. Bennett v. Bennett, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 280.

How Disclaimer Effected.]—Per the Full Court—Modern decisions leave it doubtful whether a devisee in trust can divest himself of the legal estate by any disclaimer otherwise than by deed or of record. Clark v. Clark, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 303, 320.

III. Rights, Powers and Duties of Trustees.

Power to Purchase Lands—Whether it Authorises Building.]—A power to purchase lands contained in a will does not authorise the trustees to lay out money in building. In the Will of Russell, 1 A.J.R., 52.

Power of Trustees — Repairs — Maintenance — Petition by the Executors and Trustees of a Will for the Opinion of the Court.] — The testator devised and bequeathed his real and personal property to the petitioners upon trust during the life of his widow, "to pay to her the rents to be received from the following houses," and the "annual income to be obtained from the sum of £2000 Victorian Government Debentures." He directed the trustees to invest £300 in Victorian Government Debentures, and pay the annual income to his brother for life, and declared it to be his will that the widow, when in receipt of the above-mentioned income, should maintain and educate his infant son, and that after her death or second marriage, which was to determine her interest, the trustees should pay £150 for the maintenance, &c., of such son. The property consisted of £5000 personalty, and the houses, which produced an annual rent of £150. Held that the trustees were bound to keep the houses in tenantable repair, but not to improve; that the expenses of repairs, rates, and expenses of collection, should be paid out of the rents payable to the widow; that the trustees might insure the property, the costs coming out of the corpus of the estate; that the trustees were not, during the widow's life, to make an allowance for the son's maintenance, and that interest on the £300 and £2000 ought to be paid at the expiration of a year from the testator's death. In re Folk's Will, 6 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 171.

Power to Build — Building Leases — Testator's Intention.]—A testator devised lands to trustees, and a sum of money upon trust to expend it, or so much as should be sufficient, in building four dwelling-houses with out-offices, on the land, or, if four buildings of a suitable character could not be well built, a smaller number; and to invest any surplus upon certain trusts; and, until sale, upon trust to demise. On petition by the trustees for authority to grant building leases, Held that, to grant such a power would be in fact to overrule the testator's intention. In re Hall, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 156.

Power to Repair—Whether it includes Improvements.]—A testator left by will his real and personal property to trustees upon certain trusts and the will contained a clause empowering them to repair, and for that purpose to employ a greater amount of rents or interest in their hands on account of the beneficiary whose land "shall be sought to be repaired and improved," and to charge the income of the beneficiary with principal and interest of a sum raised upon mortgage for that purpose. The testator intended to rebuild on certain land, and had begun rebuilding, but the trustees rebuilt partly on his plans, partly on plans of their own, and for that purpose did not apply the rents or borrow on mortgage, but advanced money of their own Held by the Full Court, reversing Molesworth, J., that the power must be construed as a power to "repair" and to "improve," and that the trustees were entitled to claim out of subsequent rents a reimbursement of moneys so expended; but that as they had advanced moneys of their own, and had not followed the testator's directions, they were not entitled to interest on moneys of their own so advanced. Sichel v. O'Shanassy, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 208.

Management and Disposition of Property.]—A testator devised all his property, real and personal, to trustees upon trust for his wife until children attained age of 18 and during widowhood, and afterwards upon trust for children if more than one, or to one, for life, with remainder to his sons successively in tail male, remainder to daughters; remainders over. One child survived. The trustees under a power of leasing in the will, leased the real estate, reserving rent and a royalty for gold raised by lessees, and maintained infant and invested surplus. Infant attained age, and applied for conveyance of realty and transfer of investment. Petition for advice of Court under Sec. 61 of "Stat. of Trusts." Held that trustees had no duty to perform as to land except to guard it from waste, especially by mining; and that, in event of infant becoming entitled to possession, might be bound to provide against misapplication of proceeds; and that the trustees might have some liability to the Crown or the remaindermen in regard to the gold raised represented by the investment of the proceeds of the royalty which might make it unsafe for them to pay it to the infant. In re Durbridge, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 21.

Direction to Sell whether it Authorises a Mortgage.]—A direction to sell does not warrant trustees in mortgaging a part of the realty to pay a debt to a building society due on another part, though periodical payments to the society were more onerous than the interest on the mortgage, and though there was an unexpected advantage in selling the latter part piecemeal and at different times; the trustees should have sold the property subject to the building society's claim. Snaith v. Dove, 4 A.J.R., 140.

Power of Sale—Determination of.]—A mortgage by trustees of property, over which they have a power of sale, does not determine that power. Ibid.

Powers of Sale—Under Direction of the Court.]—Upon motion after decree in a suit for execution of the trusts of a will, and for administration, the Court refused to order a sale of the real estate by the executors "under the direction of the Court" unless after hearing on further directions; but gave them liberty, notwithstanding the decree, to sell as under the will. There is a rule that, after institution of a suit, the hands of trustees are stayed in executing the trusts. Wisemon v. Kildahl, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 78, 81; 1 A.L.T., 189.

Power of Sale.]—Semble, per Molesworth, J., that trustees who had power to sell land, either altogether or in parcels, would be justified in selling it in small lots, laying out streets over which proprietors would have rights-of-way necessarily resulting in the dedication of the land to the public. In re Bullen, 4 A.L.T., 63.

Trustees with Powers of Leasing only.]—Trustees with powers of leasing only have not power to charge the land for accomplishing improvements required by local authorities. In re Fennessy, 5 A.J.R., 170.

Power to Lease.]—The proper duty of trustees having powers to lease is to execute the power, and not to enter into a contract to execute it. In re Wills, 6 V.L.R (E.,) 99; 1 A.L.T., 195.

Confirmation of Agreement in Excess of Powers.]—An agreement for partition entered into by trustees without power to partition, and partly acted upon by conveyance, was confirmed at the hearing, without a reference, it appearing from the evidence that confirmation of the agreement would be beneficial to infant cestuis que trustant. Thomson v. Cunninghame, 3 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 91.

Partition of Estate.]—A testator, S., by will, left his property to trustees to divide among his children, either by way of partition, or sale and division of proceeds, or partly in one way, partly in the other. Two children were entitled to their shares, having attained majority. The estate consisted of personal property and station property, and the trustees, thinking it not advisable to sell the station, had it valued, and so ascertained the shares. One of the children wished for his share, and the personalty was sufficient to pay the shares of both, but the other of the adult children did not wish the share to be so ascertained. Held, upon petition for advice, that the trustees had power to ascertain and set apart the shares in the way they proposed to do. In re the Will of Simson, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 261; 1 A.L.T., 65.

Discretion of Trustes—Abuse of Discretion—Motion for a Receiver.]—A farm was conveyed to defendant in trust for P. during her life, and after her death in trust for her children. At P.'s death her husband was living on the farm, and refusing to take a lease of it, or to leave, was ejected by the defendant. The defendant sold the crops, as the plaintiffs alleged, at an undervalue. The children (plaintiffs) brought a suit to remove defendant from the trust. On motion for appointment of a receiver, Held that, although the defendant might have been guilty of indiscretion, and might be liable for the abuse of discretion, no serious imputation could be cast upon his motives, and motion for receiver dismissed. Phelan v. Eaton, 3 V.R. (E.,) 13; 3 A.J.R., 6.

Power of Court over when not Acting Judiciously.]—There is no principle of equity by which trustees for creditors fairly making a bargain for the adjustment of complicated rights representing their cestuisque trustent, and acting for them as they would for themselves, are to have their bargains defeated because the person who assigned to them fraudulently induces another party to the bargain to enter into it. Evans v. Guthridge, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 2, 35.

E. M. and L., trading under the style of E. M. and Co., entered into a Government contract. In this partnership L. was in fact acting as trustee for R. G., N. G. and J. W., and by the partnership deed it was arranged that E. and M. should each receive one-tenth of the profits made in the contract, and L., as such trustee, eight-tenths without any beneficial share himself. By indenture, February, 1860, R. G., N. G. and J. W. assigned to H., W. and C. their joint and separate estate upon trust for creditors. By indenture, March, 1860, the partnership between E. M. and L. was dissolved, and E and M. assigned all their interest to W. W., and in consideration of such assignment L. was to give to E. and M. bonds to secure certain monthly payments, and after the completion of the contract a sum of money equal to one-tenth of the entire net profits of the contract By indenture, July, 1861, it was witnessed that L. should not take part in a partnership of W. W. and L., but that J. W. should act in his place, and that J. W. should give the last mentioned bonds to E. and M. The bonds given by L. were delivered up to E. and M. and cancelled. E. and M. instituted a suit against N. G., R. G., J. W., H. W. and C., W. & L. charging that the execution of the deed of March, 1860, was obtained by the fraudulent misrepresentations of N. G. and R. G., and seeking to have the assignment of plaintiffs' interest to W. W. set aside. An ex parte injunction was obtained, restraining all the defendants from receiving from Government any more moneys payable under the contract. On motion after answer of H. W. and C. only to set aside injunction, Held that even if the representations as alleged by N. G. and R. G. were fraudulent, it would not afford a ground for an injunction against H. W. and C., the trustees, neither directly nor indirectly chargeable with such fraudulent misrepresentations; injunction dissolved. Ibid.

Interference of Court with Discretion of Trustees.]—A testator, by will, left his real and personal property to his wife and A. as trustees, upon certain trusts, with a power to them or the survivor, or other, the trustees or trustee for the time being, at any time to sell at their discretion the whole or part of the real estate. The wife died. A suit was brought by the beneficiaries against A., seeking to remove him from his trusteeship, and seeking an injunction against a sale contemplated by A. On motion for injunction, based on the ground that the land would fetch a higher price if the sale were postponed, Held that the Court would not interfere with A.'s discretion. Motion refused. James v. Evans, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 132.

Discretion of Trustees—Interference of Court—Administration Suit.]—Where a testator in his will gives very large discretionary powers to trustees, and no charges of misconduct are brought, the Court is loth to interfere with their discretion; but the will not being very distinct, in part as to the directions for management, especially as to raising funds to pay debts, a decree for administration and accounts was made in a suit for administration, subject to, and not interfering with, discretionary powers of the trustees. Johnson v. Nicholas, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 78; 5 A.L.T., 51.

Contract by Absent Trustee—Discretion of New Trustee.]—Where, after entering into a contract to grant a ease of trust property, one of the trustees left the Colony, the Court, in appointing a new trustee in his place, would not sanction the contract, but left it to the discretion of the new trustee as to whether the lease was or was not to be granted. In re Wills, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 99; 1 A.L.T., 195.

Allowance of Outlay and Payments by Trustees—Rebuilding Dilapidated Premises.]—A testator left certain property (A) to trustees upon trust to receive the rents and profits during the infancy of his son, and upon trust for the son when he came of age. This property (A) was upon lease at the date of the testator's death; the lease expired shortly after his death, and the tenant was desirous of taking a new lease from the trustees, who had power to lease, and of altering the premises by pulling down the dilapidated buildings, and rebuilding. This was done partly at the expense of the tenant, who paid a higher rent, and partly at the expense of the trustees. Held that the trustees were warranted in making this arrangement and should be allowed for the outlay actually made. Westwood v. Kidney, 5 A.J.R., 25.

Powers of Trustees.]—A testator by will bequeathed live stock and consumable stores in and about his house. and a carriage and furniture to executors upon trust for an infant if he should attain the age of 21 years. The infant was 18 at the time of the death of the testator. On petition for advice, under Sec. 61, Held that the trustees and executors should sell the furniture and carriage and household effects, keeping separate accounts of the proceeds thereof, and invest the proceeds. Also, that the petitioners should sell the live stock and all consumable stores and invest the proceeds. In the will of George Rolfe, 3 V.R. (E.,) 29; 3 A.J.R., 10.

In Dealings with Cestuique Trust.]—In the case of adult cestuisque trustent, equity will sanction dealings between themselves and their trustees in certain cases, but not so in the case of infants, where the interest of the guardian. next friend, or trustee is clearly in conflict with his duty. It will not be permitted that a person occupying a fiduciary relation of any nature whatsoever towards an infant shall place himself, or be placed, in a position in which his interest can possibly conflict with his duty. Larnach v. Alleyne, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 342, 361, 362.

Power of Next Friend and Guardian ad litem to Purchase Trust Estate.]—Of all the persons occupying a fiduciary position, who are not generally permitted to become purchasers, at least without leave, there is none who should be so rigidly excluded as the next friend or guadian ad litem, and against whose dealings the objections seem to be so insuperable. Larnach v. Alleyne, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 342, 365.

Power of Next Friend to Purchase Trust Estate.]—In a suit in the Supreme Court of New South Wales by infant cestuisque trustent by A., their next friend, against their trustees, a decree was made for sale of the trust property, and at the sale the property was purchased by A. without the previous sanction of the Court. On bill in the Supreme Court of Victoria by the infants, praying that the sale might be declared fraudulent and void as against them, and that A. might account with wilful default for all moneys received for a subsequent sale by him of the property, Held, per Chapman, J., that the Court had jurisdiction to deal with the parties to the suit as well as the subject matter thereof, notwithstanding the decree of the Court of New South Wales; that, even if full value were given, and there were no actual fraud, the sale was constructively fraudulent and void, and decree made as prayed, with costs up to the hearing, and with a direction that the account should be taken with annual rests, but without prejudice to the question of whether compound interest would ultimately be allowed. Larnach v. Alleyne, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 342, 360, 362, 371.

On appeal, Held, per Stawell, C. J., and Williams, J., that the defendant was not guilty of any moral turpitude, but that he acted in violation of the principle of equity that no person charged with the conduct of a suit ought, without the permission of the Court. to place himself in a position which might be antagonistic to the interests of those for whom the suit was instituted: that his interest as a purchaser conflicted with his duty as promoter of these proceedings, and it was comparatively immaterial whether or not a fair value was given for the property or whether or not all the transactions were properly and honestly conducted; that as a fair value was given, no benefit would accrue to the infants by setting the sale aside: that the infants were entitled to an account of all profits, but the purchaser was not to be treated as a trespasser and liable to account with wilful default.

Per Molesworth, J., that a sale such as this was a violation of the principle that the same person cannot be buyer and seller as trustee, and was properly set aside; that the decree should be varied so far as it directed the defendant to be charged with moneys he might have received but for wilful default, but should in other respects be affirmed. Larnach v. Alleyne, 2 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 39, 46, 55, 63.

Release Obtained from Cestuique Trust on the Day of His Attaining Majority—Set Aside.]—A testator left certain property to trustees upon trust to receive the rents and profits during A.'s minority, and upon trust for him absolutely. The trustees spent money on this property, and kept an account of their disbursements and receipts, charging a commission of 10 per cent. on the latter (this was before the Act No. 427). This account did not treat A. as entitled to the rents during his minority except as a residuary legatee. On the day A. arrived at his majority, they tendered to him a deed to execute, reciting the material part of the will and the improvements on the property, by which deed they conveyed the property to him, and he released them from all liability, declaring his consent to the accounts furnished by the trustees, and indemnifying them against the claims of others. Held that this deed should not stand in the way of A's rights to the rents accruing during his minority, and it was set aside as void, with costs as against the trustees. Westwood v. Kidney, 5 A.J.R., 25.

Purchasing from Cestuique Trust—Delay—Costs of Suit to Set Aside.]—Two cestuisque trustent, ill-educated young men, and engaged in employments out of town, shortly after attaining their majority, executed a deed 31st August, 1869, without legal advice, and in ignorance of the contents and value of the land, by which deed all their interest was assigned to the trustee as in consideration of his application of the rents in their maintenance, &c., and reciting that the trustee had duly accounted to them. A female cestuique trust, who had just attained her majority, joined in the deed. On 10th September, 1869, the plaintiffs conveyed the property to one D., as in consideration of a sum of £300, and D. executed a declaration of trust in favour of the trustee. The trustee afterwards dealt with the land as his own. On a suit in 1882, by the three cestuisque trustent to set aside the sale, Held that the consideration in the deed of September, 1869, was greatly under the value of the property, and though attributable to a great extent to the carelessness of A. and B., was also brought about by the fraud of the trustee; that in spite of the delay (12 years) the plaintiffs were entitled to set it aside, but plaintiffs' costs refused on the ground of delay. Bennett v. Tucker, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 20; 3 A.L.T., 108.

Release to Trustee—Bargain made Before Infant Came of Age, though Actually Executed Two Days After He Came of Age.]—O'Leary v. Mahoney, ante column 559.

Duties of Trustees in Relation to Maintenance—Maintenance not to be Applied to Payment of Past Debts.]—In pursuance of a decree made in this suit, the Master reported that a sum of £100 should be allowed and paid to the mother of infant children for their maintenance, the decree only referring it to the Master to enquire what sum should be allowed for maintenance. A decree, based upon that report, directed the trustees to provide the children with maintenance, pursuant to the directions contained in the will. The trustees at first left it to the mother to apply the money, but, finding she was indebted, subsequently determined to pay for the maintenance themselves. They did not devise a proper scheme, providing how much should be allowed for board and lodging, and how much for clothing, &c., but allowed the mother to bargain for board, and as for clothing, directed her to apply to them when anything was required. The mother, in October, 1871, had exhausted the maintenance for the whole year. On motion for an order, directing the trustees to pay the maintenance to the mother, or to order them to provide for maintenance, the Court refused to make an order in the first alternative, but made an order in the second. Green v. Sutherland, 3 A.J.R., 3.

Funds under Direction of Court—Infant—Past Maintenance—Practice.]—An infant was entitled to a share of a fund partly in the hands of trustees under the direction of the Court in a suit S. v. K. Held that the trustees could not out of such a fund pay any sum for past maintenance of the infant without the direction of the Court, and that such direction could only be obtained by a summary order in the suit of S. v. K., or by a supplemental suit for the administration of the infant's estate, but not by a suit by persons maintaining the infant against the trustees alone. Mitchell v. Tuckett, 5 V.L.R (E.,) 31.

Infant—Maintenance—Interference by Court with Discretion of Trustees.]—Where a testator, by will, gave his trustees a discretion as to the amount of maintenance to be allowed to an infant child, the Court refused to interfere or fix a proper sum. Grant v. Grant, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 314.

The Court will not upon motion, when it is not administering the estate, interfere with the discretion of trustees as to the amount of maintenance vested in them by the will, even although the mother is in poor circumstances and there is a posthumous child unprovided for. In the will of M'Lean, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 319.

Trust for Maintenance and Advancement—Power of Trustees.]—A will contained a gift of certain rents upon trust for the widow, directing her to maintain the children, and also a power of advancement during minority. Held, in the absence of special evidence, that an advancement by the trustees of a sum of £100 out of one daughter's share for a wedding outfit was not warranted by the terms of the will. Sichel v. O'Shanassy, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 208.

Power to Contribute to Charitable Institutions.]—A testator, a partner in mines, was in the habit of contributing with his partners to local charities. After his death, leaving a large fortune, the Court directed the trustees to be empowered to join the partners in proportionate contributions to such institutions. Grant v. Grant, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 314; 1 A.L.T., 110.

Petition under Sec. 94 of Act No. 213.]—A mere Trustee cannot be a petitioner, under Sec. 94 of Act No. 213, for the sale of settled estates. In re Ellis' Settled Estates, ante column 1310.

Distress for Rent.]—It is not necessary that all of several trustees should join in signing a distress warrant for non-payment of rent. Moore v. Lee, 2 V.R. (L.,) 4; 2 A.J.R., 16.

Right to Commission.]—A trustee will not be allowed commission on investments made by him, and for collecting interest, in addition to commission on the capital. Sawyers v. Kyte, 4 A.J.R., 144.

See also cases under EXECUTOR AND ADMINISTRATOR, ante columns 438-446.

Commission Given by Will—Allowed to Substituted Trustees.]—Green v. Nicholson, 6 W.W. & A'B (E.,) 147, post under APPOINTMENT OF TRUSTEES—In other cases.

IV. Liability of Trustees.

Breach of Trust—What amounts to.]—M. settled land upon trustees in trust for an infant in consideration of a sum of £220, the deed containing powers of sale and of mortgage. The trustees sold the land to the infant's father shortly afterwards for £220, and the father, within a fortnight after his purchase, mortgaged it for £800, the money being advanced in instalments as buildings were erected. Held that there was nothing wrong in the trustees selling to the father if for fair value, and that as what had just been given would appear to be fair value, the transaction should not be disturbed. O'Brien v. Keenan, 5 A.J.R., 99.

Wilful Default—Improper Investments—Loan on Personal Security.]—W., by her will, gave all her real and personal estate to trustees (K., G., and W.) upon trust for sale and conversion and investment "in Government or real securities in the colony of Victoria, or in or upon shares, stocks, or securities of any company incorporated by Royal Charter, Act of Parliament, or of the Colonial Legislature, paying a dividend." Two of the three trustees (K. and G.) advanced £1100 to B. upou promissory note, K. representing to G. that the testatrix had promised to do so. K. purchased Collingwood gas shares, and shares in a distillery and a mining company. K., G., and W. were appointed executors of the will. On a bill against the trustees and executors of the will for administration and accounts, Held that the loan on promissory note to B., and the investment in the distillery and mining company, were all misinvestments, for which the trustees were liable, and that a misapplication of funds does not warrant a decree for account with wilful default. Sawyers v. Kyte, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 61, 69, 70.

Continuance of Squatting Property in Opposition to Terms of Will—Successful Adventure—Payment to Tenant for Life of all the Income.]—Waddell v. Patterson, ante columns 1376, 1377.

For Unauthorised Expenditure—Wilful Default—Lease to a Co-trustee.]—F. owned a hotel which he let at a rent of £240 per year. After F.'s death the trustees under his will reduced the rent to £200 and built a bar at a cost of £215; this bar proved to be an encroachment on the street, and the trustees pulled down the old building and rebuilt at a cost of £1300. During the time of rebuilding the premises were unproductive, and afterwards they let the hotel to one of themselves at rents of £150 and £120 a year. Held that as against the tenant for life the trustees were not entitled to credit for sums expended in building the bar, in pulling down and rebuilding the hotel; that the trustees were liable with wilful default for fair rents accruing due during the time of rebuilding and the tenancy of the trustee, but were in the accounts not to be charged with the improved rent owing to the rebuilding. Davis v. Kelleher, 1 V.R. (E.,) 175; 1 A.J.R. 149.

Wilful Default—Liability for Acts of Co-trustee.]—A testator devised and bequeathed all his real and personal property to his wife, O., and X. as trustees upon certain trusts to carry on the business of farming until one of his sons should attain his majority. He gave his trustees power to lease his property until his said son attained his majority. He directed that his wife should live on one of the farms until second marriage, that the rents and the income of investments should be paid for the maintenance and education of his children, and for paying his wife £500 on her second marriage. X. disclaimed the trusts of the will but O. and the widow acted. After the testator's death his widow married M. and she and M. lived on the farm above-mentioned, educated the children, managed the property without O.'s interference, and O. and the widow leased the said farm to M. at a rental of £308 per annum, which sum was allowed for maintainence of the children. On a bill by the children seeking administration and accounts, Held per Molesworth, J., that as to account for wilful default some one act of wilful default producing loss must be proved after being charged, and then the general inquiry is directed; that the lease to M. was void and should be disregarded in the accounts: that O. and X. were liable to an account for the value of the land and of all proceeds from it, and since the bill charged that the widow and her husband were allowed to keep possession of the farm stock and implements, and that the stock had greatly decreased in value and number, that such account should be taken on the basis of wilful default. Held on appeal that it appeared that the trustees had actually received all the property and that such receipt was inconsistent with wilful default in not receiving. Decree varied by striking out the words making the trustees liable as for wilful default and by inserting words authorising the Master in taking accounts as to maintenance &c., to allow the amount or value of money employed or property expended or employed or a reasonable estimate of what was proper to be allowed for such maintenance. Hartigan v. O'Shanassy, 3 A.J.R., 5, 15.

Liability—Wilful Default—Abandonment of Distress.]—See Officer v. Haynes, ante column 381.

For Acts of Co-trustee.]—An executor obtained the signature of his co-executor to cheques on their joint account as executors, by representing to him that he was going to invest the money at higher interest than the bank allowed; and having obtained the assets of the testator by means of such cheques misappropriated them. Held that the co-executor was liable for such misappropriation. Jones v. Taylor, 2 V.R. (E.,) 15.

Voluntary Settlement by an Insolvent—Subsequent Mortgage—Receipt of Mortgage Moneys by the Trustees.]—K., by indenture 19th June, 1871, settled lands upon his wife and children and appointed S. and T. trustees. In July, 1872, a sum of £1000 was raised on mortgage of part of lands in settlement, mortgage being signed by K. alone; T. & S. received this sum and applied it under K.'s directions in the purchase of a part interest in a certain ship. On 26th September, 1873, K.'s estate was sequestrated, and plaintiff appointed assignee. Held that trustees were not personally liable for what they had received of mortgage money. Halfey v. Tait, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 8.

Constructive Trustee—Receipt of Trust Moneys with Notice—Investment in Partnership Business—Accounts of Profits—Rate of Interest—Trustee Encroaching on Corpus to meet Necessities of a Lunatic Feme Sole.]—Where a sole surviving trustee sues a member of a firm who had received trust moneys from a deceased co-trustee with notice of trust, and invested them in firm's business, the plaintiff has sufficient equity to sue such member solely as a constructive trustee, and the defendant is responsible for profits made in trade arising from use of such moneys, or at adversary's option to pay interest. Semble a higher rate of interest than 8 or 10 per cent. should be charged, but question of higher rate not to be entertained in a suit to which beneficiary is not a party. A constructive trustee and a trustee are neither of them liable for encroaching upon corpus of fund of a lunatic feme sole to meet her necessities. Mackay v. Caughey, 1 V.L.R. (Eq.,) 56.

Barrister or Solicitor Trustee—Custody of Title Deeds—Negligence of Trustee.]—Per Molesworth, J., that generally a barrister or solicitor appointed a trustee incurs no increased liability from his presumed knowledge of the law, and his professional liabilities should be confined to cases where he receives professional emolument or purports to act professionally. A marriage settlement was executed on marriage of defendants H.B. and M.B. on 7th June, 1867—defendants J.B. and M. being appointed trustees. The defendant H.B. was allowed to have custody of title deeds, and the settlement was not registered. H.B. concealed settlement, and mortgaged some of the property comprised in the settlement (St. Kilda property), and in September 1870, conveyed equity of redemption to J.B. for £200. The whole of the St. Kilda property was lost to the estate. M. never executed deed or took part in the trusts. J.B. had no notice of the mortgages by H.B. until April, 1870. Held per Molesworth J., that J.B. was not liable to make good loss to estate, the portion received by H.B., nor for amount of four mortgages, but he was liable since he got notice of mortgages for the £200, or for the true value of the estate subject to the mortgages. Per Full Court, that owing to his negligence in not having deed registered and seeing to proper custody of title deeds, J.B. was liable for the whole value of the St. Kilda property. The marriage settlement recited that O. was entitled to the distributive share in a deceased relative's estate, which was settled with the other property on trusts of settlement. M., who was also administrator of the deceased relative's estate, paid this to H.B. with O.'s consent. Held, per Molesworth J., and the Full Court, that J.B. was not liable to make this share good to the estate; that J.B. was not bound to serve defendant with a specific caution as the holder of part of the trust property. Bennett v. Bennett, 1 V.L.R. (E.) 280.

Where Forbearance, Acquiescence, and Laches of Cestui que Trust does not Relieve from Liability.]—G.G. died November, 1854, intestate, leaving his only brother, F.G., his heir-at-law. In February, 1855, F.G. took out administration. R.S. (the plaintiff), a sister of deceased, for a long time forebore to claim her share in the intestate's personalty, and expressed her intention not to claim it, and R.S. also acquiesced in the distribution of the property by F.G., whereby she was excluded from participation. F.G. died in 1863, leaving a widow and infant child. In May, 1864, R.S. instituted a suit against the widow, who administered to her husband, and the heir-at-law of F.G., for an account of the personal estate of G.G. Held that plaintiff's forbearance from enforcing her right to her share, or her expressed intention not to claim it. did not operate as a release; that her delay and acquiescence in the previous distribution did not bar her claim; but that her laches disentitled her to interest before the date of her application for an adjustment of accounts prior to the suit. Shaw v. Gorman, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.) 18.

Liability to Account—Creditor's Deed—7 Vict. No. 19, Sec. 9—Delay.]—In 1864 A. assigned his estate to trustees in trust for creditors, under which creditors were paid 15s. 6d. in the £. In 1878, after having begun summary proceedings under 7 Vict., No. 19, against the trustees, and obtained some relief, he abandoned those proceedings, and then brought a bill against the trustees for an account, without praying for payment. Held that his long delay was a bar to his right, and that though the summary proceedings under 7 Vict., No. 19, did not oust the jurisdiction of the Court, yet plaintiff must show sufficient ground for abandoning those proceedings before seeking aid of Court. Bill dismissed. Arthur v. Moore, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 207; 1 A.L.T. 29.

Liability to Account on Determination of Trust—Acquiescence by Cestuis que Trustent.]—A plaintiff, having a right to account for rents, after a trust of the rents has ceased, and doing nothing for six years, is bound by acquiescence. Cestuis que trustent by deed, August, 1869, released a trustee from liability to account for previous rents, and conveyed the estate in the land to the trustee. In a suit in 1882, in which it was declared that they were entitled to set aside conveyance to the trustee, Held that they were debarred by their acquiescence for six years after the suit from seeking an account of previous rents, but an account of rents since August, 1869, directed. Bennett v. Tucker, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 20; 3 A.L.T., 108.

Acting upon Erroneous View of a Will.]—Where trustees had spent more money in maintenance than the Master had reported as permissible, Held that they ought not to be indemnified because acting upon an erroneous view of the construction of the will. Osborne v. Osborne, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 132.

Liability for not Investing.]—See post under sub-heading INVESTMENT.

V. Appointment of Trustees.

Who may be Appointed—Near Relative of Beneficiary.]—Although the Court is generally averse to appoint as trustees near relatives of persons interested under the trusts, yet such appointments are sometimes necessary, and will be made by the Court. Waddell v. Patterson, 2 W.W. & a'B. (E.,) 36.

Who may be Appointed—Persons out of Jurisdiction.]—The Court is loth to appoint as new trustees persons resident out of the jurisdiction. In re Mitchell's Trust Estate, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 42.

New Trustees—Breach of Trust by Former Trustee.]—Where a settlement contained a power in the trustee appointed to appoint a person or persons to be a new trustee or trustees, and the last trustee committed a breach of trust, and made away with a portion of the estate, the Court after his death, appointed two new trustees, and vested the estate in them, without reference to such breach of trust. In re Fisher, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 73.

Charitable Trust — Diminishing Number of Trustees.]—By indenture certain land was vested in thirteen trustees, upon trust to permit a chapel, &c., to be built thereon. Five of the trustees were dead, two were out of jurisdiction, and three had ceased to be members of the religious denomination, to which the land belonged. Petition by the three remaining trustees for appointment of new trustees seeking to diminish the original number. Order made for appointment, but Court refused to diminish the number fixed by the indenture. Ex parte Scott, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 58.

Where trustees named in a will declined to act, the superintendent and a committeeman of an Orphan Asylum in which the beneficiaries were maintained, were appointed new trustees in their stead. In the Will of Mitchell, 3 A.J.R., 43.

In Place of Retiring Executors—Gift to Charitable Institution.]—On petition under Act No. 234, M. and S. appointed by will executors, but not trustees, and directed to pay income of debentures to a charitable institution, were discharged from the trust, and the chairman and treasurer of the institution appointed trustees, such trustees being by the order directed to execute and deposit a declaration of trust as to the debentures. In re the Will of Sonnenschein, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 276.

Retirement of Old Trustees wishing to be Relieved—Infant Trustee.]—A will appointed A. and B., an infant, trustees. A. proved the will, leave being reserved to B. A. and B. then sought to be discharged, and a petition was presented for the purpose, and for appointment of new trustees. A. was allowed to retire on ground of ill-health, and B. on ground of infancy. Order made appointing two new trustees without prejudice to B.'s restoration on coming of age. In re Will of Phillips, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 274.

Appointment by Executor of Last Acting Trustee—Discretion—Interference by Court.]—A., by will, appointed B. and C. executors and trustees, with a power for trustees or the executor of survivor to appoint new trustees, augmenting or decreasing their number. B. predeceased A. C. acted in trusts and died, by his will devising trust estates to D. and E., whom he made trustees and executors. D. proved, but E. did not, though leave was reserved to him. Suit by one beneficiary against D. and other beneficiaries to remove D., and for appointment of new trustees and administration. Held that as D. had not been guilty of any misconduct, the Court would not interfere with C.'s appointment of him as trustee, except by referring to the Master for approbation. [Note.—This reference does not appear in the judgment, but was contained in the directions.] Dredye v. Matheson, 5 V.L.R., (E.,) 266; 1 A.L.T., 73.

Trustees Declining to Act.]—Petition for appointment of trustees in place of two appointed by the will, who declined to act. Order made appointing new trustees to be trustees not only as regarded the trusts of the will, but also as regarded infant heir. The right to sue for any chose in action, subject to trusts of will, to be vested in the new trustees, so far as regarded any chose in action resulting from testator's real estate. In the Will of Mitchell, 3 A.J.R., 43.

"Statute of Trusts 1864" (No. 234,) Secs. 36, 37—Trustee Insolvent and out of Jurisdiction—Service.]—One of three trustees appointed by a will had become insolvent and had gone abroad, it not being known where. On petition for new trustee, Held that a trustee should not be removed without notice being served upon him, unless it was impossible to find him, and the affidavits not stating that anything like a diligent inquiry had been made to discover him, petition refused. In the Will of Alex. M'Bean, 5 A.J.R., 64.

New Trustees—Trustee Resident out of Jurisdiction—Service.]—Where a trustee is resident out of the jurisdiction, and it is desired to appoint a new trustee in his place, the applicant should serve him, if practicable, with notice or account; or, in case of not being able to do so, communication by letter is sufficient. In re Ayres' Trusts, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 220.

Construction of Power of Appointment.]—B. purchased land of C., and B., by his will, devised all his real estate to L. and S. on certain trusts therein declared, and directed "that in case any or either of them, the said trustee or trustees," or any future "trustees or trustee," should die, or wish to be discharged, or neglect or refuse to act, it should be lawful for the survivor and survivors of them, and the heirs, &c., "of such survivor" from time to time to appoint "any other person or persons to be a trustee or trustees in the place or stead of the trustees so dying or desiring to be discharged," &c., and to convey the estate, which "should then be vested in the trustee or trustees so dying," &c., so that it might be "effectually vested in the surviving trustee or trustees" upon the subsisting trusts. In a suit by the then trustees of B.'s will against the representatives of a second purchaser from P. to set aside the second sale by C. as fraudulent and void, Held that an appointment of two new trustees by the two original trustees (L. and S.) jointly was not a due exercise of the power of appointment in B.'s will, on the principle that, looking at the terms of the power, the two trustees cannot retire together, and that the new appointment must be done by steps; in other words, that there must be two successive appointments. Dalton v. Plevins, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 177, 185.

Under Management of the Court.]—Where the Court has taken the management of a testator's property into its hands, a power in the will to appoint new trustees cannot properly be exercised without its sanction. Mortimer v. Braithwaite, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 139.

Absence of Trustee — Appointment of New Trustee.]—The term "incapable" in the English language does not mean a voluntary inability to act but an involuntary one. Where, therefore, during the absence of a trustee in England his co-trustees appointed a new trustee, and contracted to sell the trust property, Held that the absent trustee was still a trustee; that the appointment of the new trustee was bad; and that the contract for sale was void. Iffla v. Beaney, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 110, 116, 117.

New Trustee appointed in Excess of Power.]—A settlement contained a power of sale by trustees or the trustee for the time being, with the consent in writing of the persons for the time beneficially interested; and a power to appoint a new trustee, if either of the trustees should die or become incapable, or be unwilling to act. One of the trustees being absent in England, an instrument was executed which recited that he was incapable to act, and appointed a new trustee. A contract was made by the trustees for a sale of the property, with the consent of the person beneficially interested. The purchaser having refused to complete, the trustees brought a suit for specific performance. Held that the appointment of the new trustee was bad; that the absent trustee had a duty to exercise an independent discretion as trustee, and that he was not bound by the contract made on speculation of what he would do afterwards; that the sale was made by a person who had no right to sell; and that the whole contract was void. Ibid.

Devise of Estates vested in Testator as Trustee —Whether Devisees Trustees.]—A. left by will all his property to B. under an arrangement that B. should hold it upon trust for A.'s widow and children. B. executed a declaration of trust declaring that he held the property upon trust to pay widow "£100 per annum," and remainder in trust for A.'s children. B. died, leaving his property to X. and Y., devising estates vested in him as trustee to X. and Y. subject to trusts affecting same. Held that X. and Y. were not the persons to carry out execution of the trusts, and reference to Master directed to approve of fit persons to act as trustees. M'Kinnon v. M'Innes, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 253.

Power to Appoint—Persons Resident out of Jurisdiction—Commission.]—A testator appointed three persons resident in Australia as trustees of his Australian property, and three persons resident in England as trustees of his English property: the will contained a power for the widow to appoint new trustees. One of the Australian trustees died, and the widow appointed two of the English trustees in his place. A suit was instituted to administer the trusts of the will. Upon further directions, Held that the appointment though opposed to the testator's intentions was valid, as the power was unfettered, and the two substituted trustees were allowed the commission by the will directed to be allowed to Australian trustees as from the date of appointment. Green v. Nicholson, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 147.

Report of Master as to Proper Persons.]—Where a settlement contained a power for trustees for the time being to appoint new trustees subject to the consent of the tenants for life, and by reason of the disagreement of the tenants for life no appointment could be made, the Court referred it to the Master to approve of and report as to proper persons to be new trustees. In re Murphy's Trusts, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 112.

VI. Vesting Orders.

Vesting Estate in New Trustee in Absence of Old Trustee.]—A deed contained a provision for appointment of a new trustee in the event of any one of the trustees "refusing or declining to act, or going more than ten miles from Kyneton." On an application under the "Trustee Act," Sec. 10. the Court would not make a vesting order without proof that the old trustee was not in one of the neighbouring colonies, and was not likely soon to return to this colony; but offered to refer it to the Master to report whether the new trustee had been properly appointed, and whether there were any and what difficulties in obtaining the execution of the conveyance of the trust property by the old trustee. Per Molesworth, J.—"I think, if he (the trustee) is in England or anywhere that would occasion great delay and trouble in obtaining a conveyance from him, I should make a vesting order; but if he is in one of the adjoining colonies, or if he is likely soon to return to this colony, I do not think I should make a vesting order." In re Lewis, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 118.

[Note.—Sec. 10 of the "Trustee Act," 19 Vict., No. 20, corresponds with Sec. 12 of Act No. 234.]

"Trustee Act" 13 & 14 Vict., Cap. 60—"Trustee Extension Act," Sec. 1—"Trustee out of Jurisdiction."]—The interpretation clause of the "Trustee Act" (13 & 14 Vict., c. 60), providing that "the word 'trust' shall not mean the duties incident to an estate conveyed by way of mortgage" does not override the 1st Section of the "Trustee Extension Act" (15 & 16 Vict., c. 55), which expressly says that every party to a cause shall be within the Act, no matter what his position may be. Where under a decree a sale of land vested in trustees out of the jurisdiction is made, not in execution of the trusts, but in some respects independent of them, a vesting order under the "Trustee Act" is rightly made to vest the land directly in the purchasers, without passing it through a trustee within the jurisdiction. Williamson v. Courtney, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 79.

[Note.—The interpretation clause in 13 & 14 Vict., c. 60, corresponds with Sec. 3 of Act No. 234, and Sec. 1 of 15 & 16 Vict., c. 55, corresponds with Sec. 31 of the Act No. 234.]

"Trustee Act 1856" 19 Vict., No. 20—13 & 14 Vict., Cap. 60, Sec. 9—Loss of Title Deeds.]—The Court will not make a vesting order under the "Trustee Act" (19 Vict., No. 20,) i.e., Sec. 9 of 13 & 14 Vict., c. 60, merely by way of getting over a difficulty arising from loss of title deeds. In re Weston, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 55.

[Note.—Sec. 11 of Act 234 is the corresponding section.]

Discharge of Contingent Interests under "Trustees Act 1856," Secs. 16, 20, and 29.]—V., by will dated in June, 1855, gave to his wife his real estate for her life, and directed that his Flinders-lane property at their mother's death should go in equal proportions to his children and to their children afterwards. One of the children was, at the date of the will, married and had issue. Other children are still (7th November 1861) infants, but are married and have issue. A decree for sale had been made in two suits (Bank of Australasia v. Vans and Bank of Australasia v. Gibb), instituted by the bank as a creditor of V. On a motion for a purchaser under the decree, all parties appearing and not opposing, the Court, under the "Trustee Act 1856," Secs. 16, 20 and 29, made a declaration that the purchased lots be discharged from contingent rights under the will of persons unborn, and that the infant defendants were trustees for the purchaser; and appointed an officer of the Court to convey the interest of each infant defendant to the purchaser. Bank of Australasia v. Vans; and Bank of Australasia v. Gibb, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 120.

[Secs. 18, 22 and 30 are the corresponding sections of Act No. 234.]

Heir-at-Law not to be Found—Disputed Will.]—A testator devised all his real estate to B., upon trust, for sale and investment; probate of another instrument purporting to be a later will of the testator was obtained. B. formally disclaimed the trusts of the original will. Upon petition by the beneficiaries under that will averring that they were desirous of testing the validity of the will by commencing actions of ejectment, but were unable to do so by reason of B. refusing to act or to allow his name to be used in any action, and that the heir-at-law of the testator could not be discovered, Order made, without confirming the validity of the first will, for the appointment of a new trustee, and for vesting in such new trustee the property devised by the first will. In re Barnes, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 72.

"Trustee Act 1856," Sec. 15—Trustee whose Heir cannot be Found—Conveyancing Difficulties.]—Petition for vesting order vesting legal estate then in the heir-at-law of O., deceased, in the applicants as beneficiaries. O. died in England and left a will of which there was no copy in Victoria. Held, per Molesworth, J., and affirmed on appeal, that the "Trustee Act 1856" was not intended to obviate conveyancing difficulties which may be got over by a little trouble, delay and expense. Semble that the Court will not make a vesting order where there is an absence of conveyancing evidence that a certain person is heir-at-law, but there is no probable doubt of heirship and which fact can be easily proved. In re Orr, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 100.

Per the Full Court—The words "not known" in Sec. 15 of the "Trustee Act 1856" imply an uncertainty—an absence of facts of general belief, from which, not regarding the rules of evidence, it may be reasonably inferred who was the heir or devisee. But if this inference may be fairly drawn, an absence of absolute conveyancing proof will not render the fact "unknown." Ibid.

Intestate Trustee—Notice to Crown.]—T., a trustee of real estate for L., by his will devised all property in which he was beneficially interested; but died intestate as to property vested in him as trustee, and without an heir. Order made under "Trustee Act 1856," but without notice to the Crown, vesting the real estate in L. In re Thornhill, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 110.

Trustee Refusing to Convey—The "Statute of Trusts 1864," Sec. 19.]—Where one of two trustees is out of the jurisdiction and the other has been removed by the Court and an order made that he should execute a conveyance to a new trustee appointed in his place, a demand by the solicitor of the new trustee upon such displaced trustee to execute a conveyance is not a sufficient demand upon which to base an application under Sec. 19 of "The Statute of Trusts 1864," for an order vesting the estate in such new trustee. Semble that one trustee could not apply without the other for such vesting order. Kendell v. Thomson, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 135.

Heir-at-Law of Mortgagee out of Jurisdiction.]—A mortgagee of land died, leaving a will appointing executors, but not devising the legal estate in the land. The heir-at-law being in Scotland, the executors applied under the "Trustee Act 1856" for an order vesting in them the legal estate in the land. Held that though the section did not appear to contemplate, either in language or spirit, the case which had arisen, yet that the case of In re Boden's Mortgage Trust (1 De G. M. & G., 57), on appeal was an authority on all essential points for the application, and was coercive on the Court. In re McLeod, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 133.

"Statute of Trusts 1864" (No. 234,) Sec. 21—Legal Estate in Heir-at-Law of Mortgagee out of the Jurisdiction—Debt on Mortgage of Real Estate in Victoria—Vesting Order on Payment of Debt—Administration Granted in Another Colony.]—Property in Melbourne was owned by M. G. and Co., of Sydney, the legal estate being in M. M., as if seized in fee solely, executed a mortgage as for £2500 advanced to secure this advance to H. On dissolution of partnership by arrangement, G. took the mortgaged property subject to the debt. H. died in Ireland and M. obtained administration c.t.a. in New South Wales to H.'s estate. H. left an infant heir-at-law in England, in whom was the legal estate in the property. M. as for a nominal consideration conveyed the equity of redemption to G., who undertook to indemnify him as to the mortgage debt, and M. as in consideration of the mortgage debt of £2500 paid to him as administrator by G. released the mortgaged land. Petition on behalf of G. to vest legal estate in him. Held that the administration granted in New South Wales did not authorise M. to receive the mortgage debt as assets in New South Wales, that the locality of the mortgaged land overruled that of the specialty debt in the covenant to pay, that administration in Victoria was necessary and that the petition should have alleged that G. was entitled, and that the £2500 was actually paid and that there should have been a statement as to who received the proceeds since the date of the mortgage, and that the evidence of the deeds of conveyance of the equity of redemption and of the lease by M. were not sufficient. In re Montefiore, 5 A.J.R. 1.

"Statute of Trusts 1864" (No. 234,) Sec. 23—Petition—Trustees Dead or out of Jurisdiction.]—The petitioner, resident in Sydney, was entitled to some shares in a railway company representing certain money granted to her husband by the Government of Victoria and on her account invested by S. and M. in the purchase of the shares. S. and M. paid her the dividends but no deed of trust was ever executed. S. died in 1867 and M. had not been heard of for many years. Upon further materials consisting of order of the petitioner to the Treasury to pay to S. and M., with their receipt, and an affidavit by the manager of the railway company stating payment of dividends to M. and setting out an order from M., in 1868, to remit dividends to petitioner, Order made under Sec. 23 of Act No. 234, authorising petitioner to transfer shares and receive dividends. In re Mitchell's Trust Estate, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 42.

"Statute of Trusts 1864" (No. 234,) Sec. 25—"Stock"—Personal Representative out of the Jurisdiction.]—Shares in a joint-stock mining company are "stock" within the meaning of the "Statute of Trusts 1864," Sec. 25, which provides for the transfer of stock standing in the name of a deceased person and, where the surviving representative of such a person is out of the jurisdiction, an order may be made under that section, vesting the right to transfer them. Bryant v. Saunders, in re Saunders, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 215.

"Statute of Trusts 1864" (No. 234,) Sec. 34—Death of Trustee—Land under "Transfer of Land Statute" in Name of Surviving Executor.]—P. devised realty to his wife for life, remainder to children, and appointed two executors, but no trustee. One executor died, and the other brought the unsold land under the "Transfer of Land Statute," obtaining the certificate in his own name. Upon petition by the widow and children, praying for a new trustee in the place of the deceased executor, and a vesting order vesting the unsold land in such trustee and the surviving executor, the Court made the order as sought. The death since Act No. 427 vested property in executors as constructive trustees under the will and constructive trusts are within Sec. 34 of Act No. 234. In re Philpott, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 20.

Vesting Orders do not Dispense with Necessity for Conveyances.]—The extraordinary remedy given by Sec. 31 of the "Statute of Trusts 1864," i.e., the granting of vesting orders, is not intended to supersede the ordinary conveyances between the parties. Weigall v. Barber, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 90.

But where one of three trustees was out of the jurisdiction and it would have been inconvenient and have caused increased expense to get him to join in a conveyance of trust estate sold under the order of the Court, the Court granted an order vesting his estate in the purchaser. Ibid, and see S.C., 5 A.L.T., 198.

Trustee out of the Jurisdiction.]—Where an order had been made in a suit that a trustee should convey lands to the plaintiff, and the trustee was out of the jurisdiction and could not be found, the Court refused to make a vesting order, but made an order appointing a person to convey in the stead of the trustee. Curwen v. Mullery, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 151.

Deceased Trustee — Particular Property.]—Where an order is sought appointing a new trustee in place of one deceased, and an order vesting particular trust property in the new trustee, the Court will not make such vesting order without very clear evidence that the deceased trustee held such property as trustee only. In re Hayward's Settlement, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 38.

Not Granted where Devolution of Legal Estate Doubtful.]—A testator devised the income of real estate to certain persons during the life of one of them, and directed that upon the death of such person the estate should be sold and the proceeds divided amongst the others, but did not say by whom the sale and division were to be effected, and appointed three executors, of whom only one was surviving at date of petition; and it was doubtful in whom the legal estate should vest. Upon petition for the appointment of the surviving executor as trustee, and for a vesting order, Held that there being a doubt as to the devolution of the legal estate, and as to the concurrence of certain of the petitioners, who were out of the jurisdiction, without evidence that they concurred in the petition and its object, the petition should be dismissed. In the Will of Crosby, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 96; 1 A.L.T., 194.

Practice.]—The Court may, under Sec. 45 of Act No. 234, make a vesting order at the hearing of a cause, although it is not prayed for by the bill. Flower v. Wilson, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 84.

VII. Devolution and Removal from Office.

Jurisdiction of Court—"Trustee Act 1856," Sec. 32.]—The Court has no jurisdiction under the "Trustee Act 1856," Sec. 32, to displace a trustee who resides in England, and who, having been served with notice of motion for the appointment of a new trustee in his place, expresses his intention to remain a trustee and to take steps to enable himself to act, although he has allowed some years to elapse without having acted. In re Postlethwaite, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 173.

Quære—Whether in any case the Court can, under the "Trustee Act 1856," remove a trustee who states that he is unwilling to withdraw from the trust. Ibid, 175.

[Sec. 34 of Act No. 234 is the corresponding section.]

Trustee becoming Insolvent—"Insolvency Statute 1871" (No. 379,) Sec. 90.]—Upon a petition, under Sec. 90 of Act No. 379, for removal of trustee on ground of insolvency, it appearing that a firm of which the trustee was a member had sequestrated its estate, and that a business had been carried on in connection with the trust estate, in which liabilities and engagements had been undertaken, Held that the official assignee should be before the Court, and that as trustee had asked for an order for accounts, and it being doubtful whether Sec. 90 applied to a complicated case like this, the proper course was by suit. Petition refused. In re Clarke's Trusts, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 28.

"Insolvency Statute 1871" (No. 379,) Sec. 90—Insolvent Trustee.]—Quære, whether there is any jurisdiction to remove an insolvent trustee apart from Act No. 379 except in a suit, and as to whether Court could make such an order under that Act as would protect the cestuis que trustent. In re Healey's Estate, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 1.

Permanent Absence—Ground for Removal.]—Permanent absence from the colony resulting in injury to the trust estate, in loss of income owing to trust moneys lying idle in a bank, is a sufficient ground for the removal of a trustee, although the testator may have known of such permanent absence when appointing him a trustee, there being at his death two Australian trustees, one of whom had died after the testator. Knox v. Postlethwaite, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 62.

Ground for Removal.]—Where a trustee places himself in a position antagonistic to his duties as trustee, as by taking an assignment of a security given by, and thus obtaining possession of goods of persons who owed rent to the trust estate, and thus making himself unfit to enforce this liability to the estate, he should be removed. Officer v. Haynes, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 115.

Trustee Sought to be Removed a Partner with Testator—Right to Accounts.]—B. and L. were partners in a sheep station in New Zealand. B. died, having by will left all his property to Mrs. B., L., S., and W. as trustees and executors, in trust for infant plaintiffs and Mrs. B. L. failed to account for the partnership assets. On a bill by Mrs. B., S., and the infants against L. and W. seeking a declaration of partnership, partnership accounts, and removal of L. from being a trustee, Held that L. was not entitled before removal to a partnership account, but only an account of his own receipts and disbursements. Bruce v. Liyar, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 240, 259.

Discharge of Trustee Appointed and Having Accepted Trusts—Decreasing Number of Trustees.]—On application for advice of court as to power of a trustee to withdraw, the trustee being one of five appointed and having accepted, but proposing to go to England she wished to withdraw, Held that the Court would not be justified in sanctioning any diminution of the number of trustees appointed by the testator. Application refused. In re the Will of James Butchart, 5 A.J.R., 4.

Practice—Service upon Beneficiaries—Insolvent Trustee—"Insolvency Statute 1871" (No. 379,) Sec. 90.]—Where a petition is presented under the "Insolvency Statute 1871," Sec. 90, to remove an insolvent trustee, it should be served upon all parties interested, including children entitled in remainder. In the Trust Estate of Healey, 6 V.L.R. (E..) 240; 2 A.L.T., 107.

Practice—Service upon Trustee out of Jurisdiction.]—Semble, where it is sought to displace a trustee who has never acted, and who has been for a long time out of the jurisdiction, that it is not necessary to serve such trustee with notice of a petition under the "Trustee Act 1856," for the appointment of a new trustee in his place. In re Postlethwaite, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 173, 174.

Practice—Parties.]—Where infants are entitled as beneficiaries of certain property; if they are served with notice of petition for removal of a trustee, that is sufficient, and a guardian ad litem need not be appointed. On such an application all persons entitled in possession should concur in the petition. In re Healey's Estate, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 1; 2 A.L.T., 107.

Costs.]—The above-mentioned petition being dismissed without costs, the order was made without prejudice to the right of D., the insolvent trustee, whose removal was sought to retain his costs out of the estate. S.C., 7 V.L.R. (E.,) p. 6.

VIII. Proceedings by and against Trustees.

Two Suits—One Friendly, the other Hostile—Reference to Master.]—Where two suits were brought against trustees, one friendly and asking for a continuance of the unauthorised investment, the other hostile, charging wilful default, and praying removal of the trustees and appointment of a receiver, it was referred to the Master to report which would be the most beneficial. Waddell v. Patterson, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 43.

Defence—Leave to Defend Second Suit.]—Pending the taking of accounts under a decree in a creditor's suit for administration of the trust estate, a second suit was instituted against the trustees of the deed, relative to a portion of the trust estate conveyed by deed. On motion in the first suit for leave for the trustees to defend the second suit, ordered that the trustees be at liberty to act as they might be advised as to defending the new suit, notwithstanding the decree in the first suit. Heape v. Hawthorne, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 13.

Prosecution of Trustee under "Statute of Trusts 1864"—Sanction of Law Officer.]—The consent of a law officer to the prosecution of a trustee under the "Statute of Trusts 1864," Secs. 82-96, is sufficiently proved by a document signed, but not qua Attorney-General, by a person admitted to have been Attorney-General when he so signed. Regina v. Taylor, 1 V.R. (L.,) 84; 1 A.J.R., 80.

[Secs. 82-96 of Act No. 234 are repealed by Sec. 3 of the "Criminal Law and Practice Amendment Act" (No. 399.)]

Prosecution for Appropriating Trust Funds—Executor—"Statute of Trusts 1864," Sec. 82.]—An executor is a trustee within Sec. 82 of the "Statute of Trusts 1864." so as to be liable to be prosecuted under that section for appropriating trust funds, although there be no express trust created by the will. Ibid.

Distress for Rent—All the Trustees need not Sign the Warrant.]—See Moore v. Lee, ante column 380.

Parties—Supreme Court Rules, Cap. V., Sec. 10.]—Semble, that trustees do not sufficiently represent cestuis que trustent in suits where rights arising from proceedings against the cestuis que trustent are concerned, though they do as to liabilities, &c., arising from acts of the testator or deceased, and perhaps themselves. Randall v. Mau, 2 V.R. (E.,) 158, 161; 2 A.J.R., 81.

When Trustees do not Represent Cestuis Que Trustent—Suit to Set Aside a Settlement.]—Where a suit is brought to upset a settlement, the trustees of the settlement do not, under rule 10 of cap. v. of Supreme Court Rules, represent the cestuis que trustent. In re Healey, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 34; 2 A.J.R., 132.

Suit to Set Aside Deed of Assignment.]—In a suit to set aside a creditor's deed of assignment the trustees do not represent the cestuis que trustent. Goodman v. M'Callum, ante column 627.

Suit by Trustees of a Marriage Settlement to Charge Real Assets of Testator against Trustees of Testator—When Trustees Represent Beneficiaries.]—Bullen v. Phelan, ante column 1191.

Suit by Person Claiming Devised Property Acquired by Testator's Fraud—When Executor Represents the Property.]—Bennett v. Tucker, ante column 1192.

Suit by Cestuis Que Trustent to Set Aside a Conveyance by one of them Made in Mistake—Trustees not Necessary Parties.]—Ronalds v. Duncan, ante column 1307.

And see cases ante columns 477, 478, as to Fraudulent Settlements.

Parties—Suit for Account Only—Creditors' Deed—Whether Unpaid Creditors Necessary Parties.]—Where A. assigned his estate to trustees in trust for creditors and afterwards brought a suit against the trustees for an account without praying for any payment, Held that unpaid creditors were not necessary parties. Arthur v. Moore, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 207; 1 A.L.T., 29.

Suit Relative to a Settlement—Trustee of Equitable Interest not a Necessary Party.]—Dallimore v. Oriental Bank, ante column 1188.

Suit for Account by One Trustee against Agent of Trustees—No Privity between Agent and Co-trustee or Cestuis Que Trustent.]—Phelan v. Macoboy, ante column 1190.

Parties—Representative of Deceased Trustee—Suit by Surviving Trustee against a Third Person.]—Where a surviving trustee brings a suit against a third party participating in a breach of trust by a deceased trustee with notice of trust, the representative of the deceased trustee is not a necessary party. Mackay v. Caughey, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 56.

Procedure—Account—Default.]—In an action by cestui que trusts against trustees to entitle the plaintiffs to an account of what trustees received, or without default, might have received, some instance of loss by mismanagement must be alleged and proved. Snaith v. Dove, 4 A.J.R., 140.

And see cases ante under Liability of Trustees.

Costs of Trustees when Allowed.]—Costs are not necessarily withheld from trustees acting irregularly, but not corruptly or mischievously, or given to a cestui que trust establishing such irregularity in her own right, and as next friend of other cestui que trusts. Snaith v. Dove, 4 A.J.R., 140.

Costs of Trustees.]—Suit by official assignee to set aside a voluntary settlement as fraudulent, and to make trustees of settlement liable for mortgage money of insolvent's land received by them. Costs of pleading and hearing, but not of evidence allowed trustees. Halfey v. Tait, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 8; for facts see S.C., ante column 474.

Costs will not be given against trustees except where they have been guilty of improper conduct. But where unsuccessful on appeal, they may be left to pay their own costs. Attorney-General v. M'Pherson, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 51.

When Trustees Deprived of Costs.]—Dryden v. Dryden, ante column 245.

Costs against Trustees.]—Costs will not be given against defendant trustees, who do not appear when bill does not pray for them. Phair v. Powell, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 264.

Delay of Cestius que Trustent in Bringing Suit —Costs.]—Bennett v. Tucker, ante column 1439.

IX. PETITIONS FOR THE ADVICE OF THE COURT.

Under "Statute of Trusts 1864," Sec. 61—Form of.]—The proper form of a petition under the "Statute of Trusts 1864," Sec. 61, is a request for advice, and not for directions as to the management of the property. In re M'Kay, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 105.

Construction of Will or Deed—Court will not Advise upon on Petition.]—The Court will not advise upon the construction of a will or deed under Sec. 61, there being no appeal from the opinion, and where there are conflicting interests it might be advisable to appeal. In re Youngman, 4 A.J.R., 66.

Will difficult to Construe—Matters which afford Ground for Litigation.]—Where a will is very difficult to construe, and there are materials for litigation between the parties interested, the Court will not answer questions by an executor for advice and direction under the "Statute of Trusts 1864," Sec. 61. In re Mahe, in re O'Neill, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 171.

But where the property was small and the children took parallel interests on attaining the age of twenty-one, and there were no conflicting interests the Court answered the questions as to advice though they involved the construction of the will. In re Stillman's Will, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 158.

"Statute of Trusts 1864," Sec. 61—Doubtful Facts.]—Two trustees, A. and B., under a settlement, having entered into negotiations with C. to grant him a lease, B. left the colony, and had not been heard of for some months. Petition for advice whether A. should appoint a new trustee under power in the settlement, and apply for a vesting order. Held that Court would not advise on doubtful facts. In re Wills' Settlement, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 292.

Petition under 15 Vic. No. 10, Sec. 16, and Act No. 112, Sec. 51—Court will Not Investigate Facts.]—See in the Goods of Holdsworth, ante column 451.

Complicated Will—Trustees Appointed by Testator—Others by High Court of Justice—Administrator c.t.a.]—A testator in England made a complicated will and appointed A. and B., resident in England, trustees of Australian property; A. and B. gave a power of attorney to petitioner, who obtained in Victoria administration c.t.a. The Court, on a petition for advice, refused to advise under Sec. 61 as to the position of C. and D., who were appointed Australian trustees by the High Court of Justice, or as to apportionment of costs of repairs and other matters relating to application of a fund in his hands. In re the Will of Ruddock, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 297; 1 A.L.T., 89.

When Court will Advise upon.]—The Court will not, on petition under sec. 61, decide between co-plaintiffs in a suit, urging conflicting claims on a legacy which had lapsed, owing to the death of one of the class. Such a question must be brought forward by a supplemental bill. Osborne v. Osborne, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 1.

NOTE.—The supplemental bill was afterwards filed by five infant daughters, through their next friend, against the trustees of the will, the original defendants in the suit, and the four sons who claimed adversely to the daughters, as new defendants.

When Court will Not Advise upon—Construction of Charitable Bequest.]—See Attorney-General v. Wilson, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 215; 4 A.L.T., 14.

"Statute of Trusts 1864" (No. 234,) Sec. 61—Will —Complicated Matters.]—Where, in the construction of a will, advice was sought as to whether a life estate was chargeable with a certain debt, the Court being uncertain as to the facts and considering the matter too complicated, refused to advise. In re Leon's Trusts, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 74.

"Statute of Trusts" (No. 234,) Sec. 61—"Duties on the Estates of Deceased Persons Act" (No. 388).] —The Court will not give advice on a petition under Sec. 61 of Act No. 234 as to construction of Act No. 388, especially in the absence of the Crown, although the Attorney-General has been served with notice of the petition. In re Williamson, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 48.

"Statute of Trusts," Secs. 61, 56—Sum in Hands of Executor of Official Assignee—Payment into Court.]—A sum of money was at the death of C., an official assignee, in his hands, belonging to the estate of an insolvent. No claims were sent in in respect of this in answer to advertisements. Petition under Sec. 61, by C.'s executor for advice as to whether the executor could pay it into Court under Sec. 56. The Court refused to advise. In re Courtney's Trusts, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 149.

Difficult Point—Domicil—"Married Women's Property Act" (No. 384,) Sec. 10.] — Where a testator domiciled in Victoria died, leaving property in Victoria to a sister domiciled in England, the Court refused, on application under Sec. 61 of No. 234, to advise the trustees whether they could pay her share to the sister as being separate property, under Sec. 10 of Act No. 384, or whether the consent of her husband was necessary under the English law, on the ground that the question was one of great doubt. In re Dickason's Trusts, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 184; 3 A.L.T., 85.

Matter Arising in Administration of Estate.]— Trustees were directed by will to purchase land in the Melbourne cemetery for a family grave and to erect a tombstone thereon at a cost of £200. The testator by his wish was buried in the Boroondara cemetery. Upon petition by the trustees under Sec. 61 asking whether they could expend the money in the erection of a tombstone in the Boroondara cemetery, Held that, as the matter was one arising in the administration of the estate, a petition for advice would lie. In re Campbell, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 138.

And see In re Folk's Will, ante column 1433; In re Geo. Rolfe, ante column 1437; in re Durbridge, ante column 1434; and In the Will of Downing, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 22; 2 A.L.T., 133, post under WILL—Incidents, &c.—Advancement, for instances where the Court advised upon matters of management and administration.

To Whom Petition should be Addressed.]—A petition under Sec. 61 of the "Statute of Trusts 1864" by the trustees of a will seeking the advice of the Court as to whether a proposed investment would be proper, was addressed to all the judges. Held that it should have been addressed to a single judge. In the will of Russell, 1 A.J.R., 52.

Practice.]—Where the opinion of the Court is sought under Sec. 61 of the "Statute of Trusts 1864," unless it is clear that the power sought in the petition exists, the Court answers in the negative. In re Bowman's Trusts, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 124; 2 A.L.T., 13.

Practice—"Trustee Act 1864" (No. 234,) Sec. 61—Evidence of Statements—Complicated Matters.]—The petitioner states facts at his peril and advice is given on the assumption that they are true. The Court will not hear affidavits in reply, as in case of misstatement the order affords no protection. In re Trusts of Leon's Will, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 74.

Costs.]—Upon a petition for the advice of the Court under Sec. 61 as to whether the administrator (the petitioner) of an intestate was a trustee within the meaning of Sec. 77 of the Act No. 234 ("Statute of Trusts 1864,") the Court directed that the costs of the petition should be thrown rateably upon the shares of the infant children. In re Bowman's Trusts, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 124; 2 A.L.T., 13.

X. RIGHTS OF THE CESTUI QUE TRUST.

A cestui que trust in possession by permission of the trustees is a tenant-at-will of the trustee, and he may, therefore, bring trespass against a stranger. Cuvet v. Davis, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 390, 396.

Cestui Que Trust of Age—Payment to.]—Where a cestui que trust is of age the Court may direct that his share he paid to him by the trustee. Richardson v. Shira, 6 A.L.T., 48.

XI. FUNDS IN COURT.

Service of Petition.]—Service of a petition under No. 234, Sec. 57, for payment out of moneys paid into Savings Bank, with privity of the Master, under Sec. 56, is not properly effected upon respondents (husband and wife) by leaving it with their daughter at their dwelling-house. In re Edwards, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 109.

Costs.]—A respondent to a petition is entitled to appear and defend himself when the petition prays for costs against him. Ordered that the petitioner pay costs of such appearance. Ibid.

Direction for Investment—Application of Income.]—Where trustees under a will had paid into Court money to which infants were entitled as tenants in common, the Court, upon petition by them that the Master be directed to invest the sum in Government debentures and pay the income to their father for their maintenance, and, on their respectively attaining twenty-one, to sell the debentures, and pay the proceeds in accordance with the trusts of the will, directed the sum (without any reference) to be invested in debentures and the income paid to the father, who was in poor circumstances, as prayed; but refused to make any order as to the distribution of the sum on the infants attaining twenty-one. In the will of Cameron, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 74; 1 A.L.T., 184.

Payment out of Court—Petition is the Proper Course.]—In re Bourke's Trusts; In re Benson; and In re Stanton, ante column 1205.

XII. INVESTMENTS.

In Squatting Property—Court will not Authorise.]—Per Molesworth, J. (p. 64):—The Court will not authorise an investment of the estate in squatting property because such property is not a security; it is a speculative trade subject to many vicissitudes and to a variety of diseases which may sweep off the stock, and (in 1861) owing to the political condition of the country is an investment of peculiar risk and hazard; it is far more difficult to ascertain the honesty of the trustee's dealings in such a case, and the Court has not the same control over the trustee as in other classes of investments. Where a testator had directed the sale of the station property and the trustees had with great success continued the station, and two suits were instituted, one a friendly suit praying for a continuation of the investment, and the other hostile praying for a receiver and charging wilful default, although the former suit was reported to be more beneficial, Held and affirmed that the Court would not sanction the investment, and decree made for a sale. Waddell v. Patterson, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 43, 55, 57, 64.

Where Settlement is Silent as to Investments.]—Where trustees have made a sale of real estate under a power authorising them to dispose of real estate by sale or in exchange for other hereditaments, but containing no provision for investment, it is the duty of the trustees to invest the proceeds in the purchase of real estate or leasehold premises, in accordance with the "Statute of Trusts 1864," Sec. 66; and, until advantageous investments in such property can be found, to invest upon Government stock or debentures, but not upon mortgage. In re Weir, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 168.

Power to Invest in Government Stocks and Debentures.]—Where a testator, by his will, gave his trustees powers to invest in Government stocks and debentures, and upon real securities within the colony, and upon securities of dividend paying companies incorporated by Act of Parliament other than mining companies, the Court, upon motion after decree to administer his estate, continued the discretion vested in the trustees, but limited the investments to Government stocks and debentures in Victoria, and real securities. Gibbs v. Gibbs, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 30.

Liability of Trustees.]—A trustee may be charged with loss arising from a mortgage made in contravention of his powers, without impugning the mortgage. Snaith v. Dove, 4 A.J.R., 140.

Improper Investments—What are—Loans on Personal Security—Investments in a Distillery and in a Mining Company.]—See Sawyers v. Kyte, ante column 1441.

Mining shares are undesirable and inconvenient as an investment for trust property. Knight v. Knight, ante column 449.

Liability for not Investing Trust Funds—Interest.]—Where a trustee retained balances in his hands uninvested, he was charged simple interest thereon at the Court rate. Sichel v. O'Shanassy, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 250.

There is an obligation on trustees to invest moneys in their hands, even where there is no direction in a will for investment, although the will provides for accumulation; and trustees having retained a sum of money in their hands for six months, without presenting any difficulties to excuse their non-investment, were Held liable to pay interest thereon not at the Court rate (8 per cent.), but at the rate (6 per cent.), which would have been received had they invested it for that period in Government debentures. Adamson v. Reid, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 164; 2 A.L.T., 69.

UNDUE INFLUENCE.

Voluntary Conveyance—Fraud—Undue Influence—Fiduciary Relationship—Pretended Purchase—False Recitals—Evidence—Onus of Proof.]—W. the male grantee under a deed and S. the female grantor lived together in the same house on terms of the greatest intimacy. By the deed of 30th July, 1874, which purported by its recitals to be a purchase deed, but which was in fact voluntary, S. conveyed certain land to W. S. was at the time prostrated by illness. She had no independent advice, no instructions were given by her for the deed, and no draft was submitted to any solicitor on her behalf. Held, per Molesworth, J., and Full Court that devisee under S.'s will who sought to set the deed aside was entitled to do so, as it was procured by fraud or undue influence, the bill setting up both charges. Held, per Full Court, that though it is necessary to establish something like a fiduciary relationship to constitute undue influence, yet it is dangerous to attempt a strict definition and Courts of Equity avoid such a definition as might exclude other cases which might afterwards arise; the jurisdiction is founded on the principle of correcting abuses of confidence and should be applied in every case where two persons are so situated that one may obtain considerable influence over the other. By Full Court that where there is a variance between the recitals in a deed and actual facts the onus of reconciling the facts with the operative part of the deed is always on those claiming under the deed. Symons v. Williams, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 199.

And see post under WILL—TESTAMENTARY CAPACITY.

USE AND OCCUPATION.

When Action Lies.]—B. and P. entered into an agreement for a lease. After P. had entered into possession under the agreement, and under the supposition that the lease would be issued, B. wrote to say that instead of P. preparing the lease, he, B., would get the lease prepared for him. He did not do so, however, and no steps were taken to prepare the lease by either party. P. still continuing in possession, and not paying any rent, was sued for use and occupation. Held that the action would lie. Barbour v. Pinn, 1 V.R. (L.,) 222; 1 A.J.R., 166.

When Action Lies—Jetty.]—Defendant, with the permission of plaintiff, moored his ship to plaintiff's jetty and placed a landing stage from the jetty to his ship, and he and his men used the jetty in passing to and from the ship. The ship's cargo consisting of timber was not discharged on the jetty but into still water under the shelter of the jetty. Held that the possession and right to possession were always in the plaintiff and an action for use and occupation would not lie. Solomon v. Fitzsimmons, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 42.

Action for by Executors—Title—Defence—Payment to Persons previously Allowed to Receive Rents and Profits.]—In an action by executors for use and occupation, if the defendant have promised to pay, it affords evidence for the jury to infer his liability, and the plaintiffs need not prove title. And it is no defence for the occupier in respect to a period subsequent to a notice not to pay any one but the plaintiffs that he has paid in advance to the widow of the testator, who had been for a long time before such notice allowed to receive the rents and profits of the land. *Mornane v. Use and Occupation—Landlord's Title—Unauthorised Occupation of Crown Lands—Act No. 360, Secs. 4, 93.]—A. was in unauthorised occupation of Crown lands basing her claim to possession under a purchase of the interest of a previous holder of a miner's right in the house on the land—the memorandum of sale also specifying a well and other improvements—and she let the "house and premises" to B. A. brought a complaint before justices against B. for use and occupation. On a rule nisi for prohibition it was contended that it was contrary to the policy of Act No. 360, for a person in unauthorised possession to traffic in Crown lands. Held that A. could not recover, even although the Crown had not attempted to dispossess her, and that B. might take the objection that she was in unauthorised possession to her title. Rule absolute. Regina v. Hare, ex parte Young, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 38, S.C., 4 A.L.T., 152, sub nom. ex parte Young, where it appears to have been decided on the ground that A. was the holder of a residence area which it was illegal, under Sec. 5 of Act No. 291, to sublet.

VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

I. The Contract and Matters Relating thereto.

Sale of Station Property—What Passes by—Right to Pre-emptive Section.]—Between ordinary vendor and vendee of a squatting station the vendee of a station has a right to any proviso of preference of purchase from the Government which the vendor may have, unless the contrary be stipulated. It is similar to the case of a tenant-right with a preference of renewal, or a leasehold with an option of purchase, which passes ordinarily with the sale of the tenant-right or leasehold. P. was the licensed occupant of a squatting station, and had applied for the purchase from the Government of a pre-emptive section which was surveyed, but the purchase-money for which was not paid for some years. P. sold the station and cattle thereon, and the pre-emptive section to C., who mortgaged it to P. to secure the purchase money. C. having made default, P., with C.'s concurrence, sold the station to G., the particulars describing certain improvements which were upon the pre-emptive section. After some mesne assignments the station became vested in B., who sold the pre-emptive section only to K., B. paying the purchase money to the Government; but the grant of the section was issued in the name of P., who alleged that the amount realised by the sale under the mortgage was insufficient to pay the mortgage debt, and refused to transfer unless the balance were paid. K. filed his bill against P. only, charging that the legal estate was vested in P. as a trustee for him, and prayed for a conveyance. Held that G., purchasiug from P. with C.'s consent, was entitled to the full benefit of P.'s preference, since he was entitled to think that everything passed to him which belonged to the mortgagor and mortgagee, and must be taken to know nothing of the accounts between P. and C. Held, that C. was a necessary party. Decree made as prayed. Kennedy v. Phillips, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 140, 151.

Sale of Hotel—Contract in Two Parts—Difference between Parts.]—Suit for specific performance of a contract for sale of a hotel. The contract consisted of two parts, both signed by plaintiff and defendant. The one part remaining with plaintiff contained an offer for sale of the property on certain terms; the other part, remaining with defendant, contained an acceptance of the offer on the same terms, and, besides, the words "to be completed in eight days from the same date." Held, upon the balance of evidence, that the words found only in the second part were put in after the signatures, and specific performance decreed according to the first part of the contract. Dillon v. M'Leod, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 8.

Offer—Acceptance—Letters—"Instruments and Securities Statute 1864" (No. 204,) Sec. 107.]—The defendants A. B. and C. were lessees under the "Land Act 1869," Sec. 20, of three allotments used by them as one farm. D. brought a suit to enforce specific performance of a contract to sell the allotments, such contract consisting of letters. A. wrote letter (a) setting out allotments, stating that all rents were paid up to a certain date, and that there would be no difficulty in procuring a Crown grant. D. wrote letter (b) referring to offer in (a), and accepting it provided it was made freehold as soon as transfers were completed. D. wrote letter (c), stating that he had no offer of B. and C.'s land binding on them and requiring such. Letter (d) was by A. B. and C. authorising the previous offer by A., offer to stand for eight days, and containing as a postscript the words—"You will, of course, release Crown grants if this be accepted." No further reply was made by D. Held, on demurrer, that there was no contract; that letter (a) showed that writer did not affect to dispose of the fee, and that onus of obtaining Crown grant lay on D., and leaving it uncertain whether there were three sellers or one; that letter (b) was no acceptance as it implied that sellers should procure the Crown grant; that letter (c) showed that contract was not yet concluded; and that letter (d) contained new terms in the postscript, and this not being accepted in writing there was no contract. Clarke v. Docherty, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 283; 1 A.L.T., 81.

Alternative Offer—Acceptance of one Alternative—Subsequent Correspondence as to Mode of Carrying out Contract.]—See Morrison v. Neill, ante column 184.

Auctioneer Agent for Purchaser—Revocation of Authority.]—Ecroyd v. Davis, ante column 71.

Uncertainty.]—Semble that a description of a parcel in a contract for the sale of land as "the land in Pine-street purchased by me from H," does not render the contract void for uncertainty, though the vendor had two pieces of land in Pine-street, neither of which were purchased by her directly from H., the vendor having offered to convey both pieces. Campbell v. Bent, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 117, 122.

What it Implies—Fee-Simple—Evidence to rebut Presumption.]—A contract to sell land is primâ facie a contract to sell the fee-simple. A contract for the sale of ground comprised in an application for a mining lease, is, ex vi termini, not a contract for the sale of the fee-simple, since the application if granted could result in a leasehold interest only. Cane v. Sinclair, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 60; 5 A.L.T., 186.

Provision as to Compensation.]—See post under sub-head SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

(b) "Statute of Frauds."

What Contracts Comply with—Description of Subject Matter.]—A contract for the sale of land described it as having a frontage of 50 feet to P.-street. The depth was not specified, nor was the width at the rear of the land. There was, however, a right-of-way running parallel to P.-street, at a distance of 117 feet from it, and this right-of-way bounded the land at that end. Held, per Molesworth, J., that the land was sufficiently described to comply with the "Statute of Frauds," since the right-of-way at the rear would define the depth, and the width would ordinarily be the same at the rear as at the front. Crichton v. Morris, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 338.

Interest in Land—What is Not.]—See Lorenz v. Heffernan; Georgeson v. Geach, ante column 193.

Description of Subject Matter—Misdescription of Property.]—Defendant, lessee from the Board of Land and Works of Allotment C. Section 7, and Allotment B. Section 14, agreed to sell them to plaintiff through his agents. The plaintiff agreed to buy, and defendant wrote to plaintiff's agents that he would carry out the contract as soon as he obtained the necessary documents; but he did not complete, and afterwards wrote a letter excusing himself. Plaintiff's solicitor wrote demanding performance, and defendant wrote denying any contract. In the evidence it appeared that in a document which had passed between the parties, and which was regarded by the plaintiff as taking the agreement out of the Statute, Allotment B. Section 14 was described as Allotment B. Section 7, and the defendant contended that, inasmuch as the document misdescribed the property, it could not be relied on as a binding agreement. Parol evidence was given which showed that the land bargained for was the allotment mentioned, inasmuch as it was specially referred to as being adjoining to a certain pre-emptive section, and was otherwise identified. Plaintiff prayed that the contract might be declared binding and the defendant ordered to carry it out. Decree made as prayed. Cameron v. Avery, 4 A.J.R., 141.

Description of Subject Matter—Parcels.]—Per Molesworth, J. — Quære, whether two parcels of land intersected by a road, not the vendor's property, would be properly described as "all that piece or parcel of land," &c. Ford v. Young, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 93, 98; 3 A.L.T., 85.

Description of Parties—Vendor.]—Where an agent contracted to sell land as agent for David Young, the vendor's name being Alexander Young, Held, per Molesworth, J., affirmed on appeal, that parol evidence was not admissible to prove the real name of the vendor, and that there was no sufficient memorandum of the contract within the "Statute of Frauds" ("Instruments and Securities Statute 1864," Sec. 107). Ford v. Young, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 93; 3 A.L.T., 85, 128.

Sufficiency of Memorandum — Reciprocity.] — Where S. and A., agents for vendors, wrote to purchaser's agent in following terms:—"We as agents for L. and M. hereby sell to R. the land described to you in our letter to you of 16th August, at £2 10s. 6d. per acre cash," Held that that was a sufficient memorandum containing all terms necessary, viz., parties, lands (by reference to another writing), and price, and that the word "sell" imports that R. had agreed with S. and A. Semble there being no signature by purchaser R. or his agent, that reciprocity under the "Statute of Frauds" is not necessary, and that a plaintiff who has not bound himself under the "Statute of Frauds" may compel specific performance of a contract signed by the defendant. Ronald v. Lalor, 3 A.J.R., 11, 12, 87.

Signature—Blanks in Contract Supplemented by Indorsement.]—Where a contract for the sale of certain land was blank as to the purchaser's name, the amount of purchase-money and deposit, the date, and the purchaser's signature and that of the witness, but the quantity and position of the land were given in a schedule to the contract, and the conditions prescribed the mode of payment; but on the back of the contract was an indorsement "conditions of sale to P.M., £20 an acre, E.G. & Co., auctioneers, Ballarat." Held that this was a sufficient contract in writing to satisfy the "Statute of Frauds," since there was evidence that the auctioneers were authorised to sign for the defendant. Clohesy v. Maher, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 357.

Per Stawell, C.J.—The position of a signature on a contract is immaterial; the name of the party to be bound is to be signed, not necessarily subscribed. Ibid.

"Instruments and Securities Statute 1864" (No. 204,) Sec. 107—Signature "as Agent for Vendor" —Vendor Signing Replies on Requisitions to Title.]—A signature by an auctioneer as "agent for the vendor," the vendor himself not being named in the contract, is void under the "Statute of Frauds" (No. 204, Sec. 107,) but where the vendor signed replies on requisition as to title, although in the replies he disputed efficacy of contract, that was held to be a sufficient signature, the memoranda being sufficiently connected by reference. Buxton v. Bellin, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 243.

(c) Conditions of Sale, Inquiries, etc.

Condition giving Power to Rescind—How Construed.]—A condition in a contract for the sale of land, that if the purchaser shall make any objection to, or requisition as to the title or otherwise, which the vendor shall be unable or unwilling to remove or comply with, and such objection or requisition shall be insisted on, it shall be lawful for the vendor, by notice in writing, to annul the sale, is to be construed strictly against the vendor. The vendor is not warranted on receiving requisitions at once to rescind; he is to answer each of them, to say whether he is unable or unwilling to comply and to bring the matter to a point with the purchaser showing how far he is unable or unwilling to comply; and the Court will consider the reasonableness of his conduct in taking advantage of the condition. The vendor is to have a reasonable time to consider whether he will insist upon his objections or take the land withdrawing them, and it is not generally necessary that the vendor should fix a time for the purchaser to consider and answer. Macgregor v. Templeton, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 195; 4 A.L.T., 9.

Objection to or Requisition on the Title—What is—"Transfer of Land Statute."]—A vendor sold land as being under the "Transfer of Land Statute." The conditions of sale treated the land as being under the Statute, but contained a clause enabling the vendor to cancel the sale if the purchaser should make and insist on "any objection to or requisition on the title or otherwise, which the vendor shall be unable or unwilling to remove or comply with." The land turned out not to be under the Statute, and on the purchaser demanding production of the certificate of title, in accordance with the conditions of sale, the vendor cancelled the sale. On bill by the purchaser for specific performance, Held that inasmuch as a more secure title was given by a certificate than under the general law, demanding the production of the certificate of title was not an objection to or requisition on the title, so as to enable the vendor to rescind the sale; that the whole system of the objections and requisitions was based upon the production of a certificate of title, and the words "or otherwise" in the conditions did not include the demand for the certificate. Specific performance decreed, and defendant ordered to bring the land under the Statute. Matthews v. James, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 188; 3 A.L.T., 146.

Condition that Objection not taken shall be Waived—Compensation.]—In a contract for the sale of land, there was a condition that the purchaser should send in objections to the title within a certain time, or be deemed to have waived all objections to, and to have accepted the title. Held that this condition did not prevent the purchaser, who had omitted to send in objections within the specified time, from afterwards suing on a clause in the contract providing for compensation for mistake in description to recover compensation for a deficiency in the quantity of land purported to be sold to him. O'Shanassy v. Littlewood, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 117; 6 A.L.T., 11.

Waiver of Objection—Effect of, how Destroyed —Misrepresentation.]—The effect of a waiver of objections may be avoided by showing that it was obtained by means of false representations. O'Shanassy v. Littlewood, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 117.

Sed quære, per Williams, J.—Whether or not, when the declaration is for breach of contract only, and the plea alleges waiver, a replication setting up false representations by the defendant, by means of which the waiver was obtained, is bad as a departure, and whether the false representations should not have been set up by way of excuse in the declaration. Ibid.

Completion of Purchase—Reasonable Time.]—An agreement for the sale and purchase of certain land provided for payment of purchase money in four instalments, the third of £1009 to be paid on 10th October, and the purchase to be completed on 9th October. Held that as the date fixed for completion was impossible, the jury must fix a reasonable time after that date for completion. Campbell v. Bent, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 337; 1 A.L.T., 170.

The purchaser also undertook to pay the expenses of preparing abstract of title, copies of deeds, &c. Held that such were not recoverable until the time of completion to be fixed by the jury as above. Ibid.

Payment of one Instalment before Title Shown, or Purchase Completed.]—Held in the same circumstances that a plea denying vendor's readiness and willingness to give title and execute conveyance was no defence to the payment of the instalment of £1009, payable at a fixed time. Ibid.

Delivery of Objections within Ten Days—Recovery of Purchase Money though not Complied with—Time of Completion—Objection taken at Trial—Title as "per deeds"—Possessory Title for Fifteen Years.]—Action by purchaser for return of deposit money, and unpaid bills for balance of purchase money. The particulars described the property as sold "as per deeds;" and the condition provided that purchase should be completed upon the last bill becoming due, and that all objections not delivered within ten days after delivery of abstract should be considered as waived. No abstract was delivered, and the objections were delivered after ten days from the time fixed for the delivery of the abstract had elapsed. The action was brought before the last bill fell due, and plaintiff obtained a verdict. Rule nisi for nonsuit or new trial. At the trial a new objection was raised by plaintiff that the land sold overlapped by some feet an adjoining property. Held that the completion of the purchase meant the execution of the contract, and that objections should be removed or met, and conveyance approved of before time for payment of last bill arrived, and that as a matter of law the vendor had been allowed a reasonable time, and the action was not premature; that the purchaser not requiring an abstract of title, the objections were not delivered too late; that the objection taken at the trial might so be taken at the plaintiff's risk, although not included in the objections or requisitions, and that it was incurable; that defendant's possessory title for fifteen years was not a sufficient title as a title "per deeds." Rule discharged. Lazarus v. Lowe, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 230.

Time of Essence of Contract—Sale of Hotel Property.]—Contract for sale of hotel property, one part of the contract remaining in defendant's possession contained the acceptance and words "to be completed within eight days from the same date," which words were not found in the other part containing the offer, and remaining in plaintiff's possession. Both parts were signed by both parties. Held that though as to public-house property time might be more readily essential than in other cases, yet as the business and stock-in-trade were trifling, it was questionable under circumstances which showed an inclination on defendant's part to give time whether rule as to time being essential applied. Quære whether the law of transfer of licenses in Victoria presents such difficulty that a contract to complete in eight days should not be read as making time essential. Dillon v. M'Leod, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 8.

Delay in Production of Title Deeds—Deeds not in Possession of Vendor.]—Where conditions of sale provided for production of title deeds in possession of vendor, for objections to title by purchaser's solicitor, and for power of vendor to rescind in case of objections made, and where great delay was made in producing the deeds, owing to their not being in the plaintiff's possession (agent for vendor,) Semble, that since the agreement imported the existence of title deeds to which the purchaser could have access, the agreement could not be enforced at law in regard to the restrictions on (quære as to) time, the contrary being the fact. Bartlett v. Looney, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 14.

Delivery of Abstract—Land under Act No. 301.]—Upon a contract for the sale of land under the "Transfer of Land Statute" (No. 301,) a transfer under the Act is all that the purchaser is entitled to; he cannot insist upon delivery of an abstract of title and copies of deeds and documents relating to the land in defendant's possession. Davidson v. Brown, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 288; 1 A.L.T., 43.

Requisitions on Title—Expense—Demurrer.]—Where a plaintiff prayed that the defendant (vendor) might answer requisitions on the title if great expense would not be thereby incurred, and did not aver that they could be answered without incurring such expense, a demurrer by the defendant was allowed with costs. Mudie v. Kesterson, 4 A.J.R., 172.

Reference to a Plan.]—Per Molesworth, J.—It is settled law between vendor and purchaser that the latter purchasing land on a plan exhibited by the former has no right to insist that the vendor must dispose of the rest of his property according to the plan unless the contract expressly refers to it. Per totam curiam, that the Court will look to the deed of grant itself for the contract; i.e., it will consider only the terms used in the deed and the proper construction to be put on those terms; and if the deed contains no reference to a plan showing the width of a street, the boundary of the land, and no statement of the width, a plan showing the width of the street will not be regarded by the Court in support of the express words of the contract. Davis v. The Queen, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 106, 113, 120.

Right of Vendee to Use of Streets shown on Plans Exhibited at Sale.]—The exhibition to a purchaser, of a plan showing intended streets, does not entitle him to the use of the streets unless his conveyance gives it to him. Blyth v. Parlon, 2 V.R. (E.,) 111, 114; 2 A.J.R., 75.

Doubtful Title—Dower.]—B., married before 1st January, 1837, was seised of land. He mortgaged this, his wife joining in the conveyance, to P., and afterwards sold the equity of redemption to P. By mesne assignments P.'s estate became vested in W., who mortgaged it to the plaintiff with power of sale. H. sold by auction to defendant E. The defendant's solicitor among other requisitions made one to the effect that B.'s wife's claim to dower must be released, the plaintiff's solicitor then promised to get it released, when defendant's solicitor wrote back that they declined to accept the title. The correspondence continued until the plaintiff's solicitor alleged that there was no claim to dower, and then defendant commenced an action against the auctioneer for return of the deposit-money. Bill by plaintiff for specific performance. Held that there was a doubt upon the title, and that the doubt made it bad, and that the Court would not solve a doubt in a suit between vendor and purchaser in which the person having the doubtful claim was unrepresented. Bill dismissed. Hoyle v. Edwards, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 48, 57.

Agreement to Transfer Land—Good Title.]—An agreement to give a good transfer of land implies an agreement to give a good title. Eagles v. Blain, 1 A.J.R., 153.

Objection to Title—Incurable—Land Sold Overlapping Adjoining Property.]—Lazarus v. Lowe, ante column 1469.

Conditions as to.—See preceding sub-head.

Allegation of Notice—What is Insufficient to Admit Evidence of Notice.]—A bill contained a general allegation as to notice as follows:—"The land, etc., sold to the defendant was purchased by him with notice of sale to the plaintiff and of the plaintiff having taken possession of the land and expended money thereon and of being in possession." Held that this was not sufficient to admit evidence of notice to the defendant's vendor, and that the only notice proved, being notice of plaintiff's equitable title to the defendant, and not to the defendant's vendor, the legal title in the defendant must succeed and that plaintiff was not entitled to the relief he sought. Avery v. McArthur, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 75.

Proof of.]—When notice is not distinctly proved against a purchaser the Court may direct an issue as to notice. Niemann v. Weller, 3 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 125, 133.

When Presumed.]—In a suit to set aside a conveyance as void on the ground that it was executed with notice by the vendee of a prior settlement, the vendee was held to have had notice notwithstanding that he denied it in his answer, because he did not contradict evidence raising a presumption of notice. Ronalds v. Duncan, 2 V.R. (E.,) 65; 2 A.J.R., 30, 45.

Constructive—What Amounts to—Breach of Trust—Purchaser for Value—What puts Purchaser on Inquiry.]—A settlement of land was made upon trustees, A. and B., in favour of an infant, containing powers of sale or mortgage as in consideration for a sum of £220. A. and B. conveyed to the infant's father (C.) for the said sum of £220, and C. mortgaged a fortnight afterwards to E. and F. to secure a sum of £800, the money being advanced in instalments as buildings were erected, and in default of payment the land was sold by them to G. for £1020, the conditions of sale precluding inquiry as to title beyond the deed. G. settled the property upon the defendant on the trusts of a certain marriage settlement. Held by Molesworth, J., that the sale to the father was not a breach of trust, and by Molesworth, J., and the Full Court, on appeal, that G. could not be affected by any knowledge of facts possessed by E. and F., and that the only evidence of notice as against G. was that contained in the various deeds, and that the difference in the price paid by the infant's father for the land and the amount he mortgaged it for shortly afterwards, was not sufficient to put G. on inquiry, and that he was not, therefore, affected with constructive notice of the arrangements, even if they amounted to a breach of trust. O'Brien v. Keenan, 5 A.J.R., 99, 149.

Notice of Vendor's Title—Possession.]—W. employed L. to purchase land for her, furnishing L. with part of the purchase-money. L. purchased land and got a conveyance to himself, representing to W., an illiterate old woman, that it was for her. W. remained in undisturbed possession of the land for several years before 1876. In 1876 L. sold to B. Held that B., from the fact of W.'s possession, which was well known to him, had constructive notice of W.'s title, and therefore of defect of L.'s title. Wilson v. Boyd, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 98.

Registration by Purchaser with Notice does not Give Priority.]—A purchaser, with distinct notice of the title of a prior purchaser cannot, in Equity, gain priority by registration Vockensohn v. Zeven, 3 W.W. & a'B. (E.,) 11, 15. Affirmed on appeal. Ibid 122.

II. Parties.

Who are Necessary Parties—Sale of Station Property—Sale by Mortgagee.]—P., the occupant of station property with a preference of purchase from Government of a section, sold to C., and C. mortgaged to P. to secure the purchase-money. C. made default and P. sold to G. The station property became vested after mesne assignments in B. who sold the pre-emptive section to K. The grant of the section was issued to P. after the sale. On a suit by K. against P. for a conveyance of the pre-emptive section, Held that C. was a necessary party to the suit. Kennedy v. Phillips, 2 W. & W. (E.,) 140.

See S.C., ante column 1464.

Specific Performance—Parties to Suit for—Subsequent Vendees.]—D. agreed with H. to purchase land and paid part of the purchase-money, but left a balance outstanding. D. died, and after his death H. pressed for payment. S., by arrangement, paid H., and took a conveyance of the property without noticing the sale to D., undertaking upon D.'s heir coming of age to convey to him on payment of the sum paid by him to H. D.'s heir sued H. for specific performance of the agreement made with D., and joined S., as the person in whom the legal estate then was. Held that S. was properly made a defendant. Daggett v. Hepburn, 4 A.J.R., 103.

III. Enforcement, Discharge, and Rescission.

See ante under Specific Performance.

When Granted—Speculative Purchase—Misrepresentation.]—A., having contracted for the purchase of certain land, refused to complete, alleging a misrepresentation as to its value. The vendor then filed a bill for specific performance, and A. subsequently inspected the land for the first time and found it unfenced, and by his answer set it up as a defence, alleging that the vendor's agent had, at the time of the contract, represented the land as fenced, and that but for this representation he would not have purchased. Held, under the circumstances and considering the nature of the bargain, a gambling transaction between the mortgagee, vendor, and a speculator, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree and costs. Embling v. Whitchell, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 96.

When Granted or Refused.]—Where a vendor had by his conduct estopped himself from denying the sufficiency of the memorandum, but there was a subsequent sale by him to a purchaser for value, the Court dismissed a bill for specific performance of the contract, without costs as against the vendor, but with costs as against the subsequent purchaser. Ford v. Young, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 93; 3 A.L.T., 85, 128.

When Decreed.]—Land, portion of a larger piece of which the defendant was proprietor, was offered for sale by auction. The land in question was described as having a frontage of 50 feet to P.-street. There was no statement as to what the depth of the land was, or as to the width at the rear. There was a right-of-way at the back at a distance of 117 feet from P.-street, and running parallel to it. After the sale, defendant proposed to convey to the purchaser a block having a frontage of 50 feet to P.-street, with a depth of 117 feet to the right-of-way, and a frontage to the right-of-way of 31 feet only. Plaintiff refused this, claiming to be entitled to a conveyance of a rectangular piece of land 117 feet by 50 feet. Action by plaintiff for specific performance. Held, per Molesworth, J., that the contract was sufficient within the "Statute of Frauds," since the right-of-way at the rear would define the depth, and the width would be the same at the rear as at the front; that where the back and front streets are parallel, a person buying a frontage to one street is, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, entitled to a rectangular block going back to the other street; and specific performance decreed as claimed. Crichton v. Morris, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 338.

Misdescription in Advertisement—Falsa Demonstratio at law—Question in Equity whether the Purchaser was Deceived.]—Land was advertised for sale, and in such advertisement it was correctly described in parcels as at the corner of two streets, and being part of Government Sec. 63, in a certain parish, and adjoining M.'s residence. It was quite a quarter of a mile away from M.'s residence, and this mistake was corrected by the auctioneer, who handed round the auction-room slips of paper containing a more accurate description; but the misdescription was transferred into the contract of sale which the purchaser signed. Bill by vendors for specific performance. Held that the misdescription as to the land adjoining M.'s residence showing a correct description of the land in parcels was at law a falsa demonstratio, and would not afford a defence to an action at law, but that it was open to a defendant in equity to say that he was misled; and if he were actually deceived, the Court would not enforce the contract. Issue directed to a jury as to the fact of defendant's being deceived. Sargood v. Henry, 5 A.J.R., 87.

Town Property—Error in Admeasurement—Contract—Rescission—Costs.]—Suit by H. for specific performance. By contract 23rd October, 1874, the defendant agreed to buy a piece of land having a frontage of 100 feet to a certain street in Melbourne, "be the same a little more or less, together with the buildings erected thereon." The buildings, in fact, occupied a frontage of 100 feet 5 inches, but the description in the certificate of title held by plaintiff showed a frontage of 100 feet. The plaintiff subsequently procured a certificate of title to the extra 5 inches, and demanded an increase in the purchase-money for the extra 5 inches. The defendant formally presented the transfer for signature, which the plaintiff refused to sign unless paid for the 5 inches. The plaintiff then changed his mind, and wrote to say he did not insist upon extra payment. The defendant refused to re-open the question, and commenced an action at law to recover the deposit. The plaintiff sought specific performance, and to restrain action at law. Held that minute descriptions in town property are of material importance, and that the purchaser was not bound to accept title for 100 feet only, but that the vendor was not entitled to charge for the extra 5 inches; that though at law the purchaser was entitled to treat the contract as rescinded by plaintiff's refusal to execute the transfer, yet in equity the contract is not to be determined in such a sharp manner when persons could get and give substantially what they contracted for; and that plaintiff was entitled to specific performance on paying the costs of the action and the suit. Heath v. Allen, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 176.

When Refused—Mistake of Vendee and his Principal as to Lots, the Fault of Defendant Vendee but Unintentionally Contributed to by Plaintiff.]—C., the plaintiff, wished to sell lots 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8, of which 4, 5, and 6 had clay on them fit for brickmaking, the clay from 7 and 8 having been removed. A. wished to buy, but being anxious not to appear as purchaser, employed defendant B. to buy for him. B. bargained as for a dummy principal, S. A contract was drawn as for sale of those lots, and signed by B. and C., and a deposit paid. Afterwards A. and B., on comparing notes, found that they had not bought lots 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6, which lots A. thought he was buying. Lots 2 and 3 had clay on them, but they had been previously sold, and it was A.'s object to buy lots with clay on them. B. refused to complete. On suit by C. against B. for specific performance, Held, that as to removal of clay, that B. and his principal were under a mistake not intentionally produced by plaintiff; that his conduct contributed to it, but as between them comparatively, the misapprehension was their fault, not his. Specific performance refused, there having been a mistake on defendant's part, though the plaintiff was innocent of causing such mistake. Clarke v. Byrne, 3 A.J.R., 20.

Uncertainty as to Land Sold—Cured by Vendee's Possession.]—A written agreement for the sale of land was so uncertain as to the land intended to be sold that it could not be enforced at law, but the vendee entered into possession. Subsequently the vendor sold to a third person, who had notice of the prior agreement. Held, that the possession of the vendee, coupled with the agreement, was sufficient to give the prior purchaser a good title as against the second purchaser, notwithstanding sections 49 and 50 of the "Transfer of Land Statute," and specific performance decreed. Cunningham v. Gundry, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 197.

When Decreed—Contract not too Vague to be Enforced—Compensation.]—M., as agent for S., a vendor of property which he held as lessee under the "Land Act," wrote to F., the purchaser, stating that F.'s offer was accepted as to the "30 acres of land," at a fixed price, the land to be converted into freehold; possession to be given as soon as tenant was got rid of, S. reserving to himself all right to compensation for any part of the land taken for railway purposes or allowing F. to pay half in cash and the balance on completion of title, and in a postscript adding that S. would arrange with the tenant to give F. immediate possession. F. wrote, 18th July, to both M. and S., agreeing to the terms of the letter and sending a cheque for half the purchase-money. S. then, in the course of correspondence, threw difficulties in the way, alleging the tenancy and the right to compensation; but ultimately F. was put into possession and laid out money on the land. As to the compensation, a line of railway then contemplated did not pass through the land, and F. offered a small sum to get rid of this right of compensation, which was endorsed on the transfer as an encumbrance. S. refused to complete. Held that the contract was not too vague, that S. was bound to obtain the freehold and make title, and that the Court would decree specific performance, and that the compensation was capable of adjustment by subsequent inquiries. Foreman v. Sinclair, 4 A.L.T., 65.

Part Performance—Possession by Vendee after Payment of Purchase Money.]—Possession by the vendee after the whole of the purchase-money has been paid is part performance of a verbal agreement and sufficient to give the vendee an equitable title. Dreverman v. Doherty, 1 V.R. (E.,) 4; 1 A.J.R., 7.

For facts see S.C., ante columns 1311, 1312.

Purchasers Remaining in Possession of Purchased Land—Vendor's Lien.]—M. offered in 1859 certain premises to the defendant council for sale which had been previously leased to the council. The council, by a resolution to which the seal of the council was not attached, agreed to purchase for £1000, and afterwards certain councillors present at a meeting paid one-third of the purchase-money and accepted two bills for the residue; afterwards, in 1860, the election of these councillors was set aside on quo warranto. M. executed a conveyance of the land, and the council remained in possession, not paying any rent after 31st August, 1860. The council refused to pay the first bill, and M. sued the ousted councillors on the bill, which they were compelled to pay. Suit by the councillors seeking to enforce a lien on the land for the moneys so paid on the first bill and indemnity against the second bill. Held, per Chapman, J., that the council having kept possession of the land without paying rent, and having made no disclaimer, constituted such a completion of the contract, or such a part performance amounting almost to a completion, as would have enabled M. to have obtained relief in respect of the unpaid purchase-money even though the contract was not under seal, and that the council had so far adopted the act of the councillors as its agents that it was in equity compelled to pay the bills. Per Full Court, that there was no part performance in the proper sense of the term, and that a decision of the case on that ground would involve a violation of the spirit of the "Municipal Institutions Act," but that it must be presumed that they took the land as under the conveyance and so it was unjust for them not to pay for it, and that the plaintiffs having paid for part of it were entitled to a lien on the land so far as their payment extended. Trainor v. Council of Kilmore, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 293, 301, 303, 306.

When Refused—Delay of Purchaser—Forfeiture of Deposit.]—On 3rd August, 1870, M. purchased from S. land and house for £1240. S. died on the following day, and A.S. (the defendant) on 30th August obtained a rule to administer the freehold estate. One of the conditions of the sale was that the contract should be completed by the purchaser paying the money within a month. Owing to various delays the money was not paid within the time. M. attributed the cause of delay to A.S. The land was mortgaged to G., and M. made some objection about accepting the title till the mortgage was paid off. A.S. contended that M. was aware when he entered into the contract that the mortgage was to be paid off out of the purchase-money. The mortgage was paid off, but no reconveyance was obtained, and notice was given to M. that there would be a resale at his risk if he did not at once pay his purchase-money. Two days after M. replied to this by sending a draft conveyance for perusal, but A.S.'s solicitor returned the deed, and as M. did not pay the money, a resale was made to F., and £150 deposited by M. was retained as forfeited. Held that M. was not entitled to specific performance on account of his delay; but that as the resale to F. was of a somewhat different property (the mortgage having been paid off), the deposit should not be forfeited; defendant to pay F.'s costs of suit. Martin v. Sims, 2 A.J.R., 50.

When Refused—Ambiguous Contract—Offer by Plaintiff to accept Interpretation most Unfavourable to Himself—Land Previously Sold by Defendant to Another.]—Agents for the defendant signed a memorandum of agreement for sale also signed by plaintiff as purchaser, in which it was doubtful whether the contract to pay "12s. per foot fronting that street" referred to one of two streets mentioned, or the other. The defendant had previously sold to B., another purchaser, and not a party to the suit. The plaintiff offered to give the defendant the benefit of the doubt in the contract, and pay for the larger frontage. In a suit for specific performance, Held that the contract being ambiguous, could not be enforced, even though the plaintiff had made the offer above mentioned, and that matters would be complicated by directing the defendant to convey land which he had previously sold to another. Bill dismissed. M'Carthy v. Monahan, 5 A.J.R., 5.

Sale made by Trustee whose Appointment was Bad.]—Where trustees, one of whom was appointed in excess of the powers contained in the settlement, contracted for a sale of a house, and the purchaser refused to complete, and denied that he had contracted with the trustees as trustees of the settlement, Held that the sale was made by a person who had no right to sell, and that the whole contract was void. Iffla v. Beaney, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 110.

Proviso for Compensation in Case of Mistake.]—Where a contract for sale contains a proviso for compensation in case of a mistake in the particulars, this proviso does not apply to a case where particulars are correct, but one party thought they were different. Clarke v. Byrne, 3 A.J.R., 20.

Deficiency—Compensation.]—Where a contract for sale of land described it as "more or less, 80 feet 6 inches by 41 feet 3 inches," and it was discovered that the land had only a frontage of 40 feet 3 inches to a certain street, Held that the deficiency of one foot was covered by the words "more or less," and that it was not a subject for compensation. Buxton v. Bellin, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 243.

"More or Less"—Town Property.]—A deficiency of five inches in town property is of material importance, and not covered by words "more or less." Heath v. Allen, ante columns 1473, 1474.

Misrepresentation that Unfenced Land was Fenced—Subject for Compensation and Not for Rescission. See Embling v. Whitchell, post column 1479.

Purchase through Agent—No Knowledge of Intended Reservation of Part of Property.]—Plaintiff, through his agent, agreed to buy 168 acres of land at £4 per acre, and paid part of the purchase-money, and entered into possession. The defendant, however, refused to sign the conveyance on the ground that it gave more to plaintiff than the defendant had agreed to sell; and that out of the allotments sold it had been intended to reserve a road for the convenience of adjoining owners. Plaintiff acted through an agent, and there was no distinct evidence that the agent had any knowledge of the intended reservation, and there was evidence that the plaintiff had simply given him money to purchase so many acres of land. The Court held the defence insufficient, in that if the bill were dismissed and the plaintiff went to law, he would have no clear remedy against the agent; and defendant ordered to execute a conveyance without reservation. Young v. M'Connell, 1 A.J.R., 96.

Authority of Agent Exceeded.]—A., purporting to act as agent for B., a vendor, but really authorised to find a purchaser merely, and being authorised to sell for cash, sold B.'s property to C. on credit eighteen months after he was first constituted an agent, during which time property increased in value. B. repudiated the contract. Held that A. had exceeded his authority, and specific performance at suit of C. refused. Breese v. Lindsay, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 232; 4 A.L.T., 20.

Contract made by Agent—Parol.]—A contract for the purchase of land, made by an agent, will be enforced though the agent were appointed by parol. Pain v. Flynn, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 131; 6 A.L.T., 15.

Defence—Drunkenness of Vendor.]—To a suit for specific performance of an agreement which the defendant vendor alleges that he signed when drunk, the drunkenness is available as a defence without cross bill. Scates v. King, 1 V.R. (E.,) 100; 1 A.J.R., 71.

Pleadings—Variation—Want of Mutuality.]—A purchaser filed a bill for specific performance of a written contract signed by defendant's agent for sale of land for £725. The defendant alleged that her agent was not authorised to sell for £725, but for £735, and set up a written offer made by her to plaintiff for sale at £735, which plaintiff refused. The bill did not in the alternative seek specific performance at £735. Held that as the bill did not make out the alternative case, the Court at the hearing could not decree specific performance as for £735, because the plaintiff if unwilling could not be compelled to take such a bargain. Boyce v. Lapish, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 75.

Pleadings—Demurrer—Covenant for Continuous User of Land for Specific Purpose—"Transfer of Land Statute" (No. 301), Sec. 42—"Local Government Act" (No. 506), Secs. 165, 169.]—The defendant being registered as proprietor under the Act No. 301, agreed to sell land to the plaintiff corporation, on which plaintiff agreed to erect buildings for council chambers and agreed to continue the use of them for that purpose. The plaintiff erected the buildings, which had been used for that purpose for more than a year, but the defendant refused to execute a transfer. Bill by plaintiff for specific performance without any offer in the bill to perform the agreement or to secure to the defendant the benefit of it. Held, on demurrer, that the defendant was bound to execute the transfer with such security as she could legally get. Semble that the agreement to bind the corporation's successors to use the land for a particular purpose was effectual under Act No. 506. Semble that such a covenant might be entered as an encumbrance under Act No. 301. Demurrer overruled. Mayor, &c., of Brunswick v. Dawson, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 2.

Costs.]—Where plaintiff prior to suit sent letters to defendant stating he had purchased property from a person as agent for him, and defendant did not reply denying the authority, the Court while dismissing the bill on the ground that the authority was not proved, did so without costs. Breese v. Lindsay, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 232; 4 A.L.T., 20.

When Vendor Fails to Make Title as to Part of the Land Sold.]—Land was described as "41 feet 6 inches fronting to Brunswick-street, Collingwood," and was sold by that description, but on survey it proved that 1 foot 10 inches of this frontage was under a neighbour's house. The buyer rescinded the contract and sued the auctioneer who conducted the sale for paying the purchase-money to the vendor without his authority before the title was approved of, and recovered a verdict. On rule nisi for a nonsuit, Held that this was not a case of misdescription in respect of which the buyer was entitled only to compensation, the purchase being of frontage to a particular street, but was a failure to make title to 1 foot 10 inches of the land sold, entitling the buyer to a rescission; that even if it were a misdescription, yet as the land was sold by frontage in feet and inches, the seller could not compel the buyer to take less than he had purchased; that the case not being one in which a Court of Equity would compel specific performance, the Court as a court of law would act on the same lines and permit the buyer to rescind. Fergie v. Byrne, 3 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 56.

And see Heath v. Allen, ante columns 1473, 1474.

Recovery of Deposit Money on Defect of Title.]—McC. sold to E. certain land sold as lot 2, "on which is erected the Ship Inn, &c.," the admeasurements being given. E. alleged that McC. could not make a title as the Inn encroached upon a street, this street was marked on the Government maps, but as no termini were fixed, and the street was not formed, and houses subsequently erected did not give the same alignment, E. sued to recover his deposit money and recovered a verdict. Held on rule nisi for a nonsuit or new trial that the house itself could not give the alignment of the street, and that it was a proper case for a rescission of the contract and not for compensation; that the plaintiff's knowledge of the encroachment is disregarded at law; and per Stephen, J., that the vendor must show an unassailable title. Rule refused. Enwright v. M'Caw, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 196.

Question of Title—Noncompliance with Requisitions.]—Where land sold was in the contract described as having a house on it and the purchaser was under an obligation under an agreement made by a former owner with a city council to set back his house, when rebuilding or altering, nine inches from a certain street, Held that this was not a question of conveyance involving compensation, but of title, and that vendor might, on objection to title being taken, rescind the contract under a condition giving him power to do so when an objection was raised which he was unable or unwilling to remove. Buxton v. Bellin, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 243.

Misrepresentation—Compensation.]—A misrepresentation that land, unfenced, was fenced, would afford matter for compensation only, and not for rescission of the contract, because the land unfenced would not be useless to the purchaser. Issue upon the question of misrepresentation therefore refused. Embling v. Whitchell, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 96, 98.

(c) Rights and Duties of Vendor and Purchaser.

Obligation to Execute Conveyance—Payment of Purchase-Money.]—It is the duty of the vendor to execute the conveyance when tendered for execution. If he sue upon the contract he must assert that he was ready and willing to execute the conveyance if tendered; he has not to allege a performance or tender of anything by him. The execution of the conveyance and the payment of the purchase-money are concurrent acts. In an action upon a contract for sale the declaration set out that it was agreed that W., the plaintiff and purchaser should pay the vendor the residue of the purchase-money on the completion; that the vendor should on payment execute a proper conveyance; and that the vendor did not make title, and refused to execute until after payment. Held that a plea by defendant that plaintiff did not pay the residue of the purchase-money was bad, it being unnecessary under the circumstances for the plaintiff to tender the money, such payment not being a condition precedent to the obligation to execute a conveyance. Wiper v. O'Shanassy, 5 A.J.R., 137.

Construction of Conditions—Condition Precedent.]—A contract for the sale of land provided that certain portions of the purchase-money were to be paid in a certain manner, and that upon payment of the final balance upon a certain day the vendor would sign a transfer and execute a conveyance. Held that payment of the balance on the date fixed was not a condition precedent to the vendor making title or being ready and willing to sign the transfer and execute the conveyance; but that the payment of the money and the execution of the transfer and conveyance were to be concurrent and independent acts. Campbell v. Bent, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 117; 1 A.L.T., 170.

Insurance by Purchaser before Title Given—Rescission of Contract—Right to Policy-moneys.]—A purchaser after contract for purchase of land, but before title given or possession taken, insured the premises on the land in her own name for £200. Before the conveyance was executed the houses were burned down, and the purchaser recovered the money from the insurance company; she afterwards rescinded the contract. Suit by vendor for specific performance of contract, or in alternative for payment of moneys recovered on policy. Held that purchaser's right to insurance moneys was a matter between herself and the insurance company in which the plaintiff had no interest. Bartlett v. Looney, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 14.

Deterioration between Sale and Possession.]—The vendor is not liable for deterioration (removal of fixtures) of the property between sale and possession where it is occasioned by a third person. Smith v. Hayles, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 237.

Overpaid Purchase-money—Partners effecting a Partition of Partnership Land.]—Where land has been sold and the relation of vendor and purchaser established, not only has the vendor a lien for the unpaid purchase-money, but the vendee has a lien for his deposit; in fact there is a mutuality of lien. And there is no distinction in cases which come nearer to cases of exchange between unpaid purchase-money and overpaid purchase-money, and where upon a computation of value one is found to have to pay one sum and one another, and if such double lien be adjusted by a balance which shows there has been an over-payment, there is an equitable duty to pay it back which keeps the lien alive till it is satisfied. M. and Y. being in partnership agreed to divide partnership land on the assumption that M.'s portion was worth £700 more than Y.'s, and that Y. in the division should get the whole benefit of this excess. On a valuation Y.'s portion was found to be worth £655 more than M.'s, and M. sold part of this land to Y. for £461, and paid Y. the balance of the £655. On a suit by M. to rectify the mistake and offering to take back the land conveyed to Y. by the deed of partition on a proper adjustment, Held that M. was entitled to a lien for his overpaid purchase-money, and decreed that M. should be repaid by Y. the sum lost by M. in the adjustment, or in the alternative that Y. might rescind his purchase, in which case M. would pay to Y. the difference between the sum he lost on adjustment, and the £461. Manson v. Yeo, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 187, 189, 191.

Purchase-money—How Raised under 11 Geo. IV., and 1 Will IV., Cap. 47.]—In a suit by a vendor of real estate devised to infants, praying a sale in satisfaction of his lien for unpaid purchase-money, the Court has no jurisdiction under 11 Geo. IV. and 1 Will IV., Cap. 47, to direct that the amount charged shall be raised by mortgage instead of by sale. Walker v. Hogan, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 88.

Councillors Paying Purchase-money of Land Purchased for Council—Council Remaining in Possession of Land, but Repudiating Contract—Councillors Entitled to a Quasi-Vendor's Lien upon Land for Money Paid.]—Trainor v. Council of Kilmore, ante columns 1475, 1476.

Interest on.]—S. purchased land from defendants under a contract which provided that "if from any cause whatever the purchase should not be completed at the time stated, the purchaser should pay interest on the unpaid residue until the time of completion." The purchaser did not pay the balance on the day fixed, and afterwards tendered a conveyance for execution, but one of the vendors (defendants) being absent from the colony, the execution was delayed for four or five months. Held that the plaintiff (S.) was bound to pay the interest until delivery of the conveyance. Shilton v. Nutt, 3 V.L.R. (L.,) 323.

Interest on.]—In a suit for specific performance by a purchaser in possession against the vendor, the Court allowed the vendor interest upon the unpaid purchase-money at 8 per cent. per annum from the date of the contract. Macgregor v. Templeton, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 195; 4 A.L.T., 9.

Mortgage Paid Off by Purchaser—Set-off against Purchase-money.]—Plaintiff obtained a decree for specific performance in the County Court, with liberty to apply. The land was subject to a mortgage, as to which no direction was made in the decree. Plaintiff paid off the mortgage, and moved in the suit for liberty to set-off the amount of the mortgage against the purchase-money, but the County Court Judge refused to make the order. Upon appeal, affirmed, as the plaintiff could only obtain the relief sought by substituting fresh substantive proceedings with reference thereto. Warren v. Perry, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 103; 1 A.L.T., 195.

Contract to "Give Acceptances."]—In a contract for the sale of land the purchaser agreed to pay a certain proportion as deposit and to give acceptances for the balance. Held that the contract meant that the purchaser was to accept the bills when the vendor submitted them for acceptance, and that the purchaser was not liable to be sued for a breach of the contract until the bills had been tendered to him for acceptance and refused. Universal Permanent Building Society v. Kilpatrick, 7 V.L.R. (L.,) 58; 2 A.L.T., 127.

Lien does not Extend to Subsequent Advances.]—D. contracted with H. for the purchase of land, and paid part of the purchase-money, but left the balance unpaid, and no rate of interest was specified. Frequent transactions took place between H. and D., in which the balance was always in favour of H. After D.'s death H. pressed for payment, which, by arrangement with D.'s widow, was made by S., who took a conveyance of the property without noticing the sale to D., undertaking to convey to D.'s heir upon coming of age and upon payment of the amount paid by S. D.'s heir sued H. for specific performance of the contract with D., and H. set up a parol agreement with D. that his lien should be extended to cover subsequent advances. Held, that H.'s lien for unpaid purchase-money could not be extended to cover subsequent advances by such an agreement. Upon appeal, Held that a vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money is not equivalent in all respects to an equitable mortgage by deposit of deeds, and cannot be extended by parol evidence to comprise subsequent advances, and that D.'s heir was entitled to specific performance of the agreement with D. by conveyance to him on payment of the balance of the purchase-money unpaid at D.'s death, independently of the current accounts between D. and H. Daggett v. Hepburn, 4 A.J.R., 103; on appeal, ibid 191.

Condition Precedent—On Sale of Ground comprised in an Application for a Mining Lease Readiness to Assign or Transfer is not a Condition Precedent to Vendor's Right to recover Purchase-money.]—Cane v. Sinclair, ante column 201.

Misrepresentation as to Title — Measure of Damages.]—A contract was entered into between A. and B. for the sale of land in possession; title, Crown grant. The title made by B. (the vendor) was to a reversion expectant upon the determination of an equitable term of five years. A. sued B. in an action of deceit, and recovered a verdict for £139 on the first count that the title was not Crown grant, but B. got a verdict on the second count, which was for failing to perform conditions of sale, damages, and costs of investigating title. On rule nisi for new trial on ground of excessive damages, Held that the general rule was that the measure of damages in such a case was the difference between the actual value and the purchase-money, and the difference between the costs of investigating a title from the Crown (that given in contract) and the costs of investigating the title actually made, but that as the damages, as given at the trial, did not fall under either of those heads, the damages must be reduced to 1s., or else rule absolute for new trial. Raeburn v. Murphy, 5 A.J.R., 23.

Failure to Make Title—Consent of Third Person Necessary.]—C. was a devisee in trust of certain land, with a power of sale, with the consent of one M., a beneficiary. C. sold without consent, which he was unable afterwards to obtain. The purchaser (W.,) at C.'s instigation, took possession. C. died, and O'S. was his executor. The new trustee appointed on C.'s death brought ejectment, and W. was ejected. W. then sued O'S., and the jury gave him a verdict of £127, and contingently assessed at £416 the difference between the contract price and the present value of the land. On rule nisi for a new trial, Held that C. contracting to sell land, and knowing he had no title to it, nor any means of acquiring it, the only damages recoverable by W. were the expenses incurred; other damages must be obtained in an action of deceit; and that W. was not entitled to a verdict for the £416. Rule discharged. Wiper v. O'Shanassy, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 10.

Failure to give Possession—Plea that Purchaser became Registered Proprietor under Act No. 301.] To an action for breach of contract to give possession on a certain day of land sold by contract, defendant pleaded that before breach plaintiff procured a transfer under Act No. 301 and a certificate of title in his own name. Held, on demurrer, that the plea was bad, that it was no answer to the failure to give possession. Phœnix Foundry Coy. v. Hunt, 5 A.J.R., 70.

See also S.P., ibid p. 144.

Failing to Give Possession.]—A transfer of a certificate of title had been made to the purchaser by the vendor, the vendor's solicitor giving a letter of guaranty that no encumbrance existed. The purchaser was obliged to proceed in ejectment, and to pay certain costs. Held that the purchaser could recover as damages the costs of ejectment. Whelan v. Hannigan, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 35.

Rsmoteness.]—In an action for breach of contract on failing to give possession of land on a certain day, Held that damages claimed for storage of an extra quantity of coke ordered by plaintiffs in anticipation of their having possession were too remote, not flowing naturally from the breach and not being within defendant's contemplation; that damages for the price of an iron girder for a bridge on the land were not too remote, the defendant being aware of the purpose for which the plaintiff bought the land. Phœnix Foundry Coy. v. Hunt, 5 A.J.R., 144.

Interest on Purchase-money— Dilapidation—Consent Decree in Equity.]—A. and B. formed a binding contract as to the sale of land, but the completion was delayed through the default of the vendor, there being tenants of his in possession whom he had difficulty in turning out. During this delay the purchaser had the purchase-money ready, having borrowed it on mortgage, and the property became dilapidated through deliberate acts of the vendor's tenants. There had also been a consent decree in equity as to the same land which was silent as to compensation. Held that the purchaser was entitled to recover as damages:—(1) the interest on the purchase-money; (2) the amount claimed for dilapidation; and that the consent decree not being pleaded was no defence; and, per Stephen, J., such a decree does not preclude an action for damages at law. Morrison v. Neill, 1 V.L.R. (L.,) 287.

Acquiescence—General Principles.]—There is an important distinction depending upon whether the plaintiff has or has not an interest; if the plaintiff has any interest his conduct must amount to abandonment. In order to deprive a person of an estate on the ground of estoppel by acquiescence, his conduct must be such that the person misled acts upon a belief which is encouraged, or at all events known to exist by the other; and it is not enough if the defendant acted upon a belief that he had a good title when he had no right so to believe, and when the infirmity of his title arose out of his own wrongful act. Atkinson v. Slack, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 128.

Acquiescence—What is.]—Acquiescence means a standing by with knowledge of one's right both in fact and law. Clark v. Clark, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 303, 327.

Acquiescence—Contribution among Shareholders of a Company—Silence of a Shareholder when it does not Amount to Acquiescence.]—C. and others, directors of a company, had signed a letter to a bank, authorising a manager to draw cheques on it. P., a shareholder, but not a director, was present when the directors agreed to that course, and expressed no dissent, but did not sign the letter. C. was made to pay the amount, and sued P. for contribution. Held that the defendant's (P.'s) silence did not amount to acquiescence, as he was only present at the meeting as a shareholder, and had no authority to protest against the course adopted. Cherry v. Perkins, 3 V.R. (L.,) 87; 3 A.J.R., 51.

Acquiescence — Shareholders Barred by.]—A shareholder in a mining company whose shares had been forfeited, lying by for six years, alleging that he had received no notice of forfeiture, but making no inquiries, and bringing his suit after the company proved successful, was Held by Molesworth, J., not barred by laches or acquiescence, but disentitled to costs. WARRANTY.

Breach of—When an Answer to an Action to Recover the Purchase-money.]—A breach of a contract of warranty is not an answer to an action brought on a contract of sale to recover the purchase-money, unless the defendant is able to show that the goods, for the price of which the action is brought, were not, at the time they were delivered, of any value whatsoever, and that the consideration for the defendant's contract has, therefore, wholly failed. A plea to a declaration after delivery for the price of goods sold, stating breach of warranty that they were sound, and by reason of such breach they were diminished in value to the extent of the plaintiff's claim and were of no value, is not an answer to the action. McMillan v. Sampson, 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 74; 5 A.L.T., 193.

And if the vendee before the sale was aware that the street was obstructed, he is in the same position as if the vendor had told him of it. Moss v. Cohen, 2 A.J.R., 108.

By Person in Skilled Occupation of Soundness of his Opinion.]—No person in a skilled occupation, e.g., a medical practitioner, is required to warrant the soundness of his opinion. Roberts v. Hadden, 4 A.J.R., 167, 181.

WASTE.

By Tenant for Life and Administratix—Quarrying for Stone—Measure of Damages.]—On further directions in a suit for administration of the trusts of a will where the trustees had all renounced and the tenant for life had obtained administration, Held that the administratrix having quarried for stone, she being tenant for life without power of waste, should be charged with the loss the land had sustained and not the actual amount she had received, the former being the larger sum. Spotswood v. Hand, 5 A.J.R., 85.

Injunction to Restrain—Parties.]—A. let land to B., who sublet part to C. C. entered into an agreement with D., under which D. entered and committed waste. On a bill by A. against B. and D. only to restrain waste, Held that C., not being a party to the suit, no injunction could be granted as to the land sublet to him. Cruthers v. White, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 133.

Cutting Timber—Motion to Restrain—Injunction.]—On a motion by plaintiff to restrain defendant from cutting all trees, he did not show what were ornamental by the contract, nor what were timber trees in the locality; but the defendant admitted that some of the trees growing on the land were useful for building purposes. Held that the plaintiff ought to have shown which trees were either ornamental or timber; but that the admission of the defendant was sufficient material for an injunction as to the sort of trees admitted by him to be timber; and an injunction was granted as to these only. Bruce v. Atkins, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 141.

WATER, WATER COMPANY, AND WATERCOURSE.

Water Company—Duty to Supply Water—22 Vict. No. 69, Secs. 41, 68 (ii.)]—Under Sec. 41 of the "Bendigo Waterworks Act" (No. 69,) on the completion of the waterworks, all persons complying with the provisions of the Act are entitled to require the company to supply them as Sec. 41 directs; and where service pipes have been laid on to premises, the occupier of the premises is entitled to be supplied with water at the price specified in Sec. 68 (ii.,) although the water may not be required for mining or domestic purposes. Bendigo Waterworks Coy. v. Thunder, 1 V.R. (L.,) 76; 1 A.J.R., 87.

"Bendigo Waterworks Act," Sec. 45—Construction—"Charged."]—The word "charged" in Sec. 48 of the "Bendigo Waterworks Act" (No. 69,) must be taken to mean that there must be sufficient pressure in the pipes to allow of the water flowing from them through the plugs which the company had fixed. Bendigo Waterworks Coy. v. Fletcher, 2 V.R. (L.,) 43; 2 A.J.R., 40.

Complaint for not Keeping Pipes Charged—"Bendigo Waterworks Act," Sec. 45—Evidence.] —F. sued the Bendigo Waterworks Company for not keeping their pipes charged. Sec. 45 of the "Bendigo Waterworks Act" (No. 69,) under which the company was incorporated, imposed a penalty on the company if they failed to keep their pipes "charged" with water except in cases of drought, while the pipes were being repaired, or through other unavoidable cause or accident. Held that it was optional for the complainant to give evidence direct or rebutting or not at all, in order to show that the case in respect of which he sued did not fall within the exceptions mentioned in the Act; and that it lay upon the company to prove affirmatively that the failure was within such exceptions. Ibid.

Rates—When Enforceable—No. 59, Sec. 5.]—The Board of Land and Works caused notice to be given, in accordance with the Act 21 Vict., No. 59, Sec. 5, and in compliance with that notice, F., owner of a messuage, and referred to in such notice, caused a pipe and stop-cocks to be laid so as to convey water within such messuage. F. paid rates, duly made, up to 12th February, 1864, when he gave notice that he intended to discontinue using the water so supplied, and paid his rates up to the end of the then current half-year. Before the end of the half-year (30th June) he removed the pipe and stop-cocks so that water could no longer be supplied, unless the pipe and stop cocks were again laid down. F. used no more water, but the board were always ready and willing to supply him. F. refused to pay rates for a period subsequent to June, 1864, and the board distrained for such rates. On case stated, Held that under the Act No. 59, the laying down of a pipe and stop-cocks was equivalent to an actual supply of water, the use of the words "premises so supplied" showing that it is the premises that are supplied, wholly irrespective of the individual wants of each owner, and of whether he chooses to use what is so supplied; that the rates were payable whether the water were used or not after such supply, and that the distress was legal. Fellows v. The Board of Land and Works, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 198.

Rates—Sliding Scale—Act No. 500, Sec. 5—Bye-Law.]—Under Sec. 5 of the "Local Government Bodies Loan Act 1872 Amendment Act" (No. 500,) which enacts that a water rate "may vary in amount upon a sliding scale according to the valuation of the various rateable properties," a municipal council made a bye-law imposing a rate upon the annual value of each house above £10 and not exceeding £100, and a lesser rate on the annual value of each house above the annual value of £100 and not exceeding £200, and a still less rate on the annual value of a house above £200 and not exceeding £300. Under this bye-law the council rated the respondent's house, by rating it pro tanto under such subdivision of the bye-law in turn, rating the surplus over £10 at the rate between that and £100, and the surplus over £100 at the rate between that and £200, and so on. Held that the rate must be such that each property is rated on its own valuation as a whole, and must not be rated piecemeal under each of the lower grades up to that under which it properly falls. Mayor, &c., of Ararat v. Grano, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 7.

Watercourse—In Charge of Municipal Council—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 400.]—A watercourse which passes through private land within a municipality is not taken under the charge of the council so as to render it a "watercouse" within the meaning of Sec. 400 of the "Local Government Act 1874" (No. 506,) merely because the council constructs a crossing over such watercourse where it flows over a street; and the owners of the private land will not be liable for obstructing such a watercourse. The section only applies to artificial watercourses, or to natural channels which the council may have improved, and upon which they may execute work for the purpose of making them more effective. Moloney v. Drought, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 180.

Interference with Creek—Creek Managed as a Road, not as a Watercourse—Jurisdiction of Justices—Question of Title—Mining Claim—"Local Government Act 1874," Sec. 400.]—See Regina v. Mayor of Walhalla, ex parte O'Grady, ante column 747.

"Waterworks Statute" (No. 288)—License to Work Puddling-mill under Sec. 15 confers no Easement as regards Flow of Sludge—Section is Prospective—Jurisdiction of Justices.]—Sec. 15 of the "Waterworks Statute" (No. 288) confers no easement as regards the flow of sludge over Crown lands, but such flow is merely tolerated as a necessary adjunct of the license. If the holder of such a license be ordered to stop the flow of such sludge the licensee is bound to do so, and the section being prospective affects such flow already allowed by him; and the continuance in allowing such flow, after being ordered to discontinue, is a fresh committing of the offence; and the fact of having allowed such sludge to flow before gives no right to do so after an order to discontinue, and no question of right or title is involved to oust the jurisdiction of justices in such a case. Regina v. M'Intyre, 5 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 25.

Creation.]—The plaintiffs took up a claim on vacant Crown land under miners' rights. On the subsequent sale of the Crown land above and below the claim, spaces for roads were reserved between the land sold and the claim in parallel lines, which would, if produced, have included a portion of the claim including that portion on which the shaft was sunk, and such a road was in fact delineated on the plan of sale. A proclamation in the Government Gazette, under No. 225, Secs. 11 and 12, fixed the roads as shown in the plan, and the municipal corporation of the district began to form the road across the claim. The plaintiffs thereupon sued the corporation for trespass. Held that the plaintiffs' rights could only be defeated by an express act of the Crown, that a direct intervention by effectually making a road would defeat the title; but that the land in dispute had never legally been made a road. Mayor, &c., of Eaglehawk v. Waddington, 5 W.W. & A'B. (M.,) 6.

By Proclamation—Over Railway.]—A Crown grant of certain lands was made to a railway company "subject to the trusts, conditions, uses, and provisoes hereinafter contained." One of the provisoes so contained was as follows:—"Provided nevertheless and we do hereby reserve unto us, our heirs, &c., all mines of coal and such parts or so much of the said land as may hereafter be required for making public ways, canals, railroads, sewers or drains in, over, and through the same, to be set out by our Governor for the time being of our said colony of Victoria, or some person by him authorised in that respect." By proclamation the Governor set out a public right-of-way across the railway. The company arrested a person for using the right-of-way, who sued the officer arresting him for trespass for such arrest. Held that the reservation was good. Jenkyns v. Elsdon, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 145.

Evidence of.]—A Crown grant of land adjoining a road describing it as a Government road accompanied with evidence of user of the road as a public road is evidence of dedication. House v. Ah Sue, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 41.

What Amounts to Dedication—27 Vict. No. 178, Sec. 60—14 Vict. No. 20.]—A right-of-way, if not made in accordance with the notice under 14 Vict. No. 20, and the plan exhibited previously to its formation, does not become the property of the corporation so as to be a right-of-way; and the Act No. 178, Sec. 60, does not apply to such a right-of-way, nor will any action lie against a person, part of whose land has been taken in by the right-of-way, for obstructing such right-of-way. Strong v. Smith, 1 A.J.R., 89.

"Land Act 1869"—What is Sufficient Proclamation—Notice Signed by Minister.]—A notice signed by a Minister of the Crown (but not by the Governor or any person by his command, and not under the seal of the colony), purporting to proclaim a road under the "Land Act 1869" (No. 360,) Sec. 38, is not a valid proclamation of such road. Mayor of Melbourne v. The Queen, 2 V.R. (E.,) 183; 2 A.J.R., 125.

Creation.]—An owner of land may, without deed, dedicate a portion of it to the public as a highway, and, if the public accept it, it becomes irrevocably such; but there is no authority showing that other public easements can be similarly created. Webb v. Were, 2 V.L.R. (E.) 28.

Property of Crown in—Grant of Land Adjoining Way.]—Held, per Higinbotham and Williams, JJ., overruling Davis v. The Queen [6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 106], that property in the soil "ad medium filum viae" in a public street, road, or highway in Victoria cannot be and never has been created by virtue merely of a grant by the Crown of land adjoining such road, street, or highway. The property in such street, road, or highway remains in the Crown. Garibaldi Coy. v. Craven's New Chum Coy., 10 V.L.R. (L.,) 233; 6 A.L.T., 93.

Adjoining Owners—Liability for Expenses of Repairing Road—"Melbourne Corporation Amending Act" (No. 178,) Sec. 59—Flagging Footpaths.]—In the case of an owner of a corner allotment where the footpath at the corner extends further than his frontage, the Court held that half the expenses of such excess was to be borne by all the owners of tenements before whose frontages the footpath ran in proportion to their respective frontages. M'Kean v. The Mayor of Melbourne, 5 A.J.R., 129.

Cost of Paving—Act No. 359, Sec. 317.]—Where flagging has been laid down in front of the property of several owners before any one of them can be proceeded against for his share, he is entitled to know not only the particulars of what was done opposite his own house, but also of the total expenditure. Semble, it would be sufficient if he were told that the price of the whole was so much per yard. *Regina v. Repairing Pavement—"Melbourne and Geelong Corporations Amendment Act" (No. 178,) Secs. 59, 60—Ratification of Demand.]—W. was summoned for half the expenses of flagging a pavement in front of his house; the pavement had been flagged before and half the expense of such had been borne by adjoining owners. The notice containing the demand was made and signed by the town treasurer. Held that Sec. 59 of the Act authorised the recovery of half the expenses of repairing or relaying a pavement previously laid down; and that though the treasurer was not authorised to make the demand yet the council by its acts had ratified the agency and the ratification related back to the time of demand. *Wright v. WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

Act No. 151—Examination and Comparison of Weighing Machines.]—Under Act No. 151 the owner of every weighing machine is compelled to have his machine true and accurate, and provision is made for any machines being examined and compared, on payment by the owner of the proper fees. In comparing a machine capable of weighing over 56 lbs., the inspector may use other weights besides the standards supplied by the Government, if such extra weights have been first verified by the standards. Council of Ballarat v. O'Connor, 1 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 1.

Act No. 151—Comparing and Stamping Machines Capable of Weighing over 56 lbs.]—Although so far as the inspector of weights and measures is concerned, he is bound by the Act No. 151 (repealed and re-enacted by "Weights and Measures Act 1864") to compare every machine, no matter of what sort, and to stamp it when necessary, quære, whether, so far as the owner is concerned, such machine need be compared and stamped by the inspector. Ibid.

"Weights and Measures Statute 1864" (No. 215,) Sec. 49—Forfeiture Under not within the Meaning of Sec. 8 of "Interpretation Statute."]—Regina v. Caddy, ante column 736.

Inspecting—Post Office—"Weights and Measures Statute 1864," Sec. 49.]—A post office being conducted under the authority of the Crown, is not within the operation of the "Weights and Measures Statute 1864," since the Crown is not named in the Statute, and is not bound by it. A post office is not, therefore, a place which an inspector has a right, under Sec. 49 of the Act, to enter for the purpose of inspecting the weights and weighing machines. Pollard v. Gregory, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 260.

WILL.

I. Testamentary Capacity.

Mental Infirmity—Undue Influence—Son obtaining Devise of Share of Intemperate Brother on Honorary Trust for Him.]—A testatrix made a will, December, 1871, by which her son H. received a share in her realty, the defendant G. being an executor. In July, 1872, she became very ill, and the doctor advised her to make her will. The interest left to H. in the former will was not to be disposed of except with the written consent of the trustees, this being put in on account of H.'s intemperate habits. On 31st July G. took the old will to a solicitor, with alterations written in pencil, the chief alteration being the devise of H.'s share to G., which G. explained was to be held upon honorary trust for H. The solicitor prepared a new will following the alterations, which were read over to the testatrix and assented to by her, and then executed. The whole weight of evidence was in favour of the mental capacity of the testatrix, though she was in a weak state of health. There was also evidence that special mention was made in H.'s presence of the alteration, viz., H.'s share going to G., and of G.'s intention to execute a declaration of trust in H.'s favour, to which the testatrix assented. Held that the will of 31st July, 1872, was duly executed, and that the testatrix was competent at the time, and that G. had not procured her signature by undue influence. Waugh v. Waugh, 3 A.J.R., 115, 116.

Illusions.]—Where a testator had a severe fall from his horse and received injury to his spine, from which he suffered from temporary illusions but to which the medical evidence did not point as permanent, the Court granted probate to a will made in an apparently lucid interval, being of opinion that there were no permanent illusions so as to render it incumbent to show that they had ceased. In the Will of Doolan, 5 A.J.R., 155.

Delusions.]—The Court set aside probate of a will made by a testator, who was proved to have had delusions as to the chastity of his wife, and as to intentions on her part to murder him, and who had based his will on such delusions, and granted administration to the widow. In the Will of Lecerf, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 9; 1 A.L.T., 173.

Insanity—Drunkenness—Delusions—Intelligence as to Actual Execution of Will.]—The will of a person who shows at times decided symptoms of insanity, and whose mind is being gradually impaired by drunkenness, and who has delusions on certain points, is valid, if the proceedings as to the actual execution show full intelligence of such proceedings. In re Kerr, 2 A.L.T., 41.

Permanent Delusions.]—A man having delusions, even permanent, may make a will to be admitted to probate, if the Court is satisfied of his mental capacity on the subject of the will at the exact time of the execution, and that the delusions could not be the cause of the will. In the Will of Abel, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 34, 41; 4 A.L.T., 73.

Intelligence of Testator Deficient as to Value of Property and Disposition thereof.]—Where a testator, who had acted as a madman or idiot on several occasions shortly before he made his will, but had carried on the ordinary business of life before and after it, so as to cause no doubt of his sanity in those with whom he dealt, and who was not able distinctly to recollect or understand the value of his property or his disposition of it, made his will, the Court held that there was sufficient evidence of insanity to justify it in setting aside the will. In re Burns, 2 A.L.T., 15.

Will made during Coverture—Assent of Husband.]—A married woman whose husband had deserted her, maintained herself by her own earnings, and made savings, which she deposited in a Savings Bank. By will she bequeathed a few trifling legacies, and bequeathed the remainder of her personal estate to one W.G., her adopted son. After her death, her husband, on being informed of the will, claimed by letter all the personal estate she had at her death; but authorised the executors named in the will "to turn everything over to W.G., and get the cash transferred to his name." The will was never proved, and the husband subsequently dying abroad intestate, and leaving no property in Victoria other than that purporting to be bequeathed by his wife, a suit was instituted by the husband's next-of-kin claiming to administer this property as part of the husband's estate. Held that the husband had not assented to the wife's will so as to make it valid; and that his next-of-kin was entitled to administration of the property in the wife's possession at her death. Grimmett v. Grimmett, 2 V. R. (I. E. & M.,) 63; 2 A.J.R., 101.

Licenses under "Land Act 1865," Sec. 42, by Feme Sole—Marriage—Subsequent Fee Simple under "Land Act 1869"—"Married Women's Property Act," Secs. 2, 3, 4.]—A testatrix before marriage obtained licenses under Sec. 42 of the "Land Act 1865" to occupy Crown lands, and during their currency, and before the passing of the "Married Women's Property Act" (No. 384) she married. After the passing of that Act she acquired the fee simple under the "Land Act 1869," Sec. 31, and the Crown grant was issued to her, with her husband's assent, but in her maiden name. Held that the land passed by her will as if she had been a feme sole. In the Will of M'Losky, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 24.

Act No. 301, Sec. 60.]—Certain land under the Act No. 301, was conveyed to a married woman with her husband's consent, and paid for out of her separate estate. Held that as to the land she had a disposing power. In the Will of Tregurtha, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 89.

(c) Undue Influence.

Suspicions which do not Exclude every other Hypothesis than that of Undue Influence.]—Suspicions that leave any other hypothesis open than that of undue influence are not sufficient to set a will aside. Appeal from the County Court against a decision setting aside a will as obtained by undue influence. The testatrix had made a former will wholly in favour of her daughter, but the daughter left the mother (testatrix,) who was suffering from a loathsome disease, and the testatrix made another will—the one in question—by which she gave half of her property to the daughter, and half to M. with whom she had been residing. It appeared that the testatrix had proper disposing power at the time, and that the will was duly executed; but that the daughter had not been sent for at the time of execution, and that M. had said she never wished to take away all the property from the daughter, and that half would satisfy her. Held, per totam curiam, that there was no evidence of constraint over the testatrix, and that the circumstances, though suspicious, did not negative every other hypothesis but that of undue influence. Appeal allowed. Miller v. Farr, 3 A.J.R., 129.

Power of a Mesmerist—Exclusion of Visitors.]—In order to set a will aside in respect of the exclusion of visitors from a testator, it should appear probable that the will was the result of such exclusion. For observations on the circumstances which will induce the Court to set aside a will as obtained by the undue influence of a person claiming great and almost supernatural power over people as a mesmerist, see In the Will of Lamont, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.) 86.

And see as to what was not held to be undue influence, Waugh v. Waugh, ante column 1498.

II. Testamentary Instruments, What Entitled to Probate, &c.

Of Person going through Form of Marriage.]—Where a person had gone through a form of marriage with a woman whose husband was then alive, and a copy of his will which was made in duplicate was proved in England, and on the motion in this colony for probate to the other copy, nothing appeared in the affidavits about the marriage ceremony, Held that the Court would only act on the materials before it; and probate granted. In the Will of Montgomery, 4 A.J.R., 5.

Forged Will—Admissibility of Statement of Deceased Witness to Will.]—See In the Will of P. C. Buckley, 5 A.J.R., 5.

Omission of Date.]—Though the omission of the date of a will may be immaterial as to its validity, the Court requires evidence as to the date of execution. In the Will of Turner, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 71.

Error in Date of Will—Date in Order.]—A will was dated 22nd December, one thousand eight hundred and eighty. . . . The real date of execution was 22nd December, 1882, the testator omitting to fill in the blank space. The Court granted an order specifying the true date of the execution in the order and the probate. In the Will of Mason, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 37.

Will Dealing only with Real Estate in another Colony.]—A testatrix by will left all her property to her husband, and by a subsequent will appointed certain real estate in Tasmania equally among her children. Held that the second will operated as a declaration of trust of freehold in Tasmania, and that the Court had not anything affirmative to do with it, and could not grant probate of it. In the Will of Lilley, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 32; 4 A.L.T., 81.

Old Will.]—The Court is not inclined to grant probate of an old will for the purpose of giving greater facility for making title. In the Estate of Mather, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 24; 3 A.L.T., 134.

Will not Following Instructions.]—A solicitor received instructions from a testator to leave his property to his wife and daughter, but instead of so drawing the will the solicitor drew up one leaving the property to the wife and daughter for their joint lives, with remainder to the daughter, and the will was not read over to the testator owing to the danger of his becoming unconscious. Held that, the solicitor not having followed the instructions given him, probate should be refused. In the Will of King, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 34.

If an attorney goes beyond the precise instructions it must be shown that the testator, when he executed the will, was conscious that he had done so. Ibid.

Joint Will of Husband and Wife—Wife Dying First—Husband still Alive.]—Where a joint will was made by husband and wife, the wife dying first, and the will providing for the survivor having a power of appointment by deed, but not by will, so as to effect a different disposition, Held that, as the will contemplated that the executor should in some degree come into office upon the death of either party, he was entitled to probate even although the husband was still alive. In re M'Laren, 5 A.J.R., 81.

English and Colonial.]—A testator, domiciled in England, made a will there relating exclusively to property in Great Britain, and appointed executors resident in England. He then came to Victoria and made a will relating exclusively to property in Victoria and Tasmania, and appointed executors of it resident in Victoria. He subsequently returned to England, and made a codicil to his first will, such codicil also relating exclusively to property in England. Probate of the first will and codicil was granted by the Court of Probate in England to the executors named in the first will, and without any reference being made to the second will. Held that probate should be granted to the second will without at all referring to the first will and codicil. In re Ruffhead, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 70.

Will Executed in Victoria—Codicil Executed in Japan—Domicile.]—M. had resided many years in Melbourne, and whilst there duly executed a will; he went to live in Japan and died there. Before his death he executed a codicil not attested by two witnesses. Held that M. was domiciled in Victoria, and that the codicil not being executed conformably to Victorian law was inoperative. In the Will of Marks, 3 A.J.R., 43.

Probate How Granted—Translation.]—Probate of a will in a foreign language should be granted of a duly authenticated translation of it, but the original should also be included in the grant in case of any difficulty arising thereafter, or any mistake in the translation. In the Will of Schneider, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 8; 1 A.L.T., 144.

Will in England—Practice.]—Before probate can be granted here of a will proved in England, either the original English probate or an exemplification under the seal of the English Court must be produced and lodged in this Court. In the Goods of Whittaker, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.) 114.

And see for Practice post under sub-heading PROBATE, &c.—Administration with exemplified copy annexed.

(c) By Married Women.

Will under Power and Limited to Real Estate.]—The will of a married woman, made under power, and limited to real estate only, is not entitled to probate. In re Trethowan; In re Elliott, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 93.

Per Molesworth, J.—Generally speaking the Court exercises its probate jurisdiction over wills affecting to deal with personal property and not real property alone. Probate refused to a will of a married woman made under a power and dealing with real estate only. In the Estate of Dyer, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 67.

Will—Revocation by Marriage—Confirmation—"Wills Statute 1864," Secs. 16, 20.]—A widow executed a will of real and personal estate, and remarried. By ante-nuptial settlement she settled the property, reserving a power to appoint by will. Subsequently she executed a confirmation of the will. Held that in the view of Secs. 16 and 20 of the "Wills Statute 1864," the confirmation might be regarded as a codicil, and probate granted of the will and of the confirmation as a codicil. In the Will of Patchell, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 52.

And see ante column 1499.

And for affidavits and evidence of separate property see cases post under PROBATE, &c.—Husbands and Wives.

(1.) Probate Granted to Two Wills.

Two Wills of Same Date Dealing with Different Properties.]—Where a testator had made two wills dealing with different properties on the same day, which were in no way repugnant but no executor was appointed in the second, the Court granted probate to the two as one will. In the Will of Meehan, 5 A.J.R., 61.

Duplicate Wills.]—A testator having property as well in England as in Victoria executed his will and also added a codicil in duplicate appointing one set of executors for his English property and another set for his Victorian property. The High Court of Probate in England having granted probate of one of the duplicate wills and codicils forwarded to the executors there so far as related to property in England, the Court in Victoria granted probate of the duplicate will and codicil to the Victorian executors so far as related to the property in that colony. In the Will of Holl, 3 A.L.T., 95.

A married woman executed a trust disposition and settlement in the Scotch form, which was duly attested, and afterwards executed a will confirming such disposition and settlement. The Court granted probate of the two documents as constituting one will. In the Will of Dewhurst, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 105.

A testator made a will appointing no executors, dealing only with personalty, and making specific bequests of live stock and chattels. Afterwards he made a second will commencing "This is my last will and testament," appointing executors and disposing of the realty, and leaving one legacy. Held there was no revocation of the first will, and probate granted to the two documents as together constituting the will of the testator. In the Will of Christie, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 46.

Will Disposing of all Testator's Property—After-acquired Property—Second Will.]—A testator made a will disposing of all the property he then possessed, and appointed executors. Having subsequently acquired other property, he made a will disposing of it only, not revoking or in any way mentioning the first will or appointing executors. Held that probate of the two documents should be granted to the executors of the earlier will. In the Will of North, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 36; 6 A.L.T., 4.

The advertisement was for "the will and codicil."

(2) Probate Granted to One Only.

One Will referring to another Not Produced.]—S. made two wills, one disposing of property in Fiji, and one disposing of property in Victoria. Both wills were of the same date and each referred to the other. At the time that probate was applied for of the Victorian will the Fijian one had not been shown to the executors of the other. The Court granted probate during the absence of the Fijian will. In the Will of Smith, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.) 100.

Duplicate Wills.]—A testator executed duplicate wills at the same time, the testatum being:—"In witness whereof I have hereunto and to a duplicate hereof set my hand, &c." Probate granted to one of the wills only, but it was intimated that the grant must contain the words "of which said will there is a duplicate." In the Will of Cust, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 53.

Codicils—Original Will in Scotland.]—Where an original will affecting only property in Scotland was in Scotland, and no copy could be obtained, and the testator made two codicils which in effect revoked the will, and disposed of all the testator's property in Victoria, the Court granted probate of the codicils as codicils, without the will. In the Will and Codicils of Wise, 6 W.W & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 39.

Document Styled a Codicil, but Revoking all Former Wills.]—Where at the end of a will there was an instrument styled "a codicil to the above-written will," but revoking all former wills, and declared to be the last will, and containing devises and bequests to the widow inconsistent with those in the will, Held that the codicil must be taken as confirming gifts to the widow in the will, as altering the will by substituting her for the devisees and legatees in the cases of inconsistency, and as giving her the residue, and both documents admitted to probate as a will and codicil. In the Will of Butler, 5 A.J.R., 64.

Will—Separate Papers—Codicil—Date.]—A will was written on two sheets of paper not fastened together in any way and not referring to each other, but the second sheet read as a continuation of the first. They were found in a closed envelope deposited with a bank for safe keeping. The will contained no appointment of executors and no date except after the attestation clause, viz., 25th July, 1874. A codicil referred to a will bearing date 20th March, 1874. The Court granted administration c.t.a. of the will and codicil to the widow. In the Will of Mount, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 57.

Reference to Prior Will by Mistake.]—A testatrix executed a will November, 1876, and a second December, 1876, revoking the former. There were two codicils as to the "last will and testament," dated July, 1877, and September, 1877, respectively, both referring to the will of November, 1876, as her last will. The solicitors who prepared the codicils made an affidavit stating that the reference was a mistake and explaining the circumstances. There was no evidence of any intention to revive the former will. Held that the second will and the two codicils were entitled to probate. In the Will of Hodder, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 115.

Execution of Codicil—Lost Will.]—A testator, in 1864, executed a codicil to his last will, by which he bequeathed all his estate to his wife for life, and subject thereto directed that it should devolve according to the terms of the will, save that any provision made by such will in the wife's favour should lapse, and appointed the wife sole executrix. By a further codicil, made ten years afterwards, he confirmed the first, and made provision for his sister-in-law. Before dying he gave directions as to where the will was to be found, but, after his death, all efforts to find it were fruitless. The Court granted probate of the two codicils to the widow, and administration of the estate subject to the two codicils, and to any previous will which might be found or of the contents of which evidence should be forthcoming. In the Estate of Henty, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 54.

Codicil Referring to Previous Will not Duly Executed.]—A will had been made which was not duly executed. A subsequent codicil was made, and duly executed, which contained a reference in general terms to a previous will. Held that parol evidence might be admitted to connect the unattested will with the will spoken of in the codicil; and probate granted to both instruments. In the Goods of Hill, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 63.

Will not Duly Executed—Codicil Duly Executed.]—In a case where a will was not properly executed, but the codicil was, and one of the attesting witnesses to the codicil made an affidavit that the testator held both documents in his hand at the time of executing the codicil and said—"This is my last will and testament," the Court admitted both to probate. In the Will of Sidebottom, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 40.

Codicil on Two Sheets of Paper Pinned Together—Affidavit.]—The Court refused to grant probate of a codicil which was on two sheets of paper pinned together, and required an affidavit showing what the state of the two sheets was when the codicil was executed. In the Will and Codicil of Munyard, 6 A.L.T., 28.

Letter Unattested.]—Where a testator appointed an executor and in his will directed him to act with regard to certain property according to instructions in a letter, and the letter was headed—"This is the letter referred to in my will of this date," but was unattested, the Court granted probate of the will and letter. In the Will of Stephen, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 30.

Date Altered—Unattested.]—Where in a will the date was originally 1851, but had been altered, in the same handwriting in the rest of the will, to 1853, but the alteration was unattested, and one of the attesting witnesses made an affidavit respecting the alteration, administration c.t.a. was granted of the will. In the Will of Bostock, 1 A.J.R., 100.

"Wills Statute" (No. 222,) Sec. 19—Interlineations.]—A testator made a will, which was duly executed, and, after execution, made some material interlineations, and in the margin were the words "witnesses to the interlineation," followed by the names of the original witnesses to the will, but the interlineation was not subscribed by the testator. The Court granted probate of the will without the interlineation. In re Delves, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 33.

Interlineations—Obliterations.]—A will contained a number of interlineations, all initialled by the testator and attesting witnesses, and certain obliterations, none of which were so initialled. The interlineations, obliterations, and signatures of execution seemed to be written with the same pen and ink and at the same time. The Court granted probate of the will with all initialled interlineations, excluding obliterations, the beginnings of which were under interlineations, but other obliterations not connected with interlineations were retained. In the Will of Purvis, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 37.

Codicil—Obliterations and Alterations.]—On an application for a grant of probate to a will and codicils, where part of one codicil had been obliterated and had alterations made in it by the testator, the Court directed the codicil to be examined by two persons with microscopes, and upon their report as to its entire legibility, granted probate of all the instruments, including the codicil as set out by them. In the Will of Riddell, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 5; 1 A.L.T., 143.

Name of Trustee Struck Out after Attestation.]—Testator, by his will, left his wife sole executrix, and appointed two trustees to act only in case of his wife dying before him. The name of one of the trustees had been struck out after attestation. The affidavit of the executrix stated that the alteration had been made by her at the request of the testator and in his presence. The Court granted probate of the will as it originally stood. In the Will of Harvey, 6 A.L.T., 4.

Unimportant Alterations.]—A testator left a holograph will in which there were uninitialled alterations. The only one of the attesting witnesses who could be found swore that the alterations were in the handwriting of the testator, but could not say whether they were made before or after execution. The alterations being unimportant, the Court granted probate of the will. In the Will of Armstrong, 6 A.L.T., 48.

Expert's Evidence that they were Made Before Execution.]—The Court on the evidence of an expert that certain slight alterations and interlineations, made in a holograph will, had been made before execution, and on examining the will granted probate, with such alterations, &c. In the Will of Stephen, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 69; 3 A.L.T., 53.

Evidence as to.]—An affidavit stating that certain alterations were made before execution should specify them one by one, and not in globo. In the Will of Thomson, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 33.

(g) Lost or Destroyed Wills.

Administration Act (No. 427,) Sec. 8—Administration c.t.a.]—L. died in August, 1860, leaving real estate, a widow and six children. L. left a will, which was lost before proof. The widow died, and probate of her will was granted to her executors, who applied for administration c.t.a. to L.'s estate. There was evidence of the contents so uncertain that the Court could not determine whether the children took as joint tenants or not. Held that the real estate (the testator having died in 1860) passed by the will without probate, and the devisees could recover in a Court of Equity, notwithstanding Sec. 8 of the Act No. 427 (the subject matter being an equity of redemption); and the Court is not disposed to establish a will to remove conveyancing difficulties. Application refused. In the Will of Lynch, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 35.

Application for Probate — Affidavits must be Explicit.]—Applications for probate to lost wills are not regarded with favour, and the affidavits in support should be explicit as to the circumstances attending the loss, and on the contents and making of the will. In the Will of Hallet, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 50.

Lost Will—Evidence of Contents.—A will, after execution, was handed to the solicitor who prepared it, but was lost by him. The Court granted probate of its contents as set out from memory by persons who were present and heard the will read over to the testator before he signed it, on their affidavits, and on the affidavit of one of the attesting witnesses who deposed that the will was duly executed and attested. In the Will of Dignan, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 3; 1 A.L.T., 143.

Lost Will—English Grant—Evidence—Practice.]—The Probate Division of the High Court of Justice in England, in a contested suit, granted administration with a draft of a lost will annexed, but the Court here, nevertheless, declined to grant probate upon an exemplification of the English grant, and required that independent evidence of the facts brought before the English Court should be given. Upon the production of a verified copy of the shorthand notes of the evidence in the suit and of the judgment of the English Court, the Court, after requiring that the advertisement that probate was to be applied for should indicate that the probate was based upon an act of the English Court, granted probate upon the exemplification. In the Will of Malcolm, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 102; 1 A.L.T., 201; 2 A.L.T., 3.

Lost Will—Second Will Revoking Prior One—Notice of Application for Probate.]—A testator executed a will, which he subsequently, by a second will, revoked. The second will could not be found, but its contents were sworn to by the solicitor who prepared it. Held that notice of an applicatian for probate of the second will should be served on the persons entitled under the first will. In the Estate of Wallace, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 22.

Lost Will — Probate Granted to Codicils — Administration Granted to Estate subject to Codicils and to Will being Found.]—In the Estate of Henty, ante column 1504.

Practice on — Presumption of Destruction — Limited Administration.] — Where a will was proved to have been in existence shortly before the testator's death, but could not be found after his death, and the evidence showed that the testator had showed no inclination to destroy the will, the Court granted administration limited in point of time till the will should be found. In the Estate of Twigg, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 59; 3 A.L.T., 18.

Draft Copy of Lost Will—Statement in Advertisement—Notice to Next-of-Kin.] — See In the Will of Smith, post under PRACTICE—Advertisements.

Burnt Will.]—Where a testator made a will which was deposited by the executrix with a solicitor, and the solicitor's office was burnt and all papers (including the will) were destroyed, the Court granted probate of a copy made from memory. In the Will of Hood, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 78; 1 A.L.T., 19.

Two Wills—Second Destroyed by Mistake—Draft Copy.]—An illiterate testator made two wills, the second revoking the former, and expressed an intention of destroying the earlier will; only the earlier will could be found, it being presumed that the later one had been destroyed by mistake. Upon notice served upon the interested parties, and upon evidence showing the similarity of the two wills in external appearance, and of the testator's intention, the Court granted probate of a fair copy of the draft of the second will. In the Will of Healey, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 43.

Destroyed—Proving Contents and Execution—Revocation of First Will.]—A testator in 1857 executed a will, and in 1866 executed a second one. At the testator's death the first will only was in existence, the other having been destroyed by the testator. Probate of the will of 1857 was applied for, and was opposed on the ground that the testator had revoked this will by the will of 1866; and, having subsequently destroyed the latter animo revocandi, had died intestate. The execution and date of the will of 1866 were proved by two clerks, the attesting witnesses, one of whom proved that, during the testator's lifetime, he discovered the will lying in the testator's waste-paper basket, in pieces, and that he took the pieces away, gummed them together, and read the whole will, and that it disposed of all the testator's property, and in a different manner to the first will, but did not contain any express clause of revocation of former wills. This was the only evidence of the contents of the second will. Held, and affirmed on appeal to the Full Court, that the contents of the will of 1866 were sufficiently proved, and that they operated as a revocation of the first will. Macoboy v. Madden, 5 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 38.

Destroyed — Proving Contents — Evidence.]—Statements of the testator to a witness as to the contents of a destroyed will, set up in opposition to another will, were held inadmissible. Ibid.

Will and Codicils—Codicil appointing Additional Executors.]—J.S. left a will and three codicils, and appointed executors by his will. The second codicil revoked certain legacies, confirmed others, and revoked the appointment of one executor, and appointed two additional executors. The third codicil mentioned the first codicil, but not the second, revoked certain legacies, and again revoked the appointment of the executor mentioned by the second codicil, and revoked a legacy to him left by the will and second codicil, but confirmed the will in every other particular. Held, reversing Molesworth, J., that the revocation of legacies by the third codicil in no way affected the appointment of executors by the second codicil, and that probate should be granted to the applicants, who were two executors—one appointed by the will and the other by the second codicil. In re Stephenson, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 73.

Mistake—Evidence to Explain—Signature by Legatee and Executor.]—A testator left all his property to J.H., his wife and family, appointing "J.H. my testator to carry out the effect of my will." The will was attested by W., the wife of J.H., and J.H. also signed it. Held that under Sec. 13 of the "Wills Statute" neither J.H. nor his wife could take any interest, and upon an affidavit by W. that he had at the testator's request drawn up the will and had written testator instead of executor thinking the words meant the same, the Court granted probate to J.H. omitting his signature from the probate copy of the will. In the Will of Bannister, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 114.

Limited Appointment.]—A testator died in Western Australia appointing an executor and providing that "if it should be requisite or convenient to have an executor in Melbourne" in order to deal with Victorian property—"I request that S. should act." Probate granted to S., limited to Victorian property. In the Will of Landor, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 66.

Substituted Executorship.]—A will appointed J.M. executor in case he should have to sell certain property devised, and in case he should not so have to sell, appointed A.B. executrix. Administration c.t.a. granted to A.B. upon J.M.'s concurrence. In the Will of Barclay, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 59.

A will appointed testator's wife executrix during widowhood, and "on her death (or if she shall marry again, then on her marriage) M'M. executrix, executor, and trustees." The Court granted probate to the widow during widowhood, reserving leave to M'M. to come in and prove upon her death or re-marriage. In the Will of Fitzpatrick, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 62.

Probate—Testamentary Paper—No Operative Words appointing Executors.]—Short notes of instruction for a will which had been duly signed, contained as the only words appointing executors the following:—Trees. and Exors.—Louis Kitz, of Geelong, watchmaker; Robert M'Donald, of Geelong, chemist. Held that the question as to whether probate or administration c.t.a. should be granted being unimportant, probate might be granted. In re Amiet, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 65.

Executors according to the Tenor—Trustees—No Executor Named.]—G., by will, bequeathed all his property to A. and B., in trust for his wife and children, but appointed no executor. Held that probate could not be granted to A. and B. as executors according to the tenor, and that if all the children of G. were infants, the widow was entitled to administration c.t.a. Upon production in the Master's office of the written consent of the widow verified by affidavit, and of an affidavit that all the children were infants, administration c.t.a. was granted to A. and B. In re Grant, 1 W.& W. (I. E. & M.,) 193.

Executors according to the Tenor.]—Where a testator devised real estate to trustees, and certain personal estate to the widow, but made no general bequest of other personal estate, the Court refused probate to the trustees as executors according to the tenor, but granted administration c.t.a. to the widow. In the Will of Bermingham, 5 A.J.R., 159.

Where a testator bequeathed and devised all his personal and real estate to the widow for life, remainder to children, and appointed two persons "to act as trustees to carry out this my will," the Court thought that the appointment related to the real estate only, and that they were not executors according to the tenor. Administration c.t.a. to the widow. In the Will of Rowley, 5 A.J.R., 160.

Executors according to the Tenor—Trustees—Estate not Disposed of.]—A testator by his will appointed his widow and two of his sons his "trustees," but did not purport thereby to dispose of the whole of his property. Held that the widow and sons could not be considered as executors according to the tenor, since the will did not purport to dispose of the whole of the property; and that the applicants were entitled to a grant of administration c.t.a., and that if an affidavit were filed stating that the will did in fact dispose of all the property, the usual security would be dispensed with. In the Will of Brown, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 47.

Executor according to the Tenor—"Trustee."]—A testator bequeathed all his real and personal estate to D. and his heirs, to hold the same according to the nature and tenor thereof respectively upon certain trusts. D. was referred to as "trustee" throughout the will, and the term executor was not used. Held that D. was executor according to the tenor. In the Will of Chellew, 6 A.L.T., 17.

Contingent Appointment—Provision for Substitution on a Certain Event.]—See in the Will of Ogilvie, 5 A.J.R., 170; post column 1527.

Limited Executorship—Executors according to the Tenor.]—Z. bequeathed all his personalty to his wife authorising her to pay debts, but directed in case of his wife's re-marriage the whole property was to go over to the children, appointing trustees to act for them. The Court granted the widow probate during widowhood as executrix according to the tenor, saving the rights of the trustees. In the Will of Zeis, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 110.

And see cases post column 1532.

Executor according to the Tenor—Sole Devisee for Life not entitled to Probate as Executrix.]—A testator by his will left all his property to his children in equal shares, subject to a life estate in favour of his widow, to whom he entrusted during her life all his properties, &c., for the maintenance of herself and children, and left the management to her, with the advice of trustees named. Held, that probate could not be granted to the widow as executrix according to the tenor, but administration c.t.a. granted to her, with leave to enter into the administration bond without sureties. In re Cooper, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 68.

According to Tenor when Granted.]—The appointment of a person as universal legatee does not, of itself, constitute such person executor according to the tenor. There must be some duties to perform, such as to pay debts, &c., in order to constitute a universal legatee executor according to the tenor. In the Will of Clark, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 16.

Executor according to Tenor—Universal Legatee.]—A universal legatee is not entitled to a grant of probate as executor according to the tenor, but to a grant of administration c.t.a. In the Will of Cochrane, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 36.

Executor according to the Tenor—Universal Beneficiary.]—A testator made his brother universal devisee and legatee, and named no executors, and there was no affidavit as to the testator's debts. The Court refused to make an order for probate to him as executor according to the tenor, but granted administration c.t.a. to him, dispensing with sureties; the administrator, however, to enter into the ordinary bond. In the Will of Keane, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 18; 1 A.L.T., 201.

Executor according to the Tenor—Universal Legatee.]—Where a will made certain provisions as to the disposal of the real estate, but did not dispose of personal estate, and there was nothing in it about legacies, Held that the universal legatee was not executor according to the tenor. In the Will of Smith, 4 A.L.T., 81.

Universal Legatee.]—Where a testator leaves all his property to his widow, that does not constitute her executrix according to the tenor, but the Court will, in granting administration c.t.a., dispense with the administration bond. In the Will of Dohrmann, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 18.

Executors according to the Tenor—Duties to be Performed.]—A testator, after providing for the payment of his debts, bequeathed his property to his wife in trust for her and her children during the wife's life, and after her death to P. and C. in trust for the children, until the youngest attained twenty-one, when he directed a sale and division, and directed P. and C. to collect the rents and deduct all legal claims therefrom, but appointed no executors. Semble, that after the wife's death P. and C. were entitled to probate as executors according to the tenor. In the Will of Coleman, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 22.

Executors according to the Tenor.]—Semble, that where persons are to be deemed executors according to the tenor there must be duties to be entered upon by them immediately. In the Will of Pallett, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 33.

Where a testator, after directing payment of debts, gave all his property to his wife durante viduitate, and, after her re-marriage, to trustees for conversion and investment after payment of his debts, Semble, that this did not make the trustees executors according to the tenor. There being in the will, however, a power of leasing and dealing with infants' shares for maintenance, which would be exercised immediately, Held that the trustees were entitled to probate as executors according to the tenor. Ibid.

Executor according to the Tenor—Duties to be Performed.]—To constitute persons executors it is not necessary to use the word "executors;" it is quite sufficient if it appears by the will that they have to perform the duties of the office. In the Will of Hollings, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 46.

A bequest of all a testator's estate to persons named in the will, to be distributed and apportioned as the will directs, constitutes such persons executors according to the tenor. Ibid.

Executors according to the Tenor—Duties to be Performed.]—A testator made a simple bequest of all his property to four children to be equally divided between them, the trustees to be two persons named. Held that "trustees" meant "executors," and probate granted to the persons named as executors according to the tenor. In re Gaunt, 2 A.L.T., 4.

Executors according to the Tenor—Duties to be Performed.]—A bequest of all the testator's property "to be managed by" A. and B., constitutes A. and B. executors according to the tenor. In the Will of Stephens, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 36.

And the Court granted probate, even although the advertisement was for administration c.t.a. only. Ibid.

Executors according to the Tenor.]—Where a testator left all his property to his widow "to be used by her according to her judgment," the Court refused to grant probate to her as executrix according to the tenor. In the Will of Sullivan, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 43.

Executors according to the Tenor—Payment of Debts.]—Where a testator left all his property, "after payment of the debts, &c.," to his wife and children, the wife "to have entire control and management of the same for herself and children's use." the Court granted probate to her as executrix according to the tenor. In the Will of Keane, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 49.

Direction to Pay Debts.]—A will merely directing payment of debts, and making a person universal legatee, does not make that person executor according to the tenor. In the Will of Phillips, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 29.

Executors according to the Tenor—Payment of Debts.]—A testator bequeathed part of his personalty absolutely to his widow, devised certain real estate to trustees upon trust for his wife for life, and then left the residue of his property absolutely to his widow, directing debts to be paid out of the portion left to his wife. The Court granted probate to the widow as executrix according to the tenor. In the Will of Cluxton, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 55.

Executor according to the Tenor—Payment of Debts.]—A testator devised and bequeathed after payment of debts, &c., all his property to his wife. Held that as there was no direction to the wife to pay debts, she was not executrix according to the tenor. In the Will of Sell, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 63.

Executor according to the Tenor—Direction to Pay Debts.]—The Court granted probate of a will to two persons as executors according to the tenor, such persons having been appointed trustees and universal devisees and legatees in trust, with a direction to pay debts. In re Whitehead, 1 A L.T., 201.

Executors according to the Tenor—Payment of Debts.]—Subjecting property in the hands of a sole legatee to payment of debts does not compel the latter to pay them, or constitute such legatee executrix according to the tenor, but the Court will, in granting administration c.t.a. in such a case, dispense with sureties to the administration bond. In the Will of Robertson, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 22; 2 A.L.T., 107.

Executor according to the Tenor—Payment of Debts.]—A will provided "after payment of all my just debts and testamentary expenses, I bequeath to my wife all my real and personal estate for her sole use and benefit, to bring up my family, till my youngest child attains the age of twenty-one years." On the youngest child attaining twenty-one the wife was to get £50 per annum, and the property was to go to the children in certain proportions; but there was to be a change in the management of the estate if the widow married before the youngest child attained twenty-one. Held, notwithstanding the provision for change in the management of the estate, that the wife was executrix according to the tenor. In the Will of Addinsdale, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 27.

"After Payment of my Just Debts"—When Legatee not Executor according to the Tenor.]—In the Will of Gordon, 6 A.L.T., 84; see post column 1524.

Executor according to the Tenor—Direction to Pay Annuities.]—An annuity is a legacy payable from time to time, and follows the same rule as if it were a legacy payable at once. Where a will vested property in trustees, directing them to pay annuities, Held that there was an implied direction to pay debts first, and such direction constituted the trustees executors according to the tenor. In the Will of Azzopard, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 30; 2 A.L.T., 136.

Executor according to the Tenor—Direction to Pay Legacies.]—A testator devised and bequeathed all his property to two trustees upon trust to pay legacies, and there was evidence that the testator intended to make the trustees executors. Held that the Court would only regard the language of the will in the matter, and probate granted to the two trustees as executors according to the tenor. In the Will of Donegan, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 26.

III. Execution.

Position of Signature—"Wills Act 1864," Sec. 8.]—Where the signature of a will was on the opposite side of the page to the will and was turned upside down, Held, by Full Court, reversing Molesworth, J., that the "Wills Act Amendment Act" provided for the case of signature on the opposite side of the paper, and there being no suspicion that improper practices were resorted to to obtain the signature, probate was granted. In the Goods of Campbell, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 119.

Signature of Testator and Witnesses across Body of Will—"Wills Act 1864," Sec. 8.]—Where a will was signed by the testator and witnesses across the body of it although there was room enough to render it possible for testator and witnesses to sign outside the attestation clause, the Court granted probate. In the Will of Pople, 5 A.J.R., 80.

Position of—In Attestation Clause—Affidavit of one Attesting Witness—"Wills Act 1864," Sec. 8.]—Where a testator signs his will by putting his signature in the attestation clause, an affidavit of one of the attesting witnesses only, that he saw the testator write his name, is insufficient to explain the singularity. There should be an affidavit by both witnesses that they saw the testator write his name there, and that it was written with the intention of signing the will. In the Will of Coleman, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 22.

Signature of Testator in Attestation Clause—Affidavit of Witnesses—"Wills Act 1864," Sec. 8.]—A testator signed his name in a blank intended for the attestation clause on a printed form. On application for probate, Held that there must be affidavits of both attesting witnesses as to the execution, or if that were impossible, of one of them, and an affidavit stating why that of the second could not be obtained. Further, that the affidavit should state the circumstances under which the testator signed, and the witness's reasons for concluding that the testator intended, by putting his name in the blank, to sign the will. In the Will of Gordon, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 25.

S.P.—See In the Will of M'Gregor, 6 A.L.T., 17.

Printed Form—Signatures in the Middle of the Disposition—"Wills Act 1864," Sec. 8.]—A testator used a printed form, at the foot of which was a printed attestation clause, where the testator signed his name, and the witnesses signed theirs beneath his signature. The space above the attestation clause not being sufficient, the testator continued his dispositions beyond the clause on the next page, so that the signatures appeared in the middle of the dispositions, and there were no fresh signatures at the end of the dispositions. On an affidavit explaining the circumstances, the Court granted administration c.t.a. (there being no appointment of executors). In the Will of Holley, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 52.

Initials.]—A will was headed "This is the last will and testament of A. H. Senior," and was signed simply A. H. Held that the will was properly signed. In the Will of Harrington, 6 A.L.T., 84.

Testator Only Signing in One out of Two Christian Names—Advertisement should Notice Discrepancy.]—In the Will of Schneider, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 8; 1 A.L.T., 144. Post under Practice—Advertisements.

When Signature Should be Made, "Wills Act 1864," Sec. 7.]—Per Molesworth, J., affirmed on appeal.:—To render a will valid it must be signed by the testator before the attesting witnesses affix their signatures. In the Goods of Kelly, 3 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 80.

Testator a Marksman.]—Where a will is executed by a marksman the affidavit of the attesting witnesses should state whether the testator was permanently unable to write by physical defect or want of education, or whether he only affixed his mark by reason of temporary inability to write from physical weakness or otherwise. In the Will of McConville, 4 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 19.

Marksman—Testator being too Ill to Write.]—Where a testator who was too ill to write signed his name as a marksman, the Court granted probate, although his name was misspelt, owing to improper instructions being given to the solicitor who prepared the will. Re Hammon, 5 A.J.R., 19.

Will—Codicil Signed by Mark—Testator too Ill to Write.]—A testator had signed a codicil by putting his mark. The affidavit stated that the reason for his so doing was because he was too ill to write his name, but did not state that the codicil was read by or to the testator before signing. Held that a fresh affidavit was necessary stating whether the testator was able to read or not, and also whether he did in fact read the codicil or had it read to him before affixing his mark. In the Will and Codicil of Rae, 6 A.L.T., 17.

Execution by Mark—Maiden Name.]—A married woman executed her will by a mark against her maiden name, that name being used because she had money deposited in a bank under that name. Held that the execution was sufficient. In the Will of Hurd, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 23.

Signature of Attesting Witness before Last Clause of Will—"Wills Act 1864," Sec. 8.]—Probate was granted of a will in which one of the attesting witnesses' signature was before the last clause of the will, on the ground that Sec. 8 of the "Wills Act" did not require the signature of the attesting witnesses to be at the bottom of the will. In the Will of Hughes, 1 A.J.R., 2.

Signature of Attesting Witnesses Across the Body of the Will.]—See in the Will of Pople, ante column 1514.

Subscribing before Acknowledgment of Testator.]—A testator signed his will in the presence of one witness only, who attested the signature. He then called in a second witness, read the will over to her, and said—"This is my will—be good enough to sign," and he and the first witness acknowledged their signatures to her and the first witness also stated that the signature was that of the testator, and she signed as witness. Held that since the acknowledgment of his signature by the testator was made after the signature of the first witness had been made, the execution of the will was insufficient. In the Will of Braithwaite, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 37.

Act No, 222, Sec. 7—Witnesses not Subscribing in Each Other's Presence.]—The fact that the two witnesses are not present at the time of each other's execution of the will does not invalidate the execution. But the Court required an affidavit that the second witness (who signed in the absence of the other) was requested to sign; that the testator was conscious that he had signed; and that he signed at the request and in the presence of the testator. In the Will of Foley, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 95; 1 A.L.T., 83.

Lands Refsrred to in Schedules — Witnesses Signing by Initials—"Wills Act 1864," Sec. 7.]—Where a testator disposed of the beneficial interest in real estate by reference to schedules, these following the attestation clause which did not refer to them, and each sheet being signed by the testator and initialled by the attesting witnesses, probate was granted to the schedules on an affidavit stating that all formalities were observed subject to the initials being a sufficient signature. In the Will of Dyer, 6 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 43; N.C. 12.

Witnesses not Signing at the Same Time—"Wills Act 1864," Sec. 7.]—It is necessary for the effectual execution of a will that it should be signed or acknowledged by the testator before two witnesses present at the time of the signature or acknowledgment who shall after that signature or acknowledgment subscribe their names. Where a testator signed in the presence of one witness who subscribed as such, and some time afterwards acknowledged it in the presence of the same and another witness, and the second witness subscribed but the first did not renew his subscription, probate refused and administration granted as upon an intestacy. In the Goods of Lacey, 6 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 44; N.C. 42.

(c) Other Points Relating to.

When Probate Granted.]—In order to admit a will to probate the Court must be satisfied that the execution of the will was a sane act. In the Will of Abel, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 34, 41; 4 A.L.T., 73.

Upholding Will in Opposition to Evidence of Attesting Witnesses.]—For circumstances under which the Court upheld a will against the evidence of an attesting witness which went to show that the testator did not sign before the attesting witnesses, see In the Will of Cook, 4 A.L.T., 176.

Evidsnce—Lapse of Time.]—A will was executed in 1866 and application for administration c.t.a. was made in 1883. The evidence as to its execution was an affidavit identifying the signatures of the attesting witnesses, stating that one was dead and the residence of the other not known. Held that the will was not sufficiently proved as a testamentary act, and in view of the time that had elapsed and the absence of evidence as to whether the will had been acted on, application refused. In the Estate of Mary King, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 19; 4 A.L.T., 114.

Will Consisting of Several Sheets but only Last one Signed—What Affidavit in support of Probate should Allege.]—In the case of a will consisting of several sheets, of which the last only is signed by the testator, the affidavit in support of an application for probate ought to specify and by some mark indicate that each sheet was the subject matter of the testator's discretion, and each sheet should be marked by the commissioner before whom the affidavit is sworn as being referred to by the affidavit of the witness. In the Goods of Black, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 72.

IV. Revocation.

Mutual Wills.]—Mutual wills are revocable, and the will revoking a mutual will is entitled to probate. There may, perhaps, be a liability with reference to the contract, but the redress must be sought in some other Court than a Court of Probate. In the Will of Nesbit, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 61, 65, 66.

By Marriage.]—S., domiciled in Victoria, made his will in 1867. He went to Scotland with his deceased's wife's sister (also domiciled in Victoria), and while in Scotland they were married. Held that, though by Scotch law such a marriage might be void and not voidable only, the marriage operated to revoke the will. In the Will of Swan, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 47; 2 A.J.R., 5.

Cancellation of Signatures—Memorandum by Witnesses of Intention to Revoke.] — The cancellation by the testator of his own name, and those of the witnesses to a testamentary instrument, but not so as to obliterate them, is not such a destruction of the instrument as is required by the "Wills Statute," Sec. 18, in order to revoke the instrument; and a memorandum at the foot of the instrument signed by the witnesses, but not by the testator, stating that it had been revoked by the testator in their presence, will not operate as a revocation. In the Will of Barrett, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 98.

Sole Devisee and Legatee Dying in Testator's Lifetime—Effect of.]—Where the sole beneficiary predeceased the testator, Held that the will was not thereby revoked, revocation only resulting from change of intention or from changes in the testator's circumstances of which the death of the object of his bounty is not one. Administration cum testamento annexo granted. In re Churchyard, 5 A.J.R., 102.

Inconsistent Clauses—One Clause Absolute and Express not Revoked by one of Doubtful Meaning.]—Briant v. Edrick, 1 V.R. (L.,) 35; 1 A.J.R., 49, post under Construction and Interpretation—General Principles.

Subsequent Testamentary Instrument—Appointment—Revocation of all Former Wills—Act No. 222, Sec. 18.]—A testatrix by will left all her property, or property which she might dispose of, to her husband, and by a subsequent will, which contained a clause revoking all former wills, she exercised a power of appointment over certain real property in Tasmania, appointing it to her children equally. Held that the second will, having only for its object the exercise of the power of appointment, did not revoke the prior will. In the Will of Lilley, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 32; 4 A.L.T., 81.

And see Macoboy v. Madden, ante column 1508.

Evidence.]—The executors of a will were about to proceed for probate when they received information of a subsequently executed will from an attesting witness to it. This second will was left in the possession of the testator. There was no evidence that this second will, which could not be found, revoked the first will. Probate granted to the first will. In the Estate of Burgess, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 34.

Revocation of Will by Cutting Out Testator's Signature—Notice of Application for Administration.]—Where a motion is made for administration, the testator's will having been revoked by the signature being cut out, it is necessary to serve special notice of the application upon the executors and beneficiaries under the will. In the Estate of King, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 26.

V. Revival.

Will Appointing "Executors to my Will."]—Semble, that a will simply appointing executors "to my will in the event of my husband being prevented from doing so either by illness or death," would operate as a revival of a revoked will. In the Will of Lilley, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 32; 4 A.L.T., 81.

VI. Probate and Letters of Administration.

(1) To Whom Granted.

To Husband.]—Where a married woman had made savings out of house allowances made to her by her husband, and had thereby acquired separate property, the Court granted administration of her estate to her husband. In the Estate of Beaty, 4 A.L.T., 81.

Administration—Husband of Divorced Wife—Curator.]—Where a husband and wife had been divorced, but there were children of the marriage, the Court considered the husband, as guardian of the children, entitled to administration of the wife's estate in preference to the Curator, and granted administration, during the minority of the children, to the husband. In the Estate of Khoon Soon, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 47; 4 A.L.T., 93.

Administration—Executor of Husband Surviving Wife—Wife's Estate Unadministered.]—Administration of the wife's estate will be granted to the executor of a husband who survived his wife, but died without having taken out administration to her estate, and in such case the administration bond will be allowed to be entered into with one surety only. In the goods of Crawford, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 192.

Administration de bonis non—Contest between Husband and Surety of Original Administratrix.]—See in the Goods of M'Vea, 2 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 44; post columns 1532, 1533.

To Attorney of Husband.]—Administration of the property of a married woman was granted to the attorney under power of the husband—though the husband was an infant at the time of his marriage, and had not disclosed the fact—the Court considering that it would be going out of its province to enter into the legality of the marriage, and no one appearing to oppose the application. In re Bellamy, 1 A.J.R., 4.

What will Disentitle a Wife.]—Administration will be refused to a wife who misconducts herself as wife of the intestate; but there is no authority to prevent a wife getting administration for ante-nuptial want of chastity. Cawley v. Cawley, 6 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 41; N.C., 11.

Widow an Infant—Administration Revoked.]—Where administration had been granted to a widow who was only eighteen years of age, the Court revoked the administration, intimating it would be more inclined to grant the administration to a respectable nominee of the widow's than to a sister of intestate's, whose husband was in embarrassed circumstances. In the real estate of M'Millan, 3 A.J.R., 101.

Married Woman living Separate from her Husband—Husband's Consent.]—Where a married woman applied for administration of R.'s estate, the Court required her husband's consent, notwithstanding the fact that she had been living apart from him for years and he was at present, and had been for some time, out of the colony. In re Reddin, 3 A.J.R., 15.

Where the applicant, under circumstances similar to the above-mentioned, has not a subsisting protection order, the Court will not dispense with the husband's consent. In re Wall, 5 A.J.R., 5.

Husband's Consent.]—A testator, who died in 1866, appointed his widow to be executrix, and devised and bequeathed to her all his estate beneficially. The widow, in 1868, married again, and applied for probate in 1878, all the testator's debts having been paid, and his outstanding estate consisting of realty only, of which her husband was in possession. The husband refused to consent to the application. Application refused. In the Will of Armstrong, 4 V.L.R. (I.P. & M.,) 30.

Married Woman—Living Apart from her Husband.]—The fact that a married woman appointed executrix is living apart from her husband is no reason for granting her probate without his consent. In the Will of Lynch, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 19.

Married Woman—Protection Order—Act No. 268, Sec. 46.]—Notwithstanding Sec. 46 of Act No. 268, a married woman, the sole devisee and legatee under a will of which she is appointed executrix, and having obtained a protection order, cannot obtain probate without her husband's consent. In the Will of Woodhead, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 42; 3 A.L.T., 18.

Married Woman—Consent of Husband.]—A will left all the personal estate to a married woman, to her separate use, and appointed her executrix. At the time of application she had no other separate property. Held that her husband's consent was necessary. In the Will of Swalling, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 24; 4 A.L.T., 168.

Married Woman—Protection Order.]—A married woman obtained a protection order, and separated from her husband, and afterwards acquired a house in which she carried on a separate business. During the lifetime of her first husband she married a man named S. Held that an order nisi for administration to a creditor, describing her by her name of S. only, and asking for general administration, and not administration of property acquired since the separation, was bad on both grounds. In the Estate of Smith, alias Peate, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 27; 2 A.L.T., 114, 135.

No Evidence of Separate Property.]—Probate was granted to the will of a married woman, who had thereby disposed of a policy of life assurance on her own life, and to which after her death, her husband had assented, though there was no evidence that the policy was her separate estate. In the Will of M'Millan, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.) 86; 2 A.L.T., 17.

Practice—Deceased Wife's Separate Estate—Affidavit.]—A husband applied for administration of his wife's separate estate. Held that the affidavits must state the date of marriage, and how and when she acquired such separate estate. In the Estate of M'Pherson, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 40; 5 A.L.T., 81.

It is not sufficient in such a case for the affidavit to state that the wife had at the time of her death real and personal property to her separate use, which she obtained subsequent to the "Married Women's Property Act" out of her savings; the affidavit must specify how and when this was acquired and set out particulars of the gifts forming part of such estate. In the Estate of Hudson, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 45.

Affidavit as to Separate Estate of a Married Woman—Act No. 736, Sec. 2.]—Where a married woman's estate consisted of money deposited in her name in a bank, being her separate property under Sec. 2 of Act No. 736, the Court granted administration in the absence of the usual affidavit as to separate property. In the Estate of Lythgoe, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 21.

Probate to Married Woman—Affidavit as to Separate Estate.]—The affidavit as to separate estate, on an application for probate to the will of a married woman, stated that the real estate was acquired in 1878, and that the personal property consisted of furniture and mining shares, partly given to her by friends and partly acquired by her out of the rents and profits of the real estate. Held that a fresh affidavit, setting forth with more particularity, how and at what date the testatrix acquired the personal property, was necessary. In the Will and Codicil of Boundy, 6 A.L.T., 16.

Married Woman—Property to Separate Use.]—In cases where administration is sought to the estate or probate to the will of a married woman, the Court requires that some property at all events should be shown to be her separate property. If that be shown the Court will grant probate, and leave the question of how much is separate estate for future consideration. In the Will of Joliffe, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 37; 6 A.L.T., 4.

Property lodged in a savings bank in the name of a married woman is primâ facie her separate property under Sec. 6 of the "Married Women's Property Act," and where a married woman has such a deposit the Court will grant probate, or administration of her estate, subject to any question as to the ownership that the husband may thereafter raise under Sec. 12 of the Act. Ibid.

Subject to higher rights, a creditor is entitled to administration, notwithstanding the provisions of the Act No. 99 ("Curator's Act.") In the Goods of Bergin, 1 W.W. (I. E. & M.,) 190.

Administration cum testamento annexo will be granted to a creditor although the Rules of 1853 provided for a grant to a creditor only in cases of intestacy. In the Goods of Brasher, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 117.

Administration, with an exemplified copy of will annexed, was granted to a creditor where the testator died out of the jurisdiction and probate was granted out of the jurisdiction. In the Will of Farley, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 42.

Administration to a Creditor—Next-of-Kin Appearing but not Advertising—Costs.]—On motion by a creditor for administration to him, the next-of-kin had been served with a summons to show cause under Supreme Court Rules 1853, cap. viii., sec. 6, and appeared and claimed administration, but had not advertised his intention to apply for administration. Held that the creditor was entitled, but that the Court might revoke the letters, if the next-of-kin had any substantial cause to show, and grant others to the next-of-kin on payment by him of the creditor's costs. In re Twist, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 17.

Compare Rules 1873, Sec. 6.

Contest between Executors and Creditor Seeking Administration cum testamento annexo—Costs.]—A testator left a will appointing two executors; no application for probate having been made by them, M., a creditor, proved his debt, and obtained an order for a summons to call upon executors, widow and next-of-kin to take out probate or administration c.t.a., or show cause why such administration should not be granted to M. Advertisements to that effect were duly published, but the application was not heard for some time, owing to the suspense of business during vacation. During the interval one of the executors advertised for grant of probate to him, and both applications came on on the same day. Held that the executor was entitled to probate, and under circumstances showing that M. had not directly communicated with the executors as to their intentions no order was made for executors to pay M.'s costs. Semble, the grant of probate in such a case is generally conditional upon the executor paying the creditor's costs. In the Goods of Heffernan, 2 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 38.

Application by Creditor—Caveat Lodged—Mistake in Order Nisi.]—A caveat to an application by a creditor was lodged, and a rule nisi was granted directing, according to advertisement, the next-of-kin to show cause why administration should not be granted to the creditor "within fourteen days after the first publication," instead of "after fourteen days after, &c." The Court delayed the grant for some time, and then made it. In the Estate of Quish, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 95; 6 A.L.T., 171.

Administration c.t.a.—Application by Creditor—Reg. Gen., 23rd June, 1873, r. 6.]—A creditor wishing to apply for administration c.t.a. proved a debt before the Master, and obtained an order from a judge that she should be at liberty to issue out of the Master's office a summons calling upon the executrix and widow, if any, and next-of-kin of the deceased to show cause why, on a day not less than fourteen days after the first publication of the summons, letters of administration c.t.a. should not issue to the creditor. Held, per Molesworth J., that this was the regular course under a liberal construction of Rule 6 of the Reg. Gen. of 23rd June, 1873. Re Spinks, 6 A.L.T., 36.

The summons issued by the Master was commanding "the executor," &c., "within fourteen days after the first day of publication of this summons you do appear before this Court to show cause," &c. Held that the summons was irregular. Ibid.

The summons was advertised in a newspaper, and in the same paper, not immediately after, was a notice that after the expiration of fourteen days after the publication an application would be made by the said creditor for administration c.t.a. The next-of-kin, who had published an advertisement of his intention to apply for administration c.t.a. some time previously, but had withdrawn, lodged a caveat against the application, and the creditor then obtained a Rule nisi as usual against the caveator. The next-of-kin left the Rule nisi to be dealt with, refusing to admit anything, and putting the creditor to the expense of proving the will, and then expressing a wish to take out administration himself. Held that had the next-of-kin applied under his former advertisement, as next-of-kin having a better right than a creditor, he might have been in the right, but that, acting as he had done, the rule nisi should be made absolute, but without costs, since the caveator had been misled by the manner of the advertisement into lodging the caveat, and contesting the Rule. Ibid.

Administration de bonis non—Surety.]—The Court granted administration de bonis non of an intestate's estate to one of the sureties to the administration bond entered into by the intestate's administratrix, whose creditor the surety was, but intimated that a more regular course would have been to apply as a creditor of the administratrix, and that the application was granted only because there was no other applicant. McKay v. Edwards, 3 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 75.

Contest between Curator and Mortgagee whose Debt was not Due at Death of Intestate—Act No. 230, Sec. 12.]—Creditors, i.e. mortgagees whose debts were not due at time of death of intestate, applied for administration and so, also, did the curator. Held by the Full Court, overruling Molesworth, J., that such mortgagees were creditors within the meaning of Act No. 230, Sec. 12, and as such entitled to administration and ready to take the grant and as such to be preferred to the curator. In re Patrick Coady Buckley, 3 A.J.R., 60, 131.

Act No. 230, Secs. 4, 12—Contest between Curator, Eldest Son of Intestate by a Former Husband, and Creditor, Administrator to Second Husband, who had obtained Administration to the Intestate—Son Preferred.]—See In re Gallogly, 5 A.J.R., 49; post column 1531.

Administration during Absence of Will Granted to Creditor where Executrix Refused to Prove or Renounce.]—See In the Estate of Jones, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 26; post column 1529.

(c) To Guardians.

Administration cum testamento annexo durante minore ætate—Guardian.]—It is not necessary in order for a guardian to obtain such administration to be first appointed guardian of an infant executrix, it is sufficient to advertise in the ordinary way for administration c.t.a. durante minore ætate. In the Goods of O'Shea, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 116.

Administration cum testamento annexo—Trustee of Part of Property, Guardian of Infant Beneficiary.]—W. devised certain property to an infant, and the residue of his personal property to his brother who was out of the jurisdiction, and appointed P. trustee and guardian of the infant till she came of age. The Court refused to grant administration c.t.a. to P. In the Will of Walker, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 74.

Administration durante minore ætate—Infant Next-of-Kin—Administration de bonis non.]—Where the only next-of-kin of an intestate were infants, and there were no other relatives in the colony, the Court granted administration de bonis non to one of their testamentary guardians durante minore ætate. In the Estate of Stanton, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 99.

Infancy of Next-of-Kin of Intestate—Administration durante minore ætate to Guardian.]—A testator by will left his estate to his wife for life, and then to one M. in trust for the testator's children, appointing M. guardian of the children. The widow died intestate, leaving separate personal estate. The Court granted administration during the minority of the children to the guardian. In the Estate of Robertson, 4 A.L.T., 94.

Divorced Husband as Guardian Preferred to Curator as Administrator of Wife's Estate.]—See in the Estate of Khoon Soon. Ante column 1519.

Administration c.t.a.—No Executor Named in Will—No Next-of Kin.]—A testator left a will as follows:—"After payment of my just debts I give £100 for the benefit of Court Sherwood Forest, £150 to L., and the residue for employment for three weeks off and on with—." No executors were appointed. L. with the consent of her husband, applied for probate as executrix according to the tenor, or for letters of administration c.t.a. Her affidavit stated that deceased was unmarried and left no next-of-kin. The Court held that L. was clearly not executrix according to the tenor, and granted administration c.t.a. In the Will of Gordon, 6 A.L.T., 84.

Conditional Grant of Administration c.t.a. to a Beneficiary under a Will upon Exemplification being filed.]—In the Estate of Severne, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 1; 1 A.L.T., 123; post under subheading—Administration with Exemplified Copy of Will Annexed.

When.]—Administration may be granted to the attorney under power of a creditor resident out of the jurisdiction. In re McConochie, 5 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 36.

Where one executor has obtained probate, with leave reserved to another executor to come in and prove, administration c.t.a. will not be granted to the attorney under power of such other executor. In the Will of Kennedy, 1 V.R. (I. E & M.,) 19.

For circumstances under which Court granted administration to attorney under power of an infant husband, see In re Bellamy, ante column 1519.

Substituted Attorney.]—Administration will not, unless any special facts appear, be granted to a substituted attorney appointed by the original attorney under a power of attorney containing an express power of substitution. In the Will of M'Combie, 1 V.R. (I. E. & M.) 18.

Substituted Attorney.]—The Court granted administration c.t.a. to the substituted attorney of an executor who was abroad, where the estate was large, the necessity for administration urgent, and the original attorney refused to act. In the Will of Labilliere, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 51.

Substituted Attorney.]—The Court refused to grant administration to a substituted attorney, appointed under an express power of substitution contained in the original power of attorney from the next-of-kin. In the Goods of White, 4 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 19.

Substituted Attorney of Attorneys under Power.]—In a case where the Curator had administered as upon an intestacy and a subsequent will was found, and the persons interested had sent out a power of attorney to A., who, being about to leave the colony, appointed B. as his substitute by virtue of authority in the power, the Court refused, in the absence of special circumstances, to grant probate to B. In the Will of Henderson, 5 A.J.R., 49.

Substituted Attorney.]—An intestate died in New South Wales, leaving as his only next-of-kin his father, resident in England. The father appointed B., a person in New South Wales, his attorney under power to administer, and B., under the power given him, appointed C., in Victoria, as his substitute. The Court refused to grant administration to C., and intimated that the father should nominate some one in Victoria. In the Estate of Hussey, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 43.

Two Attorneys—Administration c.t.a. Granted to One.]—A grant of administration c.t.a. will be granted to one only of two attorneys under power of the original executors, and not to the two jointly. In the Estate of Donald, 4 V.L.R., (I. P. & M.,) 46.

See S.P., In the Will of Macdougall, In the Will of Eastwood, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 23; A.L.T., 114.

Foreign Will—Foreign Executor not having Proved—Administration c.t.a. to his Attorney.]—Where a testator died in England and the executor appointed had not proved in England, the Court granted administration c.t.a. to the executor's attorney under power. In the Will of Soper, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 79.

15 Vict. No. 10, Sec. 15—Executors out of Jurisdiction—Attorney of One.]—Where a testator appointed two executors out of the jurisdiction and one of them nominated and appointed an attorney under power, the Court granted administration c.t.a. to such attorney, reserving leave to the other executor to come in and prove. In the Will of Gunning, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 80.

Where One Executor out of the Jurisdiction—Attorney.]—Where one of two executors was out of the jurisdiction and had appointed an attorney under power to join in taking out administration with the co-executor within the jurisdiction, the Court refused to grant administration c.t.a. to the agent and the executor within the jurisdiction; but granted probate to the executor within the jurisdiction with leave to the other to come in and prove. In the Goods of Hickman, 3 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 72.

Administration c.t.a. in England—Attorney in Victoria.]—The grant of administration c.t.a. of the estate of a testator domiciled here to a person in England, will not entitle the attorney under power of such person to a similar grant out here, if there be more eligible persons capable of applying. In such a case the Court granted the application upon an affidavit of there being no relatives of the testator out here, and the grant having been made in England to a person as near in kin as any other person entitled. In the Estate of Tarraway, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 53.

Executors Resident in England—Attorney under Power.]—The Court will not grant probate of a will to executors resident in England, and (semble that) the Court will grant administration with an exemplified copy of the will annexed, to the attorney under power of such executors who have proved the will in England personally, and not as attorney of the executor. In the Will of Slack, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 23.

And see generally cases post under sub-heading—Administration with Exemplified Copy of Will annexed.

Administration c.t.a.—Trustees, Executors, and Agency Company.]—The Court granted administration c.t.a. to the Trustees, Executors, and Agency Company, as the attorney under power of an executor resident out of the colony. In the Will of Reynolds, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 61; 2 A.L.T., 142.

Verification of Will.]—Per Molesworth, J.—There should be a verification of the will by some one in a position to do so. Ibid.

Trustees, Executors and Agency Company—Act No. 644, Sec. 2—Persons Resident in the Jurisdiction.]—An infant son, the sole devisee and legatee of a testator, whose executrix had died intestate, concurred in the application by the "Trustees, Executors, &c. Co." for administration de bonis non. Held that Sec. 2 did not authorise persons in Victoria entitled to administration to substitute the company for themselves, and application refused. Semble, the application would be refused if a private individual similarly recommended were applying, the Court leaving it to the person recommending, or any other eligible person to apply. In the Estate of Payne, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 91; 6 A.L.T., 116, sub nom. In the Will of Payne.

Power to Executor to Nominate Another or Substituted Executor—Grant without Prejudice to Power.]—A testator appointed an executor, with power to appoint another person to act with him or instead of him. The Court granted probate to the executor without prejudice to his right to nominate another person, and intimated that if the power were exercised a subsequent application might be made by the nominee to be substituted. In the Will of Hill, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 16 ; 1 A.L.T., 179.

Where leave has been reserved to one executor to come in and prove, it is not necessary for him to move the Court for that purpose, such probate may be taken out in the office. In the Will of M'Donald, 4 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 17.

Separate Application by Executors.]—Where one application was made for probate to two executors reserving leave to the third to come in and prove, and at the same time application was made for probate to the third executor, the Court refused to make two orders but would grant one order for probate to the three executors. In re Taylor, N.C., 32.

Wife Appointed Executrix—Trustees Appointed to Advise Executrix.]—Where a testator made a will leaving his property to his wife (the executrix) for life, the remainder to the children, and appointed two persons as trustees merely to advise her, the Court granted probate to the executrix reserving leave for trustees to come in and prove as in the event of her death before the children came of age they might have to act. In the Will of Davey, 5 A.J.R., 130.

Wife Appointed Executrix—Gift to Trustees if they should Prove the Will.]—A testator appointed A. and B. trustees, and bequeathed a sum to be equally divided between them if they should prove the will, and appointed his wife sole executrix. Probate granted to wife solely. In the Will of Gillibrand, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 94.

Contingent Appointment of Executor—Provision for Substitution on a Certain Event.]—Under a will C. was appointed executor "if he shall have attained the age of twenty-one at my decease," and then followed a provision for trustees being appointed executors in the event of C. not being of age. C. was not twenty-one when the testator died but was when he applied for probate, the trustees having renounced. The Court granted administration with the will annexed to C., not granting him probate because there was no absolute appointment followed by a provision for substitution on a certain event. In the Will of Ogilvie, 5 A.J.R., 170.

And see generally as to Appointment of Executors' Cases ante columns 1508—1514.

On Renunciation of Executors.]—Where executors had filed a deed of renunciation, February, 1879, but no one had applied for probate in the meantime, probate was granted to them in April, 1879, the deed being left on the file. In the Will of Boardman, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 70.

Renunciation—In Tasmania.]—A testator died in Tasmania, and in Tasmania an executor appointed duly renounced, the renunciation being duly filed in Tasmania. Held that the Court was not bound by such renunciation, and probate granted, reserving leave to him to come in and prove. In the Will of Wherrett, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 25.

Renunciation of Probate by Executors Abroad—Effect of.]—The renunciation by an executor of the trusts of a will in another colony does not affect proceedings for probate in this colony, and probate will be granted in this colony of an exemplified copy of the will, with leave reserved to the executor who has renounced to come in and prove. In the Will and Codicils of Levey, 6 A.L.T., 117.

Renunciation When Allowed.] — An executor may be allowed to renounce probate when he has never acted, the order has not been taken out, and probate has not passed the seal of the Court. In the will of Parnell, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 56.

Executor of Executor—Renunciation.]—An executor of an executor, who has taken out probate to his testator, cannot renounce the executorship of his testator's testator. In the Will of Pirie, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 43; 6 A.L.T., 33, sub nom. In the Estate of Pirie.

Executors out of Jurisdiction.]—Where executors appointed by the will were resident in Albury, N.S.W., and the property was all situate in Victoria, the Court granted probate to them in the usual form. In the Will of Burke, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 69.

One Executor out of Jurisdiction—Attorney—Probate not Granted to Attorney but Granted to Executor within the Jurisdiction with Leave to the Other to Come in and Prove.]—See In the Goods of Hickman, ante columns 1525, 1526.

Executors in Sydney—Security—Justifying.]—The Court, in granting probate to an executor resident in Sydney, required the security usual in the case of a grant of administration, and allowed the executor and his sureties to justify in New South Wales before a Commissioner of the Supreme Court of Victoria. In the Will of Neville, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 29; 4 A.L.T., 15.

See S.P., In the Will of Cullen, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.) 30.

Executor Resident in England.]—The Court will not grant probate of a will to an executor resident in England. In the Will of Slack, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 23.

Separate Executors to Different Portions of Property in Victoria.]—Where a testator's property was situate in Victoria, and he appointed his wife executrix so far as a certain business was concerned, and A. the executor of the residue, the Court refused to grant separate probates, but offered to grant probate to A. subject to the wife's consent. In the Will of Davies, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 93.

To Executors according to the Tenor.]—See cases ante columns 1509—1514.

Where Executors or Administrators are Entitled to Grant of Administration de bonis non.]—See cases post columns 1532—1534.

Application for Grant on Coming of Age—Notice to Administrator durante minore ætate.]—On an application for a grant of probate to executors upon their coming of age, notice of the intended application should be served upon the administrator durante minore ætate. In re Patten, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 97.

Executrix Marrying—Executor Coming in Pursuant to Leave Reserved.]—Upon the marriage of a person who was appointed executrix during widowhood, probate was granted to an executor coming in under leave reserved upon her marriage without revocation of the probate to her. In the Will of Fitzpatrick, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 45.

Executor durante absentia—38 Geo. III., Cap. 87—Act No. 427.]—38 Geo. III., cap. 87, providing for the appointment of an executor durante absentiâ, only applies to personalty, and the Court refused to make an appointment of an executor durante absentiâ of an executor appointed under Act No. 427. In the Will of Ryan, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 38; 2 A.L.T., 143.

(g) To Persons under Special Circumstances.

What are Special Circumstances.]—Semble, that immorality is not a ground for withholding a grant of letters of administration from the nephew of an intestate. In the Goods of Peebles; Hall v. Nelson, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 52; 2 A.J.R., 38.

Joint Administration.]—The Court under circumstances which showed that sureties could not be obtained if administration were granted to a widow alone, granted a joint administration to widow and eldest son. In the Estate of Kernan, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 50.

Executrix Refusing to Prove or Renounce—"Administration Act 1872," Sec. 36.]—On an application under Sec. 36 of the "Administration Act 1872," it appeared that the executrix had possessed herself of the will, and refused either to prove it or renounce probate, and moreover, would not bring it into Court. The Court made an order for administration during the absence of the will to a creditor applying under the section with costs against the executrix. In the Estate of Jones, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 26.

Donee of a donatio mortis causa.]—Administration granted to the donee of a donatio mortis causâ, but order to stand over till an advertisement settled by the Court had been inserted twice in a certain newspaper, such advertisement calling attention to the donatio mortis causâ, and the donee's claim to it. In the Goods of Tully, 4 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 15. See S.P., In the Goods of Holton, 6 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 40.

Person not Proving Himself of Full Age.]—Where plaintiff filed his bill for the grant to him of letters of administration, and the defendant pleaded the infancy of the plaintiff, and the only evidence that the plaintiff was of age was his own statement: Held that the plaintiff's statement did not amount to proof of his age; and that not having proved his age the bill should be dismissed without costs. In the Goods of Peebles; Hall v. Nelson, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 52; 2 A.J.R., 38.

Letters of Administration—Mother Entitled before Brother.]—The mother of an intestate is entitled to administration in priority to the brother. Before administration can be granted to the brother, there must be a consent by the mother, or an affidavit that she declines to take out administration. In the Goods of M'Farlane, 3 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 66.

Joint Grant—Widow and Son.]—A joint grant of administration will not be made to the widow and son of an intestate, although the widow consents. In the Goods and Real Estate of Moylan, 2 V.R. (I.E. & M.,) 69.

Nephew of Intestate Improperly Using Assets.]—Where an intestate had during his life become lunatic, and upon his so doing, his nephew took possession of his stock-in-trade and shop, and continued to carry on the business in it, and kept no proper or distinct accounts as to the stock-in-trade as it stood at the time he took possession, and as it stood at the time of his applying for administration, having sold some of the stock, and added other stock, Held that the confusion thus created would in itself be a ground for refusing the nephew administration of the estate. In the Goods of Peebles; Wall v. Nelson, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 52; 2 A.J.R., 38.

Heir-at-Law.]—An intestate died in 1864, and left a widow and two sons, and from his death the real estate had been in the joint occupation of the widow and two of the intestate's brothers, and was used for the benefit of the widow and the sons. The Court refused a motion by the eldest son and heir-at-law for a grant of administration of the real estate to him on the ground that by giving him the grant a conclusive title would be given to him to a matter which might be disputed. In the Real Estate of Cropley, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 61.

Son—Daughter.]—A son is entitled to administration as against a daughter, especially if the latter be married. In re Dunn, 1 A.L.T., 60.

Eldest Son—Affidavit.]—The affidavits, in an application for administration to an eldest son, should distinctly state that there was no widow, or she should consent to the application. In the Estate of Trail, 3 A.L.T., 27.

Next-of-Kin within Jurisdiction Preferred to one Resident Without—Married Woman.]—Letters of administration will be granted to a next-of-kin resident within the jurisdiction in preference to one temporarily resident out of it, although the former may be a married woman. In the Estate of Chambers, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 21.

One of Next-of-Kin—Sole Legatee and Executor Predeceasing Testator.]—Where P., appointed sole legatee and executor under a will, had predeceased the testator, the Court granted administration c.t.a. to one of the next-of-kin. In the Will of Plummer, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 81.

Act No. 230, Secs. 4, 12—Contest between Curator, Eldest Son of Intestate by a Former Husband, and Creditor Administrator to Second Husband who had Obtained Administration to the Intestate.]—G., a married woman, died intestate, her second husband obtained a rule to administer and died leaving a will but no executor, M., a creditor of G., took out administration c.t.a. to the second husband's estate, D., a son of G. by her first husband, also applied. Held that as between curator and others the curator was not entitled under Sec. 12 of the Act, and as between M. and D., although under Sec. 4 G.'s husband might have been entitled to half G.'s property, yet M.'s right to be preferred as representative to G. only arose where G.'s next-of-kin took no beneficial interest, and as D. was first in the field with his advertisement he should be preferred. Rule to D. Quære whether the rule as to husband's preference to children to administration of personalty applies to obtaining a rule to administer realty under Sec. 4 of the Act. In re Gallogly, 5 A.J.R., 49.

Contest between Foreign Administrator and Persons nearer of Kin.]—C. died in India, leaving a brother and a mother. The brother obtained administration in India. Held that that did not give him or his attorney under power a better right than the mother. In the Estate of Crowe, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 65.

Administration c.t.a.—Trustee of Part of Property and Guardian.]—Where a testator devised certain property to an infant and the residue of the personal property to his brother out of the jurisdiction, and appointed P. trustee and guardian of the infant till she came of age, the Court refused to grant administration c.t.a. to P. In the Will of Walker, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 74.

Trustees, Executors, and Agency Company—Person Entitled to Administration Substituting the Company.]—If a person who would be entitled to administration, resides within the jurisdiction of the Court, he cannot substitute the Trustees, Executors and Agency Company, or any other person for himself; though if he resided out of the jurisdiction he could do so by power of attorney, &c. In the Will of Payne, 6 A.L.T., 116.

To Nominee of a Company.]—A testator appointed as executors such persons, being directors of the company, as the Trustees and Agency Company might under its seal nominate; the company duly nominated two of its directors as executors. The Court granted probate to them as individuals. In the Will of Hadden, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 91; 1 A.L.T., 74.

Power to Appoint new Trustees.]—A will appointed two persons "executors and trustees" and contained a power to appoint new trustees. The trustees and executors disclaimed, and the person appointed by the will for the purpose appointed two others as trustees. The Court refused to grant probate to these persons, on the ground that the power was not to appoint executors. In re Campbell, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 32.

(2) When Grant Limited.

Limited Administration—Equity Suit.]—For form of order where administration was granted to a nominee of plaintiffs in an equity suit touching the rights of the intestate under the will of another person, the object of the suit being to determine the construction of the will, see In the Estate of Morton, 3 A.J.R., 102.

In what Cases.]—See In the Will of Brown, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 47; ante column 1510.

Separate Executors to Different Portions of Properties in Victoria—Probate only Granted to One, with Consent of Other.]—In the Will of Davies, ante column 1528.

Executor also Husband and Father of c.q.t.s.—Conditional Grant.]—C. died domiciled in N.S.W., having by will appointed H. and another his executors. They proved the will in N.S.W., and H. applied for probate in Victoria, the other executor being resident in N.S.W., and not joining in the application. Some time before his death, C., by deed poll, declared himself trustee of a mortgage under the "Transfer of Land Statute" in favour of H.'s wife for life, and after her death for her children. C. left no other real or personal estate in Victoria. The Court made the grant to H., upon his undertaking to have new trustees of the settled property, and to convey to them, such undertaking being incorporated in the order granting the probate. In the Will of Cameron, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 87; 2 A.L.T., 16.

See ante column 1500 et seq.

Administration de bonis non—Contest between Husband and Surety of Original Administratrix—"Divorce Act" (No. 125,) Secs. 7, 11, 48.]—M'V. died intestate, and letters of administration were granted to his widow, A. joining in the bond as one of her sureties. The widow subsequently married M., and after marriage M. deserted her, and she obtained a protection order under the "Divorce Act" (No. 125,) Sec. 7. During the desertion she carried on business as a feme sole, and became indebted to A. Cohabitation was resumed which continued till her death, A.'s debt being still unpaid. A. published notice of his intention to apply for administration de bonis non of M'V.'s estate, to which no caveat was lodged, and M. applied for administration to the widow's estate, against which A. lodged a caveat. Held that under Secs. 7, 11, and 48 of Act No. 125 the resumption of cohabitation after a protection order based upon desertion places the parties in the same position as to liabilities and rights of separate estate as in the case of a man and woman originally marrying; that the property acquired during the separation became the husband's on resumption of cohabitation, and there was no need for him to take out administration. Administration de bonis non to M'V.'s estate granted to A. In the Goods of M'Vea, Murray v. Aitken, 2 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 44.

Administration de bonis non—Nominee of Sureties—Nominee of Infant Children of Intestate—Costs.]—A. died intestate, and his widow took out administration and died shortly afterwards. D., the sister of A. and nominee of the sureties to the widow's bond, applied for administration de bonis non to A.'s estate. B., the maternal grandmother of A.'s infant children and their nominee, also applied. The Court granted administration to B., B. to pay D.'s costs of application as between party and party, D. being first in the field, and B. during the argument agreeing to pay her costs if B. got administration. Semble, if there is no imputation of misconduct a surety is a fit and proper person to be entrusted with administration de bonis non. In re Austin, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 111.

When Granted to Surety of Administratrix.]—See M'Kay v. Edwards, ante column 1523.

When Granted to Testamentary Guardian.]—In the Estate of Stanton, ante column 1524.

Administration de bonis non—Executor of an Executor.]—A. appointed B. C. and D. executors, of these only B. proved; B. died having partially administered, and appointed E. F. and G. executors. Application was made for administration de bonis non to E. with the consent of F. and G. The Court refused the application as being unnecessary. In the Will of De Little, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 32.

Next-of-Kin—Executors of Administratrix.]—The next-of-kin of an intestate are entitled to a grant of administration de bonis non in preference to the executors of the administratrix of the intestate. The Court, moreover, is disinclined to appoint more than one administrator of an estate. In the Estate of O'Flaherty, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 17; 1 A.L.T., 183.

Death of Administrator—Who Entitled to Administration of Intestate's Estate.]—Where an administrator dies without having fully administered, the next-of-kin of the intestate are entitled to administration de bonis non, in preference to the executors of the administrator. In the Estate of Stanton, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. &. M.,) 99.

Administration de bonis non—Contest between Next-of-Kin and Executor of Administratrix.]—The Court will grant administration de bonis non to the next-of-kin of the intestate in preference to the executor of the administratrix. In the Estate of Beavan, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 24; 2 A.L.T., 114.

Contest between Executor and Creditor seeking Administration c.t.a.—When Executor Preferred.]—See In the Goods of Heffernan, ante column 1522.

Administration de bonis non—Executor—Next-of-Kin.]—The executor of an administrator is not entitled to a grant of administration de bonis non; the next-of-kin of the intestate are the proper persons to apply. In the Estate of Leahy, 6 A.L.T., 16.

Administration de bonis non—Administratrix of Executor.]—A testator died leaving one F. sole executor and sole legatee. F. died intestate without having administered the whole property, and his widow took out administration to his estate. The Court granted administration de bonis non of the testator's estate to the administratrix. In the Will of Naylor, 6 A.L.T., 48.

Administration de bonis non—Executor of Administrator—Consent of Next-of-Kin.]—Administration de bonis non was granted to one of the executors of a husband, who had been administrator of his wife's estate, such executor being guardian of the children under the husband's will, and the wife's next-of-kin consenting to the application. In the Estate of M'Ivor, 6 A.L.T., 17.

Administration de bonis non—Son of Intestate—Consent of Widow.]—Where administration had been granted to the eldest son of an intestate with the consent of the widow, and the son died without having fully administered, and the only surviving son of the intestate then applied for administration de bonis non, the Court refused the application because no consent of the widow was filed. In the Estate of Monichon, 6 A.L.T., 28.

Administration de bonis non—When Granted.]—M. died in Victoria, and, as it was supposed, intestate. Administration was granted in Victoria to his widow, and she collected assets, and disposed of them as directed by a will, of which she was executrix, and which she and the executor named in the will proved in England. After her death intestate, the attorney under power of the executor of M. applied for administration de bonis non of M. in Victoria. Held that such grant could not be made till the administration wrongly granted, as upon intestacy, had been called in and revoked. In re Minter, 3 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 82.

To whom Granted.]—Where a brother of an intestate refused to apply for a rule, a rule was granted to the husband of intestate's sister. In the Real Estate of Baldwin, 6 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 40.

To whom Granted—Executor.]—An executor is not, from his obligation to pay debts, "a person interested in the estate" within the meaning of Sec. 4 of Act No. 230, so as to entitle him virtute officii to a rule to administer the realty of a testator as to which the will was silent. In the Real Estate of Hood, 4 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 20.

Rule to Administer Granted to Husband—Land Purchased by Wife with Husband's Money.]—Where land was purchased by a deceased wife with her husband's money and consent, and the Crown grant had been made out in the wife's name, the Court granted the husband a rule to administer subject to an affidavit that he consented to the property being treated as belonging to her. In re Ellen Skinner, 3 A.J.R., 7.

Husband's Preference to Children—Rule as to.]—Quære, whether the rule as to the husband's preference to children to administration of personalty applies to obtaining a rule to administer realty under Sec. 4 of Act No. 230. In re Gallogly, 5 A.J.R , 49.

Grant to Subsequent Applicant upon Neglect of First.]—C.M. obtained administration of the personal, and a rule to administer the real estate of an intestate, his uncle, but allowed the three months prescribed by the Rules of Court for filing an inventory of the personal estate to elapse without completing the bond as to the real estate. Under these circumstances he moved ex parte for a renewal of the order as to the real estate, and for leave to file an inventory nunc pro tunc upon an affidavit explaining his delay. In the meantime another next-of-kin, a brother of the intestate, arrived in the colony with a power of attorney from the children of three deceased brothers of the intestate, advertised his intention of applying for a rule to administer, and filed the usual affidavit. Upon motion by the brother, on notice to the nephew, a rule to administer was granted to the former. In the Freehold Lands of Molloy, 1 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 15; 1 A.J.R., 8, sub nom. In re Molloy.

Death of Widow before Property Administered—To whom Rule Granted.]—A widow of an intestate, who left a son surviving him, obtained a rule to administer his freehold estate, but died before she had fully administered it, and while the son was under age. The Court expressed an opinion that a rule to administer the freehold so far as not already administered should be granted to a relative of the intestate rather than to the widow's executors. In the Estate of Mather, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 24; 3 A.L.T., 134.

When Rule Granted.]—Rule to administer real estate granted to widow, which real estate the intestate had agreed to purchase, and of which he had paid part of the purchase-money and the widow had paid the balance. In the Real Estate of Welsh, 4 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 17.

When Rule Granted—Delay in Proving Will.]—Where a will devising real estate was in existence, but had not been proved, and more than a year had elapsed since the testator's death, a rule under the Act No. 230, Sec. 4, was granted to a creditor to administer the real estate as upon an intestacy, although the land in question had been sold by a mortgagee after the death of the testator (mortgagor.) In the Freehold Lands of King, 5 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 37.

When Granted—Partial Intestacy—Act No. 230.]—The Act No. 230 authorising the grant of a rule to administer undevised real estate applies to a case of a partial intestacy; and in such a case a rule will be granted, with such variations from the form in the schedule as will meet the particular case. In the Real Estate of Moore, 3 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 77.

In such a case, although both personalty and undisposed of realty will be administered by the same person, separate accounts of the different kinds of property should be kept. Ibid.

When Rule Granted—Intestacy—"Transfer of Land Statute" (No. 301,) Secs. 67—74.]—Where a testator had an evident intention to dispose of all his property, and there was no direct devise of the lands passing the legal estate, but the executor had power to sell them, Held that the testator could not be treated as having died intestate as to them, and a rule to administer under the "Transfer of Land Statute" refused. In the Real Estate of Gow, 4 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 18.

NOTE.—Secs. 67—74 of the Act No. 301 are repealed by Act No. 427.

Intestate Dying before "Administration Act 1872"—Administration de bonis non—Administration of Real Estate.]—Administration had been taken out of the personal estate of an intestate, who died before the "Administration Act 1872" came into force, and whose administratrix had died. On an application by his daughter for administration of his estate and effects, or failing that for administration de bonis non, the Court granted administration de bonis non, and also under Sec. 6 administration of the real estate to the applicant, as if she had obtained a rule to administer under the Act No. 230. In the Estate of Ewing, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 93.

Person Dying after the Passing of the "Intestates Real Estate Act," and before the Passing of the "Administration Act 1872."]—The Court granted a rule to administer the real estate of a testator who died after the passing of the "Intestates Real Estate Act," but before the passing of the "Administration Act 1872," and who had left a will appointing an executor, who subsequently obtained probate, but not disposing of the real estate. In the Estate of Moran, 2 A.L.T., 76.

W., in 1864, obtained administration to the personal estate of her deceased husband; the Court, in 1879, granted her a rule to administer his real estate under Act No. 230. In the Estate of Wilkinson, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 64.

Intestate Dying before the "Administration Act 1872"—Administration of Real Estate.]—An intestate died before the "Administration Act 1872" came into force, administration of his personal estate was taken out, but the administrator died leaving the property unadministered. The Court granted an applicant administration de bonis non of the personalty and administration of the realty as if she had obtained a rule to administer under the Act No. 230. In the Estate of Ewing, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 93.

Intestate Dying before the Date of Act No. 230—Affidavits.]—An order for letters of administration to the estate of a person dying before the "Intestates Real Estate Act"(No.230)was passed, should state the date of the death before that Act. In re Quinlan, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 17.

"Administration Act 1872," Secs. 6, 7, 9—Real Estate — Heir-at-Law — Affidavits.]—Where an application is made, under the "Administration Act 1872," for the grant of letters of administration of the real estate of an intestate dying before the 1st July, 1864, to the heir-at-law in whom the real estate is already vested and who has been in possession of the real estate since the death of the intestate, the affidavits should show a motive for the application. In the Estate of Norton, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 58.

Administration—Intestate Dying before Act No. 230.]—The Court has no jurisdiction to grant administration of the real estate of an intestate, who died before the coming into operation of the Act No. 230. In the Estate of O'Grady, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 95; 2 A.L.T., 43.

Order to Administer Personalty Granted—No Rule to Administer Real Estate under Act No. 230—Long Delay.]—Where an order to administer the personalty of an intestate had been granted in 1869, and the person to whom the administration had been granted was ignorant that he should have taken out a rule under the "Intestates Real Estate Act," to administer the realty, the Court granted, in 1884, administration of the real estate to such person. In the Estate of Hennessey, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 40.

Death of Person obtaining Rule to Administer—Proper Course.]—The proper course, when a person obtaining a rule to administer freehold under the Act No. 230 dies, is to grant a rule to administer the freehold so far as unadministered by the person obtaining the rule. In the Estate of Mather, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 24; 3 A.L.T., 134.

When Granted or Refused—Land held under a Constructive Trust.]—The Act No. 223, sec. 16, which provides that certain real estates of an intestate shall be dealt with as if held for a term of years, applies only to property of which the intestate was the beneficial owner, with power to dispose of it really and beneficially, and is not applicable to property held by the intestate either as a direct or constructive trnstee. Therefore, a rule to administer was refused as to lands held by an intestate partner upon a constructive trust for the partnership. In the Real Estate of Twomey, 3 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 67.

When Rule Granted—Act No. 230, Sec. 3.]—"The power to dispose," in Sec. 3, means "power to dispose beneficially," and the Act does not apply to trust estates. Where real estate had been purchased by an intestate and his two partners for partnership purposes, and had been conveyed to them as tenants in common, a rule to administer the real estate was refused on the application of the intestate's widow. In the Real Estate of M'Pherson, 4 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 22.

Administration of Real and Personal Estate—Separate Rules—Realty Vested in Intsstate as Mortgagee.]—Although the Act No. 230 may make the administration of real estate the same as that of personal estate, they arise under separate jurisdictions, and Sec. 6 contemplates separate proceedings and separate rules. Where the realty is vested in an intestate only as mortgagee it does not come within the Act. Rule as to that part of realty refused. In the Goods of Henderson, In the goods of Dickson, 2 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 41.

Realty Held Partly under "Rsal Property Act" (No. 223) and Partly under Old Law—Separate Rules.]—Such realty should not be coupled under one rule. Two distinct rules made. In the Real Estate of Sutherland, 2 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 43.

Land nnder "Transfer of Land Statute"—Separate Rules.]—There is nothing in the "Transfer of Land Statute" forbidding a separate motion as to land under that Act, and such an application will be granted, although not necessary, at the risk of the administrator as to costs, for the costs of an unnecessary motion will not be allowed in passing an administrator's accounts. In the Estate of Morrison, 3 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 84.

Upon what Property Grant Operates.]—Quære, whether a rule under the Act No. 230 to administer undevised realty will operate upon property of which the intestate has a lease under Sec. 23 of the "Land Act 1862." In the Real Estate of Wallis, 3 W.W. A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 79.

(c) Administration with exemplified copy of will or Grant of administration annexed.

To Creditor.]—Where a testator died out of the jurisdiction and probate was granted out of the jurisdiction, the Court granted administration with an exemplified copy of the will annexed to a creditor. In the Will of Farley, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 42.

Executor Resident in England.]—Semble where executors are resident in England, the Court will grant administration with an exemplification of the will annexed to the attorney under power of the executors proving the will in England personally and not as the attorney of the executors. In the Will of Slack, see ante column 1526.

Administration c.t.a.—No Exemplification—Conditional Grant.]—A testator died in England, leaving a will relating exclusively to property in New South Wales, which he bequeathed equally to his two brothers. No executors were appointed. Administration was granted in England to one brother, and in New South Wales to the other, who applied in Victoria for a grant of administration to him in this colony, where the testator had real estate of the value of £900, as to which he had died intestate. The Court made an order for administration c.t.a. of the property in Victoria conditionally upon the exemplification of the grant in New South Wales being filed. In the Estate of Severne, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 1; 1 A.L.T. 123.

See S.P., In the Goods of Whittaker, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 114.

Lost Will—English Grant—Evidence—Advertisement.]—Where the Probate Division of the High Court of Justice in England, in a contested suit granted administration with a draft of a lost will annexed, the Court here declined to grant probate upon an exemplification of the English grant, but required independent evidence of the facts in issue before the English Court. A verified copy of shorthand notes of the evidence in the suit and of the judgment having been produced, the Court, after requiring that the advertisement of the intention to apply for probate should indicate that the probate was based on an act of the English Court, granted probate upon the exemplification. In the Will of Malcolm, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.) 102; 1 A.L.T., 201; 2 A.L.T., 3.

Will Proved in England—Evidence of Property.]—Upon an application, on an exemplification of the will, for administration c.t.a. of a will proved in England, there ought to be evidence that there was property to be acted upon in England. Where it appeared by the exemplification that the assets in England were sworn under £480, and duty paid accordingly, the Court held this sufficient evidence. In the Goods of Webster, 3 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 70.

Upon an application, on an exemplification of the will, for administration c.t.a. of a will proved in England, the Court will require evidence that the testator left personal property in England to found the jurisdiction of the English Courts before it will endorse what they have done. In the Goods of Goodman, 3 W. W. & A'B (I. E. & M.,)71.

Will Proved in Foreign Court—What Evidence Required.]—Motion for administration with an exemplified copy of the will annexed to an attorney under power of the executrix. The testator died in Ireland and the contents of the will and probate were authenticated by a certificate from the district registrar who granted it. Held that an exemplification of the will and probate under the seal of the Foreign Court and satisfactory evidence by an affidavit sworn before a Commissioner of this Court that testator had personal property in Ireland and was domiciled in the district of Belfast, and of the signature of the executrix to the power of attorney were necessary and indispensable. In the Estate of Von Stieglitz, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 35.

Grant of Administration by Foreign Court—Evidsnce Required.]—On a motion for a grant of administration of the estate of C. to the attorney under power of C.'s widow, it appeared that administration had been granted to the widow, who resided in New York, by the Surrogate's Court, at West Chester, in the State of New York. An exemplification of the grant was produced, and an affidavit of the marriage of C. and the administratrix, and of their residence together for some years, and of C.'s disappearance for seven years, during which he was totally unheard of, and was therefore presumed to have died in New York. Before granting administration to the attorney the Court required further affidavits as to the jurisdiction of the Surrogate's Court, and as to the marriage of the administratrix with the deceased, and upon obtaining them to its satisfaction granted the application. In the Estate of Coady, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 89; 1 A.L.T., 128.

Foreign Will—Necessary Materials in Affidavit.]—The general practice in granting administration with an exemplified copy of the will annexed is to require an exemplification from the Central Court in London, and an exemplification from a District Court is not sufficient. The affidavits should show jurisdiction in the Foreign Court, i.e., they should allege that deceased had personal property in England or in the foreign country. In the Will of Grove, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 88; 1 A.L.T., 67.

Foreign Will—Administration to Attorney of Foreign Administrator—How far Court Recognises Acts of Foreign Court.]—The Court recognises the acts of authorities in another country only where it appears that the person in respect of whom they were done lived, and had property there. Where an application was made for administration by the attorney under power of a widow, a foreign administratrix, the Court required evidence as to identification that the administratrix was the widow, and was not satisfied with a certificate of the foreign authorities that she was the widow. In the Estate of Dunoyer, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 73.

Probate of Old Will Granted in England — Evidence of Property there.]—A testator died in 1858, and probate of his will was obtained in England in 1859. The testator's executrix managed the Victorian property, and received the rents without applying for probate in Victoria till 1882, when she applied for letters of administration c.t.a., producing not the will but an exemplification of the English probate. The Court required an affidavit that the testator left property in England, and upon that not being forthcoming, refused the application. In the Will of Cook, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 20.

Will Proved in England—What Affidavits Necessary.]—On an application for administration with an exemplification of a will proved in England annexed, the Court will require affidavits that there was property in England to give jurisdiction to the English Court, and that the probate is unrevoked. In the Estate of Piper, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 45; 4 A.L.T., 111.

Foreign Consular Court—Evidence of Property—Verification of Signature of Power of Attorney.]—Application for administration with an exemplified copy of a will annexed. The testator died in China, and a person in China obtained administration c.t.a. from the Consular Court in China as attorney under power of the executors. This power was verified by statutory declaration instead of affidavit, and the only evidence of property in China was a letter from the consul stating that the testator left personal property there. Held that the verification and evidence of property were insufficient, and the Court expressed its unwillingness to act upon the consular order of probate. In the Estate of Friedlander, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 49; 5 A.L.T., 144.

Copy of Will—Affidavit of Correctness not made before a Commissioner of the Court.]—The Court refused to grant letters of administration c.t.a., the application for which was based upon an "extracted registered copy" of the will taken from the records of the Court of Buteshire, and sworn to be such by an affidavit made before the chief magistrate of Rothesay, on the ground that the affidavit was not made before a commissioner of the Court, there being such a commissioner at Glasgow, within a short distance of Bute. In the Will of Thom, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 19.

An affidavit sworn before the Lord Mayor of London is not sufficient. In re Hopkins, 4 A.J.R., 106.

Affirmation before Commissioner—Certified Copy.]—Where the execution of a power of attorney was verified by affirmation before a commissioner, the Court refused to accept such in the absence of evidence that the person verifying had conscientious scruples against taking an oath. Where the original probate was filed, but was taken off the file in order to be sent to England, the Court refused to grant administration with a certified copy of such probate, requiring the original probate to be annexed. In the Estate of Talents, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 27.

And see cases ante columns 1157, 1158, under POWER OF ATTORNEY for Requisites of Power and Verification of Signature.

Tasmanian Probate—Exemplification—Attestation of Will.]—It is not necessary, on an application for probate upon an exemplification of a Tasmanian probate, to prove that the will was duly attested. In the Will of Degraves, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 99; 2 A.L.T., 81.

Security Required.]—An applicant for administration, with an exemplified copy of the will annexed, who does not reside within the jurisdiction, and does not intend to do so, must give security. In the Will of Hassell, 6 A.L.T., 84.

Scotch Confirmation — Affidavit of Power of Sheriff to Grant it.]—Where letters of administration were applied for on behalf of the attorney under power of the person appointed in Scotland by the sheriff, the Court required an affidavit from a person conversant with Scotch law that the sheriff had power to grant it. In the Estate of Sutherland, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 23; 5 A.L.T., 156.

See cases ante columns 1523, 1524.

(iii.) Bonds and Sureties.

Amount of Bonds.]—Where an estate was sworn under £33,000, including several doubtful debts, the Court allowed two sureties to give a bond and justify for £20,000 each. In the Will of Bostock, 1 A.J.R., 100.

Amount of Bond.]—Where no one but the administrator and his mother were entitled to the estate of an intestate, which was valued at £20,000, and the administrator was unable to get sureties (under the old rules) to justify for £80,000, an application for permission to enter into a bond for £40,000 was granted, the sureties to justify for £40,000. In the Estate of Blannin, 1 A.J.R., 4.

Amount—Possible Remittances from England.]—An intestate's estate was likely to be increased by possible remittances from England. Held that the bond should be for the full amount of the possible remittances. In the Will of Hoskin, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 38.

Administration Granted by Registrar—Rule Nisi for Revocation — Increase of Security.]—Where administration had been granted by the Registrar under Sec. 18 of the "Administration Act 1872," and a rule nisi in the alternative was obtained calling upon the administratrix to show cause why the grant should not be set aside, or why she should not find additional security, on the ground that the property was over £500, whereas she had sworn it to be £200, the Court, finding that the property was in fact under £500, but considerably over £200 in value, ordered the administratrix to give additional security, or in default that the grant should be revoked. In re O'Brien, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 76.

Administration Granted a long time after Death of Intestate—Amount of Bond How Calculated.]—Where a long time has elapsed since the death of the intestate before administration of his estate is granted, the usual sureties must be given, and the amount of the administration bond must be calculated on the value of the property at the time of the grant. In the Estate of Hennessey, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 40.

Estate Sworn below Proper Value—Fees—Amendment—Bond.]—Where the estate of an intestate has been sworn below the proper amount for which security was given by the administrator, the proper course is to allow the administrator to pay the additional fees, to amend the letters of administration by inserting the proper sum, and to require the administrator to enter into a fresh bond to the necessary amount. In the Goods of Thornley, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 194.

Where the affidavit undervalued the total value of the real and personal estate, through a mistake in the addition, the value of each separately being correctly stated, the bond was fixed at the amount of the sums correctly added. In the Estate of Dunbar, 6 A.L.T., 28.

Dispensing with Sureties—Absent Next-of-Kin in Indigent Circumstances.]—The fact that the absent next-of-kin of an intestate is in indigent circumstances, is no ground for dispensing with one of the "two or more able sureties," required of the person to whom administration is granted under the Statute 22 and 23 Car. ii., Cap. x.,

sec. 1, should such next-of-kin apply for letters of administration. In re Kinderlin, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 11.

Reducing Amount of Security.]—In applications for administration the Court cannot altogether dispense with sureties, but as the Statute 22 and 23 Car. ii., Cap. x., only requires some security, and does not specify the amount, the Courts will invariably reduce the amount where the debts are trifling or there are no debts at all. In the Goods of Ellis, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 191.

See now "Administration Act 1872" (No. 427,) secs. 26-28.

Dispensing with Sureties.]—W.B. died leaving a will, and appointing J.B. his executor. J.B. died shortly afterwards, without proving the will. A. obtained administration to J.B.'s estate, and entered into a bond for an amount which included W.B.'s property. The Court refused to dispense with further sureties in granting A. administration de bonis non to W.B.'s estate. In the Will of Bon, 3 A.J.R., 62.

Administration c.t.a.—When Security Dispensed with.]—Where a will named certain persons as "trustees," but did not purport to dispose of the whole of the estate, the Court held that they were not executors according to the tenor, but allowed them a grant of administration c.t.a.; and, upon an affidavit being filed, that the will did in fact dispose of the whole estate, allowed the usual security to be dispensed with. In the Will of Brown, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 47.

Informal Appointment of Executors—Administration c.t.a.—Dispensing with Sureties.]—Where a testator had made an inoperative appointment of an executrix, the Court, in granting administration c.t.a. to the widow, refused to dispense with sureties where the widow took only a life estate. In the Will of Boland, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 92 ; 2 A.L.T., 42.

Administration c.t.a.—Dispensing with Sureties—Administrator to Enter into Bond.]—In the Will of Keane, ante column 1511.

Dispensing with Sureties—Administratrix cum Testamento Annexo Sole and Universal Legatee.]—See In the Will of Dohrmann, and In the Will of Robertson, ante columns 1511, 1513.

Dispensing with Sureties—Administration cum Testamento Annexo—Sole Devisee for Life.]—See In re Cooper, ante columns 1510, 1511.

Justifying Sureties — Dispensing with.]—An intestate died, leaving a widow, five adult children and one infant. The widow, administratrix, applied for dispensation with sureties, on the ground that there were no debts, and that all the children had signed a consent thereto, the widow being willing to give justifying security in respect of the share of the infant; but the Court refused to dispense altogether with sureties, but accepted two, justifying in a less amount than the value of the estate. In the Estate of Wyld, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 83 ; 1 A.L.T., 184.

For reasons why the Court differs from the English practice, and requires justifying sureties to administration bond. See Ibid.

The Court will not, in a case where a widow and children are the only beneficiaries, dispense with sureties. In the Estate of Lewis, 3 A.L.T., 79.

Four Sureties instead of Two.]—The Court consented to four sureties instead of two, each of the four justifying for half the amount, but each executing the usual administration bond for the full amount. In the Estate of Barr, 1 A.L.T., 76.

One Surety—Executor of Husband Surviving Wife—Wife's Estate Unadministered.]—See In the Goods of Crawford, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 192; ante column 1519.

Dispensing with Sureties — Married Woman having Separate Property.]—A married woman died having separate property, and her husband was the only person entitled, but the Court in granting him administration refused to dispense with sureties. In the Estate of Turnbull, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 104.

Sureties — Leave to Justify in the Country when Granted.]—An application for leave for the sureties in an administration bond to justify in the country instead of before the Master in Melbourne, will not be granted unless there are special circumstances ; and that the estate is small is not such a special circumstance, unless it be sworn under £300. In re Monks, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 14.

Sureties—Appointment of New.]—The Court refused an application after the estate had been realised, by sureties to an administration bond to be discharged, and to have new sureties appointed. In the Estate of Wakefield, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 96 ; 2 A.L.T., 42.

Surety in Bond—Who may be.]—A solicitor may become surety for his client in an administration bond. In the Goods of Paynter, 3 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 69.

The husband of an administratrix who is possessed of separate property may be accepted as one of the sureties to her administration bond. In the Estate of Synnot, 3 A.L.T., 39.

Attorney under Power of Executors in South Australia — Sureties in South Australia.] — A testator appointed executors resident in South Australia, and administration c.t.a. was granted to their attorney under power. The Court refused to accept as sureties for the bond persons resident in South Australia. In the Estate of Hanson, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 97.

Sureties out of the Jurisdiction.]—An application was made for an order to accept the bond of a surety out of the jurisdiction. The Court laid down no general rule, but thought that in each case the Master should consider the amount of the property, and the facilities for enforcing the bond out of the jurisdiction, the residence out of the jurisdiction being an ingredient to be considered, but not a bar. In the Estate of Stephens, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 22; 4 A.L.T., 140.

Probate—Executors out of Jurisdiction—Bond and Sureties.]—Where executors out of the jurisdiction apply for probate, it will only be granted upon their entering into similar bonds and sureties to those required from administrators. In the Goods of Ellis, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 191.

Executors out of Jurisdiction—Justifying.]—Where probate is granted to executors resident out of the jurisdiction, the Court will require them to enter into a bond, and to find sureties, but will permit the executors to justify before a commissioner in the country of their residence. In the Will of Cullen, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 30; 5 A.L.T., 33, 80.

S.P.—See In the Will of Neville, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 29; 4 A.L.T., 15.

Assurance Company—Guarantee.]—The Court refused to take the bond and guarantee of an assurance company, and expressed an opinion that if such companies wished to embark in that class of business the rules ought to be altered so as to enable the directors to become sureties, and providing that the funds of the company only would be answerable for any default. Re Tucker, 4 A.J.R., 172.

Security—Incorporated Company—"Administration Act 1872," Sec. 27.]—It is necessary to obtain an express order of the Court for the acceptance of the security of an incorporated company for an administrator under Sec. 27 of the "Administration Act 1872." The order should be drawn up as on reading the Government Gazette notice of the Governor-in-Council's approval of such company. In the Estate of M'Donald, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 28.

Guarantee Society—Affidavit as to Solvency.]—Where it is sought to substitute the bond of a guarantee society for that of private individuals there should be an affidavit to satisfy the Master that the society is solvent. In the Estate of Bowman, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 112; 3 A.L.T., 72.

Act No. 427, Sec. 28—Motion to Assign the Bond.]—The Court requires notice of a motion to assign an administration bond under Sec. 28 to be served upon the sureties. In the Estate of M'Carthy, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.) 115; 3 A.L.T., 79.

Liability of Surety to Administration Bond—Act No. 427, Secs. 26, 28.]—See M'Carthy v. Ryan and Regian v. Shovelbottom, ante columns 1248, 1249, 1250.

(iv.) Practice Relating to Grant of.

Court not Guided by English Ecclesiastical Courts.]—There is nothing in the Supreme Court Act directing that the Supreme Court in its probate jurisdiction shall be guided by the practice of the Ecclesiastical Courts in England, and there is nothing in the Rules requiring that that practice shall form the basis of its administration in cases not specifically provided for, as there is with reference to the common law and equity jurisdiction of the Court. In re Twist, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 17.

Presumption of Death.]—Where a testator had left England for Sydney in a ship which had not been heard of for two years, the Court granted administration with an exemplified copy of the will annexed, probate having been granted in England. In the Will of Sohier, 3 A.J.R., 97.

Evidence of Death—Affidavit by Fijian.]—Where, on a motion for probate, there was a difficulty in proving the death, an affidavit by a Fijian that the testator was murdered on board a vessel was received as evidence and probate granted. In the Will of Warburton, 4 A.J.R., 6.

Presumption of Death—Lapse of Time.]—Where a testator was the master of a ship which had in all probability foundered in a storm at sea, and on which the insurance company had paid as for a total loss, the Court, on an application made ten months after the date of the supposed foundering of the ship for probate of the will of the testator, who had not been heard of since the supposed loss, considered that the time which had elapsed was too short to justify it in granting probate. In the Will of William Williams, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 46; 4 A.L.T., 111.

Probate Granted in Ireland—Taking Original Probate off File.]—Where probate had been granted here to executors upon the original probate granted in Ireland, the Court refused an application to allow the original probate to be taken off the file to be returned to Ireland. In the Will of M'Niece, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 6; 1 A.L.T., 144.

Rule to Administer to Curator—Delivery Out of Will.]—Where a rule to administer the estate of a testator was granted to the Curator of Intestate Estates, no reference being made to the will, which was filed in the Master's office by the curator, the Court refused an application by one only of the beneficiaries for delivery out of the will to her, except upon the verified consent of all the beneficiaries. In the Will of Farie, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 98.

Order for Administration not Acted on—Grant to Another—Rescission not Necessary.]—Where administration had not been taken out within three months after an Order granting it, Held that Rule 13 of Reg. Gen. of 23rd June, 1873, did not require that that Order should be rescinded before granting administration to another applicant. In the Estate of Kirley, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 29; 5 A.L.T., 188, sub. nom. In the Estate of Kerley.

Administration—Title of Intestate to Property—Court will not make Inquiry.]—The Court, on an application for administration to the estate of an intestate accompanied by an affidavit that the deceased had real estate, and describing it, will not enter into the question as to deceased's title to the real estate in question, or decide on the construction of a will under which it was claimed on behalf of the deceased. In the Estate of Martin, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 32.

Letters of Administration — Intestate Dying before the Passing of Act No. 230.]—Administration to the estate of an intestate who died before the passing of the Act No. 230 must, nevertheless, under the "Administration Act 1872," be taken out to the realty as well as to the personalty, Secs. 5, 6, 7, and 9 of the latter Act clearly showing a policy that the administrator must take both real and personal estate. In re Quinlan, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 17.

Grant of Administration—"Administration Act 1872."]—Since the "Administration Act 1872," the rule is that an order for administration should embrace the personal as well as the real estate. In the Freehold Land of Jones, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 48; 4 A.L.T., 93.

Where a rule to administer freehold lands had been obtained before the "Administration Act 1872" was passed, and also letters of administration to the deceased's goods, and the administrator died leaving part of the land unadministered, on an application for a rule to administer the unadministered freehold land, Held that the proper form of application was for an order to administer to the real and personal estate. Ibid.

And see cases ante columns 1534-1538.

Administration Granted durante minoritate—Application for Administration on Person Coming of Age—Notice.]—Where administration has been granted to a person during the minority of A. it is necessary for A. when seeking administration on attaining her majority to give express notice of such application to such person. In the Estate of Austin, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 111.

See S.P. on application for probate In re Patten, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 97.

Ecclesiastical Suit—Non-appearance of Plaintiff—Dismissal.]—In an ecclesiastical suit to try the right to administration of an intestate's estate, issue had been joined and notice of the cause having been set down for hearing given to the defendant. At the hearing the plaintiff did not appear, and the defendant applied for an order dismissing the bill. Held that no order was necessary, an entry by the judge of plaintiff's default in appearance being alone requisite to enable the defendant to proceed under the rule in the Master's office. Carroll v. Carroll, 1 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 69.

Decree in Ecclesiastical Suit—Moving upon.]—In an ecclesiastical suit a decision in favour of the plaintiff H. had been made but no decree had been drawn up. Held that the decree should be drawn up and H. should move upon that for letters of administration. In the Goods of Hickson, 2 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 53.

Where in a suit for letters of administration there has been a decree in favour of the plaintiff administration should not be granted immediately upon the making the decree; but a separate application should be made after the decree. In the Goods and Real Estate of Graham, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 57; 2 A.J.R., 46, sub nom. Graham v. Edwards.

Application to Revoke Probate—Insanity of Testator—Evidence.]—On an application to revoke a grant of probate to executors on the ground that the testator was insane, the Court, after the case had been opened on affidavits, allowed the affidavits to be used, and also directed viva voce evidence to be taken, and heard the case upon the affidavits and the viva voce evidence. In the Will of Lecern, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 9; 1 A.L.T., 142.

Proof of Will in Solemn Form—Revocation of Probate.]—Upon a rule nisi calling upon executors to show cause why probate granted to them should not be revoked, Held that the case having been launched on affidavits, the case must be tried on them; that the next-of-kin cannot claim as a matter of right an inquiry into circumstances attending the execution of the will or put the executors to prove the will in solemn form when probate has been granted to such executors by an ex parte application; that the revocation of probate is a matter of discretion depending on the circumstances in each case and that trial by jury or viva voce examinations may be had in applications for revoking probate. In the Will of Lamont, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 86, 88, 98, 99.

Issues—Who May Obtain.]—On the trial of the validity of a will it is not open to either party to call for trial by a jury. The judge only directs an issue when he himself feels a doubt on the matter. In re Taylor, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 68.

Probate Suit—Caveat—Withdrawal of Does Not Entitle Plaintiff to Probate.]—Upon a caveat being lodged an executor filed his bill to obtain probate. The defendant subsequently consented to withdraw his caveat, and to the bill being dismissed without costs. Held that the rules were so framed that the suit must be heard whether the caveat were withdrawn or not, and that the mere withdrawal of the caveat did not entitle plaintiff to probate. M'Callum v. Swan, 1 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 17.

Supreme Court Rules, Cap. VIII., Sec. 8—Caveat.]—Where a caveat was lodged, but no undertaking to appear by the executrix herself or by the solicitors lodging the caveat was filed as required by the rules, the Court granted administration with an exemplified copy of the will annexed to the brother, as next-of-kin, notwithstanding the caveat. In the Goods of O'Keefe, 6 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 38.

Where Unauthorised Caveat Lodged.]—Where an unauthorised caveat has been lodged, probate of a will will not be granted as of course altogether disregarding the caveat, but notice of the motion must be served on the caveator. In the Will of Hall, 2 A.J.R., 129.

Administration Granted notwithstanding Caveat.]—Administration will be granted in spite of a caveat being lodged, if there has been no authority given to the caveator to lodge it by the parties interested, on motion on notice to the caveator. In the Goods and Real Estate of Graham, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 57; 2 A.J.R., 46; sub nom. Graham v. Edwards.

Application for Administration—Caveat Lodged without Authority.]—Where the sister of an intestate applied for administration, and a proctor had lodged two caveats, one without authority, as for two next-of-kin, the Court ordered notice to be served on the proctor, and that the applicant should move that day week, either that the caveat lodged without authority be set aside as irregular, or that administration be granted, notwithstanding the caveat, and allowed it to be made part of the motion that the caveator might pay the costs. The notice to be addressed either to the proctor or his Melbourne agent, but service allowed on the agent. In re Cameron, 2 A.L.T., 16.

Act No. 427, Secs. 30, 32—Right to Begin—Attorneys under Power not Entitled to Administration when Next-of-Kin Present and Capable.]—Upon a rule nisi upon a caveat coming on for evidence and hearing, the right to begin belongs to those who are claiming administration. Upon the production of the power of attorney by next-of-kin, the next-of-kin who was present in Court admitted that he did not seek administration, that it was really his sons, the attorneys under power, who were moving, and the Court discharged the rule nisi. In re Evans, 5 A.J.R., 63.

Caveat Withdrawn — Personal Consent of Caveator.]—Where a caveat has been lodged, the personal consent of the caveator is necessary for its withdrawal. In the Goods of Martley, 5 A.J.R., 63.

Caveat Filed by Married Woman—Consent of Husband.]—It is not necessary to produce the consent of the husband of a married woman to her filing a caveat, until the hearing of the application for administration. In the Estate of Hourigan, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 2; 1 A.L.T., 122.

Time for Lodging Caveat.]—Although by the Rules of Court a caveat against an application for letters of administration should be filed within a certain time, yet, if at any time before the order is made a caveat is filed, it has operation. In the Goods of Carroll, 1 W. W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 66.

Caveat not Lodged in Time—Right of Party to be Heard.]—Although a caveat against a grant of administration has not been lodged within the time fixed by the Rules, the Court has a discretion as to letting in a party to be heard. In the Goods of Jones, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 67.

Suit for Letters of Administration—Caveat—No Appearance of Caveator.]—Where a caveat is filed within the fourteen days from the publication of the notice of intention to apply for administration within which caveats should be lodged by Supreme Court Rules, Cap. viii., r. 8, and a suit is commenced, and the defendant (caveator) does not appear, the plaintiff is entitled to a decree without going into evidence; but if the caveat have been lodged within the proper time, and the defendant do not appear, the plaintiff must produce affirmative evidence in support of the facts mentioned in the bill. In the Goods and Real Estate of Graham, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 57; 2 A.J.R., 46; sub nom. Graham v. Edwards.

No Appearance of Caveator—Costs.]—Where a caveator does not appear upon the hearing of an Order nisi for probate no costs will be given against him unless the order nisi asks for them. In the Will of Mould, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 32.

Withdrawal of Caveat before Service of Order Nisi—Costs.]—Where a caveat was lodged and withdrawn before service of order nisi without any offer to pay costs incurred, the order was made absolute with costs. In the Estate of Downey, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 72.

Rule Nisi for Administration not Seeking Costs—Withdrawal of Caveat.]—Where a rule nisi for administration did not ask for costs, and a caveat had been withdrawn with this fact in view, the Court upon making the rule absulute did not allow costs. In re Cherry, 2 A.L.T., 42.

Caveat Withdrawn—Costs.]—Where a rule nisi for administration was obtained and a caveat which had been lodged was withdrawn, the Court made the rule absolute without costs, as the rule nisi did not ask for them, and granted administration subject to an affidavit being filed stating that no other caveat had been entered up to time of grant. In re Wolff, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 31.

Caveat Withdrawn — Further Affidavit.] — A caveat to the grant of probate had been lodged and had been withdrawn. On moving absolute the order nisi the Court made the order absolute, but refused to grant probate until a further affidavit was made that no further caveat had been lodged. In the Will of Lansell, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 22; 2 A.L.T., 113.

Costs of Caveator.]—Where an order nisi was granted on 11th October, but served on 19th October, Held that the caveator was entitled to his costs (including those of the adjournment,) and that the caveator's solicitor was not bound to take any notice of the order, i.e., as to getting his evidence ready until it was properly served. In the Estate of Doull, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 70, 85.

Caveat by Married Woman—Withdrawn—Evidence of Separate Estate.]—A married woman lodged a caveat, which was withdrawn after a rule nisi had been granted. Held that no costs would be granted against her in the absence of evidence that she had separate estate. In the Estate of Hourigan, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 2; 1 A.L.T., 122.

Caveat Lodged by Married Woman Withdrawn before Application for Administration—Costs out of Estate.]—Two sisters applied separately for administration of an estate under £500, and each lodged a caveat against the grant of letters to the other. On the morning of the elder sister's application the younger sister withdrew her caveat. The Court, in granting administration to the elder, allowed her to deduct the costs occasioned by the caveat lodged by the younger, a married woman, out of the share of the estate to which she was entitled. In the Estate of Brown, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 41.

Probate—Advertisement Not Strictly Correct.]—Where it is intended to apply for probate to two of three executors named in a will, with leave reserved for the third to come in and prove, the advertisement of intention to apply must mention the third executor, and state the intention to apply for probate with leave reserved as to him. In re Jones, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 14.

But where one of the executors appointed is a minor, the advertisement need not refer to the fact of his appointment, or specify that leave to him will be reserved. In re Pyke, ibid, 15.

Advertisement—Weekly Papsr.]—It is a sufficient compliance with Rule 3, Reg. Gen., 23rd June, 1873, if the advertisement is published in a weekly newspaper circulating in Melbourne. In the Will of Collings, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 38.

Advertisement—Lost Will—Notice to Next-of-Kin.]—Where probate is sought of a draft of a lost will, such a state of circumstances should be specifically stated in the advertisement, and express notice should be sent to those who would be entitled in the case of an intestacy. In the Will of Smith, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 40; 2 A.L.T., 143.

Administration Granted—Subsequent Will Found—What Advertisements Necessary on Application for Probate.]—In the Will of Smyth, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 17, and In the Will of Braithwaite, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 37; post columns 1558, 1559.

Advsrtisement of Intention to Apply for Probate "Regulæ Generales," 23rd June, 1873, Rule 3.]—The advertisement of intention to apply for probate must be inserted fourteen clear days before application. Where the advertisement was published on 11th May and the application was made on 25th May, held insufficient notice. Re Richardson, 4 A.L.T., 1.

Advertisement—Error in Number of Codicils.]—Where an advertisement stated an intention to apply in respect of a will and two codicils and there were three codicils, although one of the codicils was revoked, the Court directed a fresh advertisement specifying the three codicils. In the Will of Kelly, 9 V.L.R. (I. P & M.,) 48.

Advertisement—Affidavit of Search.]—Where an advertisement gave the name of deceased as "Mackintosh" instead of "M'Intosh," and the affidavit of search omitted to state that a "careful" search had been made the application was directed to be renewed. In the Estate of M'Intosh, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 48.

Probate—Long Delay in Applying after Advertisement.]—An advertisement of intention to apply for probate was published on 3rd November, 1882, and the application was not made until 15th May, 1884. Held that there should be a fresh advertisement of intention to apply, and that an affidavit explaining the delay was not sufficient, and application refused. In the Will of Cox, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 32; 5 A.L.T., 212.

Advertisement Nine Months Prior to Application.]—An advertisement of intention to apply for probate was inserted in a newspaper nine months before the application was made, and no affidavit was made explaining the delay. The Court refused the application, requiring a fresh advertisement to be inserted. In the Will of Schneider, 6 A.L.T., 85.

Will Not Signed in Full Name of Testator—Advertisement.]—Where a foreigner made his will in the German language, and signed it, but omitted one of his two Christian names, the Court required the advertisement of intention to apply for probate to notice this discrepancy. In the Will of Schneider, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 8; 1 A.L.T., 144.

Administration to Donee of Donatio Mortis Causa—Advertisement.]—See In the Goods of Tully, ante column 1529.

(c) Affidavits.

Executor's Affidavit—Must be Regular—Verification of Will.]—The first part of the executor's affidavit, which is in verification of the will, is part of the materials upon which probate should be granted, and probate will not be granted in its absence, although the will is verified by another affidavit. The other part of the executor's affidavit may be in another document, and may be filed at any time before issue of the probate from the office. Where the affidavit of an executor, which contained both facts, was defective in the jurat, the Court granted probate, subject to the production of a proper affidavit in the office before probate. In the Goods of Grant, 1 W.W & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 64.

Affidavit Misstating Date of Execution.]—The affidavit of the executrix stated the date of the execution of a will to be 18th August, 1874, instead of 18th August, 1875. Held that a fresh affidavit was necessary. In the Will of Anderson, 6 A.L.T., 4.

Affidavit of Executor—Signature.]—The affidavit of an executor in support of an application for probate must be signed by him in full. In the Will of Hayes, 6 A.L.T., 64.

Name of Executor Misspelt—Affidavit.]—The testator appointed one Patrick Moylon as executor, who applied for probate under the name of Patrick Mylon. Held that an affidavit stating that the applicant and the executor were the same individual was necessary. In the Will of Githens, 6 A.L.T., 84,

Name of Attesting Witness Improperly Spelt.] —In an affidavit in support of an application for probate, the name of one of the attesting witnesses was stated to be "Rowlands." He signed his name to the will as "Rowlds," but no notice was taken of the discrepancy in the affidavit. Held that an affidavit stating why the witness had so signed was necessary. In the Will of Vaughan, 6 A.L.T., 17.

Affidavit as to Residence of Witnesses to Will —What Sufficient—Reg. Gen. June, 1873, Rule 4.]— An affidavit of executors as to the residence of the attesting witnesses to a will, stating that the will was executed in the presence of G.M. of C., solicitor, and S.M., "his clerk," is not sufficient as regards the residence of the second witness. In the Will of Cook, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 92 ; 6 A.L.T., 117.

Statement in Affidavit that Will is Unrevoked.] —It is desirable that the affidavit in support should always contain a statement that the will is unrevoked. In the Will of Fagan, 5 A.J.R., 48.

On an application for probate the Court requires an affidavit that the will is unrevoked, and such affidavit must be made by the executor or other applicant. In the Wills of Bergin and Sides, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 30.

Affidavit of Search.]—The affidavit of search should state that a "careful" search has been made. In the Estate of M'Intosh, 9 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 48.

The affidavit as to property should negative distinctly the fact of there being personal property, mere silence as to the personal property is not sufficient. In the Will of Tregurtha, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 89.

Application for Grant of Probate to Married Woman—Affidavit that she has Separate Estate must specify Particulars of such Estate.]—See In the Will and Codicils of Boundy and other cases ante columns 1520, 1521.

Affidavits as to Alterations, &c., in Wills.]—See In the Will of Thomson, ante column 1506.

Affidavits as to Execution of Will].—See ante columns 1514-1517.

Administration—Affidavit that no Caveat is Lodged.]—On a motion for administration an affidavit was filed that no caveat was then entered, and the motion stood over for the filing of other affidavits. Upon the renewal of the motion on the other affidavits, Held, that no later affidavit that no caveat was lodged need be filed. In re Kennedy, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 16.

And see In re Woolf and In the Will of Lansell ante column 1550.

Applications for Rules to Administer—Affidavits.] —In re Quinlan and In the Estate of Norton, ante column 1537.

Applications for Administration with Exemplified Copy of Will Annexed—Necessary Materials in Affidavits.]—See cases ante columns 1539-1541.

Administration — Affidavits Necessary.] — An order nisi for administration was obtained. Objections were taken that the affidavits on which the order was obtained were deficient in the following particulars: (1) There was no distinction between real and personal estate; (2) the next-of-kin were not specified and there was no allegation that the deceased left no widow. Held that these objections would be fatal to a grant of administration, and were equally fatal to the grant of the order nisi. Order discharged. In the Estate of Austin, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 38.

Intestate Leaving a Widow.]—Whenever an intestate dies leaving a widow in the colony, upon an application by any other person for letters of administration, there ought to be a special notice served on the widow, or an affidavit that she declines to take out administration, or of some special circumstances. In the Goods of Kenworthy, 2 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 118.

Letters of Administration—Defective Affidavits.] —On a motion for letters of administration to the estate of a person who died before 1864, the affidavits were defective for a motion for general administration under the "Administration Act 1872," as not stating the value of the real estate, but the Court dispensed with the statement, since the duties of the administrator, as far as the real estate was concerned, were very unimportant. In re Quinlan, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 17.

Reg. Gen. 23rd June, 1873, Rule 5—Necessary Affidavits—Next-of-Kin.]—In an Order nisi calling upon a caveator (creditor) to show why the administration should not be granted to an intestate's husband, the affidavit should state what next-of-kin there are, if any. In the Estate of Smith, alias Peate, 7 V.L.R. (I, P. & M.,) 27; 2 A.L.T., 114.

Application for Administration — Affidavit — Names of Next-of-Kin.]—In the affidavit in support of an application for letters of administration the names of the relatives or next-of-kin should be distinctly stated. In re Crozier, 5 A.L.T., 188.

Affidavit—Application by Widow.]—Where in an affidavit the applicant was described as "I, A.B., widow of the deceased, C.D.," Held that that was a sufficient statement that she was his widow. In the Estate of Dogherty, 3 A.L.T. 27.

Administration—Applicant Described as Brother-in-law of Intestate.]—An affidavit in support of an application for administration stated that the intestate had left a widow and several children; that the widow consented to administration being granted to the applicant, and that the applicant was the "brother-in-law" of the intestate. The relationship between the widow and the applicant was not shown. Held that an affidavit was required, stating the relationship between the widow and the applicant. In the Estate of Crab, 6 A.L.T., 16.

Administration—Application for after Lapse of Time—Affidavit of Value.]—Upon an application for administration of the real estate of an intestate after a long time had elapsed since the death, the Court required the affidavit of value to state the value of the estate at the time of the application, in order to determine the amount of the security. In the Estate of Ewing, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 93.

Affidavit—Clerical Error—Bond.]—Where an applicant for administration stated the value of the realty and personalty correctly, but, owing to a mistake in the addition, understated the value of the whole, the Court granted the appli-tion, the bond to be for the amount of the two sums properly added. In the Estate of Dunbar, 6 A.L.T., 28.

Jurat not showing Month in which it was Sworn.]—Where the jurat of an affidavit did not show the month in which it was sworn, Held that a fresh affidavit was necessary. In the Will of Dodd, 6 A.L.T., 4.

Affidavits before whom Sworn.]—Affidavits in the probate jurisdiction may, under Rule 5 of Reg. Gen. 13th May, 1868, be sworn before the proctor by whom they are prepared. In the Will of Aitken, 3 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 56.

Endorsement of Proctor's Name on Affidavits and Documents.]—Except in cases where an applicant appears in person, the affidavits and documents should contain the name of some proctor endorsed upon them. In re Johanson, 5 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 81.

Affidavits—Omission of Statement of Capacity of Commissioner.]—On a motion for a grant of administration, one of the necessary affidavits had been sworn before a Commissioner of the Supreme Court for taking affidavits, but he had merely signed his name, and there was nothing on the face of the affidavit to show that he was a commissioner. Held that since the forms of affidavit given by the rules contained the statement omitted, the affidavit could not be received. In the Goods of Savage, 1 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 17; 1 A.J.R., 18.

Application for Administration by Attorney under Power—Upon what Materials Court will Act.]—Where an application was made for a grant of letters of administration to an attorney under power of the next-of-kin resident in England, the evidence of relationship consisted of statutory declarations made before some public functionary in England, accompanied by a notarial verification. Held that the Court could not act on these materials, but that affidavits before a commissioner of the Court in England must be obtained. In the Goods of Hone, 1 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 73.

Application for Administration — Affidavit in Support Sworn in Scotland—Notary Public—Evidence of Signature.]—An affidavit in support of an application for letters of administration was sworn before a notary public in Scotland and not before a commissioner of the Supreme Court for taking affidavits. Held that some further corroboration than the mere signature of the notary was required, and that an affidavit by a person who knew the signature of the notary would be sufficient. In the Estate of Sutherland, 10 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 23; 5 A.L.T., 156.

When Given out of the Estate—Of Person unsuccessfully Opposing Probate — Misconduct of Testator.]—Where a litigation as to a will is the result of the misconduct of the testator or the residuary legatee, the costs of the unsuccessful party may be thrown on the estate. Where, therefore, a husband and wife had made mutual wills, and the husband told his wife that he had made no subsequent will, and said if he had made any such will he must have been out of his seoses, and the claimant under the subsequent will was a party to the concealment, and there was strong reason on the wife's part to doubt the competency of her husband, two medical men having expressed their doubts as to his competency shortly before and after the execution of the subsequent will, the costs incurred by the wife in unsuccessfully opposing such subsequent will were thrown upon the estate. In re Headen, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 21.

When Given out of the Estate.]—Drunkenness is not such misconduct of the testator as to cause the costs of the parties opposing the will to be thrown on the estate. Where, therefore, on the trial of an issue as to the validity of a will, one of the attesting witnesses was called to prove incompetency of the testator owing to drunkenness, and his evidence was favourable to his competency, but there was a local impression that the testator was drunk at the time of execution, and there was evidence tending to show that he was in fact drunk during the day, and the jury found in favour of the will, the Court, in granting probate, not wishing to give costs against those opposing the grant, made the order without costs. In re Taylor, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 68.

Costs of Propounding Will.]—The Court cannot order the costs of a suit, in which a will is unsuccessfully propounded, to be paid out of the estate where the parties entitled to receive the assets are not before the Court; where all the persons interested in the litigation are not made parties; where the facts are not properly before the Court; and where the judgment does not finally dispose of the matter. In such a case the Court can only direct the ordinary result to follow where the plaintiff fails; i.e., that the plaintiff pay the costs. Macoboy v. Madden, 5 W.W. & A'B. (I. E. & M.,) 38.

Costs Out of the Estate—Executor bona fide Propounding a Will which is Defeated by a Technical Error.]—Where an executor bonâ fide propounded a will which he had every reason to believe genuine, but which was defeated by a technical inaccuracy, resting on the evidence of a witness who had made an affidavit describing it as accurate, Held that the executor was entitled to have his costs out of the estate. In the Will of Braithwaite, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 37.

Of Executor Propounding Will.]—Per Molesworth, J.—Where an executor, if he had taken the trouble to investigate the case, would have reason to doubt the sanity of the testator, but nevertheless propounds the will for probate and fails, he should not get his costs out of the estate. In the Will of Abel, 8 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 34, 42.

Per the Full Court—An executor appointed by a will, who propounds the will and fails to prove it, is not a trustee so as to entitle him to his costs out of the estate as a matter of right; and where the Primary Judge refuses costs to an executor so failing to prove the will, an appeal for costs will not lie from his discretion. Ibid, p. 43.

Per Holroyd, J.—Semble, that if a person named as executor in a will propounds the will, and the testamentary capacity of the testator comes in question, costs should be given out of the estate to the party propounding the will, although he does not succeed in establishing it, provided he had reasonable ground for believing the sanity of the testator. Ibid, p. 44.

Costs of Testing Validity of Will.]—To the general rule that the losing party should pay the costs, the case of an executor testing the validity of a will is an exception, but in a case where all the parties interested did not want the executor to litigate with an elder son who was opposing the grant of probate, on the ground of the testator's insanity, the Court refused probate, and directed the executor to pay the costs. In the Will of Gordon, 1 A.L.T., 110.

When Granted.]—An application to revoke probate to one of several executors made with his consent will not be granted unless it can be shown that he has never acted. In the Will of Parnell, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 56.

Executrix Marrying—Executor Coming in Pursuant to Leave Reserved.]—Where probate had been granted to F. during widowhood, leave being reserved to M. to come in and prove upon her death or re-marriage, and F. remarried, probate was granted to M. without an order revoking probate to F. In the Will of Fitzpatrick, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 45.

Revoking Probate—Proving Per Testes.]—On a rule nisi obtained by one of the next-of-kin calling upon an executrix to show cause why a will should not be proved per testes, or why probate should not be revoked as unduly obtained, Stawell, C.J., feeling technical difficulties in the way of the former course, made an order for the revocation of probate. Held per Barry and Williams, JJ., (dissentiente Molesworth, J.,) that having regard to the lapse of time since probate granted, the order, although obtained on insufficient materials as to execution, should not be revoked. Per totam curiam that the Court has jurisdiction to revoke an order for probate. In re Pyke, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 20.

Evidence and Practice in Applications to Revoke Probate.]—See In the Will of Lecerf, and In the Will of Lamont, ante column 1548.

Of Probate of Previous Will.]—After probate had been obtained to one will, a second and later one was discovered, appointing the same executors as the former. On motion by the executors, probate of the earlier will was revoked, and probate granted of the latter. In the Will of Dyer, 1 V.R (I. E. & M.,) 14; 1 A.J.R., 4.

Two Wills—One Disposing of Realty Only, the Other of Personalty Only—Revoking Probate.]—A testator left two wills, the earlier one disposing of realty only, the latter executed after Act No. 427 of personalty only. Probate of the latter had been granted. On motion for probate of earlier will, Held that under the second will the executors took all the property of whatever kind, but that if probate were sought of the first will, the existing probate must be revoked. In the Will of Cameron, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 33; 2 A.L.T., 136.

Later Will Discovered—Proper Method of Obtaining Probate Thereto.]—Where probate has been granted of a will, and a later will has been discovered, the proper course for the person seeking probate of the later will to pursue is to proceed by advertisement for probate of the later will and for revocation of the earlier one, serving notice thereof upon the executors; and not to apply in the first instance for an order nisi for revocation of the grant to the first, and for probate to the later will. The advertisement should be the usual fourteen days' advertisement, but stating fully the facts of the first and second wills and of the intention to move for revocation and probate. In the Will of Braithwaite, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 37.

Mutual Wills—Revocation of Probate.]—E.R. made a will 10th August, 1872, giving all her property to her husband A.R. On 1st November, 1876, she made a second will revoking the first and making a fresh disposition of her property which was burnt in April, 1878, under her directions and she expressed her intention of making another. The first will was made in accordance with an agreement made between the husband and wife that they would make mutual wills in each other's favour, and the husband obtained probate of it. The Court made absolute a rule to revoke the probate of the first will notwithstanding such agreement. In the Will of Reynolds, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 57; 3 A.L.T., 39.

Revocation of Administration—Rule nisi for—Who May Obtain.]—An application for a rule nisi to revoke administration, which was made by a solicitor on behalf of persons interested, but who were out of the jurisdiction and had given no express instructions for such an application, was refused; but semble that if the application had been made by the solicitor on his own behalf it would have been granted, since there would, in that case, have been some one responsible for the costs if the rule were discharged. In the Goods and Real Estate of Graham, 2 V.R. (I. E. & M.,) 57.

Administration Granted to Widow, an Infant—Administration Revoked.]—In the Real Estate of M'Millan, ante column 1519.

Administration Granted—Revocation—Advertisement.]—Where administration has been granted and subsequently a will is found probate of which is applied for, it is necessary that notice should be given to the administrator and that the advertisement for probate should state that application will be made for revocation of the grant of administration. In the Will of Smyth, 1 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 17.

Revocation—Notice to Former Grantee.]—Where an application to revoke the grant of administration c.t.a., which has not been taken out, is made, notice thereof should be served upon the former grantee. In the Estate of Ebsworth, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 48.

Revocation of Administration to Attorney under Power.]—Where administration had been granted to an attorney under power of the widow of the intestate resident out of the colony, the Court revoked the grant to the attorney upon the motion of the widow, its attention being called to the words in the power and advertisement reserving leave to the widow to supersede the attorney, although such reservation was not contained in the order granting administration, but the Court confirmed the attorney's previous acts as administrator. In the Estate of Bowman, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 112; 3 A.L.T., 72.

Administration Improperly Issued—Revocation—Notice.]—An administration improperly issued from the Master's office cannot be treated as a nullity, but an application should be made to revoke such administration, and grant fresh administration to the applicant, and notice of such application should be served upon the person to whom the administration was improperly issued. In the Estate of Schroeder, 8 V.L.R. (I. P & M.,) 29.

Issue—New Trial.]—Where the Primary Judge sitting in the probate jurisdiction had directed that an issue should be tried by a jury before himself, and an application was made to the Full Court for a new trial of the issue, on the ground of misdirection, Held, by the Full Court, that it had jurisdiction, but that such an application should be made in the first instance to the Primary Judge himself, and that the Full Court will not entertain such an application unless by way of appeal. Morley v. Nesbitt, 2 V.L.R. (L.,) 97; See also In the Will of Nesbit, 2 V.L.R. (I. P. M.,) 61.

The Court has jurisdiction to revoke an order for probate. In re Pyke, 1 W. & W. (I. E. & M.,) 20. See S.C., ante column 1558.

How Exercised.]—The Court will not favour applications made merely for title, and not for the purposes of administration, for which latter purposes alone the probate jurisdiction of the Court is conferred and exercisable. In the Real Estate of Cropley, 4 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 61.

See further S.C., ante column 1530.

Allowance of Commission to Executors—Testator Dying before "Administration Act 1872."]—The Court has no jurisdiction in a summary proceeding to allow any commission to executors out of the real estate of a testator who died before the coming into operation of the "Administration Act 1872." In the Will of Egan, 6 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 97; 2 A.L.T., 76.

Passing Accounts.]—There is no jurisdiction to direct the passing of accounts before the Master-in-Equity of real estate devised to trustees before the passing of the "Administration Act 1872." S.C., 2 A.L.T., 76.

Real Estate subject to a Mortgage.]—Where a testator died possessed of real estate worth over £500, subject to a mortgage which would reduce its value to less than £500, Held that under Sec. 18 of Act No. 427 the property must be considered to be of its full value, and that the Registrar had no jurisdiction. In the Will of Coppin, 7 V.L.R. (I. P. & M.,) 41.

VII. Construction and Interpretation.

When a Will needs Interpretation.]—Where the language of a will admits of a plain and grammatical construction which is consistent with the apparent intention of the testator and does not deprive the devisee of all estate conferred upon him by the will, the Court will not have resort to the canons of construction framed for the interpretation of wills in cases of difficulty. Lynch v. Johnson, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 263.

Construction to Avoid Intestacy.]—Where the construction of a will is doubtful the Court will endeavour to construe it in such a way as to avoid an intestacy. Holley v. Holley, 6 A.L.T., 63.

Intention of Testator.]—In interpreting a will the Court considers the intention of the testator and not what may be best for those interested under it. Where, therefore, the testator requested that his children should be sent to their relatives in Ireland, the Court refused to dispense with this direction, though evidence was adduced tending to show that it might be prejudicial to the health of some of the children. Kearney v. Lowry, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 202.

Inconsistent Clauses—Revocation—Ambiguity.]—Where there are two clauses in a will inconsistent one with the other, the later, as best describing the last intention of the testator, is to be deemed a revocation of the prior; but the terms of both clauses must, to justify such an interpetation, be equally distinct respecting the particular devise or bequest, for a clause absolute and express in its terms is not to be impliedly revoked by one of doubtful meaning. Briant v. Edrick, 1 V.R. (L.,) 35; 1 A.J.R., 49.

Succession.]—A will should be construed according to the law of succession in force at its date. In re Goodman's Estate, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 181.

Annuity for Maintenance of Children during Infancy held to be an Annuity for the Life of the Annuitant—On what Property Chargeable.]—Westwood v. Kidney, 5 A.J.R., 25, 95; post under sub-heading—Annuity.

When Will Speaks from Death—Property described as "Now in my Possession.]—The words "now in my possession" are only words of description, and do not express a contrary intention within the meaning of 1 Vict., Cap. 26, Sec. 24 ("Wills Act"), so as to prevent the will from speaking from the time of death. Noone v. Lyons, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 235.

Date from which Will Operates—Words of Futurity.]—H. devised land in trust for E.B. for life, and after her decease for her children then born or thereafter to be born as tenants in common in tail male, and his will contained a proviso that if any of the persons so made tenants in common in tail male "shall be born in my lifetime" then the devise as to such person was revoked and another devise substituted. Held that a son of E.B. born before the date of the will did not fall within the provision, and was consequently entitled in tail male. Lynch v. Johnson, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 263.

Instructions for Will—How Construed.]—Imperfect instructions for a will executed as a will should not be more liberally construed than a document purporting to be a complete will. Read v. Read, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 212; 1 A.L.T., 30.

"Debts Due at Decease."]—A direction to pay "debts due at decease" in a will includes debts the time for payment of which had not arrived at the time of the testator's death; i.e., debts debita in præsenti solvenda in futuro. Press v. Hardy, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 97, 102.

"Now in his Possession"—"All the Property Belonging to Me"—"After Paying my Just Debts."]—The testator, G.H., made his will, dated 31st July, 1860, as follows:—"I desire that my agent, D.L., shall, immediately on my decease, turn all the property belonging to me now in his possession into cash, and shall, after paying my just debts, hand over the same to my two executors—namely, the said D.L. being one and W.N. the other." The will then gave specific legacies and a residuary disposition. After the date of the will D.L. accounted with the testator as his agent, and ceased to act as such; and the testator purchased the equity of redemption of land of which he was seized as mortgagee, and sold a portion of such land. Held that the words, "now in his possession," were only words of description, and, not coming within the exception in Sec. 24 of 1 Vict., Cap. 26 "unless a contrary intention shall appear," &c., did not prevent the will from speaking from the death of the testator; that the words, "all the property belonging to me," passed the real estate; that the words, "after paying my just debts," charged the debts on the real estate, so as to enable the executors to sell it; and that the legatees ranked co-equally, and must abate in proportion. Noone v. Lyons, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 235.

"Right Heirs."]—A testator devised his dwelling-house in trust for his wife and nephew during their joint lives; upon the death of his wife, in the lifetime of the nephew, to him absolutely; upon the death of the nephew, in the lifetime of the wife, to her for life, with remainder to the testator's "right heirs." Testator left a brother and sister, his next-of-kin; and after testator's death his brother, as heir-at-law, conveyed his interest in the dwelling-house to the wife and nephew. Held that the property should go beneficially as real estate undisposed of—i.e., to the next-of-kin—and that the wife and nephew were not entitled to an absolute conveyance of it from the trustees. In re Goodman's Estate, 6 V.L.R. (E.), 181.

"Issue" when it means "Hsirs of Body."]—M'Gregor v. M'Coy, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 162; see post column 1568.

"Children" includes "Grandchildren."]—See Knight v. Knight, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 195; 6 A.L.T., 62; post column 1566.

"Death without Heirs" when it means "Death without Heirs of Body."]—See M'Gregor v. M'Coy, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 162; post columns 1567, 1568.

"From the Time of my Death"—Inserting Words.]—A testator left his residuary real and personal estate to his wife for life, and after her death upon trust to be divided equally between certain of his children (naming them) if living at his decease, and their issue if dead; and for the purposes of such division he directed that such residuary estate should, as soon as convenient after his wife's death, be appraised or valued by two indifferent persons to be appointed by such children or the majority of them, and one umpire to be appointed by such two persons, and the value put upon such estate should be allotted and divided amongst his said children in such manner as they should amongst themselves agree; and in case his said children should not agree amongst themselves within twelve months "from the time of my death" in such allotment and division, then he directed his trustees, as soon as convenient, to sell the residue of his real estate and divide the proceeds equally amongst his said children. Two of the children named died shortly after the testator, and before the widow's death. No appraisement or apportionment was made; and, after the widow's death, the trustees sold a part of the residuary real estate. Held that the Court could not interpret the will by inserting the word "wife's" after "my" in the clause providing for the sale of the property. M'Millan v. Ross, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 243; 4 A.L.T., 23.

"Die before Receiving Payment of such Share"—"Share."]—Where a will directed, if any person entitled to a share under it should die before receiving payment, how such share should be disposed of, the Court held that the words "die before receiving payment of such share" must be construed to mean before being entitled to receive; also that the word "share" in that part of the will regarded the distribution at the end of, not during the period after which the trustees were to sell, collect and call in all the property, and pay it in equal shares to the objects of the trust. Broomfield v. Summerfield, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 174.

Affirmed in Hayes v. Wilson, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 226.

"I Direct that the Share of my Business in the Firm of" &c., "shall be carried on."]—A testator carried on business in partnership with another and his will contained a provision "as to the share of the business to which I am entitled in the firm of Howie and Swan, I direct that the same shall be carried on by my said wife for the benefit of herself and my children, in conformity with the trusts of this my will." The executors renounced probate, and administration c.t.a. was granted to the wife. Held that the will did not authorise the wife as administratrix to carry on the business after a dissolution of the partnership. Swan v. Seal, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 57, 64; 5 A.L.T., 196.

Direction to Trustees to Erect a Tombstone.]—Trustees were by will directed to purchase land in the M. cemetery for a family grave, and to erect a tombstone or tombstones for three or four persons at a cost of £200 if required, or such sum beyond that as they might think fit. Testator by his wish was buried in the B. cemetery. The trustees asked the advice of the Court whether they could expend the money on a tombstone in the B. cemetery. Held that they could under the circumstances; that the wish as to the erection of the monument was as peremptory as that as to the place of interment. In re Campbell, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 138.

Trust for Sale not followed by Disposition of Proceeds—Intestacy as to Corpus.]—Imperfect instructions for a will executed as a will should not be construed more liberally than a document purporting to be a complete will. Where A. left instructions for a will which were executed as a will by which the income of property was disposed of, and directions were given as to the sale and conversion of all the property but no directions as to the distribution of the proceeds; and at the end there was a clause directing the shares of daughters in the principal and interest to be to their separate use, Held that there was no disposition of the corpus, and that the trust for sale did not operate as a conversion, and that A., having died in 1854, his heir-at-law was entitled to the corpus of real estate, and the personal estate was to be divided amongst his next-of-kin. Read v. Read, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 212; 1 A.L.T., 30.

Widow Entitled in Event of Children Dying without Issue.]—A testator died in 1866, devising and bequeathing his estate to executors and trustees on trust to pay certain legacies, and thereafter (subject to an annuity in favour of his wife) to be divided among his children when they attained the age of twenty-one. The only child of the testator died when aged nine years. Held that the will making no provision for the disposal of the property in the event of the children dying without issue the widow was entitled to the whole. Shevill v. Affleck, 6 A.L.T., 131.

(c) Precatory and Executory Words and Trusts.

Absolute Interest or Trust.]—A testator gave all his estate and effects unto his wife if she should survive him, her heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, but in case she should not, unto J.M. and J.R., their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, and directed that the said trustee or trustees should stand possessed of the said estate and effects in trust for the equal benefit of all children living at his decease and their respective issue and appointed his wife, J.M., and J.R. executors. Held, the wife took no beneficial interest under the will, but was a trustee for the children. M'Crae v. Rutherford, 2 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 25.

Direction to Erect a Tombstone.]—In re Campbell, ante column 1563.

Effect of Conditional Devise—Gift of Income and Division of Corpus among such as should be Alive.]—Where a testator disposed of income among certain persons during a certain period, and directed a division of the corpus at the end of the period among so many of them as should be then alive, Held that the interest in the income of any such person dying before or after the testator and within such period passed to the personal representatives of such person. Broomfield v. Summerfield, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 174.

Condition in Restraint of Marriage—Failure of Persons to take the Gift over.]—A testator devised real estate to his children, with a proviso that, if any one should marry a person not professing the Hebrew faith, his or her share should go to an infant grandson, and the will contained no residuary devise or bequest. The infant grandson predeceased the testator. Some of the children having married Christians, upon petition for advice, Held that the infant grandson having died before the testator, leaving no representative, there was thus no one to take the devise over, and the intention of the testator not being distinct to punish his children, apart from an interest to benefit his grandson, no forfeiture was incurred. In re Ellis' Trusts, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 35; 1 A.L.T., 140.

Condition against Marrying any other than a Jew—Death of Person who would Take on Breach of Condition.]—A testator left certain of his real estate in trust for a daughter, her heirs and assigns, and directed that if she should marry a person not being a Jew and professing the Hebrew faith, her interest in the property should be held in trust for a grandson, his heirs and assigns. The grandson in question died during the lifetime of the testator, and the daughter married a Christian. On a summons to the Registrar of Titles to uphold his grounds for refusing to grant her an unconditional certificate of title, Held that the will created a conditional limitation, and that the death of the grandson in the testator's lifetime did not enlarge the estate of the daughter, and that she was not entitled to an unconditional certificate under the "Transfer of Land Statute." In re "Transfer of Land Statute," ex parte Folk, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 405; 2 A.L.T., 77.

Gift to Wife—Condition in Restraint of Remarriage.]—F. made his will, by which after directing payment of debts, &c., and giving certain legacies, he bequeathed all the rest and residue of his estate, to his wife, on trust for his wife and son, share and share alike; provided that if after his decease his wife should marry, the bequest to her should be revoked, and the whole residue of the estate should go to the son. Held, per Molesworth, J., that the provision for the cesser of the wife's interest upon her marriage was effectual, although in restraint of marriage, and that she was entitled to the income of a moiety of the estate during widowhood. Trustees Executors and Agency Coy. v. Foy, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 267; 6 A.L.T., 111.

Effect given to Devises under "Wills Statute 1864," Sec. 31.]—The doctrine laid down in Winter v. Winter (5 Hare 306) can hardly be regarded as settled, viz.:—That the "Wills Statute 1864," Sec. 31, gives effect to devises, which would have been void altogether for want of objects, as well as to those frustrated by the removal of the object. Broomfield v. Summerfield, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 174; affirmed in Hayes v. Wilson, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 226.

Gift of £500 "Towards Erecting a Monument to J.P.F., and for Keeping his Grave in Repair."]—A testatrix bequeathed £500 "towards erecting a monument to J.P.F., and towards keeping his grave in repair." Held, that the gift was not void, and that so much as related to the keeping the grave in repair did not offend against the rule against perpetuities, the corpus and not the income being given. Wiseman v. Kildahl, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 78; 1 A.L.T., 140.

Void for Remoteness of Limitations.]—Where a testator directed trustees to convert his estate, and, after payment of annuities, to hold upon trust for all the children of his son, who, being sons, should attain twenty-five years, or, being daughters, should attain twenty-one years or marry under that age, with trusts for maintenance and advancement, at the discretion of the trustees, out of presumptive shares, and for accumulation of the surplus, Held that the gifts to sons and daughters could not be separated, that the Court could not substitute the age of twenty-one for twenty-five so as to escape the illegality, and could not separate the provisions for maintenance from the direct gifts, and that the whole gift was void for remoteness. Ker v. Hamilton, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 172, 176.

Charitable Gifts.]—See CHARITY.

Who Entitled—Period of Distribution—Maintenance Clause.]—A testator empowered his executors, upon his youngest child attaining twenty-one to convert his estate into money, and directed that it should be divided among his wife and children then living, and in case of any child of his dying before becoming entitled, leaving lawful issue, such issue should take the parent's share. There was then a provision that the trustees should apply the whole, or such part as they thought fit, of the annual income to which "any child" should for the time being be entitled in expectancy, for or towards the maintenance of such child. One of the testator's sons survived him, attained the age of twenty-one, but died before the period of distribution leaving a child, A. Held that A. was presumptively entitled to his father's share under the will, sed quære whether he would be absolutely entitled if he should die under age before the period of distribution. Knight v. Knight, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 195; 6 A.L.T., 62.

Held also that the maintenance clause applied to A., since the word "child" includes grandchild. Ibid.

Death of Devisee before Will Executed to Testator's Knowledge.]—A testator left the residue of his estate to trustees to convert and invest, and directed them at the expiration of ten years from his death to divide it equally among his children and grandchildren, named in the will, of whom there were thirty-two in all; provided that their respective shares were not to be paid until those named reached the age of twenty-one, or being females married; provided also that if any person died before being entitled to receive payment of his or her share, leaving issue of his or her body, the share of such person should go to such issue in equal shares; if there should be no such issue the share of such person should go to the survivors of the thirty-two in equal shares. One of the thirty-two was dead to the testator's knowledge when the will was executed. Held that there was an intestacy as to her share at the end of the ten years. Hayes v. Wilson, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 226.

Death of Devisee, before Period of Distribution, of Age and Leaving a Will.]—Another of the thirty-two, of age when the testator made his will, died unmarried within the ten years, leaving a will. Held that his share went to the survivors of the thirty-two. Ibid.

Death of Devisee Leaving Issue.]—Another of the thirty-two died within the ten years leaving issue. Held that her share went to her issue. Ibid.

Another of the thirty-two died within the ten years under age and unmarried. Held that his share went to the survivors of the thirty-two. Ibid.

"Executors, Administrators, and Assigns, to and for His and Their Own Use and Benefit"—Words of Limitation.]—A testator devised and bequeathed his estate to a person "his executors, administrators, and assigns, to and for his and their own use and benefit." The devisee predeceased the testator. Held that the words "executors, administrators, and assigns," were words of limitation, and not of substitution, and that the gift lapsed. Plummer v. Hood, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 159; 2 A.L.T., 40.

VIII. What Interest Passes.

A testator directed that after the death of his wife (tenant-for-life) his property should be divided in equal shares between his children (naming them), and in the event of either or any of their deaths, then that the share of any or either of them so dying should be equally divided between his or their children, and in the event of any or either dying without leaving issue that his or her share should be divided between the survivors and their heirs. Held that the testator's children surviving the tenant-for-life took absolute interests. Beith v. Beith, 1 V.R. (E.,) 164; 1 A.J.R., 147.

Cross-remainders — Estates-in-tail — Lapse—Wills Act, No. 222, Sec. 30.]—A testator died in November, 1864, having by his will, dated 16th October, 1859, devised three estates (X. Y. and Z.) upon trust for his three sons, A., B. and C. respectively, and declared that each portion should be vested at twenty-one, and that in the meantime, and until such vesting, the trustees might apply the annual produce of the respective portions to which each child should be entitled in expectancy for his maintenance and education; and, "moreover, in the event of the death of either of the three sons, A., B., and C., previous to obtaining possession of the portion referred to, or, if without heirs, the said portion or portions should be equally divided among the survivor or survivors of my sons aforesaid." A. and B. both died in the testator's lifetime; A. unmarried and intestate; B. intestate and leaving an only child, a daughter, D. Held that the three sons took respectively estates-in-tail, with cross-remainders to survivors; that the words that each portion should be vested at twenty-one meant that they should get into possession prefatory to the provision for maintenance; that death without heirs meant as between the brothers without heirs of the body; that D. took an estate-in-tail in the land devised to her father, the lapse of the devise being prevented by Sec. 30 of "The Wills Act" (No. 222); that C. took as survivor the estates devised to A.; that the charges on Y. and Z. in favour of A. lapsed in favour of the persons to whom the lands were devised. M'Gregor v. M'Coy, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 162.

Estate in Special Tail after Possibility of Issue Extinct—Remainder.]—Devise of an estate in trust for testator's widow "to be held by her and her heirs, if any, or failing issue by me," then, after her decease, over to daughters. The widow had no issue by the testator except a posthumous son, T., who died shortly after birth. Held that the words "issue" and "heirs" meant heirs of the body, and that the widow took as tenant in special tail, after possibility of issue extinct, with remainder to the daughters. Ibid.

Tail Male—When Devisee Entitled in.]—See Lynch v. Johnson ante column 1561.

A bequest was given to testator's wife of all his property "in trust for his children, and at her death to revert to the sole use of my children in equal proportions." There being no question raised as to whether the real estate passed, that being assumed, Held that the wife and children were entitled in equal shares to the income during the wife's life. After her death the corpus went to the children in equal shares. Stevenson v. M'Intyre, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 142; 1 A.L.T., 14.

Durante Viduitate.]—Where a testator directed that the residue of his property should be equally divided between his wife and son, but that if the widow married again her share should be paid to the son, Held that the wife was entitled to the income of a moiety during widowhood. Trustees Executors and Agency Company v. Foy, 6 A.L.T., 111.

Devise Durante Viduitate—Fee-Simple Determinable on Re-Marriage.]—A testator devised all his estate to his wife "absolutely, and for her sole and absolute use and benefit, as long as she shall continue my widow, provided nevertheless that if my said wife shall marry at any time after my decease, then I give, devise, and bequeath my said estate . . . unto the right heirs of me, the said" testator, and to their heirs, &c. The widow died without re-marrying. Held that she was seised in fee-simple. Barclay v. Evans, 8 V.L.R. (L.) 330; 4 A.L.T. 88.

Express Estate for Life followed by Words giving Power of Disposition at Death.]—Where an express estate for life only is given by will, followed by words showing that the devisee can dispose by means taking place at death, the latter give a power only, especially in the case of female devisees who may have the incapacities of coverture. Therefore where a testator devised his estate to trustees in trust to permit such of his daughters as should come of age or be married "to receive and take the rents and profits of their respective shares," as therein set forth, during their respective lives; "the shares" of such daughters to be "for their own separate use, and to be as follows" (specifying certain portions of the real estate for each daughter), and subsequently reserved to each of them a power to dispose by will of her share without the concurrence of her husband, Held that each daughter took a life estate in her share, with a power of disposal of the fee by will, the words "reserve" and "shares" not indicating that the testator had given by implication a greater estate than for life. Johnston v. Brophy, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 77.

Gift of Bank Deposit Receipts Bearing Interest.]—A gift of bank deposit receipts bearing interest passes the interest accrued up to the time of death as corpus, and the tenant for life is only entitled to the income arising from such when invested. In re Thomas's Will, 10 V.L.R. (E.,) 25.

Legacies to Executors—Tenants in Common—Intestacy.]—G. by his will bequeathed legacies to the two executors for their trouble. The will afterwards provided that, if there should be a residue it should be divided equally amongst the executors, to wit (naming them), and two other persons, share and share alike. One of the executors died during the testator's lifetime. Held that the objects of the residuary clause were tenants in common; that the two executors did not take as a class, and there was no survivorship between them; and that the share of the executor who predeceased the testator lapsed, and there was an intestacy with respect to it. Griffith v. Cholmley, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 186.

Shares of Income.]—A testator left property to trustees upon trust to convert and invest, and directed them to apply the net income "in and towards the support of my present wife so long as she shall remain my widow, and in and towards the education and maintenance of my children by my first wife during their respective minorities, in the equal, several, and respective shares following, i.e., one equal share in and towards the support of my present wife during widowhood and any children I may have by her, and one equal share in and towards the maintenance and education of each of my children by my first wife equally among such of them as shall then be living." At the date of the will the testator had seven children by his first wife. At his death there were six living by his first wife, and three by his second including a posthumous child. Held that the will directed a division of income between the widow and the children of the first marriage and the survivors of the latter if any died unmarried under age, the widow having an obligation to maintain her own children; and that upon the widow's death or marriage the share of income she might then have would go to her own children living in equal shares. Brock v. Kelson, 3 V.R. (E.,) 16; 3 A.J.R. 8.

Vesting.]—A testator directed his trustees to continue a partnership business, and after certain payments out of the profits to accumulate the balance and invest, and from and after the dissolution of the partnership, he bequeathed a certain sum to be set apart for each of the daughters, and invested separately as soon as convenient after the dissolution, directing income to be paid to the daughter for life, remainder to her children on the youngest attaining twenty-one, but if any daughter should die without leaving a child who should live to attain twenty-one, then for the sisters equally. The testator also made provision for the education of the daughters out of the profits of the business. Held, that the provision for maintenance being unconnected with the legacies, afforded no argument in favour of vesting, and one of the daughters having died under twenty-one and unmarried, before the dissolution of partnership her legacy was not vested, but was distributable among the other daughters. Osborne v. Osborne, 9 V.L.R. (E.,) 1; 4 A.L.T., 113.

Meaning of Word "Vest."]—"Vest" may, if the context of the will is in favour of that construction, be read as importing only that the interest previously vested is at a specified time to become absolute and indefeasible. A testator directed his trustee to hold certain property in trust "for my child (if only one), or for all my children (if more than one), in equal shares, and so that the interest of a son or sons shall be absolutely vested at the age of twenty-one, and of a daughter or daughters at that age or on marriage, with a provision for issue of sons dying under twenty-one leaving issue, and a gift over in the event of no object of the trust acquiring an absolutely vested interest." Held per Privy Council, that the shares of the children were vested at the death of the testator subject to be divested. Armytage v. Wilkinson, L.R., 3 App. Cas. 355.

A gift upon trust for such of a testator's children as should attain the age of twenty-one does not confer a vested interest. In re Stillman's Will, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 158.

Under a Deed—Vested Interests upon Marriage or Majority—Beneficiary attaining Majority and Dying Unmarried.]—See Re "Transfer of Land Statute," ex parte Leach, 5 A.J.R., 72; ante column 353.

Where a will gave estates in realty to three sons respectively, and declared that each portion should be vested at twenty-one, and that in the meantime, and until such vesting, the trustees might apply the annual income of the respective portions to which each child should be entitled in expectancy for his maintenance, &c., and "moreover in the event of the death of either previous to obtaining possession of the portion referred to or without heirs, the said portion or portions should be divided equally between the survivor or survivors," Held that the words that each portion should vest at twenty-one meant that they (the sons) should get into possession prefatory to the provision for maintenance. M'Gregor v. M'Coy, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 162; see S.C., ante column 1567.

IX. Devise to a Class.

Where a testator directed trustees to convert his estate, and, after payment of annuities, to hold upon trust for all the children of his son, who, being sons, should attain twenty-five years, or, being daughters, should attain twenty-one years or marry under that age, with trusts for maintenance and advancement during the "suspense of absolute vesting," at the discretion of the trustees, and for accumulation of the surplus, Held (apart from the question of remoteness) that all sons and daughters born at any time would take, and not only those living at the date of the will or decease. Ker v. Hamilton, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 172.

Residue Given to Executors—Not a Devise to a Class, and no Survivorship.]—Where a testator left residuary estate to two executors' nominatim and two other named persons, and one of the executors predeceased the testator, Held it was not a devise to a class, and that therefore there was an intestacy as to such share, which lapsed. Griffith v. Chomley, 5 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 186.

Death before Testator—Presumption of Death—Lapse.]—A testator died October, 1866, having, by will, April, 1852, devised certain real estate to trustees upon trust, to pay one-half of net rents to wife for life, and to pay the other half to three sisters in equal shares, and after death of any of them, leaving children her surviving, to pay her share in the rents to such children who should attain the age of twenty-one, or, being daughters, attain that age, or marry under that age, in equal shares and upon trust after the widow's death, to sell and distribute the proceeds in like manner. The widow died in 1871, and A, one of the sisters, died in 1871, having left three children by a former marriage, B., C., and D., of whom D. had not been heard of since 1855, and a son, E., by a second marriage. Held, that this being a gift to a class, D. would be entitled to his share, even though he did not survive A., but that since D. had not been heard of since 1855, that is more than seven years before the testator's death in 1866, he must be taken to have predeceased the testator, and that on that ground his share had lapsed. Low v. Moule, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 10.

Devise to Trustees upon Trust for A. and B. during their Lives and after the Death of Either, upon Trust to their Children.]—A testator devised and bequeathed his real and personal estate to trustees upon trust for A. and B. during the term of their natural life, and after the death of either of them, for their children. Held that the will was to be read "during the terms of their natural lives, and after the decease of either of them, as to her share upon trust for her children." That the testator could not be taken to have intended to have made the death of either terminate the interest of both, and to have excluded after-born children of the survivor, and that consequently the children took per stirpes. Young v. Hall, 3 A.J.R., 98.

X. Description of Bequest or Devise.

Gift of Houses—Vacant Land.]—A gift of certain houses, in a will, will include a vacant piece of land which had been used with one of the houses. Richardson v. Shirra, 6 A.L.T., 48.

Residuary—Including Realty and Personalty.]—A testator after directing payment of his debts by his wife, disposed of his property in the following words:—"The rest, residue, and remainder of my worldly goods, such as carts, horses, moneys or property, of what nature or kind soever, which God in His goodness hath bestowed upon me shall be for the sole use and benefit exclusively of my aforesaid wife;" and he afterwards appointed her executrix. Held that the testator's real estate was thereby effectually devised, the word "property" being sufficient to pass realty. Bamblet v. Bamblet, 1 W. W. & A'B. (E.,) 80.

"All my Property."]—The words "all my property" are sufficient to pass real estate. Noone v. Lyons, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 235.

What Included in General Residnary Bequest—Surplus Income.]—A testator left all his real and personal property to trustees to sell and convert, pay debts, and invest in certain securities, and then directed payment out of income of certain annuities to relatives named, and directed, after the death of the last survivor of the relatives to whom annuities had been given, that the trustees should pay over the whole residue of his property, estate and effects, and the securities on which they should have been invested as by the will directed. After providing for debts, legacies and annuities there was a large surplus income. Held, by Molesworth, J., and the Full Court, that the residuary gift included the surplus income as well as the principal, and that the Court will not decide questions about accumulations of income for more than twenty-one years until the time has expired. Hastie v. Curdie, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 91.

"Residuary Legatee" — After-Acquired Real Estate.]—A testator by will bequeathed all real and personal estate to S., as to specified parts upon trusts contained in a letter in favour of children, and then appointed S. executor and "residuary legatee." There was certain real estate acquired after execution of the will. Held that this after-acquired property passed under a general devise, and that the testator did not die intestate with respect to it; that "legatee" must be read as "devisee," and that S. was beneficially entitled to the after-acquired property. Stephen v. Stephen, 3 V.L.R. (E.,) 94.

XI. Annuity.

Annuity for Maintenance of Children during Infancy held to be an Annuity for the Life of the Annuitant—On What Property Chargeable.]—A testator directed his trustees to receive rents of certain property (A) during the minority of his eldest son, devising the property to the son on attaining age; other property (B) was left in a similar way to a younger son; other property was left to trustees with a direction to sell it on the eldest daughter of the first marriage coming of age, and to divide the proceeds amongst the daughters of that marriage; other property was left with similar provisions as to daughters by the second marriage. The testator then directed the trustees to pay out of rents of his said real estate a yearly sum of £500 to his widow, to be applied by her towards the maintenance, &c., of all his children during their respective minorities; and left his residuary estate to trustees upon trust to convert, to invest, and to divide among his children when the eldest son came of age. The bill did not seek any specific interpretation of the will nor did the answers, the bill merely setting out the will and praying for execution of the trusts. It was referred to the Master to report as to the rights of all parties. Upon exceptions to the report, Held that although the widow was provided for in other parts of the will yet she was entitled to the £500 as an annuity for life and not during the minorities of the children, and that this annuity was chargeable on the corpus of all the residuary estate including the rents and profits of the specifically devised properties during infancy and suspense, such charge not clogging the trustees' power of sale, but affecting the proceeds only. Westwood v. Kidney, 5 A.J.R., 25, 95.

XII. Incidents of Bequests and Devises.

"Statute of Trusts" (No. 234,) Sec. 61—Payment of Rents for Maintenance.]—Petition for advice and direction under Sec. 61 by the trustees of the will of S. deceased. On 30th July, 1870, testatrix, by virtue of the power given by an indenture, devised certain land to the petitioner upon trust for such of her children as should attain the age of twenty-one in equal shares as tenants in common if more than one, and directed that the trustees might at any time in their discretion sell or mortgage the land or any part, and out of the proceeds pay the debts, funeral and testamentary expenses of the testatrix, and any sums they thought fit for maintenance or advantage of the children, and invest the residue in Government or real securities in Victoria, and stand possessed of the securities and income upon the same trusts declared as to the land. The trustees were empowered to demise the land during minority of the children for a term not exceeding twenty-one years. The testatrix left a husband and four children, who lived on a part of the land devised, and applied the rent fixed by the trustees in education and maintenance of the children, who were all infants. Other portions of the real estate were let at low rents, no part having been sold or mortgaged. The husband's business was limited and he was unable to maintain the children. The petition sought advice as to whether the trustees were justified in paying rents to the husband as for maintenance. Held that as the property was small and the children took parallel interests on attaining twenty-one, there being no conflicting interests, the Court would answer the question although it involved the construction of the will; that the trustees were justified in paying to the husband the rents for maintenance of the children before sale or mortgage of the land; that the land was held partly on trust for maintenance; that the children's interests were not vested, but as the chances were equal, the Court would direct equal maintenances. In re Stillman's Will, 1 V.L.R. (E.,) 158.

Maintenance.] — A testator bequeathed his personal property to his wife and daughters; his real estate to his wife during life or widowhood, and, upon her re-marriage, as to income for his daughters so long as his son was under age, and, when he came of age, for him; if he should die under age for his daughters. The widow married, and there was no present provision for the son. On application by the trustees to employ part of the income in maintaining the son, and to raise an apprentice fee, Held that there was no authority for so construing the will as to imply a provision for the son's maintenance; and application refused. In re M'Kay, 2 V.L.R. (E.,) 105.

Maintenance — Resort to Accumulations.]—A testator devised land for the maintenance of his son and grandchildren, and directed the income of other property to be accumulated during the infancy of the grandchildren, and then left the corpus to such of them as should attain twenty-one. The testator during his lifetime sold part of the former property, and the son having died shortly after the testator, the Court directed that the trustees, instead of accumulating the rents and profits of the second property, should from time to time apply a portion of the income to the maintenance of the infants. In re Higginbotham, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 57.

Maintenance—Substitutional and not Cumulative Provisions.]—Where a testator provided a certain sum per annum for each child's maintenance until the age of ten years, and after then and until the age of fourteen years "the increased sum of £100 annually," and after then and until the age of twenty-one years or marriage "the further increased annual sum of £150;" and on attaining majority or marriage "the yearly sum of £150," Held that these respective sums were substitutional as each child attained the specified ages, and not cumulative. Osborne v. Osborne, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 132.

Maintenance—When Insufficient, Court will not Generally Increase.]—Where a testator has by will made a provision for the maintenance of his children during minority of £80 a year for each child until a certain age and then of £100 and £150 at other ages, which though sufficient to maintain and educate them, was very narrow in regard to the amount of property coming to them ultimately, the Court will not in the absence of any evidence of mistake on the part of the testator, increase the amount allowed for maintenance. Osborne v. Osborne, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 3; 1 A.L.T., 121.

Application of Capital to Maintenance Refused.]—A testator directed a fund, £125 in the whole, to be invested till his youngest child attained twenty-one, the interest to be paid to the widow, and the capital then divided between her and the children. The children were both under the age of two years, and the widow being in distressed circumstances applied to have the fund paid to her for the maintenance of herself and the children. Held that the Court was bound to apply the property of deceased persons according to their wills, not to substitute its discretion for them, and application refused. In re Giles, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 37.

And see cases ante columns 554-556 under Infant; and ante columns 1439, 1440 under Trusts and Trustee.

Cestuis que Trustent Entitled to Unapplied Income when Coming of Age.]—A testator bequeathed certain shares to trustees on trust to apply income thereof towards the maintenance and education of his grandchildren. Part of the income only was so expended. Held on a petition under sec. 61 of "Statute of Trusts 1864," that the grandchildren having attained their majority were entitled to the unapplied residue of this income. In re the Will of Downing, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 22 ; 2 A.L.T., 133.

(b) Election.

In what Cases.]—Per Molesworth, J. The principle of election applies to the joint effect of will and codicil, as if devises under each of them were contained in the one instrument, the will and codicil being taken as the disposition of the testator, speaking as at the date of the codicil. Whitehead v. Whitehead, 4 A.J.R. 165.

A testatrix by will devised certain properties to the defendant. By codicil she devised to the plaintiff land, which after her death, and after the respective devisees had entered into possession of theproperties devised to them, was discovered to have devolved upon defendant as heir-at-law in priority to the testatrix. Defendant took steps to bring the land under the "Transfer of Land Statute" in his own name and plaintiff entered a caveat. Defendant also proceeded against plaintiff in ejectment and to recover six years' mesne rents and profits. On suit by plaintiff to compel defendant to elect whether he would take under the will and codicil or against them, Held that defendant must be put to his election. Ibid, 165.

Voluntary Settlement—Collusive Sale and Repurchase by Settlor—Inconsistent Subsequent Will.]—R. settled property by voluntary settlement upon A. in trust for himself and family. This settlement was not parted with or disclosed to the other beneficiaries, and R. by a fictitious sale and repurchase got the settled property back and disposed of it by will in a different manner to the trusts contained in the will. Two beneficiaries under the settlement were dispossessed by beneficiaries who took interests under both will and deed. Held that the deed being bad as against the will, the beneficiaries dispossessed were entitled to be recouped out of the interests given by the will to those taking under the deed as against it, and it was referred to the Master to inquire as to whether it was for the interest of the beneficiaries under both will and settlement to elect under which to take. Moorhouse v. Rolfe, 4 A.J.R., 159.

Settlement Followed by Will.]—B. by voluntary settlement settled certain real estate upon his children. Having married again, he, by will, left all his property upon trust as to certain lands for his five daughters by the first marriage, and as to certain real estate, and one-sixth of the settled property, which he erroneously believed to be his own, upon certain trusts for his widow and any children of the second marriage. There was one child of the second marriage. Held, that such child and the widow were entitled to call upon the five daughters to elect whether they would take under the will or the settlement. Johnston v. Brophy, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 77.

(c) Accumulations.

Of Income.]—Courts of equity will not by anticipation deal with questions as to the disposition of surplus income upon the contingency of the period fixed by law for accumulations being exceeded. In a case where there was a residuary gift which was held to include income, as well as corpus, the Court refused to entertain the question of the rights of parties to accumulations of income after twenty-one years, and decree was made subject to the rights which any of the parties might have in the income so accumulating after twenty-one years. Hastie v. Curdie, 6 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 91, 98.

Direction for Accumulation—Circumstances in which Court directed Trustees, instead of Accumulating, to Apply Income to Maintenance.]—In re Higginbotham, ante column 1574.

See cases ante column 206.

Trust for Sale not Followed by a Disposition of the Proceeds.]—Where a testator left instructions for a will, which were executed as a will, by which the income was disposed of, and in which directions were given for sale and conversion, but the proceeds of the sale were not disposed of, Held that the trust for sale did not work a conversion so as to alter the rights of the heir-at-law and next-of-kin to the property as to which the Court held there was an intestacy. Read v. Read, 5 V.L.R. (E.,) 212; 1 A.L.T., 30.

Real Estate Ordered to be Sold in Default of Allotment.]—A testator left real estate subject to an estate for life to trustees upon trust for certain of his children if living at his decease, and the issue of such as were dead; and for the purposes of division among them, directed that the said estate should be appraised or valued as soon as convenient after the death of the tenant for life, by two persons appointed by the children, or a majority of them, and an umpire appointed by such two persons, and the value put upon such estate should be divided among the children in such manner as they should among themselves agree; and failing agreement within twelve months of his death, he directed his trustees to sell the estate and divide it equally between the children. One of the testator's sons died shortly after him and before the tenant for life, and a son shortly before the tenant for life, and no appraisement or apportionment was ever made, and after the death of the tenant for life the trustees sold part of the real estate. Held that the share of the deceased daughter in the real estate was converted into personalty and passed to her administrators ; that the provision for appraisement and division was rather a recommendation than a direction, and did not affect the conversion created by the power of sale in the trustees. M'Millan v. Ross, 8 V.L.R. (E.,) 243; 4 A.L.T., 23.

(e) Mortgages.

Charges upon Land—"Locke King's Act" (Incorporated in the "Real Property Statute 1864.")]—Where deeds are deposited as a security for an advance of money, the land comprised in them is "charged by way of mortgage" within the meaning of Part XI. of the "Real Property Statute 1864" (re-enacting 22 Vict., No. 61,) and the heir or devisee of such land is not entitled to have the mortgage debt paid out of the personalty or other real estate of the testator or intestate. Brent v. Jones, 1 V.R. (E.,) 76, 80; 1 A.J.R., 2, 51.

Exoneration of Land—Charge of Debts.]—A testator, after appointing executors, devised to his wife a portion of his real estate for her life and then over. He also devised land, subject to an equitable mortgage, to P.; bequeathed to his wife all the ready money of which he might be possessed at the time of his decease, and directed her to pay his funeral and testamentary expenses, and also "all debts due at decease." On a suit instituted for execution of the trusts, and to obtain the opinion of the Court as to which of the several properties devised under the will should bear the burden of the debt charged by the equitable mortgage, Held that the widow's life estate and the ready money were liable to pay the mortgage debt, the words directing payment of debts being, according to Act No. 61 (repealed and re-enacted by the "Real Property Statute 1864," part XI.,) sufficient to show an intention to exonerate the devised land, but that the charge upon the widow should not extend further; should not subject even undisposed of personalty to exonerate the devised estate; and that the estate in remainder after the wife's death was not chargeable with such debts. Press v. Hardy, 1 W.W. & A'B. (E.,) 97, 102.

Exoneration of Land—Personalty—Residuary Realty.]—A testator devised his personal estate upon trust to pay thereout a mortgage on his dwelling-house and his debts, and to pay the surplus to his wife; and if the personalty were insufficient to pay the mortgage and debts, he directed the balance to be raised by a sale of the whole or part of his residuary realty. He devised his dwelling-house in trust for his wife and nephew during their joint lives; upon the death of the wife, in the life of the nephew, to him absolutely; upon the death of the nephew, in the life of the wife, to her for life, with remainder to the testator's "right heirs;" and devised his residuary real estate to his wife in fee. The personal estate was insufficient to pay the mortgage and debts. Held that the residuary real estate should pay the debts left unpaid in exoneration of the dwelling-house. In re Goodman's Estate, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 181.

Exoneration of Land—General Personalty—Rents of Realty.]—A testator, by will, directed trustees to convert his personal estate into money, and therewith pay all his just debts, if sufficient; if not sufficient, the deficiency to be supplied out of other moneys coming to their hands. By codicil, he directed all mortgages to be paid out of rents of the real estate before the rents should be received by the children. Held that the mortgages were payable primarily out of the general personal estate, and that any deficiency should be made up out of the rents of real estate. Macartney v. Kesterson, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 56; 1 A.L.T., 177.

"Real Property Statute 1864" (No. 213,) Sec. 150—Exoneration — Contrary Intention.]—The Court may look for evidence of a "contrary intention" dehors the will into other "deeds or documents," executed even after the will. Such intention must be signified, if not by express words, by something amounting almost to necessary inference or necessary implication. A devise of property in strict settlement is not sufficient to signify such "contrary intention." Brown v. Abbott, 7 V.L.R. (E.,) 121; 3 A.L.T., 47.

(f) Payment of Debts and Legacies—Out of what Funds or Estates.

Proportion of Debts and Legacies Payable out of Reversions.]—A testator, by his will, bequeathed and devised specific personalty and realty to his wife for life, and the residue of his estate to trustees upon trust for sale and conversion (but postponed the sale of the property given to his wife for life till after her death), and out of the proceeds to pay his debts and legacies. Held, affirming Molesworth, J., that the widow was entitled to call for an immediate sale of the reversions of both realty and personalty devised and bequeathed to her, or a competent part thereof, for the purpose of paying their proportions of the debts and legacies, and distributing the balance. Attorney-General v. M'Pherson, 4 V.L.R. (E.,) 51.

Bequest of Residue "Upon Trust to Sell the Same, and I Bequeath" Several Pecuniary Legacies.]—A testatrix, by will, gave the residue of her estate to executors "upon trust to sell the same, and I bequeath" several pecuniary legacies, and then disposed of the residue. Held, that the residue was applicable for payment of the legacies. Wiseman v. Kildahl, 6 V.L.R. (E.,) 78; 1 A.L.T. 140.

When Debts Chargeable on Real Estate].—Where a testator devised "all his property" to be converted, and "after payment of all just debts" to be divided, Held that the words "all his property" passed real estate, and that, therefore, the debts were chargeable on the real estate so as to entitle the executors to sell it. Noone v. Lyons, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 235.

WORDS.

Acceptance.]—The expression "acceptance" includes a promissory note. Synnot v. Parkinson, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 521.

The expression "the whole of my property" used by an equitable mortgagor must be taken to mean all the property which he then believed himself to be, or was in fact, in a condition to convey to a purchaser. Gladstone v. Ball, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 277, 286.

Act No. 324, Sec. 9—Meaning of "Action."—See Allardyce v. Cunningham, ante column 1130.

Meaning of Word "Stock" in Sec. 25 of Act No. 234—Shares in a Joint-Stock Mining Company.]—See Bryant and Saunders, In re Saunders, ante column 1451.

Vendor and Purchaser—Meaning of "All Legal Agreements"—Mining Agreements.]—Where a purchaser of all the right, title, and interest of a vendor, who had an option of purchase under a lease for five years, as a condition precedent agreed in writing to confirm and recognise "all legal agreements made by the vendor relating to the letting of his land for mining purposes, and where the vendor had by writing, not under seal, agreed to give to A. a license to mine for a certain time on the said land, Held that the words "all legal agreements" meant not only those enforceable in a court of law, but those of which courts of equity would decree specific execution by compelling a grant under seal to the same effect, and that those words must not be read with reference to the rights of the Crown or of the landlord. Ah Wye v. Locke, 3 A.J.R., 84, 85, 86.

Timber.]—The expression "timber" in agreements as to land must be construed according to its strict meaning, and be held to include all trees used for building purposes in the place where they are growing, but not to include trees used for fencing purposes only; and the parties must show by evidence what sort of trees are used for fencing purposes only; and what sort of trees are used for building purposes only in each particular locality. Bruce v. Atkins, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 141, 144, 145.

Incapable.]—The term "incapable" in the English language does not mean a voluntary inability to act, but an involuntary one. Iffla v. Beaney, 1 W. & W. (E.,) 110, 116.

In Testamentary Instruments.]—See WILL.

Defamatory.]—See DEFAMATION.

Meaning of the Word "Stevedoring."]—See Collins v. Robbins, ante column 1124.

Meaning of Word "Land" in Sec. 64 of Act No. 301—Easements.]—See In re Transfer of Land Statute, ex parte Cunningham, In re M'Carthy, ante columns 1411, 1412.

WORK AND LABOUR.

(1) General Principles.

Construction of Contract—Two Documents of Different Date Read Together.]—See Appleton v. Williams, ante column 188.

Construction of Contract — Satisfaction of Employer—Question for Jury.]—Smith v. Sadler, ante column 10.

Construction of Contract—Meaning of Quality.] —See M'Gregor v. Melbourne Omnibus Coy., ante column 189.

Count for Work and Labour Done—Contract for Making a Chattel which when Completed would Result in a Sale.]—See Lyons v. Hughes, ante column 193.

Jurisdiction of Justices of Peace as to Work and Labour.]—Reg. v. Lloyd; Reg. v. Call, ex parte Thomas, ante column 749.

Construction of Contract—Time for Possession.] —Contract provided that the contractor, if not put into possession at any time within two weeks and thirty days after execution of the contract, was entitled to a commensurate extension of time for completing the works, but he was in any case entitled to possession after thirty days. Held that the Board of Land and Works was bound to give possession after thirty days from the execution of the contract. Young v. Board of Land and Works, 3 V.R. (L.,) 110; 3 A.J.R., 77.

Penalty for Overtime—Delay Caused by Employer.]—A building contract fixed a time for completion and provided for a penalty in case of non-completion within the time fixed. The employer prevented the contractor from entering upon the work at the time agreed upon. Held that the employer could not insist upon the completion of the work within a similar time from the date it was actually commenced, but that the condition as to time was gone altogether. Findlay v. Cameron, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 191.

Contract to Build a House—Alterations or Additions to be Valued by Architect.]—A contract to erect a house after providing that the works were to be executed to the satisfaction and under the direction and subject to the final approval of the architect, contained a clause that in the event of any alteration or addition being deemed necessary during the progress of the works such alteration or addition should be done by the plaintiff, and the cost of the same valued by the architect and added to or deducted from (as the case might be) the original amount of the contract. Held that this did not amount to an undertaking by the defendant that the architect should value such alterations and additions when executed, and that no action would lie for the omission by the architect so to do. Duncan v. Shrigley, 1 V.R. (L.,) 139; 1 A.J.R., 124.

Contract for Bulk Sum—Additions—What are Extras.]—A contract for the formation and drainage of a street contained the following proviso:—"Should any alterations be deemed advisable the city surveyor hereby reserves to himself the power to make such, which altered works shall be measured and paid for as if the same had originally been included within the scope of the specification, and the contractor is distinctly to understand that no claim will be allowed for extras unless ordered in writing." The plaintiff alleged that he was duly required by the city surveyor to make, and did make, certain additions to and alterations upon the specified works, and also executed certain extra works which were duly ordered in writing, and claimed payment for the balance of the contract, for the additions and for the extra works. Plea that the additions, alterations, and extra works were not ordered in writing. Demurrer that the additions and alterations did not require to be ordered in writing. Held that in a contract of this kind, framed in the terms and containing the provisoes that this one did, and where obviously the additions were of the same kind of work, although they might cause the whole sum to be exceeded, yet they were not extras outside the contract, but that in the case of extras both parties know that the work is outside the contract, and the contractor is aware that he ought not to execute it unless ordered in writing; but that the additional work in this case being contemplated by the parties, could not be regarded as an extra, and judgment for plaintiff. Barter v. Mayor, &c., of Melbourne, 1 A.J.R., 160.

Works to be executed according to Directions of Engineer—Position of Engineer.]—A contract provided that certain works were to be done to the satisfaction and under the directions of O'C., an engineer appointed for that purpose. O'C. directed certain dams to be erected to prevent the water from filling the lagoon to be excavated, and the contract required the lagoon to be "unwatered." Held that the defendants were not liable for anything done by O'C. outside the quasi judicial functions given him by the contract unless the relation of principal and agent were created, which it was not by the contract. Packham v. Board of Land and Works, 5 A.J.R. 142.

Contract for Executing Works Suitable for a Bathing Establishment—To What Warranty Refers.]—R. contracted to execute certain work and provide certain materials and fittings for a bathing establishment, and the contract concluded "we guarantee the same to be in every way suitable for the requirements and efficiency of your establishment." Among the fittings was a large copper boiler which proved insufficient in capacity, although of the specified dimensions. At the trial the judge directed the jury that the warranty was limited by the size, &c., previously set out, and that R. was not bound to supply a larger boiler than that specified. On Rule nisi for a new trial, Held, dissentiente Fellows, J., that the direction was correct, R. being under the warranty only liable to provide labour and materials which should be good and suitable, and under no liability as to the capacity of the boiler except that it should be of the specified size. Hosie v. Robison, 5 A.J.R., 176.

Provision Making One Party Judge in His Own Cause.]—A contract for the performance of certain works contained a clause which provided that no remissions of any deductions made from the contract price by way of liquidated damages for delay, should be made by the Board of Land and Works until the engineer-in-chief made and presented a recommendation to that effect to the board, and until they had signified their approval of such recommendation. Held that, the engineer being an arbitrator between the parties, the clause would render the board judge in their own cause, and was, therefore, inoperative. O'Keefe v. Board of Land and Works, 1 A.J.R., 145.

Power of Architect to Determine Contract.]—A building contract provided that if the architect discovered that the contractor was using bad materials, and not progressing in a satisfactory manner, the architect might, after certain notice, determine the contract. The contract time was exceeded and no extension of time was given. Held that after the expiration of the contract time the architect had no such power. Bailey v. Hart, 9 V.L.R. (L.,) 66; 4 A.L.T., 161.

Means of Payment—Deductions by Employers.]—Contract between petitioners and the Board of Land and Works, on behalf of the Queen, that petitioners should make a railway for a gross sum of £1,271,841, according to specification and schedules of works and prices; but in the event of any discrepancy between the amount in schedules and the gross sum, the petitioners should be bound by the gross sum if the amount in the schedules was in excess, and all prices in the schedules should be proportionately reduced; that all extras ordered should be paid for, and all deductions for omission should be made in accordance with schedule of prices; that contractors should furnish fortnightly accounts, and on these being certified the Government should pay to contractors the amounts, deducting 10 per cent. until the amount of deductions should amount to £10,000, when that sum might be invested at contractors' option in Government debentures, and income paid to the contractors; the schedules of quantities attached to specifications represented the work to be performed under the several contracts, and the Engineer-in-Chief reserved power to make any alterations, deductions, or additions, such alterations, &c., to be allowed for at the ratio set against the several items of the schedules of quantities. At the end of the contract there was a recapitulation setting forth the several sums for each of the seven sections of the line, the total amount of which was £1,374,963; and underneath "less 7½ per cent. for entire work, £103,122," which reduced the total to the gross sum of £1,271,841. Held that the Crown was entitled to deduct £10 from every £100 of the amount mentioned in the certificates, notwithstanding that £10,000 might have accumulated and been invested; that the words, "7½ per cent. for the entire work," were not to be limited to mean that no deduction was to be made unless the entire work was completed, but that 7½ per cent. was to be deducted from each payment; and that deductions for extras were to be made at the same rate. Evans v. The Queen, 2 W. & W. (L.,) 46.

Building Contract—Action on when Maintainable — Satisfaction of Employer — Question for Jury.]—Smith v. Sadler, ante column 10.

Condition Precedent.]—R. contracted with the Government to build a two-cell log lock-up, and the contract contained inter alia the following stipulations:—(1) All materials used were to be of the best description and all works were to be executed conformably to the specifications, &c., and to the satisfaction of the superintending officer and the Inspector-General. (2) Any discrepancy between the drawings and specification should be rectified by the Inspector-General. (4) All prepared work or material should be the property of the board. (5) The contractor, if directed, should suspend work and have no claim for damages until after thirty days from such suspension and the board should not be bound to give possession of the ground or work till thirty days after signature of the contract. (6) If any dispute arose between the superintending officer and the contractor as to the quality or as to quantities or prices or any matter not thereby left to the sole determination of the board or Inspector-General, such dispute should be referred to the Inspector-General whose decision should be final; and the contractor should not be entitled to sue in respect of any claim or right under the contract until the matter in dispute should have been determined by the board or Inspector-General, and the obtaining such determination was declared a condition precedent to the maintenance of any action on the contract. R. sued the board, alleging in his declaration that the board did not give him possession at the expiration of thirty days after signature of the contract. As a fourth plea the board pleaded that the subject matter was a claim or right under the contract and was a matter in difference not determined by the board or Inspector-General. Demurrer to plea alleging that the subject matter was not such a claim or right. Held that the cause of action was not one of those claims or rights which on being referred could be determined by the board or Inspector-General, it was not one of those matters which had been left or referred by the specification itself, nor, being a matter which might have been, had it been referred under the powers given by the contract. Semble, the words "claim or right" refer to claims and rights for allowances and other matters arising after contract has begun and do not refer to a breach in delaying to give possession. Roy v. Board of Land and Works, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 188.

Construction of Contract—Works to be Executed to Satisfaction of Engineer—Condition Precedent—Covenant to Perform, &c.—Accuracy of Drawings.]—In a contract for the excavation of a lagoon each party covenanted to "perform, &c., the conditions contained in or reasonably to be inferred from the specifications and general conditions thereby annexed," and there was a statement in the contract that the specifications and conditions with the plaintiff's tender were the documents forming the schedule to the deed; there was also a clause that the plaintiff was to execute the works to the satisfaction of the engineer, and a statement that the "contractor (the plaintiff) was to satisfy himself" as to the correctness of levels and dimensions. The declaration averred a tender to execute the works according to the "general conditions." Held that the covenant did not embrace the tender (which was to execute under the "general conditions,") and that the tender was not a covenant in itself, and, though part of the schedule, it was not a part of the contract, and that, therefore, the satisfaction of the engineer was not a condition precedent to the right to sue; that the covenant only referred to future acts, and that there was no "covenant that the drawings were accurately made," and the statement that the plaintiff was to satisfy himself as to the correctness of levels relieved defendants from responsibility as to their accuracy. Packham v. Board of Land and Works, 5 A.J.R., 37.

Certificate of Engineer—Condition Precedent.]—A contract for excavations contained certain conditions as to progress payments being made after measurements, by and with the certificate in writing of the superintending officer, and for final payment after the chief engineer had given his certificate, with a proviso apparently referring to both progress and final payments, making the right thereto dependent on obtaining the certificate of the chief engineer as a condition precedent; then followed conditions referring matters of difference to the decision of the chief engineer, and providing for the mode of reference, but containing no negative words, or expressly making the decision of the chief engineer a condition precedent to either party bringing an action on the contract. Held that it was a mere collateral agreement, of which the parties might or might not avail themselves; and that the jurisdiction of the Court was not ousted, there being no words providing that no action should be brought until a third party had given his decision, and such words were more necessary seeing that the arbitrator was the chief engineer; that these conditions did not amount to a condition precedent, so as to give force to a plea, that no such decision had been given. Young v. Board of Land and Works, 3 V.R. (L.,) 110; 3 A.J.R., 77.

Condition Precedent—Reference to Engineer.]—A clause (No. 27) in a contract provided for the reference to the chief engineer of any disputes, &c., touching works, quantities, materials, &c., or "touching or concerning the meaning or intention of the contract or conditions" or "concerning any other matter or thing not hereinbefore left to his determination, or to be governed by his certificate." Held that the words "touching or concerning the meaning or intention of the contract or conditions" referred to other conditions of the contract, and not to the condition giving the power to refer; that a plea having been put in of a reference of the matters in dispute, and of determination thereon, the words "concerning any other matter or thing, &c.," referred to the genus work, quantities, &c., and related only to progress and final payments as to which the certificate was necessary. Ibid.

Reference to Arbitration—Effect of Determination of Contract—Neglect to Maintain a Chief Engineer.]—In a contract there was a clause similar to the above-mentioned (No. 27) as to reference, and a clause providing for determination of the contract after certain notice. Three breaches were assigned, viz., (1) Wrongfully suspending the carrying on of the works;" (2) Wrongfully preventing execution of extras; and (3) Refusal to maintain a chief engineer." The defendants pleaded a reference and determination thereon. Replication that before the matters of dispute arose, the contract was determined. Held that breaches (1) and (2) fell within the condition giving the chief engineer power to decide; and that the word "contract" in the clause giving power to determine meant "further execution of the works," and not the articles of agreement under seal, and for the purposes of reference, the articles of agreement still continued in force, and that the replication was bad; that the "chief engineer" being defined as the chief engineer of water supply for the time being, the appointment was not one which the board could make, and the contractor being aware of this definition the third breach gave no right of action. Gowan v. Board of Land and Works, 3 V.R. (L.,) 123; 3 A.J.R., 91.

Final Certificate of Engineer—Award.]—In the last-mentioned case a clause (No. 17) provided that when a final certificate was given by the engineer as to the total amount of work done payment might be made. Such a certificate was given. Held that such a certificate was only a certificate under clause 17 and not an award under clause 27 (providing for references of matters in dispute to the engineer), and did not and could not refer to damages plaintiff claimed for being stopped in the execution of his work. Gowan v. Board of Land and Works, 3 V.R. (L.,) 241; 3 A.J.R., 120.

Condition Precedent—Reference to Arbitration.]—A building contract contained a condition that in case of any dispute between the employer and the contractor they should enter into a written agreement to submit the dispute to an arbitrator to be appointed jointly, or if they should not agree then to two arbitrators to be named in the agreement, to be appointed one by each, and a third to be appointed by the two other arbitrators, and that if either party on being called upon to execute the agreement should refuse he should pay to the other £50 by way of liquidated damages. Held that the person refusing to execute the agreement was not liable to pay the £50 unless the other party after his refusal to appoint an arbitrator, appointed one for him, and then tendered a submission containing the appointment. Thackwray v. Winter, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 128.

Right to Payment—Engineer's Certificate.]—Where W. entered into a contract with J. to erect a framework for mining machinery, the work to be executed to the engineer's satisfaction, and W. sued for balance of an account for work done, it being proved that the engineer was not satisfied, Held that W. was bound to do the work to the satisfaction of the engineer, and not having done so was not entitled to a verdict. Walsh v. Johnston, 6 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 77.

Progress and Final Payments—Engineer's Certificate.]—A contract provided for progress payments "after measurement by, and with the certificate in writing of, the superintendent officer," and for final payments "after certificate by the chief engineer" and making the right to both progress and final payments dependent on the certificate of the chief engineer as a condition precedent. Held that no progress or final payments whether for specified work, extras, or maintenance, were to be made except upon the certificate of the chief engineer—the words "after measurement by, and with the certificate in writing, &c.," not excluding another certificate, i.e., one by the chief engineer. Young v. Board of Land and Works, 3 V.R. (L.,) 110; 3 A.J.R., 77.

Final Payment—Engineer's Certificate.]—A contract contained a condition that certain works were to be executed under the control and to the satisfaction of an engineer, and a subsequent condition that final payment should be made upon a certificate of the engineer that the works had been satisfactorily completed. Held that the former condition was a condition precedent to the right to payment, and not a collateral covenant. Young v. Ballarat Water Commissioners, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 306, 316.

Final Certificate.]—A final certificate overrides even all interim orders, is a condition precedent to the contractor's right to recover and equally binds both parties, and it then is immaterial whether the contractor has complied with the conditions of the contract in other respects, they being merely ancillary to the grant of the certificate. Where, therefore, the jury find that the final certificate has been improperly withheld, the result is the same as if the certificate had been given, Young v. Ballarat Water Commissioners, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 503, 565; 1 A.L.T., 105.

Contractor acting on a Document as a Final Certificate—Board of Land and Works Estopped from Denying that it was Such.]—O'Keefe v. Board of Land and Works, ante column 413.

Right to Recover Payment—Several Certificates.]—In a building contract provision was made for progress payments upon production of an architect's certificate, and when the whole of the works were completed the contractor was entitled to receive upon production of a certificate to that effect an amount, which with the sums previously received, should amount to 97½ per cent. of the whole amount, and the balance was to be paid by the proprietor within twelve months after production of a certificate stating the amount of such balance and that the contractor had executed and completed the works to his entire satisfaction. The architect gave a certificate for progress payments and another certificate certifying that the contractors were entitled to receive a sum of £3000, less £300, being balance in full on contract as security for satisfactory reparation of any defects found in the works. Held that the second and third certificates mentioned in the contract might be combined, but that the certificate given did not amount to the last certificate mentioned in the contract, and that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover the whole balance due. Walker v. Black, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 77.

Right to Payment—Additions, &c.—Surveyor's Certificate.]—M. entered into a building contract with a road board. The contract contained provisions to the effect that the board's surveyor should have power to make "such additions, deductions, and alterations" in the work as should be necessary, and that such additions, &c., "were to be valued at the rates named in the schedule;" that no such alterations "would be paid for unless previously authorised by the surveyor in writing;" and "that no money should be payable until a written certificate to that effect be obtained from the surveyor." It appeared that as to a certain embankment there were errors in the quantities, so that £180 more work was done than was specified. Action by M. for the price of this additional work. Held, reversing the judge of the County Court, that the surveyor's certificate was necessary for this extra work. A nonsuit to be entered, or verdict for defendant. Broadmeadows Road Board v. Mitchell, 4 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 101.

Right to Recover for Extras—Certificate—Building Contract.]—Where items sued on are extras, an architect's certificate in writing is necessary. Roberts v. Lambert, N.C., 22.

Recovery of Payment for Extras.]—Payment for extras ordered by the engineer inside the contract must be recovered in the mode prescribed in the contract, and not under the common count, and payment for extras outside the contract cannot be recovered unless ordered by the engineer, as prescribed by the contract. Young v. Ballarat Water Commissioners, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 503, 563; 1 A.L.T., 105.

Right to Payment for Extras—Engineer's Certificate.]—A contract contained a condition that the contractor should execute any extras which an engineer might, by an order in writing, require; but no extras were to be paid for which should be done without such order in writing, "nor unless the total quantities and rates of payment for such extras shall have been previously ascertained and certified by the engineer." Held that the contractor could not claim payment for the extras unless the total quantities and rates of payment for them had been ascertained and certified previously to the execution of such extras. Young v. Ballarat Water Commissioners, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 306, 315.

Waiver of Condition.]—It is no answer to a plea that a certificate has not been given to allege that the absence of the certificate was due solely to the improper refusal of the engineer to give it, and that the defendants were aware of the refusal, and so had waived the condition. Ibid, p. 316.

Liability of Employer for Extras.]—An employer may make himself liable for extras not ordered by the architect under a building contract under seal, which provides that no extras shall be allowed or paid for without an order in writing from the architect, if such employer himself verbally order the contractor to execute the extras; there being nothing to prevent the employer making additional contracts. Thackwray v. Winter, 6 V.L.R. (L.,) 128.

Engineer's Certificate—Withholding—Damages.]—C. and B. contracted with the Government to build a railway. The contract inter alia provided that the Crown should from time to time pay C. and B. the amount certified by the Engineer-in-Chief to be due, who, by clause 29 was to be furnished every fortnight with a detailed account of work done, and was to certify the same; that 10 per cent. was to be retained by the Crown of the amounts so certified until the sums retained amounted to £10,000 which was to be invested at the option of the contractors; and that the balance should be paid after completion of the works; and that it should be obligatory upon the Engineer-in-Chief to give his certificate under clause 29 or state his reasons in writing for not doing so. The representatives of C. and B. presented a petition alleging as a breach that the engineer had not complied with clause 29 or stated his reasons in writing, and the petition contained a count for work done, money lent, paid, had and received, for interest and money due on account stated. It appeared that in reply to a letter from contractors the engineer wrote—"I decline to give you a certificate, and one reason is that there is nothing due to you." Held, (page 198)—(1) That the engineer had merely stated a "conclusion" and not a "reason." (2) (pp. 205, 206, 219)—That the petitioners were entitled to substantial and not merely nominal damages for the breach, the damages being the loss of the certificate and flowing directly from the breach. (3) (p. 213)—That the reasons to be stated by the engineer must be sufficient reasons in law, supported by facts that were true. (4) (p. 218)—That the furnishing of accounts by the contractors in clause 29 within fourteen days or any other limited time was not a condition precedent to obtaining the certificate. Bruce v. The Queen, 2 W.W. & A'B. (L.,) 193.

Improper Refusal of Certificate—Damages.]—The proper measure of damages in the case of an improper refusal of a certificate is the value of the certificate which the engineer ought to have given; progress payments do not conclude the plaintiffs, and the interest which the parties have agreed that the certificate shall carry if not paid forms as much a part of its value until paid as the capital sum on which it rests—Interest allowed at 10 per cent. Young v. Ballarat Water Commissioners, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 503, 546, 557; 1 A.L.T., 105.

Engineer's Certificate—Withholding—Liability of Employer.]—A contract for the execution of works provided that the contractor should not be entitled to payment until he had obtained the certificate of the employers' engineer. Held that the employers were not liable for the withholding of such certificate by the engineer unless the withholding were fraudulent and the engineer were acting in collusion with the employers. Semble, that if the engineer refuse to certify in pursuance of the contract, and the employers remain inactive, and so retain a large sum from the contractors, it would be evidence of collusion. Young v. Ballarat Water Commissioners, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 502, 508.

Semble, that if an engineer wilfully and improperly refuse to grant a certificate, and application is made to the employer to compel him either to give one or assign valid reasons for the refusal, or if he fails to do so to dismiss him and appoint another, and the employer declines to comply with that request, he will be liable to an action for a wrong inflicted on the contractor, such wrong consisting in the employer's tortiously refusing to perform the duty he owes to the contractor, and thereby preventing him (the contractor) from obtaining the payment to which he is entitled. Ibid, p. 317.

Contract for Public Works—Position of Engineer—Improper Refusal of Certificate.]—An engineer appointed by a company for whom works are being executed, and who, by the contract, is empowered to give certificates, is not an arbitrator, but a skilled agent of the employer, whose certificate is, by mutual agreement, essential as a condition precedent to the contractors obtaining final payment for the work done by them. He is appointed to form a professional opinion, owes a duty to the contractor as well as his employer, and is bound to act fairly towards both parties. Where then a final certificate has been refused, a jury may, upon evidence, find that although the certificate has been withheld the works have substantially been completed to the engineer's satisfaction; but there must be some evidence that the certificate has been withheld by the engineer in collusion with his employers, and by their procurement; and if the explanations given be not satisfactory, the jury should decide what inferences should be deduced as to the motives, intents, and understandings that existed between the engineer and his employers. Young v. Ballarat Water Commissioners, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 503, 560, 543, et seq.; 1 A.L.T., 105.

Engineer Fraudulently Withholding his Certificate—Action against Engineer.]—If a contract make the certificate of the employers' engineer a condition precedent to the contractor's right to payment, and the engineer fraudulently withhold his certificate, an action will lie, at the suit of the contractor, against the engineer for such withholding, and the plaintiff need not aver in his declaration that the certificate was withheld by the engineer acting in collusion with the employers. Young v. Ohlfsen Bagge, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 516.

(3) Forfeiture of Materials and Deposit.

Condition for Forfeiture of Materials—Extension of Time.]—A contract provided for the determination of the contract, and the forfeiture by the defendants of all materials found upon the ground in case of certain specified breaches of contract by the contractor (plaintiff), and also that the engineer might extend the time in which the works were to be completed. An extension of time had been granted, and after this a dispute arose between the engineer and contractor as to the execution of certain work, and after the extended time had expired, the engineer called upon the contractor to perform it in a particular way, and then notice was served upon the contractor that the defendants would determine the contract, and forfeit the materials. Held that the proviso as to forfeiture only applied during the original term of the contract, and could not be enforced after the expiration of that period, and during or after the extended time. Mayor of Essendon v. Ninnis, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 236; 1 A.L.T., 23.

Contract for Construction of Railway—Deposit—Forfeiture.]—A projected railway, for the purposes of construction, was divided into four divisions, and P. put in tenders for all the divisions separately, which were accepted by the defendants, and P. paid a deposit of £500. One of the conditions of tendering provided that the person whose tender was accepted for each division should deposit a sum of £200, and the person whose tender was accepted for the whole work should deposit £500; that if the same person's tender should be accepted for two divisions, he should deposit £300, if for three divisions, £400, and if for the whole contract, £500. Another condition required the person whose tender was so accepted to deposit £5 per cent. on the whole amount of his tender within ten days after being called upon to do so, and within three days after that to execute a contract deed. In the event of his not making this further deposit, the monies first deposited to be forfeited. P., not being in a position to tender the deposit of £5 per cent. on the whole, tendered this percentage on only two of the divisions, which the defendants refused to accept, and forfeited the deposit of £500. Held that the deposit was rightly forfeited. Porter v. Board of Land and Works, 1 V.R. (L.,) 207; 1 A.J.R., 161.

(4) Damages and Compensation.

Depreciation of Plant—Interest on Penalties and Deposits.]—On an action for breach of a contract for the construction of certain works, the plaintiff recovered a verdict and wished to add to his verdict two sums for depreciation of plant, and for interest on the penalties and deposit retained by the Government (defendant). Held that the item for depreciation of plant should be allowed; but as to the other item for interest the damages were too remote. Young v. Board of Land and Works, 4 A.J.R., 36.

Construction of Contract—Compensation for Suspension.]—A contract for the execution of works provided that the contractor should, on receiving written notice from the engineer of the employer, suspend the whole or any part of the works, and should have no claim for loss or damage owing to such suspension until thirty days from the date of the suspension. Held that if the works were suspended for more than thirty days the employers were liable to compensate the contractor for such suspension. Young v. Ballarat Water Commissioners, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 502, 507.

Suspension of Works.]—Where a condition provides for payment of damages in case of suspension of works, the contractor may recover for what is really a suspension of works, though directions for such suspension are given as under an "order for works." Young v. Ballarat Water Commissioners, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 503, 558; 1 A.L.T., 105.

Measure of Damages for Fraudulent Withholding of Certificate.]—See Bruce v. The Queen; and Young v. Ballarat Water Commissioners, ante column 1588.

Damages—Measurement in Prescribed Way not Carried out.—If a contract for the performance of certain works provide that they are to be measured in a certain way, and the work be not measured in the prescribed way, the employer is liable in damages to the contractor. Young v. Ballarat Water Commissioners, 4 V.L.R. (L.,) 502.

Where a condition provided that all measurements were to be made according to the most accurate methods, the contractors must show what those methods are and the correct quantities according to those methods, and may recover damages for incorrect measurements. Young v. Ballarat Water Commissioners, 5 V.L.R. (L.,) 503, 557.
